marriages, remain stable. Life span: "people marry earlier today and live longer. There is time for more than one marrige today in the space of one life time." Institutional pressures: "The family must not only withstand internal pressures but increasing burdens of the social system. For example, community mental health agencies are aiming to treat more and more of the retarded, the delinquent and the emotionally disturbed within the community instead of in institutions. This is an excellent goal. But the programs focus heavily on the

Marriages are most vulnerable at two stages, Glasser notes: during the first two years and during the middle years, when the spouses are in their late 40's and 50's. "Many crises occur then. The husband reaches a clear whether or not he'll make it to the top. The children leave home, perhaps not turning out as the parents hoped. Physiological changes in both sexes compound the stresses," the U-M professor says, noting that this age group is also more susceptible to alcoholism and mental breakdown.

Are prospects bleak for the family of the future? On the contrary, Glasser predicts that it will emerge a somewhat different but closer unit in the face of high pressured social change. Advances in communication and transportation are already rebuilding the extended family relationship. Visiting patterns are strongly family oriented, he says, and it is a littleknown but welldocumented fact that one out of every three persons over 65 are living with their children.

"The family of the future will tend to choose to have two or fewer children both for environmental and economic reasons. If the population is divided into five income levels, one can see that the proportion of money earned by each group has changed little in the past 15 years. Therefore reducing the family size may be the only way of increasing its standard of

LaLonde Murder Still Puzzles Novi Police

Decomposed, with a large black shotgun wound in the back, the body of Clyde LaLonde was discovered face down in a clump of weeds in a rural section of Novi a year ago.

The area was sealed off and state, county, and local police searched the site for clues, some physical evidence that might tell them something about the body and how it got there, but there was nothing. No footprints, no finger prints, no tire tracks, not one shred of physical evidence to go on. Today, a year later, police are only a little closer to a solution than they were that day. The body, of course, has been identified and much has been learned about the personal life of Clyde LaLonde, but Corporal Robert Starnes, who is in charge of the case says he's completely out of leads. "We've had a couple of leads that we've chased down during the past few months," he said, "but they led us nowhere. All we can do now is go back over our notes and hope we spot something we might have overlooked before."

sometimes amazed that we know as much about this thing as One of the things police don't know about the LaLonde murder is the cause of death. The apparent cause - the shotgun wound — was later found to be a ruse. The shot came, the autopsy revealed, only after LaLonde was already

"I suppose," he continued, "that someday we'll solve this case. But when you start off with a decomposed, unidentified

Why shoot a corpse? Why make it look like a shotgun murder if it wasn't a shotgun murder? It is one of the questions to which police still have found no answer. Clyde LaLonde himself is something of a mystery. The son of a relatively wealthy Bay City man, he graduated from high school with honors and was president of the student council. During his college days at Western Michigan University he worked with emotionally disturbed children and after graduating with a bachelor's degree in education in 1968, he accepted a teacher's job in the Grand Rapids school system, where he was employed until he resigned in 1970. "Ticker" was his nickname, given to him by his parents pusher. One of the largest in the area, police believe. It was not unusual for him to carry sums of money as large at $15-20,000 on his person and his dealings carried him everywhere from Pinconning to the inner city of Detroit to Jamaica. Furthermore, LaLonde dealt in every type of drug with the exception of heroin, which he did not like. Everything else who reveals anything about its doctrines becomes open game for other members of the sect.

Police know little about the religion except that it reportedly costs $1,500 to join and is run by a fellow who doesn't dare touch United States soil because there are so many warrants for his arrest

LaLonde lived with a friend and his wife in Union Lake and would frequently take three and four day trips. Two of those trips were to Jamaica and occurred within the month and a half immediately preceeding his death.

He made the first of those two trips sometime prior to February 15 specifically to "buy land," police said. His second trip was on March 6 when a person calling himself "C. LaLonde" left Metropolitan Airport with a young girl. The Jamaican trips, police feel, were made to buy hashish. Police now believe that LaLonde was at a party just hours before he was murdered and dumped in Novi. "We've talked with at least one person we believe had telephone contact with him just hours before he was killed," said Starnes. "That person indicated to us that there were party-type noises in the background. If we could just find out where that party took place it could really help us because we're sure that's where Clyde was just before he was murdered."

Police are also attempting to locate the female companion who accompanied LaLonde on his second trip to Jamaica. "We think her last name may have been Crouse," said Starnes, "but we don't know if she came back from Jamaica with him or not."

Police feel there may be a clue in the location where the body was dumped, a field that runs along Meadowbrook Road about one-quarter mile south of 13 Mile Road. "That

COMPUTER CENTER—Wixom is currently in the process of computerizing much of the city's bookkeeping. Here Acromag President H. W. Patton and William Travis, Assistant to the Mayor of Wixom, examine one of the print-outs done by the machine. Specifically, the tax rolls, assessment rolls, and billing procedure will be computerized, says Travis, who then proceeds to estimate that the computerization will save the city the cost of the salaries of three people for a month. In addition, he notes, Wixom will not have to hire additional help in the future as the tax rolls continue to grow. The city has worked out an agreement with the Acromag Corporation Department building or for the use of their computer center.

Speaking for Myself

Teacher Tenure?

YES...

The Teacher Tenure Act was conceived for the purpose of protecting public school teachers from being dismissed by a school board without cause. However, the results have been that it is impossible to relieve a teacher from his duties for any cause.

Not only do we have a statewide teacher tenure act, but also Public Act 379 which grants teachers the right to bargain and write contracts, which has duplicated the provisions of the Teacher Tenure Act.

I feel certain if Public Act 379 came along first, the tenure act would not have been sought after by the teacher organizations. Had this happened, it would have given boards of education more flexibility in negotiation of contracts.

Currently, teachers are sitting under the protection of the tenure act while waiting for contract negotiations or arbitrations to be completed, which provides them with double protection during that period of time.

I'm a firm believer that public employees should build their own tenure in their respective positions, and should not be locked into a position solely because of job seniority. Public employees should stand up to some sort of vardstick of accountability to the public, which pays their

> Thomas G. Sharpe State Representative

The teacher Tenure Act provides, inter alia, that a tenure teacher "may be discharged only for reasonable and just cause" (article IV, No. 1). The Act was designed to prevent dismissals based solely on the whims of charging office holders and to maintain adequate and competent teachers, free from political and personal arbitrary interferences (see Munro v. Elk Rapids Schools 383 Mich 661, Rehberg v. Ecorse School District, 330 Mich Rep 541, Wilson v. Flint Board of Education, 361 Mich Rep

Opponents of the Tenure Act allege that the Act protects and-or promotes incompetent teachers by making it "impossible to fire" tenure teachers. This allegation is untrue. Tenure teachers are dismissed every year (see Teacher Tenure Commission Decisions). However, the Act does provide that prior to a dismissal, a teacher must receive the charges against him and be offered a fair and impartial hearing by the Board of Education.

A teacher who is dismissed will not, in most cases, ever be able to practice his chosen profession because other school districts do not hire dismissed teachers. A person should not be denied his right to a profession of his choice unless there is reasonable and just cause for such a denial.

A basic tenet of our democratic society is that people are innocent until proven guilty. The Tenure Act is inextricably tied to this democratic precept of due process. The Charging Party (person who claims teacher's work is unsatisfactory) has the burden of proof to substantiate the charges with facts and conclusively show the validity of the charges. The Board of Education acts in a quasijudicial role therefore, assuming innocence until guilt is clearly established. The attempt to eliminate tenure is an attack on the right of teachers to due process.

particular area is not one which is easily found," Starnes asserted. "We fell the area was well known to one of the killers and we also believe that the body was not transported very far from the spot where the actual murder occurred."

One of the puzzling aspects of the case is that the police have not received a single tip. "Every tip we've had we've really had to dig for," reported Starnes. "We've received no volunteer information at all. Every one of Clyde's friends that we've talked to has said he was really a "beautiful person." But not one of his friends who thought he was so beautiful has offered even the slightest piece of information for us to work on."

"In most cases you'll get at least a couple of calls," he continued, "but we've received nothing"

'There's a possibility we might have already been in touch with the killer without realizing it. We'll just keep going back over what we do have until we turn something up. America has long been called "a nation on wheels" - referring of course, to the mmense popularity and availability of automobiles in this country.

It now appears the United States can be termed a "nation on wheels" for an entirely different reason, and in reference to another set of tires-those of the bicycle, which is currently enjoying a surge of popularity which almost defies explanation.

Everywhere you'll be seeing them this spring. Young children darting about on standard two-wheelers, the kind you had taking place. Some people feel that it represents a new form of exercise, others say t represents a protest against snarled traffic and air fouled by automobile emissions. Whatever it does represent, one thing is certain: bicycling has become unbelievably popular in the last two or three years. 'It's unreal, I tell you, simply unreal," says Mrs. James Gardner, proprietor of the Indications are this year it won't be any better. Possibly worse. "Of course, we've always been busy with kids' bikes in the Spring," notes Don Ziesmer of Gambles' Store in Brighton. "But the last couple of years, we've been selling a lot more

"This bike is not a toy," Ziesmer points out. "When they get to the 10-speeds, which seem to be the "in" thing now, there are a lot of mechanics involved. Mrs. Gardner agrees that the 10-speed is mounted air pumps are popular, too. Biking has become a family sport, and although the 10-speed is by far the most popular bike at present, it is not the only model being sold.

Tandems (two-seaters, or the old "bicycle-built-for-two"), standard 26-inchers, collapsible 20-inchers which are ideal for camping, and even "gigantic" tricycles have come into widespread popularity during the current cycling craze.

"We sell a few of the tricycles to older people," says Ziesmer. "They're easy for them to ride, and they have the basket in back where they can put groceries when they go to Mrs. Gardner concurs. "It's the kind of

So great is the demand that ordering a bike is out of the question. "The manufac-turer is way behind his orders and we're two or three months behind ourselves," admits Mrs. Gardner.

Crimp Seen in Petition Process

a couple of steps forward in opening the political process when it enacted a presidential primary for Michigan, but it took a step or two backward, too.

While is gave Michigan voters a direct voice in how their state delegations will vote in Miami Beach and San Diego this year, it put a bit of a crimp in the time honored petition process.

Incorporated into the new law setting up the primary was a provision barring the circulating of petitions within 100 feet of a polling place. The primary bill was an opportune time for the lawmakers to lo it, since the primary itself received all the attention.

IT WAS ACCEPTED procedure, until now, to circulate petitions at polling places, and the attorney general's office had drawn guidelines to make sure petition circulators didn't interfere with the 16 is early enough that the various ment, the petition route remains one groups working to put propositions on the November ballot this year can use the day to circulate petitions. WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass.,— The worst downdraft in two decades for the aerospace industry as a whole is giving signs of abating as the U.S. economy stages a recovery. Since the fourth quarter of 1971, many of the major aerospace and defense companies, now much leaner after extensive streamlining and more efficiently managed, have been taking heart from a more receptive Congress.

No doubt improved business conditions, an ever-increasing Soviet arms threat, the nearing end of the Vietnam involvement, and the obsolescence of aging tactical weaponry-all making for a less hostile public sentiment towards aerospace and defense-are dicflights (successor to Apollo), the tating the need for renewed activity. space shuttle, and the space station SEVERAL MAJOR aircraft could mean a rebirth of the overall

Son of God Or Superstar?

Rev. Robert Beddingfield First Baptist Church of South Lyon

For centuries a large rock lay in a dry river basin in North Carolina. The many who passed over it saw nothing but a large lump. Then one day a man saw it as something practical for holding open his cabin door. One day a geologist passing through recognized the rock as being a sizable lump of gold, the largest nugget ever found east of the Rockies. Many men will differ in the value that they place upon an object-but this does not change its value.

During this season, we are all made aware of a man called Jesus who holds a different value to many men. This past week of activities revealed to ourselves and others the value which we place personally on this man. Perhaps his person only means a new hat or new suit for spring. Or a song on the Top Ten. Or a revolutionist as some claim, or great philosopher. Perhaps to you his name only denotes a pet doctrine or denomination. Jesus' question is penetrating: "What do you think of Christ."

Was he mere man or the Son of God? The thief on the cross sensed the authenticity of his words and pleaded, "Lord remember me when you come into your Kingdom." One of the hardened soldiers who crucified him smote his breast and proclaimed, "Surely this was the Son of God." Many will pass him by today, giving him no great worth. Some will see only a good man, his teachings to be admired and quoted with meaningless repetition. Another group will eulogize him as a superstar, perpetrator of the greatest hoax of time, planning his own crucifixion with a dramatical death-but no

Can we leave him in the grave? If Christ be not risen then we are men most miserable. On this fact hinges our faith. This is where Christianity triumphs over every other religion. The soul-searching inquiry of Jesus does not permit us to answer so superficially; "But whom say ye that I am?"

REPORT OF ANSWERS ANSWER REPORT OF ANSWERS ANSWER SWERS ANSWER An adding machine performs accurately for anyone who uses it correctly. Each person may record a different column of figures. Answers will vary accordingly but each will be correct. Life also registers what we give it . . . produces results correspondingly. Sometimes we are so harried and hurried with whirling activities we forget to include When we do clear our minds for understanding and prayer with God, good results follow. The Church has accurate answers for modern problems. Let it help you find correct solutions. SC ANCINEDE ARICINEDE ARICINEI

The new department would also operate the Detroit House of Correction (DeHoCo), which houses convicted misdemeanants, plus the probation departments of Circuit Court and Recorder's Court under the plan. State legislation would be needed to transfer the jail operation to the proposed new department. The recommendations were submitted this week by the consulting firm of Hellmuth. Obata & Kassabaum as part of a correctional needs study sponsored by the County Board under a $150,000 federal Findings of the consultants are subject to revision after review by the Board of Commissioners and the Wayne County Citizens Jail Advisory Committee. A new jail, consisting of two six-story buildings that would house a total of 750 inmates, is recommended at an estimated cost of $21,285,000. It would be located on the site of the old Recorder's Court building across Clinton Street from the new Recorder's Court building and the present

The consultants also recommended that: By 1980 the county build a third jail facility and court facilities as part of an outcounty governmental center on county-owned land in Westland near Wayne County General Hospital. The present $2.2 million renovation at the existing jail

The pleasant-looking, animated little woman stopped her scurring about for just long enough to think about the question. "Actually," she said, "there's nothing in the way of information..." And then she thought better of it, decided to modify slightly her original statement, and started over again. -"Well, maybe I shouldn't say quite that. But there's no doubt at all that there is very little in the way of information that we can't get right here." Where is this storehouse of information,
