

$7 million bond issue on ballot

By PATRICIA N. BOWLING
 staff writer

NOVI — Residents will be asked this fall to endorse a new civic center complex that will cost them about $6 a month for at least the next 15 years.

City council approved a bonding proposition for the $7.3 million community center/city hall complex on Monday. The proposition will appear on the Tuesday, November 5, election ballot.

If taxpayers authorize the city to borrow the $7 million needed to pay for construction of the civic center, ground breaking at the Ten Mile municipal site is anticipated in August 1986.

Although the total cost of the project, including construction, furnishings, landscaping and architectural fees, is $7.3 million, the amount of the bond issue is not to exceed $7 million. The difference is due to anticipated interest earned on the $7 million from the time of borrowing to the time of construction.

City council has not yet determined the length of the proposed $7 million bond issue, although 15 years was recommended.

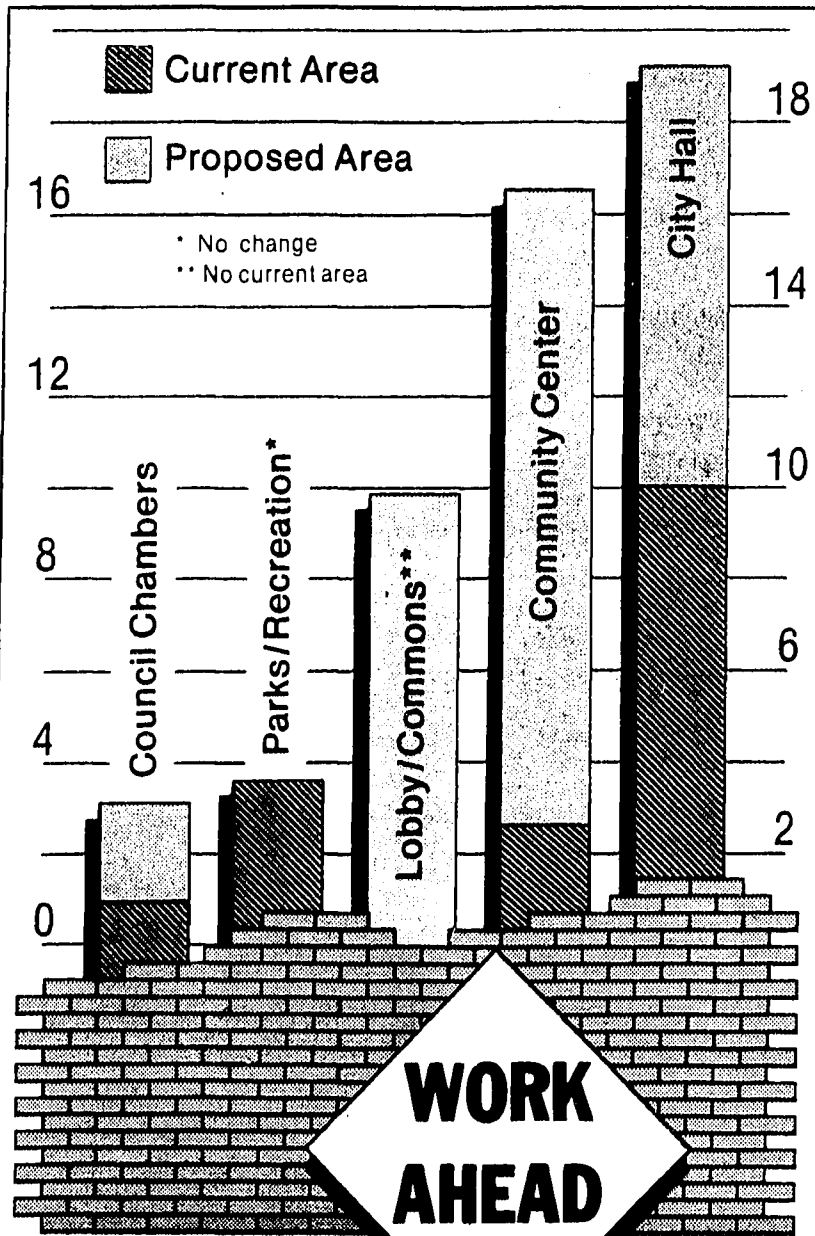

"The shorter the issue, the lower the interest costs," noted Bob Bendzinski, financial advisor for the project. He provided both 15-year and 20-year payment schedules for review.

In an informal polling, council agreed to stick to a 15-year bond issue unless a longer issue proves more economic at the time of the actual borrowing.

Bendzinski estimated the millage needed to fund a 15-year, $7 million bond issue would average two mills per year.

For a residential taxpayer with a $70,000 home (assessed value, $35,000), this two mills would be equivalent to $70 per year. (One mill is equal to $1 on every $1,000 of assessed valuation.)

However, these estimates are based on a 12 percent interest rate. Bendzinski said he expected the city would be able to borrow at 8½-9 perwould include all city administrative offices presently located in one wing of the public library. In addition, the facility would house a 3,200-square-foot council chambers.

The estimates also are based on the 1985 State Equalized Valuation of $435,080,650, assuming a 3 percent growth rate for the first 10 years of the bonding issue. Based on these assumptions, Bendzinski suggested the total cost of the bond issue at the end of 15 years would be more than $14 million.

Offices for parks and recreation and Youth Assistance would be housed in the community building wing of the proposed civic center. All parks

City approves district may relax five-floor li....

By PATRICIA N. BOWLING

NOVI — After sharpening language to reinforce the city's five-story building height limitation, city council approved a convention center ordinance Monday.

"The approved ordinance allows mid-rise buildings only in 'extreme situations.'"

In a third revision of the preamble, the ordinance states: "Of importance to the City of Novi is its low profile character which it wishes to preserve and protect for the welfare of its citizens."

However, the ordinance adds: "There may be a need in extreme situations to relax the height limitation of 65 feet or five stories, whichever is less, to secure desirable, productive land use development."

The furor over mid-rise buildings began early this year when Sheraton Oaks General Manager Gerald Abel included a 12-story addition to the hotel as part of a proposed convention center development. The addition was to provide a glass-enclosed walkway to a convention center on adjacent property.

Planning Consultant Brandon Rogers drafted a convention district ordinance in March to accommodate the proposed development. This first version included a maximum building height of 125 feet, but set forth special requirements for any building exceeding 30 feet in height.

Mayor Robert Schmid and council members Arlen Schroeder, Ronald Watson and Guy Smith all took a firm stance against this ordinance and called for a re-draft.

A revised ordinance considered at the council's June 10 stated the city "may permit" buildings in a convention district to exceed the five-story height limitation if certain conditions exist. These conditions were carried over into the draft approved Monday, although council beefed up some of the language.

If a developer wants to exceed the established height limitation, "he is asking for something very extraordinary in this city," Watson noted.

The special conditions include:
 • A "practical difficulty" or "unnecessary hardship" imposed by the building height limitation;
 • The proposed building is located as least one-half mile from any residential subdivision or any land proposed for residential use in the city's master plan;

• There is a demonstrated need for excess building height. An economic feasibility analysis may be required by city council to prove this need;

• The proposed building provides for placement of art in public areas;

• Landscape treatment within the proposed parking areas is not less than 3 percent of the surface parking area;

• The proposed building will not have an adverse impact on the site or on adjacent lands.

These special requirements apply only to buildings exceeding the five-story height limitation. Additional guidelines are provided for all development, regardless of height, within any convention district.

A minimum site area of 30 acres is required. The convention facility must have at least 80,000 square feet of exhibit space, unless it exceeds the five-story height limitation, in which case 125,000 square feet of exhibit space is required.

Buildings within a convention district development must provide atriums or other public gathering

Watson to seek re-election

NOVI — After months of deliberation, Council Member Ronald Watson announced this week he will seek a third term on the city council.

A newcomer also has declared his intention to seek a city council seat this fall. Gerald LeBlanc of 48801 Eleven Mile was one of the first two candidates to submit completed election petitions to city hall.

Running for a third council term was "a tough personal decision," Watson noted this week.

"It's a large commitment — four years — especially after having already had eight years."

But the momentum of growth and the opportunity for involvement in that growth finally persuaded Watson to go it again. "I look at it in terms of (the city) building a foundation. I'm not at the point... that I can leave it right now."

Prior to reaching this conclusion, Watson put some effort into putting his ideas for the city's future down on paper. "If I wasn't going to be there, I wanted to give my ideas to someone," he noted.

In a four-page memorandum to the city manager, Watson outlined some goals and objectives for the city. Among them were establishment of an architectural review committee and a "philosophical master plan" for guiding future development.

Newly-announced candidate Gerald LeBlanc also listed future development among his reasons for seeking a city council seat.

Watson: 'It's a large commitment — four years — especially after having already had eight years.'

An 18-year resident of Novi, LeBlanc said he represents long-time residents and small businessmen of the community. These people are unhappy with the city, particularly the stringent zoning ordinance requirements and the Town Center plans, he said.

"There are a lot of hostile people out here," he commented.

LeBlanc described the requirement for screening dumpsters as "pure harassment" of small businesses. The ordinances are written to cater to big businesses, such as Twelve Oaks and the Sheraton Oaks Hotel, he suggested.

"People are concerned that they want to make this another Troy or Birmingham," he added. "We don't want that."

LeBlanc and Watson bring the number of expected council candidates to four. Planning Board Member Joseph Toth and resident Nancy Covert also have taken out petitions. However, as of Monday LeBlanc was the only one of the four to have turned in completed petitions to city hall.

Council Member Guy Smith has taken out petitions but says he has not yet decided whether he will seek re-election.

Council Member Patricia Karevich, who is running for mayor, also has turned in completed election petitions.

The number of expected mayoral candidates is now at three. In addition to Karevich, local Realtor Carol Mason has declared a mayoral candidacy, and incumbent Robert Schmid will seek re-election to a third term as Novi's mayor.

Election petitions are available at city hall and must be signed by 100 registered voters. The deadline for submitting completed petitions is Friday, July 12.

Skiing, concert precede fireworks

NOVI — No matter where residents spread their picnics in Lakeshore Park July 4, there will be entertainment nearby.

"Moose and Da Sharks," a '50-60s rock band, will warm up the Novi-Walled Lake fireworks display with a 7 p.m. concert in the new Lakeshore Park picnic shelter. There will be plenty of space for dancing to those "oldies but goodies," according to Parks and Recreation Director Tom O'Branovic.

Meanwhile, residents along the lakeshore will want to keep an eye on the water to catch the barefoot and trick skiing performance of "Team Supra." The eight-member ski team performs at boat races and other events throughout the summer to promote the Supra competition speed boat.

Novi resident Jack Kern, a member of Team Supra, said the team is made up of college students who waterski "day and night" throughout the summer. The 18-year-old noted their exhibition will begin at 7 p.m. "And we'll ski as long as we can," he added.

Residents traveling near Lakeshore Park on July 4 should note several road closings planned from 7-11 p.m. These include East Lake Drive from Novi Road to Fourteen Mile, Endwell at Thirteen Mile, and Paramount at Thirteen Mile. These roads will be closed to through traffic; local traffic will be permitted.

A parade is planned in Village Oaks subdivision on July 4 from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The parade route includes Oak Tree, Cranbrooke, Village Oaks, Heatherwoode and Brook Forest drives.

Talents combined to open restaurant

By PATRICIA N. BOWLING
 staff writer

NOVI — There has been a flurry of activity in and around the former Saratoga Trunk restaurant recently.

At the center of the activity is 24-year-old Jill Angelosante, answering the painters, electricians and decorators. She appears to have much experience supervising the disarray that naturally accompanies restaurant remodeling.

In fact, she has participated in this process before — helping two older siblings launch restaurants, one in Dearborn, the other in Milford. But this time she is in charge.

"I'll be here every day, spending time with the workers, making sure everything is done," she explains while making her way through a dining room in shambles. Another phone call to answer.

Jill spent several years working at the Toll Gate in Fairlane Mall for her sister, Karen; then spent a year managing a small restaurant in Petosky. After another year at the Toll Gate doing "just about everything," it was time for her own restaurant.

"Now, here I am. After all the experience, I finally get to use it for myself," she says. "I didn't go to college, but I got the best education I could have gotten."

Sharing the responsibilities is younger sister Michele Angelosante-Peppo, who will be running the show in "the back of the house."

A March 1984 graduate of the Culinary Institute of America in New York, Michele's experience includes stints at Raphael's in Novi, Van Dyke Place in Detroit, Franklin Hills Country Club and Periwinkles in Brighton.

Like Jill, Michele, 22, started out in family-owned restaurants. She worked in the kitchen, but on dishes rather than food. "I was a great dishwasher," she laughs.

Civic Center proposal defended

By PATRICIA N. BOWLING
staff writer

NOVI — "How much is it going to cost?" was the primary concern among a sparse gathering of residents at a second public meeting on the proposed Novi Civic Center last week.

"How are we going to pay for it?" was the second most immediate question forwarded at the Tuesday, June 25, informational session held by the Civic Center Planning Committee.

About 40 residents and city officials reviewed site plans and a proposed budget for the $7.3 million civic center. The plans were then presented to city council Monday, at which time a bonding issue not to exceed $7 million was approved to bankroll the proposed project.

The bonding issue will be presented to Novi voters for approval in November.

"It's a very functional, useful and economic building," planning committee chairman Father Leslie Harding said of the proposed 68,000-square-foot civic center.

"The design has met all the criteria we asked for — particularly for the community center."

To illustrate the need for more office, storage and community activity space, Assistant City Manager Craig Klaver showed the group slides of existing city administration and community center facilities.

A lack of storage space has resulted in city hall materials being scattered throughout various city buildings, including the library, Department of Public Works garage and Police Department, he noted.

The current administrative offices are located in one half of the library, "which was always meant to be an interim situation," Klaver said.

City hall currently uses 10,000 square feet in one wing of the library. The proposed civic center has 19,200 square feet of space for city administration. The community building on Novi Road is a 2,500-square-foot, former elementary school gymnasium. The new civic center would include 16,500 square feet of community facilities, including meeting rooms, a large, multi-purpose room with a stage, and a kitchen.

"The concept of this building is one in which the administrative offices wrap around a common space. This is really the hub of the new building — and it's really public-oriented," remarked design architect Dan Van Fleteren.

"The real virtue of the public space is that the public will be able to come in and orient themselves immediately without going through a maze of corridors."

Resident Leo Buffa expressed concern over the fees that might be assessed to use this "public" building. "My observation of public buildings is (that) they don't really belong to the public. They belong to those who occupy them, to those holding the keys," he commented.

Klaver noted local, non-profit groups currently are assessed no fee for using the community building. The city council and parks and recreation department will determine a policy for the new facility, but it is likely the current practice would be continued, he suggested.

Buffa also asked whether the proposed facility would meet the needs of the city in the future. Harding noted the building is designed to accommodate a city population of 80,000-85,000 people.

There is no expectation that the building would need to be expanded for the next 25-40 years, he said.

"What happens if the project goes over budget?" asked one resident. Klaver explained that contingencies are built into the proposed budget for the civic center.

The cost estimate for constructing the facility is based on the projected building climate in the fall of 1986, added Gordon Andringa, head architect for Harley, Ellington, Pierce and Yee Associates. If bids for the project come in over the amount projected by his firm, Andringa said they would consider it their responsibility to redesign the plans within the approved budget.

Buffa noted bonds sold for such a project "have no magic. They must be repaid, and they must be repaid with interest."

"The question the citizens have to answer is how much bonded indebtedness can the city sustain before it breaks your back?"

A new Novi resident asked what consideration was given to remodeling an existing building to suit the city's needs, rather than constructing a new building.

Remodeling an existing building would have been adequate for achieving more city office space, Klaver responded. However, duplicating the proposed community facilities in an existing building would be impossible, he suggested.

City Planner Ernest Aruffo, who will head the committee promoting the civic center to voters this November, noted the millage required for a $7 million bond issue paid back over 15 years would average about two mills per $100 of assessed property value with a $70,000 bond, this would amount to about 26 a month, or 20 cents a day.

"That's a fair stake in the City of Novi," he suggested.

Novi News Briefs

ONLY TWO DEVELOPERS showed up for a pre-bid conference with city officials on the proposed lakefront resort project last month.

The city plans to select a developer for the project by September. Proposals are due in August.

City Manager Edward Kriewall said about 12 developers have expressed an interest in the project, even though only two attended the June 20 pre-bid meeting. The development is to be located on approximately 12 acres of city-owned property on the shores of Walled Lake. The site is located on Novi Road and 13 Mile.

AN ASSISTANT FIRE CHIEF and a new part-time training officer, along with seven new volunteer firefighters, were sworn in before the city council this week.

Theodore Kovarik, formerly a part-time fire inspector and fire marshal, became the new assistant fire chief. This new position was approved by city council in the 1985-86 budget. Kovarik's duties will include some administrative work in the department and fire prevention activities.

Leonard Zembruski, who retired last week after 33 years as a captain with the Detroit Fire Department, was sworn in as a part-time training officer.

Ralph Bini, William Conn, David Hage, Phillip Jenkins, Michael Schwimert, David Scott and Roger Sparks were sworn in as volunteer firefighters. The seven men have completed 60 hours of fire training. They must also complete another 60 hours of first aid and CPR (cardio pulmonary resuscitation) training.

A VACATION DAY SCHOOL will be sponsored by the Novi United Methodist Church during the week of July 15-19. The school is for children from four-years-old through the sixth grade.

The school will begin at the church this Sunday (July 7) from 11 a.m. to noon. Registrations also will be accepted at the church all next week (July 8-12) from 10 a.m. to noon. For more information call the church office at 349-2652.

Snacks will be provided, but students should bring a sack lunch. The church will provide drinks.

The fees are $5 the first child from a family, $3 for the second child from the same family and $2 for the third child. The maximum fee for one family is $10.

GERBER CHILDRENS CENTERS has submitted plans for a child care center that would be licensed to handle 135 children.

The franchised child care center would be owned and operated by the Gerber baby food company of Fremont.

Preliminary site plans for the project, proposed for a 1.2-acre site on the west side of Haggerty Road, south of Ten Mile, were presented to the planning board last week. Although the board approved the proposed land use, no action was taken on the site plans pending additional engineering of the site.

The Haggerty Road site presently is zoned for residential use. Child care centers are permitted in residential districts with special approval from the planning board.

The issue's old, but not the price tag

By PATRICIA N. BOWLING

NOVI — When residents refused to fund construction of a $2.85 million community center in 1979, proponents of the project said the issue would return.

This fall Novi residents will be asked to approve the sale of bonds for a $7.3 million civic center. Community facilities similar to those proposed in 1979 would be located in half the building; the other half would house a new city hall.

"In a way I'm kind of glad it went down back then — what we have now is far more effective," commented Reverend Leslie Harding.

Harding was vice chairman of the community center committee in 1979. He returned to head the Civic Center Planning Committee formed in September 1983 to take another look at planning a community center. In addition, this second committee reviewed the need for a new city hall.

The community building on Novi Road, formerly an elementary school gymnasium, was reviewed by both committees. Then as now, the 2,500-square-foot facility was faulted for its dilapidated condition, inadequate space for community programs and inadequate space for parking. Even with renovations, the building was expected to last no more than a couple years.

"We're holding that building together with binder twine and baling wire," Harding said of the Novi Road facility in 1979.

After a year of study, the 1979 committee recommended a new 24,000-square-foot community building. It was to include two large multi-purpose rooms, two meeting rooms, a small kitchen and a portable stage.

An arts and crafts area, game room for teens and a small nursery were proposed, along with administrative offices for parks and recreation, Youth Assistance and the now-defunct Community Employment Service.

To generate funds for the operation of the building, the committee proposed a recreation area containing four racquetball courts and locker room facilities.

This package was to cost the voters an additional $1 on every $1,000 of assessed property valuation for a period of 20 years.

But the issue failed 1,773 to 1,079. The only precinct to approve the community center was Chateau Estates Mobile Home Park. It went down by substantial margins in all other precincts.

"There were so many things on the ballot that needed to be addressed," Harding recalled. In the same election Novi residents were asked to approve bond sales to finance a $3.5 million drain project and fire department improvements. Only the fire department improvements received the voters' favor.

Although city officials suggested the community center might appear again on the 1980 ballot, the proposal was scrapped. It was not until the community building property on Novi Road became part of a proposed commercial development that the issue was resurrected.

By this time a new problem also needed attention. City offices occupy about 10,000 square feet in one wing of the Novi Public Library. The city's lease with the Library Board does not expire until 1988, but by 1983 the library was bulging at the seams.

The citizens' committee appointed that year was to update the city's needs and propose a solution.

"There was not really any carryover (from the 1979 study)," Harding commented. "We spent little or no time looking at the past."

Instead, a substantially different proposal than the one forwarded six years ago emerged. After nearly two years of study, the planning committee unveiled plans for a combined community building and city hall.

This civic center would be located on Ten Mile between the Police Department and the Public Library, thus completing the municipal complex on this site.

The new civic center plan will cost taxpayers twice as much as the 1979 community center plan. Financing for the proposed civic center project is expected to run homeowners $2 on every $1,000 of assessed property valuation.

But the civic center will include more than twice the facilities of the community center proposed six years ago.

Of 22,400 square feet of usable floor space, the community center and parks and recreation offices would occupy 20,100 square feet. Proposed community facilities still include a large multi-purpose room, meeting rooms and a kitchen, but the recreation area and racquetball courts have been eliminated.

Another 22,400 square feet is devoted to city administrative offices and council chambers.

The remaining floor area (9,900 square feet) is dedicated to a "commons area." In this open, glass atrium atmosphere, there will be space for residents to mingle or relax. Project designer Dan Van Fleteren describes this area as the hub of his entire plan.

If voters approve this new civic center plan in November, city officials plan to have construction underway by the fall of 1986.

In addition, sale of the Novi Road property might be more significant this year than it was in 1979, Harding noted. City offices must be moved, whether to a new facility or into rented office space.

A default of the bonding proposal might be more imminent. The city might soon be left with no community building at all, he suggested.

Lucas charms new GOP friends

NOVI — Looking and sounding very much like a gubernatorial candidate, Wayne County Executive William Lucas stopped off at the Sheraton Oaks last Thursday to press the flesh and say a few words to his newly-acquired Republican party colleagues.

The reception for Lucas was co-sponsored by the Novi Business PAC, Political Action Committee and the Committee to Re-elect Willis Bullard, Jr., State Representative.

Flanked by Bullard and Donald Greengood of the Novi Business PAC, Lucas greeted guests as they arrived at the door.

In addition to Novi leaders, guests included Oakland County Commissioner John Calandro, Northville Mayor Paul Verno and Milford Township Clerk Elaine Skarritt.

Lucas, 57, made national headlines earlier this year when he announced in May that he was leaving the Democratic party to join the Republican party. Following his announcement, the Wayne County executive visited President Ronald Reagan and other Republican notables in Washington, D.C.

The Wall Street Journal in covering the announcement said, "If Bill Lucas is elected governor of Michigan next year, he would become the highest-ranking black official in the country. He would also naturally become the point man in Republican efforts to woo moderate and conservative black voters from the Democrats."

In introducing Lucas at Thursday's reception, Bullard compared Lucas' performance as Wayne County executive with that of Governor James Blanchard. Bullard said that Lucas had reduced the county's deficit and balanced the budget, while Blanchard increased spending and passed a 38 percent tax increase.

Lucas told the crowd he was exercising the American dream when he changed parties on May 8. "As an American, I had the right and the obligation to change parties or do whatever I felt like doing, and was still able to survive," he said.

He added that he has received calls of praise from across the nation for "exercising my option to do what I felt was the right thing to do."

Lucas also said Michigan is in a battle to make the state that best kind of state it can be. "Not so bad is not good enough," he said. "I want Michigan to be the right thing to do."

He referred specifically to the Alexander Grant & Company Report which claims Michigan rates 48th among the continental United States in terms of manufacturing climates.

"We need to recognize that 'profit' is not a dirty word," he said. "We need to recognize that 'profit' is something that is necessary to provide jobs."

In terms of the next election, Lucas said voters must make sure that the State House and State Senate remain strictly Republican, then put the "political icing on the cake by having a Republican governor."

Added Lucas: "I am not here to tell you who that person (Republican governor) should be. But whoever it is should be the type of person who will say to you the things that I have said to you tonight."

Panel will discuss chemical storage

NOVI — A public meeting on the storage of hazardous chemicals by the Quazite Corporation will be held at the Novi Public Library on Monday, July 8 at 7:30 p.m.

Officials from the Michigan Water Resources Commission, as well as representatives from Quazite, will be available to answer questions.

The Quazite Corporation, 45237 Grand River, has applied for a state permit to store polymer resin in a 12,000-gallon underground tank. Polymer resin is a highly flammable chemical used in the manufacturing of concrete industrial floor bricks.

Quazite, a Houston, Texas, based firm, has designed to install an 8 million gallon underground tank at the Novi plant since February. This tank is new and should last 10-15 years with no chance of corrosion, according to Paul Mastia,

New class to build teens' living skills

NOVI — Upon the recommendation of administrators and staff members at Novi Middle School South, the board of education is considering the inclusion of a pilot course in life skills education to help teenagers cope with stress and change.

"Skills in Adolescence," the course is designed to help seventh and eighth graders deal with the stresses of today's complex society.

In reviewing the course outline at its meeting last week, board members learned the objectives of the course are to help students identify problems in their lives and develop strategies for more effectively handling those problems.

Noting that "early adolescence is seen as a most vulnerable stage," administrators told the board other school districts involved in similar courses found students better equipped to function in school and their personal lives.

The administration is proposing that two sections of a program called, "Skills for Adolescence" be offered in the fall on a pilot basis. Staff members, Claudia Wiseman and Patricia Reilly, who spent three days at a Quest training session in May, will be working with students in the two sections. It is proposed that each session will be completed of about 20 students.

The target population for the class is seventh and eighth grade students selected by parents and teachers. Participation will be on a voluntary basis with students graded as in any other course.

The course would be held one hour per day and is structured as a one-semester long option to physical education, home economics or industrial arts.

Curriculum for the course was developed by consultants and teachers through cooperative efforts of the Lions Club International and the W. Clement and Jessie V. Stone Foundation. It also was noted that the course is being normally taught by groups such as the Center for Early Adolescence, National Federation of Parents for Drug Free Youth, the National PTA, National Middle School Association and the Pacific Institute for Research and Evaluation.

The course would be structured around seven units including entering the teen years, building self-confidence through better communication, self-assessment and self-discipline, peer relationships, family relationships, developing critical thinking skills for decision-making and goal-setting for healthy living.

Parent participation in the program also will be encouraged with staff members scheduling four two-hour seminars for parents during the semester.

Charles Nanas, principal of Novi Middle School South, said some 35 parents indicated an interest in the course through a flyer mailed out to community residents.

He further noted that staff members also have made contact with parents regarding the course.

Estimated cost for materials and teacher training would be about $1,000, excluding a $100 donation from the Novi Lions Club.

As We See It

Fair play needed on zoning matter

Plans for a shopping center on Meadowbrook Road last month caused a knee-jerk reaction from both the Novi City Council and the Novi Planning Board.

Although city council may not have been aware of this pending development, the planning board had known of the plans since April. Last month, more than two months after site plans for the proposed Meadowbrook Shopping Center were first submitted, city officials determined it is necessary to consider rezoning the property to block the development.

Site plans for a shopping center at Meadowbrook and Ten Mile were submitted to the city for review April 1. They were returned to the developer for revisions before ever reaching the planning board.

The plans were submitted a second time April 22, but once again were returned for revision. Finally, on May 8 the developer submitted site plans the city planning department deemed ready for review by the planning board. All three submittals were documented in "Project Status Reports" issued by the planning department to the planning board in April and May.

When the plans reached the board June 5, a motion for preliminary approval failed in a tie vote. (One board member was absent.) Those voting against approval were concerned that the site was recommended for office use in the city's Master Plan.

Before the plans could come back before the board June 19, a homeowner with property abutting the proposed shopping center site appeared before the city council to protest the plans. Calling the business zoning "an oversight," the council recommended the planning board consider rezoning the property to office as suggested in the Master Plan. The planning board concurred and at its last meeting scheduled a July 17 public

Dedicated citizen

Joe Brett's resignation from the Novi Planning Board after five years of service should not go unnoticed.

Brett resigned his position on the board in late May after serving two years of his second three-year term. Brett explained that he had informed the city council when it was considering his re-appointment in 1983 that he would not serve another full term. "It is my belief that the best interest of the city is served by a continual turnover of people who serve on boards," he said.

Although no longer on the planning board, Brett said he will remain active in the city by heading a millage campaign to fund the new city hall and community building.

We make no pretensions about our deep-rooted admiration and appreciation for John Joseph Brett, as his name plaque at the planning board table reads.

A number of respected local businessmen share a different opinion, however, and are only too happy to let you know what they think about his outspoken opinions hearing on the rezoning. The rezoning will be considered despite the board having had almost six years since the master plan was adopted to make such zoning changes. In addition, the Meadowbrook Shopping Center plans had already been submitted two times without mention of a possible rezoning.

The City of Novi is to be commended for its efforts to control future development, as well as its efforts to correct the development errors of the past. The need for stronger controls and stricter enforcement was evident last week when a group of city officials toured the city. Despite its best efforts to encourage quality development, the city still has been outwitted by developers who seem to have poured all their energy into skirting the city's ordinances.

With these abuses fresh in mind, it almost makes it ridiculous to advocate "fair play" on the part of the city. But changing the rules in the middle of the game not only make the play unfair, but chaotic, as well.

Weighing "fairness" will undoubtedly lead to chaos in this and other development issues. What is more unfair? Rezoning someone's property after they've spent considerable time and money on plans the city at first allowed and encouraged? Or permitting construction of a shopping center (in fact, a second shopping center) next to residential property because city officials have overlooked the commercial zoning for the past six years?

Plans for the Meadowbrook Shopping Center should be made to conform with every aspect of the zoning ordinance before being allowed to proceed. Then the planning board should attack the large number of parcels remaining in the city that do not comply with the recommended zoning in the Master Plan.

Our admiration for the man is based partly on his willingness to take unpopular stands if it's what he believes is right and partly on the countless hours of his personal time that he donates to the city.

A former owner of his own business, Brett, now retired, claims the city is his hobby. He estimates that he puts in approximately 40 hours of his own time on city matters every week.

He regularly attends lectures and seminars on planning and architectural issues, and spends numerous hours doing research in the library.

Further, his enthusiasm for "working for" the city has had a contagious effect, spurring other citizens to volunteer and serve on various boards and commissions.

While reserving the right to disagree with him on given issues, we nevertheless have greatest admiration for the contributions Joe Brett has made as a planning board member — and as a citizen of Novi.

SM seeks SF; obj. matrimony

B.J. Martin

I have never been able to acquire that certain something that all good columnists have. Something that immediately establishes their intimacy with readers. Something that consistently provides them an interesting subject to write about. I am speaking, of course, about a spouse.

Take Phil Jerome's column down below. Any time he's in need of inspiration, all he needs to do is recall some exchange with his dear wife, and then make sure he hides the paper from her. Patricia Bowling, Jean Day, Kevin Wilson, Michele Fecht, in fact all our other writers at one time or another have found their respective marriage partners to be veritable gold mines of column subjects.

I don't doubt for a minute that recounting the particulars of my occasional dates could provide some hilarious reading. But I suspect that if I put them in print, I would very soon have no more dates to write about, let alone a wife.

So I'm on the lookout for a full-time spouse. I will have to insist it be a female for several reasons: I would not like to be married to someone with more body hair than I, for one thing. Also, females tend to smell better, and they attract less notice during public displays of affection.

I'm sure you are surprised a guy as ruggedly handsome and virile as the one in that picture above, a man whose sex appeal has been compared to that of Gary "Radar" Burghoff and Don Knotts, has not yet tied the knot. I can't understand it myself. All I've been seeking is a simple, honest, one-to-one relationship with a woman with Jamie Lee Curtis's looks, Katherine Graham's money, Jean Kirkpatrick's brains and the marital philosophy of Marabel "The Total Woman" Morgan. As you can see, my wants and needs are no different than those of the average guy.

I'm not worried. I'll find her, because I know I have plenty to offer The Right Woman.

I'm a big spender, someone who can spend five, even six dollars on a date. I don't smoke cigarettes, pipes or cigars. I know most of the answers to Trivial Pursuit. I know how to change a tire. I can score over 20,000 on Asteroids every time. I can play Brahms Lullaby on guitar. I know how to make guacamole. I don't snore. I own the complete recorded works of Roy Orbison.

All these qualities are just the tip of the iceberg of the madcap whirl I woman can expect if she settles down with me. Probably the ideal situation for me is to find a female columnist who doesn't have a husband. This way, our wedding and reception costs, as well as her engagement and wedding rings, could be deducted as business expenses. I understand this is what John Kelly and Marilyn Turner have done. If by some chance things don't work out, I'm sure our divorce could be written off as depreciation.

I've been thinking about taking out a classified ad to find Ms. Right. For instance, in last week's classified section of The News, there was an ad that read: "MINISTER will marry you anywhere," followed by his name and number. I admire the guy's flexibility, but my message would be a bit less open-ended.

My classified would probably read like this: "Handsome genius SWM, age negotiable, desperately seeking SF for euche partner, possible marriage. If you're into Bowling For Dollars, ant farms, shadow puppets, and singing along with beer commercials, you have just met Mr. Right. Send photo, references, credit rating and police record, etc."

I can't decide whether my ad should be classified, though. "Sporting Goods?" "Lost?"

Maybe "Absolutely Free."

Yellow shorts speed delivery

Phillip Jerome

I thought the columnist about my wife's yellow shorts was over and done with.

You may recall that I wrote a column a couple of weeks ago about going to look for antique doors in Ypsilanti. My wife was wearing a pair of yellow shorts, and I was joshing her about the appropriateness of wearing them in public.

I got my comeuppance when she claimed her yellow shorts had created quite a stir among the fellows in the backroom at the door store, who, she claimed, discreetly exited the workshop to check out the lady in the yellow shorts.

That was it. I got in my digs; she got in hers. And I thought that was the end of it. My mistake.

As we continue to plan the addition to our home, my wife decided to order one of those antique doors. So she called the store in Ypsilanti to place the order, and was told by the woman who answered the phone that it would be four to five weeks before it was ready.

Fifteen minutes later a young man from the same store called to verify the order. "By the way," he asked my wife at the end of the conversation, "are you the lady who was in here a couple weeks ago wearing yellow shorts?"

When she said that she was, the fellow announced that he had good news. "I think we can get you your door this week," he said. "We have a lull in the shop, and we ought to be able to get it for you by Friday."

My wife reported the conversation with great glee. "At least somebody liked my yellow shorts," she told me.

"So when are they planning to deliver the stupid door?" I asked between clenched teeth.

"This Saturday at 12:30," she said.

"Oh, good," I responded. "My schedule's free. I can definitely be here when they arrive."

"He said he'd deliver it personally," she reported.

"In fact, I think I'll mow the lawn Saturday around noon. That would free you up to go into town and do the shopping."

Bumper stickers liven auto trips

Jean Day

When God created man, she was only kidding. The sign on the bumper of the car I was following north on Interstate 75 brought a smile last weekend. Obviously the driver — female, of course — believed in women's lib.

The bumper sticker also brought back memories of the Burma Shave jingles along the roadside that millions of travelers read between 1927 and 1963 to escape boredom as they traveled. The pace was different then, and it was possible to read a row of signs, such as the all-time boy-girl jingle classic from 1934: He had the ring/He had the flat/But she felt his chin/and that was that.

Expressway traffic speeds make the one or two liner bumper stickers a better bet to lighten the trip today. In many cases they might be called contemporary social comments with a smile. For the past several trips I've been jotting down some, not the political variety that I think were the original bumper stickers, but the kind that sometimes bring a smile even when traffic is slowed for construction.

It's possible to tell a lot about the owner of the bumper-stickered vehicle. Soccer is a kick in the grass — Redford. Obviously the car that passed me belonged to a Redford fan. Don't follow me — I'm lost — brought the mental response, "I wouldn't."

It's a man's world UNLESS WOMEN VOTE is a sticker that hasn't found its way to a bumper. It's above the desk of reporter Michele Fecht. That's what the League of Women Voters and NOW have been trying to tell us.

Japanese Cadillac. No comment on that one.

A lot of stickers use the heart symbol which can be interpreted as "love" in such bumper statements as, I (love) U. Of M. For some reason, even headed toward Lansing, there appear to be more University of Michigan fans who proclaim their Blue and Gold love than there are green and white Spartan fans. Aki the alma mater lovers are the pet lovers. I (love) cats is seen fairly regularly. A dog/lover had to own the car with this sticker: Does your dog know where you are? It's after 10 p.m.

It's not easy being perfect, but somebody has to do it. That one goes right along on the tongue-in-cheek ego trip with To know me is to love me.

This must have been an early riser by necessity: I may rise but I refuse to shine.

Sometimes there's a public service message: Many teenagers are dying for a drink. Burna-Shave, too, issued warnings about drinking and driving: Drinking drivers/Don't you know/great bangs/from little/binges grow?/Burna-Shave.

I've seen a couple of stickers that tell a lot about the northbound traveler. On the bumper of a camper: I vacation weekends and Friday. In a similar vein, there was: Nothing matters but the weekend. The amount of traffic flooding all northbound lanes of the I-75 from early Friday afternoons to late at night makes it pretty obvious that those weekend lovers aren't alone.

But, how's this for an upbeat message: Go for it!

Ex-planner urges policy change

To the Editor:

For over a year now there has been a great deal of discussion, both written and verbal, concerning the individual property rights of land owners and the fear of the city "taking" or "confronting" private property.

So let's take a look at property rights. And where is there a better place to start than with the United States Constitution — the fountain head for all law in the country and the State of Michigan.

I would like to emphasize that this discussion is in no way to be interpreted as giving legal advice. My sources of research are standard U.S. Government and History textbooks used by high school students.

The individual property rights of owners are one of the most important rights protected by the Constitution. The founding fathers were so concerned about this right that after they wrote the Preamble, which included the phrase, "promote the General Welfare," and the Seven Articles of the Constitution, which included Section 8 of Article 1, "providing the Right of Eminent Domain," they drafted the Bill of Rights and wrote in the Fifth Amendment: "Nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."

It has been established by the courts that a government or municipality does not have to buy land in order to control an activity that contributes to the general welfare, but has only to compensate the owner for any diminished value that might occur as a result of this control. "In the law of Eminent Domain, property is taken if its value to the owner is diminished. The owner is entitled to compensation for the diminished value only." This principle has evolved from years of case law.

The Constitution, as an instrument of Government, is a system of checks and balances. As careful as the founding fathers were to limit the powers of government, the main reason that they formed a constitutional government was to create a strong government. They had learned that weak government, incapable of governing, is as great a danger as a powerful government.

Or let's consider the case of curbs cuts on a heavily traveled road. Is it fair to the taxpayers of the city to pay compensation to an owner or developer because the value of his property has been diminished by denying the owner a curb cut on a busy intersection, when the value of the property is appreciating because of the expectation of sewer and water service becoming available? Are not these fair questions for consideration?

And now let's consider public sewer and water systems. All sewer and water systems are the result of public investment and financed by the public in one form or another. When a city issues bonds to finance a sewer and water system, the bonds are backed by the unlimited authorized taxing power of the municipality. If after the main lines are installed and the tap-in fees are not paid for by homeowners and taxpayers are required to pay off the bonds.

In effect the taxpayers are co-signing for the bonds. In Novi, most of the sewer and water tap-in fees that provided the initial sewer and water service were paid for by homeowners and condo owners in the purchase price of their homes. Gradually, the homeowners paid to extend the service to the point where it is now within the jurisdiction of commercial and industrial properties on Novi Road and Grand River and points west and north.

Multiple and rental citizens also paid their share in their rent. The homeowners, renters and condo owners have not paid for it all, but they have paid for the bulk of it. They are committed and they have a vested interest in the system and any extensions thereof. Residents of Novi have a huge investment in the development of the city and have a right to a voice in affairs that affect their general welfare and safety. They earned their way into the system. They bought in with their cash and mortgages.

A developer who has planned a subdivision in the past was required to provide collector streets and curbs and pavement throughout the subdivision. Most commercial and industrial properties that are being developed today would have no more potential for development or increased value than it had 30 years ago if it were not for the state freeways and the sewer and water systems that are now available. Is it any more unreasonable to ask these property owners to provide easements for access roads and drainage courses than it is to require easements for sewer and water, as well as telephone and electric lines?

In conclusion and to summarize, I leave you with these thoughts: Novi is a residential community that provided the investment to make Novi a growth city. Business is here to serve the community. People provide the dynamics to make business prosper. The make-up of the community determines the standard of general welfare will be.

It is necessary to diminish the value of private property in the interest of health, safety or general welfare, the act should be performed and any net diminished value that results should be compensated to the owner. But only the net diminished value, after deducting the value of unearned increment.

Elected representatives are required by the Doctrine of Public Trust to provide for and to protect the general welfare of the people.

Developers and speculators are entitled to their opinions and to express them as freely and as vocally as they see fit. I am sure they will continue to do so, but I would hope they do not feel that their opinion is the only one that can be expressed and used as a model.

It is important that all the citizens of Novi be aware of the other point of view expressed here and give it consideration as they evaluate events taking place in the City of Novi during these dynamic times.

Joe Brett

Height limits needed

To the Editor:

As a homeowner in Novi I am very concerned about the future of our community. I feel that if all of our elected city officials are dependable and make careful choices (and are not easily accepting or overly permissive), we can achieve sound economic growth and first-class development without compromising our semi-rural, low-rise environment or jeopardizing our quality lifestyle.

Our community has an excellent reputation thus far. We have set high standards and that is as it should be.

It is due to this and due to our prime location — surrounded by fine neighbors and major thoroughfares, that I believe that we can and will attract quality developers and businesses which will enhance, not destroy, our community.

We should encourage and welcome these, but we should discourage and prohibit any others. Some people may call that discrimination, but in this case I would call it preservation. For despite some rejection, businesses will continue to thrive, but here in Novi our residents should always survive.

Laura J. Lorenzo

Family sends thanks

To the Editor:

The family of Robert A. (Randy) Haess Jr. extend their sincere thanks to the Novi Police Department, Officers Diane McGregor, John Zimmer, Ron Roy and Paul VanPelt; and the Novi Fire Department, who responded so quickly and provided the immediate assistance to Randy.

Our deepest gratitude to Ruth Slazor and Merry Alyce Vander Linden, nurses, who immediately attended to Randy and with their special skills and caring, tried desperately to save his life.

To all our friends and neighbors who have sent cards, flowers, food and prayers, our heartfelt thanks.

Mrs. Robert A. Haess Jr.

"They try to weed out people who can't handle the pressure," she notes. Michele is one of only a very few women to graduate from the intense five-week training program.

She recently attended the International Pastry Arts Center in Bedford Hills, New York, participating in a one-week seminar in chocolate and a one-week seminar in breads offered by former White House pastry chef Albert Kumin. It was at this center she picked up the name "Country Epicure" for their new restaurant in Novi.

plans. Buildings must be composed of the same architectural building materials.

The ordinance also states that the convention facility must be constructed prior to construction of any other building in the development, unless guarantees in the form of a cash deposit or certified check are provided assuring the convention facility will be built.

Council approved the convention district ordinance in a 6-1 decision, with Council Member Guy Smith voting no. Smith has stated previously he is opposed to buildings in excess of five stories under any circumstances.

The ordinance only adds the convention district to the city's zoning ordinance. If a convention center development is to proceed on the 30 acres surrounding and including the Sheraton, a developer must first have the land rezoned to the convention district.

The property surrounding the Sheraton Oaks is the only site in the city that qualifies for the convention district zoning. It is the only site that can meet the requirement for being one-half mile from any residential subdivision.

Rash of area car thefts goes on

NOVI — Four more automobile thefts were reported in Novi last week as stolen vehicles continue to be a major problem throughout the Metropolitan Detroit area.

A Northville woman reported that her 1985 Chevrolet Camaro was stolen from the rear parking lot at the Sheraton Oaks during the night of June 21-22. The woman told police she parked the car behind the hotel on June 21 at 11 p.m. and discovered it missing the next morning at 9:30 a.m. She said the car contained most of her clothing and some of her fiancée's clothing when it was stolen. The car was valued at $17,000, while the stolen clothing was valued at an additional $1,500.

A resident of the Watergate VI Apartments reported that his 1984 Pontiac Fiero was stolen during the night of June 21-22. The car was taken from the parking lot outside his residence. The car was recovered by the Detroit Police Department on Briarcliffe on June 24. The car reportedly was in good condition except that its ignition had been punched out and the radio was missing, according to reports.

A Country Cousins Mobile Home Park resident told police his 1977 Chevrolet Monte Carlo was stolen from outside his home on Roric during the night of June 19-20. The man said the car had been listed as being for sale in the newspaper prior to the time it was stolen.

A Chipmunk Trail resident in the Novi Ridge Apartments reported the theft of his 1979 Ford. The car was stolen from the parking lot outside his apartment sometime between 11:30 on

Area Blotters

June 25 and 6:30 a.m. the next day.

A Milford woman reported that someone attempted to steal her 1985 Pontiac Trans-Am while it was parked outside an apartment building on Timberlane, near Pontiac Trail. The woman said she parked the car at 8:30 p.m. on June 22 and returned the following day at 1:30 p.m. to find that the steering column had been damaged and her key was unable to start the car. Damage to the vehicle was pegged at $150.

A 1975 Yamaha motorcycle stolen from West Bloomfield was recovered by a Novi resident while walking through the woods on the north side of Eleven Mile, east of Grand River. The man reported finding the motorcycle to police who subsequently determined it had been stolen from West Bloomfield on May 29. Police said the rear tire, seat, battery and gas tank had been removed from the motorcycle.

A resident on Chestnut Tree in the Village Oaks subdivision reported that a Weber portable barbecue grill was stolen from the patio behind his house. The theft occurred between noon and 3 p.m. on June 21. The grill was valued at $80.

A Murray Team BMX bicycle was stolen from a residence on Woodland Creek. The complainant said the 20-inch boys' dirt bike was taken from the driveway of the home on June 26 between 9 and 11:20 a.m. Unknown individuals apparently attempted to steal two BMX bicycles chained to a table on an exterior rear porch of a town house on Haggerty Road. According to reports, the responsible parties removed the brakes, seats and wheels from the bicycles. All the parts were left on the porch, however, and nothing appeared to be missing.

A Meadowbrook Road resident reported the theft of four wheels and tires from a 1979 Mercury Capri parked in his front yard. The theft occurred during the early morning hours of June 23. The complainant said the responsible parties placed the car on cinder blocks and removed four Michelin tires and wheels. The car had been parked in his front yard between Eleven and Twelve Mile and had a "for sale" sign in an additional $125.

Four B.F. Goodrich truck tires with chrome wheel rims were stolen from a shed at Spartan Concrete Rental Storage sometime between June 14 and 21. The complainant said unknown individuals cut the lock off the shed and proceeded to remove the truck tires and wheel rims along with an overhead light bar. Stolen property was valued at $700.

Another Meadowbrook Road resident reported that vandals broke out the windshield of his 1975 Chevrolet Nova while it was parked in the drive outside his home. Police said the window was broken with a large rock taken from the driveway of the residence.

I am today without them. I firmly believe what I can do for the world stems from what my parents have done for me," Henrich said. At MSU, Henrich served as a resident assistant for two years. She was a member of the senior class council; Kappa Delta Pi, an educational honor society; and the Council for Exceptional Children. Henrich also received the Kappa Delta Pi scholarship two years in a row. Her overall grade point at MSU was 3.63. Henrich stressed that she is not going to Honduras to attempt to "Americanize" the people. "I'm not going to work for them. I go to work with them," she said. For Henrich, her dream has come true, but she admits that it will not all be fun and games. "I know there will be times when I'm going to wonder why I did this, but I will make the best of the situation," Henrich said. Before Henrich decided to go to Honduras, she had three job offers which made her decision to go a little tougher. She wondered if going away for two years would detract or enhance her ability to get a job when she finishes her work with the Peace Corps. She decided that it would definitely enhance it. When she returns to the United States, Henrich said she would like to teach in the inner city. As a personal benefit, it is her two-year stay in Honduras, Henrich said, "I will be a minority. We hear so much about minorities in America, but I have no idea what it is like and we all need to walk in someone else's shoes." Dreams do come true and for Henrich all it took was enough self-confidence to really believe in herself.

Area Briefs

A THREE-STORY OFFICE BUILDING, the largest office building ever built in West Bloomfield, has been approved by the West Bloomfield Township Planning Commission. The Sills Building will be located on a 5.7 acre parcel on Orchard Lake Road, north of Fourteen Mile between Jack Cauley Chevrolet and the National Bank of Detroit. The building will contain 85,600 square feet. Kenneth Neumann, representing owner Arthur Sills, described the glass facade architecture sandwiched between masonry walls as "sensitive because it's round. I have an enlightened client."

A 6.8 PERCENT INCREASE in State Equalized Valuation (SEV) will help the Walled Lake Consolidated School District balance its 1985-86 budget. The district's SEV now stands in excess of $49 million, according to Patrick Donahue, assistant superintendent for business. The 6.8 percent increase in SEV will generate $606,750 in additional property tax revenues. Walled Lake's proposed 1985-86 budget anticipates general fund expenditures of $30.3 million — up from $26.7 million in 1984-85. The district will begin the next fiscal year with a surplus of $5.1 million.

REPAIRING CITY STREETS in Northville will cost an estimated $2 million, according to City Engineer Constant Edward (Jack) McNelly. Street maintenance in Northville has been deferred as a short-term cost-saving measure in recent years when the city was struggling with a lean budget. McNelly stressed that his $2 million estimate is in today's dollars and that recent labor contracts suggest that construction costs could be rising over the next few years. The city council is considering a road repair program over a five or 10-year period.

THE TWELVE MILE/TELEGRAPH Road intersection was the highest accident corner in Southfield during 1984. Accident totals for the first nine months of 1984 showed that there were 48 accidents at the intersection — 21 of them involving personal injuries. The Ten Mile/Greenfield intersection rated second (40 collisions, 15 involving injuries) and the Twelve Mile/Southfield Road intersection was third (35 accidents, 14 involving injuries).

A SERIES OF ZONING PROPOSALS to curtail office construction and encourage residential construction in downtown Birmingham were roundly criticized at a public hearing last week. The proposed zoning changes, recommended by the Birmingham Planning/Historic Commission, would raise height limitations on future residential buildings — up to six stories in some areas — and lower height limitations on office/commercial development.

Planning/Historic Commission Chairman Larry Sherman cautioned city officials not to make residential building heights any less than six stories. "If the heights of residential buildings are cut any more (than six stories), none will be developed and we will have offices only in Birmingham," he said. Sherman added that potential residential builders say six-story buildings are not high enough. "They said it would take seven or eight stories to make residential work," Sherman reported.

THE COST OF EDUCATION is rising in the Bloomfield Hills Public Schools. In fact, the cost of educating middle school students is going up 13 percent. Despite declining middle school enrollment, Bloomfield Hills school officials say the per-pupil cost of education will rise from $2,731 this year to $3,220 next year. At other levels, per-pupil costs in the elementary schools will be four percent higher and per-pupil costs in the high schools will be up almost 14 percent.

ELIMINATING PRIMARY ELECTIONS and allowing newly-elected council members to take office immediately are two of five proposed amendments to the Farmington Hills City Charter. Voters will be asked to vote on the amendments in November.

In addition to eliminating primaries and allowing newly-elected council members to take office immediately, the proposed charter amendments include: • Requiring candidates who are filling a council vacancy to run for election during the regular city council election rather than during a presidential election. • Eliminating the current charter provision requiring a board or commission member to resign if running for city council. • Changing provisions regarding the Board of Review so they comply with state law.

and recreation-sponsored activities now held in the Novi Road community building would be accommodated in the new facility. The community center wing would feature a large multi-purpose room with a stage. This room could be partitioned into seven separate meeting areas, or could be opened up and seat 300-400 people for dinner, or 700 auditorium-style.

"It's fine to have a nice civic center. But if it's not going to be a building accessible to residents on a 24-hour basis, then I say don't build it," said Leo Buffa. The 14-year Novi resident said he was concerned about taxing residents for the civic center, then making them "pay for every little bit of service."

"The city is in a position where there's a great need for a city hall... and a community building. I think the city should unanimously support the bonding issue," suggested resident Joella Shulman.

"I'm not going to work for them. I go to work with them," she said. For Henrich, her dream has come true, but she admits that it will not all be fun and games. "I know there will be times when I'm going to wonder why I did this, but I will make the best of the situation," Henrich said. Novi's Julie Henrich will work for the Peace Corps in Honduras

Peace Corps duty awaits Novi woman

By MARILYN MORRISON staff writer

NOVI — Dreams hardly ever become reality and if they do, you feel like the luckiest person in the world. Novi resident Julie Henrich has dreamed of going to the Third World ever since she was in seventh grade. And her dream is on the brink of coming true.

On September 29, Henrich will leave for Honduras with the U.S. Peace Corps where she will live for two years. Henrich graduated from Michigan State University this past spring with a dual major in elementary education and special education.

In Honduras, Henrich will be utilizing both degrees in a teacher training development program. Henrich will be stationed in Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras for three months. She will live with a Honduran family. After the three months are up, she will be assigned to a site in need of education. Henrich has spent the past four years researching the Peace Corps along with other missionary programs. Over Christmas vacation she mailed 35 to 40 letters to different missionary programs throughout the world in April. She found out she had been accepted to work for the Peace Corps. "Ever since then it has been one big high," she said. "While attending Novi High School, Henrich said she really didn't know what she wanted to do. All her friends were going into business and other related fields and knew what they wanted to do. "All I knew was that I wanted to work with people and I wanted to go to the Third World," she said.

Henrich: 'Anything you do involves a risk. If you believe in what you are doing, it is easy to accept the challenge and the risk.'

When applying to work for the Peace Corps, Henrich said her only request was that she be sent to a Spanish-speaking country. Henrich had four years of Spanish in high school. Asked if she thought she may have a hard time picking up the language, she responded that it would be a challenge. "I'll pick it up (Spanish) out of necessity," said Henrich. "Anything you do involves a risk. If you believe in what you are doing, it is easy to accept the challenge and the risk."

Henrich said she chose to work for the Peace Corps because they offered her a position where she could utilize both her degrees. Also, the Peace Corps gave her a job description, but told her she could fill it any way she saw fit. The flexibility of the program was important to her. "It leaves room for me to grow," she said. Besides adjusting to the language and cultural differences, Henrich said one of the biggest adjustments will be get-

Mayo Smith Society fulfills needs of Tiger fans

Local group recalls days when Tigers weren't hot

By B.J. MARTIN staff writer

NORTHVILLE — Every month, from Washington D.C. to California, thousands of die-hard Detroit Tiger baseball fans feverishly rummage their mailboxes in search of an envelope imprinted with a Northville return address. Neatly folded inside each of these sustenance-giving envelopes is the latest correspondence from a rapidly-growing organization called the Mayo Smith Society.

If you remember Mayo Smith, the crutchy manager who piloted the Tigers to a world championship in 1968, you're probably exactly the type of fan the Society would welcome as a member. "Mayo Smith is kind of an obscure name," admits Doug Petrosky, the Northville resident who handles the Society's incoming mail. "But we wanted it that way. 'You've got to be a fairly knowledgeable fan to want to join,' he explains. "The Mayo Smith Society isn't designed for your average nine-year-old kid who's been a Tiger fan since last year. . . . We're not calling it the Sparky Anderson Society for good reason."

Since being formed in April, 1983, the Society fills letters from members, arranges special benefits and events with ex-Tiger personnel as guests, and even offers club T-shirts and pins. Plus, each member receives the monthly newsletter of the Mayo Smith Society, Tigers Stripes. "Tigers Stripes" alone is worth the Society's $10 annual membership fee (all club proceeds go to Detroit-area charities). In each issue, members can catch up with such vital information as Barbara Garbey's base-stealing success rate, or field trivia questions like: "Who is the only major league player to hit at least 300 career homers without ever hitting at least 30 in one season?" (Answer: Al Kaline.) There now are about 1,200 fans in the Mayo Smith Society. About three-drinks in a bar that they would hold to tradition: never would they allow the Tigers to follow in the footsteps of other major-league teams that printed players' names on the backs of their uniforms.

But at the beginning of the 1969 season, all the Tiger uniforms arrived in camp with each player's name right above his number.

When he found out, Smith collared Campbell and demanded to know what had become of their pact. Campbell replied, "Well, Mrs. Petzer (wife of former Tiger owner Jim Petzer) thought putting the names on the uniforms was a good idea. And Mr. Petzer decided putting the names on the uniforms was a good idea, too."

"So," Campbell concluded, "I started thinking it was a pretty good idea, after all." After a pause, Smith finally said: "Sounds like a good idea to me, too." Campbell and ex-Tiger pitching phenom Mark "The Bird" Fidrych were the Society's special guest speakers at the luncheon. Each was presented an honorary plaque on behalf of the Society.

Campbell was honored for "his many years of service and dedication to keeping major league baseball in Detroit traditional and enjoyable year after year." The Bird was toasted for "showing us that a major league all-star can still play with a boy's heart."

"We had a great time," says Petrosky. "You could tell Jim Campbell and The Bird have a pretty good relationship — they were like a comedy team."

In other Mayo Smith Society events, Bill Freehan, Ernie Harwell, Gates Brown, Tom Brookens and Alan Trammell have been involved. "The Tiger organization's been very supportive of what we're doing," Petrosky adds. "In fact, Jim Campbell's a member. He helped us by saving us some tickets for the playoffs and World Series, which we bought and raffied off to our members."

The Society also helps organize activities like bus trips, such as one to Washington members will take to the Tiger series in Baltimore this week. Petrosky adds that more fundraising functions to support local charities are planned.

JANIS THORSBERG MILLER

ELIZ VALASSIS

JANIS THORSBERG MILLER, a former Milford resident, has been promoted from account executive to senior account executive at Luller Neal, Inc., a major advertising agency and public relations counseling firm headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia.

Miller joined Luller Neal in 1973 as a member of the secretarial staff. She was made a member of the agency's account service staff in 1975. She was named account executive in 1977 and has been in charge of advertising programs for such industries as carpet fibers, pest control, television broadcasting and tele-communications.

Miller is a graduate of the Institute of Advanced Advertising Studies of the American Association of Advertising Agencies. She is active in hospital volunteer work in Atlanta.

ELIZ VALASSIS of Northville, who has been associated with leading department store and drugstore chains, is the new owner of The Gold Place, considered one of the Detroit area's most unique gift stores.

An account executive for Chanel perfumes, Valassis also has a broad background in retail buying. She is a member of the Detroit Boat Club, Birmingham Power Squadron and the Navigators Club.

The new owner of the store located at 26263 West Twelve Mile in Southfield says its policy will remain the same, as will its huge stock of china, crystal, flatware, stemware and other fine gift selections and its lines of distinctive name merchandise.

SUE PYZIK of Walled Lake won a $2,100 award from the Employee Suggestion and Work Simplification Program at Manufacturers Hanover Mortgage Corporation (MHMC).

An assistant manager in the MHMC Personal Insurance Department, Pzyzik received the award for a suggestion that will save the corporation a sizable amount of money and decrease the work load for other employees in her area. She has been employed at MHMC since 1972.

MHMC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Manufacturers Hanover Corporation in New York, is one of the nation's largest mortgage bankers with 33 branches across the country. Corporate headquarters are in Farmington Hills.

GILBERT SPAMAN

KARIN L. HODGDON

GILBERT SPAMAN, vice president of Accountants' Computer Services, a Plymouth-based data processing company, has been named to a four-member planning committee for the 1986 Hewlett-Packard International User's Group Convention to be held in Detroit.

Spaman's assignment includes the planning, organization and supervision of the overnight installation of several large scale Hewlett-Packard Computer Systems at Cobo Hall. In addition, he will be responsible for maintenance of all vendor software to be demonstrated during the week-long activities.

An estimated 2,000 to 3,000 Hewlett-Packard users and vendors are expected at the convention to be held at the Westin Hotel and Cobo Hall in September of 1986.

Spaman is a resident of Northville.

KARIN L. HODGDON has been appointed Director of Catering for the Novi Hilton. The appointment was announced by Gary Seibert, general manager.

Hodgdon previously served as Catering Manager for the Pittsburgh Hilton. She joined the Pittsburgh Hilton as a trainee and student intern in 1979. She was employed by the hotel as a Banquet Representative in 1980.

Born and raised in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Hodgdon graduated from Purdue University with a BS degree in Restaurant, Hotel and Institutional Management.

The Novi Hilton is scheduled to open in July 1985.

BURT GAVITT of Milford recently was elected Vice President of Field Sales for the Tab Products Company of Palo Alto, California.

Gavitt joined Tab as a sales representative in its Detroit sales office in 1970. He was promoted to branch manager in 1974, district manager in 1976 and western regional manager in 1979.

A graduate of Michigan State University, Gavitt was with National Bank of Detroit prior to joining Tab.

Ford audio-design engineers William C. Adamson (front) and William A. Forbes check for noise sources that might cause interference with radio reception on the Ford Aerostar's new "SuperSound" system in an anechoic chamber at Ford's Diversified Products Technical Center in Dearborn.

Ford's Aerostar mini-van features remote control stereo sound system

Ford Motor Company's Aerostar mini-van features a Ford audio "first" — an optional sound system with remote controls for tuning the radio from either the front seat or rear compartment.

'Key people' weren't listed in story

In last week's Green Sheet article on Feigley Motors in Milford, two important names were absent from the list of "key people involved in the success of the company."

the fairy godmother's secret is out!

Don't let that "magic wand" fool you! She's tried to make us believe that with a wave of that wand, she can turn pumpkins into carriages, mice into white horses and rags into white gowns. But we know she's just like the rest of us! When we want to turn a baby crib into cash... an older car into a new one... or change from sales clerk to doctor's receptionist... the only magic wand we hold in our hand is a telephone receiver and the only thing we wave is our index finger as we dial the Classified Department of our newspaper! It's like magic the way good things come true for us with the help of Want Ads. And besides, we have a strong feeling that's the way the fairy godmother makes all her magic, too!

What's in that hot dog?

Story by Marilyn Morrison

The great American hot dog is almost as American as apple pie and Chevrolet, but do you know what you are eating? If you read labels, chances are you probably do. Under federal law, the ingredients used to produce the "great American hot dog" must be labeled according to contents — with the listing arranged in order of amount from highest to least.

If there are any by products (non meat products), they must be labeled. In 1955, meat packaging laws pertaining to hot dogs were established in Michigan. These laws, more stringent than federal USDA laws, brought the Michigan hot dog to a "top dog" ranking.

These laws have provided nutritious eating — mothers plop the hot, hot dog into a soft bun, adding whatever the kids like on it and it becomes an easy lunch. Cut into "finger food," the hot dog often is one of baby's early solids.

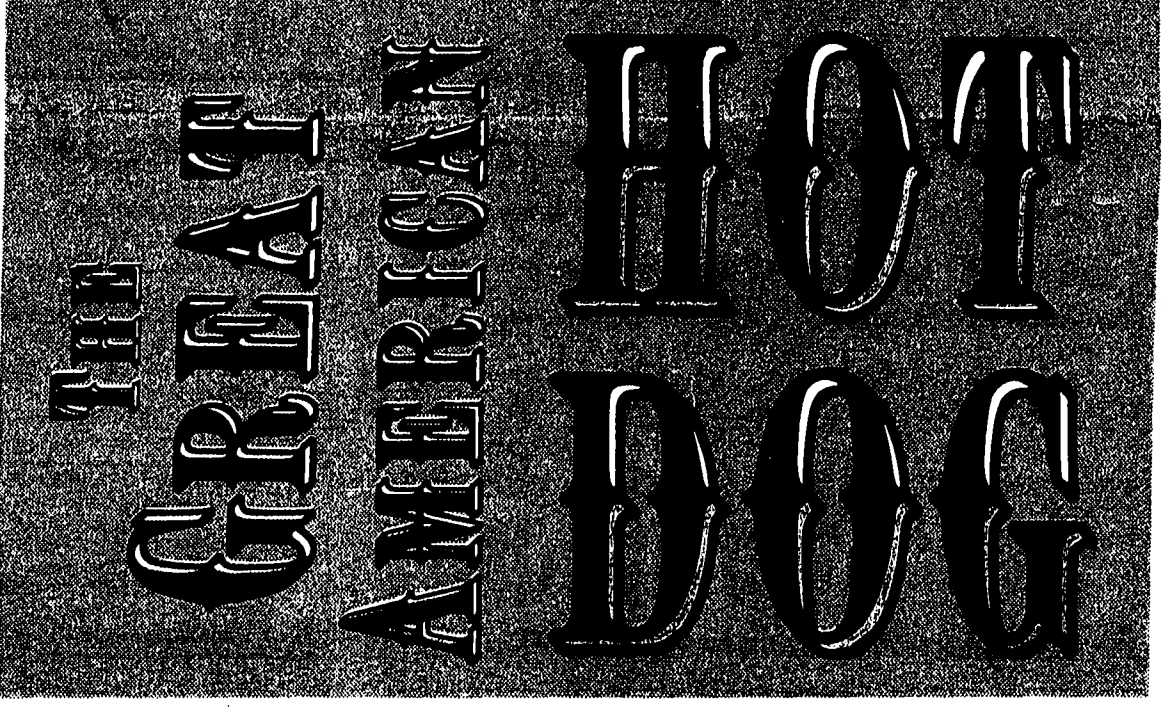

However, these protective laws only are applicable to local producers. Larger manufacturers are regulated by the USDA and are free to add by products such as cereal, dry milk products and soy protein.

Originally meat packaging requirements were established as an aid to wholesale trading to enable the producer to get a price for his product in line with its quality. By establishing requirements, sellers and buyers were able to communicate about the quality of their products in a common language.

Harold Zorin, the regional supervisor for the Michigan Department of Agriculture, said that many Michigan hotdog producers meet Michigan standards as well as USDA standards in order to give the consumer a top quality product.

"A lot of other states only follow USDA standards," Zorin said.

Under USDA standards, hotdog products don't just come in a single type anymore.

STORY BY THERESE PETERSMARK

Hot dogs. They're everywhere. They show up at baseball games, parades and are even sold at the beach. They're as American as mom and apple pie.

Some people top them with ketchup, mustard, onions, relish and sauerkraut. Some even use chili and cheese. So what else could possibly be done with the little wieners? Just when you thought you knew all there was to know about hot dogs, there's more. At last, there's more to hot dogs than "meets the mouth."

According to Fran Altman, executive secretary of the National Hot Dog and Sausage Council in Chicago, Americans eat 50 million hot dogs a day. With more than 200 brand names of hot dogs, the choice is mind-boggling.

Hot dog's other names—wiener, frankfurter, frank—better connect it with its European ancestry as but one of many sausages. Whatever it's called, though, it still contains approximately 150 calories per serving.

Its main ingredient is meat, but that doesn't necessarily mean that it's high in protein. A cooked hot dog typically contains 55 percent water and about another 20 percent is fat. The bun does make up in protein for some of what the hot dog lacks.

Altman said that the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) keeps an eye on the product by regulating and inspecting hot dog production and labeling. Michigan, like every state, has its own regulations said to be somewhat stricter than others.

Hot dogs are said to be the most popular sausage in the world. It's probably true in the U.S. since the National Hot Dog and Sausage Council proclaimed July to be National Hot Dog Month.

Hot dogs don't just come in a single type anymore.

There are beef franks, beef and pork franks, turkey dogs, chicken dogs, cheese wieners, and now Hormel has a new product called "Frank n' Stuff." These are frozen hot dogs that contain chili in the middle.

Altman said the variety of foods added to hot dogs to enhance its flavor will "keep adding on."

In the future expect to see things like hot dogs with smoked bacon bits and hot dogs with nacho cheese, which are already on the market.

"The variety of foods that are added to hot dogs may even fall over into other products, like smoked sausage," Altman said.

Altman also said that in Chicago one popular hot dog is the bagel dog and that "there's another variety of a hot dog wrapped in a real fluffy bread dough that is really selling."

Chicago isn't the only place to get an out-of-the-ordinary hot dog. Local restaurants are getting in on the business, too.

Red Hot Express, a restaurant that opened two weeks ago in Brighton, has a Chicago Style Dog. This is described as a Vienna Sausage on a steamed poppy seed bun served with chopped onion and mustard with a cucumber slice and "very green relish."

Another place that offers a variety of hot dogs is at Red Hot Lovers in Ann Arbor.

Hot dogs aren't just for meat eaters anymore. Red Hot Lovers offers a chance for vegetarians to enjoy the craze by offering what is called a No Dog. This has two types of cheese plus a choice of tomato, sprouts, lettuce, onions or any other condiments. The Tofu Tube Steak is another meatless meal that is described as having "crisp, browned tofugan on a whole wheat bun topped with cheese sprouts and tomatoes."

Some New Tricks for those Old 'Dogs'

Whether they're baked, boiled or grilled, Americans have a long-standing love affair with the hot dog. It's usually a favorite item for children and teenagers when it's time for a good, old-fashioned cook out.

Although many like their hot dogs accompanied by just a skinny strip of mustard to enhance their flavor, others have more exotic tastes. The Coney Island-style hot dog, smothered in chili and topped with raw onions, hits the spot for many connoisseurs.

But there are plenty of other interesting toppings and fixings to liven up even your 1,000th hot dog of the season. Here are some great cover-ups for that great American hot dog:

RELISHES TO RELISH

Try topping a wiener with homemade pepper relish. Grind two large green peppers, two large sweet red peppers and one medium onion. Pour boiling water over the ground vegetables, cover with a lid and let stand 20 minutes. Drain well.

Add to the mixture one-quarter cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, 1 1/2 teaspoons mustard seed and one-third cup cider vinegar. Simmer for 15 minutes. Chill well before serving. Makes two cups relish.

Corn relish is another interesting topping for hot dogs. Combine one 12-ounce can of drained whole kernel corn, two-thirds cup chopped celery, one-quarter cup French dressing, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons chopped onion, two tablespoons diced green pepper, one tablespoon diced pimiento and one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Simmer uncovered for half hour. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

Serve the guided missiles by sticking skewers into a head of cabbage and passing toasted buns and extra sauce.

COUNT-TO SAUCE

Cook one-half cup chopped onion in one-quarter cup butter or margarine. Add an eight-ounce can of tomato sauce, one cup water, two tablespoons sugar, one-half teaspoon sage, one-quarter teaspoon onion dry mustard, a dash of pepper, one tablespoon vinegar and one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Simmer uncovered for half hour. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

Serve the guided missiles by sticking skewers into a head of cabbage and passing toasted buns and extra sauce.

THE RIGHT STUFF

Grilled, stuffed franks wrapped in bacon are stand-by favorites. They are simple to make. Just slit the hot dogs lengthwise about three-quarters of the way through and slip the goodies in the center. Wrap the hot dogs in bacon and secure the strips with toothpicks at each end. Some prefer making foil "boats" on which to grill the hot dogs to

Discovery Toys provide income for mother and learning for kids

By MARILYN MORRISON
staff writer

NOVI — Dawn Frank's family room looks like a Toys R Us store.

As an educational consultant for Discovery Toys, she sells a unique line of educational toys, books and games for children and adults.

Discovery Toys, based in California, is a private company dependent on moms across the nation to market its product. The toys are sold at demonstrations in the privacy of a hostess' home.

The company was founded in 1977 by Lane Nemeth, a former educator and day care teacher. Nemeth created Discovery Toys because as a teacher she found many educational toys that were not available to her as a mother.

Frank became interested in Discovery Toys after attending a "toy party" with a friend. "I bought almost everything," said the Novi resident.

As a mother of two, Frank found that conducting business in her own home was an ideal situation. "I was very enthusiastic about the job," Frank said. At her first demonstration, she had $600 in sales. "It's great, I have fun and get paid at the same time," she said.

As an educational consultant, Frank schedules three demonstrations a week, Tuesday through Thursday. Each demonstration is hosted at a friend's home. Frank gives an hour presentation showing how the toys work and then takes orders.

Frank said her business basically started by word of mouth. She would tell a friend about Discovery Toys and her friend would arrange a home demonstration. The word spread and so did her business.

When asked how the profits were in the toy business, Frank smiled.

After each demonstration, Frank earns 24 percent of her net sales. The hostess earns 10 percent.

Novi News/STEVE FECHT

Frank does most of her business in Novi, but said she has gone to South Lyon and other surrounding areas. "Basically I go where there are a lot of young people," she said.

The toys and games sold by Discovery Toys are self-correcting and self-motivating. Each toy is designed to help children develop educational skills in a non-frustrating way.

Several of the board games teach the children how to share, understand directions and learn colors and numbers. The games are graduated in difficulty and designed according to lack instead of skill. "This helps to build a child's self-esteem," Frank said.

All the toys sold by Discovery Toys are durable plastic and safe. There are no sharp ends on any of the toys and most sell for under $10. The toys are chosen for their safety and high quality.

"We like to think our toys are 90 percent child and 10 percent toy," Frank said.

Discovery Toys meet all federal regulations on safety and each toy is put to test by day care centers, teachers and most importantly, by kids. All toys are guaranteed for one year.

One of the unique things Frank stressed about Discovery Toys is the home demonstration. The success rate with these toys because of the demonstration is great, she said.

By demonstrating the toys instead of putting them on the shelves of a retail store, parents learn first hand how to present the toys to their children. Many of the really unique toys would be passed by if sold in a retail store, Frank said.

"Even if parents don't buy any toys, the home demonstration provides good information on child development," she said. "But they are not toys that will end up in the bottom of the toy box."

All Discovery Toys are unique and an asset in child development. One of the more original items sold by the company is Kinder Krunchies — a cookbook with recipes listed in alphabetical order. The book helps children with their alphabet and also explains what happens to food when it is cooked. For example, under the letter E, there are recipes for eggs. On the opposite side of the recipe there are questions like, "What happens to an egg when it is boiled?"

Novi's Dawn Frank has found that selling educational toys has provided her the best of two worlds — she is able to augment the family income while staying home with her children. In the picture above, Dawn looks over a group of educational toys with two of her quality control experts — Kelly, age one year, and Traci, 4. In the picture on the left, Traci demonstrates that her mother practices what she preaches by making sure her own youngsters have an ample supply of educational toys to play.

That's entertainment

Christine Price, 4, provides ample testimony that you don't have to be old to be talented. The young dance student performed like a veteran hoof when she strutted through her "Tin Soldier" routine in preparation for a concert put on by the Piazza Dance Company at Novi High School recently. Eat your heart out, Juliet Prowse. This kid's got talent.

'Moose and Da Sharks' to entertain on July 4th

By JEANNE CLARKE
news special writer

The Novi Summer Concert Series will continue tomorrow (Thursday, July 4) when Moose and Da Sharks perform at Lakeshore Park at 7 p.m. The group plays music from the '60s and '90s. The concert will precede the Novi-Walled Lake Fireworks Show at dusk.

The July 4 concert will be the only concert at Lakeshore Park this summer. The next concert will be held at the Novi Municipal Building on July 30. The rest of the concerts will be held in the West Oaks shopping center.

Novi Parks and Recreation will sponsor the annual Junior Olympics at the Novi High School Track on July 10. Participation is free; registrations can be made by calling Parks & Rec at 349-1976.

The Olympics will include separate categories and age classifications for boys and girls from 8-and-under through 14 years old.

Novi Highlights

YOUTH ASSISTANCE: Tom Pritt, director of the Novi Youth Assistance Team, reports that attendance is up this year with teens participating in foosball, ping-pong, Monopoly, chess, checkers and Yahtzee as well as video games (Star Wars, Defender, Mr. Do and Pac-Man).

Tournaments are being held in all the games, and the winners receive prizes and trophies. Upcoming Teen Center activities include soccer, softball, speedball, aerobics clinics and judo demonstrations. The teen dances on Friday nights include special events such as a breakdancing competition.

Fritt said he is attempting to obtain permission to use additional facilities so teens can play dodgeball or basketball, or watch movies on a VCR.

Adult volunteers are needed to work as chaperones at the Friday night

PERSONALS: Patricia Laurette (Laure) Byberg was guest of honor at a bridal shower at the Lathrup Village Municipal Building. Hostesses were Jeanne Julien, Dorothy Camilli, Pat Kamar, Joan Julien and Shirley Lamp. Approximately 30 guests attended from Novi, Livonia, Detroit and surrounding areas. Laurie will be married to Michael Julien at Holy Family Church in July.

The Independent Rebekah Club will hold its last meeting of the summer at Mountain Jack's on July 8. Ladies are making reservations. Fifteen members are expected to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Needham attended a luncheon in Brighton where they were joined by the Pete Gatter family of Holt while visiting with out-of-town relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Schendel of Oklaoma.

Mr. and Mrs. David White and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Allen have returned from a visit to Tennessee where they attended the Grand Ole Opry and other points of interest. They were met in Tennessee by Mrs. Myrza Ward, a former longtime Novi resident now living in Florida.

LA LECHE LEAGUE: "The Art of Breastfeeding and Overcoming Difficulties" will be the topic of the Novi/ Northville La Leche League's next meeting on July 10 at 9:30 a.m. The meeting will be held at 30016 Montmorency in the Chateau Estates Mobile Home Park.

Mothers and expectant mothers are invited to attend, and children are welcomed. Call 349-5380 for more information.

The group is attempting to make its services more available by scheduling more meetings. Anyone who would like to attend but has conflicts with the meeting schedule is asked to call 349-5380.

BLUE STAR MOTHERS: The Blue Star Mothers celebrated Betty Priest's birthday at their last meeting at Helen Burnstrom's home in Allen Terrace in Northville.

The ladies will sponsor their annual Bingo Day for approximately 70 residents of the Ann Arbor Veterans Hospital on July 11. They will serve home-baked goods and ice cream sundae. Canteen toons will be given as bingo prizes.

The ladies also will furnish over 300 trays for hospital residents on July 4.

President Winnie Dobek would like to hear from anyone in the community who can donate good used clothing, toiletries, eyeglasses, hearing aids, electric razors, paperback books and games for hospital residents. People with items to donate are asked to call her at 349-1904 as soon as possible so the items can be collected and given to patients in July.

The Blue Star Mothers also are looking for individuals to help them with their work on behalf of the residents of the Veterans Hospital.

PARKS & REC SENIORS: Approximately 50 seniors attended the Breakfast Luncheon at Lakeshore Park recently. The next outing is slated for July 9. The cost of $1.75 includes a pancake breakfast and a catered luncheon at noon. Activities include a nature walk, crafts and line dancing at the Picnic Shelter. Call 349-1976 for more information or to register for the July 9 session.

The Novi O-T's, the senior citizen softball team coached by Chuck Burke, defeated Clarkston 2-0 last week at Pioneer Park. The next home game is against Troy on July 24.

There's a still room for the trip to Toronto on July 23-25. The cost of $99 per person includes transportation, two nights at the Royal York Hotel, one lunch and one dinner. There also will be time for shopping and touring.

Seniors are reminded that they can obtain Senior Identification cards at Parks and Recreation offices on Sixthgate. The cards entitle seniors to discounts from participating merchants. The discount directory is free.

Seniors who are not receiving the Senior Herald Newsletter should call 349-1976 to get on the mailing list.

CONCERT BAND: The Novi Concert Band has a busy schedule during July with appearances at the Millrace Fireside Chats also are available on topics including "Do We Face Our Feelings?" "My Child: I Love You, But I Don't Always Like You," "Adjusting to Single Life" and "I Would Like to Get Married, But..." Anyone interested in more information about Parents Without Partners may call 624-5540.

Local church plans to expand building

FARMINGTON HILLS — Members of the Hope Lutheran Church in Farmington Hills participated in groundbreaking ceremonies for a new addition after their June 16 worship service.

The church is located on Twelve Mile, just east of Haggerty Road in Farmington Hills.

Reverend Victor Mesenbring, pastor of Hope Lutheran, noted that the congregation voted recently to add some 2,500 square feet of space to existing facilities. The addition will include a large room for fellowship purposes. The large room can be divided into seven educational rooms.

In addition, the addition will include two nursery rooms for use during worship services and education classes.

"The additional space will be a tremendous asset to us when our classes resume in September," said Reverend Mesenbring. "We hope now to be able to expand our entire educational ministry."

Carl Gaiser of Carl Gaiser Associates was responsible for the design work of the addition as well as the original sanctuary. He is an active member of the parish and currently is in the process of moving his architectural office from Southfield to Grand River in downtown Farmington.

David Hajjar of Oak Builders, Inc., in Livonia is general contractor for the project.

Hope Congregation is affiliated with the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches. It was organized in 1977, and the current sanctuary was dedicated in March 1980.

During the summer, members of the congregation meet for worship services each Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

Tips for keeping cool

NOVI — You know it's coming. Last February you dreamed about it — reality hot summer weather.

With the arrival of summer, Michigan weather can be a great irritant of what life must be like in the Mojave Desert. Hot. Humid. Dry.

However, with the relatively new invention of air conditioning, and with other tips to keep the house cool, Michiganers can survive the occasional hot streaks that hit the state during the summer.

For beginners, high efficiency air conditioners can make your home an "oasis of comfort" without exorbitant expense. For example, setting your air conditioner at 78 degrees instead of 75 degrees can save you approximately nine percent on your electricity usage.

Improvements in the design of air conditioners has increased the efficiency of most new models by about 30 percent over older models.

Other tips for cooling your home include:

- Using an all-house fan in the attic to draw hot air from your house during the night provides a "breeze" effect throughout the house while you sleep.
- Keeping out direct sunlight by closing drapes, blinds, awnings or shades keeps your house cooler and lets your air conditioner run less.
- During the day, close off rooms not in use, such as bedrooms.
- If possible, run your major appliances during the cooler parts of the day, such as morning or evening. This allows natural ventilation to carry the heat away as opposed to letting it build up inside.
- If you use an air conditioner that fits in a window, close off the furnace registers in the room. This prevents the cool air from escaping to the basement.

Reverend Victor Mesenbring was handling the shovel when the congregation at the Hope Lutheran Church broke ground for a 2,500 square foot addition to their existing church on Twelve Mile, just east of Haggerty Road. Also present for groundbreaking ceremonies were (left to right) Scott Seppala, Jennifer Grzesik, Elaine Douglass, William Pfaffmann, Dorothy Mattson, Clarence Dehne, Evelyn Gernadett, Mesenbring and Carl Gaiser, architect for the addition. The congregation will continue to meet every Sunday at 9:30 a.m. throughout the summer while construction is underway.
