Police accept contract, arbitration side-stepped

novi editor

NOVI - Novi Police Officers and the city have reached agreement on a new contract, thereby resolving negotiations that earlier appeared headed for arbitration.

In fact, the agreement came two days after both sides had been scheduled to meet with an arbitrator.

NPOA members voted February 15 to accept the three-year pact. The city council is expected to ratify the contract at its February 27 meeting. The contract, which is retroactive to July 1, includes an annual salary increase of $1,600 for each of the three years. "As far as I'm concerned it's a good contract," said NPOA President Robert Gatt. "Both sides walked away feeling they'd accomplished something.'

Assistant City Manager Craig Klaver, the city's chief bargainer, agreed that the talks were produc-agreement. A marathon bargaining session began Tuesday morning and ended with a tentative agreement nine hours later. The proposed pact was accepted unanimously with 19 of 22 NPOA members present on Gatt said one improvement in the contract is a long-term disability plan for both on-duty and off-duty officers. The plan is especially beneficial for officers who are disabled to the point they cannot perform their jobs, he explained. The plan allows the officer to collect up to 60 percent of his gross salary for five

The contract also addresses seniority rights by creating a new promotion system.

The former contract called for the "most senior officer" to receive a promotion as it opened up. A new promotion formula has been established so that an officer would receive points for seniority and points for scores on oral boards and written

Senior citizen complex seen as impetus for Town Center

managing editor

A proposal to construct senior citizen housing near the corner of Eleven Mile and the proposed ring road is being hailed by the planning board as the first step toward development of the Town Center.

William Mayer, a co-partner in the Franklin Terrace Apartments, appeared before the planners February 15 to discuss plans to construct 95 senior citizen apartments in a threestory building in the Town Center

According to Mayer, the proposed Novi Terrace will be an adult community for people over 65, consisting of 75 one-bedroom and 20 twobedroom apartments in a three-story brick veneer building.

Planning Consultant Charles Cairns called the proposal "an excellent use for the Town Center area" and added that Novi has a desperate and Joseph Toth said "it's just what we've been looking for." City officials are enthused about the proposal because it appears to satisfy one of the primary goals for development of the Town Center — to bring about a pedestrian orientation by providing residential uses adiacent to commercial areas. A number of hurdles will have to be cleared before the proposed Novi Terrace can become a reality, however. Under the current zoning ordinance, the building would not be

The planners subsequently established May 16 as the date for a public hearing to consider a request from the company to rezone the property so that construction can begin.

Mayer said the Novi Terrace is proposed on a four-acre parcel on Eleven Mile near the location where it would intersect with the ring road. The site is within the proposed ring road and is part of a 14-acre parcel owned by the company.

Mayer also said the company plans to retain ownership of the remaining 10 acres for future development. He did not say what type of development might occur on the remaining

Police chief discovers hazards of thawing ice

NOVI — The unseasonably warm weather has made ice on Walled Lake unsafe. Just ask Police Chief Lee BeGole — he fell in Monday.

"Within 100 yards of shore you're likely to go through," BeGole reported. "There are dangerous spots on the lake, especially where there have been holes. It's melting." While moving ice shantles off the lake, BeGole was dunked when he hit a soft spot on the ice. "The ice is dangerous," BeGole said. "I know I was soaked from head to foot." BeGole was rescued immediately and was wet, but unharmed, by the incident. Sergeant Mickey Knapp and Chief Wilford Hook of the Walled Lake police and BeGole were out Monday removing the shanties from the ice.

They were enforcing similar ordinances adopted in both Novi and Walled Lake that require ice shanties be removed from the ice by February 28 or when the ice becomes unsafe. After February 28, shanties can be moved onto the ice each day if the ice is sound, but must be removed each BeGole reported five shanties were removed from the ice Monday. The three officers removed shanties that appeared to be on unsound ice.

Approximately five ice shantles are still on the lake, BeGole said. One was half submerged and the three police officers felt it was unsafe to try to remove it.

BeGole indicated he would be in contact with the city attorney to determine whether a ticket should be issued to the owner of the shanty.

"We want to show them we mean business," BeGole said.

The ordinance was enacted to reduce the amount of debris in the lake left by shanties that fall through the ice. The debris creates hazards for boaters during the summer mon-

The number of people being served by the program has fluctuated slightly in the past year, but approximately 69 families now are being served on a regular basis.

Despite what appears to be an improving economy, Food Program organizers say the number of people being served is increasing.

"I'm not sure why, but we are getting more people," said Linda Crawford. "Some aren't coming as frequently as they once did, but more people are coming.1

To qualify for food, participants must be unemployed; receive ADC, welfare or minimum social security payments; or provide proof of income. All are Novi residents.

"Normally they're unemployed," said Reverend Richard Henderson of the Faith Community Presbyterian Church. "Many appear to be from single-parent homes and are frequently under-employed.

Recipients of the food have demonstrated just how much they appreciate the community's support. 'Some have come back to help us pack food after they've gotten a better job," Henderson said. Others have donated extra produce from their gardens.

With the completion of the program's first year, there has been some discussion of turning the responsibility over to someone else.

"We discussed handing it over to someone else, but we have it set up and running smoothly. There doesn't seem to be any reason to change," Crawford said.

Foster care district advised

NOVI — The city may soon face the prospect of having a foster care home for more than six persons located here. As a result, a special zoning district for foster care homes is among the alternatives being discussed to control placement of such homes.

It appears likely that Novi will be in line for one or two of the facilities which house 10-15 clients, according to plans of the Department of Social Services, City Manager Edward Kriewall said.

Residents are housed in small, apartment-building type facilities. Planning Consultant Charles Calrns advised the council to include language in its zoning ordinance which would require apartment buildings for the de-institutionalized to be 1,500 feet apart — the same standard used for foster care homes located in residential subdivisions.

City Attorney David Fried also encouraged the council to include provisions for foster care homes in the zoning ordinance, saying the city otherwise may be forced to have a home located in an area where it does not want them.

But Mayor Robert Schmid suggested the city might be inviting the location of such homes in the city by permitting them in the zoning or-

"I think we can fight where they will go when they decide to come to town," Schmid said.

Fried was not as optimistic, however. He suggested that by not including foster care homes in the zoning ordinance, the city could be accused of excluding the homes from the community, leading to placement of the homes wherever the state sees

Council Member Arlen Schroeder suggested the facilities be required to locate in the RM-2 multiple-family zoning district. No property in Novi currently is zone RM-2, although the designation ultimately will be located in the Town Center.

Schmid objected that such a plan could be detrimental to the city's plans for developing a Town Center.

The council discussed various locations in the city where foster care homes for 10 or more people could be

When Wolverine Village residents Jerry and Sheila Hooker, and their two daughters Susan, 17, and Jessica, 10, become a host family to a French student next week, communication may not be easy. But both Jessica and her mother have learned "survival" French - commony used words and expressions — and says Mrs. Hooker think we're going to manage just fine."

A township resident and developer, Kratage has had longstanding conflicts with local officials over approvals for his proposed developments.

Members of the environmental group tried to use the recall threat to coerce the board into withdrawing from the hospital discharge permit application. The withdrawal would have forced a delay in issuing the permit. Instead the board adopted a lengthy resolution, developed with Oscar Boyea of the Oakland County Health Division, outlining unresolved concerns about the treatment plant. The state Water Resources Commission, which authorizes discharge permits, refused to incorporate the resolution into the permit requirements.

The recall petition charges Long with failure to faithfully represent residents by supporting the hospital and failing to protect a drinking water supply from potential pollution. Both charges are untrue and misleading.

If the environmental group truly wants only to make sure the groundwater supply is protected, recall backed by a disgruntled developer is surely not the method for reaching its goal.

It is ironic that the residents have decided to vent their frustrations against Long. Based on his 17year tenure as supervisor it would be difficult to find a more selfless public official. weather in this state snaps. Weather forecasters call it a cold snap or a warm snap. Whatever it is usually snaps something in my cranial cavity. It means that as the temperature goes from mild to freezing, or from freezing to thaw, my sinuses begin to close up.

Within 24 hours my entire head feels as if it were twice its normal size. My eyes are little slits. And everything

This calls for emergency measures. One solution is to run hot water in the shower in order to put moisture in the air of my arid apartment. The bathroom floor usually floods, but it does put more moisture in the air

If the condition persists the next step is to boil water on the stove, drape a towel over my head, hold it over the water, then breath in the steam. This creates problems if you don't turn off the stove before breathing. I once had a roommate who set a towel on fire and nearly engulfed the kitchen in flames that way.

When this malady strikes there is usually nothing to do but lie in bed. It is during these dark hours that I become convinced I am going to die. Miserably, I lie in bed covered with blankets up to my nose and think of how very sad it would be to die all alone in my apartment. How long would it take before they figure out at work that I have died? Who will notify my parents that I have passed into the great beyond?

Frequently, as I stare at the tiny cracks in the ceiling over the bed I think of all the other sick people I know. I remember reading the story of the ships once placed offshore in San Fransico that shot germs into the air so the government could study the effects of germ warfare. And I wonder whether there is a boat parked off Belle Isle somewhere shooting influenza germs

Then there are the times I lie there thinking of life in a tropical climate; where palm trees sway gently in the warm breeze; where waves lap softly on the beach and the water glistens in the sun; where people think sinusitus is a rare insect. Usually, I'm feverish at this point.

Once when I was near death I went to a doctor who promised he had a miracle drug that would make him an instant hero in my eyes. Unfortunately, I've inherited an allergy to penicillin that prevented this doctor from acquiring heroic stature. Ten days worth of antibiotics were what he ordered, instead.

Then I started going to this heretical medical-type who thinks antibiotics are killing us. All I wanted was a handful of pills so I could breathe again. But no. This guy wants my natural immune system to do the work. He gives me an antihistamine and a bottle of cough syrup.

When the weather snapped a week ago I discovered, if one must be sick, ABC sports can make it bearable. In one afternoon, I sat huddled in an afghan, watching the pro-bowlers. gymnasts, weight lifters, the Iron Man Competition and some

In many ways the race was more inspiring than any of the Olympic events that followed. Most of these contestants were common people, rather than trained athletes. Not a brash bunch of youngsters, but people who could be your neighbors. There was a middle-aged housewife who got in the race because she wanted to be considered an athelete, rather than "lonely and divorced." She finished the race in 11 hours and 55 minutes, just five minutes before it ended. An older gentleman who had recovered from cancer gave it a shot and made it through the swim and half the biking event.

Their performances drew an emotional reaction. They worked so hard and went so far to achieve a personal goal -

Later in the week I heard more than one person who saw the contest comment: "If that old guy could get that far the least I could do is a few pushups or ride my bike everyday." Inspira-

Like the one from Teddy Bear: "Hey, macho man, be my Valentine forever."

Needless to say, I was somewhat embarrassed just from reading the Green Sheet. But that embarrassment was nothing to what I felt when I got home and started reading the Valentine ads in the Detroit News and Detroit Free

I was astonished at how many people were nice enough to send me Valentine ads through the dailies, even though they're an inferior

There must have been somewhere between 20 to 30 ads in each paper written just to me -Phil. I don't know how many there were that used pseudonyms like Honey Bear or Love Bun-

Of course, some of them were sort of offcolor ... inappropriate for a family newspaper, so I won't repeat them here.

So why am I writing this Valentine's Day column a week after Valentine's Day? The answer is simple. I just wanted to thank everyone who thought enough to send me one of those nice little messages.

It means a lot; it really does. As Mac Davis might say: "There are times when it's hard to be humble"

Viking five plagued by injuries

By DIC DOUMANIAN news sports writer

If it's true that when it rains, it pours, than Walled Lake Central basketball coach Steve Emert must feel like he's standing under Niagara

The Vikings are in the midst of a three-game losing streak and will go into Thursday's opening round of the WLAA playoffs without starters Rob Gardner and Tom Cummings.

"We're going in a little undermanned." said Emert, referring to Thursday's game at Walled Lake Western.
"But I know I'm going to put five players out there who are going to give it everything they've got."

Gardner and Cummings won't be part of that starting five. Gardner, who was averaging 13.8 points per game when he was hurt on January 17 — against Stevenson — just had the cast taken off his ankle and will not be back for at least another week. Cummings, the team's top scorer with a 16.5 per game average, hurt his knee last week and is doubtful until the district tourney begins in early

Central shot only 34 percent from the floor in falling to Stevenson 67-41. The Vikings did even worse against Salem, canning just 30 percent of their shots during a 56-39 defeat. The 41 and 39 point totals are the two lowest of the season for Central. Chris Owens and Scott Norris were Central's top scorers in the two losses, scoring 12 and 10 points respectively in each contest.

"We knew it was going to be tough going in (to the last three game)," stated Emert, whose team now sports a 11-6 record and finished third n the Lakes Division of the WLAA "We can't change completely (because of the injuries). We have to look at it positively and go in thinking we can win each game. Realistically. our season starts again March 5."

Novi dumped Lakeland 52-49 on Tuesday — the first time they've beaten the Eagles on their home court. It was a nip-and-tuck battle all the way, as Novi's biggest margin the whole night was seven points in the third quarter. The Eagles whittled the lead to two with eight seconds remaining, then after the 6-3 senior had hauled down a defensive rebound. James canned the front end of a one-and-one to give Novi an insurmountable three-point Guard Greg Prost had the hot hand for the Wildcats, collecting 17 points in his biggest night ever. Canton whips Warriors

The battle of the basketball tribes - Walled Lake Western's Warriors and Plymouth Canton's Chiefs turned out to be a game the Warriors would just as soon forget as Canton forged a decisive 61-41 victory. The game ended a very productive regular season for the 1984 Warrior cage team which registered the first winning record (9-8 overall and 7-6 in Western Lakes Activities Association play) in the history of the school. And, according to Coach Walt Boehm, they have a good chance in the WLAA playoffs that begin Friday. Western and Canton ended up in a first-place tie in the WLAA's Western Division with identical 6-2 records. The Chiefs are 13-4 overall. "We play (Walled Lake) Central in our first playoff game," said Boehm. "That will be another tough game. "It's hard to tell what we'll do in post-season," he added. "If we lay down, we're dead. I haven't lost confidence
