Pregnant cop takes policy fight to EEOC

By CRISTINA FERRIER
Staff Writer

Novi Police Officer Deanna Hall, pregnant with her first child, was issued a larger pair of uniform pants that were supposed to last through her entire pregnancy, says her husband Mark.

But the pants were so big that when she put on her gun belt, the weight caused them to fall down around her ankles, he said. Whenever she pulled someone over on a traffic stop, she had to hold them up at the waist to keep them from falling down.

"Basically, they let her go out looking like a clown, like a fool," he said, "like the Keystone Cops."

"Of course, she came home crying every night," he said. "She wrote letters and wrote letters asking for new uniforms and they only gave them to her after her shirt became so tight that she couldn't button it, and her T-shirt was sticking out. . . They gave her a couple of short-sleeved (uniform) shirts because the others were too small, but when those got too small they told her to wear long-sleeved shirts. That was during 90-degree weather."

That's just one of the examples Deanna Hall, 26, claims of harassment she has received at the Novi Police Department in connection with her pregnancy.

Hall, who is eight months pregnant, has filed a sexual discrimination complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).

"We haven't filed any lawsuit and at this time we're not looking for any monetary rewards," Mark Hall said. "What we really want is for her to have light duty."

"My opinion is, obviously it's not good for the City of Novi to have a police officer, eight months pregnant, with her pants falling down, representing them. To me, it looks like they were trying to harass her into quitting."

Novi policy draws national attention

By JAN JEFFRES and CRISTINA FERRIER

Since Novi Police Officer Deanna Hall filed a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, invitations to appear on "The Oprah Winfrey Show," "A Current Affair" and "The Maury Povich Show" have been telephoned to Karen Koester, the first Novi policewoman to publicly protest the department's treatment of pregnant employees. Other city employees have been receiving the same calls.

Koester's turned down the offers to speak out on national television, her attorney Jamil Akhtar said Thursday.

"We will try our case in the court of law and not in the court of public opinion," Akhtar said.

That time will come soon. A Nov. 26 trial date is scheduled before Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Gene Schmelz. She is seeking in excess of $40,000.

Koester filed her lawsuit in 1988 and updated it in August to include charges that sexual harassment was used to hound her off the job. She has accused the city and former police chief Lee BeCote of violating the Michigan Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act and the Michigan Handicappers' Civil Rights Act when she was ordered to take an unpaid leave of absence while pregnant.

Koester returned to work after the birth of her first child. She filed the amended lawsuit contending

"I was told it (light duty) wasn't a topic for discussion. The treatment I got from the city was silence. The city ignored me. They didn't retire me; they didn't do anything. I've been in limbo for three years."

William Charles

she was subjected to demeaning treatment during her second pregnancy.

In 1990, Koester, pregnant with her second child, requested a reassignment from road patrol to light duty on a crime prevention unit, backed by a doctor's note saying she could work a full-shift.

She was ordered to turn in a request for an unpaid leave of absence.

Hall's allegations of sexual discrimination will come in handy in Koester's case. Akhtar has just added her to their witness list.

But Koester and Hall aren't the only ones unhappy with the city's refusal to assign "disabled" officers

A crew member of Marine Pollution Control works to clean up fuel spilled in Tuesday's tanker-truck crash. He is using the hose to push floating fuel toward a siphon which skims the fuel off the top of the water and deposits it in a MPC tanker.

Cleanup begins at crash site

"We had the fire out in 37 minutes," Novi Fire Chief Art Lenaghan said Friday, referring to last week's tanker-truck crash on I-96 at Meadowbrook Road. "Stabilization of the site however is going to take two to three weeks."

The tanker was loaded with 6,000 gallons of diesel fuel and 7,000 gallons of gasoline when M & L Petroleum truck driver John Ziants apparently lost control Tuesday morning due to a tire blow out and crashed into a bridge abutment.

Clean up of the spilled fuel began immediately, Lenaghan said. Marine Pollution Control, the contractor assigned to the clean-up job by the state, dug a basin at the crash site to contain the fuel and contaminated water. On Thursday, a siphon was used to skim floating fuel off the top of the water. By Friday, rainy weather had stalled the clean-up efforts. Absorbent pads were being used to soak up as much fuel as possible until the weather cleared.

Lenaghan said that he expected about 100 yards of soil would have to be removed from the site to complete the cleanup.

"Yeah, we're going to have quite a major excavation there," he said. He said it will take several weeks to complete.

The state Department of Natural Resources and Michigan Department of Transportation will be responsible for the clean-up work, although Lenaghan said the Novi Fire Department would monitor the work. Novi fire officials met with representatives of the DNR, MDT and Marine Pollution to coordinate the effort. The state is now seeking permits needed to conduct the cleanup. Eventually, Lenaghan said he expects the state will seek payment from M & L to cover the cost of the work.

At present, the spilled fuel is confined within the basin and the highway storm drains and ditches. The chief said he did not believe the fuel would spread before the clean-up work can be done.

Court receives second Fuerst will

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

A Nov. 19 probate court hearing for the last testament of Novi millionaire Ruby Fuerst was recently rescheduled, after a second will was filed Nov. 10.

Written in 1980, the first will listed among its beneficiaries the City of Novi and Novi schools, and included a provision calling for senior citizen housing on the former Fuerst property. This document has not yet been accepted by the Oakland County probate court.

However, the Novi City Council could resurrect the Senior Citizen Housing Committee, in part due to the potential bequest, Parks and Recreation Director Dan Davis said.

"That was part of the reason. The will has some provision in (it) dealing with senior citizen housing. It's really unclear right now. Preliminary indications are that (in) the will that dates to 1980, a good part of the estate was set aside for the city to build a senior citizen housing complex," Davis said.

The second will could countermand this, he added.

A few people who previously served on the committee before it was disbanded in 1990 are getting together again. They will ask the city council to formally reinstate the committee in the near future, Davis said.

The appearance of the second testament means that a court hearing for the contested will be set sometime in December, according to a court clerk. No details were available on the document by press time.

Gary MacLean of Farmington Hills, who served as Fuerst's attorney since 1970, submitted the first will. The original copy could not be found after a search through Fuerst's safety deposit box and possessions, but MacLean turned in a carbon duplicate from his files to the court.

In her first will, Fuerst, 91, listed the following parties as her heirs, according to MacLean: the City of Novi, Novi Community Schools, Rotary Club of Novi, Lions Club of Novi, Plymouth residents Margaret Gitre and Alice Dineen, Michigan Cancer Foundation, Michigan Heart Association, Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan, Leader Dogs for the Blind, the Lutheran School for the Deaf, National Cystic Fibrosis Research Association, Salvation Army, American Lung Association and the American Kidney Association. Also mentioned are Fuerst's deceased nephews, Martin Woehl and William Woehl.

No specific inheritances are mentioned in an application to probate court to receive this 21-year-old will. Judge Barry Grant will decide which will is the last word.

He will also rule on a petition from the National Bank of Detroit, which is seeking to be appointed as the personal representative of the estate.

Fuerst died Sept. 20. She and her sister Iva once owned the land where the Novi High School, civic center, library and police station sit. Iva Fuerst left most of her estate to the city and schools.

MacLean also wrote Iva Fuerst's will.

Officer files complaint to EEOC

Deanna Hall, who works 12-hour shifts in a single-officer police patrol car, has been denied requests for a light-duty assignment because of her pregnancy. She filed a complaint with the EEOC and state rulings about treatment of pregnant employees. "Most people would agree that pregnancy should be treated as a separate category, but it's currently not possible by law."

She did not return phone calls on Thursday and Friday, so was unavailable for comment at press time. Her attorney, Deborah Barno, said they have prepared no formal statement at this time. Detective Frank Barabas, president of the Novi police officer's union, was out of town and unavailable for comment. Novi Police Chief Doug Shaeffer said he could not discuss the uniform issue on advice of the city attorney. While he conceded that Hall's claim of having to hold up her pants while approaching cars during traffic stops "would certainly be embarrassing," he would not discuss whether it posed a danger to her. He added that police officers "never know, in any circumstances" what kinds of dangers they might face. "However, Shaeffer is not in a position to change the city's policy on light-duty assignments. My job as chief of police here is to carry out the policies of the city," he said. "The police department is not autonomous. My boss is the assistant city manager and the city manager. This is not an issue of my personal standards and feelings," he said. "We have a policy in effect—a conscious policy that was established and debated—and I am left with the task of enforcing it or applying it. I have made every effort to accommodate Deanna Hall's needs," he added. Shaeffer was the deputy chief of police in Oklahoma City before coming to Novi in July. He said Oklahoma City's policy was to give light duty assignments. Assistant City Manager Craig Klaver explained that state law and EEOC policies require that pregnancy must be treated as any other non-duty disability. "The only way you can accommodate a pregnant employee is if you have a light-duty policy for all employees," he said. Klaver said the city has no light-duty policy because "we don't feel it's appropriate for the city to assume responsibility for the employees 24 hours a day, seven days a week. If an employee gets injured playing sports on the weekend, and is restricted to a desk job, he could be doing a clerical job that would pay, maybe, $20,000 a year while we're still paying him as a police officer at $35,000 a year."

Klaver said he has consulted several other communities about their light-duty policy, and found that many are considering a policy like Novi's, which was instituted in 1992. Klaver said he believes public opinion would support a change in the EEOC and state rulings about treatment of pregnant employees. "Most people would agree that pregnancy should be treated as a separate category, but it's currently not possible by law."

Before coming to the Novi Police Department, approximately three years ago, Deanna Hall worked for the Detroit Police Department where there is a light-duty policy. Klaver said the city is "obviously concerned" about liability that could result from any work-related danger to Hall's pregnancy. "But it is more of a concern than the individual officer?" he asked. "Obviously, police work is hazardous. We are certainly sympathetic, certainly concerned, but there are options she can take," he said. Hall's options are to use sick time or vacation time or take an unpaid leave of absence. If she were to take an unpaid leave of absence she would be guaranteed her job back when she returned, but she would lose her medical insurance and other benefits as well as her paycheck during the leave. Employees in Novi who are injured while on duty are required to take a leave of absence and collect worker's compensation.

Officer draws attention to pregnancy policy fight

to light duty, in their cases, pregnancy is a temporary condition—or "disability." A male colleague says he was pushed off the police force after an on-the-job injury. Former policeman William Charles, a 15-year veteran, suffered two inoperable ruptured disks in his back in 1987 while on duty. Charles says this occurred at a mandatory monthly target practice at a shooting range. He had no prior back problems, he added. "It was in a crouched position. I went to stand up and I couldn't," Charles said in a telephone interview from his room in Botsford Hospital, where he is undergoing treatment for an unrelated condition. He returned to work, but the pain became so intense that his doctor prescribed a medical leave in Nov. 1988. Eight months later, the city sent him its own doctor for an examination.

Charles had always assumed he'd be returning to work. The city's doctor said otherwise. "I volunteered for any light duty. Hearing the department was short on dispatchers, Charles offered to do that. Instead, he was placed on workman's compensation. "I was told it (light duty) wasn't a topic for discussion. The treatment I got from the city was silence. The city argued me. They didn't reimburse me; they didn't do anything. I've been in limbo for three years," he said. "To me, it's a waste of an employee with 15 years' experience. I think it all boils down to liability. They don't want to spend any money. I told the assistant city manager I'd do anything."

However, Assistant City Manager Craig Klaver said that Charles did indeed retire from the police force during the city's retirement window period, last summer, in which city employees could retire with additional benefits. "We got some criticism in not doing more for Bill, but we did petition the retirement board to change a rule in the retirement window saying disability retirement did not qualify so he could retire and receive the additional pay," Klaver said. Klaver said Charles could not be assigned to light-duty assignments because of the same policy that keeps Hall and Koester from light-duty assignments. City policy, as well as state law and Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) guidelines, require that male and female employees receive equal treatment in the case of disability policies, and pregnancy is treated as a temporary disability.

It's really a legislative issue," said Klaver, who explained that Novi's policy is to give no light-duty assignments for disabled employees. Employees injured on the job are required to take a leave of absence with worker's compensation. Klaver added that Charles' case is a "whole different issue" from cases of the pregnant female officers, or any other officer suffering from a non-duty related injury. "It's a whole different set of circumstances," he said. "In the case of an on-the-job injury, worker's compensation will pay about 95 percent of the employee's original salary, so there is no financial hardship. Pregnant employees or those suffering from non-duty related injuries must use their sick or vacation time, or take an unpaid leave of absence. An unpaid leave of absence would eventually lead to loss of medical or other officer benefits. Novi's no-light-duty policy, which began in 1982, applies to all city employees, but "the difference is—and this is a bone of contention among employees—that physical demands vary between different jobs," Klaver said. Klaver says he's documented two cases where police personnel with temporary disabilities were allowed to stay on the job. Former Deputy Police Chief Richard Faulkner came to work with cast on his leg. Akhtar said another male officer was re-assigned to the auto recovery unit after a foot operation requiring him to wear an orthopedic shoe. The attorney said that Hall's description of her recent treatment seemed to show a slight improvement in the department's policy towards uniforms for pregnant police. Koester charges she felt humiliated when she was forced to wear ill-fitting uniforms and a gun belt while pregnant. "Karen requested they give her expanding waist uniform pants, with elastic panels set it and a shoulder holster," Akhtar said. "The department told her she could not do that. They are now allowing Ms. Hall to do that. The new chief (Doug Shaeffer) has ordered it over the objection of the command officers. They said it would constitute a safety problem to wear that type of uniform." Akhtar said he learned this during a deposition he took Nov. 13 in court from Lt. Thomas Hesse of the Novi Police Department.

Charles agreed with Hall's argument that pregnant cops don't belong on solo road—no. Her applications for light duty were also denied by the department. "You get a police officer who's pregnant and doesn't want to risk a child by going into a fight. What clerk in parks and recreation risks a fight? The city won't recognize that. Their attitude is they'll save some money. They don't care about their employees," Charles said. "As he sees it light duty should be an option both for pregnant and disabled police officers—especially for work-related injuries. "Police work is a little different than sitting in a city manager's office. Ninety percent of the police departments in the U.S. have light-duty officers and firemen," Charles said. "The City Manager Edward Kriewall had an operation on his leg and the city went out of its way to make it convenient for him to come back to work."

Klaver said Kriewall chose to use his personal time to return to work on a part-time basis for "about a week or so following his leg surgery, and that an employee's choice to use personal time in that manner is involved under city policy. Meanwhile, Charles is involved in a lawsuit with the city's former insurance carrier, Accident Fund of Michigan, which is trying to prove his injury did not happen while he was on duty. He is also annoyed by the city's arrangement with the Novi Chamber of Commerce to hire former city heavy equipment operator LeRoy Wixom. Wixom retired recently after six years on the city payroll due to a disability. Kriewall said he recommended that the chamber hire Wixom to drive the new trolley purchased for the city by the Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation. Wixom is now training at the Novi Community Schools bus garage. "That's on his own. We're not paying for that," Kriewall said. "The city told the chamber he'd be an ideal person to do that job."

To Charles, this is an example of preferential treatment. "I think that's a roundabout way of offering light duty to an employee and that's unfair. If they're going to do that for LeRoy Wixom, they should do that for Karen and Deanna and me and any other employee who's in that situation," he said.

Thieves make off with car, cash

A 1986 Chevrolet Monte Carlo was reported stolen from the parking lot at Twelve Oaks Mall Nov. 9. Novi Police reported they saw the owner of the vehicle walking around in the parking lot looking for his car. After checking the entire lot, they reported, they were unable to locate the vehicle.

Inside the car was a radar detector and $119 in cash. The owner said he had just cashed his paycheck and left the cash in the car.

The vehicle was entered into LEIN as stolen. There are currently no suspects or witnesses.

SHOPLIFTING: An employee at a store on Novi Road at Twelve Mile reported Nov. 9 that someone stole a pair of sunglasses.

Police News

He reported that two men came into the store, one wearing a red and white baseball cap and the other wearing a black baseball cap that said "Metallica."

He said the two were trying on sunglasses. Then, he said, the one with the red and white hat distracted him while the other one continued to try on sunglasses.

He said he became suspicious when the man in the red and white hat began to leave, and the other quickly caught up with him and walked out.

When he walked over to the display they had been looking at, he discovered the glasses the man in the "Metallica" had been trying on were missing.

LARGENT: A resident on Lashbrook reported Nov. 12 that someone stole hockey equipment and a floor jack from behind his home.

He said he placed the items there on Nov. 11 and discovered them missing the following day.

The man said he was in the process of moving out of the residence at the time of the incident.

Firm wants to drill in Northville

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

Up to a million barrels of crude oil may lie in the rocky crevices far beneath a Northville Township subdivision.

The Traverse City-based Southern Michigan Oil Company (SOMOCO) wants to drill a well on nearby state property and harvest the potential field of black gold, and is encouraging local residents to join in the bounty.

The same firm is suing the City of Novi for the permits needed to drill a quarter-mile west of Echo Valley Estates subdivision on Ten Mile Road. A public hearing on the drilling permit is scheduled for Wednesday before the Novi City Council.

Novi's attorneys were granted this additional hearing by the Oakland County Circuit Court, after the city's Zoning Board of Appeals overturned a city council denial of land use variances.

Some Northville Township residents reiterate concerns voiced by Echo Valley homeowners about adverse environmental impact from additional oil-drilling sites. They wonder if SOMOCO's claims of possible riches are true.

A SOMOCO representative in late October contacted 10 homeowners in a five-acre area in the Highland Lakes subdivision. Homeowners on Upland Court, Granite Court, and southern Science Harbour were asked to sign lease agreements transferring gas and oil rights to SOMOCO.

In exchange, the homeowners received royalties that SOMOCO Vice-President Cary Gottschalk said could run into the six-figure range.

"These folks, it's in their best interests," Gottschalk said. "If we drill the well, they will receive royalties. We're talking hundreds of thousands of dollars in royalty revenues."

Highland Lakes homeowners such as Dale Long are apprehensive about the sudden visit from SOMOCO brokers and presently are refusing to sign the oil lease.

"I don't want to sign it until I know exactly what's going on," said Long, who lives on Upland Court. "I want to do what's best (environmentally) for the township, but at the same time, if it's profitable for everybody..."

SOMOCO currently operates two oil wells on nearby Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital property. A third well would be placed adjacent to the existing wells, Gottschalk said.

No wells are proposed for the Highland Lakes area, based on terms of the lease agreement.

Gottschalk said SOMOCO believes an expansive oil field — estimated at between 500,000 and a million barrels — covers a sprawling area from state property north to the Highland Lakes area.

"There's a 50-50 chance of a reservoir north of (Seven Mile)," Gottschalk said.

To tap the potential new oilfield, SOMOCO must obtain signed leases from the owners of a 40-acre block of land covering the oil field. Long and his neighbors fall within the northeastern portion of that 40 acres and are the lone holdouts, Gottschalk said.

"Thirty-five of the 40 acres are already under lease," he said. "Four or five of the 10 lots have agreed to (sign the oil lease)."

Many of those talking at the offer have turned to attorneys for advice, Long said. Others are listening to residents such as Carol Andrikkides and Zo Chisnell, outspoken critics of oil drilling operations in Northville Township.

"Our concern is that they're coming into densely populated areas," Chisnell said. "People should be concerned."

Chisnell and Andrikkides worry about possible oil-drilling mishaps that could damage the environment. The slight, sound and smell of oil wells also pose problems for residents.

Local government officials have almost no voice in oil-drilling issues, township Manager Richard Henningsen said. The state Department of Natural Resources issues drilling permits and has agreed to allow townships 10 days prior to letting permits, he said, but the state has a vested interest in any drilling plans, especially on property it owns.

The state earns thousands of dollars in royalties and perks from the working wells on Northville Regional property, SOMOCO's Gottschalk said. The state could earn "in excess of at least $3 million" if a third well on hospital property bore fruit, he said.

But that revenue potential does not appease state Rep. Georgia Goss, R-Northville, who opposed oil drilling here while serving as township supervisor.

"I believe that another oil well would not be in the best interest of the township," Goss said. "I'm hopeful that the residents will not sign the leases."

Goss said she held "serious concerns" about potential groundwater contamination from oil wells. She said she would speak with DNR officials concerning the possible third well on state hospital property.

Gottschalk claimed to be mystified by the opponents of the drilling plans. The community actually could benefit from an additional well, he said.

"Another well speeds up the recovery (of crude oil)," he said. "What this does is it enables us to reduce by 40 percent the amount of pumping time. It allows us to get in and out."

SOMOCO would like to drill next spring, Gottschalk said. The firm first has to gain approval from Northville Regional, the state Department of Mental Health, and the DNR. Those steps are not viewed as major hurdles, he said.

As We See It

Recycling 'user fees' must be based on use

Mandatory recycling to be paid for through a "user fee," which has to be paid whether you use the system or not... it is an interesting concept. And it is one which raises a number of nettlesome issues.

Education

It may also be the way trash collection will be conducted in Novi in the near future. Novi City Council voted recently to approve a city-wide trash hauling contract with Duncan Disposal of South Lyon, Duncan is to provide trash collection and hauling, recycling, household hazardous waste disposal, composting and curbside pick up of large items.

Reduction, after all, is the most effective means of easing the solid waste burden.

The council also approved the "mandatory user fee" concept as the means of paying for contract. Depending on whether Novi city attorney David Fried determines that the method is legal, it could go into effect next July.

This goal implies a user fee system which — rather than assessing a flat yearly fee for all services — would be based on the amount of trash homeowners put out to the curb each week. Homeowners could then trim their trash collection costs by trimming their own output.

The "mandatory user fee" system is the method recommended by the Resource Recovery and Recycling Authority of Southwest Oakland County (RRRASOC), of which Novi is a member. It is already in use in several other communities served by RRRASOC, namely Farmington and Farmington Hills.

To make sure the costs of the system are paid proportionally by the heaviest users. This goes hand in hand with the last point. To our minds, there is little doubt that the homeowner who puts out 10 bags per week should pay more than that homeowner who puts out three. And it is only fair. Clearly, that 10-bag-per-week homeowner is making heavier use of the service and taking up more landfill space.

But it is also the method that has elicited some legal saber rattling from Taxpayer's United. Patrick Anderson, director of that tax reform advocacy group, claims the "mandatory user fee" is actually a tax, and therefore it must first be approved by voters or it will violate the 1978 Headlee Amendment to the Michigan Constitution. That is why council made its approval contingent on Fried's review.

To encourage proper, environmentally-sound use of the system. Again, if the goal of the program is to reduce the amount of trash going into landfills to ease the waste crisis, users should be financially rewarded for properly working with the system. As they recycle and compost, their trash output should go down.

Although it certainly seems that Anderson is raising a very legitimate point, it is too soon to make any conclusions about the legality of the mandatory user fees. Fried has not completed his work. In any case, a final determination may have to be made by the courts.

This of course implies an even more complicated billing procedure, one which would split the fees so that different amounts are paid for recycling/composting and for trash collection, with higher fees for trash collection and lower homeowners getting discounts when they recycle or compost.

But legally aside, we question whether the "mandatory user fee" is the best way to arrange for payment. To our minds, council needs to give this aspect of the contract more thought.

(It should be noted that this would resolve the question Anderson has raised. If fees were based on output, those who do not use the system would pay nothing.)

The main question we would like to see council consider is what purpose the user fees is, what it is intended to accomplish. We see four possible goals.

We recognize that this creates a number of possible administrative difficulties in terms of bookkeeping, billing and recording individual homeowners' trash output. But with some creative thought, there may be some easy ways to devise a system.

■ To pay for the system. Obviously, the fees must do that. This would also seem to be the simplest aspect, and the fees and their amounts could be arranged in any number of ways to accomplish this.

■ To encourage homeowners to reduce their waste output. The hauling contract is being set up as a response to the waste crisis, a part of the waste management plan Novi joined RRRASOC to establish. As a part of that plan, the city should have a component designed to encourage homeowners to reduce their waste.

In any case, more thought about how the fees should be assessed is warranted, not only to meet the goals the waste management system should have, but also to avoid having the fee structure embroiled in a legal battle which might only serve to delay the launching of a needed and overdue program.

A new business for ol' Phil

Phil Jerome

One of the advantages of having my own column is that I can write pretty much what I want to write.

Oh, sure, I have to keep it within the bounds of good taste and all that. And I have to make it semi-interesting from time to time in order to maintain at least a few regular readers.

But other than that, I can write pretty much what I want. Which is why I am going to utilize my precious space this week to promote my new business.

It's not a typical business. I'm not selling anything tangible. You can't pick it up and try it on. It's a consulting service.

What happened is that I discovered I have a real flair for naming babies. Good names. Unique names. Names that will make people stand up and take notice. Names that will last a lifetime.

That's right. This new service comes with a lifetime warranty.

I discovered this penchant for coming up with unique names last Monday with the announcement that Scott Piper, one of our staff photographers, had just become a proud papa for the first time.

Figuring that this was a busy time in Scott's life, I decided to help him with the time-consuming task of naming the new arrival by giving him a list of suggested names. The best of the lot was a unique African name — Yagotta Payda. Yagotta Payda.

Scott liked it a lot and thanked me profusely. Unfortunately, he and his wife had already given the infant a different name, even though it was nowhere near as good as the one I had suggested.

By that success, I decided to turn my attention to a couple of our editors who are expecting new arrivals shortly — Matt Valley in South Lyon and Mike Malott in Novi.

Valley names were easy. How about Renfro? Or Harper? Or Shannon Doah? Quality stuff, right?

Of course my favorites were somewhat more creative. Like Duanne Ireda. Or, a Chinese/Scandinavian name — Hani Greenman.

Developing names for the newcomer at the Malott residence was a little more difficult, but not impossible. At the top of the list is a Yiddish name — Alachem. Alachem Malott.

Another possibility is a combination Greek/Italian name — Mahoussa Stanzanna Malott.

As you can see, this is a pretty heavy stuff. And that's why I've decided to open my new baby-naming service — to make this new-found talent available to the public at a reasonable price and, of course, to rake in a few extra bucks on the side.

I'll bet a lot of you are pretty excited right now. Sure, there are some people who aren't planning to have any more children; and they're feeling a little disappointed. Virtually all of them are potential clients, however. Maybe they have friends who are expecting children. Maybe even their own children are expecting children.

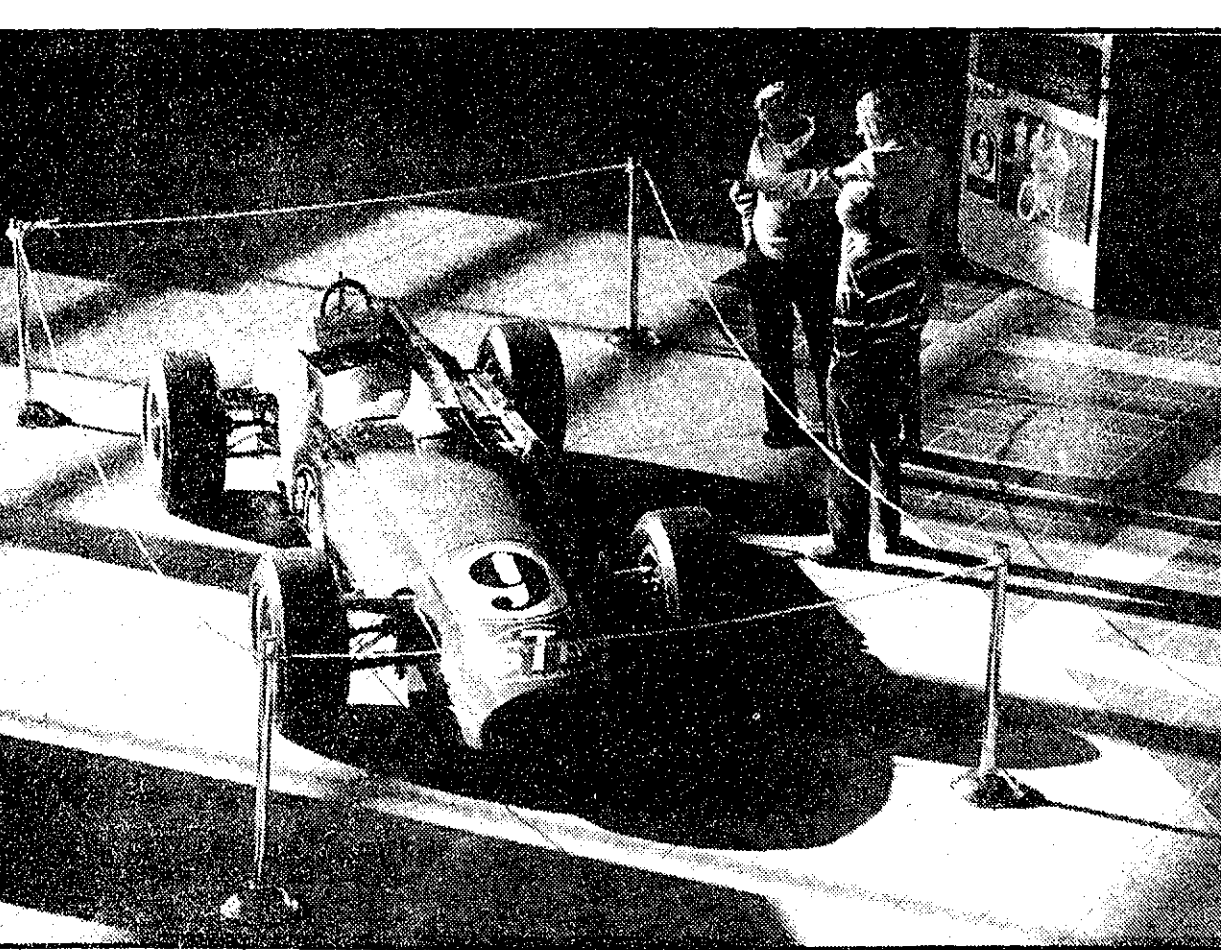

What could be more thoughtful than a personalized list of unique names for the new parents to consider?

So now comes the big question: How can you take advantage of this great new service? Simple. Just send me a short note, making sure to include the expected arrival's last name.

Enclose check or money order in the amount of $100 and send it to: Phil's Baby-Naming Consultation Service, c/o of The Novi News, 104 W. Main, Northville, MI 48167. And don't forget, this special service comes with a lifetime warranty.

The trash on Detroit's news

Rick Byrne

Magic Johnson, the Novi tanker fire, the Royal Oak Post Office shootings.

In the Detroit TV news business, it's been the week of the one-story broadcasts. Not to belittle any one of these events, but I'm at a loss to understand how any one of them warrants filling an entire local news broadcast — which is essentially what happened on the evenings they occurred.

Can you accept that nothing sure can't. These stories had plenty of shock value, but as far as long-range effects on the way the people in metropolitan Detroit live their lives, they had little or nothing to offer. TV news judgment in Detroit has gone the way of Bill Bonds' hair as far as I'm concerned.

Mike Wallace, host of CBS' "60 Minutes" assailed the three Detroit newscasts during a recent lecture at the University of Michigan, citing their fetish for "murder and mayhem." While I agree, I'm just as disturbed by the things they don't cover as I am with the things they do.

Even on an average news night, the network affiliates' coverage of Detroit and the suburbs is fair to middling, but when it comes to state news, they're a virtual wasteland. I seems as though the newscasts have conceded defeat to the newspapers on events in Lansing.

Discovering the pleasures of port wine

Port is big, round, full-bodied, sweet and wonderful. A glass of port accompanying dessert or served as the dessert course is an exceptional treat.

Vintage port is the greatest among ports, gets a great deal of hype, represents just 2 percent of the total annual production and is expensive. Not to worry, it is possible to enjoy good port on a regular basis, rather than just special occasions, once you learn that not all port is vintage and expensive.

Port is divided into two categories: wood port and vintage port. The former is aged in wood and the latter in the bottle. Vintage ports are produced only in excellent years, blessed with perfect weather conditions. These conditions occur an average of three times each decade.

The decision to "declare" a vintage is made by the shipper with the approval of the Instituto do Vinho do Porto. Vintage port is always blended from wines of the best vineyards, grown in a single year of recognized quality, and has exceptional aroma and taste characteristics.

Vintage port ages 2 to 2 1/2 years in cask; the remainder of its life is spent slowly aging in a black-glass bottle for at least 10 and frequently up to 30 years. Vintage port throws a heavy crust in the bottle and therefore must be set upright for 24 hours and carefully decanted before serving.

Most consumers decide to buy port on Friday and open the bottle Saturday. This is exactly why it is important to learn something about wood ports, which are ready to drink when bought. There are no concerns about vintage, age, decanting or the like, and the price is much more reasonable.

Wood ports are divided by type into ruby, tawny (produced from red grapes), and white. Fermentation is halted by addition of brandy, yielding a sweet wine with 19 to 20 percent alcohol. Young red port is a deep-purple color. It gradually turns ruby (red), then takes on brown hues and eventually becomes tawny (brown or dark amber). Port gains flavors and diminishes in body and color as it ages. It throws a crust in the cask rather than the bottle.

Tawny ports are lighter, more delicate and aromatic, and more expensive than ruby ports due to extended aging in cask. This aging produces a tawny color and a woody, nutty flavor. Better tawny ports have an average age stated on the label. The older wines develop a paler color, lighter body, and caramelized character that is particularly attractive.

Vintage-character ports are fuller-bodied, mellow rubies, blended from wines of better-than-average years. They have some of the characteristics of vintage ports but have been aged in wood, rather than in the bottle, for four to five years. The increased quality of vintage character ports is dependent on the vineyard and year, rather than on age.

The difficulty for the consumer is identifying these wines on the merchant's shelf. Each shipper uses a "signature" name because this type of port is not strictly defined as is vintage port.

Late-bottled vintage ports are produced from a single, quality harvest, and must exhibit standards established by the IVP. They are asked in cask four to six years and thus have an aged quality compared to vintage ports because they mature faster in cask than in the bottle. These wines are much easier to identify because the label must say Late Bottled Vintage and include both the vintage year and the bottling date.

An opened bottle of port maintains its taste characteristics perfectly for up to a month.

WINE SELECTIONS OF THE WEEK

The following are quality examples and offer a good introduction to the various types of port.

Taylor, Pidgeon First Estate Port ($15) is a fruity ruby style crafted from traditional port grapes. With aromas of cherry, red plums and currants followed by jammy flavors, it will enhance any fresh fruit dessert accompanied by blue-veined cheeses, particularly salami.

Holiday Harvest

Food banks ready for tough winter

By RICK BYRNE
Copy Editor

Thanksgiving is a time to count our blessings as we gather around a festive table.

In the spirit of the coming holiday, then, it seems appropriate then that we pause to remember that not everyone has a festive table to gather around. For the poor and the needy, there are social service organizations that can step in and lend a hand, and assure that everyone who needs it has food — at the holidays or any other time of the year.

In Northville, the community food bank is located at Civic Concern, in the Scout Building on West Cady Street. There, workers gather food from a number of different sources.

"All of it is donated," said Phyllis Ely, co-coordinator of the program.

"It comes from churches, schools and individuals. Mostly when people contribute on an individual basis, they contribute money. Occasionally they'll drop off a bag of food, but most people don't know they can do that — just drop off some food."

Cash donations can be used to defray costs, and also to fill in foods that aren't obtained through donations. The stockpiled food is then packaged in grocery bags for distribution to needy people in Northville and the surrounding communities.

"We make up a menu, and try to give them a balanced sack of groceries," said Ely. "We give them cereal, fruit, vegetables, peanut butter and meat, if we have it. We also have a few of what we call 'goodie' items, like a large can of jam or jelly or a sack of cookies."

Despite the economic downturn and rising unemployment of recent months, Civic Concern has a fairly good stockpile in its "cubbyhole," the group's storage room which has a munchkin-size, five-foot ceiling.

Contrary to popular belief, the most difficult time for food banks is not the holiday season. According to Gary Gonya of the Gleaner's Food Bank in Detroit, holidays usually find food banks well stocked.

"People are more generous this time of year than normal," he said. "The food bank ends up storing a lot of food. It's the end of the fiscal year for the food companies, so we get items from them cleaning out warehouses of material."

At Civic Concern, and at the Gleaners Food Bank, the lean times come in February, March and April. It's tax time, and donations slow as peoples' generosity fades.

"People don't think of playing Santa Claus in April; they think of it at Christmastime," said Gonya.

Marlene Kunz, director of Civic Concern, pointed out, however, that despite a weakened economy, there's only been a slight increase in need for the group's service.

"We haven't noticed it too much yet, but we're kind of expecting that there will be more," said Kunz. "We have had an increase. It's slow, but it is increasing. It has increased less

Polenta brings memories of Italy

The holidays are upon us. It is certainly a convenient being in a shopping center. Whenever there's a break, one of the staff runs out to pick up a gift.

At least they will have their shopping done. I can't speak for myself. Actually, I'm looking forward to Thanksgiving. It is a day off.

All of my family from out of town will be here. Grandmother Smith and Aunt Betty from Buffalo are arriving for a week's visit. They are both excellent cooks, so I'm looking forward to their critique of my fare at the restaurant. I'd better be on my toes.

My favorite (well, only) neices from Tampa, Liz and Macky will provide the entertainment as they romp with their cousin Alfred. Their mother Marj worked for us on Seven Mile and at Prudential. Kiti, the scholar of the family, and her husband Steve are joining us from San Diego. Kiti is a year younger than I, and just graduated from law school with high honors. We are very proud of her.

Everything has been going very smoothly. That is until Saturday evening at 11 when the glass shelf broke away from the wall, and five dozen glasses ended up smashed on the floor. Evidently the carpenter neglected to find the studs. Thankfully no one was hurt, but it could have been a disaster.

We continue to do our show and tell each evening with the waitstaff. Any menu changes, specials and "86" items are gone over. This is a mini class each day that we all look forward to.

Last week, we learned about different starches. Our accompaniments are sometimes nontraditional. It is a shame that, in general, our (American) cooking has tossed aside many of our ancestors' traditional dishes. Polenta is a good example.

Over the past several years, polenta has become trendily popular in restaurants. Mostly it is fried and dry.

On Sunday, Achilli Bianchi, the maitre d', or front-of-the-house manager at Too Chez came in to visit, and told of his recent trip to Italy. My first question was, "How was the food?"

"Simple and perfect," was his reply. His uncle owns a small restaurant in Milan that serves food family style. "Everything was uncomplicated and unpretentious. The flavors were exemplary."

What was his favorite? The rich, viscous polenta. Polenta is simply corn meal, cooked the same way as cream of wheat. Water is brought to a simmer, and the cornmeal added in a stream while stirring constantly. It should have the consistency of cooked cream of wheat. At this time other ingredients may be added.

The polenta may be finished in the oven. A delicious and healthful dish is to layer vegetables and polenta and bake like lasagna. With a salad, the meal is very complete. It is very elemental food, but wonderful if prepared properly.

We served the recipe following with a mixed grill of fresh snapper, grouper and mahi-mahi. Hopefully we would pass Achilli's Uncle's expertise.

POLENTA, MILAN STYLE

1 1/2 quarts cold water
1 1/2 cups corn meal
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
1 tablespoon chopped shallot
salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon fresh chopped rosemary
1 teaspoon fresh chopped thyme
1 cup asiago or parmesan sliced tomatoes or grilled onions

Bring the water to a simmer. Slowly add the cornmeal while stirring constantly. Add the rest of the ingredients.

Oil a deep casserole and layer half of the polenta into it. Top with sliced tomatoes or grilled onions. Cover with second half of the polenta and a generous portion of cheese. Bake for 30 minutes.

Civic Concern prepares for holiday than we thought it would." Need in Northville comes from many quarters. Ely said everyone from older people to single mothers to entire families have come to Civic Concern for groceries.

"We have a lot of people who are needy," she said. They come from Northville, Novi, Farmington Hills or Livonia.

When demand at the local food bank exceeds donations, larger organizations like the Oakland County Food Bank and Gleaners come to the rescue.

Operating under the motto of "Turning Surplus into a Plus for the Hungry," Gleaners serves as a central food warehouse for charitable food pantries, soup kitchens and other agencies that deal with the poor. It takes its name from the word "gleaning"—the gathering of grain left in the fields by the reapers.

In its 12 years of operation, Gleaners has distributed more than 62 million pounds of food to the poor through 360 non-profit agencies in more than 60 communities in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Monroe, Washtenaw and Livingston counties.

Among the local organizations taking advantage of the food Gleaners gets through donations and purchases are the Novi Emergency Food Center, Our Lady of Providence Church and Civic Concern.

According to Gonya, donations to Gleaners come from the manufacturers of the food themselves.

"We make up a menu, and try to give them a balanced sack of groceries. We give them cereal, fruit, vegetables, peanut butter and meat, if we have it."

Phyllis Ely
Co-coordinator, Northville Food Bank

"We draw from about 200-300 food companies," he said. "The food comes from overproduction, or perhaps there is the wrong color on the packaging, or some marketing person decides they need so much bran cereal and customers don't buy it."

Much of the food comes from farm surplus as well.

There's food out there," said Gonya. "It's just a question of getting it from California or Traverse City or wherever, to Detroit, and from here to agencies in the metro area."

Other donations to Gleaners come from the Buy-A-Case program, where individuals can buy a case of a certain food item, but the distributor sending it directly to Gleaners' warehouse. This is the best route to obtain items that aren't often donated, like baby food, chili, tuna and beef stew.

Gleaners, like Civic Concern, is well-stocked now, but not looking forward to the latter part of winter.

"It's just holding steady, but our hedge is getting thin, which has us concerned," said Gonya. "We also have got to get a bigger warehouse. We need another 100,000 square feet of warehouse, and we're out to raise funds. General Motors kicked in $250,000 to the fund to us start off."

Generosity like that helps, especially at the local level where all-volunteer groups like Civic Concern, and Gleaners' 180 member agencies operate.

"I'd like to thank people for their generosity," Gonya said. "That's what makes things go."

Homemade bread will earn raves from family

One of my fondest childhood memories is coming home after school and smelling the wonderful aroma of freshly baked bread in the oven. That was my mother's favorite way of warming up those crisp November days for us. I carried on the tradition for my children and now for my grandchildren. But today, I make my homemade bread with a little more pizzazz.

Does the morning rush have you frazzled? If you prepare ahead, you can freeze home-baked favorites, like West Indies Banana Bread.

You'll get a round of applause from your entire family. If you don't have time to "monkey around" in the kitchen, but still crave the taste of homemade bread, you might want to try Cinnamon Monkey Bread.

It's quick and easy to prepare using ready-to-bake buttermilk biscuits.

If you have a little extra time on a Sunday afternoon, why not try something different like Arabian Pocket Bread? Arabian Pocket Bread is a traditional Middle Eastern bread that's easy to make and sure to please.

Whether you're planning an upcoming social event, a holiday party, the school or church bake sale, or simply a treat for your family, with these recipes, I guarantee you're sure to be a "bread-winner!"

WEST INDIES BANANA BREAD

Makes 12 Servings, 1 Slice Each

- 2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon double-acting baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup unsalted margarine
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 3 very ripe bananas, peeled and mashed
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 2 ounces chopped walnuts
- 2 tablespoons shredded coconut

Into medium bowl sift together flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon, and nutmeg; set aside.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. In separate medium mixing bowl, using electric mixer, beat together sugar and margarine until light and fluffy; add egg and vanilla and continue beating until mixture is thoroughly combined. Add sifted ingredients alternately with bananas, beating slightly after each addition until mixture is well combined (do not over-beat, as this will cause loaf to become tough). Stir in raisins, nuts and coconut.

Spray 9-by-5-by-3-inch nonstick loaf pan with nonstick cooking spray and pour batter into pan; bake for about 50 minutes (until loaf is browned and cake tester, inserted in center, comes out clean). Remove loaf from pan to wire rack and let cool. To serve, cut cooled loaf into 12 equal slices.

Each serving provides: 1 Bread; 2 Fat; 1 Fruit; and 85 Optional Calories.

CINNAMON MONKEY BREAD

Makes 10 Servings

- 3 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon margarine, melted, divided
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 10-ounce package ready-to-bake refrigerated buttermilk flaky biscuits (10 biscuits)

Using a pastry brush, brush some of the margarine over bottom and up sides of 7 1/2-by-3 1/2-by-2 1/2-inch nonstick loaf pan; set aside.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. In small bowl combine sugar and cinnamon; stir to combine and set aside. Cut each biscuit into quarters; dip each quarter in remaining margarine, then into sugar mixture, turning lightly to coat and using all of the margarine and sugar mixture. Layer biscuit quarters in loaf pan and bake until loaf is browned, 30 to 35 minutes. Invert pan onto serving platter and let loaf stand in pan for 1 minute; carefully remove pan from loaf and serve warm.

Each serving provides: 1 Bread; 1 Fat; 25 Optional Calories.

Source: Weight Watchers Quick Success Program Cookbook, 1988.

ARABIAN POCKET BREAD

Makes 16 Servings, 1 Pocket Each

- 1 packet fast-rising active dry yeast
- 1 1/2 cups warm water (see yeast package directions for temperature)
- 1/2 teaspoon granulated sugar
- 4 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, divided
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon salt

Spray large bowl with nonstick cooking spray; set aside. In another large bowl

Preheat oven to 450 degrees F. Using rolling pin, roll balls into circles, each about 5 inches in diameter; set on nonstick baking sheet, leaving about 2 inches between each. Bake until golden brown, 5 to 7 minutes. Remove breads to wire rack; let cool at least 5 minutes.

Each serving provides: 1 1/4 Bread; 15 Optional Calories.
