Providence dedication draws 400

Detroit Archbishop Adam Maida blessed the building during the dedication ceremony of the new Providence Medical Center-Providence Park located at Beck Road and Grand River, near I-96. The event drew a crowd of 400 local dignitaries, medical professionals and area church officials to celebrate the opening of the building and tour the new facility.

Emergency room operations at the facility were scheduled to begin today at 8 a.m. Emergency services were to be transferred from Providence's Haggerty Road location, which is being closed. The new emergency number at Providence Park will be 380-4200 and the general information number will be 380-4100.

School taxes hiked 2 mills by Novi board

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

Novi school district taxpayers will see more than a 2-mill increase on their summer bills next month.

The school board set the operating levy for the 1992-93 school board at 1.57 mills higher than it was last year. The debt retirement levy also will increase by .5 mills over last year, bringing the total increase to 2.07 mills.

The total levy to be paid by school district residents will be 33.023 mills — 29.2 for operations and 3.823 for debt retirement.

Newly re-elected Trustee Raymond Byers was the sole dissenter for the levy. Byers said he would not vote for a budget that increased the operating levy more than 1.5 mills.

To the taxpayer, one mill equals $1 per $1,000 of assessed value on a home. For example, a $150,000 home would be assessed at $75,000 state equalized valuation. At the approved levy, that homeowner would pay $2,476 in school taxes next year.

Superintendent William Barr recommended a 1.5-mill increase in the operating levy. He said at a Thursday school board meeting

"If we're going to do that, let's talk about lacrosse, let's talk about girls golf, let's talk about strings."

Ray Byers
School board trustee

that his proposed levy should cover all expected changes in the State School Aid Act.

But school board members agreed to raise his proposal an additional .07 mills which will raise nearly $64,000 for the district.

The board did not mandate specific uses for the money, but Secretary Craig Foreback and Vice President Robert Schram said they would like to see $50,000 returned to capital outlay.

Barr removed the $50,000, which was to have funded one additional custodian and custodial supplies, to bring the fund balance up to 5 percent of the district's budget.

Ma Bell may alter its area code plan

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

County Commissioner Kay Schmid's proposal to keep the city under the umbrella of a single area code is one of several alternatives now under consideration by a Michigan Bell citizens' committee.

Schmid, R-Novi, has suggested pushing Northville city and township telephone exchanges out of the 313 code, to join Novi's Farmington and Walled Lake exchanges in the proposed new area code. At present the city faces a possible division by two codes.

The Northville exchanges — used in most of Novi — are 344, 347, 348, 349 and 380. They were initially slated to remain with Detroit within the 313 area code.

"I and a lot of other people in Novi got very upset when we found out they were splitting us and creating all kinds of havoc," Schmid said.

"The population of Novi is bigger than the population of the City of Northville and Northville Township combined and then they're splitting us. It doesn't make much sense that you carve up Novi and stick it down in Wayne County."

A citizens' committee appointed by Michigan Bell to study the addition of a new area code is expected to come out with a recommendation in two to three weeks, Bell public relations director Mary Jo Ficarek said Friday.

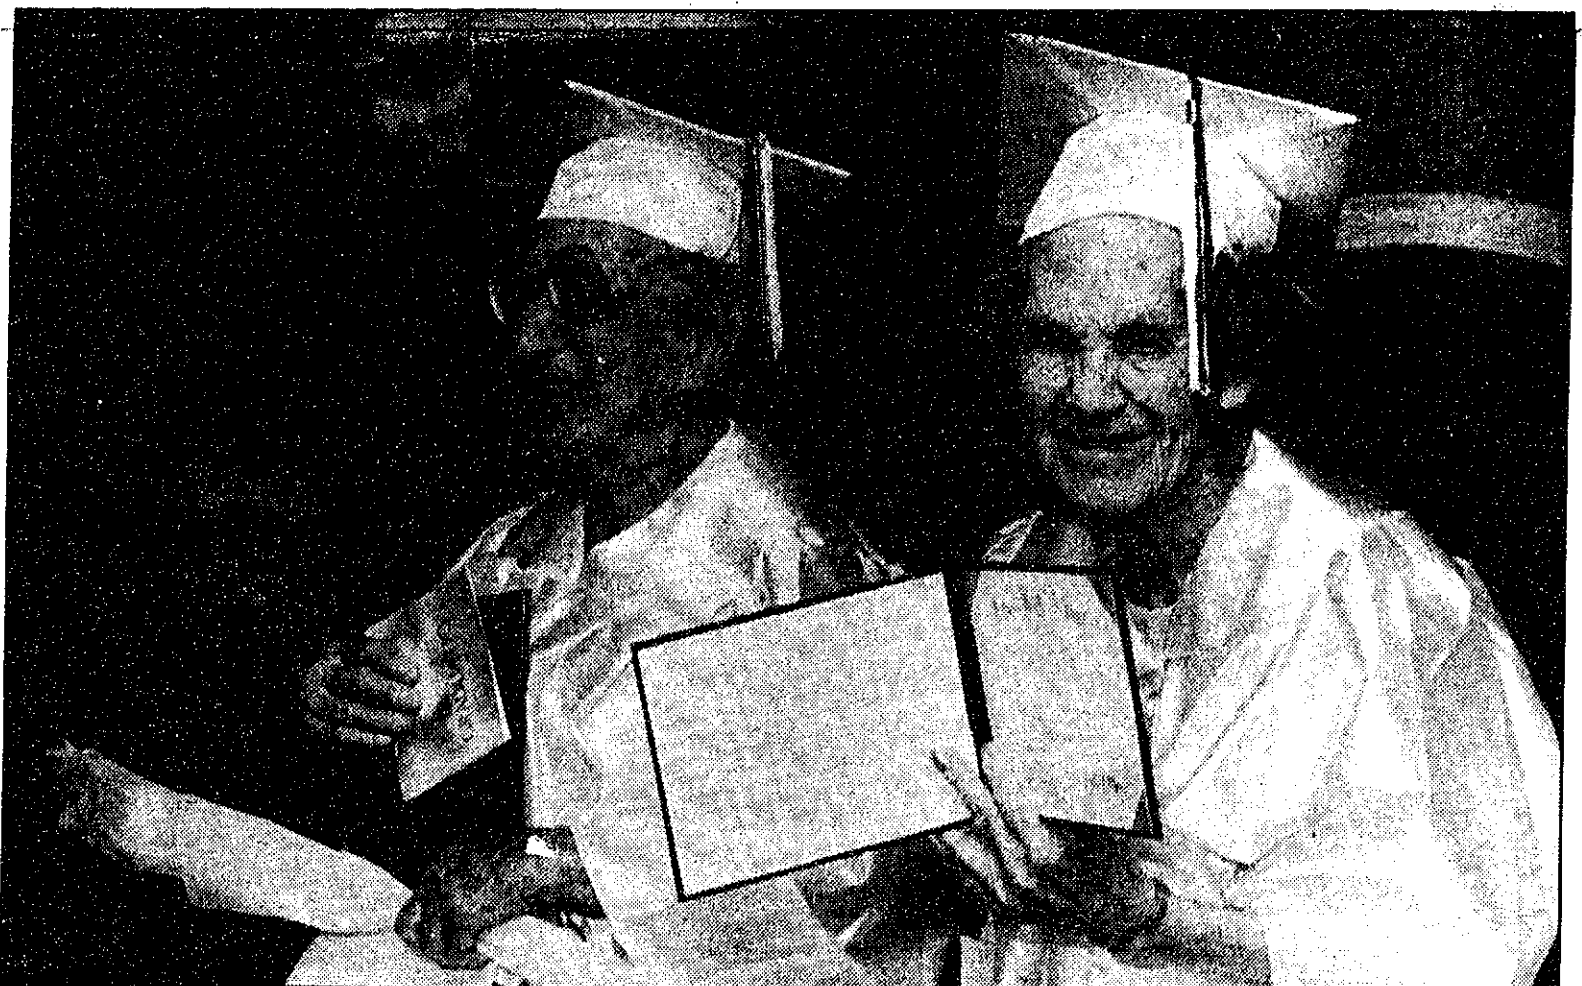

The split — which could run through the middle of neighborhoods such as Village Oaks in Novi — is proposed for 1994 because the 313 telephone code is expected to run out of new telephone numbers by 1995.

"They're looking at a lot of different approaches. This (the Schmid proposal) is one of the things they've been considering," Ficarek said.

"It's one of three or four different versions."

She added that the versions being mulled by the committee are too preliminary to specifically list.

Earlier, Joe O'Connor, head of the citizens committee said that the split is a "done deal" everywhere except Novi and Livonia, both of which could be divided, along with Wixom and St. Clair Shores.

Twelve awarded adult ed diplomas

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

Spunky was a word frequently used to describe the 12 graduates from Novi's high school completion program Thursday.

But the word is an especially fitting adjective for two of the program's older participants.

Edith Woodard, who will be 94 next month, gives new meaning to the phrase "it's never too late."

Woodard said a lot of hard work and a little encouragement from her Whitehall Home for the Aged landlord helped her make it to the commencement ceremony.

Woodard was born in the South, which she said explains why she did not graduate the first time around.

"You just don't graduate down there," she said.

She and Whitehall neighbor Rose Krykun, 84, spent the day of graduation in celebration. A picnic with over 200 guests was held at Whitehall, a place Woodard describes as "a beautiful, beautiful old home."

They were tired but also excited and proud. "This is awful hard on my butt," Woodard said of the chairs in the Novi High School library where graduation was held.

Woodard and Krykun will receive degrees from Novi High School. They were instructed by teacher Susan Greenlee. Greenlee said she is qualified to teach regular high school, but she prefers working with seniors.

"They're wise, and I learn a lot from them," Greenlee said. For example, Greenlee said she garnered years of gardening know-how during one class discussion.

Whitehall residents can graduate after attending a certain number of seminars taught by Greenlee. All classwork is done orally.

Also graduating with Woodard and Krykun were 10 somewhat younger students.

The group met four hours a night for four nights a week to complete requirements necessary for graduation.

"I can honestly say this year I could not have hand-picked a better group of graduates," said adult education supervisor Patrick Wolynski.

In an emotion-filled speech, student Laurie Duff reminded her fellow classmates the work is not over.

"High school is just a stepping stone to the future. I look forward to taking on college," Duff said.

Duff said it was difficult to give up time with her children, ages 8 and 7. But she hopes they will understand the importance of education.

College will be no different. But Duff's college career will be a little easier thanks to a scholarship presented in the name of Novi Schools. Duff can receive up to $200 after providing the district with proof of registration at a college or university.

Duff plans to attend Schoolcraft Community College.

Novi Superintendent William Barr congratulated the graduates for making the decision to go back to school.

"You are special, courageous and spunky individuals," he said, adding that the students should continue to set goals.

Novi school board President Stephen Hitchcock told the graduates they should remember what they have accomplished when pursuing their future goals.

Racial slurs lead to drawn handgun

By CRISTINA FERRIER
Staff Writer

Novi police arrested a man outside the Meadowbrook Road 7-Eleven June 6 after he allegedly pointed a stolen gun at two other men in the parking lot.

The man refused to speak to police, but an officer said he was overheard saying that he got into a confrontation with the others because they were using racial slurs against him. The suspect is black and the people who were in the parking lot are white.

When police arrived at the scene they questioned the suspect, who reportedly said he and the others were old friends from school and were not fighting.

During the questioning one officer noticed a silver semi-automatic pistol lying on the floor in front of the driver's seat of his vehicle.

The other two men in the lot, questioned separately, told police the suspect was arguing with them and pointed the gun at each of them separately. A witness reportedly agreed with their story, saying he pointed the gun into one man's "gut" and then pointed it at the other man and cocked the hammer.

Police questioned the suspect again, who still denied he and the other men were fighting and denied pointing the gun. He told police he bought the gun from a "crackhead" in Pontiac for $50 and only uses it for show. He said he has never had any bullets in it.

A computer check by police showed the gun to have been stolen in January, 1990.

The suspect was arrested and transported to the Novi police station, where he refused to answer questions.

Novi officer Lou Bigliardi wrote in the police incident report that, while the suspect was making a phone call from jail, he was heard saying enough to suggest that he did argue with the other men in the parking lot.

"There were some guys talking s---, talking black s---, one of them called me a nigger or some s---, so I slapped him," he allegedly said.

Police said there were warrants out of Pontiac and Ypsilanti for the suspect's arrest.

School's hiked millage appears on summer bills

A fund balance is similar to a savings account to be used by the school district in case of emergencies like the failure of a furnace. Auditors recommend the balance remain between 5-10 percent of the school district budget.

Byers warned the board not to make line-item recommendations to the administration for allocating the additional revenue.

"If we're going to do that, let's talk about lacrosse, let's talk about girls golf, let's talk about strings," Byers said, naming programs which have been proposed for implementation in the past year.

Schram insisted the additional money did not come with mandates for use.

"All we're saying is set a millage levy with no strings attached," he said.

Byers also suggested setting a lower levy now and raising the levy by the December tax bill if additional money is needed.

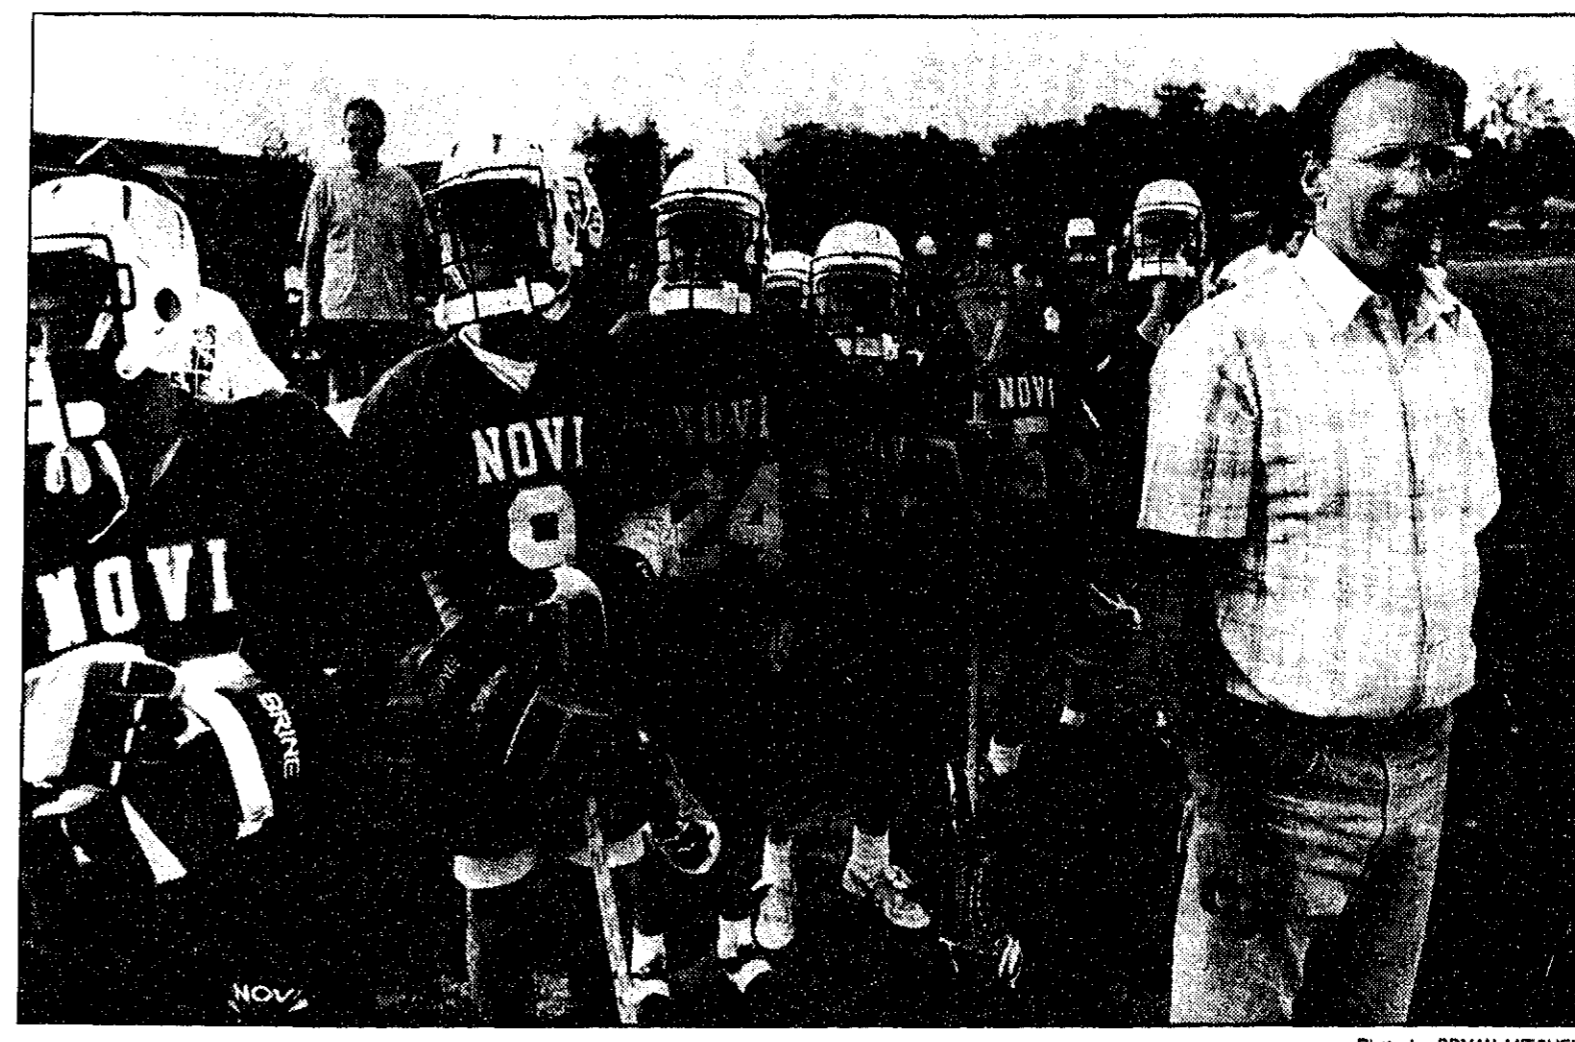

The board decided to go with the full amount now.

The board also approved a proposed budget. Byers voted against the plan.

Barr said the budget shows only the additional $64,000 revenue as a surplus. But administration will bring a revised budget to the board in July or August, with recommendations for use of the money. The money temporarily is shown in the fund balance.

"It's only going to be parked (in the fund balance) for a short time. I don't want it there at the end of the year. Nobody does," Schram said.

The $26.5 million budget will be reviewed by incoming Superintendent Emmett Lippe upon arrival July 1. Lippe may have suggestions for new programs or the deletion of other line items, board members suggested.

Lacrosse approved without funding

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

Parents and students who have been lobbying the school district in support of the addition of lacrosse won their fight.

The school board voted 6-1 to implement lacrosse at the middle and high school level at a Thursday meeting. Funding for the program will be discussed at a future meeting.

Board Vice President Robert Schram suggested the program be discussed as a courtesy to the parents and students who had been petitioning the board for the sport's implementation since early spring.

"I started out being adamantly opposed to this, but I've been pollicked on this subject more than any other in 14 years," Schram said.

Schram said he is not convinced he would allocate even a dollar of district money for lacrosse, but the board postponed discussion of funding for the program.

Two motions failed before the board finally agreed to implement lacrosse at the middle and high school levels.

Trustee Michael Meyer proposed to begin lacrosse at the high school with $4,000 in funding. The plan died for lack of support.

Other board members disagreed, arguing that involvement in sports can be a learning experience.

"I sometimes think my kids learned more through the Novi High School athletic program than they did through academics," Schram said.

Trustee Sandra Thornton proposed to begin a pay-to-play lacrosse program at the middle and high school levels. Her motion also died for lack of support.

Athletic Director John Furdutkan said the school district has never charged any athletes for participating in a sport, regardless of whether the sport is considered sanctioned or not sanctioned. Lacrosse is not currently a Michigan High School Athletic Association sanctioned sport.

"I would recommend if you're going to have it, pay for it," said Superintendent William Barr.

Trustee Raymond Byers was the sole dissenter in approving lacrosse.

"I find it incredulous that you all are ready to jump on board with lacrosse," Byers said. "There is nothing wrong with lacrosse, but we've abdicated everything else academic."

Novi woman continues battle with Northville

By STEVE KELLMAN

Novi homeowner, who has waged a year-long battle with the City of Northville and Singh Development over flooding on her Galway Drive property that she blames on Singh's Pheasant Hills subdivision to the south, has now taken a new tack.

After numerous discussions with city and Singh officials and several fruitless appearances before the Northville council, Novi resident Laura Lorenzo is now seeking an administrative review of the development and building permits issued for Pheasant Hills. She contends that the subdivision does not comply with the Northville's own zoning ordinance, specifically Article 19 on flood hazard zones.

"It is my belief that they did not consider Article 19 one iota when reviewing this development," Lorenzo said. "It seems that everyone just overlooked Article 19."

One of the stated objectives of Article 19 is to "preserve the ability of floodplains to carry and discharge a base flood."

A base flood is defined as one "having a 1-percent chance of being equaled or exceeded in any given year."

Lorenzo has already appealed to the Northville council for flood relief several times, and she enlisted the aid of offices ranging from the Oakland County Drain Commissioner to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to gather evidence that the construction of Pheasant Hills may have increased flooding in her backyard. She contends that culverts installed in Pheasant Hills restrict the southward flow of water and cause it to back up onto her property along the Northville/Novi border.

The council, after months of investigating Lorenzo's claims and playing the mediator between Lorenzo and Singh officials, called it quits in April. Northville's engineering firm, McNeely & Lincoln, had rung up more than $8,200 in bills for a series of surveys, hydraulic and hydrological models, correspondence and a 127-page report on the dispute. The report found that the developer and city had adhered to "responsible engineering practice" in the construction and approval of the drainage system at Pheasant Hills.

A report by City Attorney James Kohl came to a similar conclusion. Lorenzo first attributed the increased flooding on her property to landscaping installed by several Carving hearts on trees seems harmless enough. But the fact is, it cut short the life of this majestic oak.

By gouging into the bark, vandals crippled the tree's vascular system. So, like thousands of other innocent victims each year, the tree slowly died.

But the fight against vandalism is gathering strength from the example of Lynn Brauer and Carol Eschler.

When vandals girdled a 300-year-old Chinquapin Oak near their Marthasville, Missouri home, they wrapped the wound in splintum moss and tended the tree daily, despite blizzard conditions.

If not for the severe winter, arborists feel the Chinquapin might have survived.

We believe miracles can take root. When people care enough.

Guests accused of stealing guns

A Novi man reported June 9 that he suspected some house guests of stealing three guns from a closet in his home on LeLend.

The man told police that his cousin and a friend stayed at his home for a week. Both live in the Grayling area. After they left, he reportedly discovered a rifle and shotgun missing from a closet in the guest bedroom where they had slept.

The missing guns were described as a 16-gauge shotgun, a .22-caliber rifle and a .38-caliber pistol.

Police News

SUSPICIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES: A resident in the Old Orchard condominium complex reported June 8 that someone seemed to have been looking in his living room window.

He told police that he found footprints in the flower bed in front of the window. Police said the footprints appeared to travel back and forth in front of the window and did not cross in front of either of the neighboring homes.

DRUNK DRIVING: Novi Police arrested a 39-year-old Novi man for operating under the influence of liquor (OUIL) along Taft near White Pines. The man, who was driving a 1991 Ford Ranger, was also discovered to have a suspended license.

BREAKING AND ENTERING: A resident on Cortez reported June 8 that someone broke into his home and stole a small amount of cash and a collection of baseball cards.

Police said the suspect apparently broke a plastic lock on a window to enter the home.

Tip leads Seifert searchers to Novi abandoned houses

A dozen volunteers searched fields and abandoned homes along Twelve Mile Road in Novi Friday afternoon, looking for clues to the whereabouts of Deanna Seifert, the 10-year-old Warren girl kidnapped May 10 from a slumber party.

But the search turned up nothing, according to Novi police.

Although Warren police would not specify the nature of the tip, the volunteers scoured the fields and vacant buildings in the vicinity of Twelve Mile and Beck roads, Twelve Mile and Taft roads, and Twelve Mile and Meadowbrook roads.

ren police and Novi police. A spokesperson for Novi police said one officer was on hand to help in the search. Warren police confirmed they had a detective involved in the effort.

The search is the latest in a string of developments in the Seifert case. California police last week arrested Michael Willis near San Bernardino, California on federal fugitive warrants and in connection with a burglary, but plan to question him about the Warren disappearance. Willis' half brother, Andrew Trombley, is being held in Macomb County jail awaiting trial on charges he abducted the girl. Willis' companion, Kimberly Allison, was also taken into custody in California and will be questioned in connection with the

Novi Briefs

Electricity needs: The Michigan Public Service Commission is conducting a 60-day public comment period on the Detroit Edison Co.'s long-range plan for meeting its customer's electricity needs over the next 15 years. The plan represents the first in a series of biennial updates to Detroit Edison's Integrated Resource Plan, which was originally completed in January 1990.

PROWLERS?: A Novi Township resident on May 22 reported a suspicious vehicle at a neighbor's home. The neighbor, whose house is for sale, was on vacation. A car reportedly pulled in the driveway and after five minutes pulled into the garage. State police reports show that no such car could be found in the garage, but troopers did witness a car leaving the scene upon their arrival. No sign of forced entry was found.

DRUNK DRIVER: A caller from a cellular phone reported two men on June 5 were drinking while driving on I-96. Following the tip, troopers from the Northville post for the Michigan State Police stopped and arrested two men driving a 1984 Chevrolet truck. An open bottle of champagne was found in the truck. Both men were released and the champagne was dumped out.

YOUTH ARRESTED: State police arrested a 19-year-old Warren man on June 5 after the man and other minors in his car were discovered with beer in their possession. Their car was parked in a rest stop on I-96 at 9:15 p.m. The minors had beer sitting on the car roof and in the car, and a case of beer in a cooler.

MAN ARRESTED: A Detroit man was arrested after police investigated a

Sexism rears its ugly head

Right now I'm thinking about sexism.

Maybe it's because I just finished re-reading the column Susie Hollyer wrote earlier this year about Gloria Steinem's visit to Novi. Or maybe it's because it's my strong suspicion that we were subconsciously guilty of it in our photographic coverage of various high school graduations in our papers last week.

What happened is that we were all in the Cong Shop last Wednesday, making last-minute changes to pages before sending them off to be pressed.

And several of our papers had two-page spreads filled with pictures of graduation ceremonies. It was while I was checking out the graduation pictures in The South Lyon Herald that I noticed it.

"Hey, Dawn," I yelled across the room to Herald Editor Dawn Needham. "Did South Lyon have any male graduates? Or were all the graduates pretty girls?"

"I've already noticed that," she snarled, "and I intend to deal with it."

Understand that Dawn is our only female editor at the present time. But she more than holds her own and, in fact, is extremely adept at squelching even remotely sexist comments which creep into the conversation.

Schmid gets credit for area code split option

Those of us who have not been happy with Michigan Bell's proposed area code split have faced a bit of frustration. Being non-technical folks mostly, it has been difficult to understand the problems that led Bell and its appointed citizen's committee to propose splitting Novi in two, much less to come up with an alternative that might address city residents' concerns and still be workable for Bell.

But County Commissioner Kaye Schmid, R-Nowi, has some special skills. Among them is her understanding of the demographics of the local area. The same local map and population knowledge that helps a politician run a good election campaign helped Schmid to devise an alternative split for the area codes in the Novi and Northville area.

Joe Joachim, head of Oakland County economic development and a member of the Bell citizen's committee, announced last week that Schmid's plan to keep Novi whole in the new area code by moving the Northville exchanges of 344, 347, 348, 349 and 380 out of the old 313 area code and into the new was one of several alternatives now being considered.

The solution would address our major concerns with the area code split. They have been that the area code boundary would actually divide in half old Novi subdivisions like Village Oaks, forcing neighbors to dial area codes to call neighbors, and that it would separate those subdivisions and the Walled Lake area in northern Novi from the rest of the city by moving them into the new code.

Schmid argues that Novi's population is higher than that of Northville and Northville Township, so it makes little sense to be splitting the City of Novi. At the same time, she notes under the original plan, Novi would have been included in the old 313 code with Wayne County. Her plan would combine Novi in the new code with the rest of Oakland County. And she contends that in actuality, more than half of the population of the City of Northville lives in the Oakland County portion, so it only makes sense for it to be included with Oakland County, too.

The verdict is still out on the so-called "Schmid Plan," but it is very positive indeed to see that Bell is being flexible with its plan. And it is good to see that there are viable alternatives that do not include cutting the City of Novi into pieces.

Kudos to Novi's eldest high school graduates

A grand total of 262 Novi High School graduates walked across the stage June 7 to receive their degrees. Each one deserves congratulations. An additional 12 students received much less fanfare when they were recognized in commencement ceremonies last Thursday. But their accomplishments were at least as notable as those of the graduates whose pictures were splashed throughout the June 11 edition of the Novi News.

What can we say about the 93 and 84-year-old women who graduated? Wow! Congratulations! Nothing seems adequate to express the praise they deserve as a result of their hard work. Anyone who ever thinks they are too old to try something new need only look as far as Rose Krykun and Edith Woodard.

Matthew McWhorter, 6 months, takes a nap on his mother's back during an ice cream social at Amersham school.

Someone, who only identifies him/herself as "a Northville fan" caught me in a lie. Or so he/she thinks.

If you'll remember, a couple of weeks ago, I wrote a column listing the things that I'd learned in my first year of living in Novi. Then again, if you read The Northville Record, then you'd have found out what I learned in my first year of living in Northville.

How is this possible, this loyal reader obviously wondered. How could I live in two cities at once? Attached, along with copies of both columns, was a note which said, "Yeah, right! You've lost some credibility."

Well, to be honest I didn't know I had any credibility to lose. Then again, I understood the confusion. The Novi version highlighted some facts of Novi life, while the Northville one hit the Northville aspects.

I'm here to say that both versions are completely accurate, and hereby formally request the return of my credibility (even if I don't know what it looks like).

The rub here is that I live in that never-never land of blurred loyalties and questionable heritage which we at the paper affectionately call No-Ville. It's a non-descript strip of suburban real estate roughly straddling Eight Mile Road whereupon school districts, post offices and telephone exchanges have created borders which don't necessarily coincide with the municipal boundaries.

My home is in the Woodland Glen Apartments on Eight Mile just east of Griswold. Geographically speaking, that's Novi. My landlord pays taxes there. I vote in Oakland County and City of Novi elections, and if I had kids they would attend Novi schools.

On the other hand, if you want to send me a letter, you address it Northville. When you place a long-distance

Sexism rears its ugly head

Right now I'm thinking about sexism.

Maybe it's because I just finished re-reading the column Susie Hollyer wrote earlier this year about Gloria Steinem's visit to Novi. Or maybe it's because it's my strong suspicion that we were subconsciously guilty of it in our photographic coverage of various high school graduations in our papers last week.

What happened is that we were all in the Cong Shop last Wednesday, making last-minute changes to pages before sending them off to be pressed.

And several of our papers had two-page spreads filled with pictures of graduation ceremonies. It was while I was checking out the graduation pictures in The South Lyon Herald that I noticed it.

"Hey, Dawn," I yelled across the room to Herald Editor Dawn Needham. "Did South Lyon have any male graduates? Or were all the graduates pretty girls?"

"I've already noticed that," she snarled, "and I intend to deal with it."

Understand that Dawn is our only female editor at the present time. But she more than holds her own and, in fact, is extremely adept at squelching even remotely sexist comments which creep into the conversation.

At any rate, a quick scan of the pages of graduation pictures in our other papers seemed to confirm the trend Dawn and I had observed in The Herald — far more pictures of female graduates than male graduates.

I may be a little quick in jumping to the conclusion that we were guilty of sexism. On the one hand, all of our photographs are relatively young males. But, on the other hand, the gully party, if there is one, may be the person who selected which pictures to use.

And it's at least possible that the preponderance of pictures of pretty female graduates may have been totally coincidental.

Whatever, the charge of sexism was leveled against me once by an anonymous young male caller back in the days when I was talking pictures of the band for The Novi News.

I denied the charge vehemently. I told him that I was always quite conscious of getting pictures of males as well as females when an assignment.

"What I usually look for is someone who has an interesting face or is wearing a funny cap," I told him.

"Well, how come you always seem to end up taking pictures of... (and then he mentioned the name of one particular female student)?"

The young man had me. Had me cold. He was right — whenever I took band pictures I invariably managed to take a picture of the girl whose name he had mentioned.

stammered. "My only defense is that she has got to be one of the prettiest girls I've ever seen in my life."

I suspected my anonymous caller would setze upon my admission as an opportunity to berate me further. But his response caught me by surprise.

Instead of blasting me, he agreed with me. "She really is beautiful," he said. "Did you know she only lives two blocks from me?"

Is there a moral to all this? It may be that sexism is pretty deeply ingrained in our society, and even people who strive to do the right thing often fall short.

At any rate, I think it's safe to say that you'll see some more male graduates in our pictures when commencement exercises roll around next year.

No. 1 fan given honorary degree

A man described as Novi High School's No. 1 fan was presented his high school diploma Thursday.

Thomas Marcus Sr. never graduated from high school. But at a Thursday school board meeting, the father of two was granted his diploma.

High school principal Robert Youngberg called Marcus the school's No. 1 fan. Marcus "didn't quite make it" through his high school career, Youngberg said.

But a combination of previous high school credits along with proven life skills attainment in communication, mathematics, science and social studies, allowed Marcus to qualify for a degree from Novi, Youngberg said.

"I've been trying to evaluate his performance as an adult," Youngberg said.

Superintendent William Barr agreed with Youngberg's recommendation and asked the school board to approve Marcus' graduation with the other 262 Novi High School seniors.

Marcus received a standing ovation from the school board. Joining in were audience members, including Marcus' son, Tom; daughter, Mary; daughter-in-law, Karen; wife, Thelma; and mother, Mary.

Don't listen to critics who pan aluminum pots

Materials used for cookware play a very important role in success or failure of a product.

More than half of all cookware sold is made of aluminum. Researchers are still investigating any possible connection between aluminum and Alzheimer's disease. Nothing concrete has been discovered and until hard evidence is discovered, do not throw away your aluminum pots and pans. Researchers feel that since aluminum is ubiquitous, it would be difficult to stay away from it anyhow as it's in the air, water and soil and ultimately in plants and animals that we eat. Also, many over-the-counter drugs such as antacids and aspirin contain antacid aluminum.

Aluminum is a superior heat conductor; it heats evenly and quickly. All aluminum manufacturers suggest that storing highly acidic or salty foods such as tomato sauce, rhubarb or sauerkraut in their pots may cause more aluminum to enter the food. Of course, any undissolved salt or acid will cause "pitting" on the pot's surface.

Anodized aluminum has been treated to harden the metal, making it more scratch resistant. Food will barely stick on this hard smooth surface, making it easy to clean. This process makes these pots and pans good choices for cooking rhubarb and sauces with tomato, wine, or lemon juice as they do not leach into acidic foods. If necessary, scrub with coarse salt or mildly abrasive cleanser, rinse immediately. If darkened from oxidation, fill with water and vinegar or lemon juice and boil 15 minutes.

Nonstick coatings were around prior to anodized aluminum. The advantages of these are the quick, easy cleaning, and the ability to cook without additional fat. Disadvantages are that they may be scratched by sharp or rough edged kitchen utensils. Abrasive scouring pads or cleansers should not be used to clean them. It is safe to use scratched non-stick skillets.

Stainless still accounts for about 43 percent of cookware sold today because of its durability. The finish is attractive, it won't corrode or tarnish permanently. It's hard, tough and non-porous. Since stainless does not conduct heat evenly, most is made with copper or aluminum bottoms. It is not recommended to store acidic or salty foods in stainless steel for long periods, not for health reasons but undissolved salt will pit the steel surfaces. Wash in hot soapy water, and scrub with a nylon pad. Clean stubborn stains with a stainless steel cleanser.

Copper is an excellent conductor of heat and especially good for top-of-the-range cooking. Many cooks prefer copper cookware for delicate sauces and foods that must be cooked at controlled temperatures.

Cast iron is the all-time classic in cookware. You'll need to handle cast iron different than other cookware. To prevent rust damage, the inside of cast iron should be coated frequently with unsalted cooking oil. To season, rub inside of pan with vegetable oil, set over medium heat until oil begins to smoke (about 15 minutes). Cool completely and wipe off excess oil with paper towels. Try not to wash cast iron in strong detergents or scour. Wipe immediately after rinsing.

Choose cookware for your kitchen that fits your cooking/baking style and do not worry about pot and pan safety.

An elegant Japanese business lunch at the Hotel Baronette includes sushi, beef, soup, vegetables and fruit.

TURNING JAPANESE

Business lunch arrives in 'Little Tokyo'

By RICK BYRNE
Copy Editor

If there's one Japanese import that doesn't give the domestic corporations fits, it's lunch. Far from the burger and fries or soup and a salad that Americans lean toward, a Japanese lunch is built around rice or noodles. Quite often it includes sushi, the raw fish unique to the land of the rising sun.

While sushi might evoke a few squeamish reactions from we Westerners, its inflates swear by it. Slightly more attractive to the Western palate are the noodle dishes: udon, a thick round noodle, and ramen, the thin strands of egg dough now finding its way into the American mainstream as an instant microwaveable lunch.

In Japan's business community, lunch is an important part of the day. The Japanese tend to take shorter lunches than their American counterparts, though, and give a new meaning to the concept of fast food.

"They get a bowl of noodles and will slurp it down in 20 seconds, tops," says Steve Myers, a Novi businessman who spent 10 years working in Japan. "They inhale them and get back to work. The real trick is to do it so that when the end of the noodle goes in your mouth, it doesn't spray everyone around you."

Further, he says, it's become the norm in Japan to eat lunch in the office. Large corporations will have standing orders with local eateries, which deliver box lunches by moped to various offices.

If, as Crain's Detroit Business attests, Novi is becoming Little Tokyo, local luncheon lovers would be smart to latch onto the new concept. Indeed, restaurants in the Japanese tradition are already springing up in the area.

In Novi, both sushi and yakitori (grilled meats) are available at Teriyaki To Go on Novi Road, and the soon-to-open Cherry Blossom in the West Oaks shopping plaza. Myers points out, however, that finding both yakitori and sushi under one roof is a rarity in Japan. There are sushi bars and yakitori stands where businesspeople will line up to fork over their yen, explains Cherry Blossom owner Shigeru Yamada.

"In Japan, if you wanted sushi, you would go to a sushi specialist so you can get more items," says Yamada, a Northville resident.

Yamada, former owner of Akasaka restaurant in Livonia, found great success offering both sushi and yakitori at his former location, and drew many customers from the Nissan Technical Center in Farmington Hills. Native Japanese transplanted to work here appreciate lunches that were as speedy as the ones in their native land.

"They can do a lot of relaxation during their hour break," he says. "And they can go out to the driving range in the summer."

Farm rearing keeps fresh salmon in the pink

The question has come up several times as to the origin of the salmon that we use in the restaurant.

I overheard a member of the wait staff answer "Norwegian" and cringed. There is very little salmon that comes from Norway any longer. The price has become prohibitive.

The evolution can be likened to imported cars. They cost a lot of money.

So, where does salmon come from? As I've mentioned in the past we buy most of our fish from Foley's in Boston. So, the other day I called Mike, our contact at Foley's and asked him, "Farm raised Atlantic salmon" was his answer.

This isn't just any salmon; Foley's has "gone to school" to locate the very highest quality, firmest textured, freshest salmon produced anywhere.

Four major factors differentiate one farm raised salmon from another: gene pools, farming practices, harvesting and slaughtering techniques and the packing and travel time of the finished product.

The fish begin their life in a hatchery in a pure fresh water lake. They are reared for about 16 months and then transferred to a grow-out facility. This site is segregated in a body of water away from other salmon farms to prevent disease.

Norwegian personnel with extensive experience running farms in Norway manage the farm. The smolt spend the next 15 months growing to a size of 8 pounds. They are fed a combination wet and dry feed that utilizes herring for its omega-3 content. This feed yields an extraordinarily rich flavored salmon.

Two weeks prior to harvest the fish are taken off of feed. The "starving" process allows the fish to rid itself of all waste. The result is a firm flesh texture and enhanced shelf life.

When harvested, the fish are pulled from the water in small amounts. This assure that the fish will be free of bruises and that the flesh will remain firm. The fish are stunned in a carbon dioxide holding tank which renders them dazed, but still alive.

The next phase is bleeding. After bleeding, they are floated in an iced seawater solution to maintain a low body temperature. Again this will preserve flesh quality and appearance.

The cold salmon are then transported to a state-of-the-art processing facility where they are gutted, washed, chilled, weighed, inspected, graded and packed on an all-stainless-steel processing line designed, guess where? Norway.

The ride to the Foley's plant is a mere six hours away. Minimal further processing is done. All the salmon are individually inspected and packaged for shipment all over the United States.

Salmon is one of the best sellers on our menu. We have to be sure that the highest standards are adhered to. I can honestly say that the number of complaints are nil.

When I've had to fill in with salmon from other purveyors, it just isn't the same. My waitstaff now knows that we use farm raised Atlantic salmon, not Norwegian. I'm glad you asked.

Northville resident Mary Brady is a certified executive chef and co-owner of Diamond Jim Brady's restaurant in Novi.

The Refrigerator Door

STRAWBERRIES ABOUND: The Meyer Berry Farm on Eight Mile Road west of Beck opened for the season last week. The farm is open for you-pick berries from 4-7 p.m. daily. The season comes a little later than usual this year.

And if the Meyers can't get you up with enough berries (is that even possible?), then check out the 16th annual National Strawberry Festival in beautiful Belleville, June 19, 20 and 21. The event has grown from a festival at St. Anthony Church to a city-wide event featuring food, rides, games, arts and crafts, and live bands. The Elias Brothers Big Boy strawberry pie has been selected as the official pie of the festival.

Each pie is filled with over 26 ounces of fresh, ripe strawberries covered three inches high in a nine-inch flaky, but firm, pie crust, and pierced with Big Boy's own strawberry glazing.

There will be five main festival sites. To get there, take I-275 south to I-94 west, exit at Haggerty Road, and turn left onto Huron River Drive. This will take you to the main festival parking lot. Plenty of free parking will be available throughout Belleville, 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. on festival days, with free shuttle bus service between sites. Nearly 125,000 people are expected to attend the festival, and consume five tons (10,000 pounds) of fresh strawberries. For information, call the Chamber of Commerce Festival Hotline, 697-3137.

RECIPES WANTED: A new feature is appearing in the Creative Dining section of this paper. Known as HomeTown Cooking, it will feature recipes contributed by readers. With that in mind, we'd like to take this time to ask that anyone with a recipe that they'd like to share with all their neighbors in the Northville/Novi area please send it, along with your name, address, and phone number, to HomeTown Cooking, 104 W. Main St., Northville, MI 48167.

Any recipe will do. Perhaps you have a dinner-time favorite, or a recipe for bread that's been passed down through your family for generations, or maybe just a good, fast work-night cost-cutter. Send it in, and we'll feature it on these pages.

MICHIGAN CULINARY TEAM PRACTICE: Before the Michigan Culinary Team enters the World Culinary Art Salon in Frankfurt, Germany, next October, it will have to hold some practice sessions. As such, chefs on the team will host practices, and display and discuss them with guests. The practices are open to the public at a cost of $30 per person, or $25 per person when purchasing four or more tickets. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served. The proceeds will be used to raise funds to send the team to Frankfurt.

Sessions will be from 6:30-8:30 p.m. on the following schedule:
 ● Monday, July 20, Renaissance Club, 259-4700.
 ● Tuesday, Nov. 10, Victory Celebration, Detroit Athletic Club, 963-9200.

To purchase tickets, call the numbers listed above at least seven days in advance.

AMERICAN HARVEST CLOSED: Schoolcraft College's American Harvest Restaurant closed for the summer on April 30. The on-campus restaurant, which features gourmet specialties prepared by Schoolcraft's Master Chefs and Culinary Arts students, will reopen when classes resume in the fall.

"The Refrigerator Door" is a list of coming events and short notes about food and drink. If you have an event planned or a brief announcement you would like included here, send it care of this newspaper, 104 W. Main Street, Northville, Mich., 48167. Photos or other artwork welcome.

Architecture builds food following

Architecture to a restaurant can be compared with spices to food. It definitely adds to the flavor, but exactly how much is open to individual interpretation.

"A restaurant is like a three-legged stool," said Tom Wilsam, owner of a Sizzler franchise that recently opened in Westland. "You have food, atmosphere and service. All three are equally important."

What role does architecture play in that triumvirate?
 "It's difficult to say," said Gary Wright, design project manager for General Mills Restaurant Inc.

"If you consider Walt Disney World and the different restaurant designs there, can you say whether architecture brought people in — the atmosphere created — or were they hungry, a captive audience and they had to eat?"

"You don't know if it's the food, atmosphere, service to people or location," Wright added. "I think it is architecture that plays a substantial part. For any nationwide restaurant, initial perception is recognition of the building."

Architecture may not be important at the high-end of haute cuisine or the low-end, mums-and-pops where people go strictly for food, said Ron Rea, a designer and partner with Petermansera in Birmingham.

But it does become a factor in the highly competitive middle ground. "Clay tiles can give a Mediterranean appearance, vertical parapets and glazed tiles convey a more modern look and different kinds of bricks and awning treatments present other images," Wright said.

"Visuals of the exterior and interior will excite them. They will go in for the way it (building) looks. Then it's up to the operator to make sure they're served well, the food is good."

"I never tell my clients design will make their business. It will assist them have better business," Rea said.

General Mills owns and operates Olive Garden and Red Lobster restaurants. An Olive Garden recently opened in Novi. Another is under construction in Canton.

"Our buildings have a certain number of square feet, the number of seats is constant and so is the kitchen," Wright said. "The exteriors customized according to the community go in."

"We can take a base footprint and change the appearance of the footprint and the skin to make it look like many different types of buildings."

Clay tiles can give a Mediterranean appearance, vertical parapets and glazed tiles convey a more modern look and different kinds of bricks and awning treatments present other images, Wright said.

Many municipalities require certain kinds of appearances as far as brick work, roofing colors and lighting fixtures for conformity within a business district.

Structural changes will shift according to local building codes and unusual local conditions. Earthquakes are a concern in southern California. Snow piles up on roofs in the Midwest.

Wilsam's Sizzler has a high ceiling, pastel colors and extensive use of glass.

"Most restaurant buildings here, in my opinion, are kind of dreary," he said. "They're made of brick. They're dark. The big thing about (Sizzler) is an openness feeling. Glass in front is designed to make people feel good, just like background music."

"Philosophically, I think people eat out to have needs served. It's an escape. When I go out, I want to relax. It's just not to feed my stomach. I can go home and cook my favorite foods," he said.

Wilsam said he requested the company's newest prototype when selecting a design for his Westland restaurant.

"Architecture is an important function," Wright said. "It gives people the first impression they see and know of the restaurant. As they go through the door, different elements start to plug in. The interior. They start interacting with personnel, the hostess, waiters. The quality of food."

"You start with the building on an overall impression of restaurants. The first impression is the most lasting, or at least sets the tone."

Local chili cook earns trip to national final

Pass the Alka-Seltzer because Northville is boasting a new chili cookoff winner.

Jim Sgriccia competed last weekend in the Windsor Chili Cookoff in Canada, and took first place honors with his Day Later Chili. The event was the Ontario regional cookoff which qualifies the winner for a place in the World Chili Cookoff in Scottsdale, Ariz. on Nov. 8.

"There were 32 cooks from six states plus Canada," said Sgriccia. "It was quite a variety." And if you think that's a lot of competition, the field at the World Cookoff will be tougher than overcooked beef. The finale gathers 80 cooks representing all the regions sanctioned by the World Chili Society for three days, with the final cookoff on Sunday. The winner gets $25,000.

Sgriccia is a veteran of chili cookoffs, having first competed in 1984. Since then, he's changed and improved his recipe a number of times, and has several trophies to show for it.

"Every now and then it happens," he said. "This is my third first-place finish, but it's my first major win."

He said storing foods properly is the key to avoiding a food-borne illness like salmonella. "Prevention is the watchword in food safety," said Schutte. "By following proper food storage, sanitation and thorough cooking rules, you can keep food safe anytime you pack it to go."

PREPARING FOOD FOR THE PICNIC
 Keep everything that touches food clean. Stop and wash your hands before preparing food. And wash utensils, bowls and countertops between work on each dish.
 Use a fork — rather than your hands — to mix meat, macaroni, egg, tuna or green salads. Using your hands can be a problem because bacteria dig in around the fingernails and the creased skin of the hands.
 If cooking food ahead of time, cook it thoroughly so bacteria doesn't grow.
 Make sure all your ingredients are the freshest you can buy.

PACKING FOR THE PICNIC
 Plastic foam coolers are ideal for picnics. For hot food, wrap the dish in several layers of newspaper before placing in a separate cooler. For cold dishes, place the cooler with ice or blue gel cold packs.
 Freeze iced tea and lemonade in plastic containers and freeze small boxes of juice. They will thaw on your way to the picnic site and you won't need ice. Keep in mind that before freezing liquid, make sure there's space to allow for expansion.
 Try not to use the trunk of your car to store the food because it is the hottest place in the car.

PREPARING FOOD FOR THE PICNIC
 Keep food in coolers until ready to serve. Whenever possible, keep the cooler and other foods inside or in the shade. The heat from the sun speeds up the growth of bacteria.
 If using a public grill, make sure the fire is very hot to kill bacteria on the grill, or cover it with aluminum foil and make holes in the top of the foil to allow grease to drop through.
 Cook meats, especially ground meats, thoroughly.
 It's best not to set out most foods until you are ready to eat, but if you must, consider covering the food with a net tent made especially for this purpose. Flies are much more than pests. They can create serious problems because they are agents for 50 human diseases and often carry the eggs that cause pinworm, roundworm, whipworm, hookworm, and tapeworm. Nearly every part of a fly carries disease-producing organisms.

AFTER THE PICNIC
 Food should sit out for no more than two hours. After that, the food should be packed away in a cooler and placed in a shady spot.
 Use paper plates, napkins and cups should be placed in a garbage tin. They still have organisms on them and can attract flies and animals.
 Any used dishes or plates should be stored separately from food, and should be washed in very hot, soapy water upon arrival home. Never wash in streams, rivers and lakes.
 Upon arrival home, examine the leftover food immediately and if at a safe temperature, place it in the refrigerator. Use it up within a day. If the food needs to be reheated or cooked, make sure you cook it thoroughly.

Japanese business lunch is culinary adventure

Head chef Seiji Ueno has prepared a lengthy menu for the opening of the new restaurant. As in Japan, some vegetables and fish will be offered on a seasonal basis. He's hoping to attract adventuresome Western visitors willing to try food in the true Japanese style.

"It's now popular to try different food," he says. "If they're a beginner at sushi, we can assist them in what to eat. Many people are still hesitant to try, but once they try, they see the texture and the taste. It's an adventure of eating."

A lunchtime visit to Akasaka reveals a lengthy menu featuring sashimi (artistically sliced fish), tempura (deep fried vegetables or fish), gyoza (garlic pan-fried pork dumplings), noodles, yakitori and 21 different kinds of sushi.

It should be made clear that sushi is never slimy or fishy smelling. Indeed no raw fish should ever be slimy or smelly, which would be an indication that it wasn't fresh. Indeed the sushi is crisp and somewhat dry, if very cold.

A thin, virgin white strip of squid atop cooked rice was tender, not chewy. It's flavor was that of a fine filet of sole. Sweet raw shrimp lived up to its name with a pleasant sweet taste, and again that same crisp, fresh texture.

Sea urchin roe was hardly as exotic as it sounds. Made from the tenderest flesh of the spiny-shelled invertebrate, the roe had the color and texture of fresh-ground peanut butter, but tasted like the liqueur cointreau. Knives and forks would be useless for eating the fragile sushi, though it comes in portions that seem too big for Westerners. Myers says it's perfectly appropriate to pick up the whole portion with chopsticks — perhaps seasoning it with a little soy sauce, wasabi (a ground horseradish mustard), or dried bonito — stuff the whole thing in your mouth, and start biting.

Noodle dishes at Akasaka come in huge bowls, and are reminiscent of Western soups and stews. Meat, however, appears only sparsely in Japanese food, due to its high cost.

Myers explains the differing use of meat in this fashion: in the West, a typical meal will feature meat as the main course, and starches and vegetables are viewed as side dishes. In Japan, rice is the main course, with the meat and the vegetables served in separate bowls as side dishes.

"And they eat pretty much the same things at each meal," he says. "It's not breakfast, lunch and dinner as we think of it. It's just a stream of snacks all day long."

"The portions are different with each meal. Two strips of yakitori will be an appetizer. Two more will be a meal. Ten would be a feast."

Salaried professionals and middle managers eat differently than higher level Japanese managers, according to Myers.

"It's very hierarchical, and there's little mingling among the different levels," he says. "When I worked for Amway in Japan, it took a while for my staff to get comfortable with me coming to their place to eat."

High level managers, he says, will go to quiet, formal restaurants, and unlike their lower level counterparts, may discuss business over the meal.

The meal itself is a culmination of the Japanese respect for artistry in cooking. Myers says appearance and color are as important, if not more so, than flavor. Locally, an example of a Japanese power-broker's lunch can be found at the Hotel Baronette.

The Baronette is, in fact, Japanese owned, and according to general manager Tadashi Nagao, about 30 percent of his guests come from there. To make them feel at home, he presents a lavish lunch on authentic dishes, artfully prepared by chefs Simon Shimodaira and Ken Yamasaki.

"This is the city boy's business lunch, not the countryside lunch," says Nagao. "There is at least one hot item, a teriyaki fish or beef, but rice is the biggest part. Sushi is always served with it. We use flounder or tuna, and it's always fresh."

The "salad" is more of a mixture of starches like potatoes, pumpkins and tofu as well as bamboo shoots and shitake mushrooms. On the side are "pickles," a Japanese staple of pickled vegetables.

"They're very salty," Nagao says. "But our steamed rice has zero salt content, so the salty flavor is absorbed by the rice."

Businessmen at all levels also enjoy visiting different ethnic restaurants for lunch, too.

"They can get any kind of foreign food from around the world," Yamada says. "Italian, Czech, Mexican, German, even the USSR, although that doesn't seem anymore."

It's fitting then that in the true Japanese spirit of adventure in dining, Westerners should experience lunch the Japanese way.

According to Myers, it's considered bad form in Japan to consume alcohol with lunch.

"The Japanese tend to get very red-faced on just a little alcohol," he says. "That's usually reserved for get-togethers between colleagues and staff in the evening."

After work, says Yamada, the Japanese make up for lost time by carousing at the local karaoke bar, and entertain themselves with huge sing-alongs.

"At dinner time, the Japanese are big drinkers," says Yamada. "They spend a lot of time eating out. They'll have a dinner meeting, or a dinner chattering I should say, where they'll complain about work and work out complaints. Karaoke is the best way to get that out. They get to sing along and get loud."

Yamada's new venture at the Cherry Blossom will have both sushi and yakitori bars, as well as a karaoke bar. There will also be the classic tatami rooms, private screened dining rooms where diners sit on tatami mats on the floor (though the Cherry Blossom will have footwells under the table for Western legs).

Keep your picnic safe from illness

Pair apples, potatoes for special salad treat

Both made with delicious crunchy sweet-tart summer Granny Smith apples just shipped from orchards in the Southern Hemisphere, where the seasons are reversed from ours. They are the freshest apples around.
 In the summer months, these large beauties reach supermarkets in the U.S. just two to three weeks after being picked, arriving with bright green, naturally polished skins and abundant juicy white flesh. These apples stay white, too, when sliced or diced, so salads keep their fresh look longer. Although the U.S. produces Granny Smiths, any offered for sale now were harvested last fall and kept in storage.
 These high quality summer Granny Smith apples are picked only when fully mature to develop firmness and their characteristic tangy taste. Their skins are naturally lustrous, never waxed, and serve to seal in the juice. What's more, they are a good source of fiber in the form of pectin, and complex carbohydrates, providing 15 grams per 3 1/2 ounces.
 Mined Apple Potato Salad is unusually appealing on a warm day. Granny Smith apples and peas contribute cool green color, with yogurt, horseradish and mint adding flavor to the dressing.
 Granny's Apple Potato Salad is a delicious main dish salad combining

2 cups plain yogurt
 4 ounces blue cheese, crumbled
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon dill weed
 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
 2 Granny Smith apples, cored and diced
 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 6 cups cubed cooked potatoes
 3 cups cooked ham, cut in narrow strips
 In large bowl mix mayonnaise, yogurt, blue cheese, salt, dill weed and pepper. Add apples, lemon juice, potatoes and ham. Chill before serving. Yield: 6 servings.
