Just two residents offered input when the Novi City Council held a public hearing Monday, May 4, to consider the proposed 1987-88

The council has held numerous work sessions in compiling this year's financial plan. If the proposed budget is approved at the council's May 11, session, the total city miliage rate will go from its current level of 12.7289 mills to the new figure of 12.9768 mills.

What that increase will mean to the average homeowner receiving his tax bill next year is: the city tax bill on a $100,000 home assessed at $50,000 would currently be $636.45 at the millage rate of 12.7289. Under the proposed millage raise of 12.9768 mills, the tax bill on that same $100,000 home (if there were no increase in the SEV) would be $648.84, or an increase of $12.39.

For the taxpayer who wants to know his projected city tax, based on the proposed 12.9768 millage, City Finance Director Les Gibson said to multiply the SEV by the proposed millage rate. This year's overall SEV increase in the city was 4.76 percent. The increase is $12 per

This year's budget includes the addition of three new police officers, two to start in July, and one to start in January. It also includes a new fire inspector position for the fire department.

Council members have called this year's budget a tight one, low in capital expenditures to make room for the additional personnel costs. The council cut the budgets of several city departments and the planning commission from the original figures presented by the city administration.

City Manager Edward Kriewall gave an overview of the complete budget during the public hearing. Kriewall said the millage increase is due in part to the loss of funds under the federal revenue sharing program. The program was discontinued last year, but Kriewall said the effects on the city will be felt most during the coming year. The city has traditionally used its federal revenue sharing funds to purchase capital equipment.

A $70,000 federal revenue sharing carry-over is slated for use in purchasing a new DPW dump truck. Kriewall noted the cost of

By CHRISTOPHER J. KOZLOWSKI

There are people who complain there aren't enough hours in the day or week to accomplish all they have set out to do.

And then there are people who never complain abou lack of time, simply because they enjoy what they do too much and seemingly cannot get enough of it.

Sarah Eheart falls into the latter

A housewife and the mother of three, Eheart is not your average homemaker. Having been active in the Girl Scouts of America for about the last 30 years, she is committed to providing a worthwhile growing experience for area girls.

Eheart, 40, said Girl Scouting provides young ladies with opportunities to develop their leadership skills and mold their values. Through workshops on interpersonal communication, home skills, camping skills and trip planning, Eheart said Girl Scouts are exposed to a wide variety of experiences and people - which helps them grow personally and morally.

Having been involved in Girl Scouts since the first grade, Eheart has encouraged two of her own daughters to become active members. Daughters Laura, 16, and Angela, 11, are both active members in the two troops she leads. She has a third daughter, Diana, who is seven-months-old.

But simply leading two troops with about 30 girls does not seem to be enough for Eheart, who recently accepted the additional responsibility of being Novi-Metro Unit Director.

She was appointed director April 14. As director, she will help coordinate neighborhood special events sponsored by all of the area's 19 troops, and she will serve as chairperson during troop leader meetings every month.

Serving on several Girl Scout committees, combined with leadership training sessions and regular troop meetings, Eheart said she participates in at least three meetings each week, and devotes many hours of preparation to each. Her responsibilities would be demanding for anyone to keep up with, but Eheart says she has little trouble being active with the Scouts and keeping her family happy at the same time. Her husband, Raymond, 39, is an engineer who encourages her to participate. "He is very supportive of all the work we have done," she reported.

Sewage capacity increase pursued

The newest "Super Sewer" project. Novi's best chance for a costeffective increase in sewage capacity, according to City Manager Edward Kriewall, is moving ahead slowly but surely.

In a letter to the city council presented at the May 4 council meeting, Kriewall updated the council on the current state of the Super Sewer project.

Super Sewer, known officially as the North Huron Valley/Rouge Valley Wastewater Control System, is a plan for a regional wastewater sewer system.

The recently amended facilities plan would bring together 10 communities in a cost-sharing program to provide additional services to western Wayne and Oakland county communities suffering from burgeoning populations and insufficient capacities for sewers to serve

The preliminary price tag on the newest Super Sewer project is $27.8 million. Original cost apportionment plans showed Novi responsible for approximately $7.63 million of that tab.

Kriewall's letter stated that according to Dave Vago, the assistant director of the Wayne County Office of Public Works, the project has been submitted to the DNR for facilities plan approval.

"Mr. Vago indicated that there was not too much that Wayne County could do in the interim until this plan is approved," said Kriewall in his letter to the council.

"Internally, Wayne County is revising and negotiating on the cost allocations associated with the new project. Mr. Vago is confident that they will be able to work out any problems that have been reported regarding the Livonia and Westland allocations," the letter stated fur-Kriewall sald Wayne County anticipates distributing the new cost agreements to the communities involved by mid-May. "The timetable for having all communities on board is the end of August." Kriewall noted.

"Wayne County is looking forward to receiving a grant in the October allocation. This project retains the number one priority with the state," he said.

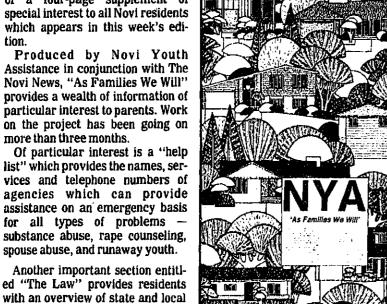

Kriewall has previously indicated to the council that the Super Sewer option is currently the most viable alternative for the city to pursue in its search for additional sewage treatment capacity. Other options the city has investigated have been the construction of a force main to the Detroit plant with a preliminary cost figure of $14 million. Kriewall told the council last month that the City of Detroit Water Board does not want to see both Super Sewer and a Novi force main on-line to their plant.

Kriewall told the council at the May 4 meeting that JCK & Associates, city consulting engineers, would bring the preliminary estimates for the force main to the council during the May

By ANN E. WILLIS

Although the vote has been taken, and the Novi City Council has turned down the "First Responder" program on a 4-3 vote, discussion of the topic still echoes through the corridors of city hall.

Following any close decision by the city council it is not unusual to see a few heads shaken in disgust or to hear a few disgruntled comments from the minority voters around the table. But over the past week. voices have been raised in several sections of the community decrying the council's action against the pro-

Members of the Police/Fire Needs Committee have voiced frustration with the council's action; members of the city's volunteer fire department are unhappy with the decision; and both the fire and police chiefs have come out in adamant support of the program.

Novi is one of the few suburban communities in Oakland County without a "first responder" program. Neighboring communities of Walled Lake, Commerce, South Lyon, Milford, Wixom and Farmington Hills all have implemented similar programs, according to Novi Fire Chief Arthur Lenaghan.

The Novi dispatch center, based in the city's police station, provides dispatching services for Novi, Wixom, Lyon Township and South Lyon. All except Novi use a form of the "first responder" program.

The "first responder" program is an emergency response program of simultaneous dispatch. The program proposed for Novl would alert the police and fire departments, as well as the private ambulance service, when a life-threatening emergency occurs. All three

Currently, Novi dispatches only police and the ambulance service to emergency situations.

Paving and Storm Sewer at Eleven Mile and Meadowbrook Road (SAD 95): After a brief discuyssion about safety factors, the council unanimously approved preliminary paving plans and construction of the road and sewer. SAD 95 consists of approximately 700 feet of 36-foot wide pavement with necessary storm sewer on Eleven Mile west of Meadowbrook Road. Council members had expressed concern that narrowing Eleven Mile from three lanes to two lanes may not be safe. However, City Engineer Joseph Kapelczak of JCK & Associates responded that the road would be safe with proper signage and proper lane separations. The estimated cost of $157,036 for SAD 95 will be assessed at a cost of aproximately $161.89 per front foot.

Meadowbrook/Eleven Mile water main (SAD 96): The council unanimously approved preliminary plans for the SAD after excluding all property controlled by the ERI Development Company. The SAD will consist solely of land owned by the Trammell Crow Company.

The district consists of approximately 1,100 feet of 12-inch water main on Eleven Mile, west of Meadowbrook Road, and 450 feet of 12-inch water main on Meadowbrook (SAD 98): The council voted Road, north of Eleven Mile. The ERI Development Company approximately 3,770 feet of 12-inch

Woodland clarity requested

A series of proposed amendments to the city's Woodlands Ordinance were sent back for additional clarification by the Novi Planning Commission at its April 15 meeting. Commissioners questioned the clarity of proposed changes for not being specific enough in defining what classifies specific woodlands and what conditions would require those definitions to change.

Commissioners also questioned the classification of emergent woodlands ... and the procedures by which woodlands status could be updated.

Huron Valley Hospital's Physicians Referral Program.

Because some things just can't wait.

One of the most important parts of good health is a regular checkup, for everyone, not just the kids. If it's been "too long" since someone in your family has seen a doctor, no matter the reason, you can do something now. Maybe just a little reminder and a gentle nudge are all it will take. But perhaps some help finding the right doctor will be necessary. If that's the case, let Huron Valley Hospital's no charge Physicians Referral Program go to work for your family.

As close as the phone, our health care professionals are ready to listen and help. They understand all the reasons for needing a referral — new in town; doctor has retired; never had a doctor; just not comfortable with this doctor. Whatever the reason, whatever the need, the Huron Valley Hospital's Physicians Referral Program can help your family find the right doctors.

Ask us about office hours and locations. Give us your preference for male or female doctors. Do you want a Family Practice physician? Do you need a specialist? Huron Valley Hospital has more than 300 physicians on staff. Our doctors are located here in the community and throughout Oakland, Livingston and Wayne Counties. We'll find just the right doctor for you. And when we do, you'll have the comfort of knowing that if hospitalization is ever necessary, you'll stay in the neighborhood, because you, your family and your doctor are all part of the same Huron Valley Hospital family. The projected cost of the program for the 1987-88 fiscal year is $20,000. The figure represents the amount of additional money necessary for the 'extra runs by the fire department, inot for any additional training of Epersonnel.

According to Chambers and Lenaghan, sufficient levels of training already exist within the fire department to begin the program immediately.

Mayor Patricia Karevich, Council Members Martha Hoyer, Ronald Watson and Nancy Covert voted against the immediate implementation of the program. During the council meeting, Karevich told Chambers she needred more information about the program and did not want to implement the system until the final report from the Police/Fire Needs Committee had been brought for-

Mutual aid allows two-level response, police and ama fire department from a neighborbulance, if both are available," he ing community to help when the said. Chambers told the committee situation warrants it. Lenaghan the key factor was critical time reported that Novi has not been in a levels of response and training position to offer "first responder" levels now available in the fire mutual aid to surrounding comdepartment.

> The committee expressed concern that the program could only be brought back to the council for additional consideration if the proposal were changed significantly or if a majority voter asked to reconsider

Assistant City Manager Craig Klaver, who is the city administration liaison on the Police/Fire Needs Committee, told committee members. "In my opinion the issue was decided not on the merits of the program but on how it was

Father Leslie Harding, a member of the committee, called the council's actions "bloody inconsistent," considering their recent moves to hire four FPO's and three additional police officers.

Don Dominick, president of the Novi Firefighters Association, said the volunteer firefighters are frustrated by the council's action. Dominick, an emergency medical technician, has undergone hours of training on a volunteer basis. He said he feels that training should be put to use to help the community.

Police Chief Lee BeGole agreed with Dominick. BeGole said he "very definitely" supports the "first responder" program presented by Chambers to the council. "I see it as a help. At the present time we (police officers) carry oxygen and are CPR-trained, but we could use the help and more equip-

Lenaghan believes the high level department should be utilized by the community. He stressed the department will not be called to all medical runs, simply the lifethreatening emergencies, when time and training are of the essence. Lenaghan said the dispatchers are trained to determine what type of emergency is being called

In response to the suggestion that already-stressed daytime response would be stretched by addition of the program. Lenaghan said it is impossible to staff for every emergency. "We are in a better position now than we were over six months ago to handle this type of program," he said.

Chances are high the "first responder" program will come efore the council again. The Police/Fire Needs Committee has not backed off of its initial recommendation, and will likely include the program in its final presentation to council in July.

Likewise, if members of the majority vote have a change of mind in the next few weeks, they may bring the matter back for council reconsideration, According to Covert and Watson, a lack of solid information during the initial committee presentation is what held them from voting for the program. Both said they would have like to have seen the minutes of committee meetings relating to the "first responder" program and the backup information from the three emergency medical experts the committee interviewed. "I voted against it, not because it might not be very worthwhile," Covert said. "But because I had nothing to go

Group OKs changes in traffic study policy

By CHRISTOPHER J. KOZLOWSKI

Developers of smaller projects in the City of Novi may soon benefit from changes in traffic study requirements recommended last week by the Site Plan Process and Fee Review Committee Committee members approved six amendments to the existing city requirements. The proposed amendments will be presented to the Novi Planning Commission for approval at the May 20 meeting. The review committee, made up of city council nembers, area developers and other city officials, unanimously approved the changes April 30. The following revisions were approved by the commit-

☐ Traffic studies for residential areas would be mandated by the number of proposed houses instead of total acreage. The change would replace the "10 acre test," which mandated a traffic study for all residential projects occupying 10 acres or more. The new policy would require a study for all projects with at least 100 residen-

☐ Office projects occupying more than 50,000 square feet will be required to have a traffic study, according to the changes. Currently, some zoning districts in the city permit large office developments on smaller parcels of land. Under the current policy, an office building containing more than 150,000 square feet could be located on a site less than 10 acres.

☐ Hotels and motels containing more than 100 units would now be required to have a traffic study. ☐ Fees have been restructured so that developers of smaller projects would pay slightly less for what is currently required, and the minimum fee categories have been expanded to include larger projects. The changes would benefit applicants with small projects by reducing

☐ A separate fee and traffic study questionnaire has been developed for fast-food restaurants, sit-down restaurants (containing more than 150 seats), banks/savings and loan institutions and party/convenience stores. These changes would also benefit applicants by reducing costs and minimizing study re-

□ Revisions to the fee structure, separating site plan review fees from traffic study fees would also reduce fees for submittal of revised information. City Council Member Martha Hoyer, who chairs the committee, said the changes to existing policies were made primarily to make the fee structure more fair for developers of smaller projects. "The (current) fees were not comparable," Hoyer said. "What we are trying to do is achieve comparable fees for everyone. The way it was set up under the current system, they just were not comparable.

"The way our ordinance was enacted, it only took into account parcel size, and not necessarily what was built on the parcel," Hoyer said. "So, for instance, you might have had a 150,000 square foot office on a 10-acre site. (or the same size office) on a three-acre site" and the fees

hampering its authoritative control by having too many traffic studies to consider, and they say an exorbitant dollar amount in fees would be spent on each project.

By requiring a developer to conduct his own traffic study, and requiring consultants to have their own traffic study — and at the same time the city having its own traffic study theory — developer Lee Walter said the study process will be snagged by too many opinions and not enough decision making.

"What really should be done is that the city should have one engineer who would make a survey of the traffic situation, and then the city should make a decision as to what should be done," Walter said. "(Under the current process) you are going to bring in four or five different groups, and everyone is going to have a different opinion," he added.

"(City leaders) are thinking about what is going to happen down the line, and they are putting everything into its proper perspective," Walter said. "They are right to require traffic studies, but traffic studies should be under the control of the city. The city should make the determination as to how it is going to function.

"If we have a problem with what (the city) comes up with, then we should be able to bring in another company and say, 'This is what we came up with,' and then

"But to have several different opinions every time you come in with a subdivision with over 100 units, to me, doesn't make any sense," Walter added.

In each phase of the traffic study process, a fee is required to be paid by the developer. According to the changes, original fees could range from $400 to $2,600, depending upon the scope of the project. Developers would pay a flat rate fee for the preliminary site plan and the initial traffic study (once for a study on their own, and again for a study by the city), and then pay a percentage of the original fee for subsequent plan and study revisions and final site plan approval.

The total fee cost could quickly reach thousands of dollars, depending on the size of the project, according to Walter, who reasoned that developers should not have to bear the entire cost of the development. "You are talking about (thousands of developer) ollars that could be used for something else," Walter In opposition, the city mainatins that developers hould bear the burden of development,

"We have had a real problem with the traffic study fee schedule because developers feel they are paying for a study that the city should actually be funding," Hoyer

"But the city feels developers who are adding to the traffic problem should then pick up the cost of the

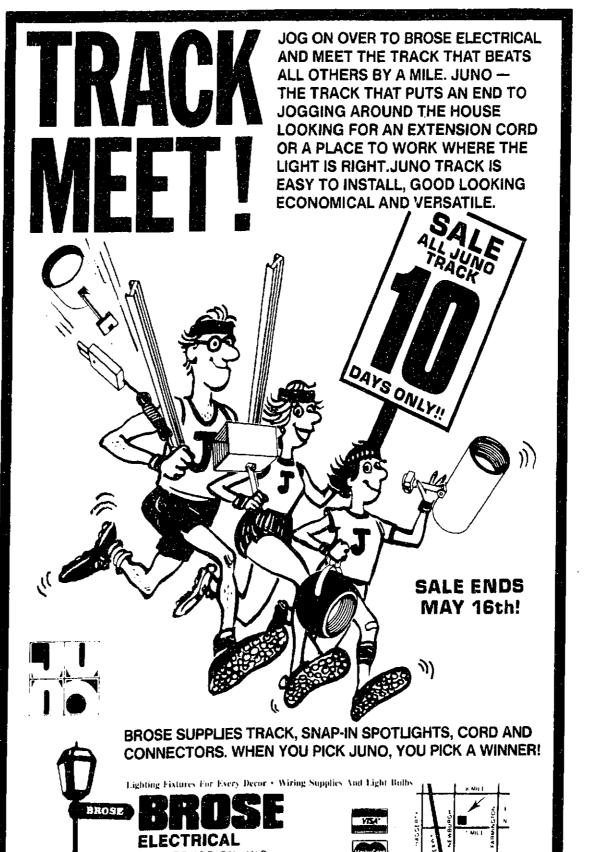

According to Hoyer, the city first started requiring traffic studies two years ago. The first changes to the original policies as proposed by the Site Plan Process and Fee Review Committee may be on the May 20 planning commission agenda, according to Karen Tindale, clerk of the planning commission. If approved, the changes would then have to meet approval of the city council before they could be implemented.

COMMERCE - Seven Michigan State historic sites will be featured on a tour of Commerce Village sponsored by the Commerce Township Area Historical Society on Saturday, May 16, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Offered in conjunction with the Michigan Sesquicentennial, the tour will begin at the Richardson Community Center on South Commerce at Oakley Park Road in Commerce Township. Tickets are priced at $4 for adults and $2 for children under 12 vears old.

Participants may drive their own cars or take SEMTA buses which will come with tour guides.

Highlights of the tour will include the architecturally outstanding Field House that is being restored by its new owner, Dr. Robert Ho, a neurosurgeon, who is restoring the 20-room house for professional use The house has been recommended by the Michigan State Bureau of History for nomination to the National Register of Historical Places.

An interesting sidelight of the tour is that Pearl Parshall Terzia, 91, will travel from Saginaw to Commerce to renew her memories of the village where she was raised and where her grandfather, Milton Parshall, owned and operated the Commerce Roller Mill before the turn of the century. The Mill Race Park, site of the mill, is now a State Historic Site.

Other sites on the tour will be the Payne-Ingersoll House, the old Commerce United Methodist Church, the early Commerce schoolhouse now known as the Donohue House, the Morrison House, the Andrews-Phillips House and the Malcolm-Hickok House.

Refreshments and luncheon will be available during the tour at another historic site, the Byers Country

On display at the Richardson Community Center during the tour will be the paintings of the renowned Michigan artist James Welch of Fen-

Who are our neighbors?

SANDY MITCHELL Sales Representative

of Canadian decent, but lately I've been thinking a lot about our northernly neighbors.

I really don't know why maybe it's the Red Wing-Toronto Maple Leaf hockey series, or the recent discussions between Canada and the United States concerning acid rain. For some reason, I keep thinking of Canada as if I didn't know it really exsisted before.

Canada is a wonderful country. It is larger than the U.S. in square miles but most of its northern land mass is uninhabited wilderness or frozen tundra. The southern sections of the country are in close proximity with our country and the similarities are apparent. But there seems to be a wholesomeness and cleanliness to all of Canada that I like.

Canadian cities like Toronto. Vancouver and Calgary are modern, clean, exciting and alive. I visited Toronto once as a youngster and I don't think I've ever been more impressed with a city. It had everything that the great American cities have except the slums and the out-of-control crime. I was told it is expensive to live there, but it seemed to be worth it to me.

Sometimes I think we take Canada for granted. We often boast that the U.S.-Canada border is the longest undefended boarder in the world, and that is good. But people often misunderstand that Canada is a completey sovereign country, and the only ties it has with the United States are its common boarder and similar political and economic structures.

I remember one time quite a while ago, some misguided kid actually admitted he thought Canada was a state. I know what you are saying — just a misguided kid, but I believe there is a general ignorance all across our nation when it comes to Canada. Here's a quiz: What is the Canadian national capital? Who is the Canadian Prime Minister (no he's not called a President)? How many provinces are there in Canada (no they are not called states)? What is the largest city

We have a tendency to dominate Canadian lives with our T.V., businesses, culture and ideology, and I wonder if occasionally they don't resent it.

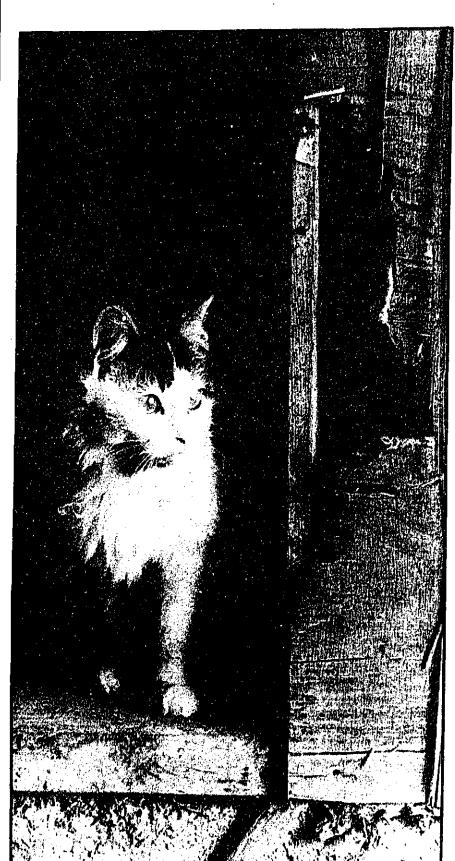

My guess is that very few U.S. citizens could answer those questions. The majority would say that the capital is either Montreal, Toronto or Quebec City and that the Prime Minister is that Trudeau guy who had a nice looking, but very strange wife. Many people in this area have gone to Windsor, noticed that it is very similar to some of our cities and forgotten that it is located in a foreign country.

Sometimes I wonder if we like Canada more than they like us. To us they are that nice little country to the north that stands by our side in almost anything, makes great beer, and is the home to all those hockey players on our teams. But I can't help but think that to them we are a huge big brother type who wants their friendship as long as they keep in line. We have a tendency to dominate Canadian lives with our T.V., businesses, culture and ideology, and I wonder if occasionally they don't resent it. Because despite all the similarities and all the aspects of our culture we throw at them, Canada is still an independent nation of more than 20 million

By the way, the guiz answers (so you won't have to look in the encyclopedia) are as follows: Ottawa, Ontario is the national capital; Brian Mulroney is Prime Minister; there are 10 Provinces and two territories; and Montreal (population 1,222,000) is the country's most populous city.

weapon against developers and are thwarting plans to expand Somerset

The suit alleges that the city uses its parking space ordinance to place businesses "at the mercy of the city and thus obtains a coercive advantage over them by establishing an arbitrary and unreasonable zoning ordinance and then granting variances . . . for comparatively short periods." The suit alleges further that threats of discontinuance "are then used to chill the businesses in their pursuit of legitimate statutory and constitutional rights." To make room for a planned 56,000 square foot expansion of Somerset Mall, Frankel Associates wants to add 2,366 parking spaces. The city's parking ordinance requires 3,017 spaces.

PROSTITUTION AND LOITERING CHARGES have been filed against three women ticketed at Garden City massager parlors.

The charges were leveled after Garden City police sent an undercover officer to the Rose Garden Health Spa at 28235 Ford Road and the Yoko Oriental Spa at 29525 Ford Road. All three women entered pleas of "not guilty" at Garden City Police Captain James Frank said the action was part of an occasional surveillance of the two spas. "I don't at this time perceive (the two spas) to be a big problem in Garden City, but time will tell," said Frank.

The Michigan Certified Nurserymen Program is developed, drafted and administered by the Mihigan Association of Nurserymen. This professional program is designed to identify dedicated individuals who are knowledgeable and experienced in their chosen field.

Certification status is earned through practical experience in the industry, passing a written test reviewing the basics of the industry which is given annually in February, and committing to a continuing education process. To qualify to take the test, a candidate should be employed by and have one year of experience with a licensed Michigan landscape nursery business.

Following certification, Michigan Certified Nurserymen must continue their education by attending at least one industry-related

KAREN DAAVETTILA of Northville has been named "Outstanding Employee of the Year" at Little Caesars Enterprises. The announcement was made by Michael Ilitch, chairman of the board. Daavettila, who is administrative assistant to the chairman of the board, started with Little Caesars 10 years ago as a receptionist and secretary. Her hard work and dedication elevated her to her current position, Ilitch said. One of 15 children, Daavettila is a graduate of South Lyon High School and has lived in Northville all her life.

BARBARA KIWICZ of Northville is on the faculty for the May 15-17 CPA Weekend, a program for re-licensure co-sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education and the School of Business Administration at Oakland University (OU) in Rochester. Kiwicz, a CPA and assistant professor of accounting at OU, will instruct the class, "1987 Tax Planning for the Family Unit" on May 15 and "Non-profit Organizations and the Tax Reform Act" on May CPA Weekends offered May 15-17 and June 5-7 provide opportunity for CPAs to earn up to 58 continuing professional education (C.P.E.) hours in time for the 1987 reporting year deadline, July 1.

MIKE CAMPBELL of Northville has joined TV-11 in Alpena as a production assistant.

After graduating from Northville High School, Campbell attended Specs Howard School of Broadcast Arts in Southfield where he underwent a rigorous course in broadcast arts that included radio/television production, newswriting and tape-editing. Other facets of the program were voice development, media time sales and

Firm helps buyers of vacation property

Detroit area residents can shop for the vacation property of their dreams at the Vacation Properties Network Resource Center at 700 N Woodward Ave. in Birmingham.

The metropolitan Resource Centers are the flagship of the Vacation Properties Network system of 33 corporately owned real estate offices in Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin

The Resource Centers bridge the gap between properties located in these vacation areas and potential buyers and sellers in major metropolitan cities such as Detroit.

"Purchasing vacation property should be one of the most exciting exfrustrating and time-consuming prosolve this age-old problem and puts investment for most people and it some fun into the process.

many automobile owners man their garden hoses and buckets and wash their own cars, instead of taking advantage of the automated carwashes which do the work for them.

area car washes offer an alternative to folks who don't have the time to a fear of "car wax elbow." Automated carwashes can found in two varieties:

☐ Fully-automated washes which wash, wax and dry your car without the driver having to step out of the ☐ Semi-automated high-powered water pressure washes in which car owners use a "high pressure wand" to wash their cars. Both types of washes, especially the automated ones, offer car owners a more convienient way to wash and wax their rides within minutes, as op-

Brighton surprises Wildcat ace

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

After all, Tanderys would be on the mound. And the Wildcat's ace hurler had yet to surrender an earned run in 14 innings of work, not to mention and outstanding strikeout-to-walks ratio of 27 to 2. But despite all the statistics and formulas that could have almost guaranteed a two-game Novi sweep, Brighton outplayed the Wildcats, won the second game 6-4 and handed Tanderys a rare loss.

Fortunately, it turned out to be the team's only etback of the week. Novi Coach Gar Frantz came back with Tanderys against Milford on May 4, and the senior tossed an impressive two-hit shutout in the Wildcat's 4-0 triumph. Novi currenly sports a only managed one hit, and again it was a late, opposite field blooper. The Bulldogs then scored another run in the fourth on three hits to make it 3-0. In the meantime, the Novi hitters had a hard time getting untracked. The 'Cats did get one run back in the bottom of the fourth without the aid of a hit, and didn't really challenge until there were two outs in the fifth. With Chris Henderson on base following a fielder's choice, Scott Wladishkin delivered a clutch single that scored Henderson all the way from first. Wladishkin advanced to second on a walk to Tanderys and then Dave Skown tied the score with an RBI hit. Novi finally grabbed the lead when Mike Bobbish's single down the third base line drove in Tanderys.

He pitched brilliantly, but also exhibited his talent at the plate by going 2-for-3, including a towering two-run homer which broke a scoreless deadlock and spurred the team on to an important league victory. Don't be fooled by Novi's 8-0 shutout of Lakeland on April 28 — the Wildcat tennis squad still has a long way to go before moving up to par with the elite of the Kensington Valley Conference (KVC). The lopsided win over a weak Lakeland team was a nice enough way to get back into the swing of things following the holiday layover, but Novi then faded badly after that, dropping a 6-2 dual meet to Brighton on April 30 and an 8-0 decision to Miford on May 1.

Lakeland is by far the KVC's weakest team, and the 'Cats had no trouble winning eight straight-set matches. But despite the big win on paper, Novi Coach Jim Newbold wasn't all that impressed. His team is now 3-6 overall, 2-5 in the KVC.

"Lakeland is obviously not the best team in the league and our kids knew that," he explained. "So after we won 8-0, I don't think we used it as any gauge heading into Brighton and Milford. "We had no practices following vacation so we did look awfully flat-footed after that week off."

Youth Assistance originated 34 years ago when and fine programming. the Oakland County Probate Court decided to intervene in the lives of youth before serious delinquent behaviors took hold.

With the financial and conceptual support of local municipalities and community schools, Youth Assistance now offers programming in 26 communities. These efforts have taken many forms, fostering the healthy development of youth

In Novi, the Youth Assistance program was sparked by the efforts of a few key citizens who began the organization early as concern for the welfare of Novi youth grew.

Due to the combined efforts of the high school principal, the township supervisor, the police department and local businesses, the city passed a resolution in 1957 to sponsor a Youth Assistance Program. The program received a boost in 1961 when local schools pledged their support for the

The importance of making time for family fun

Time needs to be scheduled or managed. Parents are busy with work, meetings and exercising. Kids are into so many enrichment activities that the most time a parent has with their child is in the car.

It seems most families do not have extra time for fun. Filed away in the memories of most adults are special times during their own childhoods when they had fun with their parents and families. They are treasured

Now is the time for families to make future memories. depended on each other to provide fun. Many parents are so deeply concerned with providing the best for their children they neglect to join them. Being chauffeured o and cheered for at sport games or dance classes are important for children. Yet children enjoy playing with their parents. It delights them to have their parent shed the usual "in-charge" role and frolic with them. Non-competitive family fun — with the emphasis on the shared experience, not on being the winner - builds family solidarity.

A frequent goal of children's misbehavior is attentionseeking. Happy times with non-competitive games and projects can provide some of the needed attention in a positive manner and increase harmony in the home. Time shared is much more significant than the amount of money spent on supplies and toys.

3. Join the kids when invited and offer sometimes to join when time permits. Ten minutes while waiting for

For some of us, fun needs to be scheduled. Consider: 1. Set aside a regular amount of time each day for the family to be involved in a shared activity. Working parents sometimes find a regular play time of 10-15 minutes allows the many chores to be completed with less disruptions and in a more positive spirit than without these 10 minutes.

2. Some families have family night or days scheduled weekly, monthly or whatever interval works for them. This time is planned on by all members, and no one makes outside social commitments. 3. Some families set aside part of the weekend for family time - Saturdays at the beach, etc. 4. Some families routinely have child and parent days. during which a parent and a child spend a day or part of the day together. The child picks the activities and has the parent's undivided attention for the whole time. Sharing the world with a delighted child is one of the joys of parenthood. Go ahead — take time for fun.

Stress is a reality most adults are familiar with. The results of stress on adults can be seen all too frequently in physical and emotional illnesses, alcohoism, etc.

Newspapers and bookstores abound with materials all trying to help us deal with stress.

The idea of stress during childhood, however, is much less recognized or accepted.

Many adults find the entire concept of children suffering from stress unlikely. After all, childhood is supposed to be a time of fun - free of responsibility and worries.

It is, however, a very real problem of increasing concern to child health professionals. Several noted child psychiatrists have addressed the issue of children and stress recently. David Elkind's books "The Hurried Child" and "All Grown Up and No Place To Go" examine the issues in depth.

Discussing middle class children in particular, Elkind proposes that what many view as the advantages of a middle class lifestyle can also become stressors. Unlike the child of poverty the causes of stress are les obvious and less understood.

For the middle class child stressors are not the effects of hunger, prejudice or a lack of opportunities but often just the opposite. Although our middle class children are spared the need to accept adult responsibilities in order to survive, they are often placed in situations where they must deal with dilemmas they are not emotionally ready to handle. They become "Our Hurrled Children."

It is sometimes well intentioned adults who create this situation with the purpose of providing greater opportunities for children.

Symptoms of childhood stress differ from those of the adult. Some children will complain of a head or stomach ache or other vague physical complaints. More often, the symptoms are behavioral. A lack of enthusiasm for previously enjoyed activities can be a signal of a child responding to stress. Negative or hostile outbursts toward adults or peers are common. Acting out behavior or academic deterioration are frequently seen.

In the very young child there is most often a regression to earlier behaviors, or unwarranted fears. In adolescence, the signs of stree are more like those of adulthood. Alcohol and drug abuse, poor school performance, cheating and actual signs of depression can

The problem of teenage suicide is increasing at an alarming rate.

Considering the development of childhood stress, there are various causes, some more easily recognized than others. The most obvious are issues presented in TV, music, books, movies and peer pressure to conform to often age inappropriate standards of dress and

More subtle factors include the American drive for success and the effects of living in a highly-mechanized society.

Upwardly mobile American parents frequently create highly stressful life situations for their children in the name of providing advantages and opportunities for development. Elkind calls this the "achievement

Today's children are often participating in many activities: music lessons, sports or after school and weekend enrichment classes. Individually all of these activities can be positive and enjoyable. When the child's day is scheduled tightly and when there are high parental expectations for success, performance stress

The early introduction of competitive sports is an example. Participation in a soccer or softball team may provide a child with the opportunity for physical and emotional growth and enjoyment. However, the child can achieve more a sense of failure than success if he or she does not attain the level of performance or the desired enthusiasm expected by the parents or coaches. The time spent on such activities can also be a source of stress. The young school child may spend three to four or more nights a week either practicing for or playing games. This can leave inadequate time for school and family activities as well as normal unstructured play.

Parental pressures for performance are highly significant in the development of childhood stress. They are not always overt nor are they recognized as pressure.

Simply a lack of recognition for a performance which was less than desired or previously achieved can cause stress. Comments such as, "You'll improve next time," can make the child feel like he or she has failed, and lower self-esteem.

With very young children parents may be unknowingly putting performance demands on them by placing them in achievement oriented academic and social settings to promote early learning. They may feel pressured themselves into cramming as many opportunities for development into what we have been told are the critical first five years.

It is easy to feel your own performance as a parent is measured by the achievement of your child, especially when our society is so evaluation oriented.

The realities of today's lifestyle - both parents working, single parent families, divorce, separation and the competitiveness of school and the workplace - are not about to change. Singly and in combination, these issues make the job of parenting more difficult.

Understanding some of the basic principles of child development as they relate to stress can be useful. It is important to treat the child at his/her physical and emotional level of development. This includes activities the child participates in, responsibilities and privileges, and the emotional treatment of the child.

As parents, we are often proud of our child's adaptability. All children have limits. Very young children need consistency and routine. When a babysitter or daycare service is used, it is advisable to have the child in as few other settings as possible. It is difficult for the four year old to adapt to nursery school, a car pool, the neighbor's house, home and sometimes other changes in environment and care-givers in one day.

The least amount of adaptations with consistant nurturant care-giving is most advisable. A schedule that allows rest and unstructured time is needed.

When planning activities for the school-aged child, time also needs to be allowed for rest, unstructured socializing and self-directed activities. Play has often been called the work of childhood, but it can be also seen as an emotional release or stress valve, necessary and vital to the child's development.

Children should be allowed to have some choice in the number and type of activities they participate in, but parents need to guide and set realistic limits that ensure a healthy schedule.

The adolescent also needs guidance in regulating a healthy schedule. Many children feel pressured into working while in high school for other than financial reasons. This may not always be the best choice if it limits the amount of family interaction, time for school work, extracurricular activities or necessary socializa-

How responsibilities are handled are a major factor in preventing the stressed child. Routine household chores can help develop a sense of family and responsibility. It can be all too easy for parents, who are themselves limited in time, to increase the expectations for household responsibilities of their children beyond their capacities.

Children often act very maturely. The school-aged child or adolescent who acts artifically mature and carries out adult chores, according to Eklind and others, is game-playing at adulthood.

They may be able to carry out the task, but are not mature enough for the burden of the responsibility. No matter their age children cannot be expected to routinely take on the responsibilities of running a household or watching younger siblings.

Today's society also rushes children socially. It is common practice to see young children dressed in adultstyled clothing, makeup, hairstyles, etc. or participating in social activities fashioned to be replicas of the adult social scene.

An attitude that fosters this pseudo-adult behavior can place children in a confusing or even dangerous situation as they approach adolescence. Having previously been allowed to partake in the trappings of adulthood, they may assume they are ready for other adult activities such as drinking, sexual activity or setting their own limits.

Parents suddenly faced with such behaviors may react by "laying down the law." Having been allowed to dress or act as an adult before, the adolescent may rebel and resist parental authority.

The emotional responsibilities given to children today can be a tremendous source of stress. It is no longer considered healthy to shield children from life's conflicts. The belief in "letting it all hang out" cannot apply to children. Exposure to highly emotionally parental arguments or divulging the facts about parental indiscretions can be extremely frightening and shake the security and trust of the child in the parents and the Age and circumstances will affect how situations should be explained. Children cannot be used as emotional sounding boards for parents to express their own hurt, anger or disappointment. Especially with teens it can be easy for a parent to treat the child as a confidant rather than a child.

There is no easy formula for parents to follow that ensures the healthy emotional development of their children. Far too often it seems we are confronted with what we have done wrong. It becomes necessary at times to stop and recognize our successes.

The adage of taking one day at a time can help avoid being overwhelmed by the demands of life. This type of attitude can also be be applied to our philosophy of Parents nauturally have plans and aspirations for their children, but if the child's life is programmed by constant goals it is easy to place children in an achievement overload situation.

A healthy balance between emotional and physical responsibilities, privileges given and activities along with the knowledge that the child is always accepted go a long way to provide an atmosphere for healthy emotional development.

How to tell if a child is using drugs

"How can I tell if my child is using drugs?"

The question is not easily answered. During the initial stages of alcohol or other drug use, there is often little evidence that the child is using. Many of the signs can easily be confused with "normal" adolescent behavior or with health dysfunctions.

Caution must be taken not to jump to conclusions or overreact. However, it is critical to be alert and to know that a combination of the following characteristics might be cause for concern and investigation.

Experimental stage:

- ☐ Odor of alcohol on breath or unusually heavy use of breath fresheners or gum. ☐ Heavy use of perfume or after shave to cover

Guidelines for hosting a teen party

from the time the first drink

By MICHELE BIETLER

Parties are events many think of as a normal part of the teen experience enjoyable and safe ways for adolescent socialization. When unsupervised or out of control, however, teen-age parties can be stressful or dangerous situations.

As parents of teens it is important to be informed about what type of parties your child attends and how to host successful parties.

It is not safe to assume that because the event is held close to home or because you know the teen hosting the party that it will be well supervised or that the evening's activities will reflect your own values regarding what is acceptable.

Talking about the party scene in

Novi. Crime Prevention Officer

Phillip Schoen offers these insights.

"Yes, on party nights we do have calls to loud parties. Both sides of the street will be parked up, and when we get inside we find the loud ones are most often unsupervised. Overattendance is a major feature of an out-of-control party. "I've seen it both ways," Schoen controlled, but around graduation they get large and overly disruptive. Often kids wait till their parents are gone for the weekend to invite people "The responsibility level simply is not there for 18 year olds who drink. The general population decided that when they overturned the 18-year-old drinking age."

As parents we have responsibilities to know about the parties our children attend. The best way of becoming aware of what will happen is to personally call the parents of the teen hosting the party and inquire fully about what the plan for the par-

It is possible your child may protest such actions, but it is not safe enough to assume a situation will be well-supervised. Such actions are really telling teens you care about their welfare and security.

Teenagers entertaining in their own homes need not be looked on as creating potential crisis situations. It can be an excellent opportunity for young people with the help of their parents to develop social skills. It can be an enjoyable event for all. Here are some suggestions for hosting a teenage party: 1. Discuss ground rules with your teens beforehand. This includes time span, number of guests, where in the home or yard the party will occur, off-limits areas, the exclusion of drugs or alcohol, and the handling of possible problems.

2. Smaller parties are easier to handle and more enjoyable. The maximum number of youngsters most parents can chaperone is 20 to

3. Parties should be "by invitation" only. Know who your child is inviting. Open invitation situations can create unanticipated problems.

4. Determine how party crashers will be handled in advance.

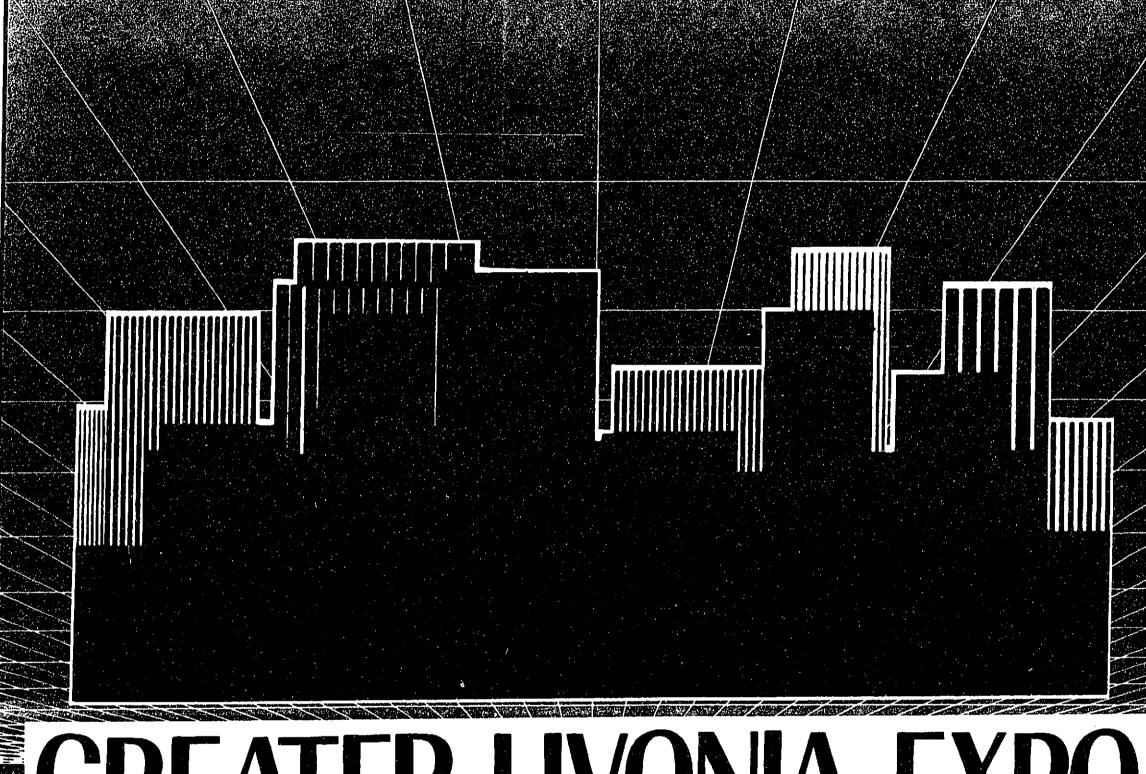

5. Agree that guests who leave may not return.

6. Take chaperoning seriously. Keep a low profile but always be visible and available.

7. Don't use chaperoning as an excuse for adult entertainment. Never drink while chaperoning.

8. Provide adequate food and entertainment. Teens often enjoy themes or some planned event. 9. Determine beforehand how to deal with guests who possess or are under the influence of alcohol or other drugs. Never allow anyone under the influence of either to drive. Their parents should be notified.

Coordination

Couple organizes Greater Livonia Expo

By Marie Chestney and Pat Walsh staff writers

Jim and Carolyn Skinner have tackled a lot of tough assignments in their career as as coordinators of business shows.

But perhaps one of their toughest was convincing Schoolcraft College administrators that they should let thousands of people to traipse across the school's polished gymnasium floor during a two-day business exposition.

"We had to agree to buy 2,800 yards of carpeting to cover the floor," said Skinner, a former chef who, with his wife, runs a management company out of their home at 18951 Bainbridge.

As coordinator of the first Greater Livonia Expo, the Skinners have spent the last four months trying to bring Livonia products and potential buyers together under one big roof.

The big event takes place May 6 and 7 in the physical education building at Schoolcraft College, on Haggerty south of Seven Mile.

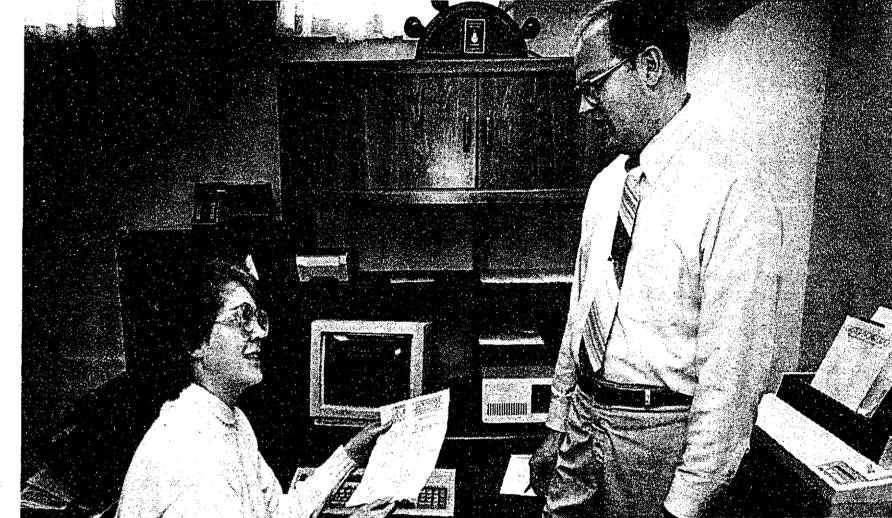

Nearly all of the booth spots have been rented by local businesses. About 225,000 tickets have gone out to potential customers in nearby communities. The Skinners have achieved total only a count of the number of people who attend the exposition will reveal if the show reached its ultimate goal — bringing both groups together.

"WE WANT to get the right people who make the decisions to buy," Skinner said. "It's a bargain. The tickets are free. A sales presentation costs between $150 and $200. The show only costs between 10 and 25 cents per person."

Skinner called Expo a "numbers game," whereby exhibitors will measure success based on the number of potential customers they are able to reach.

The Skinners have worked with the Livonia Chamber of Commerce to

"We create a hassle free show for them," said Carolyn Skinner. "Booth charges ($595 per exhibitor) cover everything. We can accommodate special requests like drapes coordinated to their color schemes. Little, but important things.

"We hold their hand and walk them through it. Jim will go out to their place of business, see what they do and give them suggestions. We give them that personal attention." The Skinners pursued separate careers until four years ago. For years, he worked as a chef as such places as the London Chop House, Hudson's Food Services and Wayne State University.

When he went to work for a Canton food company, he began organizing food shows. The first one was so successful it "boggled my mind," Skinner said.

FROM THEN on, he worked at arranging food and then general business shows.

Carolyn was mother to four children and worked as a secretary for Ford Motor Co. When her husband needed help in his fledgling management business, she went to work for him.

Besides Livonia, the Skinners are

More staff on tap with Expo success

The Livonia Chamber of Commerce doesn't expect to make a profit on the Greater Livonia Expo May 6-7 and it doesn't expect to lose money, either.

But if the former happens, executive director John White knows what he would like to use the money for — an additional staff member.

The trade show is costing $85,000 to stage, with the money coming from sponsorships and booth rentals.

If the chamber is going to make money, White believes it will be from the show preview cocktail party May

The by-invitation-only party will be for show exhibitors and their guests. Tickets are priced at $15 each with $10 prices available for orders of 20

The party is meant to provide exhibitors with a forum to meet with potential clients, show off their products and field questions.

White estimates that much of the business transactions that occur as a result of the trade show will happen at

"I don't know if we're going to make money; our objective is to put on a first class show," he said. "If we're going to make any money it's going to be in the cocktail party. The rest is a break even proposition."

THE CHAMBER is a non-profit organization. It pays for itself through membership dues and the money generated through services like a business directory it offers.

As a result, the programs it offers are limited by the amount of money it has. The chamber has to depend on volunteer work to keep operating,

White said.
The Livonia Chamber has a cadre of 75 volunteers who help the regular staff keep the organization on an even

White estimates that it "would take a staff of 50 to do the job done by the volunteers."

So, if he has his druthers and the show shows a profit, the money most likely will be used for new staffers.

"If we're fortunate to make money, it will go into the chamber's operating budget and be used for the benefit of the members, maybe by adding more staff," he said. "I've been here three years and we're doing twice the number of programs with the same size

How do you serve the needs of the industrial community?

That was the question Livonia Chamber of Commerce executive director John White asked of Pete Ventura of Ventura Properties and Dominic Persichini of the Air Gage Co. last

Much to his surprise they both offered the same answer — a trade show - although Ventura is the person White credits with "planting the

The seed has since germinated into the chamber's first Greater Livonia Expo, which will be held at Schoolcraft Community College May 6-7.

"There are certain things a chamber does well; one of them is providing a networking opportunity for members," White said. "But there are a large number of businesses within Livonia's industrial corridor (along I-96) and I was looking at those members and saving how can the chamber serve that

"Pete asked if we'd ever thought of doing a trade show and that planted the seed in my mind."

Before forging ahead with the project, White decided to find out what it took to put on a trade show. What he discovered was it takes "an awful lot of time."

That discovery eventually led to the hiring of Jim Skinner and Associates of Livonia as show manager, but not before White "shopped" a Skinner-managed trade show in Macomb County and talked to representatives of the Downriver Community Conference who also hired him as their show man-

SKINNER HAS been responsible for handling the entire show - from renting booth space to scheduling advertisements for the show's program.

The expo will utilize the college's two gymnasiums. More than 100 exhibitors from in and around Livonia will be participating, including 10 major sponsors who kicked in $2,000

The sponsors — Air Gage, Allmand Associates Inc., Consumers Power Co., Detroit Edison, Ford Motor Co., Health Alliance Plan, Manufacturers Bank of Livonia, Michigan National Bank-West Metro, Reliable Companies and St. Mary Hospital — provided the seed money for the expo, which will cost an estimated $85,000 to stage.

White said. The sponsorship fee might sound steep, but the companies weren't one least bit hesitant about accepting the offer, he said. In exchange for the $2,000, they are receiving, among other things, approximately 300 square feet of prime exhibit area, complimentary tickets to the show preview cocktail party, an unlimited number of general admission show tickets, special signs during the show and a full page write-up in the expo

"They're a big part of the community and I wanted them to display the products they make in Livonia."

WHITE ESTIMATES that 6,000 to 8,000 people will visit the two-day expo, but he believes the business of doing business will be done even before the doors open on May 6.

That business will be conducted during the cocktail party, he speculated. Participants will be able to purchase tickets for the show and give them to prospective clients, in effect bringing them to where the business can show what it does.

"They can use the things we've provided to get the prospects to come to them rather than chase after them," White said. "This show is targeted to the decision makers of business and I

The chamber paid $3 a square yard for the carpeting - admittedly not the top of the line, according to White but more than adequate for the exhibitors and more than 6,000 people expected to attend.

To help defray its cost, the chamber recently rented the carpeting to the Downriver Community Conference for its trade show. White said.

Another expense has been insurance. The chamber has purchased $1 million in liability insurance for the show as well as spending $1,200 for insurance coverage just for the threehour preview cocktail party May 5.

White sees the show, billed the The show is being financed through Greater Livonia Expo, as a "vehicle, a the booth space fees — $495 for 10-by-8-foot spaces and $595 for 10-by-10tool, an event" for businesses in and around Livonia to tout their products foot spaces — as well as the $2,000 chipped in by each of the show's 10 And when the doors open May 6,

The Livonia Family YMCA in conjunction with the Livonia Chamber of Commerce will host the Livonia Corporate Challenge Cup 1987.

The event is a fitness challenge to Livonia organizations, businesses and corporations.

The purpose is to highlight the community's commitment to good health and fitness. Teams from participating orgnizations will compete in several fitness events scheduled for June 27.

The different events allow for individual preferences. The testing and training events preceding the challenge cup allow participate to prepare for events safely and effectively.

Team members must be at least 18 and can be full- or part-time employees. Team members may compete in up to four events.

Each team must compete in every event and each person on a team must compete in at least one event.

All team members will be eligible to train at the Livonia Family YMCA. Team members will be issued a temporary membership card that will allow them to use Y facilities.

Events planned include:

• Team tug-of-war (six men and six women).

Running events

• 6-by-100 yard coed relay (three men, three women)

• 1 mile time prediction run/walk (two men, two women) • 3 mile age group run (four men,

Introducing an HMO that gives you access to some of the most impressive medical technologies known to man.

Business Expo

Behold the frontiers of diagnostic understanding, the latest weapons against disease and trauma, the medical technologies available to you through M-CARE, the new HMO from The University of Michigan.

To get a closer look at these medical marvels, look inside the medical bag of an M-CARE primary care physician. It contains: a stethoscope, pen light, reflex hammer, blood-pressure cuff, a device for looking in ears called an otoscope, another for looking into eyes called an ophthalmoscope, a handful of tongue depressors, latex gloves, a couple of handbooks on prescription drugs, and a tape measure.

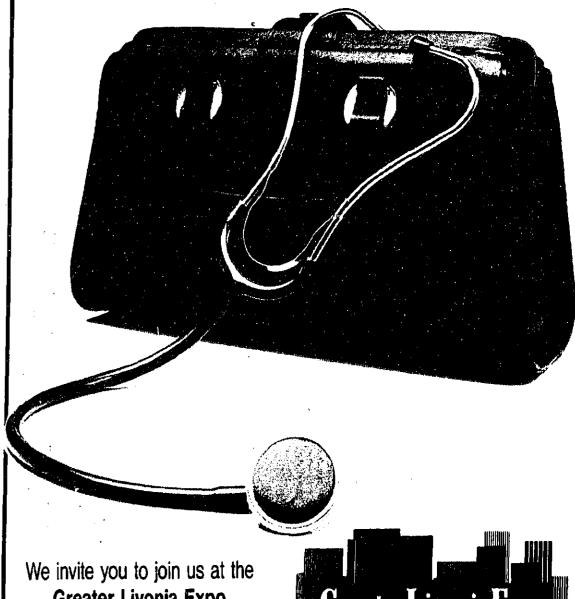

Okay, so maybe this equipment isn't so sophisticated. Maybe you've seen it all before. The truth be known, the contents of the typical medical bag haven't changed much over the last two generations. The stethoscope, for example, is more than 150 years old. But these things perform impressive feats indeed in the hands of a highly-trained and experienced physician, the kind of primary care physicians in internal medicine, obstetrics/gynecology pediatrics, and family practice that come

Of course, you won't find the most important tool an M-CARE physician possesses in a medical bag. That's an ability to listen to you. Through simple conversation and a well-directed physical examination, a good doctor can get a very good picture of your health, confirm the need for specific tests, refer your care and treatment to a specialist, or give you the simple assurance that everything's going to be okay.

Even with the world-renowned U of M Medical Center at our disposal, a personal relationship with a highly knowledgeable, compassionate and caring primary care physician is, perhaps, still the most impressive medical technology M-CARE can offer.

Ask your employer to include M-CARE among your health care options. For more information, please call (313) 747-8700.

Chamber aims for more services

By Sue Mason staff writer

What does the Livonia Chamber of Commerce do for its members?

Plenty, according to executive director John White. But as he sees it. there's still more to be done.

The chamber provides members with a network — an opportunity to meet other members and find out what they do - through its monthly 5 p.m. connection, an after-hours business networking program, monthly membership luncheons, business helping business seminars, and legislative breakfasts. White said.

It also works on marketing the city and its business community to outsiders and on representing its members at the legislative level.

"Many pay their dues and I provide the networking opportunities, but many don't attend," White said. "Still a lot of businesses join the chamber and look to it be their legislative voice.

"We have a good rapport with our legislators and I look to them to keep me, and in a sense the chamber, informed as to what has been introduced (in the Legislature), is it pro-business, is it anti-business and who will it affect The chamber is, in a sense, the lobbyist for the business community."

Its legislative influence is through the group's legislative and public affairs council, which reviews proposals and then lets local lawmakers know what it thinks. White said.

THE CHAMBER also offers assistance for businesses looking to expand, locate or relocate in Livonia as well as professional business assistance and advice through the Metro Region Business Alliance.

It provides communication with other businesses through its participation in the West Suburban Area Council of chambers of Western Wayne County.

There are 4,000 businesses in Livonia. Of that number, between 1,100 and 1,200 are chamber members. Many of those members - about 500 - have between one and five employees and can take advantage of low cost insurance through the chamber, White

The coverage available includes group hospitalization, health maintenance organization and Select Care, dependent's life insurance, dental insurance, short- and long-term disabili-

"Some insurance companies require at least one employees to get group rates. As a chamber we can offer the small employer the buying power of larger businesses." he said. "The small guy doesn't have the buying power of the big guy who can negotiate his own rates, so we provide that power."

But the services available through the chamber don't end there.

It publishes a community directory, an industrial and business related directory, a "Starting Your Own Business" booklet, economic development booklet and the Livonia chamber Communicator, its monthly business newsletter.

THE BUSINESS directory has proven to a popular item with salesmen. The directory lists businesses in the community by categories and includes information like their addresses, number of employees and name of the chief operating officer. White said.

Its an instant resource guide for salesmen and sells for $25 a copy, he

Miscellaneous services include pressure-sensitive mailing labels and printouts on Livonia businesses, a greeter service for new residents, a Customer Satisfaction Service similar to the Better Business Bureau, certificates of origin, solicitation permits, the Harris Michigan Industrial Directory and mans of Livonia, Michigan and the Huron Clinto Metroparks.

White has been the chamber's executive director for three years and admits that opportunities offered to members have doubled.

White sees tourism as a possibility for the city.

Granted Livonia isn't a tourist attraction, but White believes that it can capitalize on the tourist attractions around it, attractions like Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum in neighboring Dearborn.

He points to U.S. Chamber of Commerce statistics what 100 tourists a day can do for a city's economy.

ACCORDING TO the U.S. chamber, those tourists will increase a city's population by 459, add 140 new households, provide $78,000 in tax receipts or enough to support 156 school children, increase personal income by $777,000, bank deposits by $144,000 and retail sales by $1.12 million and create seven more retail outlets and 11 new industry-related jobs.

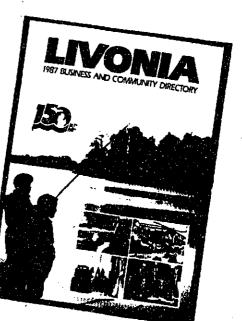

White has been lobbying to get tourism for the city and with the help of the Holiday Inn has landed the 1989 Knights of Columbus bowling tourna-

Five hundred bowlers will converge on the city over a 15-week period and White estimates it will pump $1 million into businesses' pockets.

The Livonia chamber is the sixth largest in the state and White would like to see it keep growing. The chamber has set a goal of 2,000 members by the year 2000 and has been making in-

In the last two years, 463 businesses have joined the chamber. But the flipside is that 320 have dropped their membership, leaving a net gain of 143 members. White said.

This year's goal is a net gain of 125 members and White believes that "if we can convince people we can do something for them, the more effective

Education, business ties promoted

The relationship between higher education and business and industry is the theme of "Connections 87," a conference May 17-18 at Livonia's Holidome.

Barbara Roberts, Oregon Secretary of State, will discuss the conference theme with emphasis on the role of women as decision makers.

Keynote speaker is Michelle Hunt, vice president for people, Herman Miller Corp.

A panel discussion will include Christine E. Gram, president of Oakland Community College's Auburn Hills campus; Verna S. Green, vice president and general manager of

College hosts Expo

Schoolcraft College not only will host the Greater Livonia Business Expo May 6-7, it also will participate.

The college will sponsor a booth featuring its career planning and placement and business development centers, during the trade show.

Employers can call on the career center for employee placement and development, while workers facing layoff can get career counseling, assessment and planning assistance.

The development center offers management training, ranging from strategic planning to stress reduction.

The college's office of procurement also helps businesses directly in obtaining government contracts and, last year, helped bring $36 million in contracts to area businesses.

Schoolcraft also offers customized employee training and retraining programs for business as well as a wide
