Missing gravestones discovered near lake

By PHIL GINOTTI

Southfield officials have confirmed that the two gravestones found in Novi's Shawood Lake last week were removed from their cemetery and do not point to evidence of burials near the lake.

The two headstones, dating back to 1865 and 1904, were found under a thin layer of mud Sunday, July 17, near Duana Street on Shawood Lake.

At the time of their discovery, residents said the finding supported their claim of unknown burial grounds in the area. Those residents are claiming that the area is an old Indian burial ground in an effort to stop development of "The Landing," a large hotel/marina development slated to be built near Shawood Lake.

But The Novi News has learned that the two gravestones belong in the Southfield cemetery, located at 10½ Mile in Southfield. Sources have confirmed that the headstones don't actually mark graves in the Shawood Lake area, refuting some residents' claims.

The gravestones were traced through county and local records this week by The Novi News staff.

One of the stones reads "Jacob G. Tice, born Feb. 22, 1831 — died Nov 21, 1865." The other, a shorter marble slab, reads "Grace, wife of C.S. McQuarter, born Oct. 2, 1886 - died February 28, 1904."

Both stones were found lying on their backs, according to resident Dewey Marlow, whose five-year old son reportedly found the gravestones.

Jef Farland, Southfield's Parks and Recreation Deputy Director, said both the Tice and McQuarter stones were discovered missing from their cemetery Tuesday

"We're missing both of them," Farland said. "They are ours, and they do belong in our cemetery.

"At this point, we have to get to work on getting them back," he added.

Novi police also found a slab near West Road on July 13. That partially readable stone appears to be that of a "Lucinda Cleaveland" who died Oct. 30, 1861. The true location of that headstone could not be determined.

Farland said his staff is currently searching the cemetery for the Cleaveland stone, although they have no written records of it.

The Tice and McQuarter stones were confirmed through cemetery records and actual inspection of the sites, Farland said.

An official in the Oakland County Clerk, Vital Records Division, has confirmed that McQuarter died in Southfield of an unknown illness. The other two slabs aren't listed in any state, county or local records. Neither the state nor county kept records until after 1867, a clerk said.

Drivers beware Manager calls

for traffic light By PHILIP JEROME

Novi City Manager Edward Kriewall is boiling mad after another accident at the Ten Mile/Beck Road intersection sent two more people to the hospital Tuesday (July 26) afternoon.

"It personally makes me sick when I drive past that intersection and see people lying in the ditch," said a still-angry city manager two hours after Tuesday's accident had

The object of Kriewall's ire is the Oakland County Road Commission (OCRC), which has jurisdiction over Ten Mile and Beck Road and is responsible for installing proper signalization. The OCRC has agreed to install a traffic light at the intersection, but installation is not scheduled to occur until October, the start of the OCRC's new fiscal year. In the meantime, Kriewall seethes every time another accident occurs at the intersection.

"The thing that bothers me is the number of accidents which have occurred while we're waiting for the signal to be installed," said Kriewall, brandishing a handful of 13 traffic accident reports which have taken place at the intersection during the first six months of the

"And you can probably add three or four more accidents at that intersection since July 1," added the city manager.

Report advises communication

By BRENDA BONZHEIM

staff writer

A perceived lack of communication between school district administrators and the Novi Meadows School staff deserves the attention of an objective consultant, according to results of a long-awaited report about the school.

Novi Board of Education was presented with a final draft of the Novi Meadows Evaluation Committee Report at its July 21 meeting, ending months of study and anticipation.

The majority of field work and interviews forming the basis of the report was conducted by Philip Kearney, Interim Dean of the School of Education at the University of Michigan; and Karen Urbschat, a general education consultant at Wayne County Intermediate

Other committee members providing input in the report included Eric Center, a science teacher at Novi Meadows, and Julie Abrams, a Novi resident.

The final recommendation in the report states the following:

"The district should initiate a long-term process involving the administration and staff of Novi Meadows - and parents as appropriate - working as a group with an outside consultant well-versed in group dynamics and the art of building cooperative and collaborative relationships.

"The goals of this effort should be embedded in the effective school's philosophy and should address in particular the building of a positive school climate; the establishment of effective communications among administration, staff, students, and parents; and the further development and strengthening of a balanced curriculum.

"We are of the firm view that this effort demands, at least initially, an outside consultant - an external agent who can act as the catalyst necessary to bring all parties together in a truly cooperative and collaborative effort."

Under the primary format, registered voters must decide whether to vote for Republican candidates, Democratic candidates or candidates of the Tisch Independent Citizens Party.

District court race heads to primary

By PHIL GINOTTI staff writer

The candidates in the race for the 52nd District Court bench all agree that the court is efficient and wellrun, but stop just short of laying any of that praise at the feet of incumbent Brian MacKenzie.

MacKenzie, and challengers Peter Abbo, Emery Jacques, Terence Jolly and Michael Reeds will square off in a primary Tuesday, August 2. Voters may choose one, though the top two vote-getters will advance to the November 8 general election for a final runoff.

The various campaign stances: ☐ Reeds has called for night court sessions, more attention to alternative sentencing for drunk drivers, and a higher degree of community involvement for judges.

☐ Jacques supports implementation of a liaison panel of judges and court administrators to help solve scheduling conflicts between district and circuit courts. He also supports the addition of a magistrate at the 52nd District Court to handle smaller cases.

□ Jolly supports victim involvement in sentencing, alternative sentencing for minor crimes, and a higher degree of community involvement for judges.

☐ Abbo said he supports having judges going back to putting in a full day, starting on the bench at 8:30 a.m. promptly, among other reforms designed to solve backlog problems. □- MacKenzie supports the addi-

hursday, July 28, 1988/THE NOVI NEWS 3A Museum receives lease

The Novi Motorsports Museum took another giant step forward Monday night, though organizers readily admit that they still have a long way

The Novi City Council agreed in principle to a 99-year lease with the Motorsports Museum group Monday night, allowing them to use a cityowned tract of land fronting I-96. The three story, 60,000 square foot museum would be located on the south side of I-96 between Delwal Drive and Meadowbrook Road, near the Novi Town Center.

The Motorsports Hall of Fame and Museum will get the first five years for free, then be required to pay 10 percent of its net profits to the city yearly, according to Assistant City Attorney Dennis Watson.

The rest of the agreement takes effect immediately when building permits are secured from the city, according to Watson. Novi City Councilman Ronald Watson, who also serves as executive director of the Motorsports Hall of Fame board, said the lease was a "positive" step.

"Obviously, we're very pleased and excited," he said. "The committee feels that this is the best possible location we could have.

"The freeway exposure is going to be a great asset, and locating in the Town Center, which is a very dynamic area, is also going to be very positive," he added.

Watson abstained from the vote on the lease, due to his role as executive director. The group is a non-profit organization.

Under the terms of the lease, the city will continue to own the land. The museum group will be responsible for all construction, maintenance and operational costs of the facility. The city will begin getting a 10 percent share of the proceeds in the Novi News/PHIL JEROME lease's sixth year. Novi will get 10 percent of the net profits from admissions, concessions, gift shops or special events. The museum will be allowed to deduct expenses related to operation but not on building funds, special promotions or special events. The council had worked out the details of the lease in closed executive sessions over the past several months.

Three people were left homeless after a fire destroyed two residences in a four-unit building in the Lakewood Park Homes Condominiums early Tuesday morning. Novi Fire Marshall William Conn said two of the units were completely destroyed, while the other two units suffered some smoke damage.

"Damage to the existing structure was extensive," said Conn, who estimated the dollar value of the loss at $90,000. The estimate did not include damage to the con-

Nobody was injured as a result of the blaze, although Conn noted that two cats perished of smoke inhalation. ## Five candidates vie in 52nd District Court race

Of all the races on the primary ballot next Tuesday (Aug. 2), none has stirred as much interest around Novi as the contest for the Judge of the 52nd District Court (1st Division). The reason? Three of the five candidates - Emery Jacques, Terence Jolly and Brian MacKenzie - are Novi residents and have substantial ties in the community. Also in the race are Peter Abbo of Union Lake and Michael Reeds of Walled Lake.

> The 52nd District Court race is on the non-partisan portion of the primary ballot, meaning that everyone can vote for the judicial candidates regardless of whether they elect to vote Republican, Democratic or Tisch Independent Citizens Party on the partisan section Voters may cast ballots for only

As We See It

Board should move on Meadows report

Education

The long-awaited Novi Meadows evaluation was presented to Novi school officials last week. But the wait might not be over yet.

given the indication that it may take fered such an opportunity in the form of an officially-scheduled meeting.

The final and most important recommendation contained in the report includes the following statement: "The district should initiate a long-term process involving the administration and staff of Novi Meadows — and parents as appropriate - working as a group with an outside consultant well-versed in group dynamics and the art of building cooperative and collaborative relationships.

Superintendent Robert Piwko properly insisted that staff at Novi Meadows be given time to review the report among themselves before a public work session is scheduled. However, waiting until November to schedule a public work session will only unduly drag out an issue that has been a matter of concern since the 1985-86 school year.

At the same time, Board Member Raymond Byers justifiably argued that scheduling a meeting between administrators and the Novi Meadows staff to talk over the report appears to contradict the most report's important observation - a communication problem between the two factors.

It appears as though the officials who sought an expert's evaluation of the school are ignoring the consultant's most important recommenda-

A handful of parents attended last week's school board meeting hoping for a chance to comment on the report's findings. Although a specific date was not set, the parents were until November before they are of-

It's also interesting to note that the recommendation — formed by consultants from outside the school district — suggests that the school district hire another outside consultant to help solve its communication School officials spent close to $5,000 for the study, which took about seven months to complete. Although the report contains observations and comments on the school's design, organizational patterns, departmentalization, special subjects, starting/stopping times, scheduling within the day, after-school activities, curriculum, exploratory subjects and homework policy, its most concrete recommendation was identified as improving communication between the administration and school staff.

A parent in the audience commented, tongue-in-cheek, that he could have provided school officials with the very same observation — for a lot less money and in a lot less time.

We hope that when concrete riorities and deadlines are set fo further study of the Novi Meadows Evalution, the process is handled in a timely and productive manner. We concur with board members who believe an opportunity for public response significantly earlier than November is desirable and at-

Avoiding the issues

The Novi News won't be making an lendorsement in the 52nd District Court judges race — at least not in the primary. The decision not to endorse in the primary speaks more to the process than it does to the candidates and their qualifications.

Voters will get to choose between Peter Abbo, Emery Jacques, Terence Jolly, appointed incumbent Brian MacKenzie and Michael Reeds on August 2. The two top vote-getters will square off in November.

By their nature, judges' races are conducted in a vacuum of sorts, and this race was certainly no exception. Behind an alleged code of ethics that prevents them from criticizing decisions or calling their colleagues on the carpet, judicial candidates are often reluctant to discuss much of anything concrete.

Perhaps that's why people often can ferret out little about who a judicial candidate really is or what he or she really stands for. Or why some people - the Kaufmans, Brennans and others with "judicial-sounding" names - have good success at winning these races, regardless of their qualifications.

But the net result is that the public is cheated out of the beefy issues of a campaign. The public instead gets sold catch phrases, colorful signs and lengthy lists of endorsements or qualifications that may or may not have anything to do with running an effective courtroom.

We also balk at local Bar Association rankings. They aren't fair to someone who might be a local unknown or someone who may have practiced a less visible type of law. And who's to say that lawyers will pick good judges. That's why voters elect them.

In this case, the 52nd District Court has a reputation for being wellrun and, properly, MacKenzie isn't taking any of the credit for that. The court's reputation for efficiency knocked out one of the big issues right away for the four challengers and started the vacuum effect in this

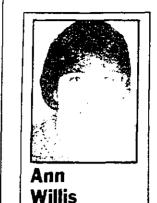

Many of the "reforms" the candidates have talked about have been in place for years or are infeasible for a District Court Judge to implement.

We have provided a quick rundown of each candidate in this issue. We hope voters look carefully at the records, in addition to collecting their own information, and cast the best

But we hope the two winners of the primary choose to engage in some meaningful dialogue as the campaign winds towards November. That means polite but substantive evaluation of the other's record and tangible affirmations of exactly why they would - clearly - make a better

'No big deal' ruins a life

Free Press. It's not a big deal. but it is ruining my life.

I am a creature of habit. I used to pretend that I was a carefree, spontaneous, devilmay-care kind of person, but that was all a lot of bunk. I am a methodical person. I like routine and routine likes me.

It's only been in the last five years or so that I have noticed how much I rely on routine. I like an order to things and I feel secure in the knowledge that when I wake up in the mornings there is a comfortable rythmn to the day. Waking up and doing pretty much the same thing in an orderly fashion keeps mornings sane in my opinion. Keeping sane is a high priority for me, although there are those who claim it's a little too late.

I think routine is the soul's way of easing us along. These are the mindless things we do each day that don't take a lot of thought. Brushing your teeth, walking the dog, getting the mail, watering the flowers, feeding the goldfish - they're all a chance to escape tension, demands and thought. We put on the slippers, let the dog out, put on the coffee, pet the cat and open the door to get the paper.

All of this is done in a sort of trance — a state between sleep and waking that eases us into the day. (I am talking about sane people here, not those who wake up at 4 a.m. with a song on their lips and the urge to jog 25 miles in the rain. Those guys are put on earth to make the rest of us feel insecure and slightly unhealthy.)

The need for routine is simple. Even those who claim to love a spontaneous lifestyle are kidding themselves. These same people will grouse if the toothpaste isn't rolled up right or if the car keys aren't left on the right shelf. Routine does not mean boring. Boring is not realizing that routine is a small part of your life — not all of it. Boring is spending a Saturday night building a special shelf on which to put your car keys, while routine is merely finding a niche and keeping them there. Get it?

Well picture a person who enjoys routine. A person ' who enjoys vacations, but also enjoys what vacations do to your normal life. If you've spent a week camping in the wilderness you learn to appreciate a bath in the evening like you never did before. If you vacationed in a foreign country and couldn't find a decent cup of coffee anywhere, then the first morning the Mr. Coffee drips into your favorite mug back home is a little bit of heaven. Disrupting routine occassionally gives it a ...

So take this person and have her wake up each morning to the sound of birds and the smell of coffee brewing. Have her petting the dog and feeding the cat — all part of a morning routine, and then have her go to the door and not find the morning paper. Have her searching the bushes, the mailbox and the road for an errant toss. Have her throwing on clothes and driving to a paper box where her money is rejected. Have her driving to an open store for change and to another paper box. Have her morning routine destroyed and you have .... her snarly and slightly insane.

So the Free Press, itself mired in indecision over the JOA, is unaware what havoc it is wreaking by being. unable to give me home delivery. For everybody who has ever not received the Novi News in a timely fashion, 🗦 🚯 it's probably your version of poetic justice. In the meantime, I'll keep hope alive, the slippers by the bed and the coffee perking. It's a routine.

"Please try not to laugh," she said, a big grin on her face. "Andy brought it over from his garden next door. And he's really proud of it. He started that garden this year, and he's been working on it really hard. I know it's a little on the small side, but he grew it himself, and he's walking around like a proud father.'

"Maybe it's some new kind of dwarf pepper," I offered helpfully. "Maybe we should send it to the Guiness Book of World Records for the tiny pepper category. We could take a picture of it next to a thimble so they can see how small it is. I just hope the thimble

"I asked you not to make jokes about it," she interrupted, reproaching me for my lack of respect for the green thing. "We're going to slice that pepper up and have it in a salad tonight. And then we're going to march over to Andy's house and tell him how delicious his green pepper was."

"Think maybe I should go to the store to get a real green pepper ... just to augment Andy's 'whopper'

"I think you'd better," she replied, "Just make

They show up on time. They catch on quickly.

They work ambitiously, these dedicated employees, endowed with a work ethic that's all but dead now. It's a legion who learned the value of a buck when there weren't many around. They're welleducated. They're downright oldfashioned folks.

All of that explains pretty well why local fast food restaurants, hardware stores, offices, and the like are clamoring to find them and get them on board. That group includes empty-nesters, senior citizens, or mothers who perhaps want a little bit more than "life-athome" when the children are away

Hiring the "older worker" has been a part of the local job scene for years and years, though it's just recently become highly visible. Any daytime trip to a local McDonalds or mall retail store confirms that. The Oakland County senior citizen population increased 55 percent from 1970 to 1980. There are over 149,000 in the county with more than a third either in the job market

When a woman of any age suddenly loses her financial support, through death or divorce, she knows she has to do something about it, but doesn't always know

Cabana nine falls just short in bid for play-offs

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

Novi Cabana — the city's entry in Mickey Mantle-level baseball — ended up winning five of its last six regular season games, but the final victory was a big let down. Coach Russ Timreck said his team was sky-high in preparation for the season finale against Southfield on uly 23, but the visiting team never showed up. It was officially logged as a 1-0 forfeit, but it was also an aniclimatic conclusion to a very promising campaign.

"It was a real bummer," Timreck said, "even though we got credit for a victory. I told Rick Friedrich he was going to be our starting pitcher, and he was primed and ready to go. So obviously he was very disappointed. Apparently, (Southfield) had four players hurt and couldn't VanAmeyde singled and then scored on a double by Brian Bartz. In the third, Heath Ruck started another rally with a single and, after a base on balls, Rick Timreck drove in two runs with a double. VanAmeyde's base hit then scored Timreck to make it 4-0. In the bottom of the third, Livonia tagged VanAmeyde for two runs, but Cabana came right back with a single run in the fourth on an RBI hit by Friedrich. Livonia added one in the seventh but it wasn't enough.

VanAmeyde went the distance and notched the win. He fanned seven, walked none and gave up just five hits. He also helped his own cause by going 2-for-3 at the

ALLEN PARK'3, NOVI 1: This clash on July 19 was a pivital game. Both teams were fighting for a berth in the NABF Regional Tournament, but it was Allen Park which broke a 1-1 tie with two runs in the final two inn-"This game was bad news for us," Timreck said. "If we'd have won this game, we would have been assured of a berth in the tournament." Cabana drew first blood with a run in the first. Mark Clary led off with a single, advanced to second on a passed ball and scored on a hit by Matt Gdowski. Allen Park scratched in the tying run off Cabana starter Brad Lewis in the third on the strength of just one hit, and the score remained 1-1 until the sixth. Allen Park strung together a single and a double to go ahead 2-1 and then added an insurance run in the seventh seven innings of work, Lewis allowed just five hits and two earned runs while striking out 10. "It was a tight game all the way," Timreck recalled. "Brad pitched a good game, we just didn't support him much offensively, even though we did outhit them 6-5."

TOURNAMENT NEWS: The loss to Allen Park knocked Cabana out of tournament contention, but two standouts from the team were chosen in the post-season draft by squads which did qualify. ## Novi Legion squad upsets Ferndale

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

The prospect of finishing the regular season with a doubleheader against a first place team would probably turn off most teams. But the Novi/South Farmington American Legion squad took it all in stride on July 24 and made the most of the opportunity. After dropping the first game 4-0, Novi/South Farmington rebounded impressively to shut out Ferndale 5-0 in the nightcap. With the 18th District playoffs on the horizon, the squad's decisive victory over the league's best team should provide some much needed momentum.

"I was surprised the way we beat them, but I knew we could beat them," said Carl Geistler, coach of the Novi/South Farmington squad.

"We had outstanding pitching from three guys and some timely hits." Steve Ross started the game, went the first two innings and allowed just one hit. He gave way to Brad Lewis for the next three innings and Lewis held Ferndale in check despite surrendering three

Bill Yankowski ended the scoreless deadlock in the fourth inning with a solo home run, and that fifth, Eric Wiesner led off with a double and scored on a single by Brian Daniels. Two errors by Ferndale then enabled Daniels to score — making it 3-0. Wiesner drove in Eric Schneider in the sixth and just four hits. Ferndale didn't even get a hit off starter Brad Lewis in the first two innings, but did break loose for two in the third and one in the fourth off reliever Drew Rick.

Reid Gough and Ross finished out the game and allowed just two hits and one run combined, but

"We only gave up six hits but we had three errors and that really hurt us," Geistler said. "And we didn't do much offensively."

'Common sense' boosts fitness

By ANN E. WILLIS editor

How much of staying in shape is just common sense?

The idea occurred to me while I was unloading groceries in a supermarket lot. A mini-van circled the not-so-large lot four, five and finally six times looking for a close-in parking spot. The day was a warm one, but sunny with no hint of rain in the

While I was watching the van I saw person after person unload their groceries and leave the cart beside their car. The handicapped parking spaces had become a cart zone. If someone had needed to use the spaces they would have been unable to pull in because able-bodied people had decided the walk back to the store to return the carts was too timeconsuming or too far.

On the way home from the store I saw three landscape companies cutting and edging lawns in Novi and Northville subdivisions. This is not an unusual sight. The days when mom, dad or junior mowed the lawn themselves are decreasing. More and more people hire out the work that would make them break a sweat.

Yet health club memberships are soaring. Diet and exercise books dominate the best-seller lists and video markets. People spend time every day doing aerobics, jogging, lifting weights and stretching in an effort to give their muscles a

Is one kind of sweat better than another?

The truth is that it may be more socially acceptable to sweat in a health club in matching leotard and tights rather than while washing walls in a paint-spattered T-shirt. But is spending money to hire people to do the dirty work and then spending money to go out and sweat contradictory?

"There's no question about it," Dr. Thompson at Providence Hospital in Novi said. "There is some indication that you don't have to go out and jog

While almost any diet and exercise book will urge people to spend more time walking - most encourage their readers to park further from stores and walk to the entrance, to take the stairs and not the elevator, they all stress the necessity for some type of aerobic workout as well.

But don't discount the value of picking up a rake and taking to the yard. For too many of us, days are spent sitting behind desks and the walk from the car to the office is the only exercise we get. A regular program of movement, be it yard work or vigorous household tasks, is good for us. Anyone who has spent the day painting after months of inactivity will remember the aching muscles that accompanied the sudden move-little differently. *Calories an hour)

Painting, or weeding, or raking all involve muscles and all burn calories. Like any form of exercise, inactive people should ease into chores that require a lot of energy. Pulled muscles, tendonitis and other sports-related injuries are also common with people who dive into scraping an entire house after sitting for the winter watching television.

Moderation and balance seem to be the key words to any form of exercise. While construction workers may develop their upper body strength with continual lifting of heavy beams, they may not be doing enough aerobic activity to ensure a healthy heart.

Likewise, a balanced program involving several types of activities, be it weeding and walking or lawn mowing and painting, combined with stretching and other forms of exercise lead to a healthier overall lifestyle.

Pregnancy creates structural stress

By ANDREA K. McDONNELL, M.S. special writer

As humans evolved from walking on four legs to walking on two legs, the functions of the support structures changed and the role of the muscles became paramount in supporting the body in the upright posi-

The spine, abdominal muscles and the muscles forming the pelvic floor became structural weak points in our anatomy.

Pregnancy, although a natural physiological process, puts additional stress on these and other structures. Often that additional stress and potential problems that can arise from that stress, such as lower backache, are only recognized once the problems occur. However, most problems can be avoided through proper preparation, such as a regular exercise program.

The "S" shape of the spine evolved to counteract the force of gravity on erect posture. Pregnancy adds additional weight and a change in the we forced the pelvic floor muscles to body's center of gravity that cause the curves in the spine to be more pronounced. The more pronounced the curves in the spine, the more the muscles are stressed.

Inadequate muscular support of the spine will cause the pelvis to tip forward, resulting in poor posture, fatigue and backache because the muscles are forced to do work they were not designed to do.

The abdominal muscles, which support the spine against gravity in four-legged animals do little in the vertical position that humans assume. Due to our industrialized society in which we mostly sit or stand, they do even less, resulting in weakened muscles.

During pregnancy, the abdominal muscles have the task of supporting the growing uterus and weight of the baby and, therefore, are are required to be stronger and more elastic than normal. If the abdominal muscles are weak, then they will become stretched during pregnancy and will strain rather than support the spine.

In assuming the upright position do more rather than less work. They must now withstand the forces of gravity and support the pelvic organs. Although the action is minute, we do have the ability to contract these muscles to counteract the effects of gravity. Pregnancy, due to the weight of the uterus and child, puts additional stress on these muscles. If these muscles are not kept in a healthy state prior to and during pregnancy, they run a greater risk of being injured during the

All other muscular systems, during and after pregnancy, are similarly stressed due to the additional weight of the child that the mother has to carry. If the muscles have been exercised and are strong and healthy, then the burden of the extra weight becomes easier to handle.

If the muscles are weak prior to pregnancy, then it can be difficult to move, which will result in fatigue, less movement and, therefore, weaker muscles.

To avoid the problems made prevalent by evolution and industrialized society, it is important to engage in a regular exercise program throughout your lifetime, especially during pregnancy when there are additional stressors placed on your body. Before starting an exercise program, be sure to check with your doctor.

If you are pregnant, make sure your program is designed for pregnant women because pregnancy predisposes a woman to certain kinds of injuries. Also make sure the program follows the guidelines set up by The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists to insure that you and your child will be as safe as you can be.
