OAKLAND COUNTY FACTS AND FIGURES

By JOE HAAS

The greatest transformation in its history is in progress in the population of Oakland County. In many instances the city is going to the country, and likes it.

In its unparalleled growth since the last census, the largest increase in population has been in the so-called rural townships.

It is hardly probable that the 1960 census will show any marked growth in most of the older cities and villages. There are a few exceptions to this, but they are mostly in areas influenced by nearby developments or proximity to heavy industrial employment.

Most of the recently incorporated cities and villages in the county cover areas previously rated as rural, but which now are building up at a rapid rate, even faster than their local public utilities program.

Without doubt the county will attain the 650,000 mark in the next census. After allowing for the natural home growth, probably 75 percent of this gain will be people who came here from other states, or even other nations, it is safe to assume that the other 25 percent came from Wayne or other counties in our own state.

Only a small fraction of these people are locating in our older cities or villages, but all of these municipalities are ringed by subdivisions that accommodate most of the increase.

Modernized transportation facilities, including better roads, continue to shorten the time and distance between the home and the place of employment.

With the parking situation on its way to a partial solution, and the school bus coming into quite universal use, it appears that living in the so-called country has lost most of its disadvantages.

Our public utilities are investing untold millions to give the precocious Oakland County the water, electricity, gas, phones, sewers and other facilities as fast as they can be installed. Their engineers usually are quite apace with the conservative real estate men.

They are banking their capital on our growth, which is the best criterion of healthy progress. Their projects must be dividend builders for their stockholders. They cannot do any guesswork.

A study of new building in our county's education system quite generally shows that we are keeping pace with our growth in that respect to a greater degree than many areas that have not had such a large home and industrial development.

Our people have voted millions in taxation in their highly commendable desire to give these facilities to their children. In nearly all cases the boards of education have then sold the bonds at a low rate, and gone ahead with the construction without unnecessary delays.

As the home building in the county continues its present trend to the north and west, it is getting away from the Detroit influence, and the county's center of population each year shows a further step toward its geographical center.

The past year has brought much to Oakland County that makes for its future progress in growth of population, home building, educational facilities and cultural advantages.

Prominent among these are the Wilson gift of approximately ten millions for a branch of the Michigan State University, and the Jones gift for work along the same line, both wonderful heritage foundations.

These are only supplements to our county's many other blessings, first bestowed upon us by nature, and then developed in a manner in which we challenge the entire nation to surpass or even match.

Our present status only proves and emphasizes the old Indian expression concerning this area, in the language of the red men, "Des-kre-shos-ke," meaning in our English that everything is here.

For the lover of the outdoor life, our 423 lakes, numerous streams, rolling countryside with plenty of beautiful vistas, including 35 golf courses, a home life unsurpassed, and in the very heart of the world's greatest industrial section, isn't everything here?
