Fired up

Independence Township firefighters reached for the sky last Monday morning as they spent practice time on the newly purchased ladder truck.

Passers-by on M-15 could see them climbing stairs and being elevated into the air. In fact, they've probably seen them doing this for several days, as the firefighters learn all they need to know about performing necessary techniques on the new truck. And after all, it was an otherwise slow morning for the fire department.

Anyone need a plumber?

While traveling around the Clarkston area last week, one driver noticed a tell-tale sign of service. Driving behind a plain, white van, she noticed the license plate: "IBPLMBR." A simple case of free advertising — license plate style. But the plumbers should seriously consider double-checking their spelling and grammar before they order another one.

Talking trash

One staffer recently visited a fast-food restaurant on Dixie Highway only to notice a strangely familiar voice coming from the garbage can.

While tossing some trash, she's certain she noticed what sounded like country music singer Randy Travis' voice saying "Thank You." The talking trash compactors took her by surprise — though not as much of a surprise as she would've experienced if Travis were standing inside the restaurant, of course!

Clara "Nanny" Seets may not be biologically related to the Hampton family of Clarkston, but she's still considered a second mother to them all.

Seets, a Waterford resident and longtime family friend, stepped into the role of mother for Bill and his wife Sherry Hampton once their own mothers had both passed away more than two decades ago. In addition to her own family, Seets "adopted" the Hamptons and continues to act as a loving mother, grandmother and great-grandmother to them all.

Bill Hampton has been friends with Seets' son Gene for 45 years. Their families have grown very close over the years.

"I just told Bill, 'You know, honey, your mother carried you under her heart for nine months, but I've carried you in my heart your whole life," said Seets, 80. "You can't replace a mother, but you can sure stand in."

As Mother's Day fast approaches, the Hamptons took

Knights' rezoning tabled again

■ Organization gets more time to consider options for Maybee Road property.

By Susan B. Tauber

stauber@oe.homecomm.net

Good deeds performed by the local Knights of Columbus are paying off for its members in a way they never expected.

Their reputation influenced Independence Township Board members to once again table the second reading and adoption of rezoning K of C's property from Planned Shopping Center (C-2) to Office Service (OS-2). It was first tabled at a March board meeting.

Knights of Columbus-Council 5436 (K of C) has 30 days to search out ideas of what to do with its five acres and its building at 5660 Maybee Road just east of Sashabaw before the board addresses the issue again.

"This is a positive thing for us," said K of C member Mike Donnellson. "It's giving us a chance to look at different options while we're still under a C-2 zoning."

One option is to sell the L-shaped property to a developer for a planned shopping center. Then the organization would have the funds it lacks to "revitalize" its building, which could be moved to another piece of property, according to Donnellson, a landscape architect.

That could be just next-door. The Eagles-Clarkston Aerie 3373 owns 10 acres directly next to the K of C property. Donnellson said a possibility may be to move the K of C building onto the back five acres of the Eagles' land.

"We're trying to figure out the best plan for our organization and for the township," Donnellson said.

The township rezoned the property OS-2 from C-2 at the same early March meeting it first tabled rezoning the Knights' property.

David Donnellson from the architecture and planning firm Donnellson Swarthout Associates Inc. in Troy asked the board to table the decision again.

"Let us talk to you a little bit more, see if some of the opportunities we're looking at come to fruition," he said.

Trustee Jeff McGee suggested the board follow the K of C's request to table the rezoning. Mentioning the good things the organization has done for the community, he thought it would be a good deed in return.

"It won't burden the board or the township to give the Knights time to explore their options for a reasonable amount of time. They have indicated they would acquiesce to rezoning if something doesn't work out. It may ultimately benefit the township to table this."

Trustee Larry Rosso and township clerk Joan McCrary supported this idea. Treasurer Jim Wenger was absent.

Dick Carlisle, township planner, encouraged the board to go ahead and adopt the rezoning. He said the rezoning follows the township's master plan and the Vision 2020 plan. It also protects residential use "both across and

Local writers join ranks of published authors

By Susan B. Tauber

There's nothing specific about Carolyn Walker and Laura Mosey that shouts out "published author." They've only been published for a little more than a couple of weeks, but the pride and enthusiasm they exude about their first book is difficult to miss.

Walker, who lives in Clarkston, and Mosey, who lives in Independence Township, are two creative writers whose original fiction, non-fiction and poems are included in the new book, "At the Edge of Mirror Lake."

The book is "aptly named to reflect the writings by 12 women who look deeply into the mirror for meaning," according to editor Margo LaGattuta's introduction. The Rochester woman has a poem published in the anthology.

These writers from Michigan were hand picked to contribute to "At the Edge of Mirror Lake." They spent 1½ years in each other's company, meeting twice a month on Sunday afternoons to create, react, guide and finalize their original compositions.

"The whole thing came together like a dance," explained Walker, a regular columnist for "The Clarkston Eccentric." "Margo was the choreographer, and the writers were the orchestra. It's a unique collaboration."

This book is the fourth of Michigan writings in a national series, New Voices. It's the project of

Prayer Day event draws large turnout

BY SUSAN B. TAUBER
STAFF WRITER
stauber@oe.homecomm.net

Organizers are thankful their prayers were answered. The second annual National Day of Prayer Breakfast, held Thursday, was a success.

"It was both inspiring and inspirational," said Barbara Flores. Flores, Nancy Caruso and a committee of volunteers organized the event that echoed similar ones in other communities around the country.

The Clarkston breakfast was at Deer Lake Conference and Banquet Center. Despite its early hour — it began at 6:45 a.m. — there were more than 100 adults and school-age children there. They came from all corners of the community — residents, government and spiritual leaders, business people and school officials.

"Everyone seemed to be of one spirit," Flores added. This was particularly true during the closing song when the harmonious voices of Pastor Greg Henneman from Clarkston Community Church, Cary Henneman, Lindsey Green and Elisha Davis performed the hymn, "Light Your World," and those at the breakfast held up their lit candles in unity. The theme of the breakfast was "Light Your World with Prayer."

Several speakers addressed the theme. Master of ceremonies Mark Gilman, talk show host for "On the Mark" on WMUZ radio, smoothly led the transition from one to the next.

He began by telling the audience that National Day of Prayer isn't new.

"The first National Day of Prayer was in 1775," he said. He followed its history from 1863, when Abraham Lincoln called for a day of prayer, to 1952 when Truman made it an official day and in 1988 when then U.S. President Ronald Reagan designated the first Thursday in May as the official day of prayer for the country.

Clarkston area resident Richard Thompson was the keynote speaker. A former Oakland County prosecutor, he's now executive director of the Thomas More Center for Law and Justice in Ann Arbor.

He talked about this being a crucial time in our nation, which, he said, is in a deep moral crises. He discussed his years as prosecutor when his job was to put "the bad guys away."

Jack Kevorkian changed Thompson's life from the time Kevorkian committed his first assisted suicide in June 1990.

"In my view Kevorkian was breaking the law," Thompson said. But media polls at the time showed that more than 60 percent of those who responded supported Kevorkian's right to assist people in committing suicide and more than 83 percent of those in Oakland County didn't want Thompson to prosecute him.

Not a church-goer in those days, he turned to the Bible, he said, to give him strength to do what he knew he had to do in his job.

"Who thought it would bring me back a faith I had when I went to Sunday School," he said.

He later on lost his bid for re-election to David Gorcyca, who successfully prosecuted Kevorkian. Thompson has found a new career, which he is happy with, and bases his life on Christianity and the principles found in the Bible. He asked the audience to accept his challenge to do the same.

"This is our first time at this breakfast," said John Sawyers who attended with his wife, Elizabeth. "It's very appropriate and gave a very-needed message."

Independence Township Supervisor Dale Stuart, who gave the prayer for government, said "This shows that this is a community that knows the importance of religion."

Lane Rupright returned for the second year. "It was nice to see the unity of Christ represented by many denominations (of churches) here," he responded.

Other participants in the Light the Nation with Prayer breakfast were Bill Wint, Robyn Hoffman, Brent Cooley, Lisa Knakal, Father William McDonald, Christine Heber, John and Mary Schulte and the Rev. Bonita Laudeman.

further east on Maybee Road."

The board voted 3-3 to adopt the rezoning. Supervisor Dale Stuart and trustees Daniel F. Travis and Neil Wallace voted for the adoption. The tie made the rezoning a dead issue.

A second motion to reconsider adoption passed unanimously.

The third motion, the one for tabling the decision, passed by the 4-2 vote. After much consideration, Wallace chose to lend his support to the K of C's request. Stuart and Travis cast the nay votes.

Parents invited to screen health videos for school

The public is invited to view two new health videos recommended for use at Clarkston High School beginning in August. The videos are entitled "Choosing To Be Disease Free" and "Emotional Choices: Not Just a Body."

The videos will be shown at 6 p.m. Monday, May 10, in Room 3 of the Clarkston Community Schools administrative offices, 6389 Clarkston Road, Independence Township.

Susan Bright, editor of Plain View Press in Texas.

Walker was invited to be part of this project. Mosey got involved through LaGattuta.

"I take writing workshops with her," Mosey said. "She's very creative, a very good teacher."

Both Clarkston women have been writers since they were youngsters. Walker has her English degree from Oakland University and has written for newspapers and magazines.

"My goal always was to be published in a book. I've wanted to be a writer since I was 10 years old."

Mosey is an English and communications student at Oakland University. She's a former senior editor of Speakeasy, a literary journal at Oakland Community College. She sells CAD manufacturing equipment to automobile suppliers.

Their calm while answering questions hid their genuine excitement about the process of writing the book and the actual delivery of the final product.

"When the books were delivered, we all just went crazy," Walker recalled. "We were hugging and crying," added Mosey.

Right now the authors are busy promoting their book. This means getting it placed in stores for sale and making public appearances. Friday night, for instance, many of them read their works out loud at Paint Creek Center for the Arts in Rochester. They'll be doing readings for several organizations and events, including one that coincides with the Birmingham Unitarian Church's exhibit this summer of the series of paintings created by artist Halyna Cisaruk. This series is based on "At the Edge of Mirror Lake."

Cisaruk is the artist of the cover art. The cover photograph of the art was taken by photographer Marta Stefaniuk.

Although they're busy with their signings, readings, professions and family lives, neither Walker nor Mosey can put behind them the closeness and openness they experienced with the other writers.

"A lot of heart went into this book. There was no competition for the other writers. No jealousy. Everyone wanted each other to succeed. We gave a lot of support for one another," Walker said.

Where to look

Find copies of "At the Edge of Mirror Lake" at Creative Beginnings, Main Street Plaza, The Paper Chase and Union Connection Store.

That vulnerability is exposed throughout the book in the topics about which the women write. Mosey, for instance, has seven essays and poems printed. In the first one, "My Own Onionskin," she talks about her mother's talents in painting and singing that she couldn't match except in writing. She once had a book of memories her mother wrote, but she lost it.

"So I try to recreate her childhood, link her memories with my own: write, sing songs on every page, paint pictures between the lines," Mosey wrote.

She captures the beautiful simplicity of her brother's father who lived in Appalachia, writes of a past experience of her mother's and takes us into secret places of her soul in some other compositions.

Walker has 11 writings that are touching and humorous. Her favorite to use for public readings, she said, is "The Hock-a-loogie Chorus." She has to practice, however, to get the proper sounds and inflections as she describes the car-pool discussion of two boys about how to make a good loogie (a wad of spit and other stuff).

The writers described "At the Edge of Mirror Lake" as a compilation of writings for sensitive people, whether they are men or women.

"The fact that the book is written by a cross-section of women, ages 27 to 76, doesn't mean it's addressed only to women. It's a place where people can actually connect with other people," Mosey said.

The other contributing authors are Myroslava Stefaniuk, Naomi Louisa Mountjoy Long, Susan Hayden, Iris Fuchs, Christinamarie Umscheid, Loie Meeron, Rebecca L. Newbrey, Joyce Wells, Gerri Stone and Melinda LePere.

Quartet plans open house

The recently formed Clarkston Chordmasters Barbershop Quartet Chapter has announced the staging of a combination open house, ladies night and guest night.

The event will be held beginning at 7:30 p.m. Monday, May 10, in the United Methodist Church on Waldon Road, where the chapter members regularly meet. Refreshments, soft drinks and decaffeinated coffee will be served.

Entertainment will be provided by a number of local quartets and guest quartets. Headlining the evening's festivities will be the 1997-98 Pioneer District Champions, "The Detroit Sound Company," the Pioneer District of the group's larger organization, SPEBSQSA, which consists of all of Michigan and part of Ontario.

The Chordmasters are proud of the progress they have made in so short a time and are eager to share what they do with their Clarkston-area neighbors.

Call or e-mail the president, Lyle Howard, at (248) 634-1577 or howardj@tir.com with any questions. Please let him know if you plan to attend so the group knows how many to plan for.

Moms treated to tea at Pine Knob Elementary

Time for tea: Ryan Marsom celebrates with his mother, Tracy, at Pine Knob Elementary School's Mother's Day Tea Thursday.

Kindergartners at Pine Knob Elementary School in Independence Township filed into their classroom Thursday morning to perform a tribute to someone very close to their hearts — Mom.

Their mothers sat at decorated tables and watched a performance in their honor. In one kindergarten classroom, 22 children lined up with flowered hats and sang songs. Like the colors of the rainbow, the "flower children" recited poetry in unison before their proud moms.

■ 'My Mother's Days keep getting more and more special.'

—Kim Tamez
Clarkston mother

Kim Tamez, whose son David was dressed as a yellow flower in the garden of little ones, said the poem and hand print her son gave her made her "teary eyed."

"My Mother's Days keep getting more and more special," she said, watching David shyly peek from behind his handmade flower.

The children continued singing and blowing kisses at the crowd. Afterward, they sat with their mothers and shared cookies and punch.

They showed off the ceramic pots and books they made as gifts.

In Cindy Creech's class, the students served their mothers with treats because they "shouldn't have to work on their special day."

But the show was clearly a highlight.

"It's just an honor to see them perform," said Terry Bonner, mother of Lauren, 6. "They practiced a lot."

Bonner appreciated the pink ceramic bowl her daughter made and remembered how worried Lauren was about the way the bowl would turn out.

"She's been talking about it for a month," said Bonner.

But 5-year-old Alice Meyer wanted to keep the day a secret from her mom, Yvonne.

"She said she had a special surprise for me and I had to wait," said Meyer. "I've been looking forward to the surprises."

Ryan Marsom made sure he practiced his part in the show when his mom wasn't around. He, too, did not want to spoil the surprise.

And his mother, Tracy Marsom, was happy to join in the Mother's Day Tea.

"I just think they did the best job," she said. "These are the best cookies and punch we ever had."

Ryan agreed, saying, "Umm, good."

Deanna Eberle took time off work to be with her son, Brett, and he certainly appreciated it.

"It's worth it," she said.

After three-and-a-half weeks of practice, everyone was happy with the outcome.

Cinco de Mayo translated: A Mexican fiesta on May 5

Clarkston High School students taking Spanish with teacher Kristy Glenn got a taste of history last week as they learned about the celebration of the Cinco de Mayo.

Literally translating to the "fifth of May," the holiday ranks as the highest in the United States among all Mexican celebrations. It's significance stems from the long history of the city of Puebla —now known as Puebla de Zaragoza. Throughout the 19th century, Puebla was known for being a conservative and primarily Catholic city. In 1847 the city was invaded by U.S. forces. In 1862, French forces also attempted to invade the city but were stopped by President Benito Juares' generals. General Ignacio de Zaragoza and 2,000 of his military men defeated the attack on May 5 and the city was later named after him.

■ The holiday ranks as the highest in the United States among all Mexican celebrations

The celebration of the Cinco de Mayo is the third in importance in Mexico after Independence Day on Sept. 16 and Revolution Day on Nov. 20.

While a world away, Clarkston students studied the history and significance of the holiday while enjoying a variety of Mexican foods and listening to traditional music. The students also sold paper Mexican flowers to give to their friends. The flowers were delivered during second hour at the school Wednesday.

Township recognizes Clarkston teen for heroism

Cameron Bandworth was recognized for his quick thinking and right action last week before the Independence Township Board of Trustees.

Bandworth "spotted a man in a lake and went right to his mother to call 911," said Gar Wilson, Independence Township fire chief. "He did an outstanding job and everything turned out wonderful."

The incident occurred March 19 on Little Walters Lake. A Greene Haven Drive resident was trying to retrieve a grill cover when he became trapped in the cold waters of the lake. Bandworth was able to help notify police and fire officials, who helped the man out of the lake to safety.

The Clarkston Middle School eighth grader received a plaque for his outstanding community service.

Students morn loss of classmate

—Jim Butzine
social worker, Clarkston High School

Clarkston High School students are mourning the loss of fellow classmate Bryan Thomas Majeske.

Majeske, 17, was found dead Wednesday evening in his home. Independence Township police estimated the time of death to be between 3:30 and 5:45 p.m.

"There is nothing suspicious about this death," said Lt. Dale LaBair of the Independence Township substation for the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

Grief counselors were on-hand at the high school to speak to distressed students. Though he was new to the school last fall, approximately 50 students used crisis team services Thursday to discuss their feelings.

"We did activate the crisis team," said Jim Butzine, social worker at Clarkston High School. "We did respond to students and teachers. Students as a whole are doing well. It brought up issues of loss. That's what we're understanding and dealing with."

Before he was a student at Clarkston High School, Majeske attended Our Lady of the Lakes High School in Waterford.

"We are extremely sorry for what happened," said Harrison E. Miller, assistant principal at Our Lady of the Lakes.

Majeske is survived by his parents, Carolyn and Ron Bueche of Clarkston and Walter and Linda Capp Majeske of Birmingham; four brothers, Jeff, Jaime, Curt and Ted; grandparents, Carolynn and Clarence Bueche, Barbara Francis, Ginger Francis and Gerald Francis; and great-grandmother, Julia Casto.

Majeske is also survived by several other loving family members.

Visitation was Friday at Lewis E. Wint & Son Trust 100 Funeral Home, Clarkston. A funeral mass was Saturday at Our Lady of the Lakes Catholic Church, Waterford, followed by Rite of Committal in Lakeview Cemetery, Clarkston.

Warming effect: Tots get a colorful taste of spring

Every season Independence Township Parks and Recreation welcomes preschoolers to embrace nature and learn about the world around them.

"Tuning your Tot into Spring," held recently at the Lewis E. Wint Nature Center, was just such an opportunity. Naturalist Lynn Conover developed the "Tuning your Tot" seasonal programs 15 years ago and they remain among the most popular of all park activities. This spring, she brought a little color into the lives of about 90 children and their parents. The program was divided into five sessions, each with about 18 children, and focused on the uses of color in nature. The children were between 3 and 6 years old.

"One thing that always pleases me," said Conover, "(is that) I'll have an adult say 'I learned something too.' We want adults to really learn with their children."

Naturalist Kathleen Dougherty said color can be used to attract attention to an animal, or to hide an animal from predators. She said the children engaged in "a wide variety of different activities to learn about color."

While on the nature trails children saw insects camouflaged into their natural surroundings. Conover demonstrated how a deer fawn's spots can camouflage the animal in certain surroundings. The children also learned how bright colors, including red and white, are used as a warning. Just as a red and white stop sign indicates to drivers to stop, a red, yellow and black coral snake sends the same message — a warning that the snake is poisonous, explained Dougherty.

Inside the Wint Nature Center, the children experimented with color, Dougherty said, in much the same way they would in an art class. Using food coloring drops and water, they were introduced to the primary colors red, yellow and blue and discovered how mixing those colors creates secondary shades such as purple, orange and green.

Connecting nature and color, the children created color palettes by finding as many colors as possible along the trails and placing the items — many flowers and plants — on a cardboard artist's palette.

"It's our most popular program," said Dougherty. "We do it every season. There's something to learn everyday."

The program also gets children involved and interested in nature at an early age. Dougherty said, "We really need to start very early and continue throughout life."

time to recognize how important Seets has been in their lives. Bill Hampton plans to spend the morning with Seets at her church, Oakland Christian. She can count on many telephone calls and pleasant wishes from the Hamptons this Sunday.

Bill and Sherry's children and grandchildren echoed the sentiments of the closeness and the bond they share with Seets.

"Nanny has been our grandmother since we lost our grandmothers," said Bobby Hampton, Bill and Sherry's son. "Her family is our family. We love Nanny."

Ask any member of the Hampton clan and they'll tell you Seets has never missed a birthday and has always been available to give advice and support.

Lynne Swayne, Bill and Sherry's daughter, said when her own daughter was in the hospital, Nanny was the first to arrive. Whenever someone is sick, the family said, Seets shows up with soup and encouragement.

With tears filling her eyes, Lynne Swayne said, "If no one prayed for us, we know Nanny would."

Seets provides a sense of comfort and wisdom for them all.

"Whenever I have a trouble, I always call her," said Bill Hampton. "She sheds a different light on it."

His daughter, Lynne Swayne, also asks Seets for advice, she said, especially when she doesn't "want to bother" her own parents.

"Our secrets are safe with her," said Swayne.

Seets has been known as a very giving person.

"She lives in low-income housing," said Sherry Hampton. "She has nothing to give away, but she always finds something. It's always cards or gifts."

Because of her special honorary mom status, the Hamptons said "Nanny" could express her love openly toward the children. When Bill and Sherry's youngest son, Billy Hampton, was just a boy, Seets would stop by to watch him play ball with friends. She would yell out, "I love you Billy" and in the midst of his game, Billy would reply, "I love you Nanny," without hesitation or embarrassment around his friends. Even today, that's just the kind of woman she is, they said.

Bobby Hampton, who works as a firefighter in Waterford, recalled a time when his truck was the first on a scene to extinguish a fire in the complex where Seets lives. The first thing he saw as he pulled up to the building, said Bobby Hampton with a smile, was a woman yelling down to him "Honey, it wasn't your Nanny who started that!"

From the freshly baked cookies she brings when Bill Hampton is preparing for a trip, to the way she insists on hugging, rather than shaking hands with those she's just met, Seets represents so many of the characteristics that make a mother special in the eyes and hearts of her children. For that she is and will always be appreciated by her "other" family, the Hamptons.

Generous benefactor helps OU's nursing program

The Oakland University School of Nursing will use a longtime donor's gift of $1 million to support geriatric nursing and rehabilitation.

The endowment, the Maggie Allesee Chair in Geriatric and Rehabilitation Nursing, will support a faculty member and a graduate assistant who will promote nursing care of the elderly in acute care and community settings.

SON Dean Justine Speer said this faculty member will also help bring the school and the community together in ways that will enhance the quality of life for elderly citizens in the community. The gift represents only the second time in Oakland's 42 year history that a faculty chair has been endowed through the philanthropy of a supporter.

The donor, Margaret A. Allesee, is a longtime OU supporter, having served on the SON Board of Visitors for 12 years. A former teacher, Allesee has a masters degree in counseling and a postmasters degree in gerontology.

She established a program at the Birmingham Senior Center called "Women Alone," which she ran for seven years. She has sung for 30 year with the Birmingham Junior League Chorus which performs at nursing homes and senior centers each week.

Allesee also serves on OU's board for the Department of Music, Theatre and Dance and the Meadow Brook Theatre Advisory Board in addition to many community boards.

"Donors' gifts propel the university in ways it might not otherwise grow," Allesee said. "The gifts allow us to serve individuals we might not have had the opportunity to reach. I believe in helping the university, and especially the School of Nursing, move forward."

"Maggie Allesee's vision, spirit and generosity will enable generations of OU students to become nurses, educators and researchers in a critically important area," said David J. Downing, Oakland's interim vice president for academic affairs and provost. "Her gift will provide a long-lasting legacy as we prepare students to embark on careers in one of the noblest professions of all — nursing."

■ 'Her gift will provide a long-lasting legacy as we prepare students to embark on careers in one of the noblest professions of all — nursing.'

David J. Downing
—OU interim vice president

The Maggie Allesee Chair in Geriatric and Rehabilitation Nursing will be among the most prestigious honors bestowed on a faculty member, Speer said.

The chair's primary responsibilities will be the development, application and integration of knowledge and program development that will improve care of the elderly, especially those with rehabilitation needs.

A search committee of nursing faculty and other geriatrics and rehabilitation experts will conduct a national search for candidates. Current faculty also will be encouraged to apply. The Dean of the School of Nursing will make the final selection.

Dems seek to clean bingo house

BY PAT MURPHY
STAFF WRITER
pmurphy@oe.homecomm.net

Facing disciplinary action by the Michigan Bureau of Lottery, Oakland Democrats have agreed to suspend one of their bingo operations for three months and remain on probation for a year.

The agreement was formalized last week, thereby eliminating the need for an administrative hearing scheduled for Tuesday in Lansing.

"The agreement will enable us to continue operating, possibly this fall," said Gary L. Kohut, a Troy attorney and Democratic county chair. He had voiced concerns the license might be revoked.

The bingo affected by the agreement is sponsored by the Executive Committee of the Oakland County Democratic Party, normally held on Saturdays at Wildwood Hall in Madison Heights.

Lottery officials claim the bingo — and another bingo operated by the party's Membership Committee — violated numerous regulations ranging from paying workers more than the statutory $10 per meeting to failing to maintain accurate records required by gaming laws.

Lottery officials said action against the bingos is designed to assure compliance with rules designed to protect the honesty and integrity of the games.

But Kohut insists lottery officials, at the insistence of Gov. John Engler, are overly zealous about enforcing laws against political bingos, particularly those benefiting Democrats.

"We had some problems," Kohut admitted. But they weren't worse than bingos sponsored by service clubs or church related school organizations, he said.

"After we discovered those problems, we changed managers and went to lottery officials for help getting our games in compliance. Instead of helping us," Kohut said, "they tried to yank our license."

Kohut and other Democrats, including Kohut State Sen. Gary Peters of Bloomfield Hills, insist the lottery bureau is overly scrupulous about enforcing regulations against political bingos because Engler wants to further cripple the party's efforts to raise money to finance campaigns and candidates.

Lottery officials crack down on any rule violations by people running political bingos, Kohut said, while being more tolerant about infractions at games operated by charities of churches.

Outlawing all political bingos, may sound objective, said Kohut. But outlawing political bingos would mainly cripple Democrats who Kohut said rely on gaming proceeds rather than contributions from affluent contributors.

Engler spokesman John Truscott last week said the governor doesn't approve of political bingos. But Truscott said politics was not the main reason. "The governor believes bingos should be left to charitable organizations," he said.

Democrats around the state have voiced similar complaints about the lottery bureau being scrupulous about political bingos. In Oakland, three games sponsored by Democrats have come under scrutiny.

New shapes define the Capri pant this season

THE REAL DEAL

CARI WALDMAN

Capri pants are big news for spring and summer fashion. New shapes sport narrow, low waistbands, flat fronts and cropped pant lengths.

Just below the knee to mid-shin is the perfect length to go with in a pair of Capris this season. And, it's hip to wear the pant style a little loose and riding low on the hips.

Fabrics run the gamut, so you can find them in just about every texture and color imaginable: canvas, khaki twill, silk shantung, rip-stop cotton, denim, and stretch-Lycra, to name a few.

Acquiring Capris is an excellent way to update your wardrobe since this year's style incorporates some of the most important elements of the season – cargo pockets, flat fronts, and cropped lengths.

For a sporty look or casual evening out, pair Capris with a three-quarter-length sleeved shirt, twin sweater set or fitted, boat neck T-shirt.

For a casual Friday option, try Capris with a cropped blazer, shirt jacket or a tailored white shirt.

Capris look best with a wedge flat-shoe, but, please, don't wear pantyhose.

You can find Capris just about anywhere right now, but Target's cargo-style variety, at $19.99, are the most reasonably priced.

The Gap also carries sensibly priced Capris at $38. Express is offering a stretch-Lycra group of apparel this year that includes Capris in several great shades of gray for $39.50. And, Caruso Caruso in Birmingham has Capris by Mavi that come in denim, black and khaki for $50.

Cari Waldman attended the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York City and is a local fashion stylist and freelance writer. Please send your style and bargain shopping questions to Cari at OERealDeal@aol.com.

A taste of the good outdoors

New Bass Pro Shops Outdoor World store intrigues, entertains, educates

BY NICOLE STAFFORD
SPECIAL EDITOR

Location, location, location, they say.

But, atmosphere, atmosphere, atmosphere, will likely draw shoppers to Bass Pro Shops Outdoor World at Great Lakes Crossing in Auburn Hills.

"We bring the outdoors indoors," said Tom Sokolowski, assistant general manager of the 135,000-square-foot fishing and outdoor store, which opened Thursday following a Wednesday evening store preview and fund-raising event to benefit the Michigan Conservation Clubs.

"Wow," is the usual response elicited by the enormous and visually intriguing showroom, said Sokolowski. "It blows everyone away when they walk in the door. You'll never see anything like it."

Most visitors find themselves still-struck, overwhelmed by the sights, upon entering the Canadian lodge-style building.

Passing through the store's outdoor entrance, shoppers encounter the front of an Adirondack log structure trimmed with replicas of record-size fish caught in Michigan.

Eight feet stone slabs and Michigan rocks form a large fireplace and hearth in the lobby.

In the distance, a 40-foot rock formation cradles a waterfall and large, Sea World-style fish aquarium.

Above, massive chandeliers, decorated with images of wolverines and other animals indigenous to Michigan, hang from the store's vaulted ceilings.

Antique canoes, old hunting equipment, aging photographs of hunters with their trophies, and hundreds of animal and fish mounts adorn the walls.

Casts of animal tracks punctuate walkways.

The store's fish tank contains 20,000 gallons of water, as well as northern pike, walleye, big-mouth bass and other species native to Michigan.

A fish-eye viewing port attached to the aquarium seems to bring the fish within touching distance, but visitors will be sure to smell the creatures.

"We want to touch people with the outdoors," said Larry Whitely, public relations manager for Bass Pro Shops, which is based in Springfield, Mo., and operates stores in Chicago, Atlanta, Dallas and various cities in Florida.

The philosophy behind the retailer's marketing strategy: If you tempt consumers with the beauty of the outdoors and teach them how to enjoy it, they'll become users of outdoor and sporting equipment, said Whitely.

Accordingly, free classes and seminars covering a variety of topics – from fly-tying to cooking wild game – will be regularly offered customers.

In fact, between 15 and 20 classes will be taught by in-store experts every month, said Sokolowski.

"A lot of people stop fishing because they don't catch any fish," he said. "But, if you teach people how to fish ... they'll get a passion for it."

Bass Pro Shops Outdoor World, like many other stores at Great Lakes Crossing, also plays its part as theme entertainer for shoppers.

Children and adults can test their shooting skills at an interactive, laser shooting arcade. The store's second floor hosts Uncle Buck's Snack Shop where shoppers can take pause and munch on hot dogs, nachos, sandwiches and other edibles.

Even coffee connoisseurs won't feel out of their element; the eatery's seating area looks like today's trendy coffee houses and brews espresso drinks.

Also on the second floor is a 107-foot-long pistol and rifle range equipped with motorized targets. Other demonstration areas include a 65-foot-long archery range, golf putting green and netted driving range.

While fishing gear and other outdoor sporting equipment, including boats and RVs, dominate the store's merchandise, even shoppers who cringe at the thought of communing with nature will likely find an item or two of interest.

In addition to carrying full lines of equipment and clothing for fishing, camping, hunting, golf and boating, the store sells athletic shoes and casual sportswear for men, women and children, food items for the pantry, cookbooks and an array of home decor items – from a log bed to aromatic candles.

"We have a lot of people selling sports goods today," said Sokolowski. "We're about fishing, hunting, boating, camping, golf and a whole lot of other things."

Anti-violence group remembers mothers in Kosovo, Colorado

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE
SPECIAL WRITER

Oversized telegrams expressing sympathy and support are on their way to mothers in Kosovo and Colorado, in commemoration of Mother's Day.

The telegrams were an important facet of the 12th-annual Mother's Day Peace Brunch held Friday by Women's Action for New Directions (WAND).

About 200 people, most of them women, gathered at Temple Beth El where keynote speaker Michigan Attorney General Jennifer Granholm led the signing of the special telegrams.

The breakfast also honored three women who have contributed to our communities in important ways. They are: Francile Anderson, chairwoman of the Michigan Public Education Task Force; Lynne Partington, executive director of Freedom House — a hostel for world refugees; and Laura Perreault for her work with WAND and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Perreault, a Southfield resident, has been instrumental in getting the video "Arms for Peace" into the hands of local educators and religious leaders. "It focuses on land mines and arms trade for profit and the horrendous consequences," she says.

"We have had a Mother's Day breakfast every year for 11 years to celebrate the contributions made by women to the well-being of our society," says Arlene Victor, a Bloomfield Township resident who is former national president of WAND. "But this year we can't ignore the suffering from violence that is occurring in the Kosovo region and happened in Littleton.

"With these telegrams, we are reaching out in solidarity to the women and mothers who have suffered devastating losses from these two tragedies," Victor says.

WAND is among a number of women's groups calling for immediate cessation of NATO/U.S. bombing and of ethnic cleansing and forcible expulsions in the region, says Fern Katz, a Southfield resident and metro-Detroit WAND's delegate to the national WAND board.

Their statement, formulated last week at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva, calls for the U.N. Security Council to send in forces with a temporary mandate to protect civilians and to preserve evidence of war crimes and crimes against humanity for the International Criminal Tribunal for Yugoslavia.

WAND also is "very much in sympathy with the mothers in Littleton, Colorado," Katz says. In her family, a niece and nephew were afraid to go to school after those shootings. "We have to do something about that."

Katz notes the proposed easing of Michigan's concealed weapons laws could result in more guns around school yards. She seconds a Michigan Parent Teacher Association concern that Michigan's weapon-free school zone law is designed to keep guns out of our schools.

"Unfortunately, one of the exceptions to that law is a person with a valid permit to carry a concealed weapon," according to the PTA.

It's in keeping with the history of Mother's Day that it should be used as a forum to speak out against violence, Victor says. "Mother's Day, in the beginning, was not about hearts and flowers or a box of chocolates or gumpy sentiments from Hallmark," she reports. "It began with a mother of the Civil War era who had world peace, not a box of chocolates, on her mind."

That was Julia Ward Howe, a homemaker with six children and a lifelong volunteer for social and political causes like the abolition of slavery and women's suffrage, Victor explains.

"She got the idea for a 'Mother's Peace Day,' later called simply 'Mother's Day,' after witnessing the carnage of our Civil War and the Franco-Prussian War in Europe."

"Children Ask the World of Us" is WAND's creed, Victor says, and is behind everything we do. "The movement away from violence as a solution must start with women. The fact that women give life and care so deeply about life makes us more capable, not less, of bringing our intellect, balanced with empathy, to problem solving."

WAND is currently studying military spending and military policies, because "women do not enter this arena and women need to be there," Victor says. They received partial funding from the George Gund Foundation to develop a speaker's bureau on the issues.

Cooking over open fire is ancient history

Man has cooked over open fires throughout history. Roman legions, on their quest to conquer the Western world, cooked over fire logs in makeshift camps. Ancient Persians grilled meats over small braziers – and are still doing this today. Shish kebab originated in the Middle East. In Turkish dialogue, "shish" means sword and "kebab" is broiled meat – "meat on a sword."

During the 11th century, Genghis Khan and his band of warriors swept across China. They would feast on animals slow-roasted whole on a spit over low heat. This is a practice we know today as a pig roast. Other Mongolian warriors would heat heavy metal shields over their personal fire and grill meat on the hot metal. A practice commonly seen today in countries such as Vietnam is grilling on ember-filled hubcaps.

All over the world, people are still practicing Old World styles of barbecue and grill cookery. They are also inventing many new flavored foods with smoke, fire, and heat.

Cooking methods

Actually, many people misuse the term "barbecue." It seems to be applied to anything cooked on a grill. Barbecue is a method of cooking, not a gadget or regional dish. The distinct difference between barbecue and grilling is that grilling is done over direct heat. Barbecue is the process of cooking meat at a low temperature for a long period of time.

With grilling the focus is on searing the product on the outside, and concentrating the flavor on the inside. Foods are cooked quickly over fire, wood or coals. Grilling is a healthy way to cook meat because the fat drips off.

In Brazil and Argentina, grilled and barbecued meats are served with a wide array of relishes, chutneys and fresh salads.

In Turkey, Morocco and other Middle Eastern countries, you'll find shish kebabs marinated in herbs and spices.

During an evening meal in most Asian countries, you would be presented with thinly sliced meats on bamboo skewers, seared quickly and presented with a variety of dipping sauces and rice. In Australia, you might enjoy a cookout over a small open campfire, "shrimp on the barbee," or damper bread cooked on wooden sticks.

Texans dredge their spare ribs in a dry spice rub and then cook them over a low, smoky grill. The ribs are finished with a basting of grandma's secret barbecue sauce.

Culinary adventures

Every culture has a few chapters in its food history that pertain to grilling, barbecuing, spit roasting or smoking.

The next time you are tempted to grill hamburgers, ribs or chicken, let me suggest an outdoor adventure instead – Tandoori style chicken or a Jamaican Jerk marinated steak. You're only limited by your imagination.

BRUNCH

Start a healthy tradition

BY PEGGY EVERTS
SPECIAL WRITER

Five years ago, when George Lipton was in the hospital recovering from bypass surgery, his doctor put him on a restricted diet. Reduce fats and cholesterol, limit salt intake and reduce alcohol consumption were the doctor's orders. To George this was disheartening news. No ice cream, no martinis, no big, juicy steaks. A late evening dinner ending with a cigar and cognac were out of the question. Bacon and eggs for breakfast? Forget it!

There was another dilemma too. George and his wife, Kathy, were fond of entertaining in their beautiful Rochester Hills home. Cooking meals for a circle of friends and family was a big part of their social life. George felt his freedom of choice in food and drink was obstructed. He became uncomfortable, frustrated, resentful and even depressed.

His state of mind was not healthy, especially for someone with heart disease. Whenever they were going out, George would be faced with so many temptations. The couple began to withdraw from their circle of friends. This wasn't good. Going out just frustrated George. He was becoming a complaining, boring couch potato.

Research

Kathy had to do something. She began with some research, and over the course of about a year, learned a great deal about cooking reduced-fat, reduced-salt meals. Through experimentation, and support from classes at Crittenten Hospital, she learned how to adjust her favorite recipes, and make new great-tasting dishes as well.

George liked Kathy's cooking. As time went by, it became easier and easier to enjoy food. In fact, George — who was about 40 pounds overweight when he had the surgery — began to slowly shed pounds. He felt better as he ate healthier. His depression began to lift. George began cooking too, using low-fat ingredients.

Still, it was difficult to go out to eat with friends. That was when he missed his martinis.

Kathy wasn't about to give up. She wanted to see her friends. She enjoyed entertaining and didn't relish the thought of losing touch.

Delicious custom

She came up with a simple solution that started as a Mother's Day party and evolved into an on-going custom. Now George and Kathy do most of their entertaining at brunch.

It is better, especially for someone with heart disease, to eat a good mid-morning meal than to eat late at night. The food has more time to digest and is used as fuel during the remainder of the day. People are less likely to overeat early in the day. They welcome a bowl of fresh fruit, a light salad, an omelet, muffins, waffles, or other light dishes.

Kathy serves inventive egg dishes, breads and bagels, fruit, Canadian bacon and salads. She even serves champagne, Mimosas or an occasional Bloody Mary. An egg dish is usually her main course.

The American Heart Association allows up to three or four eggs a week for healthy people. No limit has been set for egg whites (no fat or cholesterol). Because eggs are such a good source of protein, one or two eggs are allowed per week if cholesterol is elevated.

To balance the meal, Kathy usually includes fresh waffles, muffins or bagels for a starch, fresh fruit and a salad.

George and Kathy's brunches have changed the way they entertain. Instead of going to restaurants or having dinner parties full of fattening, salty foods, they now invite guests to late morning gatherings that feature a healthy and low-fat buffet. They shop together for the freshest vegetables and fruits and prepare many of the dishes on Saturday afternoon.

Some friends come from church. Others plan the day around brunch and play a little tennis or go canoeing before. Golf is the game of choice after brunch. Kathy and George keep their brunch simple so they can enjoy their guests.

After seeing how George's eating habits have helped him lose weight and feel better, many of their friends have adopted a brunch theme for entertaining as well.

Cooking with eggs

Tips for reducing cholesterol and fat when cooking with eggs:

- Substitute two egg whites for one whole egg.
- Substitute one whole egg plus two egg whites for two whole eggs.
- Use 1/4 cup egg substitute to equal two eggs.
- Combine one egg with 1 1/2 to 2 cups crushed bran crackers, whole wheat bread crumbs, or cooked rice to form a pie crust (e.g., quiche). Be sure to coat your pie plate with non-stick cooking spray.
- Instead of frying eggs, thoroughly poach or boil them due to the risk of eating under-cooked eggs.
- Use one egg yolk per serving and add extra egg whites for omelets, scrambled eggs and quiches.

Fire up the grill for red snapper with spring salsa

MAIN DISH MIRACLE

MURIEL WAGNER

Sometimes, it seems to me that fruit and vegetables should be sold in the drugstore, not the produce store. Almost every new nutrition study stresses the relationship of plant food for prevention and treatment of chronic diseases like high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes and cancer of various kinds.

If you're having problems getting your "five-a-day" servings of fruits and vegetables, this recipe should be a big delicious help. It doesn't contain broccoli, but it's a wonderful source of "phytochemicals" like the lycopene recently reported in the news that might prevent and/or treat prostate cancer.

The fish in the recipe is a good preventer of heart disease, as you know. Red snapper is an especially popular salt water fish in Mexico. It has a sweet subtle flavor that makes it a perfect partner for salsa. The dense texture of red snapper makes it a good choice for grilling. Best of all, the recipe cuts down on kitchen time because you don't have to cook the salsa, and the outdoor grill person can be put in charge of the fish. Even if you are the person doing the grilling, you can still enjoy the scenery as you cook.

■ If you're having problems getting your "five-a-day" servings of fruits and vegetables, this recipe should be a big delicious help.

Salsas are chopped mixtures of fruit and vegetables of infinite variety. They are an "Eating Younger" person's dream come true. Salsas contain little or no fat, and are full of flavor, fiber, phytochemicals, vitamin A, C, sometimes B complex, and minerals.

Tomatoes form the base of many salsas. At this time of year I use fresh plum tomatoes. I leave the peeling on all the vegetables in the recipe for extra fiber. Plum tomatoes are pulpy and easy to seed, just core and hand squeeze the seeds out. The cucumber of choice is one of those "curly" ones in the produce market that look like zucchini. The peeling is not waxed and the cucumber meat is sweeter. You can add more or less jalapeno depending on your taste for "heat."

I add ripe mangoes for a peachy-pineapple accent. Mangoes are usually shipped green. To ripen, place the mangoes in a brown paper bag. They're ripe when they're fragrant and yield to the touch. In addition to contributing phytochemicals and vitamin C, mangoes are an excellent source of fiber. To cut mangoes, score

1 cup orange juice
2-1/2 cups all purpose flour
3/4 cup brown sugar

Mix flour, sugar and baking soda in mixing bowl. Add applesauce, vanilla, yogurt, and egg whites. Drain cranberries, reserving 1/4 cup juice. Add juice to mixing bowl. Beat 3 minutes on medium to high speed until smooth. Fold in drained cranberries. Pour batter evenly into muffin cups — about 3/4 cup full. Bake 20 minutes. Let cool 10 minutes.

Accept challenge of cooking for one or two

BY MELANIE POLK
SPECIAL WRITER

May is Older Americans Month, and for many older people, eating well is particularly challenging because they are cooking for just one or two.

If you're used to cooking for a full family, it's often hard to adjust. You may find yourself eating what's at hand rather than preparing three nutritious meals a day.

One way to overcome this is to prepare food in quantity, eating one or two portions and freezing the remainder, but such a strategy may limit the variety of your meals and may not be practical if you have a small freezer.

Instead, look for recipes and cookbooks designed for those who are cooking for only one or two people. They often include tips and shortcuts to make smaller meals that are nutritious, tasty and easy to prepare.

Single servings purchased from the supermarket usually cost more than the large economy size. You can take advantage of the larger, lower cost packages by buying them and repackaging them at home. The nutrition label tells you the number and size of servings in a package, so divide the contents into serving units. Use small plastic bags to store one or two portions of foods like pasta, cereal, crackers or raisins. If you purchase frozen vegetables in large bags rather than boxes, it's easy to pour out the amount needed, then reseal the bag. Freeze sliced bread and take out only the number of slices needed. Look for supermarkets that sell unpackaged dry food in bulk; these are less expensive and can be purchased in any quantity.

Many supermarkets now have their own salad bars, which are life-savers when you're cooking for one or two. No more wilted or moldy produce — you can buy small portions of fresh vegetables and fruits and avoid the waste that comes from throwing away half a head of lettuce or other produce that has gone bad. Use salad bars to provide vegetables for small stir-fry dishes, salads, soups, stews and casseroles.

Other simple, inexpensive ways to boost nutrition and flavor in smaller meals include: adding diced vegetables to canned soup during cooking; spreading low-fat Italian dressing on a skinless chicken breast or lowfat ranch dressing on fish before baking or broiling; marinating single servings of vegetables overnight in a low-fat vinaigrette dressing; or boiling vegetables or pasta in low-sodium bouillon instead of water.

Almost any recipe can be altered to suit your taste and your portion requirements. Mustard-Rosemary Chicken is designed to serve just two.

MUSTARD-ROSEMARY CHICKEN

2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1-2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon dried rosemary
Freshly ground pepper, to taste
2 chicken breast halves, skin removed

Combine all ingredients except chicken in flat baking dish. Add chicken pieces, turning to coat well with the mixture. Cover and marinate at least one hour or overnight in refrigerator.

Chicken can be cooked in oven, microwave, or on a grill. To bake, cover and cook at 375°F for approximately 40 minutes.

To microwave, cover with wax paper and cook on high 10-13 minutes, rotating dish halfway through; let stand 2-3 minutes before serving.

To grill, shake off extra marinade and cook over medium-high flame for about 15-20 minutes.

To check for doneness, pierce thickest part with fork. If the juice is clear, chicken is done.

Nutrition information: Each of the two servings contains 153 calories and 3 grams of fat.

Center needs stable leadership to grow into regional resource

That unsettling feeling rumbling like tremors after the earth's layers have been reshuffled has finally subsided at Paint Creek Center for the Arts.

After a year of continual turnover with executive directors, exhibit curators and public relations coordinators, there's a much-welcomed reassurance that the Rochester-based art center finally has a team in place that will lead the center in its quest to become north Oakland County's resource for art exhibits and education.

Perhaps it's time for some unequivocal encouragement and advice for executive director Ann Blatté, newly named exhibition director John Cynar, and Heather Welch who is in charge of public relations.

In three words — all together now — "Stay, stay, stay!"

The Paint Creek board of directors can negotiate all those other financial details and incentives.

Being employed at a nonprofit might not be the fastest way to pad their stock portfolios, but hey, this is the arts. The calling went out. Three responded.

What: "The Tile Show," works by local artists and a history exhibit of Pewabic Pottery; and, "Birds, Sticks & Seeds," new work by Marcia Hervey
When: Through Friday, May 28.
Where: Paint Creek Center for the Arts, 407 Pine Street, Rochester, (248) 651-4110

Blatté, Cynar and Welch should consider themselves anointed.

"Can do" & "Done"

To most, Paint Creek is recognized as the organization behind the annual sprawling festival, "Art & Apples," held in mid-September.

If Blatté, Cynar and Welch get their way, the influence of the landlocked art center will reach far beyond a weekend festival and the clapboard town hall where it's currently located.

Their aim is to attract emerging artists, increase the number of visitors, and then, convince its board to undertake a capital campaign to finance a move to a larger site. Perhaps to a location more centrally located in north Oakland County.

Before talk of bricks and mortar, a lot depends on broadening the perception of the art center.

Since last fall, Blatté has brought a can-do attitude and plenty of vitality. Her greatest impact, however, might be the selection of Cynar to curate exhibitions.

Two years ago, Cynar along with artist Mary Fortuna, curated "Pontiac Sculpture '97." The indoor/outdoor exhibit featured the work of Michigan artists. But more importantly, it was a way to consolidate the the hopes and talent of the arts community.

For his effort, Cynar was named outstanding contributor to the local art scene by the Birmingham Bloomfield Arts Council. A recognition that the modest Cynar didn't note on his application to Blatté.

But that's Cynar. Unassuming and not interested in letting his own interest get in the way of the mission at hand – promoting the arts.

Tchaikovsky's 'Eugene Onegin' opens at Detroit Opera House

Maestro: Steven Mercurio conducts the MOT orchestra in "Eugene Onegin," Tchaikovsky's fifth opera.

BY ALICE RHEIN
STAFF WRITER

Alexander Pushkin's "Eugene Onegin" is to Russian students what "Romeo and Juliet" is to their English-speaking counterpart.

Every student is required to read and practically memorize the literary masterpiece. His contemporaries called Pushkin's lyrical novel, written between 1823-30, the encyclopedia of Russia.

With its pensive, fate-ridden characters, "Eugene Onegin" also served as inspiration for Tchaikovsky's fifth opera, which the Michigan Opera Theatre will perform for two weekends beginning this Saturday, May 15.

When "Eugene Onegin" made its American debut in 1920 at the Metropolitan Opera in New York, one critic said the only thing he liked about the opera was that they kill the tenor in the second act.

That dire criticism has certainly changed.

While this is the first performance of "Eugene Onegin" in MOT's 27-year history, maestro Steven Mercurio said the opera is among the finest Russian compositions, and has withstood the test of time.

"Eugene Onegin" marks the MOT debut of Svetelina Vassileva, a Bulgarian soprano with a dark, brooding voice. She, and Mary Mills, a MOT favorite and Mimi in its 1996 "La Bohème," share the role of Taytana. Russian-born Evgenij Dmitriev, who made his U.S. debut in "Lucia di Lammermoor," and Victor Benedetti, in his MOT debut, share the title role.

What: Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin," presented by the Michigan Opera Theatre
When: 8 p.m. May 15, 19, 21, 22; 2 p.m. May 16 & 23
Where: Detroit Opera House, 1526 Broadway (at the corner of Madison Avenue), Detroit
Tickets: $18-$95, (313) 237-SING or (248) 645-6666

"They're a great looking cast," said Mercurio. "They're all very young and have the right looks to be effective in the part."

Passionate tale

"There is no percussion other than timpani, and the brass is limited," said Mercurio, who conducted the opera in Pennsylvania five years ago.

"It's not large, but it sounds like a million. Tchaikovsky knew how to make it sound passionate."

The story tells of young Tatyana, a country girl devoted to books who falls in love at first sight with Onegin, a handsome, spoiled St. Petersburg aristocrat bored with city life. She writes him a letter confessing her undying passion, to which he promptly replies, "But I'm by nature and by fate not made for joy."

Later at a party, Onegin overhears rumors linking him with Tatyana. He decides to take slight revenge on his friend, Lensky, for inviting him. He dances with Olga, Lensky's fiancée and Tatyana's sister.

Lensky is consumed with anger and challenges Onegin to a duel. In one of the opera's most pivotal scenes at the end of Act 2, Lensky is shot dead, and Onegin is filled with remorse.

Years later, Onegin finds himself at a party attended by Prince Gremin and his princess, Tatyana. Onegin realizes he loves her and writes her a letter revealing such.

Now it is Tatyana who must rebuke Onegin, "Happiness came near, so near for you and me...I love you, why conceal the truth? But I am now another's wife. I will be faithful all my life."

The Letter

Few passages in all of opera are as powerful and convincing as the "Letter Scene" in Act 1.

Introduced with a tender, sighing refrain, Tatyana bursts forth in an emotional frenzy.

"Without a doubt the letter scene is pure heart and soul," said Mercurio. "This young girl stays up all night trying to get this letter just right. There isn't a person alive who hasn't done that at some point."

Though the Polonaise, which introduces the extravagant ball in Act Three, is the most recognized music, Tatyana's letter scene and the duel — where Lensky and Onegin realize that honor prevents them from reconciliation — are the most commanding.

Slice of Russian life

The scenery for "Eugene Onegin" — previously used by the Chicago Lyric Opera — has a storybook feel. Meanwhile, the chorus of peasants infuses spirited tunes with distinct connections to Russian folk songs.

In the last stanzas of "Eugene Onegin," Pushkin wrote what he hoped his readers would discover "some lines that please, some food for dreams, some things of moment for your mind, some grains of truth."

In an opera of musical brilliance and sincerity, Tchaikovsky conveys Tatyana's passion, Onegin's desolation, Olga's mirth and Lensky's despondence.

Certainly, the composer found what Pushkin so desired.

Frank Tiberi thinks Woody Herman would have liked knowing that the Orchard Lake Middle School Jazz Band is opening a May 16 concert devoted to Herman's music at Clarenceville High School in Livonia. Herman always gave young musicians a chance to play with his band. In fact, it's one of the reasons his music has been popular for more than 60 years.

Tiberi, the horn player Herman hand-picked to lead his orchestra, will join Johnny Trudell's Band in the "Woodchopper's Ball," "Blue Flame," "Caldonia," and other tunes Herman made famous in the final concert of the Clarenceville Jazz Series. The original series in the 70s and 80s featured big bands such as Stan Kenton, Count Basie and Herman. Tiberi began playing with Herman's band in 1969. He took over as band leader in 1978.

Driving sound: As leader of the Woody Herman Orchestra, Frank Tiberi continues the tradition of the Thundering Herds.

"Woody never wanted a ghost band," said Tiberi, who plays tenor sax, alto sax, flute and bassoon. "Woody had been in an accident and asked me to take over."

The response from people was so positive, that Herman asked Tiberi to take over permanently.

Village Players takes on O'Neill's 'Long Journey'

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER
fprovenzano@oe.homecomm.net

Any theater performing a play by Eugene O'Neill should be taken seriously. Despite the New York revival of O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh," a recent Tony Award nominee, it's far from typical for theaters to turn to one of America's greatest playwrights.

What: Village Players presents "Long Day's Journey into Night," a play by Eugene O'Neill, directed by Linda Hammell
When: Weekends through May 29. Performances 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, May 14-15; May 21-22; and May 28-29; 2 p.m. Sunday, May 16 and May 23
Where: The Village Players of Birmingham, 752 Chestnut, (one block south of Maple, and one block east of Woodward Ave.)
Tickets: $12, call (248) 644-2075
Cast: Ray Gardner, Donna J. Kinsey, Michael Voris, York R. Griffith, Deborah Hills, Jennifer Hoerauf

If you want to fill the seats, chances are better at staging a dramatic reading of the assembly instructions for a 1,000-piece miniature toy truck, than any of O'Neill's angst-ridden plays.

But the bold-minded Village Players has already scored a victory for the theatrically true of heart who still believe that the stage is as much a venue for entertainment as experimentation, and a laboratory to study human behavior.

This Friday, the plucky community theater with a renovated space along Woodward Ave. in Birmingham will unveil a crackerjack cast in a three-week run of O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

Rehearsing: Mike Voris, (left to right), as the older brother, James Tyrone, York R. Griffith is the younger son, Edmond Tyrone, Ray Gardner, James Tyrone, the father, and Donna Kinsey, Mary Tyrone, the mother, in the Village Players Production of "Long Day's Journey into Night."

"This is only possible because of John Reddy (president of The Village Players)," said Linda Hammell, a local actor who directs the play. "He's opened the theater up to members and has encouraged us to try new things."

On a community theater stage where works by Neil Simon, Thorton Wilder and Lillian Hellman are more at home, it's a dramatic challenge to bring O'Neill's words to life.

"It's the difference between listening to Motown classics and then learning about the classic music of Beethoven, Brahms and Mozart," said Hammell. "Suddenly, the whole universe opens up to you."

For now, forget about community theaters as a place for fluff. Hammell has directed the five-member cast through nearly ten weeks of rehearsal. With less than two weeks before opening, the cast was finally off script and searching through the layers of subtext.

There were encouraging signs that they would develop into the typical American family: clearly dysfunctional, yet searching for common understanding.

"The biggest challenge is for the actors to find the love and humor in the script," said Hammell, who noted that the Harford Stage in Hartford, Conn. performed the play, featuring acclaimed actor Ellen Burstyn.

"At times, I'm spellbound by our progress, and other times I can feel my stomach churning knowing that the opening is coming up," she said.

The play, set in August of 1912, was first performed three years after O'Neill's death in 1953. In a catalogue of plays distinguished by emotional and intel-

8. He started playing professionally at age 13, and toured with Benny Goodman, Bob Chester, Urbie Green and Dizzy Gillespie. Tiberi also "did a lot of musical shows in Philadelphia as a bassoon player working in the pit as a woodwind doubler before joining Herman's band. He contributed to, and is featured on, Herman's Grammy Award-winning albums "Giant Steps" and "Thundering Herd," and more than a dozen other recordings.

He's has been active in music education performing as a clinician in seminars since joining Herman's band, and is currently writing a book on jazz studies titled "New Dimensions."

While it sounds like a lot, the truth is Tiberi has slowed down since the 70s when he played 285 nights a year with the Woody Herman Orchestra. The group now plays about 50-60 dates a year. This summer, the group will play several European concerts. Tiberi is spending more time promoting his own playing and recently recorded his debut for NY JAM Records — "Tiberian Mode," "a fairly contemporary album" to be released in the next couple of weeks.

The album features saxophonists Joe Lovano and George Garzone, "Bulldog" Ray Drummond on bass, Andy Nussbaum, drums, and James Williams and Andy LaVerne on keyboards. The recording includes some of Tiberi's original tunes.

Since the 70s, Tiberi has arranged John Coltrane's compositions both for Herman and his own album.

"It gives me a chance to expose myself with a band in which I don't compromise myself," said Tiberi. "The recording showcases more of myself right on through."

Band's longevity

Tiberi isn't leaving Herman's orchestra any time soon. He respects the chopper's legacy. Among the jazz musicians to come out of Herman's band were Red Norvo and Shorty Rogers.

"Woodchopper's Ball came out in 1936 and that caught hold," said Tiberi, who lives in Easton, Mass, just outside of Boston. "Woody had the greatest musicians in the world, all the great ones played with Woody from Chick Corea to Steely Dan. Any jazz musician you can name with talent played with the Woody Herman band."

The reason for Herman's longevity, no doubt, is the fact he sought out young talent. The average age of musicians in Herman's band ranged from 19 to 30.

"Woody was always interested in young talent," said Tiberi. "He used to have a lot of requests from musicians and arrangers in the band. He was a great editor. He was open minded. The band was not stagnant. Musicians would come out of Berklee College of Music (Boston) and straight into the band. What was great about Woody he was always giving them a chance. He liked to have a lot of young musicians."

Midge Ellis of Livonia remembers Herman's affinity for young musicians as well. Ellis was instrumental in beginning the original Clarenceville Jazz Series.

"Woody always had a driving band, always had young people in the band," said Ellis, who coordinated this recent jazz series with pianist Eileene Standley of Plymouth. "He took them from college. The youngsters that came up he always gave them a chance in his Thundering Herds. All of the original 'Four Brothers' who played four saxophone parts (among them Zoot Sims, Stan Getz, and Al Cohn), all went on to become big. 'Four Brothers' is just a real fast, driving piece with these driving saxophones."

Ellis has a lot of favorite stories about Herman. After all, he played the Clarenceville Jazz Series three times a year for nearly 10 years in the late 60's and 70's. Many of the stories were also favorites of Woody's who spent time remembering them with Ellis during his long stay at Sinai Hospital in Detroit shortly before his death in 1987.

Woody was playing a dance when a couple came up to him and asked him to play 'Moonlight Cocktail," said Ellis, "Woody dropped to his knees and looked up and said, 'ya' hear that Glenn. They remember.' Moonlight Cocktail was Glen Miller's signature song."

Herman would have celebrated his 86th birthday May 16, the day of the concert that honors his music. The concert is one of three fund-raisers for the Michigan Jazz Festival to be held Sunday, July 18 at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. Concert series organizers are working to raise $25,000 to help pay for the all day free jazz fest at Schoolcraft College.

Last year's festival at the Botsford Inn in Farmington Hills featured 178 musicians.

Thundering herd: Woody Herman led big bands for more than 50 years.

"We wanted to try to get a bigger venue, more seats and more parking," said Ellis. "It will still be free and open to the public. It's definitely for education and the furtherance of jazz. The more people we can get to hear jazz the greater chance it will survive into the 21st century."

shows," said Cynar. "We want to create excitement in the community, to be a place artists to look at us as a place that exhibits quality work."

They'll be plenty of opportunities.

Cynar has already plans for exhibits through 2001, including 14 per year.

Next fall, the first imprint of Cynar's touch will be seen. In October, "Body and Soul" will feature Michigan artists interpreting the human figure. The goal, he said, is to assemble a range of artists similar to the collection in "Pontiac Sculpture '97."

But that's only the beginning.

Because of Cynar's curatorial work at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Center, and at his commitment to student artists at his former gallery, Start, he has a broad knowledge of the area's finest artists.

"There are many ways to collaborate with other art centers and galleries," he said. "We're already looking at ways to work with the public schools and to bring in artists for a lecture series."

Eventually, Paint Creek will not just be a place for arts instruction and exhibits, but a regional town square for the arts.

And then, it'll be quite clear that they'll need more space.

With so much work to do, it looks like Blatté, Cynar and Welch will have to stick around for a long while.

And that's sure to settle the ground beneath Paint Creek.

lectual depth, and experimentation, "Long Day's Journey Into Night" is perhaps the playwright's most autobiographical work.

On a "long day" when the family is together for the first time in years, the suspicion and support among the two brothers, father and mother comes under examination. Beneath the superficial conversation lies a sea of emotion that reveals the depth and universality of familial relationships.

Few would argue that in these times when filling the seats at a theater takes precedence, Village Players' production of O'Neill's work is a resounding victory for revering the art form, rather than taking the predictable commercial path.

It only seems appropriate.

After all, perhaps more than any other American playwright, O'Neill expanded the spectrum of drama: from naturalistic to expressionistic.

Between 1915-1919, critics contend, the distinctive American dramatic aesthetic was created. Largely, it was O'Neill and his work with the Provincetown Players and other small theaters that inspired a distinctively American drama.

In times of blockbuster mentality and Hollywood-like spectacles set on stage, it might be comforting that "little theaters" like Village Players can still make a difference.

O'Neill's lasting appeal is proof that there's always a reward for those who place art ahead of commercialism. And perhaps Village Players will prove that audiences are still interested the theater as a way to think more deeply about their lives.

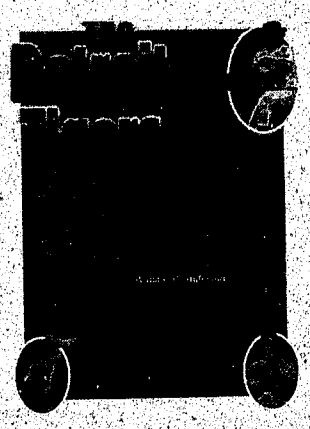
Tigers' history is well told in reissue

The Detroit Tigers: A Pictorial Celebration of the Greatest Players and Moments in Tigers History
By William M. Anderson
(Wayne State University Press, $34.95)

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net



On April 12, the Detroit Tigers began their last season of ball playing at the corner of Trumbull and Michigan Avenue after 104 years.

It's an especially appropriate time for this reissue of William Anderson's excellent scrapbook of Tiger history.

Anderson is a retired college president and Civil War and baseball historian. But his history of the Tigers is written in the language and lightness of a good sportswriter.

He takes us on a decade by decade history of professional baseball in the city from 1881 to last year. Each brief chronology is followed by a wonderful selection of photographs – game photos, formal team portraits, casual dugout shots and even some pictures in the stands. The book has 431 black and white photographs.

Here are all the major and minor figures in baseball history from Charlie Bennett to Damion Easley. Charles Conlon's famous photo of Ty Cobb sliding into third on Jimmy Austin is often included as one of the greatest baseball photos of all time. Taken at dust level, the photo shows all the mean, gritty tenacity that made Cobb the toughest player in baseball history and one of the nastiest people to ever play in professional sports.

Cobb dominates the early years of Tiger baseball and Anderson gives him his due as a player who could hurt you in so many ways. Cobb's lifetime .369 batting average is still mind boggling.

Under manager Hughie Jennings, shown here in his famous kicking stance, the Tigers won three pennants in a row, 1907-09.

By the late teens, the game changed. Babe Ruth made home runs the center of attention and the New York Yankees the kings of baseball. The Tigers played in the shadow of the Yankees but began to develop some fine ball players including Harry Heilmann and Charlie Gehringer.

In the 1930s, the acquisition of Philadelphia A's catcher Mickey Cochrane brought the Tigers their next glory period. This team featured the slugging Hank Greenberg, Barney McCosky, Gehringer and pitchers Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges. A picture shows what was then Navin Field packed for the 1935 World Series, during which the Tigers beat the Chicago Cubs.

The war years would find many Tigers going to war, including slugger Hank Greenberg. But in 1945, the Tigers would win another World Series, again at the expense of the Cubs. The photos in this section lead off with what was then Briggs Stadium in lights for the first time in 1948. There's a picture of power hitters Greenberg and Rudy York, third baseman George Kell in his best years, the recently deceased Birdie Tebbets in his catcher's gear, Greenberg sliding safely into third, "Dizzy" Trout on the mound, "Prince" Hal Newhouser taking a windup and bonus baby Dick Wakefield of Redford.

The 1950s was another Yankee-dominated decade. The Tigers were often playing just to stay in the first division. There were bright spots, especially a young player from Baltimore, who would be a model of consistent, dedicated performance – Al Kaline. Other heroes of the 1950s included Harvey Kuenn, Charlie "Paw Paw" Maxwell, Yankee Killer Frank Lary and Jim Bunning. A great picture from this period is a shot of broadcast legends Ty Tyson (the Tiger's first play-by-play man, beginning 1927) and Harry Heilmann, who began broadcasting in 1934 after his playing days.

In 1960, the talk of my neighborhood was the "trade of the century," batting champ Harvey Kuenn for Cleveland's home run king Rocky Colavito. The book has a shot of the Rock doing his famous pre-bat exercises.

The '60s would see the Tigers rise again. After losing the pennant on the last day of the 1967 season, the Tigers roared back in 1968 to win the flag. They added a World Series in a dramatic playoff with the St. Louis Cardinals and their ace Bob Gibson. The photos include Willie Horton cranking a home run, Dick McAuliffe with his Mel Ott batting stance, Denny McLain in better days ready to deliver during his 31 victory year.

The Tigers struggled through much of the 1970s, although starting to build a team that would make history with the signing of Jack Morris, Alan Trammel, Lou Whitaker and Lance Parrish. Perhaps the biggest story out of Detroit in the '70s was a gooney young pitcher nicknamed "The Bird" because of his resemblance to Big Bird – Mark Fidrych. Sadly, injuries would soon end the career of the popular and effervescent Fidrych.

The photos here include some lively shots of Kaline at bat, The Bird on the mound and Rusty Staub in the dugout.

Glory returned for the Tigers in 1984 with one of the most dramatic starts in baseball history and a start to finish run in first place. Manager Sparky Anderson played a strategic style of baseball that was part physical, part mind game.

Photos include the dynamic Trammel-Whitaker duo, Parrish, Kirk Gibson, Jack Morris in action, the wily Sparky and more.

The '90s have not been kind to the Tigers. To add insult to injury, the damn Yankees are back on top. But every spring, hope rises...

Author Lansing vividly recreates Shackleton's doomed adventure

Endurance: Shackleton's Incredible Voyage
By Alfred Lansing
Carroll & Graf Pub., $12.95

ESTHER LITTMANN

Some men are not born to stay home and maintain family traditions. Their restless and visionary temperament shuns certainty in favor of the unfamiliar and unexpected. Often causing discomfort, even grief, to their loved ones, they are, as adventurers and explorers, essential to human advancement. Such a man was Sir Ernest Shackleton.

Having joined the British Merchant Marine at 16, Shackleton quickly rose through the ranks. Not satisfied with moderate success, this energetic and ambitious young man wished to perform some act of lasting distinction. By 1907 he had already traveled to the Antarctic twice, yet failed to reach the South Pole. Determined to try again, Shackleton was, however, preempted in that attempt by Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen.

Undeterred, the man some called "utterly self-reliant" and a "genuine leader" conceived of an even more daring plan to bring fame to himself and his country. He would lead an expedition of able seamen, engineers, and scientists across the frozen continent of Antarctica – on foot. Receiving the blessings of none other than Winston Churchill, Shackleton and his crew of 27 men set sail in late August, 1914, days after Great Britain entered World War I.

This amazing story of courage, fortitude and ingenuity is told by former journalist and author Alfred Lansing in "Endurance: Shackleton's Incredible Voyage" (first published in 1959 and reprinted in 1998).

According to Lansing, Shackleton had every reason to expect success.

His expedition was generously funded by government and private sources, equipped with a sturdy ship and state-of-the-art supplies, and staffed with a superb crew, ranging from "Cambridge dons to Yorkshire fishermen." But as the saying goes, "Man proposes; God disposes." Because of unseasonable subzero temperatures, the members of the expedition never reached their destination. The ship, ironically christened the "Endurance," got stuck between two ice floes and was eventually crushed by the enormous pressure exerted on both sides.

What follows is a hair-raising account of trying to beat cold, hunger, and exhaustion while living on ice floes and traveling in open life boats in search of land and civilization. With few exceptions, the men exhibited, even in the worst of circumstances, an exceptional degree of cooperation and camaraderie. Meanwhile, their leader never failed in his responsibilities toward his crew, inspiring one of his men to comment that only Shackleton's leadership would do "when you are in a hopeless situation, when there seems no way out."

Alfred Lansing has managed to convert the diaries kept by several crew members and numerous post-expedition interviews into a seamless narrative that takes one's breath away. Vivid descriptions of frozen Antarctic seas and long polar nights, dramatic depictions of encounters with drifting icebergs and 60-mile-an-hour gales, poignant narratives of human anguish and the attempt to keep up morale create an unforgettable experience for the reader.

The expedition lasted exactly two years but did not enter the annals of history as an accomplished "first." It will, however, forever be recorded in one of the greatest poems of the 20th century: "The Waste Land." When T.S. Eliot writes, "Who is the third who walks always beside you?" he refers to an elusive spiritual presence that supports man in the midst of despair. In his notes to the poem, Eliot explains that this line alludes to Shackleton's admission that he sensed "another person with us," while he and his two exhausted companions crossed the treacherous terrain of South Georgia Island in a desperate rescue attempt.

Lansing's brilliantly narrated account of man's heroic attempt to conquer one of Earth's last great frontiers will thrill and inspire generations of future readers. Photographs and maps accompany the text.

"Endurance . . ." is available in local bookstores.

Turning the spotlight on north Oakland teams

OAA baseball race heats up

Anyone that has followed the baseball race in the Oakland Activities Association Division I the past four years can remember one team standing out above the rest in each season.

In 1995 and 1996, Rochester Adams ran away with the title while Rochester did the same trick each of the past two seasons.

But unlike the past four years, predicting this year's champion is simply too tough to call. Through this week, every team in the league had at least one loss with no one having more than four. In other words, the final order of finish is going to be very interesting.

As Adams manager Andy Lamkin said Monday after his Highlanders beat Lake Orion 9-2: "Every team in this league can swing the bat and it seems each team has at least two or three quality pitchers. You can't fall asleep in this league or you're going to be beat."

Currently, Troy is in first place with Adams and Clarkston in second place in the seven-team division, which also includes Lake Orion and Rochester, and first-year members West Bloomfield and Berkley.

■ Throw those cassettes away: One of the best changes during the 1998-99 school year is that most schools have found students to sing the national anthem at athletic contests instead of playing the Star Spangled Banner on a cassette recording.

But perhaps no one has done a better job than Ashley Doyle, a seventh grader at Clarkston Middle sChool who has been giving her rendition of the Star Spangled Banner at Clarkston home soccer games.

A job, well, well done.

■ Gettin' ready: Is it me or is the most played warm up song before high school games in Oakland County this school year Jay-Z featuring Jermaine Dupri's "Money Ain't A Thang"?

Just wondering.

■ Kudos: A congratulations goes to the Clarkston foursome of Mark Carlson, Brett Quantz, Kevin Breen and Klinton Powell, who set a school record last week at Ashley Relays, finishing fourth in the 1,600-meter relay with a time 3:26.2.

The record had stood since the spring of 1970, when President Nixon was still in office.

Hey, the season is far from being over so it will interesting to see how well this unit can perform.

■ My Name Is — Who?: At the beginning of the prep baseball season, not too many people heard of Ben Munce but fans soon will.

Munce, a freshman pitcher at Springfield Christian in Clarkston who recently moved from Milford, where he attended West Highland Christian, to Waterford, is really starting to turn some heads — literally. Munce is already 3-1 on the mound for the 6-2 Eagles and is averaging over 12 strikeouts an outing.

Munce is trying to help Springfield capture the first-ever Fundamental Baptist Athletic Conference baseball title. The 11-school conference, founded in 1993, recently added baseball and girls soccer as a league-sanctioned sport.

■ Freshmen sensations: One look at the Oxford girls soccer team and one can tell that the Wildcats are young — very young.

A total of seven freshmen are usually found in the starting lineup but that hasn't showed. After finishing 8-8-2 last year, Oxford is off to an impressive 10-5-0 start and is alone in second place behind nemesis Lapeer East in the Flint Metro League race.

How well can this youthful contingent do? Ask me that same question three years from now when these freshmen are all seniors.

■ Unbeaten: For the first time since the mid-1970s, both of Lake Orion's track teams finished their league dual meet season undefeated

Wolves, Dragons settle for standoff

■ It isn't often a team can be outshot 26-3 and still not lose a game, but that's exactly what the Clarkston Wolves did in their prep soccer rematch with Lake Orion Thursday night.

BY DANIEL STICKRADT
STAFF WRITER
dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

Sometimes in sports a tie can be just as good as a win. At least Tami Mitchell shares that view.

Mitchell, the first-year girls soccer coach at Clarkston, witnessed her team drop a 4-0 decision last month to rival Lake Orion. But when the two got together for the rematch Thursday in Clarkston, the Wolves were able to draw even and post a 1-1 Oakland Activities Association Division II tie with the Dragons.

"For us, a tie against Lake Orion is as good as a win," said Mitchell, whose team improved to 2-6-3 overall and 2-3-2 in the six-team division. "Our girls played good defense, they played very aggressive and they never gave up."

Perhaps Clarkston's Sarah Morgan was the difference. The 5-foot-10 sophomore goalkeeper was sterling between the pipes, stopping 15 shots, including a save on a penalty kick by Orion junior Erica Whatley with just 2:45 left, to preserve the tie.

"Unbelievable," praised Mitchell of Morgan. "She was just great out there. She was a huge difference in this game. She was very aggressive, stopping at least 14 or 15 shots. You name it. Sarah came up big."

After being tripped up in the right corner of the penalty box on a breakaway, Whatley had a chance to end Clarkston's defensive scheme, but Morgan leaned to her right to stop Whatley cold. Morgan also stopped Dragons senior midfielder Stephanie Gekiere from point-blank range off a 10-yard blast with 13 seconds left.

"Their goalkeeper played a great game — you can't take anything away from her. She just frustrated our girls the whole night," said Lake Orion veteran coach Paul Elder. "As a whole the Clarkston girls played really hard. They deserved the tie against us."

The Dragons (5-2-3, 3-0-3) came out of the gate breathing fire, which resulted in a goal in only the game's third minute.

Senior fullback Sarah Anderson began the play at midfield, picking off a Clarkston clearing attempt before going up the right side, where her cross sailed through the Clarkston backfield and right to a wide-open Sarah Poisson, who slipped a shot past Morgan

Hynes' Drives

Senior homers twice in 9-3 victory

Good pitches, bad pitches.

It isn't making much difference to the Clarkston Wolves these days.

They're hitting them all, and pounding the opposition as a result.

Clarkston got a pair of home runs from Spencer Hynes and another strong pitching performance from Chris Mitchell as they pounded Lake Orion, 9-3, in an Oakland Activities Association Division I prep baseball game Wednesday.

Hynes blasted a drive to dead center field to break a 2-2 tie in the fourth inning, then hit one that went even farther in the sixth to put the game away as the Wolves pushed their overall record to 13-3, 3-2 OAA I.

"I think we're playing pretty well," Clarkston coach Phil Price said. "We've been playing solid baseball the last five or six games."

The game was close most of the way, until Hynes' home run, part of a two-run fourth inning, helped the Wolves take a 4-2 lead.

The Wolves added three more in the bottom of the fifth, then tacked on a two-run sixth.

Senior Eric Jenks started the final spurt with a double to left and moved over to third on an Adam Leech sacri-

Wolves drop ugly one in softball split

BY BRAD KADRICH
SPORTS EDITOR
bkadrich@oe.homecomm.net

Someone has to win, even in the ugly games.

The Rochester Falcons did the ugly winning Wednesday, and the result was a split of an Oakland Activities Association Division I softball doubleheader at Clarkston.

The Wolves' Candace Morgan was strong in the opener and nearly helped pull off the sweep, but it was the Falcons who perservered to win the nightcap.

Clarkston (9-10 overall, 3-5 OAA I) won the opener, 6-1, behind Morgan's five-hitter and a suddenly-potent 11-hit offensive attack.

The second game was a matter of survival, as the Falcons built a big early lead, watched Clarkston come all the way back, then pulled it out with a pair of runs in the final inning in an 11-9 win.

"Our offense got going, but we left too many runners on base," Clarkston coach Al Land said. "We left too many runners in scoring position, and we made too

Late-game heroics lift Orion past Lakers, 6-5

BY DANIEL STICKRADT
STAFF WRITER
dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

With a game on the line, Kelly Coe is not accustomed to stepping up and becoming a hero, especially from the batters box. But the Lake Orion junior outfielder found the weight on her shoulders and the bat in her hands in the bottom half of the seventh inning Wednesday and still came through in the clutch.

In a 5-5 tie with two outs, a full count and runners on second and third, Coe ripped a base hit up the middle to lift the host Dragons to a thrilling 6-5 Oakland Activities Association crossover triumph over West Bloomfield.

"Yeah, I'm not used to being in these type of pressure situations," said Coe moments after her first career game-winning hit. "I knew I had to get a hit or this was going into extras innings. I was able to come though for my team. This feels very good."

Lake Orion veteran manager Denny Davis was elated to see Coe step up into the spotlight.

"Kelly is known more as a defensive player in the field. At the plate she's more off a slap hitter or someone who can lay down a good bunt," said Davis. "She really came up and surprised everybody. Kelly stepped up when we needed it and gave us a huge lift. I'm proud of her."

Thanks to three errors, five walks and a pair of pass balls, West Bloomfield (11-4) found itself in a 5-1 deficit after four innings. However, the Lakers put together a big four-run sixth-inning to garner the 5-5 deadlock heading into the unpredictable finish.

fice hunt. One out later, Hynes parked a home run over the fence in straightaway center field.

Francis Hodges followed that with a single, his third hit of the game, but Brett Crawford bounced out to end the inning.

Lake Orion scored its first run in the third. #1 singled to start the inning, then moved to second on a sacrifice by #3. After Mitchell got Adam Eldridge swinging, Steve Seargeant belted a double to the gap in right-center, scoring #1.

After the Dragons (7-7 overall, 2-3 OAA I) turned a double play to stop a Clarkston threat in the third, they tied it in the fourth when Ryan Goleski reached second on a throwing error. Goleski later scored to tie the game 2-2.

Hynes blasted his first home run as part of a two-run fourth to give the Wolves the lead for good.

"They hit some good pitches," Lake Orion coach Andy Schramek said of the Wolves.

Both coaches saw things they liked in the game.

"I saw a lot of positives," Schramek said. "Our pitchers made good pitches, but (Clarkston) hit 'em. Our approach to the game was excellent."

Price was particularly impressed with his team's effort, especially once the game got out of hand. He was still talking about a play that occurred in the top of the seventh with his team up 9-2.

Lake Orion's Travis Simmons tried to bunt his way on leading off. Mitchell fielded it and threw high to first. But second baseman John Drallos had hustled over and was backing up the play, preventing Simmons from advancing. Simmons eventually scored the Dragons' final run on an Eldridge ground-out, but Price was impressed by Drallos' hustle.

"I thought the infield played well, and (catcher Derek) Casper called a good game," Price said. "We're doing the little things, like (Drallos) busting his butt to back up first when we're up by seven."

from 18 yards out at the 2:50 mark.

Lake Orion eventually outshot Clarkston by a lopsided 26-3 margin, including 16-2 with shots directly on goal, and posted an 8-0 advantage with corner-kicks, but couldn't penetrate Morgan's force shield, although Clarkston senior fullback Jenn Yeager cleared a shot off the goalline early in the first half.

"That's how it goes sometimes," said Elder. "We pressured their net and had a great effort, and we possessed the ball exceptionally well. We just couldn't seem to beat their goalkeeper except early in the game."

Clarkston drew even at the game's 18:31 mark when junior forward Katie Kennedy beat Orion senior keeper Margo Chisholm on a penalty kick following a hand ball in the box.

That was all the offense could muster, however, as Chisholm (one save) never faced a shot over the final 60 minutes.

"We'll still take it," said Mitchell. "We played hard and that's what really matters."

many mental mistakes."

Morgan was brilliant after giving up a run on three hits in the first inning of the opener. After Rochester's Rachelle Gennero touched her for a double leading off and scored on a single by Paige Harris, Morgan shut the Falcons down, limiting them to two hits in the next five innings.

Morgan finished with a five-hitter through six innings. She struck out eight and walked just one. Megan Hodges finished with a perfect seventh inning.

The Wolves, meanwhile, quickly reclaimed the lead and held it. Melanie Arnold led off the first with a single and moved to second on a throwing error. She went to third on a sacrifice by Lindsay Simko and scored on a passed ball. Mary Warchuck singled and came all the way around when sophomore Tracy Honey ripped a double.

Senior shortstop Mandie Harrison turned a line drive down the left field line into an exciting inside-the-park home run with two out in the second. Arnold followed it with a bunt single, stole second and scored on a single by Simko.

Clarkston got its final two runs in the fourth. Harrison drew a walk and went to second on Arnold's sacrifice. Simko was hit by a pitch and Morgan's fly to left was dropped, loading the bases. Harrison scored on Honey's single, and Simko scored when Jenny Winn drew a bases-loaded walk.

Morgan allowed three runners to second the rest of the way. Gennero led off the third with an infield single and stole second, but Morgan struck out Liz Moulis and got Andrea Driscoll and Harris to pop out.

Sarah Potts led off the fourth with a double, but Morgan struck out Kelli Kirksey and Ellis. She struck out Kristen Kosuda leading off the fifth, but Gennero drew a walk and moved to second on a grounder by Moulis. But Morgan induced a grounder back to the mound to end the threat.

The Falcons looked like they'd run away with the nightcap after putting, four runs on the board in the first. But the Wolves came back with five of their own, taking advantage of Potts, who struggled through six innings on the mound.

The Falcons scored three times in the third. Harris doubled and scored on a single by Potts. Mary Whitney was safe on an error, and both runners wound up scoring when no one was looking for Clarkston catcher Corinne McIntyre's pickoff attempt, which sailed into left field.

Harrison and McIntyre, who played an excellent game behind the plate, scored to tie it in the bottom of the inning, but Rochester came back with two in the fourth.

Clarkston's Morgan singled and eventually scored on a single by Tricia Brewer in the fourth, and Harrison walked and scored on Brewer's sacrifice in the sixth to tie it before Rochester got two in the seventh.

Morgan took over for starting pitcher Lisa Ferguson in the fourth and retired the seven of the first eight hitters she faced. The eighth was thrown out trying to steal on a beautiful throw by McIntyre in the sixth.

"Corinne played well," Land said. "Candace came in and really put out a fire there."

following last Tuesday's double sweep of Waterford Mott and Troy Athens in the last ever event competed inside the old Lake Orion Stadium.

With their 6-0 record nestled firmly underneath their belts, the Dragons can wrap up the double-league championship by winning the Oakland Activities Association Division II meet May 25 at Athens.

Who was that guy who kept telling me that track is dead in this area?

Smiles, laughs there for the taking as kids take to the links

LINKS TO THE GAME

MICHAEL PATRICK SHIELS

With so many deeply disheartening and numbingly tragic examples of misguided youth in today's society, quality time with your children is vitally important, and character-building activities are, by theory and evidence, essential.

While it isn't a panacea, solution, or savior, the game of golf is one that can provide so many meaningful lessons and experiences to you and your children.

Fresh air, an orderly manner, patience, and a civil gentility, are key parts of a game that is so sophisticated that it respects its' players honesty enough to allow the player, and only the player, to penalize himself when called for.

You don't need my idealistic words and nebulous waxing to convince you that golf experiences can enrich the lives of your children...you need proof.

So here then, is action. Here is something concrete, well-organized, and inexpensive that you can do for your kids with the greatest of ease:

The Michigan PGA is once again conducting the Maxfli PGA Junior Championship this summer, open to boys and girls age 17 and under. The local qualifying events take place in June at a golf course near you.

"Although the qualifying event is competitive, the host professionals at the various golf course make the tournament fun for each and every participant, regardless of skill level," says Kevin Helm, director of operations at the Michigan PGA. "It is a friendly event that can be shared by youngsters and their parents, who can walk the course with their child."

Helm insists that the atmosphere at the upcoming Maxfli PGA Junior Championship will be such that everyone who participates will leave feeling like a winner.

Each participant will receive gift golf balls, bag tags, soda, pizza, and encouragement from the host professional.

Trophies will be presented to medalists in each boys and girls category: age 11 and under; age 12-13; age 14-15; and age 16-17. The entry fee of $20 for age 11 and under (9 holes), and $35 for children age 12-17 (18 holes), includes green fees, refreshments, and prizes.

The deadline to enter your son or daughter is June 10, and you may get entry forms by phoning the Michigan PGA at (734) 522-2323.

Over the past three years, Michigan has been among the states with the highest number of participants. In 1998, 785 children and teens participated at one of the 13 statewide sites offered. The locations and dates from which to choose in our area are as follows:

- Mystic Creek GC in Milford, Wednesday, June 16;
- Pine View GC in Ypsilanti, Thursday, June 16;
- Sylvan Glen GC in Troy, Friday, June 18;
- The Woodlands GC in Wayne, Tuesday, June 22;
- Rammler GC in Sterling Heights, Friday, June 25.

Eight other qualifying sites are spread throughout the state, and players who qualify at these local courses will advance to the state finals at Bedford Valley GC in Battle Creek on Wednesday, July 14 and Thursday, July 15.

Participants who make it to the state finals age 14 and up may qualify to win a trip to the Maxfli PGA Junior Championship.

The National finals will be held at the PGA National Resort and Spa in Palm Beach Gardens, Florida on August 18-21.

Pride of accomplishment, sportsmanship, camaraderie with like-minded youth, and priceless smiles and laughs are yours for the taking this summer through the Michigan PGA Maxfli Junior Championship.

Let's Talk Cars

Art Cervi

Someone asked me the other day if maintenance is really that important today as it was years ago. She was referring to the fact that vehicles have longer spark plug life; many have sealed fittings, etc. The answer, of course, is Yes! Sometimes the manual can be misleading. Changing the oil and the filter every 3,000-3,500 miles is a good thing. Doesn't hurt to also get a lube and have the transmission checked. Another factor is the conditions under which you drive. Dusty, sandy gravel roads are all culprits to your vehicle. This could mean that you need maintenance more often. Even the new synthetic oils today still break down in time, that's why you need to change it. Filters are just that, they filter all materials that you wouldn't want in your engine...like your furnace filter at home, change "em.

This is almost opening a can of worms. Nowadays more and more people are leasing vehicles for 2 to 3 years, some...not all...figure it's not their car so why worry about it. I've heard tales of people turning in vehicles with 24,000 miles on the odometer at the end of the lease and the oil was never changed, even once. How would you like to buy that vehicle? Another point to ponder: How many of you actually take out the operating manual and read it? All the maintenance facts are in there. Did you know you can void a warranty if you don't have proof of oil changes? Sludge builds up and the factories know in most cases it's caused by improper maintenance. Avoid it! In real time it takes about 20 minutes to do it all. Take the time...it's worth it.

Proper care of the mechanical should be a no-brainer, however, equally important is the overall car itself. Frequent washing, especially here in the midwest. Wash at least once or twice a week, even if the weather is gorgeous and sunny. You'll be amazed at the dust in the air and how it builds up. The paints are better than any we've ever had, but they still need to be taken care of.

Clean those tires! Nothing looks worse than a nice clean car with dirty tires. A nice wet scrub brush works wonders. Tire dressing is up to you. I'm not a fan of shiny tires, but I do like them clean. Don't neglect the wheels, they may be fancy and you want to keep them that way. Preventive maintenance.

Vacuum that interior, take out the floor mats, shake them and clean them. Ground-in dirt will destroy carpeting. Do the seats as well. If it's vinyl or leather, a mild soap and water combination is fine. Rinse and wipe dry. Include the instrument panel, get the dust off. Lint-free towels are great for this. In order to minimize reflection, I recommend not putting a gloss on the panel. Keep the storage area clean as well. It's a good idea to carry a set of jumper cables and a small tool kit for emergencies. As Penny Davis says on "Let's Talk Cars" during her Car Care Moment..."that way you can just keep rolling along"...til next week.

Art Cervi of "Let's Talk Cars" can be heard each Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to noon on WYUR, AM 1310.

Stabilitrak offered on 2000 Buick Park Avenue, LeSabre

DETROIT -- Buick will offer StabiliTrak, one of the world's most advanced vehicle stability control systems, on its 200-model-year full-size sedans.

StabiliTrak will be standard on the 200 Park Avenue Ultra and optional on Park Avenue and LeSabre. The 2000 LeSabre, which is already on the market, will be available with StabiliTrak in May (1999).

StabiliTrak, developed by General Motors and originally offered on 1997 Cadillacs, relies on exceptional technical advances to assist the driver in vehicle control and stability under hazardous road conditions and during emergency or evasive maneuvers.

"This system makes a significant difference in how the car behaves by enhancing the driver's ability to maintain control," said Robert J. Reuter, director of chassis engineering for GM's North America Car Group. "No system can take the place of good driving skills, but we believe a system that helps the driver to maintain control under adverse conditions is a substantial advance in vehicle safety."

StabiliTrak will enhance Park Avenue's reputation for providing a stable and safe driving experience, said Katherine J. Benoit, Park Avenue brand manager.

"Park Avenue's pedigree is luxury, but its value lies in sophisticated features that continue to satisfy the functional needs of its driver and passengers," said Benoit. "Park Avenue, Buick's flagship sedan, not only meets but exceeds the demands of today's luxury car customer -- a customer who demands refinement, but insists on practicality."

In addition to StabiliTrak, the 2000 Park Avenue will enhance safety with side air bags for the driver and right front passenger. Child seat tether anchors on the rear package shelf will be standard.

On the 2000 LeSabre, StabiliTrak comes as part of a Driver Confidence Package that includes self-sealing tires and a head-up driver information display. The head-up display projects key information onto the windshield, showing vehicle speed, high-beam and turn signal indicators and "check gauges" warnings, lessening the need for the driver's eyes to leave the road.

The optional package marks the first in a series of new features on the redesigned LeSabre, which reached the market in the first quarter of 1999. The 2000 LeSabre, latest generation of America's best-selling full-size car for seven straight years, offers a wide range of innovations and improvements, including side air bags for the driver and right front passenger.

"For the 2000 model year, we took a great car and made it better," said Joseph J. Fitzsimmons, LeSabre brand manager. "Now we're making even more improvements designed to further enhance the peace of mind that customers have come to expect from LeSabre."

StabiliTrak uses three special sensors added to the traction control system -- one for yaw rate, one for lateral acceleration and one for steering wheel angle -- to gather information on how accurately the vehicle is responding, how hard the car is cornering and how much traction exists. The data is sent to the computer that controls the anti-lock brakes and traction control.

Using this information, StabiliTrak continuously compares where the driver wants the car to go with how the car is actually responding. Then, the system uses the car's traction control system to assist the driver in maintaining the intended path.

For example, if the car slides outward when the driver attempts to turn at a speed too fast for road conditions, StabiliTrak applies the inside front brake, gently slowing the car and making it turn more. Similarly, if the rear of the car starts to fishtail during a turn, StabiliTrak gently applies the outside front brake to slow the car and bring the tail back into line.

The system operates in a closed loop, continuously measuring and compensating for driver steering adjustments and changes in vehicle direction.

StabiliTrak's operation is nearly transparent to the driver and requires no driver action to activate it. They only indication that the system is operating is a message display on the Driver Information Center. StabiliTrak's benefits are most obvious when roads are wet, snowy or icy, but the system functions at any speed on any surface and assists the driver during any evasive or emergency maneuvers.

No stability control system can defy the laws of physics, so if a driver enters a corner too fast for the available traction, the car could still go out of control, Reuter said. But for many driving situations, he said, StabiliTrak provides a significant margin of safety, making it one of the most important safety advances in recent years.

The manufacturer's suggested retail price for StabiliTrak option on Park Avenue is $495. The manufacturer's suggested retail price for the Driver Confidence Package -- StabiliTrak, head-up display an self-sealing tires -- for LeSabre is $880. The package can only be ordered on uplevel LeSabres with 16-inch wheels and traction control.

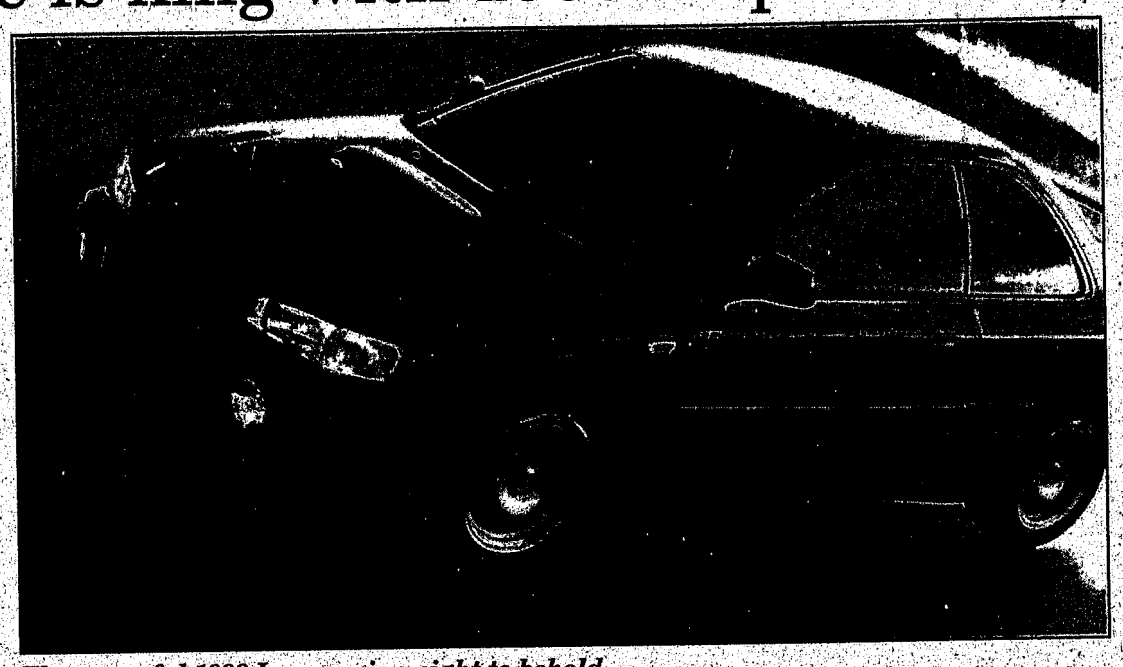
Performance is king with 1999 Impreza

CAReport

By Anne Fracassa
Avanti NewsFeatures



The powerful 1999 Impreza is a sight to behold.

First introduced at the 1998 New York International Auto Show, the 1999 Subaru Impreza 2.5 RS was a sight to behold.

And it still is.

The new emphasis at Subaru is "driving performance," and the five-car family of Impreza coupes, sedans and wagons is no exception.

Subaru is pushing something called "active safety," which is a series of systems built into every Impreza RS, L and Outback to help drivers avoid accidents.

A lot of automakers are emphasizing that lately, and I'm all for it.

If the driver can't take care of himself, the car should help a little along the way.

Let's examine the power, first of all, which is what the Impreza's name is all about.

This is the largest 4-cylinder boxer engine ever sold by Subaru.

It was first introduced by Subaru three years ago as a dual overhead cam engine.

It produces 165 horsepower and is a single overhead cam engine this year.

It gives you the same peak horsepower at the same rpm, but peak torque has been increased by 4 foot pounds (166 foot pounds at 4400 rpm).

It's a given that the Impreza 2.5 is an all-wheel-drive vehicle, as is every other Subaru. It's the company's trademark.

But the beauty of Subaru's All-Wheel-Drive System is that everything works in perfect sync to ensure maximum traction – without any input from the driver.

It works FOR you, not against you. All the time. In rain and snow and sleet and beautiful sunny weather.

And you never have to engage it, or lock the wheels, or press any buttons, or shift any gears or levers, or ... well, you get the message.

By the way, the system is no-maintenance – which is fine, because I hate maintenance.

And you really can't see the system in it anyway. And there's no real way to see that the vehicle is all-wheel drive because it doesn't make it look high off the ground or awkward – like the American Motors Eagle all-wheel drive did so many moons ago. (Man, am I dating myself!)

You'll be better off, I think, by opting on the 4-speed automatic transmission on the Impreza 2.5.

It's got a new design this year, although this proven transmission has been around since 1987.

For 1999, there's less friction loss and an enhanced fuel efficiency and economy.

The transmission works so closely with the all-wheel drive components that there's even a greater degree of control than you'll find with the 5-speed transmission.

I recommend the 4-speed automatic transmission, mainly because I had the hardest time, all week long, getting used to the 5-speed manual.

I don't know why, but it just didn't feel comfortable. I never did get used to it.

This is one 5-speed I wouldn't recommend.

If you're looking for choices, though, there are many. Bare-bones prices include the Impreza RS at around $19,200; three versions of the Impreza L at anywhere from $15,800 to $16,300 and an Outback wagon at around $18,000. Options, of course, are likely to push your car past $20,000.

"CLOSE" counts in more than horseshoes

JOB SEARCH

GEORGE HAYES

Q. I respond to virtually every job that is advertised in the newspaper if it sounds interesting. Even though I have only been out of school a few years, I have a lot of skills. Still, I'm not getting many responses. How can I get employers to look at my resume seriously?

A. We usually encourage people to go after jobs when they meet half or more of the listed requirements. Employers often overstate necessary qualifications when they start to recruit and tend to scale down expectations as time passes. 'Close' counts in more than horseshoes. Some candidates miss opportunities by taking ads too literally or being too selective in their responses.

Then there are job seekers like you - and, formerly, me. A couple hundred years ago, when I first got out of college, I would pour over the help wanted ads of a national business newspaper that always listed top-level jobs. I had an undergraduate degree, a good grade point average from a Big 10 school and great summer experience in disciplines such as sweeping tennis courts and operating a degreasing machine in a factory. Every Tuesday I would type up resumes, one by one, and shoot them off to companies looking for a National Marketing Director, VIP of Administration or Manager of International Trade. The thinking, if that's what you would call it, was that somebody would "see" something in my resume - some talent, skill, potential or even, yes, greatness of which I was unaware. There was no one to tell me that this was naive or even, yes, dumb.

Every employment ad we run nets a few of these resumes. A person who has just completed a bookkeeping class wants to be a CFO. A department head in a grocery store wants to be a Manufacturing Manager. Of course, my initial response is: "How can you think that you are even remotely qualified for this position?" And then I remember.

The simple message is this: In order to build a career, you have to continually make a case for yourself based on a logical progression of experience. Advancing to the next level is accomplished by marketing a portion of what you have done or learned previously. Employers will not make the case for you. They possess no special insight. In selling yourself, "can do" doesn't count. "Has done" counts. There are no leaps and very few shortcuts. Check out the next question.

Q. My base pay as a accountant is around $38,000 and, with a lot of overtime, I can bring it up to about $53,000. I am also eligible for a bonus of up to $6,000. So, I wasn't being dishonest when I told a prospective employer that I make about $60,000. After two interviews, I was offered the top job in accounting for $75,000 base. A person I respect seems to feel that I am in over my head. What do you think?

A. I respect the person you respect.

There are lots of stories about younger employees who have zoomed to the top and become remarkably successful. Behold the 25-year-old marketing genius who got us into Asia and saved the company. Witness the entry-level Director of Finance who restructured our debt and got us a seat on the NYSE. Of course, these are the only ones you hear about.

This column has also panned direct experience as a prerequisite for success in many jobs if support, training and patience are part of the package. Most bright people can do almost anything, given the right set of circumstances. Note the italics.

Your new employer might get a little hung up on the issue of value. For 75 big ones, the company will want major and immediate contributions. Your new boss will anticipate more answers than questions. The "learning curve" does not compute. People expect senior level performance for senior level compensation. Anything less would be readily apparent. If they are kind, they will restructure your job. If they are normal, they will restart the search.

This is why very few people grossly overstate their qualifications (most people slightly overstate their qualifications). An inability to do the job could result in horrible stress and embarrassment. It suggests a lack of attention to basic ethics. Similarly, most employers take candidates' claims at face value. They know that few people would intentionally place themselves in deep compost and that there is a simple remedy for those who do: Adiós.

If you haven't already, it's time to clarify expectations and benchmarks. These folks don't want to buy a puppy to nurture and cuddle. They want a full grown hound dog to catch rabbits right now. Have you ever caught a rabbit?

Unlike baseball, hockey does not reflect the subtlest aspects of life. Rather, it is every cliche on ice: life is a struggle, man's inhumanity to man, nice guys finish last, this won't hurt a bit, eat your Wheaties. Still, I like to watch it and a recent game did reinforce an old lesson. Have you ever noticed how many goals are made off the rebound? (Have you ever noticed I'm starting to sound like Mort Crim?)

Most of us set goals and fully expect our hard work and diligent focus to result in their attainment. One of my self-help tapes talks about goals being self-fulfilling and how, once written down, we move toward their realization like heat-seeking missiles. Wow.

Looking back, however, my successes have come on the rebound. I bounce my head right off the upright (ouch!) and get in from a different angle. It seems to be the same with a lot of job seekers, too. "Sorry, Bill, we've offered the position to someone else. Hey, would you like to be considered for this new thing that's come up in Europe?" Many candidates have turned lousy interviews into productive networking meetings that have led to plum jobs. A missed shot often offers a new opportunity to score. It's up to us to see the opening and take action.

Adopt a "cattitude" at work

CAREER MOVES

JIM PAWLAK

It's a dog-eat-dog world of work for too many people. Do you work like a dog? Are you treated like a dog? How many times each workday are you told the business equivalent of sit, fetch, heel and roll over by your boss, your peers and the system? Think I'm wrong? Let's examine some traits of "man's best friend" to see if we have adopted them. Start with obedience. Like Pavlov's dogs, many workers' actions are conditioned responses. To what? The business equivalents of obedience school - organization structure, in-house training programs and peer pressure. The boss/master is to be obeyed without question. They are always kept on a short leash, or else the boss will have to explain what they were doing in some other boss' backyard. They are brought to believe that the short leash is a good thing because it ultimately means less time in the boss' doghouse. Rewards are next. Do you live for that gratuitous "good dog" pat on the head you get occasionally when you do as you're told? Getting the boss' recognition becomes your real job. Who knows when the boss may toss you a bone in the form of an important project? You are afraid of the boss, too, even though the boss' bark is probably far worse than the bite. You've been taught to do, not think, so for better or worse you'll also follow those procedures. They're dogma. When someone changes them you doggedly stick to your old ways. The result? It takes forever to get the new procedures down pat - it sounds like the can't-teach-an-old-dog-new-tricks syndrome.

And what about all those teams you work with? Isn't there really one "leader of the pack"? Think of a dog sled team. If you're not that lead dog, your view will never change.

If you're dog-tired of leading that dog's life at work then, doggone it, try a different approach to establishing and maintaining a satisfying worklife. Learn to work like a cat. Adopt a cattitude at work. What's that? An attitude of independence. An attitude that shouts, "I want to do that because...". An attitude of curiosity expressed by "What if...?", "Why?" and "I wonder...?"

The key to creating cattitude is managing your boss. Believe me, the boss will appreciate being managed and your career will catapult. Why? Cat owners readily admit that they are the best trained pet owners. Much to the delight of their owners, cats do what they want, when they want and how they want. How does that train the owners? They realize that, to the extent the cat takes care of itself, they have more time to do other things. Wouldn't any boss want more time in which to maximize his/her area's productivity? It does take time to manage one's boss, but the independence you'll get is worth the effort. How do you start? By asking for the bone, rather than waiting for one to be thrown your way. Say to your boss: "I'm caught up. What needs to be done on (name a project on which you really want to work and state why you want to work on it)?" The boss will eventually catch on to the types of work you really do well and automatically dog-ear the projects you'll enjoy. Talk about being in the catbird seat. And how do cats react to change? They know it's an opportunity to explore all sorts of new nooks and crannies. My cat, Gatsby, can't resist an open door or a closed one. Curiosity hasn't killed him yet. People with cattitude always walk through the open doors and always knock on the closed ones until someone opens them. That's how they learn. They're catalysts for change. As for those etched-in-stone procedures, they simply become guidelines requiring periodic updates to keep them in synch with what the cool cats are doing.

ASK THE EXPERT

How does a GFCI work?

By Popular Mechanics
For AP Special Features

Q: I'd like to know more about GFCI-protection and the relationship it has with ground and neutral wires. If I use a small one-quarter-watt electrical circuit tester, I can use the metal junction box or the ground slot as a neutral. However, when doing the same test using a 25-watt incandescent bulb, the GFCI will trip. Why?

A: The neutral wire is grounded, but it is not the grounding wire. The neutral wire is needed to close the circuit. This allows the current in the branch circuit to flow from the electrical service panel through the appliance and back to the grounding bar in the service panel.

The grounding wire is a safety feature. It connects to ground components that do not normally carry a current, such as a metal appliance case. If an electrical short develops and the case becomes electrified, the grounding wire directs the current safely to the ground rather than shocking a person who is touching the metal surface.

The GFCI (ground fault circuit interrupter) is a safety refinement. Under normal conditions, the current is equal in the hot and neutral lines. The GFCI breaker or GFCI outlet receptacle has a sensing element that monitors the current in the hot and neutral lines of a branch circuit. If the GFCI senses a current difference between the hot and neutral line as small as 5 milliamps (5/1000 of an amp), it automatically trips. The circuit is opened, and current stops flowing within a fraction of a second.

By testing the circuit using the hot leg and the grounded junction box or ground slot in the outlet, you alter the current flow between the hot and the neutral legs of the circuit. The GFCI doesn't trip with the one-quarter-watt tester because it draws 2.1 milliamps which is less than the GFCI's 5-milliamp threshold. The GFCI is tripped when using the 25-watt bulb because that test draws 208 milliamps. Based on your test, the GFCI is working properly.

Homes give you access to world of nature

It's a nature lover's dream come true.

Fairfield Estates, a platted community in West Bloomfield, offers large houses nestled among winding roads, rolling terrain, wetlands and woods.

Just 35 houses will be built on the 33-acre site off Halsted between Maple and Walnut Lake Road.

"There's blue herons in here," said Jamie Chobot, sales representative. "I've seen mink in here. A lot of beautiful birds. It's just gorgeous.

"They (visitors) like the lot sizes. Ninety-nine by 145 feet is the smallest I have," Chobot said. "They like the width, how they're spread out. With wetlands, no homes are set back to each other. It offers seclusion, serenity."

The township has acquired a 22-acre farm just north of Fairfield Estates to be used as a park, so no further residential development will focus in that direction.

"It's not a subdivision feel," said Pierre Nona, vice president with Triangle Development, the developer/builder. "We have a lot of walk-out sites."

Other attractions: "restaurants in West Bloomfield, shopping, churches," said Dean Piekarski, sales manager for Triangle.

The Jewish Community Center campus is about a mile away.

While Fairfield Estates is on a unpaved part of Halsted, access to freeways via the Haggerty Connector (M-5) and Northwestern Highway are each within five miles.

Triangle offers four plans ranging in price from $419,900 for a colonial of 3,007 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths to $544,900 for a story-and-a-half of 4,001 square feet with four bedrooms and 3-1/2 baths. Those prices include base lot.

Nona conceded, however, that at this price point, the floor plans are merely starting points for prospective buyers.

"We're willing to customize whatever they need," he said. "Nobody's going to replicate this. Most are taking our plans and making changes here and there."

Standard features in all plans include three-car garage, fireplace, air conditioning, wood or ceramic in the foyer, hallway and kitchen/ nook, first-floor laundry and basement.

Also included as standard features are separate jet tub and shower in the master suite, double oven, cooktop, microwave and dishwasher, 20 recessed lights and carpeting throughout.

St. Moritz: This story-and-a-half with 4,000 square feet, four bedrooms, including first-floor master, and 3-1/2 baths carries a base price of $544,900.

"Our standard features really outshine the traditional subs in the area," Chobot said.

The sales model, the St. Moritz, is the largest and priciest among Triangle's four plans.

The story-and-a-half features a two-story foyer, library with cathedral ceiling, dining room and great room with two-story ceiling.

An elongated wet bar/ counter extends from the kitchen to a butler's pantry. The kitchen/ nook contains a large island/ breakfast bar and walk-in pantry.

A mud/ storage room is off the garage.

The first-floor master with pan ceiling includes a pair of walk-in closets, two-sink vanity and compartmentalized commode.

A curved staircase and bridge overlooking the great room accentuates the foyer.

A guest suite plus two bedrooms and a full bath are upstairs.

Price of the model, with upgrades including cabinets, counters and landscaping, is $680,000.

A spec model also has been constructed.

The Milano, a colonial of 3,420 square feet, showcases a living room, dining room, family room with two-way fireplace into the kitchen/nook and a den oriented toward the back of the home.

All four bedrooms and two full baths are upstairs.

Base price is $488,900, the spec with upgrades and landscaping $530,000.

Most of the remaining lots carry price premiums ranging from $5,000-$46,000. Walkouts are an additional $15,000.

Also, individuals can buy lots ($165,000-$209,000) and then bring in their own builders, as long as plans conform with architectural controls set by Triangle.

Minimum house size is 2,800 square feet with at least 50-percent brick exterior. Vinyl and aluminum siding aren't allowed.

Fairfield Estates is served by city water and sewers. It's within the Walled Lake school boundaries. There are no sidewalks.

The property tax rate is $90.64 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $500,000 house there would pay about $7,660 the first year.

The annual association fee is projected at $200.

Reginald and Jamie Hill bought a lot in Fairfield Estates and plan to build a home for themselves and children Reggie and Zachary.

"Lots were available and you could bring your own builder in," Reginald Hill said. "It was in back of a very pretty sub.

"Their (Triangle's) price was reasonable, and I would have had no problem using them, but my builder, I was comfortable with," Hill added.

The sales office/ model at Fairfield Estates, (248) 788-0344, is open 1-5 p.m. daily, noon to 5 p.m. Sundays, closed Thursdays.

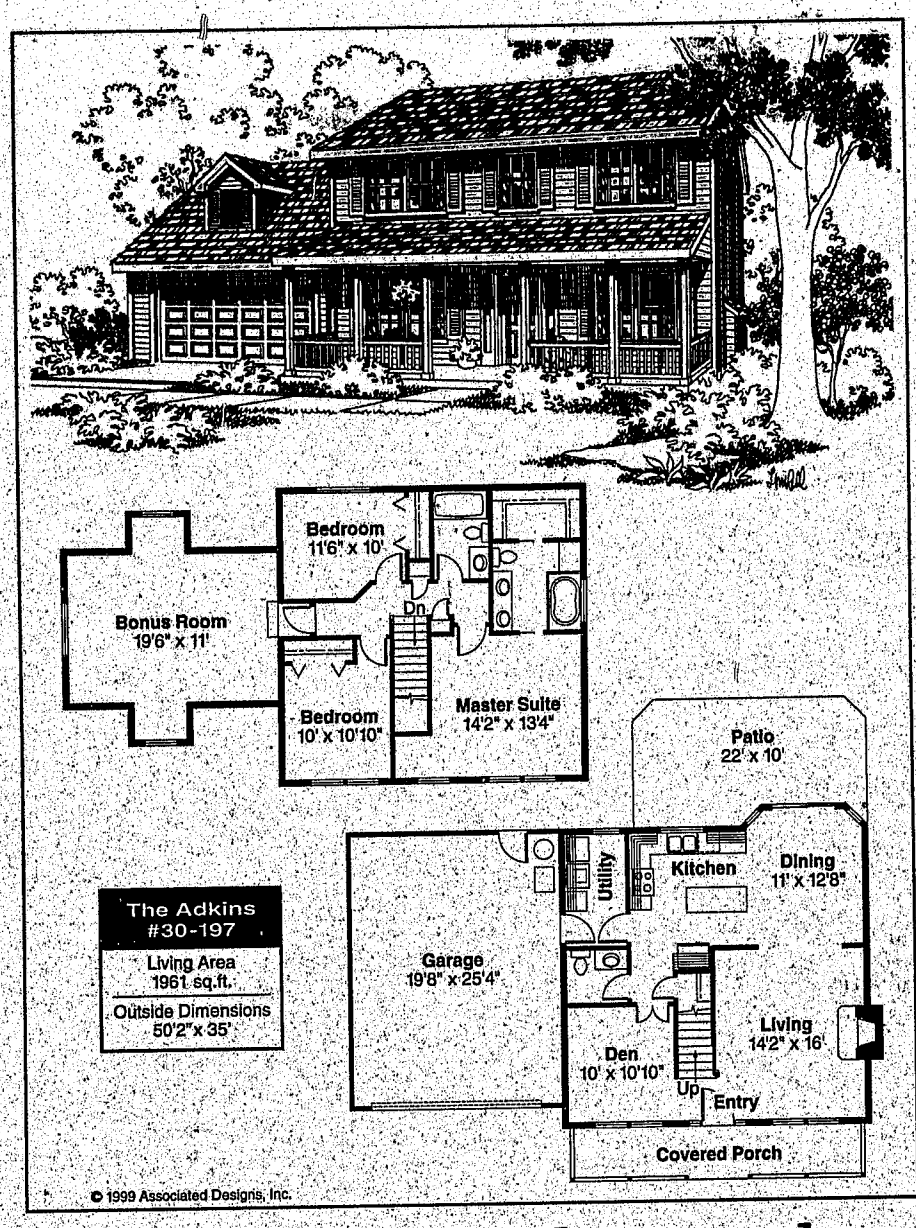
Farm-like exterior, modern interior define plan



Its covered porch and shutters give the compact Adkins the look of a traditional farm-style home, but the interior is entirely up to date.

Kitchen, dining room and living room flow together, creating a feeling of openness, with nine-foot ceilings adding to the sense of volume.

Standing at the sink, you face out across a large patio, accessed through sliding glass doors in the dining room's window bay. A large work island increases available counter space, and utilities are mere steps away, in a utility room with cabinets over the appliances. The small powder room is handy to any area of the main floor, and equally close to the garage.

A fireplace serves as a focal point in the living room. An arched opening sets the boundary between living room and dining room. To the left of the central stairway is a den. This would be an ideal location for the family computer, a home entertainment center, or a home office.

Bedrooms and a large bonus room are upstairs. The master suite has a walk-in closet and private bathroom. Amenities include a glass enclosed soaking tub with shower, double vanity, and built-in bench. Pocket doors provide privacy when needed.

Two linen closets nestle into alcoves in the hallway, close to a bathroom that will be shared by the people who live in the other two bedrooms. This bathroom has a combined tub and shower.

The Adkins' bonus room has a cross-shaped central space with a 9-foot ceiling that slopes down toward the corners. Dormer windows on two sides could be outfitted with cozy window seats.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $20 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Adkins 30-197 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 250 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Shopping for equity loan

(NAPS) – These days, more and more homeowners are considering ways to use the equity they have in their homes as a financial resource to consolidate bills, pay for unexpected expenses, or to make a major purchase. When using your home as security for a loan, however, the most important first step is to become an educated consumer.

Before you borrow, consider the following advice on how to shop for a home equity loan, made available by The Associates, one of America's largest publicly traded financial services companies.

1. Look carefully at companies offering the home equity loan. Make sure the company you select is reputable. Ask lenders how long they have been in the home equity loan business.

2. Know your loan broker. Some people feel more comfortable if they have a loan broker helping them sort out options. If you decide to use one, make sure you understand how the broker is being paid and whether he or she is committed to finding you the best loan terms available.

3. Remember the potential tax benefits. A loan against equity in your home could save you money on your income taxes. You should consult a personal tax adviser to help determine the deductibility of interest on any particular home equity loan.

4. Don't forget the math. To determine whether a home equity loan to consolidate and pay off bills makes sense, start by adding up all your existing loan payments. Get an estimate from a reputable lender on the monthly payment for a home equity loan large enough to pay off your other debts. Find out the total cost of the loan, including "points and closing costs." Then compare the new monthly payment with the total of your existing monthly payments.

5. Organize your paperwork. When you visit the loan officer or broker, bring a recent paycheck stub, tax return, and records showing the balances and payments of your outstanding bills.

6. Understand your budget. Take into account all of your regular monthly expenses – food, transportation, entertainment, and such – when determining the kind of payment you can afford.

7. Never sign for a loan until you are completely comfortable. If a broker or loan officer pressures you to agree to a loan despite your discomfort, you may want to take your business elsewhere.

Plan your work, then work your plan to keep insects from invading the home

■ Move wood piles or cinder blocks away from the house, as pests love to hide in these damp, dark places.

(NAPS) – It's a scenario that occurs every spring. Temperatures warm up, snow melts, vegetation begins to grow and voila, insects invade homes.

By implementing a preventive maintenance program, you can keep pest problems to a minimum.

Think of pest maintenance as a dartboard. The inside of the house is the bulls-eye, while the outside structure and yard represent the rings around the bulls-eye. Start with the outer reaches and work in.

First, keep the areas around the home debris-free and dry. Move wood piles or cinder blocks away from the house, as pests love to hide in these damp, dark places.

When lumber or blocks are next to the house or garage, pests living there often venture inside in search of food and water.

It's also a good idea to trim excessive vegetation. Foliage adjacent to the home, especially near windows and doors, serves as a walkway for insects to enter the house.

Try to keep plants, shrubs and mulch at least 18 inches from the house. In addition, make sure trash storage bins are not in close proximity to the home. Insects forage through garbage looking for food and will eventually go inside with the same intent.

Also, use downspout hoses to drain water away from the house. Efficient downspouts that keep the area dry discourage insect infestations because bugs leave areas that lack moisture.

Second, address the external structure. Start with entry doors. While lying on the floor, check for light filtering under doors. Gaps as small as one-sixteenth of an inch or less permit entry of insects. In these situations, install door sweeps or thresholds. To seal gaps under sliding doors, line the bottom track with foam weather stripping. Also, apply caulk along the bottom outside edge and sides of the door thresholds.

It's also important to seal utility openings where pipes and wires enter the foundation and siding, especially around outdoor faucets, gas meters, clothes dryer vents and telephone/cable TV wires.

Windows represent another easy-access point for insects. Repair gaps and tears in window and door screens and caulk cracks around windows, doors and facia boards.

The final step in the perimeter prevention program is to apply a pesticide.

Insecticides are available in a variety of formulations including liquid, microencapsulated, dust, aerosol, granule and bait.

A thorough perimeter treatment consists of treating three areas – the ground around the structure, up along building surfaces and around door and window frames and other entry points.

Depending on the size of the home, a perimeter treatment can be completed in one to two hours.

Apply an insecticide along the base of the house and 4 to 6 feet away from the home. A granule formulation can be used around buildings and in ground cover.

Granular formulations help prevent insect damage to ornamental plants and are easy to apply with a hand-held spreader or shaker can.

For added protection, apply a liquid formulation 2 feet up the side of the building. Also, treat at the base of all exterior doors, garage and crawl space entrances, around foundation vents, utility openings and underneath siding.

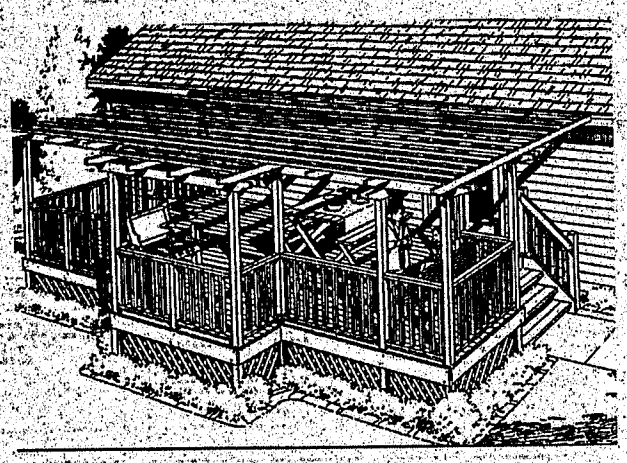
The Weekly Do-It-Yourselfer



Porch with choices

With the many options available on this week's plan, you can create a porch that is like no other. The first decision to make is what size. You can get eight to choose from, ranging from as small as 8' x 12' to as large as 10' x 24'. Other options include a country porch swing and lattice work. Stair and railing plans are included, making it possible to make your project even less common with all the choices available at your local lumberyard. Two complete sets of the plans are included: one for you or your builder and one for the building department. Plans include clearly labeled, detailed drawings along with full framing instructions. Illustrations are drawn three dimensionally with full elevations and cross sectional diagrams. Step-by-step comprehensive instructions are included to aid you in construction. A full materials list will make your trip to a local lumberyard for building materials another easy step toward the completion of your new project.

☐ Send me the Project Plan #90016 Construction Package (ready-to-build blueprints). Includes 2 prints and complete materials list . . $17.40.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"ONE IS MORE THAN TWO"

When buyers decide to begin looking for their next home, they must choose a Realtor. Some people think it is to their advantage to work with more than one Realtor. It seems logical enough. Two people would know about more homes for sale than one. Although this does seem logical, it is not the best way to use the services of Realtors from a practical point of view. Actually, it is best to work with one Realtor when house hunting. Here are some factors to consider:

ONE AGENT KNOWS YOUR NEEDS

If you skip around from one agent to the next, no one person really understands your needs, your tastes and the homes you have already seen. If, however, the same Realtor is with you on every showing, he or she can observe your reactions and be better prepared to find your ideal house. Too many Realtors showing you too many home can lead to confusion and chaos.

A CLEAR INCENTIVE

If you are working with a number of agents, none of them know if they will ever get paid for their efforts, despite their hard work on your behalf, they may still lose out if a competitor happens to find the right house. If a Realtor knows, however, that he or she has your complete loyalty, a strong financial incentive is there to encourage the Realtor to get the results you want.

ACCOUNTABILITY

Someone has to be held accountable to you for getting the job done. If you work with more than one agent, you might as well have hired a committee. With two agents on the job, no one is really in charge of your house hunting efforts. Committees are not as reliable as putting one person in charge and holding him or her responsible for results.
