Esperanto: A Bridge?

throughout Europe. With World War I, however, it suffered a major setback but, following the war, it was given some prominence through agencies of the League of Nations.

French post-war dominance, however, was a major stumbling block, says Lockhart, and Esperanto's influence was limited. When World War II broke out it again suffered at the hands of nationalism. The language was banned by Germany, Italy, and Russia.

Following World War II, Esperanto seemingly had clear sailing with the establishment of the international United Nations organization. But, just as French dominated the League, English dominates the United Nations, asserts Lockhart.

Nevertheless, in Europe Esperanto is making great strides, he says. Although the International Esperanto organization, headquartered in the Netherlands, has only 100,000 members, it is estimated that some 10 to 12 million people, mostly living in Europe, can speak the language.

Only in recent years has Esperanto made any real headway in North America. More and more schools and universities, says Lockhart, are beginning to teach the Early this month the international organization held its first annual convention in the United States since 1915 when only 163 persons attended. Held at Portland, Oregon, this year's convention drew 900 Esperantists from 40 nations...Lockhart included.

Lockhart learned the language during the Depression in the 1930's.

"With little else to do I concluded I should do something worthwhile to occupy my time," he says. "My father had toyed with Esperanto in England, so I began using his books to learn the language on my own.

"Just as I found it an easy language to learn so would you. I'm not a wizard. English grammar frightens me as much as it does junior high school students."

Esperanto spelling, he explains, is strictly

There is no such thing as arbitral grammatical gender-the most illogical of all difficult features in most languages. There is only one conjugation.

There are no irregular verbs, irregular nouns, or exceptions to grammatical rules.

Root words were selected from a stock of words already used internationally so that a majority of the Esperanto words are recognized upon sight without study. And the use of prefixes and suffixes greatly reduces the number of words which must be separately memorized.

Take the Esperanto root word patro (father), for example.

As patra it becomes (paternal); as patre (paternally); as patrujo (fatherland); as pat rino (mother); as patrina (maternal or motherly); as patrineco (motherhood); as patrineto (little mother, used for endearment); as panjo (momma); as pachjo (papa or daddy); as gepatroj (parents); as gepatra (parental); as prepatroj (forefathers); and as pragepatroj (an-

Furthermore, order of words is simple and free. A sentence in Esperanto may be written with different word order and still be grammatically correct, says Lockhart. But even more importantly, it is easily understood as having the same meaning, he adds.

In English many words are spelled the same way but have totally different meanings. Take the word "cross," for example. It is sometimes a noun, sometimes an adjective, sometimes a preposition, sometimes a transitive verb, and sometimes an intransitive verb. In English there is nothing in the form, sound, or spelling of words to distinguish one part of speech from another. "Under" is a preposition, "sunder" is a verb, while blunder" is either a noun or a verb. "Houses" is a noun, but "rouses" is a verb.

According to Lockhart, people who take up Esperanto become "parts-of-speechminded," Every noun ends in "o" in the nominative singular, and even in plural and in accusative (the only other forms) it has an "o" in the last syllable. Every adjective is similarly marked by an "a" in the last syllable, and every derived adverb shows as "e" in the last syllable.

If it is such an easy language to learn why then has it failed, thus far, to attain international prominence?

Lockhart sees several reasons:

Countries are nationalistic, with deep seated particusm, that look with distavor of internationalism. Even the United Nations has many enemies.

World powers have attempted to spread their influence by propagandizing their languages. They see their languages as the best means for international communication.

Many linguists and university scholars. who pride themselves in their language specialities, scorn Esperanto as elementary gibberish. They do so, contends Lockart. because Esperanto is something they haven't tried and therefore they are reduced from the level of the egotistic teacher to the learner. Wars have forced nations to fear internationalism and hence Esperanto.

"What opponents fail to realize," emphasizes Lockhart, "is that the Esperanto movement does not propose to replace national languages but rather it proposes to supplement them with a language everyone can understand. "It's a neutral language, having neither political nor religious ties. National patriots have nothing to fear from Esperanto."

As for opponents in language circles, Lockhart sees signs of encouragement. "More and more of them are beginning to see the necessity for a universal language. "Interestingly, some of them see Esperanto as a good ('starter' language for secondary students. It is easy to learn, and thus less likely to discourage students. Furthermore, they are finding that Esperanto makes learning of other languages easier, and it makes for better understanding of the learner's own language." Lockhart. who is so enthusiastic about promoting the language that he offers to assist a class of self-learners in the area, concludes with this observation:

"English is our great rich language. We will never let it go. But Esperanto is the so lution to the world language problem."

Florence Pangborn with Champion Brooks Blue Boy

Old Blue's A Grand Champion

It was hardly a case of love at first sight, but today the relationship between Champion Brooks Blue Boy-"Blue" to his friends-and owner

Florence Pangborn is just fine. In fact, Florence, a teacher at Novi High School, has not only forgiven Blue for his less than championship behavior on the occasion of their initial meeting, but actually defends him for it.

"I had only just bought him and was visiting him in the kennel for the first time to get acquainted," she recalls. "I had my back to him and he came up behind me and bit me." No sooner has Florence grudgingly revealed the sordid events of that first meeting than she rushed to Blue's defense, however. "Blue was only doing what comes naturally to sheep dogs," she states firmly. "Sheep dogs herd whatever's in front of them. I was in front of Blue and simply got "herded," that's all there was to it."

Florence's defense of the dog is easy to understand. Not only has Blue become a close personal frienda phenomenon understood only by other people with pets-he has also become number one rated Old English Sheep Dog in the United States.

owner swell up with pride. In the ratings for the year 1971 just released in July by the American Kennel Club, Brooks Champion Blue Boy was listed as not only the country's top Old English Sheep Dog, but also received the number eight rating among the nation's working dogs and the number 19 rating among all breeds.

In addition. Blue received the number top rating among all breeds in the state of Michigan.

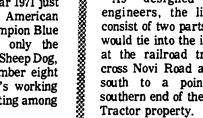

"Its just one of those things." Florence says proudly. "Most people who own show dogs will go a life time and never have a number one dog. Blue was the very first show dog I ever owned and he turns out to be a national champion."

How did she happen to get such a prize dog in the first place? Luck had a lot to do with it.

"Blue was part of the estate of a man from Toledo who had died," Florence relates. "A friend of mine knew about him and we went over to a kennel in Livonia to take a look. We asked the executors of the estate if I could buy him and they consented." "We knew he was a good dog when we bought him," she adds, "but we

REGULARLY scheduled meetings next week of the Northville City Council and the Northville Planning Commission have been changed because of the Labor Day holiday. The city council will meet Tuesday, instead of Monday, and the planning commission will meet Thursday instead of Tuesday. The planners meeting will consist of a public informational session on master plan change recommendations.

FALL ENROLLMENT is down by 553 students at Schoolcraft College, Vice-President Edward McNally reports. Such decreases, according to President C. Nelson Grote, are typical throughout Michigan's community colleges. He is to report to trustees on this situation in September.

A TWO-YEAR contract for faculty was ratified last week by the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees. The new pace provides a 4.5-percent salary increase the first year, and a 2-4 percent cost-of-living adjustment plus increased insurance benefits during the second year. Other key items include provisions for evaluation of tenured faculty, an optional third year probationary period for faculty, and an agency shop provision. Total cost increase of the contract for the first year is put at $210,084.71.

The public hearing was relatively short, but don't look or a decision on the controversial Northville anexation question before 👡 anuary 1—if by then.

That was the disclosure of the Michigan Boundary Commission Tuesday night as it zipped through the hearing on the petition to annex the Township to the City of Northville at the high school auditorium.

And between now and its decision, the five-member commission will be reviewing reams of written and taped data, much of it presented at Tuesday's 212-hour hearing by those favoring and opposing annexation. Five sharply divided formal presentations, which suggested possible levies of from 4.7 to 7.73 mills for the government took up the bulk proposed single unit of of the hearing.

Next week's edition of The Record will contain detailed reports of the official comments presented Tuesday night by representatives of pro and con positions on the uestion of annexation. This week's edition contains the report made by the Citizens Research Council on the feasibility of unificationsee Section C.

Supporting presentations were made by Richard Ambler, a township resident and one of the petitioners; by Donald Oakes, a professional "bursting at the seams. All told, Florence took Blue to dog shows for nine months of the year. The effort paid off, though, as Blue was named number one Old English Sheep Dog for the year.

Florence has slackened the pace so far this year. "I've only shown Blue on a very limited basis," she admits. Nevertheless, the dog is still the second rated Sheep Dog in the country.

Still, the nicest thing about Florence's "Blue" is the relationship between the two of them.

"Most people who won championship dogs rarely see them," a friend points out. "They own the dogs as an investment, and keep them in a kennel and hire trainers to take care of them. The only real contact most show dogs have with people is through their trainers."

"Florence's dog is different, though. He's just like a pet."

The two-million-dollar Northville Square shopping center will open in September, 1973.

That's the prediction of Richard McManus, promoter of the project.

The delay that has caused many to wonder what's wrong was explained this week by McManus, who called it a "legal technicality".

Specifically, the money-lenders apparently feel the document between McManus and the city of Northville doesn't contain the proper legal language to assure the developer that adjoining parking will forever remain parking.

He was hopeful that loophole could be tightened this week.

But McManus was enthusiastic about the response thus far to the Northville Square center.

"This is definitely a 'go' project. Business owners think highly of Northville and see a bright future here in the existing business district", McManus stated.

He said leasing of store space. which is being handled by Shopping Centers, Inc., was well ahead o schedule and that he was anticipating no trouble finding top quality tenants for the proposed 25 store development.

The project is unique for any community. It will double the commercial floor space in the who have not vet gathered the business district yet leave the courage to battle the noise by getting existing commerical area un- close enough to watch the action. disturbed.

Most certainly it will attract new customers and retain many old ones for Northville's central business district. It should help all existing businesses by increasing the customer potential. And its presence adds substantially to the community's tax base strengthening the financial support for schools, as well as city governmental services.

So although the fence-circled area at Main and Wing streets look abandoned today, watch for activity soon, says McManus.

Northville Square is just a year away.

The decision of the directors of Northville Half-Mile Motorcycle Races to cancel the final two of four meets scheduled this year at Northville Downs may reap dual benefits for the sport, locally and nationally

First, it demonstrates the concern of the promoters for the well being of citizens of the community. Certain inconveniences can be expected and tolerated for any public event. But there are limits, and apparently the directors of the local race events believed the noise of their motorcycles had gone beyond what can be reasonably expected.

But they still have confidence in the popularity of the fast-growing sport and would like to continue bringing national races to Northville.

They've appealed to the national governing organization, the American Motorcycle Association, to make it mandatory for all racing motorcycles to have mufflers.

The local promoters point out that noise was responsible for cancelling a race in Illinois recently.

"So what if the riders can't drive as fast? It's still an even race with all competitors having the same one of the promoters handicap,'

A muffler on motorcycle racing would be welcome news to many

Writing about the upcoming Labor Day holiday weekend to warn motorists about accidents seems a little futile.

You never really know whether it's done any good or not.

Nevertheless, it's one of those things all safety experts, police, insurance companies and newspapers traditionally do as a reminder

Getting somewhere in a hurry to relax isn't nearly as important as getting there able to relax.

So stop and think for just a minute

Be watchful, careful and patient. Enjoy yourself so you can return to the rat race in good condition!

Happy holiday.

No living person likely remembers him well but many know of the most famous doctor in Northville's history political prominence.

Closest living relative is Mrs. E.A. Chapman of Northville, whose orphaned grandmother was raised by Dr. and Mrs. Swift. Mrs. Chapman's grandmother, Camilla Dubuar, was the daughter of Dr. Swift's brother "He lived in a Greek revival

I say definitely yes. What right does the smoker have to pollute the air that I breathe? Now, if Joe and Jane Citizen choose to smoke in the confines of their own cars and homes, thereby contributing to their own more rapid demise, it's their own business.

It is an accomplished fact that smoking causes an increased incidence of (1) cancer of the lungs, (2) pulmonary emphysema, (3) chronic bronchitis, and (4) coronory heart attacks; but what about the person in the next chair who gets his smoke second-hand? What are his or her risks?

Current information suggests that the innocent bystander is also at increased risk. True, anyone living in a busy metropolitan area is exposed to greater contamination with air pollution from large industrial complexes as well as greater density of motor vehicles.

The government is currently making strides to correct these modes of contamination. I hope the government is just as diligent in adopting more stringent regulations of the more personal pollution caused by the smoker in a confined public place.

I think that these people should be alert to those around them and exercise appropriate restraint. This is nothing more than plain good manners. The majority of recently constructed public places either have central air conditioning or adequate ventilation so that smoke would be drawn off and should be

Scheduled Cycle Races

Cancelled

September and October notorcycle racing events in Northville have been cancelled.

The announcement came on the heels of protests levied at last week's city council meeting concerning noise and dust created by the Saturday, August 19 event at Northville Downs

Officers of the sponsoring organization, Half-Mile Motorcycle Race Corporation, stated Thursday that the last two of the four racing events scheduled here this year would definitely be dropped "because we're not trying to create a public nuisance".

The three officers of the newly-formed motorcycle

The organization, however, requesting new regulations for racing that will make mufflers mandatory", Stone stated. He noted that another major race was recently cancelled in Illinois because of noise problems. The local promoters said that they are confident that the dust problems can be solved. "We let it get away from us briefly this time, but it won't happen again'' Lorenz said.

Obviously enthusiastic about the relatively new sport. Lorenz said that Half-Mile Motorcycle Race Corporation wants to "help establish a legitimate sport" that is enjoyed by thousands. but doesn't want to do it at the expense of disturbing residents.

He said that mufflers could be installed that would reduce the noise level to that of motorcycles driven on the strets.

"If all machines are muffled, the noise can be reduced to a decible level that won't create a nuisance and there'll still be keen competition because all machines will be racing with the same nandicap (the mufflers) Lorenz pointed out.

Carlo, Lorenz and Stone noted that conduct of the crowds has been good. "The police have had very little trouble in this regard", Carlo

Commenting on the corporation's action, City Manager Frank Ollendorff said he was happy with it, although he would continue to look into revision of the racing ordinance.

"It looks to me that the city and the corporation are on the position because it is obvious, thusiastic people who atthat motorcycle racing is a legitimate public sport."

The city council last week directed the city manager and City Attorney Philip Ogilvie to develop proposed additional restrictions in the ordinance, which presently permits four motorized races a year.

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD-NOVI NEWS

Thursday, August 31, 1972

Where do matters stand now that the State Boundary Commission has held its public hearing in Northville on the issue of annexation of the township to the city?

The five-member panel headed by Chairman David Calhoun of Huntington Woods and assisted by James Hyde, executive secretary of the Commission, conducted a wellcontrolled hearing before an audience of 300 in the Northville High School auditorium Tuesday night.

Chairman Calhoun predicted it would be several months before a decision would be reached on the Northville question. Some 100 annexation questions have come before the board since it was formed little more than a year ago. he explained.

The chairman encouraged any group or interested citizen wishing to comment further on the annexation question to submit information within 30 days to Mr. Hyde, State Boundary Commission, Treasury Building, Lansing, Michigan 48922.

In its conduct of the meeting the commission made each speaker step to the front, take an oath, then make their statements. All comments were recorded by the commission. Chairman Calhoun outlined the following possibilities: 1-Denial of the annexation request, which would stop any further attempts at annexation for a period of two years from the date of filing original petitions, March 1972; 2—Approval of the request as presented, which would allow 30 days for petitions containing signatures of 25 per cent of registered voters in either the city or township to call for an election challenging the annexation; elections could be held in either or both the city and township; failure of the question to win approval in either area would kill the annexation: if no petitions are filed for an election the unification becomes effective on a date set by the boundary commission: if annexation is denied by an election, again there can be no further initiation of annexation action until two years following the original petitioning date. March 1972; 3-Approval of the annexation but with deletion of the Plymouth school district area in the southeast portion of the township, which petitioned to be excluded from the annexation: this decision would allow a third election to be conducted—one in the city, one in the major portion of the township, and one in the Plymouth school district area; all three or any one of these areas could petition for an election and a defeat in any one of the areas would kill the annexation.

Maybury: Just Ghost of the Past

The dozen or so multi-story and single-level building complexes are the ashes of what once was one of the world's finest tuberculosis sanatoriums-Maybury, a city of TB patients in the rolling countryside of Northville Township.

Now owned by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the buildings are to be razed within the next year and the 865-acre site on which they stand is to become the first state park in Wayne County.

Originally owned by the City of Detroit, which built the facility back in 1921, Maybury was closed in 1969. Even before its closing, however, Detroit began investigating how it could recoup its investment.

Detroit officials considered it for a landfill. for gravel mining, for a detention home, and for a job corps center.

Efforts by Northville officials to purchase part of the property and buildings for a municipal park were rebuffed.

In the interim, however, the buildings became the target of vandals. And Detroit officials, in an unpublicized and widely criticized move, auctioned off furniture, equipment, and even woodwork and windows to wholesalers at a fraction of the property's

Most of the equipment was sold in lots. Six wheel chairs, for example, went for $5. Beds, in lots of 100, sold for 10-cents each, and whole offices went for $1 each.

Altogether, some 600 item lots, including xray equipment, stainless steel sinks and fountains, refrigerators, freezers, cooking pots, and even a barber chair ($3) were listed in the auction inventory.

When it was over Detroit had netted a grand total of $13,000.

Meanwhile, Detroit officials decided to sell the prime property to the highest bidding housing developer despite protests of newspapers and the public.

Eventually, Detroit succumbed to public . pressure and this past year sold the property for $3 million to the DNR.

Now the buildings, which two or three years ago might have been suitable for conversion to recreational facilities, "are too far gone" to repair, spokesmen for the DNR insist. Repair and conversion, they say, would be more costly than razing them and building a planned fieldhouse and a recreational center.

Everywhere you look-inside and outvandals and abrasive weather has reduced Maybury buildings to just a ghost of what once was one of the world's most widely acclaimed TB Sanatoriums. The buildings are to be razed soon to make way for the first state park in Wayne County.

State Housing Authority Bill Awaits Action

LANSING-Tucked away among the more glamorous legislative issues awaiting action when lawmakers return for their September session is a very significant. but not very sexy, item.

The bill, which has been shadowed from publicity by such items as the governor's transportation package and no-fault insurance, would allow the Michigan State Housing Development Authority to increase its bonding limit from $300 million to $800 million.

The measure passed the House and is awaiting Senate action. It is being backed strongly by the governor's office.

It is more attractive to the lawmakers because the increase can be made with absolutely no cost to the general fund of the state. The authority has become a financially self-sufficient unit which needs no tax dollars to support itself.

THE AUTHORITY program serves people with incomes which range from around the $3,000 per year mark up to around $9,000 per vear.

It helps people in these income brackets purchase housing which might otherwise be out of their income range.

In the 28 months since it sold its first notes, the authority has made loans for construction or rehabilitation of roughly 8,500 homes in more than 100 communities. Roughly 2,000 of these homes already are occupied and an additional 1,000 should be by the end of the summer.

Its investment in housing development totaled $120 million through 1971 and is slated to be over $300 million by the end of 1972 if approval is given for the raise in its bonding ceiling.

IT REPAYS the bonds it floats and finances its operations through the repayment by the people buying the houses of mortgages.

The authority, as a public agency can float tax-free bonds and thus borrow money more cheaply than private agencies. It then can loan it out at more favorable rates to lower income groups, making the loan available to them when a commercial loan would be prohibitively

The authority surprised quite a few people recently when it actually repaid to the state $191,000 that had been appropriated by the legislature to help it until it became financially independent.

Rare is the day the state gets any of its appropriated money back from

"ALTHOUGH the authority has no legal obligation to reimburse the state general fund for its staff salaries, the payment reflects a commitment to economy in government and efficient use of public resources," Director William Rosenberg said at the time. For example, there's the sales tax. The tax is levied in 45 of the 50 states as well as in the District of Columbia. Some states are lower than

Michigan's 4 cents, which falls about in the middle of the rates. For instance, Indiana and Oklahoma are

Conditioning the Competitive Trail Horse:

When you start conditioning your horse you should be familiar with P & R's (pulse and respiration). The pulse may be picked up underneath the jaw, down on his legs, or underneath his tail. If you watch the animal's flanks as they expand and contract, his respiration can easily be picked up. Know your horse's P & R when he is at rest. When you first start conditioning, his pulse will go up quickly and take a relatively long time to recover (or return to normal when he is rested). This situation will reverse itself when the horse is conditioned for competitive riding. This recovery rate is what the veterinarians and P & R crews are interested in at check points during the ride. It really doesn't matter what your horse's reading was when he came into the check point. What tells the story is how much the pulse drops and how close it comes to normal in 10 minutes Now we're ready to start the actual conditioning program. Walk your horse at least threequarters of a mile to warm him up before starting to gallop. Once he's warmed up move him at a hand gallop for two miles.

Don't gallop him on a hard surface. Deep sand will make the horse work and help develop his wind.

After the gallop, thoroughly cool out the horse before putting him up. In time, the cooling-out period will PESCHKE become shorter.

For the first six weeks, stick with the two-mile gallop each day with one day off each week. Remember to back of a bit on his feed on the day he is off and give him a little exercise to loosen him up. To get the horse familian with trail riding, there nothing wrong with exposing Labor-Hew appropriation is but one of a host of spending bills that will come up during the weeks ahead," he said. "Things could get worse before they get better."

F JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES

Recently Jonathan Winters was asked on one of the popular television programs what enabled him to come back from a period of deep depression and emotional breakdown. His answer was simply that faith had enabled him to pull himself together so he could face his responsibilities. Certainly, many persons are discovering this in their lives today. Try as they may to get along on their own using their own devices, they soon become overwhelmed by the meaninglessness of it all.

In the first chapter of Romans, Paul writes expressing his thankfulness for the faith of the Christians in Rome: "Let me begin by thanking my God, through Jesus Christ, for you all because your faith is proclaimed in all the world." Paul was excited to know that the Christians at Rome possessed a faith that was alive.

Fritz Ridenour in his book HOW TO BE A CHRISTIAN WITHOUT BEING RELIGIOUS asks the question, "Your faith dead or alive."? He elaborates by contrasting his understanding of a "dead faith" and "live faith". "A person's faith is what he believes, the guiding principles and hope for his life. 'Dead faith' is the kind that rests on little more than an intellectual system, dry and dusty credos, meaningless dogmas that have little to do with life as it really is. A 'live faith' is just the opposite. To have a living faith means more than mental assent to a statement of beliefs. A living faith puts you in touch with God. A living faith has power.' Paul was anxious that men everywhere should ex perience the same power in their lives as he did. He wanted to share his faith and was anxious to go to Rome that the Christians there might also share their faith with him. Men like comic Jonathan Winters have something to share and surprise us by saying that faith led them to new power, new meaning, in short a new relationship with God. This is a possibility for all of us. Life for us may have become meaningless and empty because we have allowed faith to die. Too often, our selves and the world of things and systems get in the way of trusting God. Our faith may be dead because we have forgotten how to trust. Raymond Lindquist (Notes for Living) reminds us "Faith which is trust s the ingredient of confident living and when we link it to God it is the central fact of life. Sometimes it seems to disappear but that is not the fault of faith itself. It is the fault of what we let get between faith and us. If we remove the obstacles, faith is there—like the parents' love behind the hurly-burly of the household. Just as faith has come alive for others, so it can where we are concerned. For in the final analysis if we are honest with ourselves, we will have to admit that too often we have allowed the wrong things to gain our loyalty.

Your Faith:

Dead or Alive

Did you ever have a pal who was like a second shadow to you ... a friend who was always there when you needed him ... someone who laughed with you when you were happy, and comforted you when your turtle died or your puppy ran away? Our world is a big place, and people, even close friends, can't always stay together. One day you had to say "goodbye" and go your separate ways.

Since then, you've found new friends. You've also found an emptiness, a need, which people alone could not satisfy. We need a goal at the end of life's path and unfailing strength and guidance along the way.

Only God can fill this emptiness.

ESCH

The Republican Platform pledge to end draft calls by next June 30 may have been significantly influenced by a letter to the President by Congressman Marvin L. Esch. GOP candidate for re-election in the Second Congressional District

Esch, a strong anti-draft advocate, disclosed he and Congressman William Steiger of Wisconsin had been in private contact with the Peentagon and White House to emphasize their belief that the military should be composed entirely of volunteers

In other matters, Esch reported he had introduced legislation to reinstate old rules governing student loans until Congress is able to "straighten out" a clerical error resulting in misdrafting of several key sentences in the loan section of the high education provision.

That provision, he explained, resulted in new and extremely complicated regulations for receiving student loans-including a requirement for very detailed financial information from the family of each student and serious questions on the part of banks as to what their obligations were.

As a result of these regulations, he said, many banks had stopped giving student loans. And the confusion left doubt that many students would receive funds in time to attend the fall semester this year.

DUMAS. .

"County government is now big business and your commissioners bear the responsibility for coordinated planning and policy-making for a multi-million dollar budget "Mary Dumas, Republican candidate for avne County has stated.

In describing the areas in which county government so directly affects the citizen. such as health care, welfare, criminal justice, juvenile facilities, drug abuse programs, Mrs. Dumas added, "In addition your County Commissioner has the task of determining equitable tax assessments for your community and the equally important fair distribution of county services to your community in return for your county tax dollars." She later stated that she would recommend immediate legislative action for proper assessment procedures in compliance with a 1972 order of the Michigan State Tax Commission. She would recommend imposing a freeze on current assessed evaluations until appropriate assessment reform is enacted and implemented, she declared.

Mrs. Dumas referred to a bill being introduced by State Senator Carl Pursell which would permit counties to reorganize their governmental structure without following the procedures established by the County Home Rule Act. She pointed out that Senator Pursell's bill would allow counties to

The Ambassador to the United States from the Socialist Republic of Romania, Corneliu Bogdan, was in Novi last week to visit Midge and Julia Cova, owners of the Bob-O-Link Golf Course. The Ambassador, who is on a tour of the United States, was brought to Novi by Father Moratti, a Greek Orthodox priest, who knew Midge Cova's parents in Romania prior to their moving to the United States. A suggestion that construction on the homes contributing directly to the drainage problem be halted was firmly fixed by City Attorney Howard Bond. A second suggestion that the city take money from performance bonds posted by K&B with the city was also nixed by Bond, who pointed out that such performance bonds did not cover drainage problems.

Finally, the council decided that the most legally consistent course to pursue would be to withhold the certificates of occupancy of the home.

When a Village Oaks resident pointed out that such action could create bad feelings among new citizens toward the city government, Athas responded that issuing the certificates of occupancy in the past before the work had been done properly had already created bad feelings among new residents toward the city In two other matters con-
