

Mark Twain Performance

Scheduled

Tom Noel brings his highly acclaimed one-man performance of "Mark Twain at Home" to the Clarenceville High School auditorium on January 28. Currently on tour of college campuses across the nation, Noel has enjoyed great success portraying America's best loved humorist. His drama has been variously described as: "highpoint of an exciting year" "we actually had Mark Twain here" ... "Mark Twain lived on our stage" and "truly marvelous performance."

According to Noel, Mark Twain was the first swinger of the century -- and he is still swinging today. He speaks to all generations, regardless of sex, of nationalities, of races of political and religious affiliations. And he never goes out of date.

"Mark Twain at Home" is being sponsored by the Schoolcraft College Cultural and Public Affairs Committee. It will be performed at 8 p.m. Admission price is $1 for students and $2 for the general public. Tickets are on sale at the College Bookstore and will be available at the door the evening of the performance.

Mail order tickets are available from the Schoolcraft College Student Activities Office, 18600 Haggery Road, Livonia 48151. Clarenceville High School is located at 20155 Middlebelt,

Seminar

For Adults

A lot of adults think about going back to school but somehow their plans never get beyond the thinking stage.

They should consider the Human Potential Seminar being offered at Schoolcraft

The seminar meets three hours weekly for eight weeks It is composed of adult men and women who have been planning to go to school but didn't know where to start. The seminar is a good place to

Their teacher is a trained counselor from the Schoolcraft staff. Only he isn't a teacher, because there are no written assignments or tests or grades or credit for the seminar. He's more of a guide, a friend, somebody who understands and wants to

That's because the seminar gives adults an on-campus experience with others who, like themselves, want to go back to school. It's a chance to explore their opportunities, to evaluate self-interests, to engage in goal setting and

The seminar is held Monday through Thursday nights from 7- 10. It begins the week o January 31. The cost is $25 and enrollment each night is limited to 12 persons on a first-come basis.

For further information or to pre-register for the seminar, telephone the community services office at 591-6400 extension 264.

Services Sought for Major Shopping Center

Construction of Novi's first major commercial center may begin this summer if arrangements can be made with the city for water and sewer facilities.

The Novi-Ten group proposes to begin its development of the 130-acre former Irwin Orchards' property on the southeast corner with a complex of stores including a major supermarket, drug store and three to five auxiliary shops.

Every year about this time the same comments are heard

Weiss noted that the total 130-acre site is zoned for commercial, professional office and industrial use.

"We think it promises to provide the community with both needed services and tax base," he told The News this week. The 14-acre office area fronts on Novi Road south of the commercial site, while the 95-acre industrial section fronts ward along the railroad. Weiss said the start of the shopping center depends on the availability of utilities (water and sewer). Once started, he estimated the first stage would take nine to 12 months to

The initial development, approximately six stores, would be built on a 10-acre L-shaped parcel behind the existing Irwin Orchards' building on the corner. The new center would have access from both Ten Mile and Novi Roads,

When services are extended to the location, they will in all probability come from the east across 10 Mile Road, City Manager George Athas said Wednesday. A Huron-Rouge Sewer System interceptor is now running parrallel to the railroad tracks that cross 10 Mile and water lines have been extended as far as Meadowbrook Glens subdivision.

Both the source and the financial means of extending services are still under investigation, however. Athas said a special assessment could be levied or a pay-back agreement with the Novi-Ten group might have to be worked out. As to when water and sewer might be available, Athas would only say an "educated guess" would be within the

Virtually every American institution and professionexcept one-has dropped in public favor, according to data revealed by Bayard Hooper, vice-president of the Harris

In a speech prepared by Louis Harris and during a question and answer period Friday night during the Michigan Press Association Convention, Hooper said only the medical profession-the doctor-has been spared greater public disapproval.

Doctors, said Hooper, have not increased in popularity but, more significantly, they have not dropped in popularity as have other professions during the past five years.

confidence," declared Hooper, "(has dropped) from a low 30 percent to an even lower 19 percent." Political leaders, said Hooper, dropped from 41 to 23 percent in public confidence. Furthermore, confidence in business leaders has fallen from 55 to 27 percent; educators from 61 to 37 percent; military leaders from 62 to 27 percent; and scientists from 56 to 32 percent, polls show. Labor leaders, he added, enjoy only 14 percent public confidence.

Confidence that business is bringing better quality products to people has dropped from 75 to 47 percent since

"Positive marks for business for building new plants to make the economy grow has fallen from 78 percent to 51 percent; credit to business for providing enough steady jobs or people has fallen from 74 to 43 percent; offering young people a chance to get ahead (down from 73 to 40 percent); allowing people to use their full creative abilities (down from 62 to 36 percent); help in eliminating economic depressions (down from 75 to 36 percent); and keeping the cost of living down-11 percent positive and 81 percent negative for business," he declared.

All of which means, suggested Hooper, that America is ripe for radical change. By radical change, he explained, he does not mean a change to a "communist" or similar form of government but rather a revolutionary change from ependence on military and economic strength to a social-

for The Record

Old wounds may heal slowly, but hopefully the wounded need more than hurt pride to win supporters to their cause.

Some 16 years ago the township and village of Northville split their governmental ties when the latter incorporated into a city. Division of assets followed, a legal process for divvying-up what had been held jointly, and the divorce made competitors out of ex-partners.

There were sages in those days of the mid-fifties who would have preferred full incorporation of the village and township into one city of adopt a course of direction, either But there were still others who towards unification with the city or a opposed cityhood for either village or township. So a compromise was struck and a small city of Northville was formed on its second try at the

One of the motivating forces for incorporation in those days was a new law that awarded rebates from the state's share of horse racing mutuel handle receipts to cities in which tracks were located.

Thus armed with promises of While talk of community money in betting rebates to help unification was once kept to a keep property taxes low, plus the whisper to avoid arousing old professional advantages of city animosities, it is being freely government, the advocates of indiscussed today as a logical step. corporation were able to win a majority of supporters.

And here we are 16 years later when time and people have brought the once sparcely-populated township area to a point where services are becoming as necessary as they were when the village turned to bigger government to solve its problems.

And again opinion is divided as to how these services should be

There are still a few of the "wounded" left over from the incorporation fight of the fifties. And there are the single-city advocates who supported such action 16 years ago. But there is also a new breed that has become larger than either of the decision at the polls Most will not be persuaded by less than facts and economics.

And as Northville township

ponders the construction of a new township hall-fire department-police station complex, the new breed begins to examine the alternatives.

Two governments better than one? Two municipal offices, two police departments and chiefs, two fire departments?

This is being advocated by more than one member of the elected township board.

But the taxpayer still blocks the path to the final plunge. And one professional, unbiased study has already shown that the taxpayer would fare better under unification. a single unit of government.

Northville township's problems are complicated by many factors. First they are immediate, yet time is needed for a proper solution.

Opinions are severely divided, and a board seeking guidance can become greatly confused depending upon the nature of its audience.

And consider that the township must seek new offices within six months, should provide additional fire protection for its rapidly expanding southeastern section, and can't decide what to do about police protection.

The latter problem is complicated by severely-split factions, perhaps the most powerful in the township being the group favoring a strong, township-operated police force.

Ban Salt On Roads?

YES...

In Michigan, snowfall is a concern of every driver, Michigan currently uses road salt exclusively to clear the roads in our area. Salt does solve the problem in melting the snow so we can drive with reasonably safe roads. But at what cost? Financially speaking not very much - approximately $10 per ton, plus costs of maintenance crews to go out. However intangible costs must be considered seriously. Salt, when combined with snow, forms a acidic solution resulting in heavy erosion in our state highways and roads. This acidic solution eats into our automobile paint and kills any plant life it comes in contact with.

This is not too serious until you stop to consider what happens after the snow is gone. Brine from the salt solution is flushed through the sewer system and into our streams. Fish and plants in our waterways are being killed by this solution. The longer we persist in this method the worse the ecological conditions new and separate governmental There are other ways of dealing with this problem. One used is Calcium Chloride and sand. This solution is also Board members must realize flushed through the sewer systems, but sand forms a buildup in the sewers that must be periodically cleaned out. privately that the jockeying cannot This involves additional expense for this maintenance service, but does not harm wildlife Calcium Chloride runs approximately $32 per ton, plus $1 per ton for sand. Calcium Chloride is much harder to store, as it draws moisture like a sponge. Therefore, it must be stored in special silos that are extremely well ventilated and of course this too costs money. But it does not erode pavements.

What the problem boils down to is this. As residents of Michigan, which matters the most to you and your faimlies the additional cost of a few extra dollars in your taxes, or the inestimable cost we will incur to our natural resources, wildlife, lakes and streams? This is known as the WATER WONDERLAND. Let us hope it does not turn into a WATER WASTELAND.

NO...

Even in this day and age salt is still the most practical and economical de-icing agent available. Sand, or sand-salt, also works but it creates cleanup problems in gutters and catch basins. Damage to water resources is one of our main concerns today. I doubt that de-icing salts ever will be harmful to our rivers. Salt in flowing water is diluted and carried away by the flow. Salt accumulations can pose a problem only in stagnant and semi-stagnant water. The salt content in ground water withdrawn by wells in this region has shown a slight but insignificant increase over the past two decades.

When compared with the cost in lives from accidents, fire, and the slow movement of ambulances and other safety vehicles, the disadvantages of salt soon becomes

Unicameral: It's Worth A Vote

By JACK W. HOFFMAN

If Joseph P. Swallow, "the guy who wants a one-house legislature, doesn't win his battle it won't be because he is not personally con-

Pitted against the Democratic strongman, Representative William A. Ryan, in a mini-debate of the unicameral proposal before members of the Michigan press last weekend, the young (he's 39) Republican from Alpena seemed more genuinely sincere and less politically motivated than his op-

Representative Ryan was unimpressive, I thought, suffering from an indifference to the subject. Republican Senator Carl Pursell of Plymouth, who has been arguing on Ryan's side in debates throughout the state, probably would have fared better but I doubt that even he could have destroyed Swallow's arguments. More importantly, I heard nothing to convince me that the issue is not one worthy of public consideration in a state referendum Unable to persuade fellow legislators that they should put the question to the people, Swallow has taken the petition route, trying to raise sufficient signatures to force the question onto the ballot. Admittedly, the campaign is dragging but Swallow nevertheless is convinced the required 250,000 signatures will be obtained by summer to get it on the November

Presently, proponents have secured about 50,000 signatures. Speaking against the proposal Ryan suggested that the proposal is such an unworthy one that legislators opposed placing it on the ballot. It would eliminate important historic checks and balances, would be a heaven for lobbyists, would make personal representation more difficult, and that quality not quantity of bills coming out of the two houses is more important. His latter reference was sparked by a comment from Swallow that under the present bicameral system too many bills are dying before they can be enacted

The most telling argument by Swallow, I felt, was his comment about the two-house conference committee where, he emphasized most legislation is hammered out in secret. While other committees, by law, are open to the public, the conference committee, which does the "horse trading," writes the final compromise bill without public scrutiny, he said.

He emphasized his argument by pointing to the last school aid bill For months legislators argued the matter before it went to the conference committee. Out of those secret deliberations came a compromise measure along with a warning that the public demanded quick action. "So there with the bill in front of them and without knowing what it contained the legislature approved it," he said.

And when Ryan rebutted by saying the legislature had debated the issue for months and knew full well what the bill contained, Swallow barked, "How could we go through that (massive) document in one hour to find the changes made in committee? Just one word could change its meaning. No, the legislature didn't write the bill...it was written by a committee meeting in secret."

As for personal representation. Swallow contended that if this kind of representation is so essential then the size of state senate districts should be pared substantially.

The two-house legislature is not what the designers of American government had in mind when they spoke of checks and balances. argued Swallow. Rather they were talking of checks and balances between the legislative, judicial and executive branches of government. he said.

Finally, Swallow asked, "Isn't it an important enough issue to let the people decide?"

I think it is.

Year-Old Slayings Unsolved

January night when Novi-Northville residents were shocked by the news that John Keyes, a young Northville man of 19 years, had been found dead with two bullet holes in his head and his girlfriend, 17-year-old Kathy Radtke of Novi, had apparently been abducted by the

It was left to a pair of young Livonia boys to find the body last summer. While on a fishing expedition with their parents at Crotched Lake in northern Oakland County, Michael, 16, and Donald, 8, Hayden spotted the body of Kathy Radtke floating in the shallow, weedchoked waters of the lake. Today, in spite of what Novi Police Chief Lee BeGole calls "the most thorough effort I've ever seen expended on any one case," the killer or killers of John Keyes and Kathy Radtke still remain unapprehended. Heading the investigation is Jack Grubb, a

Perhaps because of his close affiliation with the community in which he works or perhaps just because of his own individual make-up, Jack Grubb has made this case his own.

"You have to know the people to appreciate what they've been through," says Grubb. "I only met Kathy once and she was without a doubt a really fine girl. I knew her mother. too. She was a secretary at the elementary school. You've got to know how close this amily was to appreciate what they've had to

It was Grubb who went to the Radtke's home when the body of their daughter was discovered, ending all hope that the girl might "I promised the parents that when Kathy

"It was at 7:30 a.m. that the body found in Crotchett Lake was confirmed to be Kathy's. We identified her by her rings and a scar on her heel. I contacted Father Yskiel and he and I and (Detective Lieutenant) Faulker went over to the Radtke's to tell them the body of their daughter had been found." Actually, Grubb is on the case only through special permission of the Michigan State Currently he is a director of Police. He originally became involved only the General Agents and because Kathy Radtke was a missing person from Novi. The murder itself, because it occurred in Northville, is being handled by Wayne County investigators. with information about the case. Total contacts made by all agencies working on the case are in excess of 1,033.

The statistics go on. Grubb has attended three autopsies, test fired 46 weapons, ad ministered 18 polygraph tests, received two denials, and made contact with 23 other state agencies, including New York, Colorado Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Florida, as well as the Ontario Provincial

In the process of his investigations, Grubb has run across a score of other crimes coming in contact with seven murders, one case of white slavery, three attempted murders, two kidnappings, and five narcotics But still the Radtke-Keyes murder case remains unsolved. The details of the case are fairly wellknown. John Keyes and Kathy Radtke had been visiting with John's parents on Randolph Street in Northville. At approximately 7:45 p.m. they left the Northville home to keep a supper date with Kathy's parents in Novi. They planned to stop at the Clark Service Station on Northville Road to pick up some cigarettes and pop, return to the Keyes' residence before heading onto the Radtke's home for a spaghetti dinner. But after leaving the Keyes' home the first time, they were never seen again. Except by

When the couple did not show up at the Radtke's for dinner the families became worried and John's brother, Chris, along with a friend, Ron Baggett, started to look for He found his brother's 1967 Mustang the lane off Napier Road between Five and Six Mile in Northville Township. In the back seat of the car was John Keyes, two bullet holes in his cheeks and Kathy Radtke's coat bundled under his head as if used as a pillow. His keys were missing as was his wallet, which contained $55. By his right hand was his driver's license, as if, police reported, he had taken it out to show

Strangely, no foot prints were found in the heavy snow, only two sets of tire tracks from a two-tracked vehicle on the nature of a jeep or some type of camper. Major source of clues came with the discovery of Kathy's body on April 14. In the lake police found the apparent murder weapon-a .22-caliber rifle from Sears. Roebuck, and Company (it was some 15-years old) and a pair of shower curtains, which were available only at Good Housekeeping shops in the area approximately three years

In his search for the killer or killers Grubb admitted he thought he had captured his man on three occasions. But, Grubb related, each time the polygraph exam and subsequent investigation proved the man's innocence. Grubb also has had two confessions, but each time the squad of investigators were able to prove conclusively the man's in-

"We also have pretty strong circumstantial evidence on a couple of people," the Novi detective said, "but we won't make any attempt to get a warrant on purely circumstantial evidence. We've had good circumstantial evidence three times before and each time we ran into a dead end."

Nevertheless, Grubb feels certain that the murderer will ultimately be apprehended. "L can't help but feel that someone knows something about this case and is reluctant to come forward. We're aware of certain people who have information and are reluctant to tell us about it for one reason or another. I strongly feel that some of this information. could be vital."

At least some of that evidence concerns the gun-the item that many feel could provide the essential clue in the case. "Somebody knows who owned that gun," Grubb asserts. "Somebody took excellent care of that weapon. It was a relatively old gun and whoever owned it must have been very proud of it and probably showed it to his friends."

Grubb feels certain that someday the case will be solved and he believes it is possible. that the murderer might already have been interviewed by the team of investigators. "Sometimes all you need is one little piece of information-something you could have overlooked-that's why we go over and over the notes we've already collected on the case. "I'll tell you one thing," Grubb says in his low-pitched, steady manner, "this is one file that will never sit on the shelf and be forgotten. If I'm still a policeman here 25 years from now and this case hasn't been solved, I'll still be looking for the guy who did Chickadees, however, always visit the feeder because, as Mrs. Densmore points out, they simply do not feed off the ground like the snowbird or cardinal. The Densmores are typical of the thousands who feed birds in this area. For some it's simply an amusement but for most it's love...pure and simple. "We love them; they are the creatures of God," says Mr. and Mrs. Jan Reef of Northville. "Tell me, who doesn't love animals?"

Eighty-two-year old Miss Grada Bulten. also of Northville, echoes the remarks of the Reefs. "I've lived in the United States for 49 years and the birds...oh, the beautiful birds...they are my biggest enjoyment in life." These are not unusual people; they are ordinary area residents who find enjoyment in the simple act of feeding and watching birds in the winter. For some, such as Dr. Harold Wright of Northville, feeding birds is a pasttime passed down by parents and grandparents. "I was brought up in a family that cared a great deal for wildlife so it was natural, I suppose, that we learned about birds and came to love them," he explains Others, such as the Al Heiners of Brighton, learned about his pleasant pasttime from friends or neighbors. The Heiners, however, turned to bird watching following a tragic experience involving nature. Their 16-yearold daughter was stung by a wasp and died because the sting adversely affected her

For them feeding and watching birds became more than a hobby. It became "an says Reef. "We feed a flock of crows act of faith...evidence that God is in nature and works in marvelous ways." Most people who feed birds regularly have bird books close at hand so they can identify any unusual ones that show up. Others keep accounts of numbers and kinds. "Some birds don't come around anymore," says Miss Bulten. "But there's still a lot of them...lot's more than you ever see in Europe...in the Netherlands where I was born and raised. It's another reason why I love this country so much." "Without my birds," she continues "my life would be empty. I talk to them and they talk to me. If I have a complaint, I tell them and they listen. I can't do that if I disagree with someone in Washington and I don't always agree. But America, I love it

The Dan Patch Legend

Dan Patch's story started soon after the turn of the century, from 1902 to 1910. In 1906, he paced the fastest mile ever, in 1:55, at the Minnesota State Fair. That record has never been broken. Neither has it been recognized because a windshield was pulled in fromt of the sulky break the wing. But to the 93,000 fans who witnessed this feat, and to his worshippers everywhere, the record still stands.

The great horse's owner, Will Savage, was a fabulous and colorful character. Will and Dan belonged to each other, when winning — yes, even in death.

Mr. Savage made headlines of a sort when he paid $60,000 for the six year old Standardbred pacer in 1902. Even his friends referred to the deal as "Savage's folly." But subsequent events proved how wrong they were.

Dan Patch brought fame

and fortune to his master, and to himself. A railroad line -The Dan Patch line — was named after him. There were also Dan Patch sleds, coaster

"they eat just about everything." Some go to great lengths in preparin special food for birds. Mrs. Robert Diekoff of South Lyon, for example, has a special recipe for her winter birds: "Mix two cups of yellow corn meal, two cups of sugar, two cups of ground suet, one cup of flour, add two cups water, stir and cook "It gets awfully thick and burns easily so I keep stirring it with a wooden spoon. I put it in a pan and keep it in the refrigerator and cut off a piece every day. 'The birds just love it...better than the other things we feed them." Most put out the food in or on feeders built especially for birds. By placing the feeders in strategic locations around the house, explains Dr. Wright, "we can catch the birds while we are having breakfast or dinner." Mrs. Densmore recalls an article she read warning that birds would not come to a feeder that was any closer that 10 feet from the house. She recalls it and laughs. The Densmores' feeder is just one foot from the kitchen window. By simply opening the vindow they can load the feeder with the birds' favorite food-cracked corn, sunflower seeds, peanuts, bread and suet-and avoid going outside on cold winter days.

Mrs. Densmore vouches for buying bird food piecemeal rather than buying prepackaged feed. "The yellow seeds in bags old at stores." she claims, "are not eaten by wild birds in Michigan." Others, however, find store purchased varieties acceptable. The Reefs estimate they buy and feed a least 11/2 tons of feed each winter...and that

Snacks Boost Bakery Sales

BABSON'S REPORTS Inc. Wellesley Hills, Mass. Although bakery products expenditures accounted for a smaller share of total food outlays in 1970 than in 1960, the decade of the 1960s saw consumers increase what they spend or bakery products by 3.9 percent per year. While the gain in population and price increases accounted for part of this growth, emphasis on snack foods and convenience items was an important factor. In fact, most companies which were able to chalk up a higher growth rate did so by way of diversification efforts, and lie focal point for improved

What the Post was overthrowing was the policy of not naming the government official when printing a story that that government official had handed out to newsmen. Before the policy, what the Post did was to attribute remarks to "a spokesman", "a high government official", or some such non-descript still following the non-attribution policy with respect to federal, and perhaps state, government handouts. Frankly, I didn't know they followed this newspaper man could hardly perform his job properly. He'd be on the outside looking in. He might suspect something, but no amount of suspicion would give him the inside story. Only once in my experience has it been necessary, in fact, to write a lead story without any attribution. We had the story from reliable sources, who, of course, did not wish to be quoted.

The only "out" then, was to go to persons in places of authority and through questioning, try to get some meaningful comments. But no one, and I mean absolutely no one, would say a word.

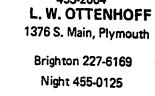

The choice then was to publish a long, non-attributed story, or to forget it all together. We published it, for we knew that the source was reliable and that the public had a right to know what was going on. The story prompted some sharp disclaimers. We didn't retract. And about one month later, what we had stated came out

Here's Tips

For Parents

About Drugs

Parents have long told their 'children not to use drugs, except under a doctor's prescription. Now you can authoratively say why drugs should not be abused and the many harms that could come to those who do abuse drugs. Most of our discussions have been on the "prevention through knowledge" approach to the drug problem. Here I want to state things to watch for that indicate a person is already using some type of drugs. Ten frequent signs of drug abuse are: 1. Changes in normal values and their replacement with

2. Emotional extremes with a marked loss of interest in usual goals; usually poor grades in school; signs of a change in personality.
3. Physical ill health: Loss of weight, changes in skin color, loss of body tone, unnatural careless stance and

Is It Christ's Path?

Reverend George E. Kind United Presbyterian Church

Exodus 32:1. Make us gods. You are possibly familiar with the account of the deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt. Read again the first twenty chapters of Exodus and recapture the dramatic occurrences of that deliverance. God had visited a number of plagues upon the Egyptians because of Pharaoh's refusal to let the Hebrews go. The last and most devastating plague was the slaving of the first-born in every Egyptian home and the livestock. Each Hebrew home had blood sprinkled on the lintel of the entrance and when the destroying angel saw the blood he passed that house by. A Passover ceremony was enacted every year afterwards. The Israelites kept it as a memorial of their deliverance When the Israelites left Egypt, there were two dangers to which they were susceptible. One was being pursued by the Egyptians or being attacked by other enemies the other was absorbing Egypt's religion and way of life, so that they might become to some extent, tarred with the same brush as the Egyptians, and have in themselves the same ingredients of disintegration and sin as the Egyptians had.

The one danger was from the outside, the other was from within. The danger from within was more subtle and harder to manage than the danger from the outside. The outside danger resulted from what others were, the inside danger was from what they were themselves. Israel got away from Egypt, the Egyptian host was destroyed, and the army of Amalek was destroyed in the wilderness, but when the heart of Israel turned to idolatry.

what could possibly help them? Only repentance and faith.

They got away from Egypt, but it was not a complete break. As soon as trials arose in the widerness, it did not take long for the people to see the rosier side of Egypt and long to return. They had no heart for the promised land. It seemed too far away

The temptation to return was strong. What appealed to most of them, the way which presented the least difficulties. But they could not actually return without defeating all that they had accomplished, so instead of actually returning, they just longed to be back in Egypt. They returned in their

Their essential attitude was one of return although they went on. It is the inner defeat which is the real defeat; it is the inner victor which is the real victory. There come times in life when it seems easier, even better, to disregard the established pattern and take an independent course. It is important to make sure what we believe to be the way the Lord would have us go, and then to take his way in preference to anything that contradicts it.

As the Hebrews could look back and think of what had to be the divine intervention of events on their behalf, and particularly as they may have thought of the last plague and their deliverance from it by the daubing of blood upon the lintels of the doors of their homes, so we can look back to the life of Jesus and particularly his death upon the cross for our sins, and take our cue from him.

While we meditate upon the miracle of grace that led Jesus to die for us, we may hear a voice, as the prophet did, saying, "This is the way, walk be in it."

world's problems seem far away.

But for this young man there will be a tomorrow and a next tomorrow. Circumstances won't be the same. Perhaps John is a little more aware than most of us of the ills that beset this world for he is a theological student. He is determined to make things better. And he is equipped with enthusiasm, understanding, a keen mind and a deep faith.

How about you - and your tomorrows? Certainly the best way to begin doing your part is to cover that short distance to church next Sunday

derful World of Disney, The early history of the Morgan horse---America's first and most versatile equine bred -- is the subject of the movie.

There are hundreds of Morgan owners throughout Michigan, Ohio and Indiana that show their Morgans each year as well as ride them just for pleasure. Few people know, for instance, that the Morgan was the first native breed in America: that the Morgan was once the king of American race tracks; and that Morgan blood contributed to the American Saddle Horse, Tennessee Walking Horse, and the Standardbred breeds. No one but the most avid horse enthusiast realizes that Morgan horse units were the is called today's most versatile breed. Hamilton, New York, caretakers. ľwo race tracks were constructed; the best mile strip ever built, and a covered half-miler with 8,400 panes of glass. Even during a Minnesota blizzard, Dan and his stable mates could train in comfort and style.

Dan Patch was the idol of his day — the Babe Ruth, the Bing Bing Crosby, and the Beatles. People came to see him, as they do any other notable. Lili Langtry, the famous actress, arranged to have her train stopped near Dan's so that she could go to his private car for a visit. Men vied for his shoes. women fought to pluck hair from his mane and tail, small boys played Dan Patch in the backyard, and people wept when he became ill. The town of Hamilton changed it's name to Savage, in honor of the man who had put it on the map. But there was more than a platonic relationship between horse and owner. There was something almost supernatural between Dan and Will. On July 4, 1916, Dan Patch and Harold Savage both took ill on the same day. Those keeping vigil over the horse saw him snuff out his last race - the race with life itself - on July 11. He died at age 18. Thirty-two hours later, Dan's master, Will Savage, was dead at age 57. Both were buried at the same hour: Mr. Savage in Lakewood cemetery, and Mr. Patch under the shade of an oak tree on the bank of the Minnesota River. Dan and Will lived and died together — and won a lasting name and fame.
