draws gunfire

By CHRISTOPHER J. KOZLOWSKI

Steven Michael Singer says the reason he may be alive today is because he carries a gun.

Singer, fell prey to two car thieves who tricked him into letting them steal his car on July 20. The thieves, a man and a woman, approached Singer with an offer to buy the 1987 Ford Mustang convertible he had offered for sale in a Detroit newspaper classified ad.

During the test drive, southbound on Haggerty near Eight Mile Road, the male suspect pulled a small revolver on Singer and demanded Singer get out of the car. Immediately after Singer complied, the suspect fired what is now believed to be two rounds of gunfire, at Singer, who is licensed to carry a concealed weapon for employment purposes, fired back at the couple in what he believes was the best way to save his own life.

"They took me by surprise. . .I was talking to both of them while we were driving, and they were asking about the car," Singer said. "I turned and looked at the road to tell her where to turn at, and the next thing when I looked back I had a gun pointed at me."

The female suspect had quested to test drive the car. While she was doing so, Singer sat on the passenger side up front, while the male suspect sat behind Singer in the back seat.

The woman pulled over onto the southbound shoulder of Haggerty, and that was when Singer said they told him to get out of the car.

Singer said his experience was 'definitely something out of the ordinary," and that many thoughts were running through his mind during the brief moments he was held at gunpoint.

Rift continues over Upper El

By BOB NEEDHAM staff writer

Continuing their objections to changes in next year's schedule at Novi Upper Elementary School, several parents presented the Board of Education Thursday, July 23 with a list of procedural objections and charges of possible violations of the Open Meetings Act and the Freedom of Information Act.

School board president Robert Schram said after the meeting that the Upper Elementary changes were not discussed at any closed meetings; no information has been withheld; and that the administration properly processed the changes. He also said the board would make a more complete response to the parents' presentation after board members had a chance to study the material.

School administrators have introduced a new schedule at the Upper Elementary for next year which eliminates the study hall, expands language arts time, and changes the structure of the band program so that students must choose between less art and foreign language than non-band students, or else take band after school,

Several parents of Upper Elementary students have said that parents, teachers and the school board should have been more involved in considering any such changes at the school. Administrators and school board members have responded that some staff input was sought, that parent input has been listened to, and that the changes are not a subject for formal school board consideration.

"We have come back to the board in regard to the changes at the Upper Elementary," Jill Streit, a district parent, said at the meeting Thursday. "We feel, and many parents feel, that changes at the Upper Elementary are indeed curriculum changes as defined in many texts...and (are) therefore under the responsibility of the

Reviews mixed on lake project

By ANN E. WILLIS staff writer

The Landing, a public/private development project on the shores of Walled Lake, has its opponents, and its defenders - both of whom are lake front residents.

The Landing is a development project on a 12-acre site that was the location of the old Walled Lake Casino, directly north of the intersection of Novi Road and South

The project is a partnership between the City of Novi and Eldridge, Inc. a private development firm. The project is a three-story building which will house four restaurants, banquet facilities, retail space and a 100-110 room inn.

As part of its partnership agreement, the city purchased the land and will retain all shoreline frontage for public use. The city also will receive at the developer's expense an 1,800-square foot meeting room with parking area and a dock servicing 25 boats, plus a limited boat launch facility.

Residents with lake front property, and those near the proposed development have entered into a debate with the city - and each other, over the appropriateness of the development, and the proposed docking facilities.

Jerry Ross, a West Lake Road resident and lake front property owner, said he supports the city's development plans and believes the residents who are opposed to the project don't really understand the history of the project or its real effect on the lake.

"It really concerns me to see what is happening, with some of the residents on the lake alienating the city which has done a good job with the development," Ross said.

Ross said the issue of the marina. or docking space for up to 25 boats. has been misunderstood. "It isn't really a marina in the traditional sense," Ross said. "When you think of a marina you think of a place where you can buy gas, have boats repaired - a service station. This is not that. The interpretation of the word 'marina' throws flares up," he

"Nobody wants more boats on the lake, that's a given," Ross said. "But you can't deny property owners their rightful access to the lake. My feeling is the city is doing the lake property owners a favor. The property could have been developed for condominiums and any number of boats could have gone in," he said.

Ross said property owners in the area have been working with the city and the developer for years on the project and questioned where those opposed to the project had been during the discussion stages.

"I think, were you to talk to Mr. Kriewall today, he would be willing to take back some of those comments," said Deputy Wayne County Executive Michael Duggan.

As We See It

City should remain out of developing

The city is currently embroiled in a controversy over the proposed development project on the shores of Walled Lake. The project, recently named The Landing, will encompass 12 acres of property just north of the intersection of Novi Road and South

The city is a co-developer of the project. Novi entered into a partnership with the development firm of Eldridge, Inc. and will retain the shorefront rights, including the use of the proposed docking facilities.

Residents of the area have lined up on either side of the issue. Certain lake area residents are opposed to the development project. Some have said the development's proposed 25 slip boat docking facility will add too many additional boats to the shallow Walled Lake. Citing environmental and safety concerns, these residents have lodged a protest with the DNR in an effort to block the dredging of the lake. The dredging is necessary to create a channel for the proposed boat slips, according to the developer.

Residents opposed to the project have also cited the traffic problems a development project will bring to an already difficult intersection. The intersection of 13 Mile Road, Novi Road, and South Lake Drive has seen an increase in accidents during the

And, on the other hand, there are residents who believe in the project. Some lakefront property owners believe the development, which will include a 100-110 room inn, four restaurants, retail and meeting room space, will upgrade the Walled Lake area. These residents believe the city has made concessions to the residents, and that 25 boats is a relatively small number that will not adversely affect the quality of life on the lake.

Whether the lakeshore development project is good one, whether the development will add to an already congested intersection, and whether the addition of 25 boat slips will have a negative effect on the lake itself, are questions worthy of continued dialogue. Unfortunately for the residents debating these questions, there is no one to turn to for unbiased

Residents with concerns over development projects in the city normally have two avenues of pursuit.

Novi residents have an important date to mark on their calendars.

sion will hold a public hearing on the Development

They can meet with the developers and discuss the issue, or they can lobby the city, through public hearings and city council meetings.

The current controversy over the lakeshore project leaves residents in an uncomfortable position. The city is the developer in this instance, and as such, cannot be seen as a detached third party with the ability to watchdog the process. Residents have lost one of their two possible avenues for clearing up questions. Any answer given by the city manager, or any city official must be seen as the answer of the project's developer someone with a vested interest in seeing the development completed.

The city became a developer because it was financially inviting and because, according to City Manager Edward Kriewall, only the city could assemble the land necessary for a project of this scope.

That type of reasoning could be applied to almost any section of land currently undeveloped in the city. The city is often the first to know of possible sales, and the city can operate "without much hoopla" in assembling lands.

That does not mean the city should shed its role as the ad ministrator of zoning and developing merely because the opportunity the main park to the beach the natural landscaping and is so practical.

□Speaking of Walled Lake, I can't get over how fast the area around the lake is moving forward and improving. Every time you drive by, it seems a few more big city like Detroit, or New York or Chicago. And how homes are getting a redecoration job. The area was many weeks it would take to get any action from the once a run-down series of summer vacation homes, but now the renaissance is in full bloom. Everybody is predicting a boom in property values for this area, and I think that is one safe bet.

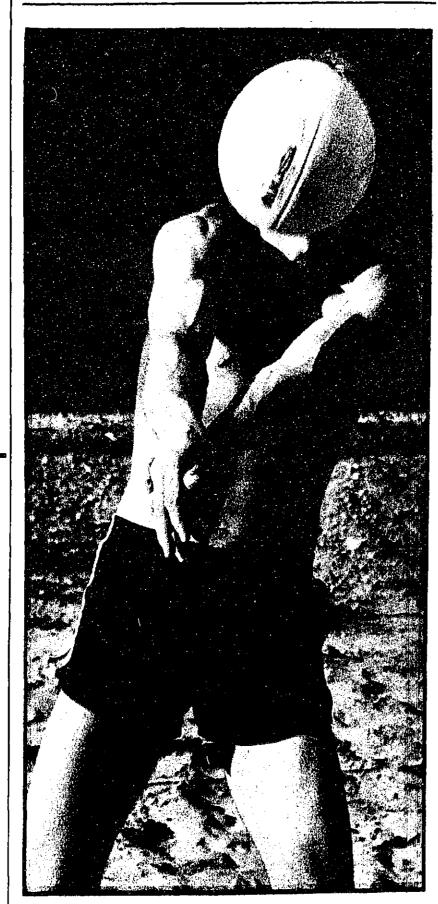

□Because Northville is one of the few cities to straddle two counties, I wonder how many people living near the dividing line can correctly figure out what county they actually reside in? The popular belief is that the boundary line is Eight Mile Road (also called Baseline Road), but in the city of Northville that perception isn't always true because the two roads become separated. When Eight Mile veers north around the high school hill, the county boundary goes straight with Baseline. The water tower appears to be just inside the Oakland County side and Northville High School is definitely a couple dozen feet inside Oakland. Parmenter Cider Mill, on the south side of Baseline is still in Wayne, but all the homes north of Baseline on roads like Grace, Carpenter and Horton are in Oakland.

Some officers directed traffic, others talked to the victims. The glass in the middle of the road was taken care of rather swiftly by a man and his broom. The next wave of helpers came just a few minutes after that. Two tow trucks came to haul the vehicles away and a city street cleaner came just in case the broom missed a few stray pieces of glass. > □For brevities sake, we tend to shorten words all the time. Alvin, Albert, Alfred and Allan have all become "Al". Elizabeth becomes "Liz", psychopath becomes "psycho", favorite becomes "fav" and microwave oven becomes "the micro". In Novi, this phenomenon is especially prevailent at The Farm (formerly Goat Farm) Tavern on Novi Road. A couple years ago, when you called the Farm, they answered the phone the way you would expect: "The Goat Farm." Sure, it was always very loud, very direct and very emphatic — like they were mad at you or trying to shout above something — but nothing out of the ordinary. A little while later they dropped "The" and the greeting became "Goat Farm". Last year, they brought back "The" and dropped "Goat" and it became simply "The Farm". Now, it's short, sweet and to the

"I thought you were watching the game from the couch," she said, a hint of irritation in her voice. "Then you got in bed, and now you're doing your crossword puzzle with your head at the foot of the bed. Is it asking too much that you find one spot and stay in it?"

"As a matter of fact it is asking too much," I replied. "I started watching the game from the couch, which is not my usual spot, and frankly they didn't do much with me out of position.

"Seven innings and they're losing 1-0. That's why I got in bed where I usually watch the games. And it worked, too. Nokes hit that homer in the seventh to tie it at one. But it's still too close for comfort so I moved into my regular position — doing the crossword puzzle at the foot of the bed, pretending I'm more interested in the puzzle than the game. If they're going to win, it looks like I've got to be in position.

"I know it's dumb, but it's working. It's still tied at one, but they've got runners at first and third with nobody out in the eighth, and they seem to be doing better when I'm in my regular position."

I returned to the crossword, pretending to concentrate on it, but with my ear cocked to the television set. One pitch later Madlock ripped a single to left, sending in Brookens from third to make it 2-1.

Moments later Trammell stroked a sharp single to left, driving in Lou and Wallewander to make it 4-1 and give the Tigers enough for the victory. And sure enough, that's how it ended - 4-1. Half a game back of

"I suppose you think changing positions was why they pulled it out," she sighed as the Tigers ran out on the field to congratulate Tanana.

"I'm not saying it did or it : didn't," I replied. "But you've got to admit it worked. Hey, in a pennant race everybody's got to contribute."

They're called urgent care centers. "Urgie" centers. Walk-in clinics. Some of them even have major-hospital names over the door. But if the need is really urgent, you need more. A lot more.

The Real Emergency Room, at Huron Valley Hospital.

In an actual life- or limb-threatening emergency, there's no substitute for Huron Valley Hospital-western Oakland County's only hospital. And only a hospital has complete Emergency Room services, available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. The HVH Emergency Room is a designated Level II Emergency Department.

When an emergency patient is taken to Huron Valley—unlike those "walk-in" units—there should be no need for a trip to a hospital in the city. Everything that's needed on arrival, including extended care, is right here:

- Doctors trained in the specialty of Emergency Medicine.
- Registered Nurses trained in
- Advanced Cardiac Life Support. • A fully equipped Hospital Trauma Room.
- Emergency Medical Service (EMS) communications for permitting emergency patient care at the scene. Plus our own heliport.

• Cardiac/Critical Care, Pediatrics, Medical/Surgical, Maternity Departments, and a host of responsive specialists standing ready for postemergency care.

DO YOUR PART TO PREVENT CRIME!

Every citizen has an obligation to prevent crime. There are many ways you can protect yourself and your property. Here are some suggestions:

IN YOUR HOME

- Light up your home at night. A well-lit exterior will expose any criminal activity outside your home, and lights within the house signal to burglars that someone may be home. Keep shrubs around windows trimmed so burglars can be spotted easily.
- Keep burglars out with good locks. Deadbolt locks provide the most protection, experts agree, and they are easy to install. Don't forget the windows - your local hardware store can suggest easy, inexpensive ways to secure them. Be sure to secure first-floor window air conditioners, so that burglars can't push them in to gain entry to your home. And, make certain that all doors are locked and windows secured before you go out!

IN YOUR CAR

- Invest in an alarm system that signals when someone is trying to break into your car. The system should be loud, not easily disabled, and preferably visual as well.
- Lock your car at all times, whether you're in it or not.
- Keep your glove compartment locked, and when leaving your car for service or at a parking lot, always retain your
- Always check the back seat before entering your car.
- Women driving alone should remain in the car if it breaks down. Turn on flashers and the dome light to alert others of your predicament, and keep car doors and windows locked until the police or towing service arrive.

Attendance is up at new Detroit Zoo

By Brian Perkins

Next year, the Detroit Zoo will be 60 years old. Many visitors, young and old alike, have seen rare and not so rare animals that suburbanites rarely get to see elsewhere.

The 125-acre animal haven at Ten Mile and Woodward had almost 900,000 visitors last year who observed 300 species of animals — including insects, birds and fishes.

"We're running about 10 percent higher than last year (in attendance)," Pat McClary, marketing director for the zoo, said.

There have been many zoo improvements made this year, some made possible by a cooperative development between the city of Detroit and the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT). "We needed 12 acres for construction of the I-696 Freeway through south Oakland County," said MDOT Director James P. Pitz. "The Zoo needed financial help to upgrade its facilities. We got together and made improvements to the zoo using federal and state funds." Additions or improvements at the zoo included a three-level parking garage for zoo visitors and SEMTA park and ride commuters. New refreshment stands and rest rooms were installed at the entrance and a gift shop, Zootique, was built. New park benches, lamps and turnstiles were install-

A new zoo train station and extensive landscaping, storm and sanitary sewers were added - plus condors, a grizzly, and tree kangaroos.

Tiger, bird and barn yard graphics to make education at the zoo easier were added to complement the recent $600,000 remodeling of the Penguinarium.

Many improvements are planned for the future of the zoo. These include a renovation of the elephant and rhino house for indoor viewing; renovation of the lion and tiger houses with glassfronted cages for nose-to-nose viewing and a new zoomobile.

Also planned is a visitor educational center, plus polar bear and other graphic displays to describe exhibits and a plan to improve the habitat for native wildlife on the zoo grounds.

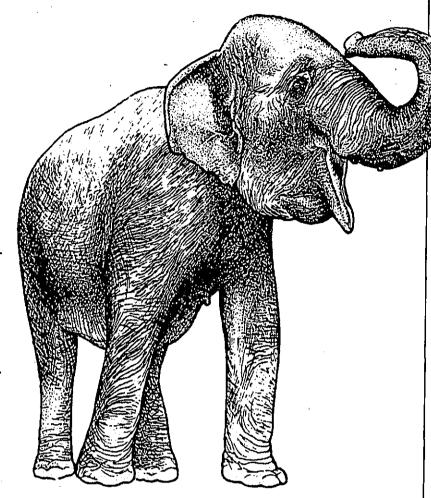

"The improvements in the zoo, such as using bear graphics, are intended to improve education, not to enforce misconceptions about animals," McClary said.

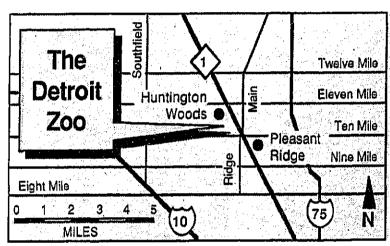

Some events planned for the summer include the curator program, "This allows the public time to spend with curators and ask them questions," she said. "We also have winter and fall walks."

McClary said a great deal of the attendance is made up of families - mom and dad bringing the kids to the zoo. But there are others who come to the zoo as well.

"It's also trendy for dates." she said. "It's a cheap date."

On a recent sunny Tuesday afternoon, the zoo was busy with life and laughter as adults and children explored this animal haven. And everywhere, there was talk about animals.

"The zoo has changed for the better," said Canton resident Ron Chomiuk, who was visiting the 200 with his wife Sheryl and their daughter, Lindsay, who is 18 months old, for the first time in years. "It's cleaner and more organiz-

"I liked all the animals," Rick Remer, 8, of Detroit, said, "Like the polar bears and the elephants." Jackie Warren, 25, of Detroit, loves the zoo and visits it often. "I often come here for a date," she

And Jane Cummings, 25, who lives in Michigan near the Indiana border, brought her son, Andrew, who is going on 2-years-old, to the zoo. She came to the park becaue she knew that Andrew would enjoy

"But I would come to the park even if I didn't have Andrew," Cummings said.

Admission to the Detroit Zoo is $5 for adults, $3.50 for senior citizens aged 62 plus and $2.50 for children 5 though 12. Parking is included and miniature train rides are free. Tractor train tours are available -$2 for adults and $1 for children. For information, 1-313-398-0900.

Jennifer's Cafe:

A continuous source of new experiences

East meets West in Walled Lake, and the result is food that is as pleasing to the eye as it is to the palate at Jennifer's Cafe.

The restaurant, which opened in May 1985, is named after Jack and Jayna Suidan's first-born child, and Jennifer is often at the restuarant. The Suidans note on their menu: "As she (Jennifer) is a breath of fresh air and a continuous source of new experiences that is our goal here."

They have certainly accomplished that, and more. Jack Suidan, the chef and proprietor, worked with Tom MacKinnon at the Holly Hotel and Bay Pointe Country Club, and Jayna has worked with MacKinnon at his Northville restaurant before Jennifer's Cafe opened.

A full menu that includes very little red meat offers diners choices that run the gamut from sandwiches to salads; from entrees to deserts.

In addition to classic sandwiches - Reubens. clubs, and ground sirloins - a variety of sandwiches wrapped in thin pita are offered. All sandwiches are served with the house specialty, homemade potato chips. The chips, thin, brown and not as salty as commercial potato chips, are available for purchase in half pound and pound bags, and are made fresh daily.

Most popular of the special sandwiches is poached chicken breast with broccoli, mushrooms, cheddar cheese and lettuce. That sandwich, like most of the others, is $4.95. A vegetarian pita sandwich - sauteed onions. muchrooms, carrots and broccoli, topped with harvarti cheese, tomatoes and alfalfa sprouts is $4.50. Two corned beef sandwiches, one with swiss and honey mustard on rye and the other with grilled onions, swiss cheese, honey mustard, lettuce and tomato wrapped in a pita, are $5.45.

Not all sandwiches are westernized. At Jennifer's Cafe, diners can enjoy middle eastern treats such as baked kibbeh, falafil or shish kafta (lamb and beef with onions, parsley and seasonings), all wrapped in a pita.

Sandwiches are available all day. "We want people to be comfortable here and not think they have to order large entrees," says Jayna

For those who do opt for the dinners, entrees include lots of chicken, some shrimp dishes, whitefish, veal and only one beef dish, sauteed tenderloin tips.

Although Mike Suldan, who shares cooking duties with his brother, Jack, says its a lossup as to whether the sauteed garlic chicken or the veal piccanti is most popular, there are enough different entrees to satisfy most tastes.

The entrees and the three specials which are found on both the lunch and dinner menus and change at 4 p.m. all are served with a choice of fresh tossed salad or the soup of the day. It's a difficult choice, since the salads are crisp, tasty and large and the soups, especially the house specialty chicken rice with lamb meat balls, are tasty.

My favorite dishes are the sauteed lingonberry veal - veal medallions in a Marsala wine with imported berries, which is not overly sweet - and the Lake Superior whitefish broiled and glazed with a white cream sauce.

All of the entrees are served with crisp sauteed vegetables. If there is a problem at Jennifer's Cafe, and there is none with the food, it's that no reservations are accepted and, especially on weekends, the 64 eating spaces are quickly
