Novi voters back Reagan's re-election bid

NOVI — For Novi voters the decision was no different than the rest of the nation — it was overwhelmingly Ronald Reagan for president.

Unofficial results show Reagan took 8,584 of the votes cast locally and Democratic challenger Walter Mondale received only 2,741 votes.

Despite statewide results, Novi voters wanted Republican Jack Lousma for U.S. Senate. Lousma took 6.568 votes compared with incumbent Carl Levin who received Local voters barely defeated the tax rollback measure. Proposal C, with 4,723 voting against it and 4,428 voting in favor of it.

Nearly 70 percent of the city's registered voters made it to the polls. Approximately 11,452 of the city's 16,459 registered voters cast ballots in Tuesday's election.

City Clerk Geraldine Stipp said the high voter turnout was evenly spread throughout the day at most polling

Citizens arrived early for voting

NOVI - It was all over early. During the last hour of polling in yesterday's election, there were no lines. In fact, there were almost no voters. They all cast their ballots early.

"The only time voters waited was early this morning," reported Precinct Six Chairperson Ann

It was a long day for precinct workers who arrived at the polls at 6 a.m. to find voters lined up outside the fire station, waiting to cast their ballots.

Outside Precinct Three at the Novi Library, Bethany Waite was working the polls for Oakland County Commission candidate John Calandro. Wearing a blue apron with sewn on bumper stickers. Waite ended six. cold hours of election-day work, sitting at the end of the sidewalk under the shor lights. A senior at Novi High School, Waite is six months too young o vote, but old enough to get involin a political campaign. "I've learned a lot about the different candidates," she said. "I had some ideas about politics that have been confirmed.

Waite said she learned about her candidate while walking door to door with him to distribute campaign literature. Waite's involvement began as a school project, but she says she enjoyed her participation enough to do it again. Why is she working for Calandro?

"He's a Republican and he lives in our subdivision," she said. A lone voter outside Precinct Nine at the high school auditorium reflected on the election. Linda Crawford said she always votes in elections, but felt this one was particularly important because of the tax-cutting measure, Proposal C.

"I feel strongly that Proposal C should be defeated because of the drastic ramifications it will have throughout the state, not to mention the colleges and universities," Crawford said. "I know from personal experience that Wayne State would face drastic cutbacks.'

Crawford said she was pleasantly surprised to find she did not have to wait at the polls to cast her ballot. Regarding the presidential election, Crawford expressed mixed "The choice for president was a difficult one," Crawford said. "It's hard to argue against the kind of seeming peace and prosperity the country is experiencing, even though it seems like a fragile one. ## MEAP scores continue to climb

NOVI - Would you believe the scores registered by Novi students on the Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP) are still going up?

After establishing their best scores ever on the MEAP tests last year, Novi students have done it again exceeding even the levels attained on the 1983 tests.

Once again, fourth graders led the way, scoring 97.3 in mathematics and 94.7 in reading. The mathematics score was up slightly from the 1983 score of 96.7, but the reading score (94.7) actually marked a slight decline from the 1983 score of 95.7. It was the only area in which the scores registered by this year's students declined from last year's levels.

School officials were most excited by the performance of this year's seventh graders. The only disappointing area on last year's test was in seventh grade where students scored 66.7 in mathematics and 86.4 in reading.

This year's seventh graders improved dramatically in both areas, however, registering scores of 90.9 in mathematics (up 24.2 points from 1983 levels) and 96.5 in reading (up 10.1 points from 1983 levels).

This year's tenth graders also showed a marked improvement over 1983 levels, scoring 88.9 in mathematics (up 6.9 points from the 82.0 registered last year) and 93.7 in reading (up 2.3 points from the 1983 score of 91.4). The 1984 MEAP results marked the first time in history that Novi students have scored in the 90th percentile in five of the six categories in the testing program — reading and math at the fourth, seventh and tenth grade levels.

Novi students had three scores in the 90th percentile on the 1983 test and just one score in the 90th percentile in each of the previous three years (1982, 1981 and 1980). Results of the 1984 MEAP program were presented by Superintendent Robert Piwko at the November 1 school board meeting and were greeted with rave reviews by board members.

Trustee Joan Daley called the results "remarkable," while Trustee Gilbert Henderson said they were "exceptionally good."

Daley recommended that the board send a letter of congratulations to staff members and the superintendent for overseeing the educational program. Henderson said the test scores must be particularly rewarding to the staff which has worked hard to improve student achieve-

Henderson, who is principal of a middle school in the Farmington School District, noted that he's been working with the MEAP program for 15 years. "I've had some very bright student bodies over the years, but I've never seen seventh graders perform in the areas of fractions and metric measurements like the Novi seventh graders did this year." he commented.

Here's a summary of Novi's 1983 MEAP results:

□ At the fourth grade level, 97.3 percent of the students mastered 75-100 percent of the mathematics objectives. This compares with 96,7 percent in 1983, 84.3 percent in 1982 and 89.8 percent in 1981.

Deer, car crashes increase during autumn

NOVI — Within the last two weeks, nine deer have been struck by automobiles on Novi streets.

The deer death toll climbed following a rash of car/deer collisions October 31. Three deer were killed Halloween night on Ten Mile between Taft and Beck Road. They were killed within a 40-minute period and within a 400-foot area, reported Sergeant Charles Brown of the Novi Police

The nine deer struck in the past two weeks neluded two bucks, five does and two deer which escaped. So far none of the drivers have been injured in the collisions. But one off-duty Novi police officer was slightly injured when he was moving a deer from the road. He dropped the buck and an antier went through his toe, requiring several stitches.

Police are warning motorists to be cautious, particularly at night, when driving past fields or wooded areas. Deer were struck on Grand River, on Ten Mile west of Wixom Road and on Novi Road betwen Nine and Ten Mile. Police report deer also have been struck by motorists in northern Novi.

Brown reported the high incidence of collisions with deer is occuring because this is mating season for deer. When one deer chases another, he will "throw caution to the wind" and could run in front of an automobile, Brown

The mating season for deer lasts through December. Brown explained if a doe is not bred during the early part of mating season she will come back into heat. A doe will go into heat three times before it goes unbred for the

During daylight drivers can see signs of deer before they run across the road by watching fields. After dark it is likely the deer will simply jump out in front of the car without warning, Brown said.

"To make it bigger would be to make it unsuitable for instructional uses," commented Diane Rose Skinner, spokesperson for airport owners laggerty and Kowall. "We bought he airport for instructional uses. This (expansion) issue has been dead or some time."

Haggerty and Kowall operates R. Helicopters, an instructional elicopter school, at Spencer Airport. The firm leased the 50-acre airport from the Alexander Hamilton Insurance Company for two years, serving as the on-site operator. "We decided to exercise our option to purchase the airport. We would rather not say the price," Skinner said. "We didn't buy the airport to expand it. We aren't interested in expanding it. It is perfect for our needs

Alexander Hamilton purchased the airport in the mid-1970s from Lillian Spencer, who later served as mayor. Airport Study Committee Chairman Wayne Glessner agreed with Brown's assessment of the airport expansion obstacles. "I agree that there was a problem moving this project ahead. This started as an alternative for economic expansion. Glessner said. "The airport would have become a utility to complement the railroad and freeway. We need to diversify the tax base."

The proposed expansion, which was to include additional runways to allow small jet traffic, was under study for more than three years. Environmental issues and concerns over the possible annexation of township lands contributed to the difficulty in finalizing the expansion

In a world where people have to face a nuclear arms race, wars in various parts of the world, hunger, unemployment and other major crises daily, it is only reasonable to expect small things to function properly. People gear up for major problems and often overcome them. It's those minor irritants that will push someone over the edge every time.

After having had a rather rough couple weeks recently. I was planning to spend a peaceful weekend. On Sunday morning I went to the laundromat. That was my first mistake.

The place was crowded, but I found available washing machines immediately. When I went to the dryers only two were unused. The first load went in, no problem. The second load went in just fine, but the machine was broken and wouldn't take coins

It was an irritating situation. One expects coin-operated equipment to function correctly. Not an unreasonable expectation, I think. The only virtue to using the laundromat is being able to wash and dry everything simultaneously. Take away that benefit, add a large crowd of people with yelling children, and you have one of life's minor irritations. Suddenly another dryer was unoccupied and I pounced on it. Things were looking up. I was mistaken. This dryer kept running on short ther into the washing machine. In picking up the clothes from the basket and setting them into the dryer, I had also thrown in my purse. Naturally the purse was open so the contents were strewn throughout the dryer.

There had not been sufficient heat to dry the clothes. However, it was plenty hot enough to melt lipstick and gum; powerful enough to break a mirror and several ink pens and pencils. I am now an inkstained wretch in every sense of the phrase. My entire wardrobe, meager though it is, looks like Jackson Pollack designer clothes.

I was working hard to maintain some perspective on the whole situation. My first inclination was to get a 12-gauge and blow the dryer away. Or maybe blow up the laundromat. I mean I never would have gotten my purse mixed in with the clothes if I hadn't been forced tomove from that original faulty dryer.

I was sick about the cruel blow dealt to my clothes as I went to my car. I loaded the baskets into the car when I made another discovery. My ignition key was now bent at a right angle. Naturally I was unable to start the car. The keys had been in the purse, which went through the dryer... It wasn't even noon yet. I saw a long day looming ahead of me. I pondered walking home to get the spare ignition key. It goes without saying that it was raining. I decided to patiently bend the key back into

To deal with the ink crisis, I tried soaking a blouse in the bathroom sink while I went out. When I returned, I heard a loud dripping noise. The sink plug usually lets the water drain. Not today. The faucets never drip, expect for the odd day when the plug holds. With a sinking feeling I turned on the bathroom light. Bad news - the sink overflowed. Good news - the floor wasn't flooded. More bad news - my cat's litter box caught the water, I didn't have more litter and the A&P closed five minutes earlier. I could see it was going to be a long night.

They've been teiling us for months that Reagan has an insurmountable lead. That Mondale might as well cash in his chips and avoid running up excessive campaign expenses ... because he doesn't have a chance anyway. Everybody screamed four years ago when Things are so bad that Reagan isn't even campaigning for himself anymore ... he's out stumping for other Republicans. Telling people to vote for Jack Lousma and Tom Ritter so he can have the support he needs in the Senate and House to get his programs passed.

So Yogi was wrong when he said it ain't over till it's over. This one was over before it even started.

The only problem is that the pollsters have offended my sense of what democratic elections are all about. As I type the last paragraph. of this column, I'm toying with the idea of casting my vote for Mondale/Ferraro. Except voting out of spite isn't what democratic elections are about either.

AMERICAN FOUNDRYMEN'S SOCIETY (AFS) has signed a contract confirming Cobo Hall in Detroit as the site of the Society's

Booth said Detroit is the center of the automotive industry, and the casting and foundry industry is a great part of it. "It is only fitting that the AFS show be held here,'' he said.

The 1987 show will be international in scope with exhibitors from all of Europe participating in an AFS convention and exposition for the first time. AFS first met in Detroit in 1897, one year after the convention bureau was formed, and last meet here in 1978.

Novi turnovers help Mustangs to 34-15 victory

By B.J. MARTIN news sports writer

NOVI — Not very many people gave Coach John Osborne's Wildcats much of a chance to beat Northville After all, Novi took a meager 1-7 record into the season-ending rivalry, while the mighty Mustangs were riding the crest of a 6-2 season. But there's something about playing Northville which appeals to Osborne and the Wildcat gridders. And even though the Mustangs finally prevailed, Novi definitely gave Northville a couple of Halloween worthy scares. Northville defeated the Wildcats 34-15, but take it from Northville Coach Dennis Colligan: "Novi had us pretty worried for a while there. They're very quick on defense and they came at us with a lot of different-type plays."

Of course, a pass would have qualified as a "different-type play" nected with Shankel for a two-point for Northville. The Mustangs attempted nine and completed exactly two. Meanwhile, Novi quarterback Jeff Tanderys came up slinging, completing 13 of 36 passes for 160 yards against a Mustang secondary that field. The Mustangs defense toughenseemed in a constant "prevent"

Novi scored the first touchdown in each half. Early in the second quarter, fullback Kirk Shaw bounced n from the one shortly after Tanderys hit Sinclair for a 32-yard Wildcats a 7-3 lead. But Northville roared back with a game.

conversion, and suddenly the Wildcats were one field goal away from upsetting the Mustangs. It wasn't to be, despite two posses sions deep in Northville's half of the ed up when it needed to, and Northville picked up a pair of touchdown runs from halfback Rick Van Buren, who rushed for 170 yards. The loss to Northville dropped Novi's record to 1-8 and squared the annual Novi-Northville rivalry series

EQUIPMENT SALE: If you have any used sports and/or recreation equipment you want to sell, bring it to the Novi Community Building on Friday. December

The Novi Parks and Recreation Department will hold its annual "Used Sports and Recreation Equipment Sale" at the Community Building on Saturday, December 8, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Those unable to report Friday night may register Saturday from 8-9 a.m.

The seller sets the price of the items, and the Parks and Rec Department retains 15 percent of the price of all items sold. All equipment must be in reasonably good condition; the Parks and Recreation staff reserves the right to refuse unusable items. Parks and Rec Director Thomas O'Branovic noted that the annual sale is a good way for sportsmen to sell unwanted equipment and a good way for others to obtain equipment in good condition at bargain prices. For more information call Parks and Rec at 349-1976. LIONS GAME: The Novi Parks and Rec Department is sponsoring a trip to the Lions' Monday night football game against the world champion Los Angeles Raiders on Monday, December 10. Tickets are priced at $24 per person, which includes a burger, fries and drink at the Goat Farm, refreshments on the bus, ticket to the game and transportation to the Silverdome via bus.

The group will meet at the Goat Farm Tayern at 6:15 p.m. The bus leaves at 7 p.m. Tickets are available by calling Novi Parks and Recreation at 349-1976. The trip is being offered in conjunction with the Goat Farm Tavern.

mericans are rediscovering their downtowns. They are attracted by the character of Main Street and the personal touch offered by its people. And cities, villages and townships are responding to that attraction by revitalizing their downtowns — dusting off those long neglected businesses and shops and discovering the timeless jewels beneath.

In this special section published by Sliger-Livingston Publications, we look at downtown revitalization projects in seven Oakland County communities - Milford, South Lyon, Walled Lake, Wixom, Davisburg, Lake Orion and Oxford. Perhaps by looking at what others are doing, communities with a desire to create their own downtown renaissance can do so with vigor and confidence.

For communities that need help getting their main streets in order. Robert Terry is a one-man downtown revitalization team.

"I type, do windows and even empty ash trays," Terry joked about his status as the sole member of his department in the community assistance division of the Michigan Department of Commerce.

It's a small department with a wide scope. In his role as Michigan Main Street Program coordinator, Terry is available to help any community that asks for assistance with downtown revitalizations.

The Michigan Main Street Program was born out of the National Main Street Center, set up in 1977 as a human resource and technical reference center to stimulate economic development within the context of historic preservation. The initial historic focus grew to a more comprehensive strategy for economic revitalization that emphasized both existing and historic assets in the nation's main streets. The establishment of the National Trust in 1980 made the program more widely available to states and towns seeking to renew their older central business districts.

Fourteen states now receive oneon-one technical assistance from the National Main Street Center. Nine Michigan cities are now committed to a full three-year Main Street pro-

Terry described it as a "self-help" program, requiring active participation and a demonstrated commitment of people and resources from the involved community.

"We don't create goals they're not willing to achieve," Terry said. "It's really up to them (the communities). If they don't want to do it, it's not going to happen."

For communities that are worried about losing their historicallysignificant structures, Terry helps build a team to find out what it would take to save a building, or an entire

The elements to the program are organization, promotion, design and economic restructuring.

For organization, a team of representatives of all downtown factions — the chamber of commerce, merchants association, shoppers, schools, churches, lending institutions — is needed, a unified group, made up of members who are 'representative and responsive,

Terry said. Next, the downtown needs to be promoted as a place to work, shop and live. This includes promoting specific product lines of local merchants, and letting people know what's available.

"You're not going to get bodies down unless they know what's there," Terry said.

An enjoyable downtown environment means adequate, clearly marked parking, compatible signage, landscaping, restoration and attractive window displays. At this point, the Main Street Program provides technical assistance with merchandising and distribution.

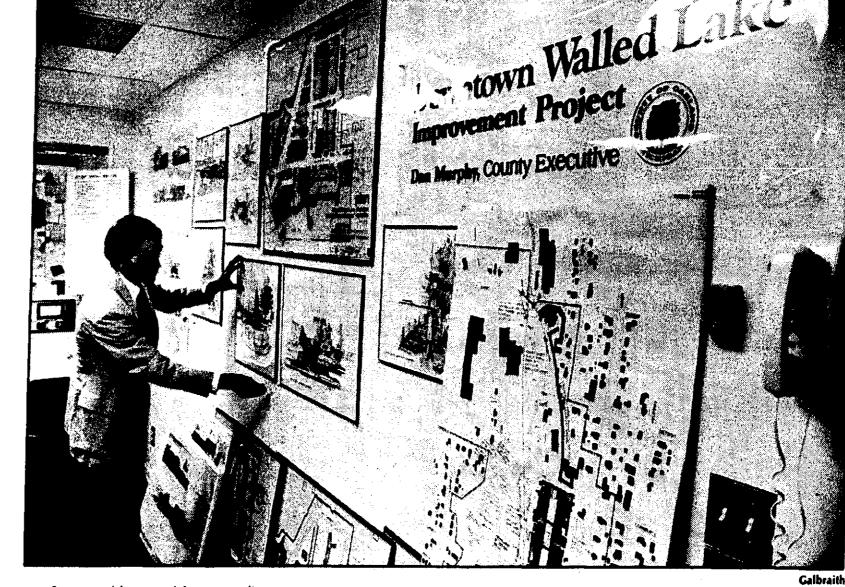

A last vital element is economic restructuring. Many communities desire new sewers, modern public transportation and a planter full of flowers on every corner, but the revitalization must be accomplished in a way that pays for itself.

"Once you've got a nice environment, let's make sure it pays the bill," Terry explained. "You need a good economic mix that meets the demands of the customer. The municipality needs revenue from property taxes. Merchants need revenue from goods."

All interested communities must show their commitment by hiring a full-time project manager, selected by the municipality. A three-year program commitment is also required. After that commitment is made, the Main Street coordinator trains the project manager and coaches the community advisory committee about the program. Details on facade design, signage, renovation, capital improvements, street furniture and promotion are all available.

Available financial help includes Michigan Historic Division grants for structure inventories and for analyzing compatible uses. State block grants, small business assistance and community job development authority funds are also accessible.

For the folks at the Oakland County Planning Division, they can just about bet that every time they go into a community to help revamp its appearance, parking will be a problem.

"Parking is the biggest issue," said Deborah Schutt, the staff's regional review liason. The planning division is available to help Oakland County communities get their plans down on paper, for those times when they want to do something to their downtown, but they don't know

"If a community comes in and says, 'we know exactly what we want, we want brick pavement every three feet down the sidewalk, we want wrought iron planters, we want locust trees,' we say, 'well, you know what you want, go to the private sector and have them draw it up for you.", said Schutt.

Since the planning division's role is to make recommendations and offer assistance, not to lay down the law, they manage to escape some of the

"What we do is conceptual, it's not specific design, and that's what people get upset about," Schutt added. "It's not like we walk in and say, 'we're going to eliminate three spaces in front of this store.' We're not on the firing line in that instance."

Communities desiring planning assistance have to follow some unwritten rules to get help from the planning division's 10 different departments.

First, the community must be truly in need of direction. Usually the municipalities that approach the division cannot afford to hire a planning consultant.

Milford contributed $990 to the expenses of its downtown revitalization plan, barely covering the true cost.

The division takes on one downtown development project at a time, occupying two staff members. Lawrence Falardeau and Russell Lewis, with Schutt acting as liaison.

The capabilities of the division include land resource, census and real estate data generation and distribution, property description, general mapping and aerial photography. It usually takes a year before the plan is finalized, with plenty of community input and opportunity for revisions along the way. Smaller local assistance projects take a few mon-

After the initial resolution is passed, a representative of the community sits down with county planners to talk about the focus of the project: the streetscape, building facades, parking and signage are typical problem areas.

Then an objective sheet is filled out including a description of the cost, end product and steps to get to the goal from beginning to end. The objectives are then brought back to the community for confirmation that what it's receiving is what was asked

"We don't proceed until everyone agrees," Schutt said.

Next, the boundaries of the project are determined, which includes an inventory, analysis and recommendation. Traffic flow, accident location, conflict between pedestrians and vehicles, the number of sidewalks, utility lines, street furniture, signage, posters, window displays, building ages, architectural merit, building condition and recommended treatment are all included. The final result is a downtown improvement program document, including visuals on each building, street, and element of the plan, from all directions — even from the sky.

Next, the prospective patron must be willing to pick up part of the costs of planning materials. "The reason

we ask for that is sometimes people

Milford may need a facelift more than it needs major redevelopment.

The historic qualities of this village of 5,000 — which sits astride the Huron River about 30 miles from Ann Arbor, Flint and Detroit — are the basic building blocks for revitalization

And, by restoring the historic character of its Main Street buildings, Milford could be saving its economic future as well.

Those conclusions are coming from Oakland County planners as well as from members of the local business community.

The facelift could mean removing trim, siding or other details added to the old buildings to make them look modern. It might also mean planning new work in a way that fits into the overall look of Main Street.

Almost four years ago, with its business community threatened by competition from area malls and shopping centers, the Milford Chamber of Commerce called on the village to set up a Downtown Development Authority.

"The purpose was economic stabilization of the downtown area," Village Manager Bruce Pothoff recalled

Two years later, a 12-member DDA was authorized and first met in January 1983. Its $5,000 budget came from three sources: $2,000 from Milford Township, $2,000 from Milford Village and $1,000 from the Chamber of Commerce.

One of the first steps was to seek help from the Oakland County Planning Division, which takes on about one new downtown revitalization project each year, according to its director, Phil Dondero.

"We had to wait in line for one year," Pothoff recalled. "But the same service would cost in excess of $50,000 from a consulting firm." With Oakland County planners, Milford will pay only for materials — about $2,000 to $3,000.

While they waited, the DDA put together basic information needed by the county. Boundaries were set, all properties in the area were photographed and a survey of residents and business people completed.

Tax assessment data on all DDA property was compiled and copies of research by an earlier Historic District Survey Committee were added to the growing files of informa-

Those files show approximately 70 percent of Main Street commercial property was built between 1870 and 1899, and clearly represents the style of that period. The remaining 30 percent is a mixture, with at least one building dating to 1845.

Preliminary streetscape designs by architect Russell Lewis and landscape architect Larry Falardeau of the county planning division are expected by late October, a January meeting will give merchants a chance to say what they think of the ideas, and a final report is due by March 1985.

"The idea is to retain the intrinsic quality of the commercial community — its age and character," Lewis said. "That means cleaning brick, restoring missing trim. We need to consider colors used and signage."

consider colors used and signage."

Lewis thinks there are some areas that should be made more public. "The possibilities with water, that's what makes Milford unusual. The ponds, the streams — those should be given back to the people."

November 7, 1984

The DDA wants to hire a coordinating architect to aid merchants who choose to follow the county's suggestions. By using county designs and a DDA architect, facelift costs would be reduced.

Pothoff said it is too early to judge reactions to the DDA. "Most reactions will be delayed until there is something to see — that will come later," Pothoff predicted.

Meanwhile, several major downtown projects have been carried out by independent owners:

• The expansion of the Appe'teaser Restaurant, with its strong commitment to historic detail, is credited by many observers as a key influence on other Main Street development.

• First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Oakland doubled its space, with a new facade to tie two buildings together.

• From two old stores, Paul Borlace created Village Center Mall, a 140,000-square-foot retail space for 13 shops on three levels. Expected to have a major impact on village business, the first shops are due to open by November 1.

 New business openings showed the growing vigor of retail business along Main Street, after several years of empty storefronts. Bright, successful shopowners took hold with new ideas about merchandising that seem to be influencing their neighbors.

Pothoff credits Tom Motley, owner of the Arms Brothers Store for Men, as "the driving force behind the merchant group."

Besides Motley, whose shop is a Michigan Centennial Business founded in 1837, DDA current members are Bill Allen, Sally Cape, Roy Danley, Charles Hutton, Susan Kauppila, Phil Magaluk, Chris Smith

The Milford DDA is advisory only. All proposals, such as a recent recommendation to close a section of Center Street at Main and change to angle parking on Union Street, must be approved by the village council.

and Pothoff as executive director.

Ironically, DDA members predict the success of Main Street's new shopping areas may mean a new problem — not enough parking.

South Lyon's history is evident in its buildings (above and below right). And much of that history is preserved by its merchants, like Gretchen and Dallas Phillips (far right).

By CINDY HOOGASIAN

South Lyon's commercial revitalization program began in 1977 as a joint effort between the South Lyon Area Chamber of Commerce, the city council and planning commission.

As in most small towns, financial resources to launch a comprehensive analysis of the central business district's (CBD) problems were scarce. So, then-city manager Alan Housler turned to the Oakland County Planning Division for professional assistance

Playing the major role in developing the South Lyon Experience, as the study is named, was Russell Lewis, an associate planner and architect with Oakland County.

Downtown merchants recognized the need to revitalize the central business district "to make it more attractive to shoppers and to increase the profits of all businesses," according to a 1977 letter written by former chamber president Steve Showerman. They formed a Central Business District Theme Committee to lay the groundwork for a revitilization effort. Lewis and his assistants studied South Lyon's downtown, with the goal of restoring and enhancing the original architectural qualities of CBD buildings. The city also removed the overhead wires and adopted a sign ordinance which required new signs to be flush-mounted on building fronts.

Improved pedestrian ways were also incorporated in the plan. Housler secured Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) employees to lay the concrete sidewalks in a boardwalk-style.

Aiding in the effort to create a warm and inviting downtown atmosphere was Michigan Seamless Tube, South Lyon's largest and oldest industry. The company donated $3,000 worth of steel poles to support old-fashioned street lights. Sharing the cost of the fixtures were the chamber of commerce, which donated $7,000, and the city.

New street furniture, including park benches and 50 planter boxes, have been placed strategically throughout the central business district. Future plans for public improvements include installation of a drinking fountain, development of a neighborhood park and more streetlights near the landmark South Lyon Hotel, according to Department of Public Works Director Bruce Jesome.

Current City Manager Rodney Cook is interested in continuing efforts to restore the downtown area of this city of about 5,200. He recently passed the word that Oakland County has low-interest commercial rehabilitation loans available. Cook is encouraging owners to investigate the eight-percent loans to help stabilize the heart of South Lyon.

Many merchants embraced the earlier facade study and immediately began restoration of their buildings. Money for rehabilitation work was made available by The State Savings Bank of South Lyon. Former bank president E. Everett Perkins offered loans of up to $5,000 for five-year terms at seven percent interest.

Central to the facade study theme is the removal of defacing materials from original store fronts. South Lyon Pharmacy owner Norm Somers had his store's brick facing cleaned, installed redwood around the doorway and decking around the building's south side. Like most other downtown businesses, Somers placed an awning across the entryway, bearing the name of his store.

Somers said he is pleased with the store's appearance, which he feels helped create renewed interest in shopping downtown.

Phillip's Travel is another downtown establishment which took the facade study seriously. Gretchen Phillips said she and her husband

Dallas have phased-in many improvements in compliance with the Oakland County study.

"It (the study) gave us a great deal of direction," she remarked. "We tore down the front of the building, which was a '50s model with aluminum siding, about five years ago. That revealed the original brick. We have done interior remodeling throughout the building. We installed the awnings a few years ago, which made the building a great deal nicer to look at."

Phillips said they received several encouraging notes from city residents "saying what a nice improvement it

The Letzring-Atchison Insurance Agency, another downtown firm, also underwent significant rehabilitation, said partner Fred Atchison.

"I think before any renovation is done in the central business district, owners should consider restoring the building to the way it was," Atchison said. "It will restore uniformity to the downtown."

Perhaps the most extensive renovations were undertaken by Glenn and Mae Hoots. Glenn was a city council member in 1977 and Mae was active in promoting the CBD rehabiliation.

The Hootses deviated from the county study by installing a mansard roof, which subsequently gained popularity in the CBD. Renovations to their building, which includes three second-story apartments, were very costly, Mae said. Most of the Hootses' renovations were completed before the county study was adopted, but the overall effect blends in well with the downtown theme.

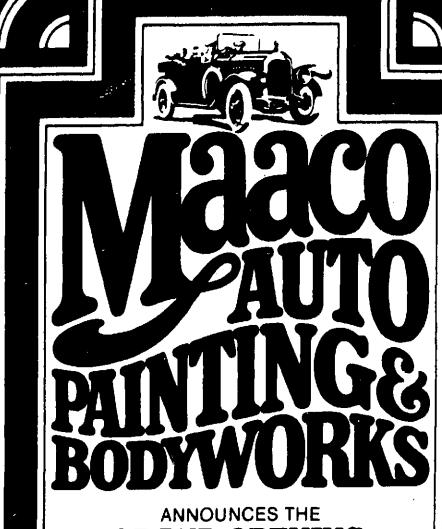

"The merchants were receptive to the plan," Mae remarked, "but there was and still is a problem with absentee landlords. They don't want to invest in their rental properties."

Glenn also remarked on the need for all downtown patrons and business people to be concerned with the cleanliness of the area. Litter, untidy sidewalks and dirty storefronts detract from the downtown image, he observed. "Clean-up, fix-up is always a help," he said.

Although central business district merchants were enthusiastic about the facade study and subsequent improvements, the effort was not the economic boon they had anticipated.

While improvements to the CBD were on-going, so was the development of a new shopping center at the south end of town. The new facility offered plenty of well-lit, free parking and the convenience of mall shopp-

"We didn't realize what an impact the shopping center was going to be," Mae Hoots explained. "I still think the CBD can be revitalized. We have to get some active businesses in here to begin with . . . If you offer people what they want at a fair market price, you'll get business."

Offering a source of hope for an attractive draw is the Wixom Co-op (above). New planters and lights (far right) also brighten Wixom's streets.

The old saying about not being able to make silk purses from sow's ears at one time would have seemed appropriate to Wixom, a small community with a population of approximately 6,500 in southwest Oakland County

Located off the 1-96 expressway, Wixom's primary claim to fame is as the site of a Ford Motor Company assembly plant. Plant workers travel 1-96 to the Wixom exit and pull into Ford's huge Lincoln-Mercury complex, rarely having cause to proceed into the small downtown area approximately one mile north of the expressway.

With little pressure for commercial expansion from the outside, the downtown exists primarily for the benefit of local residents in the pleasant subdivisions north of the central business district.

Almost as long as Wixom has been a city (26 years), local officials have talked about the need for improving the downtown area. Unfortunately, the obstacles have been significant.

Not the least of the problems is the fact that the central business district is bisected by two major thoroughfares, a main line of the C&O railroad and a branch of the Grand Trunk Railroad.

Particularly nettlesome is the C&O railroad crossing, which effectively divides the central business district in half, running diagonally through the prime intersection of Wixom Road and Pontiac Trail. The conflict of rail, highway and business district activity has had a significant impact on limiting commercial growth.

There are other problems as well.

A mix of industrial, residential and commercial land uses in the downtown area have prohibited the establishment of a commercial orientation. And the downtown also is beset with several deteriorating buildings which create an unsightly atmosphere.

The opening of a major regional shopping center — Twelve Oaks Mall — just a few miles away in Novi in 1977 also impeded the city's potential for commercial growth.

Perhaps not coincidental to the opening of Twelve Oaks, Wixom's downtown revitalization efforts began in 1977.

Two questions that have been asked by Wixom officials throughout the city's history are "What are we going to do about the downtown area?" and "What can we do about the railroad tracks?"

Consequently, various administrations have initiated the preparation of various planning studies dating back to 1963 when a ring-road concept was proposed as a solution to the traffic problems in the downtown area.

But, as former mayor Lillian Spencer once said, the downtown area is like the weather — everybody talks about it but nobody does anything about it.

The first positive action toward improving the central business district came in 1977 when the city purchased the Korex Company property on the northeast corner of the Pontiac

Trail/Wixom Road intersection. "Eyesore" may be too kind a word to apply to the dilapidated building and ramshackle two-story storage tanks which dominated the downtown street scape.

The soap factory was subsequently leveled, and the property remained vacant until sold by the city to Community National Bank, which constructed a new branch office on the corner in 1983.

Progress since that time has remained slow but steady. A major problem has been financing. Under Stephen Bonczek, who served as mayoral assistant from 1978 through 1983, the city applied for numerous grants through such agencies as the Michigan History Division and the Oakland County Overall Economic Program.

Invariably, the applications fell just short of eligibility cut-off levels, and the city turned instead to such sources as Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Funds and Home Rehabilitation Funds.

After a grant request from the Michigan History Division was turned down in 1979, the city dug into its own coffers to hire a consultant to prepare a study of historically-significant structures in the downtown area.

In the meantime, Housing Rehabilitation funds were used to upgrade a residence near the downtown area for conversion into what is now the Wixom Professional Office Building. Home Rehab funds also were utilized to help a local businessman, Jack Hickox, restore his 122-year-old building in the downtown area.

November 7, 1984

Beginning in 1981 the city began allocating its CDBG funds for downtown development. Some $20,000 in CDBG funds were allocated for downtown improvements in 1981, another $22,000 was added in 1982 and $40,000 were allocated to the downtown area in 1983.

The accumulated CDBG funds have helped the city move into the first phase of its downtown redevelopment project, the construction of sidewalks and streetlighting.

Acquisition of easements to install the sidewalks were initiated early in 1983, but even that has been a slow process. Although nine of 11 easements were acquired with relative ease, two merchants balked and the easements were finally acquired through litigation only recent-

Still the sidewalks have been constructed and street lamps installed.
And Wixom's downtown area is beginning to show gradual signs of improvement.

In a further effort to acquire funding for additional improvements, the city in 1983 established a Downtown Development Authority (DDA) composed of municipal officials, merchants and residents. The DDA subsequently established a DDA District, including 12 commercial and 25 single-family residences, and established a Tax Increment Financing (TIF) program within the affected area.

The TIF freezes property assessments at current levels. Revenues generated by increases in assessments within the district are "captured" by the DDA and utilized to fund additional public improvements.

Despite the railroad tracks, dilapidated edifices and strange mix of office, residential and commercial uses, efforts to revitalize the Wixom downtown area are moving forward.

Streets and sidewalks have been paved, and public eyesores have been acquired and demolished. But there's much more to be done. The city is looking to acquire and demolish additional buildings, create more parking and continue its cosmetic improvements through additional plantings and street furniture.

The existence of the Wixom Co-op and its grain elevators offers a source of hope that it can be converted into something truly unusual — a "draw" that will bring shoppers from other communities. City officials are hopeful that establishment of the DDA will provide the financing needed to help the city along the path toward significantly more improvements in the downtown area.

In 1981 the City of Walled Lake joined the growing number of cities in southeast Michigan seeking to improve its economic condition through downtown revitalization.

Walled Lake has the distinction of having the only municipal downtown on a waterfront in Oakland County. The small district prospered in the 1920s, with Walled Lake being Detroit's nearest large lake. A glamorous dance hall and an amusement park kept the crowds coming year-round and put Walled Lake on the map.

But the attraction slowly dwindled, as first the dance hall and then the amusement park grew quiet. Both landmarks eventually were lost by fire.

With the arrival of department stores and supermarkets in the 1950s, the business center of Walled Lake shifted to Maple Road a few blocks to the north, leaving the remaining businesses in the historic lakefront downtown struggling to survive. "Revitalization" of this area not only would involve building and street improvements, but a renewed interest in, and dedication to, the lakefront downtown.

In 1981 city officials began the effort by commissioning the Oakland County Planning Division to conduct a downtown planning study under the county's "Partners in Planning" program. The study, which cost the city approximately $750 and took five months to complete, served as the catalyst for downtown improvements and has become the city's road map for revitalizing the waterfront business district.

"Our philosophy has been for the city to put its best foot forward. Then others will see the commitment from the city and do likewise," said City Manager J. Michael Dornan.

To stir enthusiasm in the proposed downtown improvements, the city council appropriated approximately $122,000 for repaying East Walled Lake Drive and another $65,000 for improving Liberty Street, including repaying, new curbs and gutters, sidewalks and streetscaping.

The street repavings succeeded in sparking incentive among downtown merchants to begin their own improvements. The county provided ideas for low-cost building renovations and, in some cases, financial assistance for completing those renovations. In the end, merchants were able to begin improvements that many of them might not have been able to accomplish without the help of the city and the county.

A low-interest renovation loan through the Pontiac State Bank was the incentive Bob Stone, owner of the Detroit News building, needed to go ahead with refacing the brick building on the corner of Walled Lake Drive and Liberty Street. Across the street, the World of Wood Heat arrived at its Walled Lake Drive location in December 1981. County planners assisted the owners with the design and color of the new building front for the former D&R Auto World

The resurfacing of West Walled Lake Drive was the city's second major contribution to the downtown revitalization efforts. The $117,000 project was begun in September 1983, and included repaving, curbs and sidewalks. After making those major investments in the downtown revitalization effort, the city now must sit back and gather its resources again, Dornan added.

Although in a rebuilding year, the city made a tremendous commitment to the state Main Street Program sponsored by the Michigan Department of Commerce. The program was designed to bring people back to the downtown area by improving the downtown district's image. The participating communities received technical assistance from a state team of Main Street professionals.

Dornan noted that Walled Lake ranked within the top 10 of nearly 100 applications the state received. Unfortunately, the city was not among the eight communities selected to receive the special assistance. The exclusion was an extreme disappointment. City officials had been so enthused about the program, they appointed a Main Street Commission as soon as the application for the program was sent.

It now is likely the 11-member Main Street Commission will be involved in resurrecting efforts to establish a Downtown Development Authority (DDA), which was first proposed in July 1983. The DDA would provide a broad base of economic opportunities for the business community. Merchants within the defined business district could take advantage of special financing options, such as tax increment financing or tax abatement, to help carry out development plans.

"It would provide a finance mechanism to attract new customers in the business community, as well as provide financing tools for existing businesses," Dornan explained.

In the meantime, downtown revitalization has continued within the waterfront district due to the individual efforts of new business owners. Accompanying the improvements to West Walled Lake Drive was the change in ownership of the corner restaurant at Pontiac Trail and Walled Lake Drive. New owners Helma and Joseph Bernardi remodeled and redecorated the restaurant, making "Pepino's" Walled Lake's first dining establishment with a license to serve alcoholic beverages

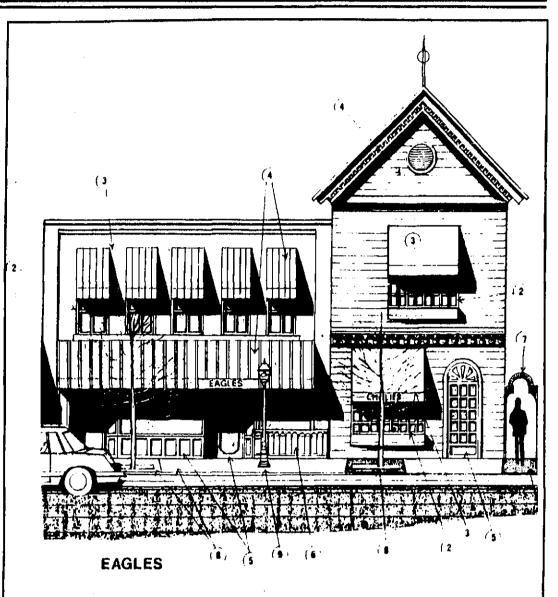

Just down the street from "Pepino's," another new business is continuing the crusade for downtown revitalization. Ginger Scobie, owner of The Popping Gourment Company, made both interior and exterior building improvements this year. But her attention is not exclusively on her own establishment. She is spearheading a campaign to boost the shopping atmosphere in the downtown area — which she would like to become known as the Heritage District of Walled Lake.

The major obstacle for the downtown businesses, Scobie noted, is the lack of downtown parking. The city has attempted to address the problem, securing $100,000 in a federal "Jobs Bill" grant last year for a 75-space downtown lot. But the city and landowner were unable to settle on price for the property. The city now risks losing the grant, although Dornan has asked the county to allow Walled Lake to retain the funds for another project.

Some projects suggested in the county's 1981 downtown planning study still are on the shelf, projects such as enhancing the "aquatic" image of the downtown with an entrance sign, adding street lights, street furniture and landscaping in the downtown, and developing a "boardwalk." Having exhausted its resources, the city will have to leave these on the shelf awhile longer, Dornan said. The city's focus has shifted to expanding and improving its infrastructure, including water and sewer services.

But in the meantime, more discussion awaits the DDA proposal and individual businesses are continuing the struggle to improve the lakefront downtown. Despite setbacks, revitalization in Walled Lake continues.

A Significant Part of South Lyon's Past, Present, and Future

Being a significant part of downtown South Lyon, we've always felt deeply committed to its progress. As South Lyon grew up around us, we've continued to take pride in the fact we remain easily accessible to our neighbors, always ready to give them concerned, meaningful service.

Perhaps it's because we're so enthused about South Lyon today that we're so optimistic about - and involved in - South Lyon's future.

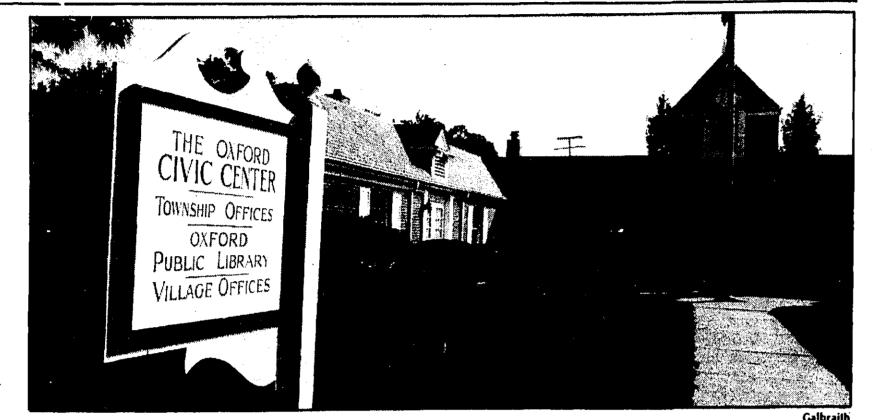

It's a good feeling to know that First Federal not only pays you high interest rates on your savings, but that these investments are channeled back into the community in which you live.

So your money market certificates, interest bearing checking accounts, individual retirement accounts, and your regular savings account, work hard for you and for South Lyon, making your home and ours a better place in which to live.

cil president and the resignation of a council member to get Oxford's revitalization under way.

Even now, with two newlyinstalled members on the council, "the dust is just settling," said Greg Nauseda, chairman of the community development authority.

A slow, steady deterioration of the downtown, both physically and in the types of merchants located there, isolated the viable businesses.

"Businesses were being abandoned after six months with no physical improvements and not much of a chance," said Nauseda. Buildings stood vacant or were rented inexpen-

"The solutions were becoming the problems."

Nauseda credited the Oxford Rotary Club with kicking the village out of its malaise, and then the and running with it. That was in January 1982.

Village Council President Pro-tem Jaqueline Wassil said the need for downtown revitalization was seen as early as 1979, but it wasn't until January 1982 that the village first contacted the Oakland County Planning Division for assistance.

In April 1982, the group that would become the Oxford Community Development Authority defined the study area, selected a theme and received from the county a base map with an inventory of the downtown and an outline of streetscape improvements.

Nauseda described Oxford as a "conservative neighborhood," and said the next task will be to convince the citizens that a strong community benefit will follow revitalization efforts

In addition to the county's help, Oxford also retained a planner familiar with the village and hired a marketing firm to do a $5,000 study. Coordinating efforts through advertising and promotion of the region is the short-term goal; in the long run, the revitalization is to serve as the catalyst for economic growth.

Davisburg

What started out as a joke, Davisburg was able to accomplish.

Simulated rough-hewn board sidewalks, actually imprinted concrete, line the streets of Davisburg, a tiny hamlet inside Springfield Township.

People now drive from miles around to see the classic sidewalks. And the coach lantern street lighting is the first in the state, claimed Springfield Township Supervisor Collin Walls.

Eight of Davisburg's 12 dowtown buildings have been spiffed up during the last four years. Overhead utility lines are now underground, trees and berms grace the downtown streets, the business district has a new parking lot and parallel street parking has been instituted.

Supervisor Walls credits the success of the revitalization to community input. "It's successful because so many people agreed and disagreed with it. At least they noticed."

While the changes are not a big hit with every downtown entity, Walls said the effect is "phenomenal," and the cost relatively small.

the cost relatively small.

The revitalization started in 1980, when the Oakland County Planning Division stepped in to develop a facade improvement program. After the county's plan was finished, property owners were invited to see the planning process. The audience was encouraged to participate at all times.

The improvements cost $193,000, most of it in community development block grants, the rest in township general fund contributions.

What is the impact of the project?
Walls said it helped boost enthusiasm and community spirit. As for boosting the economy, he said, "I hope so."

"I'd like to believe this has spawned all kinds of private interest and investment. Many things go into it, especially the perception of the community you want to move into," said

An estimated $60,000 has been put privately into visible downtown changes, said Walls, "with a half-million dollar effect on the appearance of the businesses themselves."

Most of the 150-year-old buildings on the south side of Davisburg Road have had their original windows blocked up, probably by owners who thought they were making the buildings more modern, said Barbara Johns of the Candle Shop. One of her goals is to reveal all the original architecture on the shop she runs with partner Pam Puggirello.

Brick repair is expensive, and most of the buildings downtown need it. Getting together in a group for a million-dollar grant request looks like the only way to get money for the repairs, Johns said.

Walls said "we have a long way to go" in improving community involvement in the development, but "I believe that the key to the strength of this community is not public improvements, it is changing attitudes, determination and dedication expressed by private business people to help themselves."

Lake Orion

Until the push for revitalization began three years ago, downtown Lake Orion was almost a ghost town.

November 7, 1984

"It just didn't have the people it needed," said treasurer and finance director Keith Sawdon. But a strong village manager and enthusiastic chamber of commerce brought a rebirth of confidence in the community.

"This is blossoming into a nice renaissance for a community that needed a little spark," said Chamber of Commerce President Charles Williams.

The revitalization meant the removal of a few downtown eyesores, the creation of a park, and new, viable occupants for vacant buildings. This was accomplished economic development corporation.

Lake Orion officials, with the help of Oakland County planners, came through federal funding and the stimulation of private investment by a tax abatement program and a local up with a commercial facilty exemption-abatement plan for downtown improvements and a facade design scheme to beautify downtown buildings.

Businesses are given percentage points for abatement up to 100 percent, based on how closely they follow a 1920s facade theme.

In addition to the highway pulling businesses away from the small, four-block downtown area, a new K mart also provided competition for downtown shoppers.

Against this bleak scenario, Orion native and developer Carl Messer took the old Verwood Hotel, invested about $750,000 in it, half of that federal dollars, and turned it into a 20-unit apartment building.

"That was a turning point for others to utilize the integrity of the downtown area, rather than trying to turn it into something it's not," said Williams.

Businesses interested in getting a facilities exemption for following the facade study must apply through the village clerk to the council and demonstrate their willingness to follow the facade plan. The council gives approval based on a recommendation from the village manager.

So far, four businesses have applied for the exemption and received approval, and two more are in the application process.

The chamber of commerce raised funds for a downtown park with summer dinner dances over the past couple of years. Williams also credited State Representative Mat Dunaskiss for his "instrumental" push for state highway funds to improve the M-24 interchanges. The highway improvements should attract commercial expansion, Williams speculated.

"The ripple effect is significant," Williams added. "This phase caught the imagination of the business community with far-reaching ramifications for the residents."
