Novi residents who complain about local roads will be asked November 6 to look to their wallets for a solution.

The city council agreed Monday seek voter approval for a 20-year bond issue to finance $18.8 million worth of road work.

Based on a "conservative" 5-percent growth in the city's state equalized valuation, property-owners would be assessed an estimated .43 mill the first year up to as high as 1.99 mills in the eighth year, with the average hovering at 1 mill, City Manager Edward Kriewall said.

The lone dissenter in the five-to-one vote to put the issue on the ballot, Council Member Tim Pope, vowed he would actively campaign against the general bond election. (Council Member Nancy Cassis was on vacation.)

Since June the council has considered asking voters to pay more taxes - an average of $50 per year for the owner of a home with a cash value of $100,000 -- to underwrite the upgrading of eight miles of roads.

"The whole concept is to let the citizens of Novi know it's time to deal with our road problems . . . This lists improves traffic in the north, west and central business portions of the city," said Mayor Matthew Quinn.

Ten proposed road improvements have been ranked, but council members stressed that the program would remain flexible as possible new priorities developed during the course of the six-year project.

"Nothing in this ten item list is etched in stone. Number ten could be done first," Quinn explained.

Deviations from the list could be prompted by reasons such as legal complications in acquiring road right-of-way, new needs in road expansion and the desire not to have certain areas of the city torn up for construction at the same time.

A point of contention from the onset has been the proposed paving of Eleven Mile Road from Town Center Drive to Meadowbrook Road. The Trammell Crow Company has proposed financing the project immediately in anticipation of a payback from the city. The corporation, owners of Novi Town Center and Novi Business Park, agreed to donated $63,000 in land right-of-way for the project.

However, in 1987 the company had petitioned the city asking for a special assessment district to pave the road. Council Member Martha Hoyer suggested holding them to the previous terms and ask the company to pick up $200,000 of the $1.25-million tab.

"I think it's important that the message be sent to Trammell Crow that we're not going to contribute what they said they'd contribute before. I think they need to make that commitment. It will go a long way in passing this bond proposal," Council Member Hugh Crawford sald.

not 50 percent - so I'm ecstatic," Alexander said after the results were anounced.

She attributed her decisive victory to an intensive campaign and the voters' desire for political change.

"I think the organization of the campaign had a lot of impact," Alexander said. "I had a lot of help everywhere I went and support from all the communities in the district. She polled 5,383 votes, almost double her closest challenger.

She said her victory indictates that voters feel she can beat incumbent Democrat Jack Faxon, which will be no easy task. However, she remains confident.

"What I found standing outside the polls is that people want a change from the governor on down, and that's the prevailing attitude," she said. "I believe I can win because I offer the voters new ideas, which is what they want."

The three Republican candidates trailing Alexander in the primary were: Terry Sever, 3,011 votes; Ben Marks, 1.925 votes: and Alfred Smith, 819.

The 15th State Senate District includes Novi, Farmington, Farmington Hills, Southfield, Oak Park, the Oakland County portion of Northville, Wixom, Lathrup Village, Huntington Woods, Ferndale and Royal Oak.

That sets up a November race with the Democratic nominee, South Lyon Mayor Jeff Potter.

"I feel good about the win," Schmid told the Novi News right af-ter announcing her victory. "It took a lot of hard work from a lot of people, especially my campaign manager, Donna Navetta."

But the real race will be on Nov. 6, she said.

Schmid, who had significant Republican Party backing, is a member of Republican State Comittee and a founding member of the Re-publican Women of West Oakland County.

Schmid, 53, took all 24th District precincts except Teagan's home base of Lyon Township. She finmargin in Novi, but slid by in South Lyon by a less comfortable margin. Schmid was not surprised by voting patterns because she targeted her home of Novi during the primary. However, the commission candidate said that she realizes the need to campaign hard in South Lyon and Lyon Township in the months ahead. Schmid attributes the primary victory to the amount of homework she did on issues and the ground she walked actively campaigning. Nevertheless, she plans to pound a lot more pavement before the general election.

ished with a healthy 1,016 to 363

"I think it will be a much tougher race in November," Schmid said. "I'm going to have to work hard in South Lyon and Lyon Township and really get to know the people and their concerns."

She said that Potter seems in tune with the issues and has strong name recognition in South Lyon and Lyon Township, which makes him a worthy contender.

Charges sought in Inside Novi Care death BIRTHS

By SHEILA PHILLIPS Staff Writer

Novi police are asking the Oakland County Prosecutor's Office to issue multiple neglect warrants in connection with the July 9 death of a 70-year-old Novi Care Center resident.

Police submitted results from a 31/2 -week investigation in asking for the misdemeanor neglect charges against several members of the nursing home's staff Aug. 1. Novi Lt. Robert Starnes led the inquiry.

Because of the uniqueness of the case, however, police expect a special prosecutor to be assigned to the case, and warrants may not be issued until after Aug. 13.

"This isn't your common case," Starnes said. "It's not a straight manslaughter case; it involves neglect and that isn't something that the prosecutor's office deals with every day, so it is going to take time.'

Police will not reveal exactly how many warrants are being sought, or against whom. However, Starnes did say that a representative from the attorney general's medical fraud division advised his department last week to seek neglect charges for more than one staff member. Esther Tauren died last month from aspiration of food while being fed her evening meal. Police say her airway was completly blocked by food, based on the autopsy report. The coroner's report found Tauren, who suffered from Alzheimer's disease, to be completely dehydrated at the time of death.

Disgruntled care center resident speaks out

By SHEILA PHILLIPS Staff Writer

One Novi Care Center resident says that the alleged wrongful death of Esther Tauren is just the proverbial straw that broke the cammel's back.

"There is a lot of things going on here that aren't right and I've been warning people for a long time that something was going to happen because of the lack of staff. and unfortunately it did," he said in a recent interview. David Abramovitch, a physically disabled 47-year-old. told the Novi News that the quality of care at the facility has declined over his five-month stay because of rapid turnover and staff shortages sparked by a change in ownership "They have made a futile attempt to upgrade the qualdressing," Abramovitch said. "Since the hullabaloo, couches, the area smelled like a "cesspool." they've been running around trying to clean their act up."

Abramovitch said that the center has increased staffing since Tauren's death on July 9, in which the 70-yearold Alzheimer's disease victim died from aspiration of food while being fed her evening meal. She was also dehydrated, according to the autopsy report.

Abramovitch said that several fellow residents are neglected on a daily basis, and the fact that Tauren was dehydrated at death is just one example. Many residents go for up to half a day in solled and wet clothing, he said

"As a case in point, Esther was often wet and she would sit outside the (administrator's) office for hours and no one would do anything." he told the Novi News at a recent meeting outside Novi Care Center.

Abramovitch also said that lobby furniture is often ity of care after Esther's death, but it is all just window solled or wet, and prior to the recent disposal of several

By SHEILA PHILLIPS Staff Writer

The recent death of a Novi Care Center patient appears to be a catalyst for changes to state nursing home regulations.

However, one health care watchdog group said those reforms don't protect patients from neglect. Last week, Public Health Director Raj Wiener called for immediate reforms to strengthen enforcement of patient protection laws. This directive came only one day after the Detroit News published a series of criticisms of the state's nursing home system, which was prompted by Esther Tauren's July 9 death. The nursing home care controversy came to a head last month when Tauren died from aspiration of food during her evening meal. An autopsy report also discovered that she was dehydrated. which sparked concerns about statewide care guality.

However, executive director of Citizens for Better Care (CBC), Susan Rourke, said that Wiener's reforms do not ensure quality patient care. "Ms. Wiener should be commended for many of he recommendations, which are important, but they are not a response to the issue brought out (in the newspapers)," she said. Although the directive addresses proper complaint reporting, the real problem is that current complaints aren't being acted upon, Rourke said. "The staff (Department of Health surveyors) has a tough job, but they are making it increasingly clear what is happening in thousands of homes and the department won't take action," Rourke said. "Cases of abuse pull your heartstrings, but the day-to-day chronically poor care has been settled for and should not be."

Wiener's immediate reforms, which are aimed to fill system inadequacies until companion legislation can be adopted, include on-site investigation within 24 hours of any fatality or suspected criminal activity, and strict enforcement of the Audit Protective Services Act and Public Health Code patient abuse protection provisions, which deal with patient abuse.

State Bureau of Health Facilities Chief Walter Wheeler conceded that Wiener's directives alone won't expedite matters because additional staff is needed mortar up holes in the system. Michigan ranks 48th in terms of number of inspectors per nursing investigating complaints.

That ranking should improve after Oct. 1 if the state gets federal funding to hire two additional field teams, Wheeler said. In addition, he said that nursing home legislation stuck in the house public health committee is needed to give the department the bite it needs. The Health Department needs the power to hurt nursing homes in the pocketbook, in order to promote change, according to Wheeler. Presently, the state can close or halt government funding of homes with proven health hazards, but those homes can still continue admitting patients. However, the state can request a voluntary ban of admissions or seek a legal ban through the attorney general's office.

Wheeler maintains that automatic penalties, such as admission bans, are needed. He supports House Bill 5918, which is sitting in the house public health committee, would estab-

current patient protection laws. A companion bill, House Bill 4677, was also launched to establish additional facility reporting requirements, increasing the penalty for failure to report patient abuse or neglects, and giving law

Planners OK high-tech zone

By SHEILA PHILLIPS

Novi is attempting to take advantage of the high-tech age and entice state of the art businesses to locate in the city.

After two years of planning, the commission voted on an office zoning option, which would allow combination office and testing facilities in some office service (OS-2) districts.

"About twenty drafts and two years ago, we started this idea," Planning Director James Wahl said. "Businesses which were between industry and office uses had no place to locate in Novi, and this revision is an attempt to bridge that gap in the local marketplace." He said that new zoning option is imperative to Novi's healthy development, especially since office building development has gone soft.

Previous versions of the text allowed research facilities up to five stores in height, but buildings were limited to 42 feet in the latest version. The text was also revised to allow a 50-50 split between industrial and office uses to accommodate testing facilities and a greater number of research operations. Prior versions called for a 60-40 split in favor of office uses

The commission voted 9-0 to approve the revised version, which still needs city council approval. The commission also opted to limit the amount of OS-2 zoned land which can use this high-tech option. "We have to be careful where we use this option." Commissioner Judy Johnson said. "The market is soft right now, and Id hate to see us "It is important that we establish down-zone too much and rule out

I pictured myself covering horse shows and driving around on back roads. I thought there would be time to get to know the people in the place I now called home.

Well, I never did cover a horse show. And while I'm tempted to say something about the similarity between covering animals and covering the city council - I'll leave that to other, less polite people.

I ended up covering a suburb on the move. Planning issues and sewers. New developments everywhere. Quality of life versus quality of the tax base. New shopping from Parks and Rec and watched the Civic Center grow. Along the way I've heard from people who liked what I did and people who didn't. I've gotten some letters and a whole lot of phone calls.

Now I'm leaving the Novi News. And I'm the lucky one. Because although I won't be writing about the latest development, or doing my best to inform readers thorugh editorials, I'll still be around.

I'll still be debating whether Glenda's Market or Erwin's has the freshest fruit. I'll still be glad the Total station on Ten Mile and Novi Road lets you pump first and pay sec-

Festival organizers put on one heck of a rockin' good time

Was this year really only the third time Novi has hosted the Michigan '50s Festival?

That's what the back issues of the paper say, but watching the festival and its results, that's hard to believe.

What started out - not very long ago — as a small kernel of an idea has grown into a massive event, already a well-established element in the summer festival scene in metro Detroit.

This year's bash attracted numbers estimated between 50,000 and 60,000 - a very respectable showing for such a young event. The festival also brought in a significant amount of money, both to itself and to countless Novi businesses.

To the community as a whole, however, the major benefits of the festival are the festival work are far too numerous to not economic. The five-day party does list here. They know who they are. When the federal government's Environmental Protection Agency declared that all affected communities would have to establish local wetlandsprotection rules before it would approve the Haggerty Connector project, the outcry was predictable.

Northville Township fire millage

The Oakland County Circuit Court contest offered up the most surprising results, however. Dennis Drury, who a lot of people expected to move ahead, finished last of six candidates. Rudy Nichols, a state Senator with (I thought) good name recognition, had a mediocre showing.

The whole event served to put writers of newspaper editorials in their proper place, as elections often do. In the most obvious example, Drury won the endorsement of just about every newspaper that circulates in Oakland County (including this one), and a fat lot of good it did him. In the closely watched Democratic primary for the 13th Congressional District, the Detroit News made a big push for Alberta Tinsley-Williams, who finished a distant fourth. The Northville Record recommended a yes vote on the failed Northville Township fire millage.

Smooth sailing

At this point in the campaign - after all the sound and fury, signifying nothing - we all need and deserve a break. But that's the kicker with primaries: they're only the beginning. If you're tired of campaign commercials on TV and campaign signs on every streetcorner, brace yourself. What we've seen so far is only the prologue. From now until Nov. 6 - that's a long three months from now-the rhetoric will build and build to such a crescendo that we'll barely be able to stand it. As usual, here at the paper we'll do our best to provide you the information you need to make decisions on the more local races. We hope it proves useful.

Perhaps the most interesting thing to come out of the whole primary was the fight for the Republican nomination in the 24th District of the state House of Representatives - the district which includes Wixom, Walled Lake and West Bloomfield. The unofficial totals showed Barbara Dobb winning with 2,338 votes - and Debbie Schlussel second with 2,337. That's a difference of one Painful as it may be, I'm going to follow all the races as closely as possible. These things truly are important, and the old cliche is true: Every vote really does count. Bob Needham is editor of the Novi News and The

Professionalism

To the editor:

The Novi Police officers along with the department's command staff are to be commended for the professional and tactful manner with which they performed their duties at the '50s Festival.

With several thousand people attending the festival activities - the real potential for problems was everpresent. Meaningful planning by the department's command personnel and the professional manner by which police officers carried out these plans - without question made the festival a safe and pleasant experience for everyone.

Community Education winds down, gears up

By MAUREEN NASZRADI Staff Writer

Novi Community Education this week is wrapping up its summer session and preparing to unwrap its fall offerings.

Community Education Director Clara Porter said the summer programs - most of which end tomorrow - were a success.

"I was very pleased with the session," Porter said. "We were kept very busy with questions and phone calls about the programs, which is good."

Porter was working with her staff Tuesday on the Novi Community Education Fall 1990 brochure, which will be mailed to all Novi Community School District homes the week of Aug. 20.

of Sept. 2, Tuesday through Saturday. Most eight- and 10-week courses during the fall session start the week of Sept. 17. The district's preschool program will begin Sept. 10 and one-day lectures and work-shops are scheduled throughout the session, Porter pointed out.

In a report to the Novi Board of Education last week, Porter said year-to-year comparisons show enrollment in the district's summer program increased to 1,344 this year from 863 in 1989. Spring enrollment this year was 1,247, compared with 1.217 in 1989.

Porter said part of the increase can be attributed to the swimming course participation; last year the pool was closed for repairs.

More than 400 people signed up Registration will be held the week for swim lessons this summer, she said. Other highlights were the doubling of 1989's attendance at the basketball campheld in July and the response to Safety Town, which required the addition of another session to accomodate the youngsters' demand.

Also, Porter said, "I'm surprised with the number of adults that have continued in exercise classes during the summer."

The spring and summer education programs include preschool, youth and adult enrichment, one-day workshops, swimming and physical fitness, Safety Town, six-week academic courses and camps. The assortment of course topics and program lengths are designed to fit into the summer schedules of adults and children.

arm response.

In reality, few movies generate enough advance excitement to result in significant sales prior to their release. Last summer's "Batman," Schaafsma said, is the rare exception, but then Batman-related items might sell without a movie because Batman has a stable following from his comic book, Saturday morning cartoons and the 1960s show.

"Idon't think people are that much into Dick Tracy," Schaafsma said. Dick Tracy does not have the same appeal among young people today as he did several decades ago.

But don't count Dick Tracy out, say others. Dick Tracy has been shot, stabbed, burned, drowned, cursed, blown up, beat up and just about every other form of punishment short of decapitation and he's still around. What's a little competition from one of Hollywood's hottest stars?

Melissa Crane, of United Stars of America, the character apparel divi-

for the fall.

United Artists of America made nearly $1.5 million on its Batmanrelated line and "we expect to double that with Dick Tracy," Crane said. Crane said that while Batman had a tremendous amount of advance sales, purchases dried up quickly after the movie premiered. Dick Tracy, which is only beginning to be promoted, isn't as widely anticipated as was Batman, but Crane and J.G. Hook is expecting a longer afterglow, she said. Designed by J.G. Hook's inhouse art studio, the characters were designed to depict the characters in Touchstone's "Dick Tracy."

Walt Disney controls the licensing for the Dick Tracy character. It requires that all memorabilia depict the movie, rather than classic comic strip characters, according to United Stars of America designer Carol Alzenstark.

"I don't think this was really a problem" she said. If the movie is as much of a success as people are exwill be selling points in themselves. Aizenstark said that while nostalgia buffs may have fond memories of the Dick Tracy character, inspired by his creator, Chester Gould, J.G. Hook officials strove to combine the qualities of the strip and the movie.

We think it's a nice marriage," she said.

All of United Stars of America's line, for example, strives to mirror the primary color scheme used in both the comic strip and the movies. Adding to the appeal, she said, will be the various depictions of everyone from Dick Tracy and Breathless Mahoney to Flattop, the Brow and Pruneface.

"It makes for a very bright, very colorful line," Aizenstark said.

The characters' real-life counterparts - particularly in the case of Breathless Mahoney, who is played by Madonna - may indeed be "the selling point," according to Ts-N-Things buyer Amy Simpson. pecting, the appeal of the film's stars Ts-N-Things, in Livonia, carries will be selling points in themselves. numerous Dick Tracy-related apparel items.

In this article I will discuss the use of life insurance in qualified plans and in deferred compensation plans. Insurance in qualified plans People make financial plans for their retirement in various ways: investments in equities, mutual funds, real estate, hard assets and so on. An important facet of retirement plans is a contribution to qualified (pension and profit sharing) plans. which appreciates on a tax-deferred basis. Life insurance plays an important role in the operation of many qualified plans.

There are four principal ways in which qualified plans can be finanaced with insurance: (1) individual policies, (2) group permanent insurance, (3) group annuities and (4) deposit administration contracts. Of these, the first two are sell explanatory. The group annuity contract is a method of financing a pension in which units of individual anhuity contracts are accumulated each year and are fully paid for on a regular basis.

In contrast, a deposit administra tion contract is a form of group annuity in which the employer makes the contribution into a deposit administration fund, which is a single fand for all employees in the group. When an employee reaches the retirement age, enough money is withdrawn to provide the retiring employee with the annuity.

An important aspect of life insurance in a qualified plan is that death benefits provided in these plans are required by law to be "incidental." In defined benefit plan, which prespecifies the monthly income to be received upon retirement, the incidental test is satisfied if the benefit does not exceed 100 times the expected monthly pension benefits. In a defined contribution plan, which specifies the annual contribution, the insurance premiums are limited to a certain portion of the contributions.

· One of the advantages of having Insurance in a pension plan is to provide a large benefit for those relatively young employees who die before their

- money in the qualified plan has a chance to grow. Another advantage of this strategy is to offer insurance protection for the key employees who are "rated" and can only obtain in-
- surance by paying significantly higher premiums. Premium payments are treated as tex-deductible contributions. The - distribution of cash value is treated as tax-free distribution. Deferred compensation
- · As a way of providing a powerful incentive, corporations sometimes offer their executives what is known
- as deferred compensation. A deferred compensation plan is an arrangement whereby the company promises-but does not guaranteeto pay a predetermined compensa- tion after retirement. This helps both parties, since the corporation does not have to pay the money now, while the executive does not pay taxes until the deferred compensation is actually received. Deferred compensation
- payments are tax-deductible at the time payments are actually made. A deferred compensation agreement is only as good as the financial arrangements that support it. An employer can promise benefits, but the ability to carry out the commitment depends on solvency at the time payment becomes due. Also, de-
- ferred compensation becomes a part of the general assets of the corporation and hence can be attached by its preditors. These problems can be solwed by using life insurance as a planning tool.

THIS IS WHAT DUCHENNE MUSCULAR DYSTROPH

Duchenne is a "progressive" disease, so the child grows weaker over time. The muscle loss can't be stopped. And it can't

The Muscular Dystrophy Association is striving to cure Duchenne. And on Christmas Eve of 1987, in what MDA Chairman Jerry Lewis called "a holiday gift of hope," MDA researchers announced a landmark advance: discovery of the cause of this

Now we're directly on the path to a cure for Duchenne. And MDA researchers are racing against time to save the children

This tree died of a heart attack.

Carving hearts on trees seems harmless enough.

O-B-SOUTH LYON HERALD-MILFORD TIMES-NORTHVILLE RECORD-NOVI NEWS-Thursday, August 9, 1990

But the fact is, it cut short the life of this majestic oak.

By gouging into the bark, vandals crippled the tree's vascular system. So, like thousands of other innocent victims each year, the tree slowly died.

But the fight against vandalism is gathering strength from the example of Lynn Brauer and Carol Eichling.

When vandals girdled a 300 year old Chinquapin Oak near their Marthasville, Missouri home, they wrapped the wound in sphagnum moss and tended the tree daily, despite blizzard conditions.

If not for the severe winter, arborists feel the Chinquapin might have survived.

We believe miracles can take root. When people care enough.

The Manita Turn of the century styling and living room space

By James McAlexander

The wide front porch of the Manita, with its traditional turned posts and railings, practically cries out for an oldfashioned porch swing.

This large 2<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub> -story home is reminiscent of popular turn-of-the-century styling.

Once inside, standing in the twostory vaulted entry, another railing catches the eye. The polished wood balustrade curves along the right side of the living and dining rooms, up to a small balcony overlooking the area, then up to the second floor.

Recessed display boxes nestle into the outside curve of the stairway support, great for objects d'art, family mementos or other knickknacks. If your home decor needs a little redifining, then here are some enhancement ideas to make your rooms more like...

When you walk from room to room in your home, are you happy with what you see?

Apart from clutter and cleanliness — do you like the furnishings? Are the rooms well-utilized?

If your answer is "Not really," chances are you're ripe for redecorating - and possible redefining the spaces in which you live.

What follow are enhancement suggestions for rooms that often are given a low priority

- but have tremendous potential.

BEDROOMS

In "A Complete Guide to Interior Design" (Simon and Schuster), the editors of House & Garen call bedrooms "serene sanctums_ around the clock." The editors' primary suggestion for bedroom interior design is "to remember every detail in terms of comfort and convenience." These details include simplicity for the sake of serenity, total noise control (soundbaffling wall paneling helps, as does wall-towall carpeting) and total control over daylight (block out unwanted light with shades or curtains).

GUEST ROOMS

It's hard to get perspective on your guest room — unless you pack your bags and move into it for a few days.

Follow the above suggestions for creating a beautiful and functional bedroom, but in addition, bless your guests with at least half of a closet, empty except for clothes hangers. Also provide one or two drawers in a chest or table.

Agreeable extras include a full-length mirror and a television set camouflaged in an armolre or chest (so it won't stare back at your guests).

If there's room, add a large trunk that ores extra bedding and can support an

at affordable prices.

"The environment should fit your work style," advises Success magazine. "You don't have to outfit your office like George Jetson's to be ergonomic. Comfort increases productivity. Have pencils, note pads, tape, floppy disks, a stapler and other everyday tools within arm's length. Your office furniture should fit you instead of your having to contort yourself to fit it.

SEWING ROOMS

If you love to sew, set aside a space for you hobby.

A sewing room needn't be large; you can convert a pantry, breakfast room, walk-in

The big comfortable kitchen at the back opens onto the patio. It has a large pantry, a work island, and a nook where most family meals will be eaten. Access to the patio and garage is from this nook.

The adjoining family room is quite spacious. Placing a freestanding wood stove on the hearth combines the visual benefits of a fireplace with the efficient heat production of a wood stove.

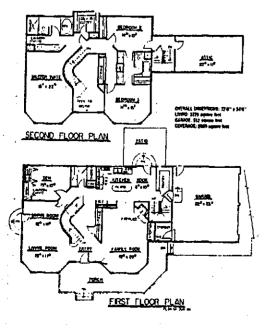

Call it a den, utility, storage, hobby, exercise or guest room, the little extra room in the back is sure to find a use. Laundry dropped down a chute in the master suite falls in a roll-out basket tucked in one corner, and a full bathroom complete with shower is right outside the door.

Sleeping quarters and an attic are upstairs. The Manita's peaked roof is high enough to fit a couple of more rooms over these (the additional half story), should more space ever be needed.

The master suite is huge. It has a large walk-in closet and double vanity outside the water closet, and room for a spa.

The other two bedrooms share a bathroom. Here again a double vanity is separated from the bath area. The two vanities are split by a linen closet for added privacy.

A storage closet is also tucked in the space between the two bedrooms, and plenty more is available in the attic over the garage.

For a study plan of the Manita (209-04), send $5 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307 CN, Eugene, OR 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.) To ensure a good night's sleep, provide yourself with an excellent bed and mattress. You'll also want good reading lamps and a light switch close at hand.

Treat you feet to a bedside rug or soft floor covering, and decorate with your favorite colors, lots of pillows, plants or fresh flowers.

Try to include one or two soft chairs as well as bedside tables with enough space to hold a clock, radio, tissues, books, and more.

Something from the past will lend interest. It could be a picture, an old rocking chair or the bed itself.

Consider decorating with designer sheets. A Laura Ashley or Ralph Lauren collection, for example, might consist of a splashy floral you can combine with coordinated stripes, checks, smaller prints or solids, which you use for slipcovers, curtains and/ or table skirts — all of which match your bedding and accessories. opened suitcase.

Is your guest room small — or does it do double duty as a den or library? Go ahead and save space with a sofa that converts into a bed — new versions are vastly more comfortable than their predecessors.

MEDIA ROOMS

If staying home and enjoying a high-tech entertainment system appeals to you, chances are you already own a wide-screen television set, a VCR, a compact disc player and an excellent sound system. But do you have the perfect place to put them?

Consider converting your family room (or the den, attic, basement) into a media room. A large furniture store can supply you with items designed to hold all your equipment — in style.

Comfort is key. You'll need cushy chairs or recliners and an overstuffed sofa. Add a small refrigerator, a microwave oven and whatever else connotes luxury to you. HOME OFFICES

Computer technology, combined with telephone and fax machines — and such conveniences as desktop copiers — make working at home easier and more efficient than ever, And you can't beat the commute.

Because of increased demand, more and more furniture manufacturers are offering complete lines of furnishings for home offices: desks, swivel chairs, computer tables, light fixtures, filing cabinets and shelving — closet or a corner of the garage.

Essentials for your special area include a work table that can double as a desk with your machine set on top of it or just under it, an iron and ironing board just a few steps away, good lighting over your work space and a closet, trunk, basket or chest or drawers to store your patterns, notions and fabrics.

DINING ROOMS

What's new in dining rooms? Halogen pendant lighting instead of chandeliers. Upholstered chairs that swivel like executive office chairs. Wood tables painted or stained in soft, light shades, then "distressed" to look antique. Convertible tables — flip their tops and they become playing surfaces for card games or billiards.

What's out in dining room design? Quite possibly, the once-popular trend toward combination kitchen/dining rooms that are open to each other, ostensibly so guests can visit with hosts during dinner preparation.

The idea is appealing, but one woman protests, "I don't want my guests watching my every culinary move, nor do I like looking into the kitchen 'battlefield' when we're at the dining table."

If you share a similar situation and don't want to incur the costs of remodeling, separate the areas with folding screens covered in a fabric or wall covering that coordinates with the rest of the room.

REAL ESTATE

The problem of stigmatized property

By James M. Woodard

Sometimes a real estate broker just can't win. It's technically termed within the industry as "finding oneself between a rock and a hard place."

A prime example is a case where a home, listed by a broker, is the residence of an AIDS patient—or perhaps a home where an AIDS patient has died. Should the broker disclose that information to prospective buyers?

If he does, perhaps the seller (AIDS patient) would accuse him of a discriminatory act in violation of the federal Fair Housing Act. And, after all, the broker legally represents the seller.

If the broker doesn't disclose the information, the buyer might later accuse him of not communicating material information about the property, thus violating full disclosure requirements.

It has been the focus of a rapidly evolvingscenario within the real estate market. But legislators and courts are now in general agreement that residence of an AIDS patient in a home being marketed is not a material fact that should be disclosed to buyers.

That residency would not jeopardize the health or welfare of new owner-residents, it is agreed by most analysts. And it certainly wouldn't affect the home's physical structure. To discuss the situation might generate discrimination against the seller and possibly thwart a sale.

The legal basis for this consensus goes way back to the Civil Rights Act of 1866. This post-Civil War statute protects the right of all people to "inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold and convey real and personal property." The law was primarily designed to protect the civil rights of freed slaves.

In 1968, the Fair Housing Act became law, followed by strong amendments to that act implemented in March 1989. The amendments expanded protections for handicapped people.

However, the wordage in these statutes was a bit vague when applied to cases where home sellers were AIDS patients. Therefore, many states have recently passed laws specifically addressing these situations, freeing brokers from liability when not disclosing the information to buyers.

In California, for example, Section 1710.2 of the state Civil Code is headed, "Sale of Real Property—Failure to disclose that occupant was afflicted with or died of AIDS." It specifies that "no cause of action" can be taken against a property owner or agent for not disclosing this information.

Similar state laws have been enacted in Florida, Rhode Island, Georgia, Oklahoma, Texas, Oregon, Illinois, New York, South Carolina and Hawaii. Proposed laws are now in the works in other states, including New Jersey, Vermont and Massachusetts.

In some states, the issue is addressed by rulings of real estate commissions or human relations commissions, it was pointed out by Robert Butters, deputy general council for the National Association of Realtors.

These cases fall into the category of "stigmatized properties"—those where sickness, murders, suicides and other situations have taken place but have no effect on the property itself, he said.

It should also be pointed out that any action by a Realtor that would discriminate against an AIDS patient would violate the code of ethics to which he has pledged allegiance.

That code, established by NAR, specifles (in article 10) that "the Realtor shall not deny equal professional services to any person, or be a party to any plan or agreement to discriminate..."

A Realtor is a real estate broker who is a member of a local board, state association of Realtors and NAR. It is a registered term of NAR.

Q: When a major fire destroys a number of homes in a community, how are property values affected?

A: We passed that question along to James Halliburton, who has owned and operated an independent appraisal firm in Santa Barbara, Calif., for 25 years. Over 660 structures, including 592 homes, were destroyed in a recent firestorm that swept across Santa Barbara and adjacent Goleta Valley.

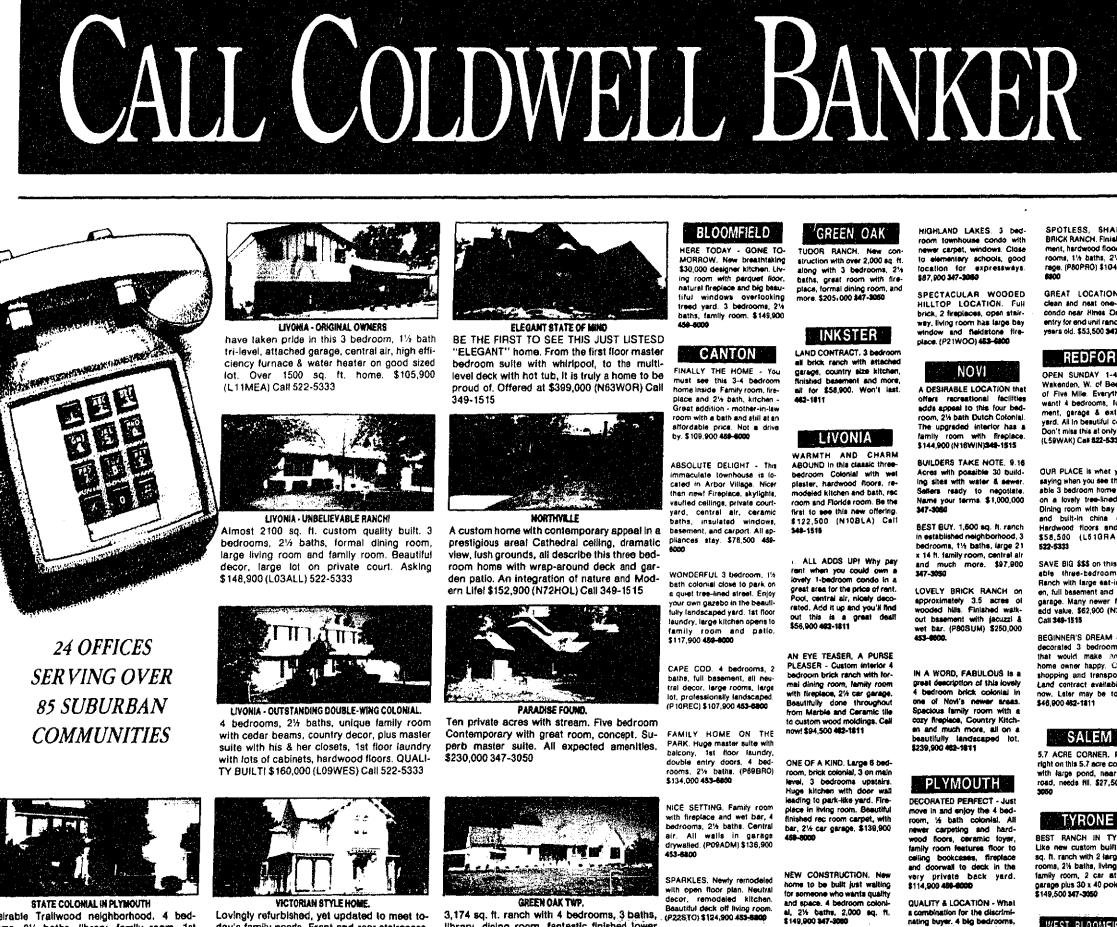

For the most part, there is minimal long-term impact to property values due to the fire, Halliburton said. Houses will be rebuilt, new vegetation will be seeded and grow.

"As far as the Internal Revenue Service is concerned, they only consider the 'actual and factual' value of the property before and after rebuilding," Halliburton said. "The greatest long-term danger to the property and its value is the possible erosion of soil on the site, due to lack of soilholding vegetation.

"Also, the loss of large trees could be a factor. To minimize this loss, plants and trees should be quickly seeded (or planted) and a carefully controlled schedule of irrigation started. Of course, if the community is experiencing a serious water shortage, that's another problem."

Halliburton lost his own Santa Barbara home to fire in 1977.

Look for a paint that contains 100 percent acrylic binder, a high percentage of solids (look for solids that are pigments or binders, rather than extenders such as clay and silica, which are less costly ways to add solids to the product so it will be applied more heavily), a high content of titanium dioxide, a sufficient amount of antifreeze (ethylene glycol) and mildewcide. And with training centers able to turn out qualified leader dogs more quickly, more blind people in need of dogs can receive them.

10-month old golden retriever puppy is allowed to pass. The next guard is much less stern and can't resist slipping a hand through the opening in the plexiglass shield to rub a hand over Jamie's fur.

"Everyone needs a pass every time they go in or out," explains Dyer, a 14-year corrections veteran who must filter slowly through the panoply of security precautions several times a day, often with a sleepy puppy in her arms.

Dyer is the driving force behind the novel new puppy-prisoner program recently imple-mented at the Huron Vally Women's Correctional Facility in Ypsilanti that is not only the first in the state but only the second in the country.

The program allows a select number of supervised prison inmates to assume responsibility for the time-consuming basic training required by aspiring young leader dogs. The inmates receive a puppy that is only several weeks old and socialize, groom, and teach the basic commands necessary to move on to advanced training.

Many involved in the program, both inside and outside of the prison, consider it an exceptional and mutually rewarding ar-

"It is important for the taxpayers to see that the prisoners aren't just saying 'give me - give me," says Dyer.

However, according to Dyer, it is the inmates that benefit the most from this program. An increased amount of socialization between inmates, guards, and inmates with guards has been one marked result of the dog program so far.

A result that is not hard to see. It is slow going as Dyer ambles through the prison grounds with Jamie, trying to make her way over to the training area. Although both Dyer and Jamie are tired on this muggy mid-afternoon, it seemed nearly every prisoner, every guard and every admi-nistrator wanted to pet Jamie and talk to Dyer.

Each time Dyer stops.

It is an important part of the puppy's socialization process, she tells herself.

How would Novi citizens and community leaders like to see the town center look - the center being an area radiating from the intersection of Novi Road and Grand River Avenue? That is a question for which Ronald

After discussions with a major deve-loper and also the Oakland County Planning Department, Watson said that they have acquired graphics, deli-neating and detailing the special dis-tricts within the Town Center area. The center would have mixed-use development - office, residential, commercial - and it would be accessible to pedestrian traffic.

The southeast quadrant, in which, he said, "most developers have been interested" would be "Main Street" with sidewalks, storefronts, and on-street parking. There would also be a residential section leading into it. The southwest and northeast quadrants are either somewhat developed or need clearance for development.

Northwest is an area, Watson said, for which "we have great hopes." Engineers have said a river walk in an urban park is possible. Town Center is "an exciting area in the city," Watson said, and in serving on the Steering Committee as chairperson since its inception in 1985, he has been working toward giving an identity to Novi, "the image of the town which people see as they pass through." This committee is composed of 12

New officers for veterans

By JEANNE CLARKE Staff Writer

Installation of officers was held recently for the reorganized service organization Amvets.

New officers include the following: post commander Tony Lollie, Senior Vice Commander Ernest Pudney, Junlor Vice Commander Robert A. Barber, Finance Officer Charles Craig, Adjutant Duane Bell, Provost Marshall Fred Bingham, and Judge Advocate Lou Gombasy. Following the ccremony refreshments were served by Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Lollie.

The post is open for membership to veterans of World War II, Vietnam. and Korea, and additional information can be had by calling Duane Bell at 349-2835.

The post was named after Perry Kenner, a local resident, and was originally formed over 40 years ago. It has had several post homes in the area: on Grand River where there is now a party store, and at one time was at the corner of Meadowbrook and Ten Mile before moving to the Wixom Community Building.

The group meets on the first Wednesday of every month at 8 p.m. and interested veterans are welcome to visit a meeting. Last Wednesday they met and discussed plans for upcoming activities which include a social for men raisers tion that Novi, ha morial

Program provides kids with a role model Kids get big brother, big sister

By LESLIE PEREIRA Staff Writer

Last weekend Fred Pindzia drove more than three hours to visit Brian in Howe, Indiana at military school. The weekend before that, he did the same thing. Parents are allowed to take their kids out of the academy overnight on the weekends, but at the end of their day together fishing. Brian returned to his bunk and Pindzia retired to a hotel. Pindzia is not Brian Marion's father. Rather, in a unique twist on the popular Big Brother/Big Sister program, Pindzia and Brian are spending a lot of time together, joined by the Novi Youth Assistance "PLUS" program. (People Listening, Understanding, Sharing). "Youths at risk" are matched with a volunteer who will serve as a role model and caring companion for at least one year. The young people who participate in this program are not juvenile delinquents, but kids who have lost a parent to either death or divorce and would benefit from a strong adult influence in their lives, according to Janis Wagner of Novi Youth Assistance. "It is a preventative measure," said Wagner. "It is for anyone we think would benefit from a positive role model." Wagner said children often come to the attention of their office because of referrals from teachers, school counselors or parents. "I sought out the program," said single mom Jennifer Marion, whose son, Brian, is matched with a male volunteer. Marion, a teacher at Novi Woods School, learned of the program through other teachers and felt it would benefit

Brian. "I felt Brian needed a male role model," Marion said. "Without a positive male role model, teens look solely to their peers."

A weight

Mar technologia

Despite possible strong suggestions from parents of teachers, the program is completely voluntary and no child can be forced into it.

"We never have a child do it that doesn't want to," Wagner said. "Usually it is that child who doesn't get that one-onone attention at home who is interested in the program." Marion said Brian was very hesitant about the program when she initially mentioned it, but "once he met Fred, all his doubts disappeared." The process of matching an interested child with a volunteer is a careful and lengthy one. Both parent and child meet with a Novi Youth Assistance coordinator to work out the details and a list of the child's interests and favorite activities. Then the child is matched with a volunteer, usually of the same gender, who has similar interests and who the directors feel will be compatible with the

"My first two matches we hit it off," said Pindzia. "Both times we had a lot in common. Pindzia believes it is important for matches to have similar interests because they spend a lot of time together and probably even more time talking. "I think for a boy it is kind of hard to always talk to his mother," said Pindzia. And luckily for Pindzia, and Brian, they both like to go fishing. "He (Brian) goes nuts over fishing, so that is just about all we have done," Pindzia

Although volunteers in the program are really only required to spend a few hours, one day a week, with their match. Pindzia said he and Brian are generally together about 25 hours each week. "Fred and Brian have deve loped a very good friendship," said Marion. "They talk about all kinds of things."

PLUS program directors are careful when introducing the child and the volunteer to call them "potential matches." This is done to ensure that both the child and volunteer feel comfortable with each other. Either is allowed to request a change for whatever reason before the match is made official,

"It is pretty open-ended at first," Wagner said. Pindzia said he was lucky with two of his three matches so far. His first match, also named Brian, lasted the full year and their friendship continued on even after the program ended. The first Brian still calls him infrequently. Pindzia, who is single and has no kids, found out about the program through a newspaper article calling for volunteers and was moved to action. "I started to get those feelings you get just before Christmas and it really kind of made me want to get involved," Pindzia said.

Whatever the reason for his involvement, everyone involved seems to benefit from this arrangement.

"It has had such a positive result in our household," said Marion. They do things that normally a father would do." And although Pindzia, as a friend and not a father, is not allowed to take Brian out overnight when he visits in Howe, there are many things they can do.

"I get to do lots of fishing," said Pindzia.

Novi Youth Assistance's PLUS program is always looking for volunteers - especially male volunteers. Three hours of training, a couple of hours a week for one year, and the desire to help a child are the only requirements. For more information, call 349-8398.

Inmates train leader dogs

It is also more than that, as Dyer herself can see. The puppy is helping to forge a sort of bond between the prisoners, guards and herself. Jamie is something they can all talk about, a common cause they can rally behind.

Because the sight of a puppy forces many of them to drop their hard defenses, if only for a moment to talk puppy-talk, she is almost therapeulic with her ability to provoke emotion

"I learned one thing with B.J., says inmate Betty Manning of the prison's first dog, "I said the next one I'm not going to get so attached. This one I am going to do my part, but I am going to keep my distance."

No sooner had a common-sensical Manning spoken those practical gotten scared. words when Jamie came bounding across the training room in her direction. Unconcerned about sullying her-"state blues" - blue clothes issued to inmates by the state - Manning lay down with her head on the concrete floor as the puppy tumbled over her in obvious delight.

"Jamie, if you're going to give me this much trouble, I am not going to brush your teeth anymore," Manning lokes to the new dog who has not yet learned some basic commands. In addition to increasing the amount of socialization within the prison, Dyer believes the program offers a boost to the self-esteem of many of the participating inmates. They wanted to feel that even though they were locked up they were still worthwhile." Dyer says about the initial idea for the program. "I person, one of the only 60 percent of think they wanted to do something they could tell their kids about."

It is the inmates that supply most of the grooming, training and playtime the dog needs as a puppy. Additionally, several inmates have been preparing a guide book to train other prisoners to perform the proper dog training commands; they have spent time cleaning an empty storage room to use as a training center; and other inmates have begun to make for puppies they hope to get someday "I love it myself," inmate Thelma Pegram says of the many hours she has spent, together with other inmates, vacuuming the unused storage building they intend to use as a full-time training center.

"It is like raising a kid. You want 1.4

Representation of the second sec

the puppy to have the best just like a little closer and tentatively sniffed you want the baby to have the best," Pegram says

And although Dyer describes Jamie as a "pup with a purpose," the purpose being to learn the skills needed to lead a blind person, another important purpose of the dog program is prisoner rehabilitation. Once outside in the penned in play area, Jamie's red bandana comes off and she runs freely, picking up anything along her path, shaking it flercely and moving on to something else. Since this is her play time, the inmates sit back and watch - until Jamie rushes headlong into the redwood fence. Without hesitation, inmate Donna Willing had the stunned puppy on her lap, talking to her slowly and softly like a mother to a child that has just wandered off and "See how good she is," Dyer says quietly as Willing calms the frightened puppy. The current leader dog program with prisoner involvement evolved slowly from one inmate's incredible idea, to a plan with only a glimmer of hope. It eventually became a working program with a full-time staff person (Dyer) paid by the Department of Corrections

Still in its infancy, Jamie is only the second puppy to arrive at the women's prison as part of the dog training program. The first dog trained by the prisoners, B.J., arrived at the prison in 1988, left there about 11/2 years later, and finally graduated from a leader dog training center in Rochester during the spring of 1990. B.J. now serves as the eyes for a blind dogs that begin training and actually make it though the grueling and selective process.

Dyer believes a prison provides an ideal atmosphere for the initial leader dog training. While still pupples, future leader dogs need to be socialized in such a way to make them comfortable with many different people and various sounds.

We have different sounds and surfaces, different people, different her point, she stopped the puppy on adamantly that being locked up the way past the prison kitchen doesn't mean they can't contribute to with a huge, rumbling vacuum. As again someday, Dyer kneeled next to the screeching "It is a wonderful program. What it machine, she called Jamie to her in a has done for the inmates is extraorreassuring voice. "Good girl, good dinary," says Dyer. "It is bringing out girl," she repeated as Jamie shuffled the good in these women."

at the machine.

Mike Walrath, director of the breeding program for Leader Dogs for the Blind, described the prison as a "small city" in itself and said this is what makes it ideal for the puppy's initial training.

"They have electric carts, noise and confusion, Wairath said. The only thing they don't have is traffic." Because traffic training is an important part of a leader dog's education, according to Walrath, the prison dog works in conjunction with an Ann Arbor organization that takes over that task. But most importantly, the prisoners are able to supply that other essential element — time. And lots of it. "All I have here is time," says Willing. I mean, we're not going anywhere. That's what makes this program so good."

And Walrath agrees. "Quite frankly, the women there have a lot of time and training a dog is a very timeconsuming process."

The program has not received much funding yet because they are still in the trial stages. Jamie's veterinarian bills are paid by the Lion's Club and other expenses are met with outside donations. "This is a sore point with the taxpayers because there is a tight budget and the Department of Corrections is in the business of housing prisoners." says Dver. Dyer, and her trainers, would eventually like to see them training

10 dogs simultaneously. The thing about this program is we are taking something, but we are giving something back." says Dyer. "We don't want to lose this -- it is very important to them."

Dyer does not fool herself about the nature of the inmates or the reasons they are here. Nor does she dwell on the crimes they have committed. They are there, she is there, and together they have a job to do. "For whatever reason, every woman in there, even the trainers, are there because the judge decided to sentence them and because society red "Future Leader Dog" bandanas situations, every hour, every day," wanted them locked up," says Dyer. says Dyer. And as if to demonstrate But in the same breath she states

Beginning drivers on the road again

By LESLIE PEREIRA Staff Writer

Nate's hands never stray from their positions on the steering wheel at three o'clock and nine o'clock. He is uneasy in the driver's seat. It is apparent from the distance between his back and seat as he leans forward edgily and it is obvious from the automatic frequency with which his foot returns to the brake every time a bump, dip or curve in the road appears,

Nate is one of the many new student drivers that take to the streets in droves during the summer vacation months after their sophomore year in high school. The yellow "Student Driver" sign sitting prominently on the roof of a typically nondescript car is like a scarlet letter to these kids as they cruise through the streets of their hometown branded a beginner. Other drivers on the road keep their distance from the sometimes slow-moving, studentfilled vehicle as if it were an escapee from a leper colony.

"I like to drive second because you are more relaxed." says 15-year-old Nate Sant, the tension visibly draining from his face as he hops into the back seat of the car. He got stuck driving first today as he and fellow student Jeff Kinnelly went out for their third time with driving instructor Norm Hannawald

Although both teens will not be turning 16 for several months, they took their required driver education early so they would have more practice on the road driving with a permit before taking the official licensing test. So for the past few weeks they have been returning to their high school of fall and winter months for lectures on parking, videos on drunk driving and short stints actually out on the road. With 30 hours of teaching in the classroom and six hours of driving, the class offered at Northville High School is one of the most stringent around.

Or, some would say, the most thorough preparation. "I think that the six hours behind the wheel is important, says instructor Jim Daniel. These drivers are much more prepared and their skills are up to par."

One of the pleasures of a town like this is that you can take one stroll through town and know your way around. By the following morning we felt like old hands: buying Ontario's famous butter tarts from Niagara Home Bakery, oldest business in the village, buying jams and marmalades made by Greaves for 60 years (it changed hands last January).

By noon we had photographed the red double-decker bus and that historic-looking gazebo in Queen's Royal Park. The gazebo looked historic but was actually given to the city by the producers of The Dead Zone.

You can go from the Royal George to the 2 p.m. performance at the Court House Theater, which was playing Cole Porter's 'Nymph Errant' when we were there. All three theaters have three or four productions switching back and forth daily, so you could enjoy theater until your eyes and your money gave out. For us it was time to enjoy some of the other sights and smells of the Niagara Peninsula. Flowers bloom up the parkway to the historic McFarland House and on past Queenston to Niagara Falls. You can visit several wineries (Inniskillen is considered the best wine) and pick your own fruit. In August that includes some of the best peaches in the world. Locals buy fruit at the Harvest Barn on Hwy. 55 just south of Niagara-on-the-Lake, which also has a bakery and salad bar. Buy a handful of fresh peaches. Sit on one of the benches set amid the sidewalk gardens on Queen Street. Let the peach juice run down your chin and into your shoes.

Fine hotels and cozy B&Bs offer comfortable lodgings

By Iris Sanderson Jones Travel Editor

Where should I stay in Niagara-on-the-Lake? | learned a lot of things, and ran up quite a telephone bill, while trying to answer that question. The area code for all the numbers below is 416.

The Chamber of Commerce (468-4263) has an unusual reservation service. Call or write ahead, tell them what your priorities are, and for $5 they'll find you accommodations that fit your stated needs.

They list 12 hotels and inns, with rates in Canadian dollars. Multiply by .86 to convert to U.S. dollars. Hotel rates range from $C112 to $C325 (U.S. $96-$280) a night for two. Inns range from $C78 to $C140. They also list bed-and-breakfast accommodations from $C55 to $C95.

I was surprised rates were so high, but Ontario prices are high for everything, and you pay extra for staying in a tourist town that can usually fill its beds, especially on weekends.

The largest and newest hotel in town, two blocks from town and overlooking the marina and lake, is Queen's Landing, (468-2195): $C135 to $C325. It is owned by the same family that owns the well-known Piller and Post. (468-2123) $C132 to $C195.

There is a new hotel across the street from the Festival Theater, the Royal Park, (468-2010 offering special rates of $C95 to $C120 this year. The best known historic hotel is the Prince of Wales, (468-3246) on the main street in the middle of town, for $C112-$C228. I started calling my friends and learned that many

B&Bs are not listed with the Chamber. Sally Sawyer of West Bloomfield recommended the bed-and-breakfast home of Dorothy McCullough 'a delightful elderly woman who loves to play cribbage' at 300 Niagara, (468-4688). A Canadian friend told me she stayed there for $C35 last year. But nobody was ever home when I called

Al and Shirley Sandner of Lansing stay in the Old Bank House bed-and-breakfast, (468-7136) overlookng the lake three blocks from town. Rates: $C88 with a bathroom down the hall or '$C125 en suite' (with a bathroom in the room.)

I couldn't get a room there, but they recommended The Wellington House (468-4081), rate $C65, run by Richard and Monica Taylor. By this time my phone bill was rising. Mrs. Taylor was full too. She recommended Carol Grey (468-5423) and Lee and Beth Alma's place (468-4635), rates $C50-$C60, (nobody answered their phones) and the Kiely House. (468-4588) $C75-$C145.

Take Hwy. 55 until it dead-ends at Queen St and you'll see a large white house with black shutters," Heather Pettit said. Our room at Keily House was in the 'new wing built in the 1850s. It's a nice house. The room was small, up a long flight of stairs. The breakfast and ambience were delightful. It cost $C88 plus tax for the night, which still seems high to me as I adjust to village prices. I asked two townfolk where they would put their relatives if they came to town. One said the Moffat Inn or the Prince of Wales. The other said The Prince of Wales or the Moffat Inn (468-4116).

The Moffat, next door to the Prince, sells for $C75 to $C90. It doesn't have much public space, no lounge, but it is highly rated and in the middle of town. The Oban Inn, (468-2165) overlooking the golf course and lake, is the most popular place in town for dinner and probably has nice rooms for $C90 to $C130.

Flying kites as summer fun

By FRANK EICHENLAUB

If there's a kid in all of us, there's a kite somewhere in your future. Whether you're wealthy and healthy, small or tall, pretty and witty, or rough and tough, there's a kite for you

You want rough and tough? Try the behemoth Hawaiian at Kites & Fun Things in Plymouth that stretches 16 feet across at its wings. For the wealthy and healthy, once again try the 16-foot Hawalian that boasts a price tag of $380. Of course, there are other Hawaiians that run around $130 and Skyburners that cost $200. "It's like the Cadillac (of kites)," said the shop's co-owner, MarieAnne Trennepohl, of the 16-footer. Naturally, these are top-of-theline flying devices. Top of the line generally means the kites have rip-stop nylon and fiberglass or graphite frames, which drops their weight to under 10 ounces. Kites at the store run as low as $16.95 and as beatuiful as traditional dragons, butterflies and boxes. "We have everything from box kites, birds, kites from Europe, dragons-I mean the list is just endless," Trennepohl said.

But the shop is geared more towards the stunt filers than the pleasure devices. Recently, Trennepohl's husband and co-owner, Jon, finished second at a national competition of this type held in Grand Haven. MarieAnne explained that stunt flying is devided into four different competitions — ballet, precision, team flying and innovative (which allows the use of props).

Ballet involves flying while incorporating interpretations to music. Precision fliers follow designs, such as circles, boxes or stairs. Team flying means flying in a team and innovative is truly the stunt kiting of stunt softball player from Novi you've never heard of. Campeau is a local kid - her amily lives in Village Oaks Subdiviston — but four years ago she took her talents to Ladywood High School in Livonia. Krista may not be a household name in her own hometown, but in Livonia she is recognized as the scrappy, defensive whiz who played shortstop for the Blazers for three seasons and wrapped up her prep career this spring with a bevy of post-season honors — including a berth on a first team (Class A) All-State selection by the Michigan High School Softball Coaches Association.

"I always considered myself a strong defensive player, but my offensive game really started to come around my junior and senior years," she said.

Campeau has been an institution at shortstop for Ladywood since 1987. As a freshman, she was a starter on the junior varsity team. and a year later she moved up to the varsity and was the starting shortstop throughout her career.

"All through high school, I played shortstop," Campeau said. "I like it because you get a lot of action there and I was always confident about what I could do defensively."

On the field, she was a natural, but at the plate, Campeau struggled early on. Becoming affective against fast-pitch hurlers at the varsity level took time and experience.

"Hitting a fast-pitch softball is tough, but I concentrated on it because I knew it was the part of the game that I really needed to improve on," Campeau admitted. "Between my junior and senior year, our whole team got involved in lifting weight and that improved my strength I think that helped a lot."

In addition, with experience Campeau became a much smarter hitter. As a senior, she batted second in the order and often used the bunt as an offensive weapon or to advance runners. And that meant developing a number of different bunts to fit certain situations. "I used a push bunt, a slap bunt and a regular sacrifice bunt," she said It all paid off this spring when Campeau batted .412 in Detroit Catholic League play (.319 overall) and led the Blazers in doubles (8) and runs scored (16). And, as usual, she was one of the state's finest defensive shortstops with a fine

936 fielding percentage. "Krista was our team leader and co-captain," Ladywood Coach Kim Linenger said. "She has excellent range with a strong arm." The Blazers ended up finishing second in the Catholic League before being ousted by Northville in me.' the second round of the state tournament.

"We've always done well during the regular season but every year we never seem to get very far in the districts," Campeau said.

Once the season ended, honors and awards started pouring in for Campeau. She was voted as her team's Most Valuable Player, and ater picked to the All-Division, All-League, All-District, Aall-Regional and finally All-State teams. She was but nobody could reasonably deny that there has been escalating costs, could they? Here they are anyway; of the courses listed in the 1990 Golfers Map and Guide, 65 percent said their fees for 18 holes were in the $9-and-up range - and many were above $14. In this area, the cheapest 18-hole weekend rate was at Brooklane ($14.50). The costliest public course was Salem Hills ($18). Five years ago, a $10 weekend round was common in metro Detroit.

But let's be honest - it certainly won't translate into cheaper fees down the road. The costs will continue to rise as long as there are plenty of golfers to pay them.

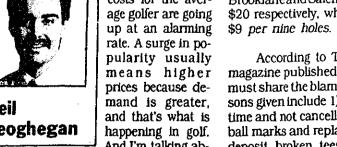

A recent trend in golf is the way courses are subtly discouraging those who wish to play only nine holes by, for instance, refusing to take tee times for a nine hole round in the mornings on weekends. Another disappoint-And keep in mind that these figures do ing trend is toward requiring power carts (no walking, which is supposed to be one of the big advantages of the game) in an attempt to speed up play. At least that's the excuse they use, but do you think the extra $18-$20 per round has anything to do with it?

With the cost for 18 holes (with power cart) in the $29-$38 range in this area — and roughly the same all across the state - I'm afraid the average hacker is being slowly but surely priced right out of the golf market. Instead of playing twice a week, the average golfer may only be able to afford to go two or three times a month - or not at all. Many future linksters may never even take up the game because of this.

It reminds me of the way the average Piston and Red Wing fan has been priced out because of ridiculously high ticket prices. For a decent seat, you must either own season tickets, or know somebody (or some company) that does. And rest assured, if a new Tiger Stadium is built, the same will happen there.

Poor defense dogged Legion squad Rec Briefs

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

How can a baseball squad have a team batting average over .300 and still manage to lose more regularseason games than it wins? That question is easily answered by Wally Christensen, manager of the Novi-Farmington American Legion team this summer: "We knew our weak points, and it wasn't hitting," he said. "It was pitching and fielding problems - particularly in the infield." Post 346 had a team batting average of .301, but in 26 regular-season games, Novi-Farmington committed 91 errors — that's nearly three and a half per game. In one game, the team made 13 errors. And with the exception of pitchers Andy Margolic and Darnel Krause, no Novi-Farmington oitcher had an earned run average below 3.90.

"It's very difficult to win games when you make a lot of errors, no matter who's pitching," Christensen pointed out.

Despite those problems, Post 346 was a very talented and competitive squad. The team's 12-14 record [16-14 including tournament games] included impressive wins over quality teams like Ferndale and Troy.

"We were very competitive and I think most of the boys grew this season," he said. "There were no weak sisters on our team - there was talent on this team."

As usual, Novi players were a big part of that success and talent. Krause was an effective pitcher (1-3 record, 2.73 ERA) and the team's top power hitter. He led the team is homers (6) and runs batted in (27). and hit .304. His biggest difficulty was the same problem that dogged the entire team - defense. An outstanding outfielder, Krause's trouble and Darnel Krause came when he played shortstop. He

Healthy back less prone to injury

By SYLVA DVORAK Special Writer

If you have ever injured your back or suffered from back pain, I am sure vou quickly realized how crucial your back is to the slightest movements. Your back is always working;

when you lift, bend, sit or sleep. That is why it is so important to keep your back healthy.

A healthy back is less prone to injury and makes daily activities easier to accomplish.

It is estimated that eight out of 10 Americans will have back problems at some time in their lives.

Most of these problems stem from lifestyle habits: lack of exercise, poor body mechanics, poor posture and being overweight.

Prevention is the key. Most back injuries can be prevented if you learn to take care of your back. You are responsible for your own back.

Therefore, whether you already suffer from back pain or want to prevent it, follow the guidelines listed below:

Posture

• You can reduce the amount of stress and strain on your back by maintaining a good posture.

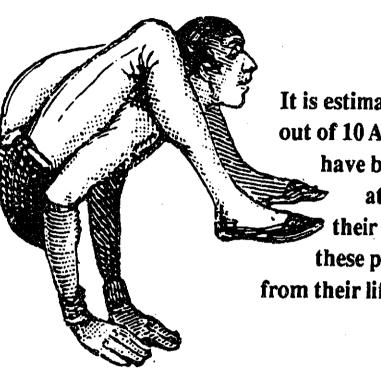

• Stand tall, don't slouch, tuck your chin in and keep your knees unlocked.

• If you have to stand for a long time, elevate one foot slightly higher; a stool will work well: alternate legs occasionally.

• Don't wear high heels.

• Sit in a firm seat to support at least three-quarters of your thighs. • Sit back against the chair don't slouch.

· Keep both feet on the floor or prop your feet up on a stool or box; don't cross your legs; this allows better circulation in your legs.

Fitness program can add years to your life

This is part two of a two-part article on exercise. Last week we talked about the benefits of an exercise program and the importance of warming up and stretching. Today's article will discuss aerobic exercises. the cool-down and strength training.

Fitness Tips

Aerobic activity

In the absence of an exercise stress test, target heart rate is determined by ones age and current fitness level. The following chart is a quick and easy way to estimate your target heart rate range:

AGE	MHR	70.%
		MHR 859	% MHR
20	200	140	180
25	195	136	166
30	190	133	162
35	185	129	157
40	180	126	153
45	175	121	149
50	170	116	145
55	165	112	140
60	160	108	136
MHR:	predicted	maximum	heart
rate.	•

An individual beginning an exer-cise program should exercise at the lower limit for their age range. Those who are currently exercising regularly or who have a higher initial fitness level may choose to exercise closer to the upper limit for their age group.

Examples of aerobic exercise

- Brisk walking Jogging Swimming Biking
- Rowing
- Jumping rope
- Cross-country skiing
- Stationary cycling
- Aerobic dance/exercise
- Stairmaster

The cool-down

slow jogging, walking, slow cycling, swimming easily, etc.

Strength training:

· Increases muscle tone and endurance; firms muscles, prevents injuries

• To gain strength: increase weight gradually and decrease repetitions

• To firm and tone: increase repetitions and decrease weight

 Upper body strength work: lie on a flat surface, bend knees to a 90 degree angle, keep feet flat on the floor and do not anchor them (crunches: slowly curl up, raising your shoulders off the floor; half-sit up: slowly raise upper body 45 degrees off the floor by tightening our abdominal muscles)

Advice for affective weight training · Always start with a good warmup and stretch

• When training with weights. proper technique is very important to prevent injury and maximize gains • Be sure to exhale when exerting force and inhale when returning to a starting position • Allow for a day of rest between training sessions

• Keep a record of each workout to monitor your progress.

Congratulate yourself, you are taking charge of your health. A balanced fitness program can add quality years to your life by improving the function of your heart, lungs and muscles. Enjoy the activities you are doing: exercise should be fun. Encourage your family to take part in exercise programs and recreational activities.
