

Housing construction continues to decline

By KATHY JENNINGS

If it's true that it's darkest before the dawn, Novi's six-month building figures for 1982 would seem to indicate a bright sunrise in the near future.

It's almost impossible to imagine that things could get darker for local builders when only 12 residential construction permits have been issued during the first six months of 1982.

Residential construction permit activity, normally slow during the first two months of the year, was virtually non-existent this year.

In fact, residential construction in Novi did not get underway until April when two construction permits were pulled.

Although building activity is normally at its peak during the spring, just seven permits were pulled in May and three in June.

Last year, when residential construction dropped to new lows, 27 construction permits were issued during the first six-month period. As the year progressed a total of 35 residential permits were issued.

Those figures compare with approximately 250 permits issued each year, dating back to 1975. Even in 1977, the slowest year of that period, 176 permits were issued. Residential building started to fall off in late 1979 and then after the first quarter of 1980 began a nosedive from which it has not yet recovered.

And this year the commercial and industrial development that brightened the outlook in Novi during last year's construction season has not materialized.

Only four commercial construction permits have been taken out this year, compared to 18 during the same six-month period one year ago.

The virtual dearth of building activity has forced the city to cut back the number of employees in the building department. A chief inspector, an inspector and a clerk were cut during budget deliberations this spring.

Building official Earl Bailey reports the three layoffs "are directly attributable to the economy and its effect on the building industry."

But Bailey says his department is "still working." He even sees several bright spots on the horizon.

"Hewlett-Packard is ready to go and has received starting permits," he said.

Bailey also is encouraged by what he hears from some independent builders.

"There was a young man in here (Monday) who had just purchased 30 lots in Simmons Orchard (on Ten Mile). He said he had sold quite a few homes in the last year, and was full of enthusiasm and optimism. He pulled his first permit and, if he continues, it may raise our permit totals a little."

Other builders are working in Jason Subdivision (off Ten Mile between Meadowbrook and Haggerty roads) and Whispering Meadows (on Nine Mile between Meadowbrook and Haggerty roads), Bailey said.

Novi officials also anticipate continued action in the construction of mobile homes. To date 71 mobile homes have been installed. (See related story).

Mobile homes on rise

The rest of the housing construction business may be all but dead in Novi, but mobile homes are springing up like mushrooms.

So far this year 71 mobile homes have been installed. And it would appear this year's totals for mobile home installation will rival those of the most recent record year for mobile homes — 1979 when 101 homes went in.

Last year 18 mobile homes were constructed during the same period. This year's mobile home installations have ranged from a high of 17 in January to six in February. There were nine in April, 12 in May and 14 in June.

More than half those homes went into Novi Meadows Mobile Home Park which opened December 15, 1981.

Lee Belcher, branch manager for Global Mobile Homes Sales, says the brisk activity at the new park is "about what could be expected" and reports "business is picking up."

Belcher attributes the rising popularity of manufactured homes to the economy. "Only three percent of the population can afford a new single family dwelling," Belcher said. "It's strictly a matter of economics. Most young couples starting out today can't afford $30,000 down and a $600 monthly payment, but they can afford a manufactured home."

He said the homes also are springing up because "they're well constructed — they surpass federal construction standards. They're energy efficient. There are a lot of things we do to make them attractive."

Even more activity in the local mobile home market can be expected when

Property owners appeal assessments to tribunal

By KATHY JENNINGS

As you come off I-96 onto Novi Road, the vacant Lincoln Mercury dealership, flanked by the West Oaks Shopping Center and the Sheraton Hotel, lies directly ahead.

Along with Art Van Furniture and Standard Federal Savings they are the start of what city officials call Section 15.

About this time last year the city announced a $5 million price tag for streets, water mains and storm sewers in the 160 acre section of land.

But since that time, progress on the improvements has for the most part been halted. Eight of 21 property owners in the area have argued they should not be billed for construction of public improvements in Section 15 and have taken their appeal to the Michigan Tax Tribunal.

Until those appeals are settled the city cannot sell bonds to proceed with the massive public improvement project.

Some temporary roads and preliminary improvements have been put in place by developers anxious to get underway. They were willing to spend their money based on assurances from the city that it would be returned when the special assessment appeals are settled.

The first of those appeals was recently heard before a tax tribunal hearing officer. The Dixon Road Group and Novi 12 Associates have asked the Tax Tribunal to reverse the city's determination that utilities are needed in Section 15.

They own 20 acres of property roughly in the northwest corner of the special assessment district.

Attorney Joe Galvin argued that the timing of the development is so far in the future that there is no benefit to the property owners today.

He said the property owners' position is that the city is using a special assessment district to control development and ownership, which they believe amounts to confiscation of their property.

Outlining the four basic theories put forth during the five days of testimony, Galvin said: "We argued the project is of general benefit to the city for the implementation of the master land use and road plan. We said there is no direct benefit to my clients commensurate with the amount being charged. We also argue the special assessment amounts to confiscation because it compels consolidation of property that amounts to taking. We further stated the city did not follow its own ordinance procedure since it did not have factual proof the improvements would specially benefit the property owners being assessed."

Galvin also maintained there's no need for a road system because the property is already served by Twelve Mile, although the city argued the road system through Section 15 would benefit his clients because it would open interior properties for development.

"The city position was that this opened up property, but we believe it is part of the implementation of their master plan," Galvin said. "They can do that through site plan approval and other means, but they can't have my client pay for it."

The property owners' position includes the argument that because the road will be used to re-route traffic and reduce congestion on Novi Road the city at large will benefit from a road system his clients are being asked to pay for.

City Attorney David Fried explained the city's position is "the whole purpose of the road in that area is to open Section 15 for developers and property owners...."

"They will be able to develop their property in an orderly fashion and at less cost than if it were left without these utilities and the road system. The

Some say 'no way'

Too many Novi hotels?

Are there too many hotels in the greater metropolitan Novi area?

Kenneth Windsor, general manager of the Plymouth Hilton, says there are.

But Gerald Abel, head of the new Sheraton Oaks, and Joseph Gerak, who hopes to break ground for the new Novi Hilton later this year, disagree.

"It's better to have three or even four in close proximity than it is to have just one because you help feed each other," said Gerak who is developing the Orchard Hill Place Professional Office Park at the corner of Eight Mile and Haggerty Road where the proposed Hilton is to be constructed.

"When you find one (hotel), you'll find three or four."

"Hotels are somewhat like shopping centers," he continued. "If you put all the stores in close proximity, you'll attract more business than you will with isolated units."

Abel expressed similar sentiments. Asked if he were concerned about the proposed Novi Hilton, Abel responded that he wanted to see a hotel at Orchard Hill Place.

"We welcome competition," he said. "It's a big community and it's growing every day. There's plenty of business to go around."

Another point on which both Abel and Gerak agreed is that the quality of the hotel franchises is important.

"What you want is hotels of equally high quality," said Gerak.

"When you're talking about organizations like Hilton, Sheraton and Marriott, you're talking about first-class, high-quality franchises," added Abel. "It makes good competition; you complement each other."

Windsor, general manager of the Plymouth Hilton, believes differently, however, and expressed concerns that the area is becoming saturated with hotels.

In addition to the recently-opened Sheraton Oaks, there is a new Holiday Inn at the corner of Six Mile and I-96 in Livonia as well as the Plymouth Hilton and Farmington Holiday Inn.

Windsor also noted that the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth has just added 60 more rooms.

"I think it's a mistake to add more hotels," he said.

Windsor stated further, however, that there is little the Plymouth Hilton can do except express its concerns about the increase in the number of hotels.

William Clifford, a vice president with Motor Hotel Management — a Dallas-based company which owns the Plymouth Hilton, confirmed that his company had expressed its concerns to the Hilton chain about the proposed Novi Hilton more than a year ago.

"In this economy, we're not happy about the new Sheraton or the proposed Novi Hilton," he said when contacted by The News last week.

"But there's nothing we can do about it because our franchise agreement with Hilton does not provide an exclusive franchise area."

"Hilton could build another Hilton right across the street from our Plymouth Hilton and there would be nothing we could do about it. It just wouldn't be good business."

Ironically, Hilton was one of the chains contacted by Abel when seeking a franchise for the property where the Sheraton Oaks now stands.

"We got a cool response from Hilton, while the Sheraton people were totally receptive to our proposal," he reported.

"Hilton eventually turned us down on the basis that we were too close to the Plymouth Hilton, but by that time we had already reached agreement with the Sheraton people," he reported.

"We're very proud to be affiliated with the Sheraton chain. It's a first-class outfit."

Gerak dismisses Windsor's suggestion that the area is saturated with hotels, suggesting that times have changed and will continue to change.

"Several years ago, it might have been true," said the Orchard Hill Place developer. "But we're creating our own market on-site with such companies as Hewlett-Packard, Digital Equipment Corporation and Norris Industries."

"Plus, there are about five new office projects proposed on a two-mile stretch of Twelve Mile between Halsted and Orchard Lake Road (in Farmington Hills).

Youth remains in coma after collision

SCOTT KOLLER

The Koller family found out how many concerned friends and neighbors they have last week when The News erroneously reported that their son Scott had been released from the hospital after being struck by a car June 24.

Koller, a 10-year-old, was struck while riding his bicycle near the Ten Mile/Meadowbrook Road intersection.

The News stated that Koller had been released from Botsford Hospital June 24, as reported by hospital officials. The hospital failed to reveal, however, that he had been transferred to Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor where he remains in a coma.

He underwent surgery July 6 for an epidural hematoma and remains in a "very light coma," according to his mother, Gloria Koller. He is in stable condition.

Mrs. Koller reported Tuesday that her son is now responding to some commands and Monday he nodded 'yes' and 'no' to questions posed to him. He has been transferred to a rehabilitation unit at Mott.

"He has a long way to go, but we're hopeful each day he will respond even more," Mrs. Koller said.

Many of those who read the original story believed the young man to have returned home from the hospital and began calling the family.

"We found we have an awful lot of concerned neighbors," Mrs. Koller said. "The accident was a lot more serious than it sounded in the story."

The News regrets the error and any inconvenience it may have caused.

Mrs. Koller also shared a short essay explaining her feelings since the accident occurred.

Scott: Where Are You?

Thirteen days you've been asleep. Your bruises are healing, but still you utter no words. Each visit tears me apart — hoping for a sign of your waking, then trying to deal with the pain of your silence.

Do you hear me? Do you know who I am? Are you in pain — are you trying to tell us so?

Are you at the accident? Are you afraid? Are you aware of our presence? Are you afraid you're alone?

You open your eyes — do you see me? You close your eyes — please don't go!

How many more hours, days or weeks? Will there be soccer and softball for you once again?

Our hearts are missing you. Patience is our need. Prayers still go forth. We must wait.

But I can't wait — sometimes I can't pray.

I'll come in once again to be with you — and with me the hope. Hope that soon you will say: "Mom, here I am."

Novi voters hear advantages of drain proposals

By KATHY JENNINGS

A campaign to convince Novi voters to approve 1.5 mills for a citywide drainage system and six major drain improvement projects has taken to the streets.

Approximately 25 Novi voters showed up at the Country Place clubhouse last week to hear a presentation from the Novi Flood Control Committee on the importance of the proposal to the future of Novi.

Residents appeared largely receptive to the plan that calls for adoption of a master plan designed to correct existing flooding problems and control the city's storm water.

If approved by voters, the drainage system will no longer require on-site drainage basins for individual developments. Regional wetlands and ponds would eliminate the need for future on-site ponds and a number of existing ponds.

Instead of building their own ponds, developers would pay to tap into the city drainage system.

There will be two drainage proposals on the August ballot. The first would amend the charter to allow the city to levy one mill which will go toward acquisition and construction of detention lakes as well as maintenance of a citywide drainage system.

The second proposal is for one-half mill to repay an estimated $4 million in bonds sold to cover construction of six major drainage projects.

The drainage system could still be implemented if only one of the two proposals is passed, but it will take longer and cost more.

"We would like you to consider Novi residents will have to pay for this sooner or later. There's no escaping it," said committee chairperson Ron Birou.

"I know about paying taxes—I just got a $3,200 bill. But I'd rather pay $40 a year on top of that for the next six years than put this off and getting a $50 million program that we are forced to pay for. This is the way to go," Birou's comments about a $50 million program refer to drainage master plans being implemented in communities where storm drainage is not mastered.

But the existing system of on-site ponds actually contributes to flooding during a storm when cresting water from upstream combines with water being held in the downstream ponds.

The proposed system is hydrologically engineered to properly handle the storm water, Birou added.

Residents asked for assurances that money used to tap into the drainage system would be used to maintain the system, rather than going into the city's general fund.

Slate law requires the money be earmarked for the drainage system and cannot be used in the general fund.

Regarding specific drainage problems at Country Place, Birou said the committee would look for ways to correct the situation.

"Our intention was to take care of people's problems," he said.

"We have a fund especially set aside for treatment of the Village Oaks lake. We have talked to the city before about maintenance with little response," the man told committee members.

Birou said the city has not had funds in the past that could be earmarked for drain maintenance. "Now there is a manpower problem. The funding and personnel are not there," Birou explained.

Funds would be available for such work, Birou added, only if voters approve the one-half mill ballot proposal.

Asked if the program would include chemical treatment such as that now used on Village Oaks lakes, Birou responded: "We wouldn't rule it out, but we haven't discussed it so far."

One woman questioned the drainage master plan.

"We had a plan that you're telling us doesn't work. Now you're telling us this new plan is the right one. How do we know you won't be back in 10 years telling us you were wrong and we need another plan?"

Engineering Consultant Cliff Seiber said the current drainage system which calls for ponds on each individual development is the best design for communities where storm drainage is not mastered.

Trustees organize amidst one-liners

By KATHY JENNINGS

Members of the board of education shall, between July 1 and the second Monday of July thereafter, organize the board at the meeting by electing a president, vice-president, a secretary and a treasurer.

It's never as solemn as it sounds.

Amidst quips and one-liners, Novi school board members last week elected officers and went through other routine matters as they organized for the upcoming year.

Board president Joel Colliau opened the meeting announcing in his usual fashion: "Seven members present—this meeting is called to order."

Superintendent Robert Pivko then prepared to administer the oath of office to Robert Schram, who was re-elected in July, and member-elect Gilbert Henderson. Schram asked tongue-in-cheek what would happen if the board decided on a 4-3 vote to reject the certification of election from the Oakland County Board of Canvassers.

"Realizing that we can't decertify what Oakland County has certified, I move we accept the results of the board of canvassers," said Trustee Ron Milam amidst board laughter.

The board voted, "That's five or seven ayes depending on whether the new members can vote." Colliau said.

Board Attorney Frederick Knauer held up five fingers so the secretary could enter the proper vote into the record.

Trustee Norman Miller suggested Schram could have voted since he was already a board member, but Knauer said he "could argue that position, since he (Schram) technically is not out of office until his replacement is seated." But Knauer said it didn't matter since he already had told the secretary to enter five votes in the record.

"Welcome back Bob and welcome back Gil," said Colliau.

The board then elected its slate of officers. Colliau was re-elected president, Joan Daley was re-elected vice president, Sharon Peicht was elected secretary and Schram was re-elected treasurer.

Schram nominated Colliau for the position of board president and Milam supported the nomination.

"A nomination doesn't need support," Colliau said in his best Roberts' Rules-of-Order voice.

"Then I withdraw my support," said Milam.

The board suspended the rules and elected Colliau on a unanimous ballot.

"It's traditional to praise the board president for the work he's done over the past year, but since you weren't voted out of office, I guess we don't have to make that speech," Milam said.

Colliau said he didn't know whether to thank the board for the confidence it showed in re-electing him or whether they had decided "stick me with the job again."

Milam told Colliau in jest that meetings go faster when he's president because he can't talk as much on subjects the board is debating.

Other board officers also were elected on a unanimous ballot.

In other action, the board established meeting dates as the first and third Thursdays of the month.

It also named bank depositories of National Bank of Detroit, Security Bank of Novi, Michigan National Bank West Oakland, and Manufacturers Bank of Detroit. Fredrick Knauer was retained as district attorney and Janz/Knight was hired as district auditor.

WOODEN TOOTHPICKS WORK

Q. What are gum stimulators?
A. In the old days people used to break a twig from a tree and chew the end until it was soft enough to rub against the teeth to clean them. Today there are specially designed "toothpicks" or gum stimulators. They are wedge shaped strips of balsa wood and come in matchbook like packages so they are easy to carry with you. The wood is soft enough to press against your gums and teeth to clean and stimulate them. These special toothpicks are useful when you dine out or any other time you are unable to brush your teeth.

This column is presented in the interest of better dental health. From the office of City offered opportunity to purchase train depot

The small white building that sits on the side of the Grand Trunk Western railroad tracks on Pon-fac Trail isn't much to look at.

But it's part of Walled Lake's history and it stands a chance to play a larger role in the city's efforts to maintain links to its past.

The owners of the building that served for years as Walled Lake's train depot, Grand Trunk Western Railroads, have offered the city a chance to buy the structure for $1.

The only catch to the deal is that the city must move the depot if it decides to buy it. And so far, city officials aren't sure how much that will cost or where the building could be relocated.

City Manager J. Michael Dornan said the depot is too large and fragile to be moved by the city's DPW and is looking at estimates from moving firms to see how much the city will need to figure on paying should council members decide to buy the depot.

At last week's meeting, Council Member Edward Horsman suggested the depot be moved to an unused railroad siding, if possible, to preserve the atmosphere of a train depot and also proposed looking into the purchase of a caboose.

Mentioning South Lyon's McHattie Park, which features a restored depot known as the Wilch's Hat Museum and a caboose, Horsman said, "They've got a pretty nice set-up there." He suggested Walled Lake may want to go the same route.

Dornan said Monday he is not sure where the depot could be located, but indicated there might be room behind city hall near the railroad tracks. Another possibility is putting the depot in Sims Park or at another city park.

Dornan said he plans to make recommendations on whether the city should buy the depot at the council's next meeting, set for 8 p.m. Tuesday (July 20).

Firemen want to refurbish old fire truck

By KAREN RICE

The fire chief describes it as a liability that's "in terrible shape." If put on the market, it might bring $500 — if a buyer could be found — although its actual historical value may be closer to $5,000.

But to the Walled Lake Firefighters Association, the 1956 pumper truck members are hoping to buy from the city is invaluable.

It is, after all, the city's first pumper and has been in the thick of countless fires in Walled Lake and the surrounding area for the past 26 years.

"As an association body, we're very concerned about this being our first pumper," association spokesman Jim Strasser told members of the Walled Lake city council recently, after explaining the organization's plan to buy the fire truck and restore it.

The fire association, of which Chief Bill Friar is a member, has asked to buy the pumper for $1, completely restore it and bring it up to "Class A condition." The association members also want to attach bronze plaques to the doors of the vehicle stating that the pumper is the city's first.

"We would be very proud to display our first pumper," Strasser said. "We can use it for demonstrations, to train new volunteers. We can use it in tournaments... and it could be used as a backup (in case of large fires) when it's restored."

Friar said the association's prime motivation in buying the pumper was to restore it for its historical value and show it off to school children and in parades.

"They're looking for something they can take to Howell and put in a parade because I won't let them take one of the trucks," Friar said with a smile.

Friar agreed that the truck would be useful to the city, both for promotional purposes and in the event of an emergency. It restored but cautioned council members that it would never meet fire classifications for a Class A pumper.

"Yes, they'll restore it and it'll look fabulous and it'll fight fires," Friar said, "but it'll never be a Class A fire truck."

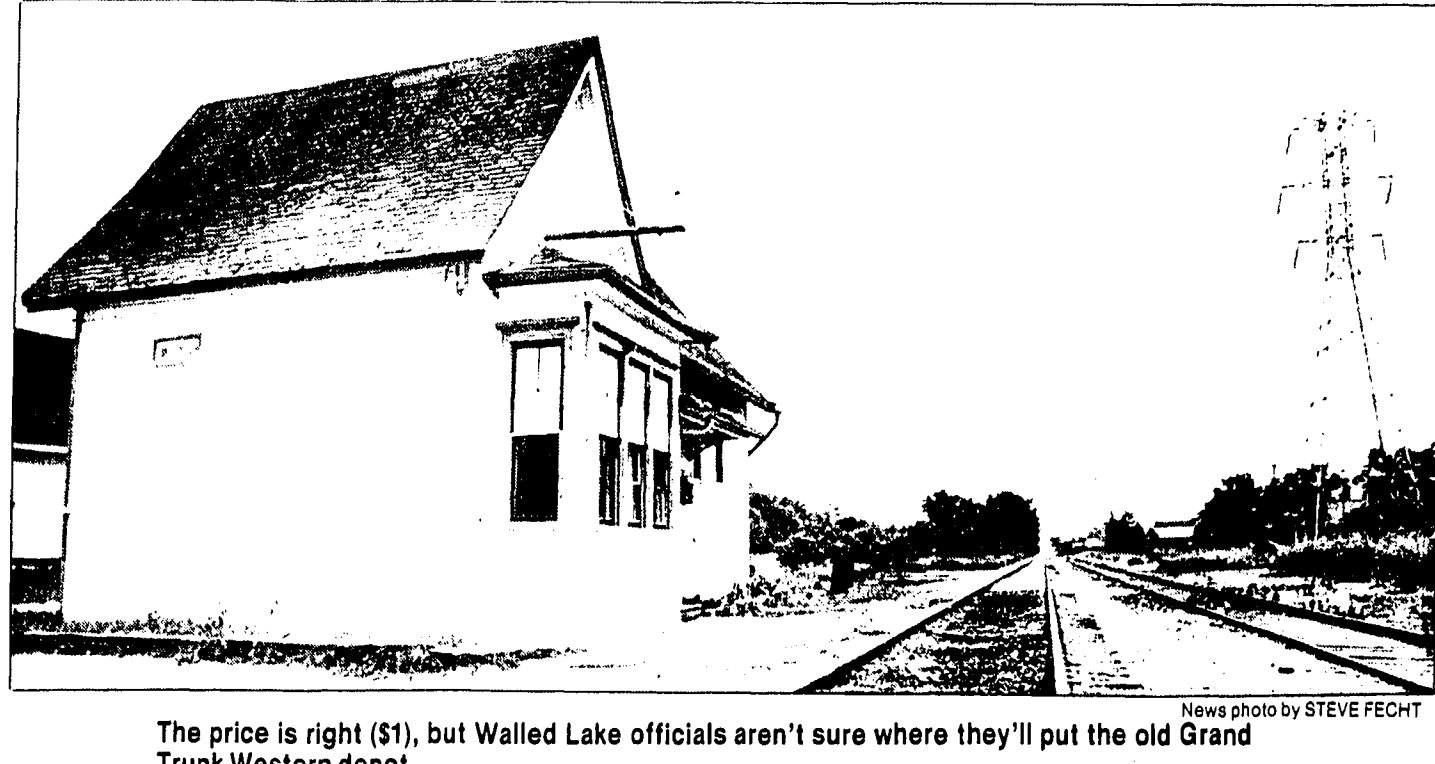

While he noted the association should maintain the truck's insurance, "not only to protect themselves, but to protect the city," Friar said it's value to Walled Lake was limited. He said the city might be able to sell it to a fire department "way up north" or to a collector, but that the Walled Lake Firefighters Association would appreciate it more. He also suggested the city could buy the truck back if the association ever decided to sell it.

Friar also asked the council to delay a decision on the purchase until the association met Sunday so he could make sure the members realized they would have to bear the cost of maintaining insurance and other incidentals. However, Friar said Monday the association definitely wants to buy the truck if the city council agrees to sell.

When asked by council members whether the city should keep the truck as an operational vehicle, Friar responded with a strong no.

"I know the condition of it," he said. "It's in terrible shape. My number one priority as fire chief is to get out from under it."

"Because of its condition, we can no longer use it. Speaking as the chief, I'd like to get it off our insurance, off our budget and off our liability."

The price is right ($1), but Walled Lake officials aren't sure where they'll put the old Grand Trunk Western depot.

Novi board retains legal counsel

Novi school board has decided to retain the services of attorney Fredrick Knauer for an $80 monthly retainer fee, which will include more legal services than it has in the past.

The board decided to retain Knauer at last week's organizational meeting, although some members opposed changes in the contract which will require him to attend meetings only upon request.

Under the new agreement, the schools will pay an $80 monthly retainer for 10 hours of legal services including litigation, arbitration, grievances, legal opinions, contract review and attendance at open and closed board meetings upon request.

Hourly rates will be charged for any services exceeding the 10-hour retainer.

Assistant Superintendent William Barr reported that the district spent between $14,000 and $17,000 on legal fees during 1981-82—a figure approximately twice the amount of the retainer.

Superintendent Robert Piwko added that the administration believes the new agreement will create a "better use" of Knauer's time.

In response to questions from Trustee Gilbert Henderson, Piwko said the attorney's role is to give legal advice when situations arise.

Asked by Henderson how he views the proposed contract changes, Knauer said he understood them to mean that he will wait to hear if his legal services are needed rather than being expected to attend every board meeting.

"I understand the administration's position from a business point of view," he said.

"Once you had paving, sewers and property sales, there was no question the business far exceeded the retainer," he said. "Now you're not building or selling any schools. You don't have any contract management, and the administration is concerned about how you're spending tax dollars. I haven't been told this. I'm guessing."

"What I hear them saying is they want to call on me. If I spend eight hours of the retainer on arbitration so-be-it, I obviously can't come to all meetings and have 10 hours available for grievances and arbitration."

Knauer said his previous retainer covered attendance at meetings and all legal services except litigation, arbitration and board level grievances. "If you used 1,000 hours, outside litigation, it was all covered by the retainer."

Trustee Sharon Pelchat expressed concern that the new arrangement would cost more in addition to depriving the board of legal services at its meetings.

Henderson responded that he did not believe there would be much change in the costs, but that he was concerned how "about how we relate to one another. He said he appreciates the board's relationship with the attorney and "I don't want to mess with that. I don't want anything in print by us that tells him he's not welcome here."

Russell Button opens the expansion of his park, reports Novi Building Official Earl Bailey.

"Button's expansion is still in the design stage," Bailey said. He did not speculate on when lots may be available.

Novi Meadows is located on Novi's western boundary at Napier Road. Button's development, Country Cousins, is on the city's eastern boundary at Haggerty Road.

Mobile homes also are being installed at a less rapid rate in Chateau Estates Mobile home park on Thirteen Mile.

Bailey attributes the popularity of mobile homes to the fact "the lots are available and the price is right for people now."

Fried further maintained that there was "absolutely no confiscation" of the property because the improvement will allow a substantial profit on the property.

Fried said the city's appraiser determined the Dixon Road Group property has an estimated value of $765,000 before improvements are made. After

Walled Lake schools arrange low-interest loan

The Walled Lake School District will have to pay almost $670,000 in interest to borrow some $8.5 million for the 1982-83 school year.

That was the figure released by Assistant Superintendent Business Harry Carlson as the board voted Monday to borrow the $8.5 million from Merrill Lynch of Detroit at an interest rate of 10.7006 percent.

The interest rate offered by Merrill Lynch was the lowest of four bids received by the district in response to its request for loan funds.

The other bids ranged from 11.2836 percent from the National Bank of Detroit to 11.5406 percent from the First National Bank of Chicago.

Carlson told the board he was elated that the district was able to achieve an interest rate lower than 11 percent.

"We were expecting to pay somewhere between 11.5 and 11.75 percent on the school loan," he reported. "When we opened the first bid and it was 10.7 percent, we were pleased, and we were particularly happy that we were able to borrow the money at just 10.7 percent."

Carlson also reported that the notes from the Walled Lake Schools are selling well on the financial market.

"When we opened the first bid ... we were pleased, and we were particularly happy that we were able to borrow the money at just 10.7 percent."

— Harry Carlson, Assistant superintendent

He said the E. F. Hutton Company had purchased some $1 million worth of the notes to sell, and succeeded in selling roughly $300,000 of them in just 20 minutes.

"I anticipate that all our notes will be sold by Monday," he reported.

The need for the local school district to borrow funds to pay its bills during the first half of the school year is necessitated by the fact that tax revenues, which comprise a major share of total revenues, do not begin to arrive until December and are not totally collected until the end of February.

As a result, the district borrows money at the start of the year and then retires the loan in the spring after tax revenues have been collected.

One solution to the problem of delayed revenues is biannual collection of school taxes—half in September and the other half in February. But local units of government have not been receptive to the district's requests to implement twice-annual collection of school taxes.

The 10.7 percent interest rate obtained by the district this year represents a 1.1 percent drop from the 11.8 percent interest rate paid on the school loan last year.

Trustee Betty Campion commented that she was delighted with the 10.7 percent interest rate. "Based on what other school districts are receiving, I was expecting the bids to come in at over 11 percent," she said.

Vitale traded fireworks

"We were very impressed with the products. But when you buy a commodity, you expect to receive a commodity. That was not the case."

As a result of the mix-up, Novi and Walled Lake will pay $3,000 for the show, a figure that has been agreed upon by Vitale and is some $1,800 less than originally planned.

But council members stated the compromise plan was not entirely satisfactory to them. Several suggested buying a newspaper ad apologizing to residents for the shortage and Council Member William Roberts proposed Vitale foot the cost of the ad—an idea Dornan called "a darn good suggestion."

Council Member James Clifton also pushed for an ad explaining what had happened.

"We've ballooned this up for the past six months," Clifton said. "It puts a lot of eggs on our face and I think what happened should be publicized."

Like other council members, Clifton commented that residents have asked him why the show ran so short and had expressed disappointment.

While the shortage of fireworks was discovered the afternoon of July 4th, most council members and city officials were unaware of the problem until the next day. Dornan said Novi and Walled Lake had no choice but to continue with the show.

"It seemed better that we go ahead and fire what we had rather than cancel the show," Dornan said. "We shot them under protest."

But Fire Chief Bill Friar suggested the evening wasn't a complete loss.

"We don't want to lose sight of the fact that even though it was short, the fireworks that were shot were well done," Friar said.

Annexation talks spurred by firm's expansion try

having a legislator introduce a bill, however, because State Representative Richard Fessler (R-West Bloomfield) — whose constituents are primarily township residents — introduced a different package of bills designed to change annexation proceedings, views of a change favorable to townships. Fessler's action was lambasted by city officials but praised by those in the township.

Walled Lake's other representative, State Senator Doug Ross (D-Oak Park), is up for re-election this fall and is seeking election to the U.S. House in another district. Fessler is now seeking Ross's Senate seat.

Besides, Dornan said, trying to resolve the dispute through congress "smacks of the same sort of tactics that the townships attempted to play" by introducing a moratorium on annexations in Oakland County last fall, a bid that failed.

"I'm not going according to the rules, we would be doing the same things the townships did, that we shook our fingers at," Dornan said.

"It boiled down to Governor Milliken, the only character in the drama who, for one, wasn't up for re-election and who, number two, has paid a great deal of attention to keeping jobs in the state."

Dornan said city officials met with Milliken in March while attending the Michigan Municipal League conference and received a commitment from the governor to support mediation between Commerce and the city. Burman of the Commerce department was asked to mediate the dispute.

Representatives of the two communities met with Burman in Lansing, Dornan said. At that time, the proposal, according to Dornan, was that Walled Lake would receive Gay Toys and the two communities would square off the boundaries on the west, returning some land to Commerce.

"It was the first time the proposal was brought up that — and this flabbergasted everybody (from Walled Lake) — Commerce Township would have no problem with allowing certain properties to be annexed to Walled Lake," Dornan said. "But all of a sudden it mushroomed."

'It was the first time the proposal was brought up that — and this flabbergasted everybody (from Walled Lake) — Commerce Township would have no problem with allowing certain properties to be annexed to Walled Lake. But all of a sudden it mushroomed.'
— J. Michael Dornan, Walled Lake city manager

According to the city manager, Commerce wanted insurance the city would agree never to seek annexation of township land in the future in order for the township to agree to the proposal. The city was also asked to drop its petition for the parcel on the east side of Walled Lake.

"I don't take a member of the Walled Lake City Council more than a wink of your eye to say no to a proposal like that," Dornan said, contending that council members do not want to agree to that sort of contract for three reasons. First, he maintains the council cannot bind future councils (an argument that others, such as Commerce, take issue with); and second, Walled Lake feels it has grounds to be successful in future annexation bids.

Thirdly, Walled Lake does not want to put itself in a position of having to refuse to annex parcels whose owners have requested annexation — as Gay Toys did years ago.

Neither the city council nor the township board of trustees has ever discussed the proposals in an open session.

Commerce Township Supervisor Robert Long could not be reached for comment Tuesday prior to "The News" press time.

As a result of the impasse, negotiations between the two communities "But Dornan last week made a "counter proposal to Gay Toys" that would allow the firm to expand, receive city services that the township can't offer, and would not affect the annexation agreement or lawsuit. Equally important to the city, it would not preclude Walled Lake from seeking to annex portions of Commerce in the future.

Dornan has offered to provide Gay Toys with water and sewer services through Commerce Township, calling the agreement a "municipal service agreement." If Gay Toys and Commerce agree to the proposal, the township would charge the company the same 17.556 mills Walled Lake levies, deduct its 1.5 operating mills and pay the city about 16 mills in return for Walled Lake's water and sewer service to Gay Toys.

Ordinarily, the city charges twice the water and sewer rate to firms outside the city as it does firms inside the city, but those businesses — such as Williams Research — pay the township's low operating millage of 1.5 mills in contrast to the city's 17.556 mills.

Dornan said the municipal service agreement would be fairer to companies inside the city and would give Gay Toys the services it needs to expand.

He said the proposal is being reviewed by Gay Toys' attorney, who has not yet discussed it with the company president. But Dornan added that he expected the proposal to be agreeable to Commerce if Gay Toys okayed it.

"It's reasonable that if Gay Toys can live with it, Commerce Township can live with it," Dornan said.

"It may never happen, but it keeps getting down to the question, what are we going to do about Gay Toys? The city council has come miles and miles and miles to agree to a joint agreement, period. They want to resolve the Gay Toys issue in a way which would keep the jobs."

Trustees criticize changes in agenda

The format for Walled Lake school board meetings has been changed since Robert Cooper has become president.

And several people have let it be known that they don't consider it a change for the better.

Cooper, a 10-year board member, was elected board president for the 1982-83 school year at the annual organizational meeting July 5.

Other new officers elected by the board were Mario Tozzi, vice president; Betty Campion, treasurer; and Bonnie Veneky, secretary.

Patricia Jackman, who served as board treasurer during the 1981-82 school year, volunteered for and was appointed the board's delegate on the Oakland Intermediate School District's budget review committee, legislative liaison and representative to the Michigan Association of School Boards.

Since taking over as president, Cooper has implemented two changes which have received some criticism.

First, the number of meetings has been reduced from two to one per month. The board's regularly-scheduled meeting had been the second Tuesday of the month up until February 1982 when the number of monthly meetings was expanded to two — the second and fourth Tuesdays.

The decision to cut back to one meeting per month was criticized by Jackman who said she believed there should be two monthly meetings because of the pending work load and because it gives the public a greater opportunity to participate with the school system.

Trustee Janet Callahan also questioned the decision to reduce the number of meetings, but failed to support Jackman's motion to increase the number of meetings to two.

In response to Jackman's question as to why she had failed to support the motion, Callahan replied that she believed the board's business could be handled within one monthly meeting "if it's conducted properly."

The second format change implemented by Cooper which has been criticized is his decision to reduce the number of audience participations on the agenda from two to one.

The cutback in audience participations was questioned Monday by David Rody, a former board member who failed to win re-election in June.

Cooper said he had made the decision to limit audience participation. "I felt the first audience participation was often not used and we would be able to get through the agenda in a more timely manner by reverting back to just one audience participation," he said.

Cooper also said members of the audience have an opportunity to address any issue during the course of the meeting. "If we discover that people are deprived of their right to speak, we'll go back to two audience participations on the agenda," he said.

Jackman then made a motion which called for two audience participations — one at the start and another at the close of each session — to be placed on the agenda.

"The motion was supported by Merlin Reeds who said he is 'not threatened' by audience participation. 'I won't go to war over this issue,' he said, 'but I think audience participation is a healthy thing.'"

The motion failed to pass, however, as the board split 3-3 on the call for two audience participations. Callahan, Reeds and Jackman voted affirmatively, while dissenting ballots were cast by Campion, Tozzi and Cooper.

Choosing A Camera Bag

A good camera bag is a wise investment for that valuable camera gear you are accumulating. Your blue jeans pocket is not the safest place for film, lenses, batteries, and the other items you need to have with you.

The amount of gear you will be carrying will determine what size bag you need. Other important considerations are: safety, comfort, convenience, and quality. Extra pockets inside the bag will keep smaller items from getting damaged. Some bags come with handy removable inserts. A good bag can also be customized by making cut-outs for accessories in a thick piece of foam.

The bag should have a sturdy strap and good stitching. Hard bags will offer more protection but a softer bag may be more comfortable. Fasteners should allow easy access to that extra film or lens, but should be secure enough that everything doesn't come tumbling out when you're running after that perfect shot.

Getting freshest fruits and veggies is 24-hour job at Andy's Market

GREEN SHEET

Sliger/Livingston East

Wednesday, July 14, 1982

Andy and Frieda Zangas make sure everything's always fresh at their Novi Road market.

Andy Zangas has just a sweet memory; but corn, blueberries, "honey rock" melons and peaches are quickly moving into the limelight, and don't worry — when they're finally gone, September apples will carry the season into the winter months.

In-season fruits and vegetables are the main attractions at Andy's Country Boy Fruit Market in Novi, according to Andy Zangas, who with his wife Frieda has owned and operated the market since April of 1978.

Zangas has developed the market from an open-air fruit stand into an air-conditioned market that also stocks beer, wine, breads, soft drinks, lunch meats and cheese. But, says Zangas, in-season fruit is still the star of the show at the market.

It's no small feat to keep the market stocked with fresh fruits and vegetables — five times a week during the summer Andy gets up in time to make it to Detroit's Eastern Market or the Detroit Produce Terminal by 3 a.m.

"You have to be there early to get the best selection," he explained. "If you get there at six or seven it's all over with."

According to Zangas, a rapport with farmers at the markets and use of contacts he made during 30 years of directing produce for Wrigley Stores makes fruit and vegetables about as fresh and inexpensive as if they were coming from the Zangas' own truck garden or orchard.

Although in-season fruits and vegetables are the biggest product, Zangas makes an effort to carry a wide variety of produce.

"We have as much of a variety as we can possibly get into the store," said Zangas. "Some things are expensive and out of season, but we make every attempt to get it for our customers."

Zangas points to the variety of "gourmet" fruits at the market, which includes kiwi fruit, mangoes, papaya and Hawaiian pineapples, which, he explains, is higher quality than the more common Central American pineapple.

Zangas prides himself on the quality of his produce and his market. "You know (the produce) is fresh and it's appetizing," he said. "We try to make a market a pleasant place to shop in."

As often as possible, Zangas said, he stocks the market with "extra fancy," the highest grade of fruits and vegetables.

In addition to the fresh fruits and vegetables, Andy's carries dried fruits such as apricots, prunes, raisins and a selection of spices.

The hard crust Greek bread sold at the market is made with no preservatives and delivered fresh daily; the store also carries Lebanese pita bread and several kinds of Italian bread.

If you want to take a crack at growing your own vegetables, you can get a head start at Andy's — just go into the adjacent greenhouse instead of the market.

The greenhouse, which opens its season with Easter flowers and closes it with Christmas trees, is now stocked with various types of vegetable plants, as well as bedding plants, flowers and house plants.

"Whatever people want to grow, we've got," said Zangas, including starter plants of zucchini, tomatoes and eggplant.

Andy's Country Boy Market is located at 42009 Grand River Avenue in Novi. It is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Jobless rate shows no change in June

The normal seasonal jump in Michigan's jobless rate, brought about by summer job seekers, did not occur as the state's June unemployment rate held steady at May levels of 14.3 percent, according to estimates released by S. Martin Taylor, director of the Michigan Employment Security Commission.

Taylor reported that the number of jobless workers across the state rose by 4,000 during June to 620,000. Total employment grew 11,000 to 3,718 million. In June of 1981, the state's unemployment rate was 11.1 percent with 487,000 out of work.

Ordinarily, the number of job seekers entering Michigan's labor force in June would increase by much more than the 15,000 it did this year, Taylor said.

However, the state's continuing high unemployment rate apparently has discouraged or delayed many young people from beginning their search for summer jobs.

In fact, while Michigan's unemployment rate did not increase in June, it is still the state's highest June rate since 1959 when it reached 16.6 percent.

Michigan's seasonally adjusted jobless rate in June was 14.4 percent, up slightly from May's 14.3 percent. The adjusted jobless total was 613,000 in June, down 4,000 from May.

Nationally, the seasonally adjusted June jobless rate remained unchanged from May's 9.5 percent.

Not Forgotten

She's gone but not forgotten,
her memory lingering soft.
Daily chores do ease the heartache,
but her visions touch me soft.

She's gone, but not forgotten,
relieved of daily pain.
The void she leaves is monstrous,
and thoughts bring tears again.

She's gone, but not forgotten,
for her return I cannot hope,
Beset at every turning,
with each ill she'd bravely cope.

She's gone, but not forgotten,
nor will she ever be.
My task to give her solace,
was joy enough for me.

She's gone, but not forgotten,
and someday I'll join her there.
Where once again we'll laugh and sing with ne'er a worldly care.

She's gone, but not forgotten,
her love, her touch, her kids,
She was my alter-ego,
the part of me I'll miss.

She's gone, but not forgotten,
at night I feel her near.
I call her name; but no response,
and yet it was so clear.

She's gone, but not forgotten,
and I'm sure my grief will leave,
to be replaced by loving thoughts,
as dreams of yore I weave.

She's gone, but not forgotten,
and the future calls me on.
But I know she's near in spirit,
though her earthly self is gone.

The Poet's Rose

A woman and a rose:
it seems you're not a real poet
unless you speak of those;
I've written on a lot of things,
but never on a rose.
So maybe once I'll compromise—
all ready now. Here goes...

"Woman is the trellis
and man the springy vine;
damasked in crimson passion,
inextricably entwined."

There now, I've done my best—strange how a poet's images reflect how we're obsessed;
the smiles of life and death,
of woman and of rose...
indicative of humankind,
of beauties and of woes.

—Raghudas (Robbie Clark)

Check-out Girl Visits Woman Customer Hospitalized After Supermarket Truck Backs Over Her In Store Parking Lot

As the check-out girl tiptoed away
From the ward where her customer lay
With a tube up her nose
And with casts to her toes,
She turned back and said, "Have a nice day!"

Pam

I had a dream,
of which I cannot remember
Only the meaning,
has been planted forever
A young man in his dream,
found a beautiful maiden
Only she left him,
he couldn't take waiting Fantasies are wonderful to possess,
but wisdom knows they must progress
Sometimes a man's pride and human needs, should be put aside when a woman pleads
Now an emptiness is bound,
until true love can be found.

Donald Bostic

I Like to Dream

I like to dream of a world
Where there are no wars and no
Famines and no sickness
Oh Lord, why can't my dream come true
I like to dream of a world
Where all men are brothers
Walk hand in hand
And peace and justice flourish
Through the land
I like to dream of a world
Where all men are free
Where love is our only reality
Oh Lord, why can't my dream come true
I like to dream of a world
Where there is no death,
No pain, and no sorrow
Where no one ever grows old
Oh Lord, please let my dream
Come true.

The Kingdom and the Dove

Kingdoms have risen
Kingdoms have fallen
Men killing one another for land they claim is rightfully theirs
But God created the land for each and every one to share.
Nations have risen Nations have fallen
"With God on our side," I hear them say But those who take with the sword shall die by the sword.
War, hate and greed
while God in heaven silently pleads for mankind to find a way to end the hate and war
Kingdoms have risen
Kingdoms have fallen
but the Kingdom of God is always at peace
Peace be with you

Eased Eruption

The heart
Squeezed by the fist
Of the world
Grasps, then Flings far, its Javelin hurled.

F.A. Hasenau

I's Have It!

An I is so conceited
when it's written large and strong or such a timid little thing
when it's on the paper-wrong.
It can be dotted or even knotted
or with a flying dash
that looks like fiery ash.
It can be sailing
like a ship
upon a little keel
or stand up slender
as a column.
Ionic, impressive and ideal.
An I goes in
and makes words turn from running on to going back—
inactive, inbound, indeed, intact.
An I can change the sound of a's, o's, e's and u's and get us busy spellers
all tired, tried and confused.

O-h!

Of the O's
very few are round.
Most have a side that slopes,
a top with peak
and some are even ovals,
not fat but sleek.

Now an O
that's not shaped true
won't roll upon the round
nor hoop upon the tips
nor suck the soda
nor make a whistle on the lips.

So for an O
a compass is the thing,
held point to paper
and the wrist with swing
to make it even as a ball or pole or hole
or dish or ring.

U's, Too!

The U's are used to make an "oo-y" sound that puffs out
like a big round
bubble.

But they can be trouble—
hard to write
like two quick I's
without the dot
and making sounds
of the w
which they are not.
They look like
looped spaghetti
when they're printed or like a worm
that's been indented
or a smile
or the end of a nose
or a hammock
where no tree grows.

Main Bout

We met at center ring
to touch gloves,
he in old bones
with a death's head grin.
I in pink pajamas
and a frayed terry robe.

Round one I danced a lot
trying to duck his left.
In
out
It seemed a piece of cake
but I lost on points.

Round two he hit me
in the throat.
I swallowed fire
and coughed a flame.

Three and four swim a little in my mind.
I was down for count of six—
I think.

My knees began to waver
my shoulders sag.
My arms could scarcely lift the gloves
and my head split
with heavy ache
from a right to jaw.

By five even the lights
burned circles in my brain.
Breath rasped and rumbled.
My hair flared hot wires
while sweat drowned
visions in my eyes.
The knockout was a mercy belt that sent me flat
into the fog of dreams.

Decision: still World Champ, the Flu
No rematch, please.

Signs of the Time

Signs of the time
When you were mine
Being in harmony with each other
Laughing and crying
Living and dying,
Sharing it all together.
Now the laughing is crying,
The living is dying
And I have nowhere to turn.
Except to the sign
When you were mine
And we had each other.

Get Yourself A Back-Scratcher

(Says My Wife)

Scratching is the least it does!
It's as though it never was Intended just to scratch an itch;
It's hard to say the thing at which
It does the best of all its uses.
It depends upon the chore she chooses.
I'll pick up pins that fall on the floor
Or lift up a spoon and a whole lot more.
It reaches a yard for all kinds of things.
Like salts and peppers and buttons and strings.
The scratcher will rescue your nose
Or your shoes—
It is really amazing how much you can use
A stick that's intended just to Scratch your back
And turns out to be your special knickknack!

Charles E. Hutton

Life

Sometimes I'm filled with joy
Sometimes I'm filled with sorrow
I may be here today
but may be gone tomorrow
Life is sweet
but sometimes bitter
Life is sweet
and I'm no quitter
I'll live my life one day at a time
I'll live in perfect peace and harmony
I'll live my life both with and free for I cherish this gift of life
God has given to me...

Fightin'

Before a man can step into the ring
with another man's woes,
he must first square off

shake hands

dancin' patterns around his personal foe, delivering blow until final ten-count KO.

Blue

True blue
looks from the eyes
of children
or white haired pink skinned old men.
Rare in flowers
except morning glory,
bachelor button
field aster.
Skies have blue
and seas from skies
and roofs in rain.
Shadows, metals,
rocks, gems—
these too are blue.
And berries
But blue is wet
not hard not growing

deep as space and sea.

We're looking forward to the coming five years

By PHILIP JEROME

The Novi-Walled Lake News is five years old. We celebrated the fifth birthday of our first edition yesterday (Tuesday) and now head into the second half of our first decade with a heartening list of achievements behind us and long list of goals ahead.

For the record, The Novi-Walled Lake News is the baby of a long-established chain. Our Northville, South Lyon, Milford, Brighton and Livingston County papers have been around a long time — most of them more than a century.

Even the Novi section of the paper is hardly a baby. It formerly was published in combination with The Northville Record and has been around some 27 years.

But the Novi-Walled Lake News is a youngster. We published our first edition July 13, 1977, breaking the Record into a separate paper and expanding north into the Walled Lake area for the first time to create a new entity — The Novi-Walled Lake News.

I've been with the Sliger-Livingston chain 11 years. I was the Novi/sports editor for the Northville Record/Novi News from 1971-74 and then served as managing editor of the South Lyon Herald before being named managing editor of the new paper in Novi-Walled Lake in 1977.

But despite the various papers I have worked for, the Novi-Walled Lake paper holds a special place in my heart for a number of reasons. First, I unabashedly admit to loving Novi. It was the beat where I cut my teeth as a rookie reporter, where I learned to take the heat whenever I uncovered a "hot" story and accepted thanks when people felt I had done a good job — sometimes for the same story.

Secondly, this paper is "my baby." I'm the only managing editor it has ever had, and — with the exception of Sandy Mitchell, who started as office manager and is now an advertising representative — I'm the only one who's been around from the start.

I spent a lot of time in the Walled Lake library in the weeks before we opened, catching up on background and talking to local officials.

I decided where the furniture should be placed in our Walled Lake office; and Bill Sliger, Jack Hoffman and I worked into the wee hours one morning, scrubbing all the furniture so everything would be shipshape when we finally opened our doors.

The first edition was hectic. I worked seven consecutive days and nights to make sure everything would be where it ought to be when "the new paper" made its first appearance in the composition room.

Actually, I went to Sliger, our former publisher, several days before the first edition and asked that we postpone it one week. Bill, in his own inimitable way, expressed confidence in my ability to get the job done by July 13 and then told me to stop jawing and get back to work.

There have been some trials and tribulations over the years. Novi editor Wayne Loder and Walled Lake editor Carl Davies both decided to take other jobs a scant two months after we started.

The edict from the U.S. Post Office that required us to change the name of the Walled Lake News to The Walled Lake edition of The Novi News was another setback.

Nothing hurt as much as the decision to close our office in Walled Lake and move me and my staff back to Northville.

Past and present staffers gather around editor Karen Rice, Sandy Mitchell, Tina Soper, Kathy Phil Jerome and friend, Bongo, during some Jennings, Steve Cvengros and Reid Creager, monkey business two years ago. Left to right are worked darn hard to win the awards we have won, and I've been fortunate to have had some very talented and dedicated people working with me. I feel good about what I've been doing the last five years of my life. I'm proud

And I look forward to many good years ahead. Many unfulfilled goals, dreams and aspirations remain to be accomplished. Just wait till we hit our 10th birthday.

Where did they go when they left us?

Ever wonder whatever happened to the folks who use to work at The News? Staffers Kathy Jennings, Karen Rice and Phil Jerome tracked most of them down, with one notable failure. If anyone knows the whereabouts of Carl Davies, give us a call. When last heard from, he was somewhere in Pennsylvania.

WAYNE LODER, July 1974-September 1977. Loder, who covered Novi for The Northville Record, was The News' first Novi reporter. He left the paper to open his own business, T/Stop, a photographic supply store on Grand River. Loder recalls his first few months after the papers split as a tough assignment. "I remember it was sure a big job," he said, "but it was fun. Phil Jerome was really the guiding light and he did a fantastic job."

DAVID RAY, October 1977-June 1980. Ray arrived on the scene in time to carry the load created by the resignation of Davies as Walled Lake editor. His incisive, detailed reporting earned quick respect for The News throughout the circulation area. After three years of service, Ray was promoted to managing editor of The South Lyon Herald in June 1980, and in July 1980 was again promoted to assistant general manager of Suburban Communication Corporation's Lansing Suburban News Network newspapers — the position he holds today.

Where did staffers go when they left The News?

STEVE BELL, September 1977-November 1978. "I haven't written a column since I left," said Bell, whose column "A Random Sample" often stirred controversy while he covered Novi for The News.

Now Bell is a reporter at The Bay City Times, where he covers city government and writes features and sports. He remembers his editor from his first full-time newspapering job this way: "I'd say Phil Jerome was an excellent newspaper man. He gave me excellent advice during my year there. As I recall, he was very competitive with the Spinal Column."

ALAN SCHULTZ, November 1977-January 1979. Schultz took over the sports coverage from then managing editor Philip Jerome. He left the paper to be sports editor in Fort Madison, Iowa. He is Assistant Sports Information Director for Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa. He also has married a Northville woman — the former Judy Jablonski.

Schultz appears to be thriving out in corn country. "I heard a lot of corn jokes before I left, but Iowa is one of the best kept secrets from the people in Michigan. It's more relaxed, just good livin'."

Schultz remembers his days in Walled Lake fondly: "We had the greatest office manager anywhere — Sandy Mitchell. And Phil Jerome was the first in a long line of good bosses."

REID CREAHER, January 1979-July 1981. Creager was the second full-time sports reporter for The News and expanded the beat to cover sports at all three area high schools.

He moved on to a position on the copy desk of The Oakland Press and is now working in the sports department covering the Detroit Tigers and football.

"During my 2½ years, I got used to writing the 'almost' and 'wait until next year' stories for three schools. Then, just after I left the paper in July 1981, Novi shocked everyone by winning its league football title. Walled Lake Western won its first league basketball title that winter."

DAVE JOHNSON, September 1981-March 1982. Replacing Reid Creager in covering sports for The News, Johnson had just gotten his feet wet as sports editor coordinating athletes in two school districts and five communities when he received notice he was being laid off. Joining the ranks of many unemployed adults in the area, Johnson is still looking for a job in journalism or broadcasting nearly four months later.

NANCY DINGELDEY, September 1977-June 1980. Dingeldey, who had been a columnist and covered Wixom police for the Northville Record previously, joined The News staff when it was formed as editor of the Modern Living section (now called Living).

Currently, Dingeldey is public relations director for Martin Place Hospital. She most enjoyed the experiences she and her family had while she was a writer for The News.
