OAKLAND COUNTY FACTS AND FIGURES

By Joe Haas

(Pontiac Press Staff Writer and County Historian)

The impending release of the official figures of the 1960 federal census gives every promise of proving what our boosters have claimed - - the largest growth in population in Oakland County's history. The assertions that it will register an increase of over one quarter of a million over the 1950 figure of 396,001 appear to be well founded. Probably no other county among the 83 in Michigan will show such growth. It also seems quite probable that no other county in the entire nation has sapped the population of a more populous big neighbor to such an extent. If Wayne County shows any growth, it will come in the townships outside of Detroit, which in a large measure has been losing population to Oakland and other nearby counties.

Gains in population by cities quite often are attained by increasing their area. But Oakland County's area is static - - it cannot be changed. What increase we gain in population thus means that it is because those new people come here because they considered it a more favorable place to live - - that it has greater advantages than their former places of abode.

Detroit claims that the manufacture of automobiles, which largely was responsible for its growth, now is working in reverse. The automobile is blamed for furnishing the means for people to live outside that city while still working there. But such is not the case with Oakland County, located in the very center of the area where 90 per cent of all the automobiles are made. It has so many natural and man-made attractions that the automobile only furnishes the opportunity for living amidst them, hence our marvelous growth in population and otherwise. Now a great majority of our citizens find employment within the confines of their own county - - and this proportion is steadily increasing.

Through its legislative body, the Board of Supervisors, Oakland County has largely kept pace in providing suitable community regulations and restrictions so that we no longer have any of the slums or low grade residential districts often quite prevalent in a large city. They have no place in our future. In this work they have been ably assisted by the township, city and village officers, and by our public utilities. The desired acme in this work is to allow no extension of limits where proper sanitary and other facilities cannot be provided. Only recently some proposed village area expansions were denied for this reason. We appear to be determined to solve our drainage problems.

Our county's agricultural status is in a continuous fight with industrial and home building expansion. Many of our farmers have found it more profitable to dispose of their land for plating purposes than to continue to till the soil. More intensive farming, and the use of modern methods, is enabling the others to keep the county near the top among Michigan's agricultural counties.

The sand and gravel industry has now replaced farming and takes second position among our county's industries, second only to manufacturing. So great has been its growth that it has climbed over farming, in spite of the better ways of agriculture. In this respect the sand and gravel industry poses a threat. It is rapidly taking over acreage formerly used for farming, and has indications of transforming more of our area into man made canyons. Whether or not this is a good thing for our future at large depends on how your interests may lie. Within recent months several tracts that had been subdivided for home building have been taken over by the gravel interests, who in their desire to assure future deposits have made the soundings, and were willing to pay more for this acreage than it is worth for subdividing. It is quite generally known that one corporation has ambitions to control the sand and gravel business of the entire nation - - with their principal source of operations right here in Oakland County. Suitable working deposits have already been located in 23 of the county's 25 townships.

However, civic pride, elimination of officials who lack it, providing for the future before being faced with it, and co-ordination between municipalities have laid a foundation that will always assure that Oakland County is a good place to live and do business.

It has more of the worthwhile attributes than some of its own residents realize - because they do not get around and find out more about their home location. Why not make the year 1960 a good year to study your own county?

If you will just do this in an observing manner, you'll better understand why thousands of the residents of Detroit and other populous locations are finding it desirable to come and live among us.
