Fortane smiles on Novi

By BRENDA BONZHEIM staff writer

It started out as a practical joke and before she knew it, Novi resident Anna Lisa Loiselle was standing beside Pat Sajak as a contestant on "Wheel of Fortune."

Loiselle's husband, Michael, volunteered her to audition for the popular game show when he found out they were going to be in Los Angeles on business last March, she said

During the audition, potential contestants, including Loiselle, were given a test consisting of various puzzles, she said. The test had to be completed in five minutes. After passing the test, Loiselle and a group of others played the word puzzle game in a classroom-type session.

"When we were done playing the game, we had to tell everyone about ourselves to make sure we had the right personality for television," Loiselle said.

The list of potential candidates was then narrowed down to five people, with Loiselle among the finalists, and those who were selected were asked to return the following day to play the game

Loiselle returned home from the trip not knowing if and when she would be chosen to appear on the show. Shortly afterward, she was notified by mail that she would be a "Wheel of Fortune" contestant.

"I was asked to choose three months in order of preference that I'd like to appear," she said.

The particular show featuring Loiselle was taped on Jan. 11. She and her husband flew back out to California for the taping.

"It's all at your own expense, which most people aren't aware of, so we decided to make a vacation out of it," Loiselle said.

Loiselle's husband and parents sat in the studio audience, providing her with her own cheering section.

"Playing the game there is not at all what it's like at home," she commented. "When you're watching it on television, it's always your turn, but when you're playing it as a con-

Woman killed by car

A 22-year-old Novi woman was struck by a car and killed early Monday morning on Grand River Avenue (M102), about a half mile west of Drake Road in Farmington Hills.

Deborah Jean-Fay Commander apparently was walking along the the right side of the road at about 2:40 a.m. Monday when a car traveling eastbound on Grand River hit her from behind and fled the scene, according to police.

Sgt. Ray Cranston of the Farmington Hills Police Department said officers received a call at about 2:45 a.m. Monday informing them that a pedestrian was lying in the east-bound lane of Grand River Avenue.

Upon arriving at the scene, paramedics contacted Botsford General Hospital, in Farmington Hills, by direct line and after several minutes of communication, she was pronounced dead at the site, Cranston said.

Police have no suspects in the accident and are asking for input from anyone who may have witnessed the accident.

"Right now we're treating this as a hit and run fatality," Cranston said. "At this time we're particularly interested in information and we're asking that anyone driving eastbound on Grand River Monday at about 2:45 a.m. who may have seen a pedestrian walking along the highway to contact the Farmington Hills Police Department."

School debate heats up again

By Brenda Bonzheim and Ann E. Willis staff writers

The conflict over who rightly oversees the planning and construction of school buildings in Novi is once again appearing on agendas all over the city.

The differences in opinions also are causing heated discussions between planning commissioners, city council members and members of the school district. Meanwhile, construction work on the school d i s t r i c t ' s n e w maintenance/warehouse building continues.

An apparent communication lapse between the Novi Planning Commission and the Novi Community School District over construction of the facility was noted by planning commissioners during their Feb. 3 meeting.

Commissioner Kathleen McLallen pointed out that the building was already three-quarters built but that she was not aware of any permits that have been issued to the school district by the planning commission or city officials.

She said the planning commission's concerns about reviewing the building's construction process were supposedly going to be addressed by representatives of the school district in a letter, but the commission had not yet received such a document.

McLallen said construction of any building within Novi required conformance to city ordinances and regulations and asked the school district to defend its position about why it hasn't approached the planning commission.

Kureth: 'I hope there's still a chance to rectify this situation.'

Commissioner Charles Kureth said because the building is as far into construction as it is — with site plans just now coming into the city — it seems as though the school board has established its stance. Nevertheless, he noted the school district is still required to abide by city building standards.

"I hope there's still a chance to rectify this situation," Kureth said.
Actual construction of the school maintenance warehouse facility began in November. The building is on school district property at Eleven Mile and Taft Road.

The debate about construction of the facility originated over proper jurisdiction for school district building plans. The district maintained it was not bound by a city review while city and planning commission officials argued the district should follow the process established for all construction in the city.

The issue appeared to be resolved when the school district and city council accepted a "Memorandum of Understanding" concerning construction of the warehouse facility.

Wixom man held in deputy slaying

By ANN E. WILLIS staff writer

A Wayne County Sheriff's deputy, Russell Francis Dickson, 36, of Livonia, was found dead in Wixom last Sunday, Feb. 7.

Wixom resident, Henry L. Johnson Jr., 58, was arrested at his home later that same day. Johnson was arraigned on charges of open murder and possession of a firearm in the commission of a felony in 52nd District Court on Monday, Feb. 8.

According to a statement released by the Wixom police department, Dickson was found by Wixom police officer James Osborne at approximately 5:58 a.m. Osborne had been dispatched to the area of Twelve Mile Road, east of Napier in the City of Wixom, on a call of an injury accident.

Osborne found Dickson lying face down in the roadway at the scene. A check by the officer and medical technicians at the scene determined that Dickson was deceased. The police report noted an initial report of massive injuries to the head rea. A check for identification found that the man, Dickson, was employed by the Wayne Coutny Sheriff's department as a deputy.

The crime lab division of the Northville State Police was dispatched to the area. An investigator from the Oakland County Medical Examiner's office took charge of the victim for transport and autopsy.

An autopsy Monday showed that Dickson had died of multiple gunshot wounds to the head, according to the Oakland County Medical Examiner's office.

Johnson, who stood mute during his arraignment, was ordered held without bond. Johnson operates a wood selling business out of his home on Grand River in Wixom. According to Wixom Police Sgt. Richard Howe, police have no motive for the killing but are still investigating the matter. Wixom police have not released information revealing how they came to arrest Johnson.

Evidence compiled by the Forensic Science's Division of the Criminal Laboratory revealed that the homicide did not occur at the location that the body was discovered. Police have no motive in the killing at this time. The case is still under investigation.

Johnson will face a pre-trial hearing on Feb. 19 at 8:30 a.m. in 52nd District Court in Walled Lake.

ington Hills man at gunpoint on Feb. 4 in a parking lot at Twelve Oaks Mall.

The armed robbery occurred about 8:50 p.m. in the mall's Lord & Taylor parking lot when the suspect allegedly approached a 39-year-old Farmington Hills man and his daughter with a sawed-off shotgun and ordered them to get out of a

1987 black four-door Mercedes

while leaving the keys inside, police said.

After ordering the man and his daughter out of the car, the suspect got into the Mercedes and drove away, according to police reports. The man and his daughter were not hurt in the incident and no attempt was made to take his wallet or personal items.

The suspect is described as a black male in his mid-20s with medium dark skin, about 5-feet 7-inches to 5-feet 10-inches tall, weighing about 150 pounds, with a light mustache and a rough complexion. Police composite drawings indicate the suspect has long, messy straight black hair that is worn combed back. The man was wearing a knee-length gray coat at the time of the robbery, according to witnesses.

Police records state that the suspect concealed the sawed-off shotgun under his coat and exposed it to the victims when speaking to them. The shotgun apparently has a shiny barrel and may be made of nickel.

A dirty mid-size gray car in poor condition, possibly a 1975 General Motors model, may have been involved in the robbery, police said. The suspicious car was parked directly behind the Mercedes at the time of the incident.

The stolen Mercedes, valued at $35,000, was recovered by Detroit police on Feb. 7.

To report information about the robbery or the suspect, contact Novi Police Department.

He noted that if the site had indeed been a burial ground, that already gone on. there was no certainty that any bones or artifacts remained, as previous excavations could have destroyed the area.

Halsey said the state has no control over the site, whether a burial ground exists or not. "Unfortunatey there are cases like this all over the state. There are Indian and pioneer settlements all over and no incentive or system to control them," he said.

Halsey said this case had been highlighted because of the threat of the upcoming development project. "It ought not to make any difference whose cemetery it is," he said. "There are hundreds of sites

Novi City Manager Edward Kriewall said that soil boring tests were taken at The Landing site and it was found that there was three to eight feet of fill dirt on the site, leading him to believe that significant amounts of excavation had.

The Planning Commission, Novi Community School District and City Council are back in the news. Just when there seemed to be hope that all three bodies had resolved their differences concerning the proper method for reviewing the new school building construction plans — the "gentleman's agreement" passed by council and school board members appears to have fallen apart.

In reality, the matter never was decided. The city council and school board attempted to step around the issue of who has jurisdiction over school construction projects by using an informal agreement. To truly end this matter, the school district and the city must decide on a course of action which will hold for this construction project and others planned for the next few months.

Back in December, board members became impatient with the planning commission's adamant demand that the board submit all site plans for review to the commission, following the regular prescribed channels for such review. The site plans under fire at that time were for the district's new warehouse/maintenance facility currently under construction on school district grounds at Eleven Mile and Taft

At the root of the disagreement between the commission and the board is who properly has the right to review school district plans for the may have felt that the agreement onstruction of buildings. The plann- handled the matter, the planning ing commission has stated that it has commission has been left almost the right to review district buildings in the exact same manner and under While the school district appears to the same city ordinances and state have decided that it wants nothing to enabling laws as any other building in the City of Novi.

The school district has begged to differ. In the past, the school district has been allowed to construct educational facilities without having to submit to a formal review process by the city, including site plan approvals, public hearings for special land uses and compliance with all city ordinances governing new construction projects.

The entire matter dates back to September of 1987 when the planning binding and definitive solution to this commission first threatened the problem now.

Getaway never takes off

There aren't many perks attached to being in the newspaper business. There's no such thing as a three martini lunch on the expense account. Mostly it's peanut butter and jelly sandwiches in front of the computer terminal. While friends of mine complain of long weeks spent traveling to the west coast, New York and points south on business, my traveling sends me to Novi, Northville and occasionally to

Willis that western metropolis — Howell where the paper is Needless to say when Jean Day, editor of The Northville Record, told the five ink-stained wretches in our newsroom that she had found a way that one of us could spend one day in the Bahamas at company expense we were all ears. I quickly told my co-workers that since I tan very well and was willing to work very, very hard on getting the travel story that was part of the little junket, they ought to step aside and let me be the lucky one. Being the considerate types they are - they mowed me down in an effort to convince Jean that they were the best reporters for that arduous task.

Bob Needham, Northville Record reporter, won the trip but fell ill and had to be replaced by the back-up me. Oh darn! The trip was set for the end of January.

I worked late the night before the trip getting copy ready for the next day when I would not be in the office. I cheerfully typed away thinking about the fact that in the morning while my co-workers sat in sweaters drinking coffee and sweating out deadlines, I would be in a bathing suit lying on a beach drinking rum punches and simply sweating. It was a very nice vision.

It had snowed during my brief night of sleep. Deep and white the snow buried my little car. I spent the first half hour of my getaway day up to my ankles in snow brushing off my car. The cute white pants I was wearing for my day in the sun were freezing and I was not enjoying myself. The drive to the airport was a nightmare. I sort of slid sideways down I-94 as I searched for the lane that would lead me into Metro. My head hurt and my feet were still wet when I walked into the

A line stretched from the ticket counter to the door. Grinning people in pastels waited patiently at that ungodly hour to have their birth certificates checked. I find it hard to speak in the morning so I kind of stood there in the flourescent lights of the airport and listened to the chatter around me. Two women behind me in line were making plans for exactly what they would do from the minute the plane touched the ground. They figured they had a relatively few hours in paradise and they were going to make good use of it.

The woman behind the counter didn't like my birth certificate. She said it was a hospital certificate and not official. I said that it had my footprint on it and if she wanted we could compare the pads of Baby Girl Willis' little feet with my ever so slightly bigger Grown-Up Girl Willis' feet. She was not amused, but she let me by.

The cafeteria was not serving coffee. That depressed me. It was also not serving beer which depressed the two women with partying on their mind. It was a sign and, if I had been smart, I would have checked my horoscope then and there, but I got on the plane and stowed my stuff and waited with everyone else. I sat next to two college-age kids who'd been given the trip as a present. They were in love and spent the hour-and-ahalf that we waited on the plane staring into each other's eyes and deciding what t-shirts they would buy

The trip was eventually canceled because of mechanical trouble with the plane. I don't like to fly and I was very nervous when people kept telling the steward on the flight to just take off - they were missing

I made it back home in time to shovel the walk, change my clothes and go in to work. So much for my trip to the sun. Oh well, there's always Howell.

But it wasn't the best part of the convention. The best part of the convention came at the reception just before dinner Friday night. Longtime readers of this column may recall that two years ago the company sent me to the Suburban Newspapers Association (SNA) convention in Montreal. And that one of the speakers at the convention was a lady named Barbara Dill, an attorney who used to work in The New York Times' legal department before she left to start her own libel

Guess who came up to congratulate me after Jean Day and I walked up to accept the "General Excellence Awards" for The Northville Record and Novi News in front of the collected membership of the Michigan Press Association? And guess who asked me if I'd send copies of our paper to her home in Miami Beach?

If you answered Barbara Dill to all those ouestions, you're right. And when I filled out my convention evaluation form guess who I strongly urged be brought back to present another libel workshop next year?

Story by Brenda Bonzheim That infamous cupid's question has been posed at least a hundred times over hundreds of years. Yet no matter what form it takes, a glittery valentine message never goes out of style and never loses its romance. Whether accompanied by a candlelit dinner, a dozen red or pink roses, a heart-shaped box of chocolates or a passionate kiss, receiving a valentine always generates a feeling of genuine Several longtime Northville and Novi sweethearts shared their recollections about Valentine's Day and noted how the romantic occasion has changed for them over the years. Park offers a sledding heaven

An ideal day-trip for a cold winter weekend in Michigan is the two-hour journey down I-94 to 'Echo Valley' a toboggan and ice skating heaven just outside Kalamazoo.

You have to experience a quartermile long, 60 mile-per-hour toboggan ride - complete with banked curves - to believe it. Winter enthusiasts have been flying down the runs at Echo Valley for 53 years, and according to owner Rick Herbert, it is the oldest winter sports park in Michigan.

"Going down a toboggan run at 60 miles per hour doesn't seem like anything unless you've been down them." Herbert said. "Adults call and they are worried about their kids, but when it comes time to go down the run, it's the adults, not the kids, who are reluctant to go through

Echo Valley features eight lighted runs. The tracks are formed from cement and are iced down like a bobsled run. Standing at the top of the hill, the drop looks like it's off the edge of a cliff. After a very steep start, the runs level off, go underneath a small bridge and then proceed into a 180 degree banked turn that eventually sends the toboggans back up the hill A look at the Echo Valley hill to slow them down.

"That's nice because it shortens control traffic on the toboggan runs. the walk back up to the top," Herbert

Lakeland at the Kensington Valley Conference Championships on the 1987-88 KVC title. It marked the have reigned as a team in the KVC among Class A schools needed wins in the final two bouts of tournament action last Saturday in Howell to top Lakeland for the tiby coming up with the biggest win of his career in the 185-pound consolation finals. Senior Bret Keir finals of the 198 weight classificawith 172 points, Milford was third (124) followed by Howell (92.5), South Lyon (78), Brighton (74) and scored points for us and that's what makes us a good team. "The KVC title is not our number one goal, but it definitely is a goal. Our number one goal is to do well in the state tournament,"

"I'm extremly happy," Novi Coach Tom Fritz said. "It was close all the way down the line but every one of the kids in our line-up

The 'Cats used superior team strength to edge a Lakeland team that Fritz dubbed "possessed." Novi placed (top four) wrestlers in 11 of the 13 weight classifications and scored team points in all 13. There were many key wins and points registered en route to the victory - including individual titles for Keir, Ron Fritz (167) and Matt Brinker (155) — but none was more important that Price's stunning performance at 185.

"Eddie is a 167-pounder who wrestles whenever we can get him in. which isn't often because Fritz called upon him to go at 185 and he

"If Ed lost his match and if Bret (Keir) would have pinned his opponent at 198, we would have still lost by a half-point," Fritz explained. 'If Price wins and Keir gets a decision, we win by a half-point, and if Price wins and Keir pins, we win by two and a half. Obviously, that's exactly what happened." For Keir, the win over Flood was his third pin of the tournament in three tries. He accounted for 24

"I told Keir he had to have a pin the finals for us to beat Lakeland, and even though it wasn't exactly true he did it anyway," Fritz said. "The wins by Price and Keir were very important, but I don't want them to distract from the rest of our team's performance. Everybody scored points, so that made it successful for us as a team. Volleyballers slip back to losing ways in KVC action

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

It was back to reality for the Novi spikers last week after a very rewarding month of January.

The Wildcats' three match win streak came to a halt with a loss to Howell in late January, and the losing skid reached three as Novi fell to Livonia Clarenceville 15-13, 14-16, 13-15 on Feb. 2 and to KVC-rival South Lyon 13-15, 9-15 on Feb. 4. Novi's serving woes seemed to take a backseat, at least for the time being, last Monday as the Wildcats wasted little time in turning back the Flyers in two easy games. Linda Clynick started off game one with a straight 10 points off her serve and then Jennifer Henstock put an end to the game several minutes later by serving for the final five.

It was the same story in game two. Kasten connected on her first seven serves and then Henstock closed it out again with eight straight winning

The dream — the goal — has always been 1992. Northville's Jerod Swallow and his ice dance partner Jodie Balogh of Livonia have never wavered on that. Four years from now, the world will be preparing for another winter Olympics and they hope to be preparing as well — for their first appearance in the ultimate competition for

In ice dancing, the road to the Olympics is long and it features many obstacles and hurdles along the way. Each year provides a number of building blocks which can help to elevate a performer or team to a level above the competition. The first forward step came at the Regional Championships in late October in Indianapolis. As expected, Swallow and Balogh took first-place honors in the Senior Dance Division, which advanced them on to the next level - the

For Novi and Northville residents the health club facility search is not as big a problem as it is in other more urban areas. The following is a brief summary of the services and facilities available at three local health clubs and the average cost of membership.

The YMCA's in the metro-area have fully updated their facilities and offer everything from weights to aerobics. The Livonia Y has a standard
