AROUND THE MILL POND

Y2K 'disaster'

Springfield Township Supervisor Collin Walls showcased his good sense of humor with the following memo included on the consent agenda for the township's Jan. 13 board meeting.

"All software, hardware and other systems came through with flying colors with the exception of one item. On the morning of Jan. 3, 2000, we discovered to our horror that the downstairs Received Date Stamp was not Y2K compliant. The month and date worked properly, but the stamp had not been updated with other equipment and would not go past 1999. We were forced to manually override the system until a new date stamp is received. Luckily, we had not fully computerized and were able to find pens to implement the manual override."

Suspended sneakers

A pair of tennis shoes has been dangling from a wire across Main Street at Waldon Road for months.

How to get them down? According to the Independence Fire Department, they can't mess around with a utility's wire. A secretary added it would require whoever was going to get them to stop traffic at that busy intersection.

Incidentally, she thinks they are cleats, not merely shoes.

One can only guess how they got up there in the first place, but chances are it involved a rambunctious youth playing around. It also is a good bet that it was no fun for the young athlete to explain to his or her parents why a new pair of cleats was needed.

Gas pipeline project called off

■ The Tri-State pipeline project, which would have taken a natural gas line through parts of Springfield and Independence townships, is not going forward for a variety of reasons, it was announced last week.

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER

CMS Energy announced last week it has abandoned, at least for now, plans to build a gas pipeline that would have gone through part of Springfield and Independence townships.

The Tri-State Pipeline route had received preliminary approval from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. In October, Tri-State, a subsidiary of Dearborn-based CMS, asked FERC to delay a public hearing on the pipeline until after Jan. 15.

The pipeline was to transport natural gas to commercial customers in the East via a route stretching from Joliet, Ill., to Dawn, Ontario, Canada.

Residents and local government officials were vehemently against the first route proposed about two years ago.

Springfield Township Clerk Nancy Strole gave Tri-State credit for revising the route to a much less invasive path. The original path would have cut through vital environmental areas such as the Huron Swamp and the Buckhorn Lake area. The new route went more to the south and bypassed those areas.

CMS spokesman Kelly Farr said there were several reasons the pipeline project will not go forward. Farr said the market conditions were no longer favorable. Michigan Consolidated Gas Co., a competitor of CMS, is farther along in building a similar line than CMS was.

Farr said Tri-State's progress was not going as quickly as was hoped. Also, one of the partners in the project, Westcoast Energy of Canada, withdrew from the project in fall 1999.

Strole said the township was never against a pipeline. It objected to its initial placement.

"My sense is they were dealing with a lot more issues than the location of the route and those issues played a big role in that decision."

Residents who had rallied against the pipeline project were pleasantly

African culture comes alive for pupils on stage

Children of all ages love to hear a story. Take the talents of a professional storyteller, add the sound of unusual instruments and you have a winning combination.

That's what LaRon Williams from Ann Arbor brought to Clarkston's Springfield Plains Elementary School Tuesday.

The storyteller presented two programs to the students about African culture, using his acting skills, popular West African instruments and interaction with the students.

First-grade teacher Ann Stone said the students were very attentive during the program.

The school's PTA paid for the program. Its purpose was to introduce students to West African culture.

William's visit tied in with projects done by the entire student body on the life of Martin Luther King Jr.

Optimists award upstanding youth

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

Helpfulness comes naturally for Sophie Ness.

And her thoughtfulness, maturity and good nature helped make her a natural choice for honors at the 2000 Optimist Club Youth Appreciation Breakfast. Sophie, a fifth-grader at Pine Knob Elementary School, was one of 30 children in the Clarkston Community Schools district to win an award. Secondary students were honored with a breakfast Jan. 12, and elementary students had their time to shine Jan. 19.

Exemplary students were chosen by teachers or principals. To win an award, students had to demonstrate caring for fellow students, a contribution to community or school, an optimistic attitude and a sense of commitment to tasks and values. They also must put forth their best effort in their studies.

Students showed their good qualities in many ways. Some are active in their schools and churches, and others are just plain good children who consistently put others before themselves.

This year's winners are:

■ Adam Weightman and Chelsea Larsen of Andersonville Elementary

■ Lindsey Hissom and Jonathan Knowlden of Bailey Lake Elementary

■ Constantine Boulos and Lindsay Sawyer of Clarkston Elementary

■ Jennifer Lievois and Ryan Breen of Independence Elementary

■ April Pieknik and Matt Bleau of North Sashabaw Elementary

■ Sophie Ness and Curtis Kowalk of Pine Know Elementary

■ Ryan Smith and Stephanie Sandie of Springfield Plains Elementary

■ Jenna Hart and Steve Coryell of

Meet your school board

Clarkston's educational leaders 'put kids first'

BY SUSAN B. TAUBER
STAFF WRITER
stauber@oe.homecomm.net

The seven members of the Clarkston Community Schools District Board of Education took a lot more home from their January board meeting than normal.

They received gift certificates, T-shirts, flowering plants and other items from school building representatives, the teachers' union and Superintendent Al Roberts as thank-you presents for their role as board members.

There was even a cake in their honor prior to the meeting.

All this fuss was because January is School Board Recognition Month.

Those who were fussed over are board President Karen Foyteck, Vice President Sheila Hughes, Secretary Mary Ellen McLean, Treasurer Ronald D. Sullivan and trustees Rick Crigger, Kurt Shanks and Janet Thomas.

And according to Roberts, they deserve all the attention — and more.

"The leadership displayed by this school board is something all the citizens should acknowledge," he said. "We are blessed by having school board members who really place children first at the helm. I couldn't ask for a more student-based board."

■ 'There are no Lone Rangers on this board. They demonstrate genuine teamwork, even if at first they don't all agree.'

Al Roberts
Clarkston Community Schools Superintendent

He added they do their homework before meetings, stay on top of issues, bring up issues that might otherwise slip by and attend extra meetings and gatherings as often as they can.

"There are no Lone Rangers on this board," he added. "They demonstrate genuine teamwork, even if at first they don't all agree."

Demanding role

The board has several opportunities to work together.

In addition to meeting at least once a month at a regular board meeting, which can last a few hours, they meet for study sessions on the budget and other topics. They also attend Michigan Association of School Board and Oakland Schools meetings regularly and take school board certification classes on their own.

The members also attend as many school functions as possible — all while holding down a regular job and caring for their families.

To top it off, they have to be elected every four years.

So what makes people donate hours of what could be family or relaxing time to a school district for at least four years?

"There are a lot of rewards that come from serving on the school board," Foyteck said. "It's a pleasure to give back to the community. I think my family benefited greatly from the school district."

She's in her eighth year as a school board member. She hasn't decided if she'll run for re-election in June.

Thomas is in her 25th year on the school board. She's at the meetings, giving background information on many subjects and contributing new ideas as well.

She said she has many reasons why she continues giving hours of time after her children have graduated from the school system.

It all began, as it did for Foyteck, with school involvement through parent associations and elementary school classrooms.

Her interest in the school district continued, Thomas said.

"When I first came on board, we had about the same number of students, but we had higher class sizes; we didn't have media centers — books were on moving carts in the hallways. We didn't have science rooms."

What they did have, and still have today, are parents who care and committed educators.

"Education is a total commitment from the schools, the parents and the students. Clarkston (residents) have always wanted good things for their students. They want you to be conservative with the dollars, but do the best things for their kids," Thomas said.

It's a challenge school board members are up to.

Thomas sees the role of a school board member as that of a policy maker.

"We set the policies and determine how the school district will run. We are involved with the budget but not with the day-to-day operations. That belongs to the superintendent or designate, such as the school principal," she explained.

Foyteck recommends anyone interested in becoming a school board member attend as many board meetings as possible.

"This is not something you do lightly," she said.

Clerks say state's voter file flawed

■ 'It's been such a concern to me that I'm not relying on it.'

Nancy Strole
Springfield Township Clerk

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

People turning up missing and the dead resurrected are not tragedies or miracles to Springfield Township Clerk Nancy Strole. They are ways voters could be disenfranchised, thanks, she says, to the state's Qualified Voter File system.

Strole said the centralized system the state expects local clerks to use in the Feb. 22 presidential primary is unreliable. She said she hired extra help in fall 1999 to check her own records against the state records and then did mailings to see which was correct. She found 100 people who were not on the QVF who should have been. Other people who had died and had their records in Springfield taken away were listed as alive with the state.

The QVF is an attempt to streamline the voter registration and voter record keeping process, Strole said. The concept is good, she said, but it's "horrendous in its implementation."

The township board recently approved a resolution that was forwarded to Lansing asking the state to look at the system, acknowledge its flaws, do something about them and reimburse local governments for the extra time and money they've spent on the project.

"The state is slow to recognize or admit this was not ready for prime time," Strole said.

An attempt to decrease duplication of records and make things easier for local clerks has backfired, Strole said. The state has set up a computerized system to keep voter records. It is set up so that when people do business at a Secretary of State's office, they can update their voter registration information at the same time. An update would include a marriage or change of address, which would affect a person's voting precinct.

One copy of the information would go to the state to put on the QVF and a hard copy, with a signature, would go to the local clerk. Of course, people can still change registration information at their local clerk's office.

Independence Clerk Joan McCrary has said they were not getting signed cards, which posed a big problem. Strole said she experienced the same trouble. Without a signed card, she will not count the person as registered. The signature is important for checking against any citizen petitions or absentee ballot applications, Strole said.

Independence was a pilot site for the program and experienced misplaced voters in the 1998 gubernatorial election.

Strole used her old system in 1998 but checked things with the QVF list they had on hand.

"I discovered by happenstance that a voter was canceled on the QVF list. They didn't go anywhere," she said.

Over time, she also discovered people who had died were back on the roles.

For the upcoming election, Strole isn't taking any chances.

"It's been such a concern to me that I'm not relying on it," she said.

She is telling election workers to look on her own list first and if a person doesn't come up, to check the QVF list. McCrary's staff has been busy rebuilding a back-up system because like Strole, she doesn't want to rely on the state's system.

QVF Director Tim Hanson said the state has been working bugs out of the system. He said he has had some complaints and questions.

"Case by case we look at these things," he said.

He boasted that 600,000 dupli-

Here's a primer on Feb. 22 presidential primary

The presidential election isn't until Nov. 7, but the process starts in Michigan Feb. 22 with an open presidential primary.

Citizens who want to vote in that election need to register by Monday.

The Feb. 22 election is primarily to decide which Republican presidential candidate Michiganians want to go up against the Democrat's candidate in November. On the ballot, residents will have six Republican candidates to choose from: John McCain, Gary Bauer, George W. Bush, Steve Forbes, Orrin Hatch and Alan Keyes.

Although the ballot will include candidates from three parties, including the Democratic Party, the Michigan Democratic Party is hosting a caucus on March 11 for people to choose between candidates Al Gore and Bill Bradley.

"We are encouraging Democrats not to vote in the presidential portion of the ballot on Feb. 22," said Dennis Denno, communications director of the Michigan Democratic Party in Lansing.

Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr. will appear under the Democrat portion of the Feb. 22 ballot, but Denno said he is not recognized as a Democrat by the party. Donald Trump also will appear on the ballot under the Reformed Party section. Pat Buchanan, who also is running as a Reformed Party candidate, choose not to participate in the Michigan primary, according to the elections office in Lansing.

Anyone can vote in the Feb. 22 primary — people do not have to claim a party affiliation.

People can register to vote at their local clerk's office, at the Oakland County Clerk's office or at any Secretary of State branch office. People receiving help from the Family Independence Agency, the Department of the Community Health, the Michigan Jobs Commission, the Commission for the Blind and some other offices may register through their specified agency.

People also should request absentee ballot applications as soon as possible to allow time for the municipality to mail the ballot back and for the voter to return the completed ballot.

To vote in the March 11 Democratic caucus, Denno said people have to fill out a card stating they are registered to vote or will be by the general election and that they are a Democrat. The location for the caucus is the UAW Local 5960 building, 180 E. Silver Bell Road, Lake Orion.

cate records have been removed so far. He added that he hasn't heard an outcry about voters lost in the system, but did not explain how it happens.

The system was meant to take some of the record-keeping responsibilities away from local clerks, thus saving them money, he said, and he encourages clerks to check the new system against their own records.

But Strole insists she and others don't have confidence in the system. The coming election will likely have a light turnout. But she worries about what will happen during the Aug. 8 primary and the Nov. 7 general election and to local governments that plan to rely solely on the QVF.

"The upshot is we are maintaining two systems, and it's a tremendous drain on our resources," Strole said.

surprised by the announcement.

"We're just thrilled that Tri-State came to realize the importance and fragility of this land and withdrew its application," resident David Moroz said. "It's reassuring to know that grassroots activism works, that David can defeat Goliath because it sure seemed like it was going to be an impossibility."

He credited Strole and fellow resident Peter Marchbank for getting the route changed.

Marchbank said the original route would have run 60 feet from his front door. Even given that, though, he said the larger issue was saving the environmentally fragile areas.

He said a lot of effort was put forth by residents, as well as CMS and FERC, to put something together that everyone could live with.

"It's unfortunate that Consumers (CMS) had not found a way to make it work," Marchbank said.

In Sophie's case, she is a class leader in helping a special-needs child in her classroom fit in. She and the student, who is autistic, met last year, Sophie said.

"We just started to bond," she said. "He's nice to me, and I feel that if he likes me as much as I like him, then I should help him."

Ness was chosen to be in an elite lunchtime group of students who meets with the school social worker weekly. The chosen students from her room talk with the social worker and a couple of students who need some extra attention, said Sophie's teacher, Nancy Battishill. Each class has such a small group. She said sometimes peers can get a point across about behavior or academics better than an adult.

Sophie's classmate is one of the students who benefit from the peer support.

Battishill said Sophie is a good example of what good parenting can accomplish. She said Sophie is always putting others first and encouraging other people. She even threw her older sister a birthday party.

"They just seem like a close family," said Battishill.

Sophie's mom, Phyllis Ness, is a first-grade teacher at Pine Knob. The family also includes dad Bud Ness, 10th-grade sister Maggie and brother Ben, who is a freshman in college.

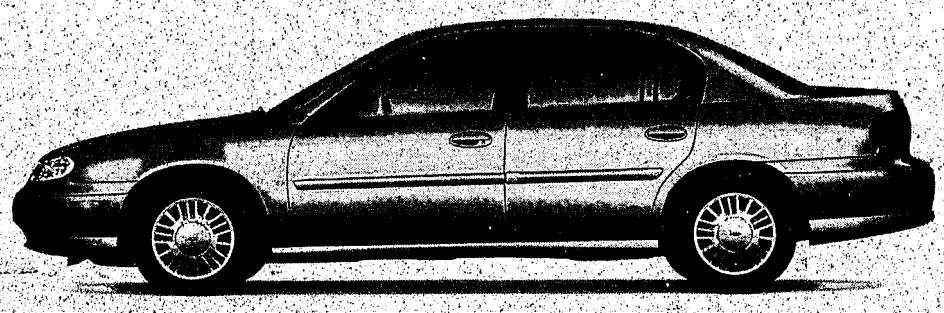

"She does things for other people," Battishill added. "She has this gentle assertiveness."

Battishill said it's normal for children in fifth grade to be helpful, but that few do it to the degree that Sophie does. She thinks it is Sophie's leadership that has encouraged the class to accept and embrace the student she helps.

"I think they've seen her model that. They like to help because Sophie does," she said.

For Sophie, all it takes is a little understanding.

"He can do the same things as other people do, but he just doesn't do it in the same way," she said.

Everything but.

OU GETS CONSTRUCTION FUNDS

■ Oakland University will receive a portion of the $203 million capital outlay budget approved by the legislature over the holidays, university officials said.

Oakland will use the money to build a new building for its School of Education and Human Services, said Rochelle Black, Oakland's director of government relations.

The new building will cost $31.5 million to construct. Black said that once a design for the new building is developed, construction can begin. Oakland University's enrollment of 14,664 is its highest ever.

LOURDES HOME DINNER BENEFIT

■ Lourdes Nursing Home in Waterford is sponsoring its sixth annual dinner/dance auction Friday, Feb. 11, to benefit the residents on the Lourdes campus.

The event — which includes dinner, dancing and a silent auction — will be held at Andiamo Italia Ristorante in Warren beginning at 7 p.m. Feb. 11.

Entertainment will be provided by Steve King and the Dittilies Band and The Ray Battani Combo. Honorary chairperson is Adam Cardinal Maida; Honorary guest is Bishop Leonard P. Blair. Honorary co-chairs of this year's event are Joanne Purtan and Ken Calvert, local media personalities.

FORBES AT LINCOLN DAY DINNER

■ Publisher and presidential hopeful Steve Forbes will be the key speaker at the annual Lincoln Day Dinner in Oakland County — shortly before Michigan's Feb. 22 presidential primary.

Forbes may not be the favorite as the 2000 presidential campaign gets under way, acknowledged David A. Sebastian, chair of the Oakland County Republican Party. "But he has plenty to say," he said.

Forbes is considered a pillar of the conservative movement, said Sebastian, particularly with his emphasis on a so-called flat tax, said Sebastian, "and I think people will be interested."

The dinner will be at 7:30 p.m., Feb. 11 at the San Marino Club in Troy. It will be preceded by a cash bar reception. Tickets are $35 per person.

OU GETS TECHNOLOGY GRANT

■ Two members of Oakland University's School of Engineering and Computer Science have recently been awarded a grant to continue their research programs in the engineering and computer science industry.

Michael Polis, dean of the department, and Professor Gautam Singh were awarded $15,290 from Continental Teves for their project entitled "Advanced Software Verification Methodology."

"Professor Singh and I are both very excited about obtaining outside funding for our project," said Polis. "Our faculty always does a tremendous job in creating ways to financially continue their research, and I am proud to work with them in our efforts."

Engler's State of the State keys on education

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Evoking an image of East Germans clambering over the Berlin Wall to freedom, Gov. John Engler stole a line from President Ronald Reagan for his State of the State address Jan. 19.

"Let me remind you that our Constitution established a system of free public education. It did not give districts the right to hold families captive behind a wall of separation called a district line," Engler said. "All families should be free to choose their public school."

Then, using words from Reagan's famous end-of-the-Cold-War speech, Engler urged state lawmakers to "tear down those walls!"

The image was enough to make some lawmakers uncomfortable.

"It is not one I would have used," said Rep. Nancy Quarles (D-Southfield). She doesn't favor raising the cap on the number of charter schools without more accountability. "I do not feel we should just let them go and look away."

Additionally, Quarles wants a plan in place for improvement of public schools, so that charters don't gut them and "leave empty walls standing."

Rep. Laura Toy (R-Livonia) also said she is unsure how well unlimited charter schools will work.

"This is an effort to put some entrepreneurial spirit into education," she said. "That's a nice approach, but you don't know how these things will work out because they are not strictly for-profit enterprises. There are other more important factors to consider."

Raising the stakes

Engler upped the ante in his annual address, his 10th State of the State speech, delivered to a packed House chamber in the Capitol last Wednesday night. Last year, he'd advocated raising the cap on the number of charter schools from 150 to 200. In his most emphatic point of the evening, Engler called on lawmakers to "abolish" the cap altogether.

"He was talking about choice," Rep. John Pappageorge (R-Troy) said. "It's a different kind of barrier and it needs to be removed."

Even though Pappageorge favors raising the cap on charter schools, he's not sure he's willing to allow for "unlimited" charters.

On the other hand, Rep. Paul DeWeese (R-Williamston) thought Engler was on the money. But then, DeWeese is a strong advocate of charter schools and was the primary sponsor of the bill last year to raise the cap.

"In certain instances, the child is not served well at all by being bound to a school that is not performing well. For that child, it is a life and death issue. If we don't equip children with the skills to go out into the world, they'll be confined to a certain kind of life. If we don't give them a quality education, we undermine them for life," he said.

But is it politically feasible, considering the Legislature wouldn't agree to 50 more last year?

"I think this is a matter of quid pro quo," DeWeese said. "He's put a lot more money in here. There's the $6,500 grant. There's the Golden Apple Awards. There's the computer equipment for teachers, and all that I think will be contingent on removal of this cap. There are a lot more carrots in here."

Education was the primary theme of Engler's State of the State. He offered a long list of changes, but his proposals won mixed reviews.

"He talked about $6,500 foundation grants for students in a 'multi-year budget,'" Rep. Laura Baird (D-Okemos). "In a couple years, we would have been there anyway."

"I find it a little disingenuous," said Democratic party chair Mark Brewer. "He's spent the last nine years dismantling education and attacking public schools. Now he wants to be the education governor."

Golden Apple Awards

Some of Engler's plans did play to universal approval. All lawmakers queried favored his proposal to create a new Golden Apple Award program, proviging cash incentives to all employees of schools that rank high in improvement or overall achievement.

"I thought there was some balance there," Rep. Lingg Brewer (D-Holt) said. "The poorer districts can qualify for at least one of those awards. Of course, the highest achievement award will go to the richest districts."

"Cash can be a strong motivator," Rep. Valde Garcia (R-St. Johns) said.

One of the more unusual proposals put forward by Engler was for the creation of a "Principal's Bill of Right." Few details were given, but the gist of the plan is to give school principals more authority to run their buildings.

"I haven't seen the details yet," House Speaker Chuck Perricone (R-Kalamazoo Township) said. "And it needs to be fleshed out. But I'm highly supportive of the concept. If we are going to make principals responsible for their buildings and their programs, let's give them the authority they need to do the job."

Troy's Pappageorge seconded that.

"Principals need to have the authority to run their buildings efficiently. We don't want some administrators telling them they can't have more brooms when they need them. The same goes with disciplinary matters," he said.

Because the Principal's Bill of Rights includes authority to "hire and fire building staff," DeWeese concluded that could mean Engler intends to attempt to reform teacher tenure.

Democratic Chair Mark Brewer read it the same way. "I just see this as another attack on organized labor," he said.

Tax-cutting ovation

Engler won his longest standing ovation of the evening in an entirely different area — when proposing that the income tax rate be cut to 4.2 percent.

Rep. Nancy Cassis (R-Novi), head of the House tax policy committee, said she was excited about the proposal. She agreed that despite Engler's multiple proposals for new spending, there should be enough money in the budget to also cut taxes.

But Lingg Brewer called it "dangerous."

"One day this booming economy is going to end and we are going to need the money," he said.

Roads in the works

Reps. Robert Gosselin (R-Troy) and Mike Kowall (R-White Lake) gave their highest marks to Engler's plans for a Build Michigan III program. The plan would add $1 billion to the $6.4 billion already slated for improvements on Michigan roadways.

Both said they hope Oakland County will rank high in the list of areas to receive projects, because Oakland is in need of a great deal of road work.

While neither had seen details of the plan, both said they had received assurances directly from the governor that the county will get a significant portion of attention in the program.

Republicans were strongly supportive of Engler's plans for a one-time, intensive effort to get the last 36,000 remaining families off welfare roles. Democrats generally cautioned that the program needs to be done carefully to assure recipients aren't just pushed off the rolls without adequate income or benefits.

Oakland legal panel to address racial profiling at OU Varner Hall symposium

A panel of blue-ribbon law enforcement officials, attorneys, educators and African American and Hispanic community leaders will address the issue of racial profiling at a symposium, "Driving While Black: The Road To Understanding," to be held 6-8 p.m. Thursday, Feb.17, at Oakland University in Varner Hall on the university's campus. Light snacks will be available 5-6 p.m. at Varner Hall, and a dessert reception will follow the program.

The symposium will be moderated by Chuck Stokes, director of public affairs for WXYZ, Channel 7, and will allow the panel, along with the public, to address the rising concern of racial profiling during traffic stops in our communities.

The panel will feature the Honorable David Gorcyca, Oakland County prosecutor; the Honorable Saul Green, U.S. Attorney Eastern District of Michigan; Oakland County Sheriff Michael Bouchard; attorney Elbert Hatchett; the Honorable William Waterman, district court judge, Pontiac; attorney Elias Escobedo, immediate past president of the Hispanic Bar; Prof. David Harris, University of Toledo-College of Law; attorney William Mitchell, III; John Dean, Waterford chief of police, and Gary M. Goss, director of Public Safety, city of Farmington.

The program includes opening remarks by the Honorable Fred Mester, Oakland County Circuit Court judge, a panel discussion, questions and reflections by Professor Shea Howell, Oakland University professor of rhetoric, communication and journalism.

"We are excited to be part of this effort to open dialogue, to learn, and to seek solutions to the issue of racial profiling," said David Downing, dean, College of Arts and Sciences at Oakland University. "This will not be a one-time effort at defusing this problem, but we are happy to inaugurate this discussion here at OU."

Time passes strangely when you're downtown

SHOP TALK

NICOLE STAFFORD

Gift shopping, Y2K worries, post-season bargain hunting – all long gone.

It only made sense downtown Birmingham was taking a well-deserved, winter break. Or, so I concluded last Wednesday in between sipping my Starbucks latte and heading down Maple Road to check out spring clothes at a local clothing boutique.

Outside Starbucks coffee house, a few of the baristas were chatting and joking around while one of their co-workers replaced outdoor light bulbs.

Across Old Woodward, a man strolled along the sidewalk, carrying a cell phone between his ear and shoulder, smoking a cigarette. He, too, seemed to be partaking in casual conversation, as opposed to one of those "important-matters-mean-I-need-to-be-on-the-cell-phone" dialogues we've all tired of witnessing. (Is anything that rush, rush?)

Bumbling around the corner came another cell phone user. She, too, appeared aimless in direction and conversation. I never imagined finding cell phone use refreshing, but, at that moment, cell phones looked better than shopping bags.

The American Flag perched above the Limited Express building seemed to flap in slow motion.

Other than a woman eyeing sofas in Jennifer Convertibles' store front, nobody seemed intent on anything, especially shopping. A few love birds, walking hand-in-hand, paused to look inside The Gap's windows. Just about everybody else simply drifted by, sipping warm coffee house drinks or talking and laughing.

Walking back to my car, the salt on the road and sidewalks crackled. A few cars sailed by, but their roars were shallow and soft. There were a few season leftovers: a sale sign at Art Loft; a row of flashing Christmas lights in the Subway sandwich shop; a pile of "Y2-K9" tins on a table inside Three Dog Bakery.

These were carefree and peaceful times in downtown Birmingham, a respite from the hurried, uneasy and fussy world of selling and buying, I was pleased to conclude. I took a sip of my latte and turned the key in the ignition.

And, then, like a New York – or should I say downtown Birmingham – minute, it was over.

Across the street was a woman overloaded with purchases, two shopping bags perched atop a large box, scurrying towards the southwest corner of Maple and Woodward. Worse yet, she was headed towards a sports utility vehicle "parked" illegally at the intersection with its emergency lights flashing.

A man in a leather jacket burst out of Wachler Jewellers carrying a small shopping bag, barely missing the woman and her bag-and-box balancing act.

Then, as if time had reverted, delivering people and place back into the hustle and bustle of late December, a slew of people came marching across Maple carrying bags of newly purchased goods.

The cars, too, seemed to be moving more quickly. Within minutes, they were backed up on both sides of Maple under a green traffic light. Then, more people, some walking quickly, some with shopping bags; the sound of a car horn; a woman leaving Three Dog Bakery with two bags of bones for Spot; and thumping house music coming from a teenager's stopped car.

Doesn't this place take a break, I asked myself. Isn't a downtown about more than just hurrying and getting things done and shopping? Don't people ever just hang out, look around, take things in?

The clock read 2:45 p.m. About 15 minutes had passed.

But, I rationalized, I suppose that's all that we can ask. There are still birthday presents and wedding shower gifts to buy. Valentine's Day is just around the corner. And, surely there are few teenagers with leftover Christmas money to spend. Spot probably misbehaves without his gourmet dog bones.

That's when I realized I had been privy to something rare, a time of rest, what felt like a moment, in downtown Birmingham.

It's true time flies when you're having fun. But with all the rushing around we do in our favorite downtown districts, how much fun can we be having?

Next time you're downtown, look around, listen. You, too, might pay witness to something unusual.

Downtown java

It's not Main Street without the coffee house

BY NICOLE STAFFORD
SPECIAL EDITOR
NSTAFFORD@OE.HOMECOMM.NET

Let's face it. Downtown coffee houses are nothing new; if you haven't ventured into one yet, surely you've spotted their trendy store fronts on the way to your Main Street florist, clothing boutique or gift shop.

But there's no denying the everyday importance that coffee houses have assumed; the chilly weather only makes it more apparent Main Street wouldn't be complete without a cozy coffee house into which to retire.

"There needs to be a gathering place. That's kind of important to keeping the homey feel of a downtown," said Ann Stevenson, owner of the Union General Sweetshop and Cafe in downtown Clarkston where local residents frequently stop to sip espresso drinks and spend time with friends and family.

Clarkston-area teenagers also regularly gather at the cafe, at 50 S. Main, to meet friends after school and socialize, said Stevenson.

Trend-setting downtown Birmingham has been home to several cafes for years. Today, four cafes, including Starbucks, serve espresso drinks to customers who work and live in the area; and, it's not uncommon to hear the cafe's baristas call out regular customers' drink orders before a request is made.

In downtown Rochester, home to a Coffee Beanery and newly-opened Starbucks, getting coffee is a "morning regiment" for people who live and work in the community, said Kristi Trevarrow, promotions and marketing director for the Rochester Downtown Development Authority.

In downtown Plymouth, the Coffee Studio across from Kellog Park not only provides java for a host of regular customers and is a gathering place for local teenagers but also serves as a meeting place and activity center for the town, said Paulette Wisnom, owner of the two-story, studio-style cafe.

"It's relaxed enough for people to meet each other. I know many people who have met in the cafe," she said. "The way society is going there is so much isolation and I don't think people have opportunities to meet up as much, especially in suburbia ... but this is conducive to that."

Coffee house identity

Coffee houses don't just serve us. They influence and reinforce our sense of ourselves and our downtown districts.

In downtown Rochester, news of Starbucks' plans to open a cafe in the district meant "we were finally getting into the 90s," said Trevarrow.

Blessed with large windows, wood floors and a second-story loft seating area, the Coffee Beanery satisfies Plymouth residents' taste for a dose of Soho, Wisnom said. The cafe even hosted a series of drum circle sessions. "We're sort of a haven for those who don't want a chain coffee house."

Likewise, the 12-seat Union General cafe is tucked inside a mid-17th century house and sports an eclectic mix of vintage furniture and accessories, in keeping with downtown Clarkston's small-town character.

"We have creaky doors and wooden floors – all that stuff that gives us a lot of character," said Stevenson.

"The modern coffee house probably wouldn't be appropriate for here – say what you'd maybe see in downtown Birmingham," said Stevenson. "I think you need to have a coffee house that fits the community."

Leiber handbag designed for Troy fund-raiser

The folks at the Henry Ford Heart and Vascular Institute have put their hopes in one bag.

A one-of-a-kind Judith Leiber bag to be precise.

The famous handbag and accessories designer has created a sparkling minaudiere bag to auction Friday, Jan. 28 at the institute's annual "Red Heart Blues ... and all that Jazz!" fund-raiser at Troy's Somerset Inn.

In the meantime, anyone who's interested in seeing the heart-shaped bag, which forms hearts and musical notes out of Austrian crystals and features a semi-precious stone clasp, can do so at Neiman Marcus' Somerset Collection store in Troy.

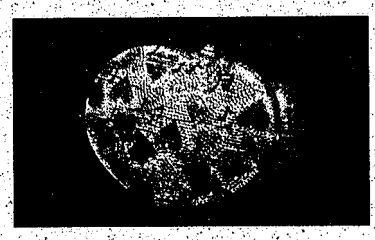

Leiber, who is known as the last hand-assembled handbag couturier in the United States, designed the handbag specifically for the fund-raising event to reflect its themes.

Leiber's handbags cost as much as $7,500 and are carried by some of the world's most famous women, including Elizabeth Taylor, Barbara Walters and Queen Elizabeth.

Money raised at "Red Heart Blues ... and all that Jazz!" benefits research and treatment for the prevention and cure of cardiovascular diseases at the institute.

Dinner, dancing, the sounds of jazz, a silent auction and award presentation are also slated for the event, which will be announced by WDIV-TV 4 health reporter Lila Lazarus and begins at 6 p.m.

Attendance at the event is not required to bid on the Leiber bag. For event tickets, priced at $200 and $300, or to place absentee bids call Henry Ford Health System's special events office at (313) 876-9259.

Dazzling heart: Judith Leiber's heart and musical note purse, on display at Neiman Marcus, is made of Austrian crystals.

New advocate program aids crime victims

Oakland County Prosecutor David Gorcyca has announced the creation of a new program expanding services provided to victims of crime during their court appearances. The District Court Advocacy Program provides crime victims appearing in the 52nd Division District Courts (Troy, Novi, Rochester and Clarkston) with a "victim advocate" to explain court procedures and answer questions about the case. These advocates will also assist victims in receiving financial compensation for out-of-pocket losses suffered as a result of the crime. They will also make referrals to other agencies for additional support services.

The advocates will work closely with the victim and the assistant prosecutor to make sure all concerns are addressed, questions are answered and that the victim is kept updated at various stages of their case. Recognizing the critical needs of certain crime victims, advocates will concentrate their efforts on victims of child physical and sexual abuse, domestic violence, elder abuse, adult sexual assault, robbery, assault, hate crimes, drunk and driving and family members of homicide victims.

This program is funded by a Victim of Crime Act (VOCA) grant. Oakland County has provided the required grant match with volunteer hours of an Oakland University intern student, with no taxpayer monies utilized.

Gorcyca stated: "I am committed to reducing the confusion, frustration and trauma that can occur when a crime victim is required to go through the legal system without adequate support services. By providing victims direct contact with a Victim Advocate early on, we will ensure that they are thoroughly prepared for the court process and are not re-victimized."

Boating safety classes offered at area schools

The Birmingham Power Squadron will conduct safe-boating courses at five Oakland County schools, beginning in late February.

Registration at each of the locations starts at 7 p.m. on the first day, with classes running 7:30-9:30 p.m. The courses cover all aspects of power and sail boating, including safety at sea, rules of the road, navigation aids, emergency maintenance, charting, electronic instruments, marine radio and weather.

Classes meet one night a week and the course lasts seven to eight weeks. Starting dates, locations and phone numbers are:

LOIS THIELEKE

Consider an oil change for better health

There is a war on fat. Good fat versus bad fat, monounsaturated versus polyunsaturated versus saturated, and health claims versus hype versus the truth. What are we supposed to believe?

During the past few years, the media has reported on scientific studies that suggest that monounsaturated fats, such as olive oil, may decrease the risk of heart disease. Maybe it's time to think about an oil change in your kitchen.

Studies that included countries that primarily use olive oil showed they had a lower incidence of breast cancer. There are also studies that suggest olive oil may reduce blood cholesterol.

Sources

Olive oil is a monounsaturated fat and affects the body the least. Monounsaturated fat sources include olive, peanut and canola oils.

Polyunsaturated fats include corn, safflower, soybeans and sesame seeds.

Saturated fats are from animal sources such as meats and milk products. There are three vegetable oils that are highly saturated – coconut, palm and palm kernel. Saturated fats can boost cholesterol and cause heart disease.

No oil or salad fat has just one kind of fatty acid so whatever fat you choose, use it sparingly. All vegetable oils contain about 120 calories per tablespoon. Reducing fats, even the good kind, reduces calories, too.

Don't be fooled by the words "light" on olive oil. It means the oil is light in flavor, not calories.

Flavors

Olives produce a different kind of oil depending on when they were picked and how they were pressed. The flavors are everything from a green spicy oil to light and mild. Extra virgin has a pleasant aroma and is strong but not overpowering. Extra virgin oil is the first pressing of the olives. The more pressings the olives have gone through, the lower the grade of olive oil.

Olive oil can replace other vegetable oil in cooking products, but when you want the flavor to come through, choose extra virgin olive oil. The price of olive oils can range from expensive to very expensive. Price has little to do with flavor. Buy a small portion until you are familiar with the flavor.

Use extra virgin or superfine blended oils:

- For dunking slices of fresh bread
- For salad vinaigrettes
- Sprinkled over tomatoes and onions with basil
- Drizzled on raw or cooked vegetables
- Drizzled over baked potatoes (add some Parmesan cheese and fresh herbs)

Extra virgin olive oil should be used in cold dishes or added to a dish that is hot, otherwise you could lose the flavor of the oil.

Don't use olive – or any other oil – in pastry unless it's called for in a recipe. Oil coats flour particles, preventing the water-flour interaction that is necessary for the development of gluten. Pastries made with oil tend to be very tender, yet crumbly and have a greasy feel in your mouth.

Olive oil has a low smoke point, so don't use it for deep-fat frying. The smoke point of a fat is the temperature at which the fat "burns" or is overheated and gives off a blue gas that can irritate mucus membranes (and set off your smoke detector). Use olive oil for sautéing or frying.

SAVVY MOMS SATISFY THE TUMMIES OF BIG FAMILIES

BY SANDRA DALKA-PRYSBY
SPECIAL WRITER

■ 'There may be some whining, especially when I try a new recipe, but the children have learned to eat what is put before them.'

– Nancy Sovran

What's a mother to do when it comes to satisfying the taste buds of a whole bunch of individuals? That's the challenge that two mothers face daily. Luckily, both are successful in meeting this demand.

Nancy Sovran of Southfield is the mother of seven children ages 3 to 12. Sarah Gijsbers of Beverly Hills has five daughters who range in age from 18 months to 9. Both mothers have some finicky eaters in their broods. However, both prepare only one dinner each day for their families.

"The picky eaters can select what they want from what is offered," said Sovran. "There may be some whining, especially when I try a new recipe, but the children have learned to eat what is put before them. However, I do try to make dishes that I know will please the majority."

Gijsbers also makes dishes that please the most members of her family. However, she too sometimes hears a few groans when she serves something new for dinner.

"I encourage the girls to take a few bites and try the dishes put before them," said Gijsbers. "If they don't like one particular offering, they don't have to eat it. They can fill up on the other available dishes."

Sovran and her husband, Andrew, a financial analyst at the Detroit Medical Center, learned early into their parenthood days that majority rule is the way to go when it comes to feeding a large family.

"You can't please everyone all the time, but we found – through trial and error – certain dishes such as stew, spaghetti and chicken casserole that appeal to most of the kids," said Sovran. However, two of their children offer the biggest challenge when it comes to foods.

Sarah, 12, the Sovran's eldest child, doesn't like her food to touch the other foods on her plate. She likes everything to be separate and because of this, she avoids casseroles.

"This is my fault," said Sovran. "I also keep my foods separate. She's acquired my fetish."

The Sovran's youngest child, Hope, 3, also has special needs. Born with spina bifida and paralyzed from the waist down, Hope is currently being weaned from a feeding tube and is trying regular foods for the first time.

"Her favorite food is Chee-tos," said Sovran. "She asks for these all the time, even for breakfast. However, we're trying to get her to eat other and more nutritious foods and we're having some success."

The Sovran's other children are, Joe, 10, Annie, 8, Mary Kate, 7, Dominic, 5, and Molly, 4.

Gijsbers Family

The Gijsbers's middle child, Annie, 6, is their fussiest eater.

"She doesn't like fruits or vegetables," said Gijsbers. "However, I don't force them on her. I don't like to make food an issue. Battles over food could lead to other problems, even eating disorders. So we just encourage her to taste these foods. She's now beginning to like salads."

The Gijsbers's other children are Deenagh, 9, Remy, 7, Demery, 2 1/2, and Emma 18 months.

Spousal support

Sovran's husband cooks dinner often. In addition, he is the family's main lunch maker.

"He makes the kids' lunches each night before going to bed. It's quite a production to watch as he lines up slices of bread for sandwiches and the fillings and fruits to accommodate each of the children's tastes," said Sovran. "He accomplishes this task quickly and well. He has it down to a science. Also, the kids are great helpers with the meals. Some are assigned to set the table, while others help with such tasks as pouring the milk or cutting up vegetables."

Gijsbers also gets help in the kitchen. Her husband, Brian, an attorney in private practice, often plans and prepares dinners, especially on Sundays.

"He does a good job with the main course," she said. "I usually help with the side dishes, and the girls make the salad. It's a nice family activity."

These two mothers of large families have discovered what a "small world" it really is. Four years ago they ran into each other while enrolling their youngsters in the preschool program at Our Lady Queen of Martyrs School in Beverly Hills.

"We were classmates ourselves years ago at St. Bede's School in Southfield," said Sovran. "We hadn't seen each other for years and had lost touch. Now our children are classmates and friends."

Reuniting, and seeing each other often at school functions, has provided them with a bonus. They share their kid-pleasing recipes, as well as tips for successfully raising so many children.

"It's good to have a friend who understands the same demands that you have," said Sovran. "Large families are a blessing, but also a challenge. And not just when it comes to feeding them."

We want to hear from you. How do you get dinner on the table, yet satisfy the appetites of all of your children? How do you encourage your children to eat vegetables, fruits and other things that are good for them? Is there a kid-friendly way to prepare cauliflower?

Hearty white bean chili a healthy alternative

Tips

- Keep canned broth in the refrigerator so the fat will congeal and be easy to lift off the surface before using. Who wants the extra calories?
- To freeze chili or soup, place a freezer-weight plastic bag inside a bowl, pour in chili or soup, then freeze. When solid, lift the plastic bag out of the bowl, seal and return to freezer for up to 3 months.
- For fast meals, freeze chili and soups in individual portions to be heated in minutes in the microwave.
- If you're going to be away from home longer than the cooking time, plug your slow cooker into an automatic timer. Set the timer to start the cooker while you're gone. Always place chilled food into the cooker that has a delayed starting time. Never let the food stand for more than 2 hours before the cooking starts.

Sometimes change is good. Sheila Radtke of Westland adapted her chili recipe to what she considered a "more interesting" dish with ground turkey, a healthy alternative to traditional chili made with beef.

"People are shying away from red meat, but they have started coming back to it," Radtke said about her "recipe to share." "People are eating healthier, and they say you should eat more beans. This chili is something you can make in a Crock-pot and eat it whenever."

Radtke recommends that the chili is best if refrigerated, then reheated.

WHITE CHILI

1 1/2 pounds ground turkey
1 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup of diced green pepper
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 teaspoon oregano
2 teaspoons cumin
1 teaspoon crushed chili peppers
1/2 teaspoon garlic granules
3 (15-ounce) cans white beans
1 cup chicken broth
Salt and white pepper to taste

In a four-quart saucepan, brown the first five ingredients. Add two cans of beans (undrained). Drain the third can of beans, then blend the beans in a food processor to use for thickening the chili. Add remaining ingredients and simmer for 30 minutes.

Everyone knows the best recipes are the ones you share. Send us your favorite original recipe, and if it's chosen to be featured in Recipe to Share on the third Sunday of the month in Taste, we'll send you a cookbook.

Send recipes for consideration in Recipe to Share to Ken Abramczyk, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150, (734) 591-7279, or e-mail kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

Please include a daytime phone number and the best time to call, so we can contact you about your recipe. Try to be specific with recipe details such as can and package sizes.

Does anyone use their grill in this weather?

Kiwifruits kick winter blues

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) – California kiwifruits are one of the few fresh fruits in peak season throughout winter, the California Kiwifruit Commission points out.

The fruit is compact, completely edible, has lively flavor and pretty green color and delivers vitamin C and fiber, among other nutritious values. Here are some pointers for its use:

■ Choosing kiwifruit is easy, the commission says. Pick firm, unblemished fruit and test by squeezing gently. If the fruit gives to slight pressure, it is ripe. If it does not yield at all, it is not ready to eat.

■ Size does not matter. Smaller kiwis taste the same as larger fruit.

KIWI MANGO SALSA

3 medium kiwifruit
3/4 cup mango, chopped (see note)
1 tablespoon minced green chilies (fresh or canned)
2 tablespoons lime juice
1 1/2 teaspoons honey
3 tablespoons chopped cilantro
Pinch of salt

Peel kiwifruit and cut into lengthwise quarters, then slice. Place sliced kiwifruit into bowl with other ingredients. Mix gently.

Note: If desired, for the mango substitute 1/2 cup (about 12) diced dried figs.

■ Kiwi will keep for several days at room temperature and up to four weeks in your refrigerator.

■ If your kiwifruit is not ripe and you get impatient, put it in a vented plastic bag with an apple or banana and leave it out on the counter for a day to two, to accelerate ripening.

■ You don't have to peel your kiwifruit. The fuzzy skin is edible and a lot of the nutrients lie just beneath it, so rinse it off and bite right in.

■ If you wish you can slice the fruit in half and scoop the inside out with a spoon. You can also quarter it like an apple, slice it like a banana or dice it like a tomato. Substitute it for other fruit or tomatoes in salads and sandwiches.

■ Kiwi acts as a meat tenderizer. Crush a fruit and use it alone or in a marinade. It will be effective on even tough meat after a soaking of only 30 minutes.

■ The kiwifruit has a long history – it was known and prized for its flavor and color at least 700 years ago in China.

■ The following recipe is quick and easy to make, to serve with tortilla chips or as an accompaniment to a meat or seafood dish:

1 cup of ketchup (or barbecue sauce), divided

Preheat oven to 350° F. In large bowl, combine all ingredients, reserving 1/2 cup ketchup or barbecue sauce. Place mixture in a greased loaf pan. Spread remaining ketchup (barbecue sauce) on top. Bake for 45 minutes to one hour. Serves 8.

Turkey sandwich quick, satisfying meal

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COOKBOOK

There is no rule that sandwiches can't be served at dinner, and Michele Urvater shows us how to turn a sandwich into a full and satisfying meal without spending time at the stove.

Urvater has been cooking professionally for 25 years, as well as teaching it and writing about it.

The recipe for Turkey Blue Cheese Sandwiches With Grape Salad is in her recently published cookbook, "Monday-To-Friday-Chicken" (Workman Publishing, $22.95).

TURKEY BLUE CHEESE SANDWICH WITH GRAPE SALAD

Preparation time: 20 minutes

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons sherry vinegar or balsamic vinegar
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
1 bunch (4 ounces) watercress
1 1/2 cup seedless grapes, preferably red
1/2 cup pecan halves
4 slices whole-wheat bread
2 tablespoons butter
4 ounces blue cheese, crumbled
6 ounces baked or smoked turkey, sliced

Combine oil and vinegar in a small bowl and season lightly with salt and pepper. Rinse the watercress and cut the stems to about 1/2 inch of the leaves. Dry the watercress.

Rinse the grapes. If they are large, halve them. Coarsely chop the pecans, and combine in a mixing bowl with the watercress, grapes and half the vinaigrette dressing.

Right before serving, toast the bread lightly.

Butter the toasted bread slices while still warm, and sprinkle them with the blue cheese.

Drape the turkey slices over the blue cheese, and drizzle the remaining dressing over the turkey.

Serve the sandwiches open-face with the grape and watercress salad on the side.

Makes 2 servings.

Olive oil becomes cloudy and thick at temperatures below 45°F. Store olive oil in a cool dark place. You can store olive oil in the refrigerator, but it will become cloudy. When you are ready to use the olive oil, take it out of the refrigerator and let it come to room temperature. The oil will become clear and thin again.

Studies have shown that using a monounsaturated oil is certainly better than using a saturated fat. But fat is fat, so try to use it sparingly.

What's not to love about legumes?

What's to love about legumes? Plenty. Kidney beans, black-eyed peas, soybeans, lentils, chick-peas, black beans, pinto beans, limas, split peas and all other members of the legume family are low in fat and sodium and provide lots of protein, fiber, iron, potassium and magnesium.

A half-cup serving of cooked legumes contains as much as eight grams of fiber. About 75 percent of this is insoluble fiber, the kind believed to decrease the risk of colon cancer and other intestinal maladies. The remaining 25 percent is soluble fiber, which helps lower blood cholesterol. Among the B vitamins found in legumes is folate, a form of folic acid, which is linked to a reduced incidence of heart disease and birth defects.

Legumes are a nutritional bargain as well, providing eight grams of protein per serving at a much lower cost than meat. Although soybeans are the only legumes that provide all eight essential amino acids, you can easily add the missing ones by eating cereal grains like rice, pasta, or corn at other times during the day.

What's not to love about legumes? Well, there's that embarrassing gas, caused by compounds found naturally in beans that our bodies can't digest. Although you can't eliminate the problem completely, you can make it better by soaking, draining and rinsing dried beans before cooking, or by draining the liquid off and rinsing canned beans (this also removes excess sodium found in most canned beans). Then be sure to drink adequate fluids and build up tolerance by increasing the amount of beans in your diet slowly.

Another perceived drawback to eating legumes is preparation time, but this can be overcome in several ways. Canned beans are an option if you don't have time to spare. Or you can try the quick-soak method in place of the traditional overnight soaking for dried beans.

The quick-soak method involves boiling the beans in water for two minutes, then removing the pot from the heat and letting it sit for two to four hours with the cover on. Then drain, rinse and cover with fresh cold water and cook for one to four hours, depending on the type of legume.

Essentially neutral in flavor, legumes complement a variety of cooking styles and ingredients. They are found both at the center of the plate or in supporting roles and are essential to many ethnic recipes. This hearty, stew-like mixture of vegetables makes a delicious meal. Substitute, subtract or add whatever vegetables you have on hand.

CHICK PEA AND VEGETABLE RAGOUT

1-1/2 cups diced (1/2-inch) onion
2 carrots, sliced (1/2-inch diagonals), about 1 cup
1 rib celery, sliced (1/2-inch), about 1 cup
1 garlic clove, chopped
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon curry powder
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1 can (19 ounces) chick peas, rinsed and drained
1 can (15 ounces) cut up tomatoes with juices
1 medium sweet potato, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch cubes
1 cup frozen cut green beans
1/4 cup raisins
2 small zucchini, quartered lengthwise and cut into 1/2-inch pieces
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
1 cup plain nonfat yogurt, at room temperature
2 tablespoons chopped, dry roasted peanuts (garnish, optional)

Combine the onion, carrots, celery, garlic and olive oil in a 10-inch nonstick skillet that has a tight-fitting lid. Cook, stirring occasionally, over medium heat for 10 minutes; do not brown. Stir in curry and cumin; cook, stirring, 1 minute.

Add the chick peas, tomatoes, sweet potato, green beans and raisins. Cook, covered, for 10 minutes. Add 2 or 3 tablespoons water as needed to keep the mixture moist. Stir in the zucchini; cover and cook until all the vegetables are tender, about 5 minutes longer. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Remove from heat; let stand uncovered. In a medium bowl, stir the yogurt until smooth. Add a spoonful of the hot vegetable mixture and stir to blend. Transfer to the skillet and stir to blend. Sprinkle with peanuts before serving, if desired.

FRANK PROVENZANO

For art's sake, school shouldn't give in to fear

This predicament proves that Greek tragedy is truly timeless. When a vociferous group of so-called Friends of the Art at Detroit Country Day School decided to remove a mural, they couldn't have realized that they had become a part of a much larger drama.

The mural was painted by Robert Schefman, one of the region's most gifted and acclaimed painters. The 16-feet by 9-feet narrative painting hung for about two weeks in the entryway of the new Seligman Performing Arts Center on the school campus.

It was removed 10 days ago. Until recently, Schefman was reluctant to draw attention to the simmering controversy.

"I never gave money to the school, but I felt I could donate my time," said Schefman of West Bloomfield.

Schefman has received nearly all of his $20,000 commission for a painting that he began in November of 1998 and finished last month.

Initially, administrators at Country Day were thrilled by the dramatic depiction and impressed by Schefman's sheer talent of painting realistically.

Schefman, who graduated from Country Day in 1970, spent about a year painting a scene from the ancient Greek playwright Sophocles' "Antigone."

The perspective of the painting is from the catwalk above the stage. Below is a woman kneeling over her dead brother, who acted against the king. Her grief is deepened because she cannot give her brother a proper burial.

No weapons. No blood. No violence. Just tragedy.

And as anyone knows, Sophocles' tragedies offered a compelling lesson about character, honor and obligation to family.

Private matter, public affair

When students arrived from the holiday break, not everyone was impressed with the mural.

Some said the painting reminded them of the horrific scenes of the shooting at Columbine High School. Some parents claimed it was too simply too violent.

Too violent? Have these critics seen what's accessible on the Internet? The violence depicted in video games? The gratuitous sex and materialism worshiping of a culture that aims to make teenagers' responsible shoppers, rather than conscientious citizens?

Granted, a painting commissioned by the Friends of Art for the private Country Day School is bound by a private contract. All in all, a private matter.

Perhaps in a court of law.

The Friends' decision to suddenly remove what they contend is a "violent" painting raises concern about how far parents are willing to go to "protect" their children from what they perceive as a dangerous world.

Their fear is understandable. But their inability to grasp the consequences of an untimely knee-jerk reaction must be challenged.

The opposition to the painting should have been seen as an opportunity, not a threat. Dialogue, not censorship can be the only way to resolve differences of aesthetics and ethics.

What better place for dialogue than a school that prides itself on having all the state-of-the-art resources of a leading "college prep" institution?

Country Day may be private, but it can't bury its head and expect the world to be a safer place simply by not looking at a dramatic, provocative painting.

Sophocles must be...

"The problem is that people try to hide from the fragile nature of life," said Schefman. "We've removed ourselves from the experiences of death.

"Today, kids see death on TV and in videos, not as a natural part of living and aging."

Schefman is right. The circle of life,

The Halsteds celebrate 30-year anniversary with two black-and-white photography exhibits

COLORFUL FAMILY PORTRAIT

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER
fprovenzano@oe.homecomm.net

Several inches of freshly-fallen snow blanket the hills and ground surrounding Wabeek Lake, where Tom Halsted and his wife, Carol, live in a serene community of condominiums on the western edge of Bloomfield Township.

It's the kind of majestic, yet simple landscape that Tom Halsted, owner of the Halsted Gallery in Birmingham, must cherish. No color, really. Just gradations of black and white.

Not too different from the many photographs that Halsted has bought, sold and collected over the last 30 years while overseeing what is generally considered one of the finest art galleries specializing in black-and-white photography in the country.

Meanwhile, Carol Halsted's collection of 49 dance photographs are featured in "The Power and Passion of Dance," an exhibit which opened Saturday at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

A one-time promising dancer who moved to New York in the early 1960s to pursue a career on the stage, Halsted's greatest impact on the local arts scene has been as chair of the department of music, theater and dance at Oakland University. She is also on the boards of various performing arts groups in the area, including Eisenhower Dance Ensemble, and the newly-formed Nell's Girls Theatre Co.

Considered the largest selection of photos of its kind, Carol Halsted's collection includes rare and popular photos of the legends of 20th-century dance, including Vaslav Nijinsky, Loie Fuller, Anna Pavlova, Isadora Duncan, Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham, George Blanchine, Judith Jamison and Mikail Baryshnikov.

Just like Chevy

From the Halsted's terrace view overlooking frozen Wabeek Lake, the romantic inclination is to take a deep breath of winter, sigh deeply and believe that serenity is at hand.

But first, better check the map and address. And watch out for the snare drum and cymbals set up in the middle of the living room, a present to Halsted from his wife to help him find a "much-needed pastime."

Without having to be prodded, Halsted sits behind the drum set, and waits apparently for the "vibe" to coax a semblance of rhythm from his long, gangly frame. Then he boyishly confesses that it's been since the late 1950s as a student at Seaholm (then called Birmingham High School) that he last played in a rhythm-and-blues band.

For someone who deals in the art of black-and-white, Halsted is the type of character colored with every hue in the rainbow, and then some. He may resemble a pensive Norman Rockwell, but it's hard to mistake that Halsted acts more like Chevy Chase.

"He enjoys being offbeat. We just say that he's more of a right-brained person," said Wendy Halsted who works side by side with her father. Together they coordinate six annual shows in their gallery.

The father-daughter team is a combination of defined roles and a relationship based on strengths, said Carol Halsted. "I think it'd be much tougher for a husband and wife to be in business. With those two, Tom is completely off-the-wall and Wendy is grounded. She keeps him on track. Well, at least the best she can."

Second-annual auction to benefit arts federation

The best indication of Southfield's multicultural population might be the expansive range of arts groups that make up the Federation for the Arts.

The second-annual fine art action will be held Friday and Saturday to benefit the more than 80 arts groups represented by the federation.

The auction, conducted by Park West Gallery, will be in the all-purpose room at the Southfield Centre for the Arts, where many of the arts groups also perform and rehearse. Included in the auction is a range of works from 30 contemporary artists.

Honorary chair for the event is Frank D. Stella, one of the most recognized philanthropist and arts supporters in the region. Stella has been credited for attracting the Three Tenors to Detroit last summer.

A reception begins at 7 p.m. each night with the auction starting an hour later.

"I think of it as a spiritual event," said Patrick Benchley, vice president of the federation. "About half the people who attend won't purchase anything. They're there to take in the art."

Last year's event attracted about 200 people and raised $9,000. The money was earmarked for a deposit on a concert piano for the center, said Benchley.

Since it opened in June 1997, the Southfield Centre for the Arts has been promoted as a regional venue. A city-funded marketing study to be released in the next several months is expected to examine further ways to make the center more accessible to arts groups throughout the region.

For information on the fine arts auction to benefit the Southfield Federation for the Arts, call (248) 424-9022, or Park West Gallery, (800) 521-9654.

DSO enhances international reputation

If there were any questions about the reputation of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra after a successful European tour, a multi-million-dollar expansion of Orchestra Place, and the construction of the Detroit High School for the Fine and Performing Arts, now there shouldn't be any doubts about their international stature.

On Wednesday, the DSO named renowned violinist Itzhak Perlman as principal guest conductor. Perlman, who debuted with the DSO in November, will begin a three-year tenure for the 2001 season.

Itzhak Perlman

In addition to conducting, Perlman will lecture and teach master classes.

For years, Perlman has been known exclusively as one of the world's foremost violin virtuosos. But five years ago, he began conducting. Since then, his performances at the podium have steadily increased.

While it's conceded that great performers do not necessarily make great conductors, the DSO will gain broader exposure with Perlman holding the baton.

Klein Gallery unveils series of Picasso's intriguing engravings

BY LANA MINI

David Klein can barely contain himself.

Looking over the current exhibit of Pablo Picasso engravings, "Minotaurs & Models," at his Birmingham gallery, Klein is quick to point out interesting details like the sly expressions of intrigue, the rose garland draped throughout the open-air rooms and the beauty of the uninhibited, naked women.

Most of the 11 pieces on display depict erotic, happy, utopian images of men and women.

"It's mind-boggling that Picasso created these works in such a short period of time – like Bach writing a concerto every morning. It's exactly the same thing," Klein said. "It's not often a Picasso show, especially one with pieces in such mint condition, comes to Michigan."

For years, few eyes have had the opportunity to view this slice of life created by Picasso.

Contemplate: This etching, "Sculpture and model kneel" is one of 11 pieces from the collection "Minotarus & Models, Important Intaglio Prints from Pablo Picasso's La Suite Vollard" at the David Klein Gallery in Birmingham until Feb. 26.

In the 1930s, 50 other pieces along with those in the Klein Gallery's "Minotaurs & Models" were etched by Picasso. They were purchased and then hidden by art dealer Ambroise Vollard. Later, they were obtained by Henri Petiet who respectfully, but sinfully, stored them from view.

Sinful, it seems, the splendor of Picasso's work went concealed and unadorned for so many years. Yet it was respectful that Petiet guarded the work untouched, unmatted and unframed until his death 40 years later.

The result: pristine, autographed Picasso etchings.

"They are as perfect as one can get in a Picasso," said Klein.

So intriguing and well-preserved are the pencil-autographed, 15 x 19 inch etchings, that one was purchased by a Michigan resident within just two days of the show.

Picasso created the intaglio prints ("intaglio" means engrave) in a studio outside Paris between 1933-1934. Basically, the work was created by etching with acid on copper plates, then inking and wiping the sheets.

The collection is unique from Picasso's popular works, like his Cubism period, because most of these pieces show happiness and contentment.

"It definitely feels like this work was done during a happy, relaxed period of Picasso's life," Klein said.

Picasso himself once observed that

Appreciating value

When sitting for a family portrait, it's not difficult to guess that Halsted was probably a class clown. He is continually teasing his wife and daughter. Both try, unsuccessfully, to keep him on track. Of course, it's not always clear what train Halsted is riding.

But bring up his love for sports photography and Halsted proves to be an inquisitive conversationalist. Suddenly, he's a historian of the black-and-white art form displayed on nearly every available space in his four-level home.

In the late 1960s when Halsted was a struggling commercial photographer, most people were admiring Polaroids and snapshots. Halsted was in the forefront in calling attention to the work of photographers like Ansel Adams and Arnold Newman.

"I remember having dinner with them when they came to town," said Wendy, who recalled a 1982 visit by Ansel Adams to the original Halsted Gallery, located on Maple near Woodward.

"There were so many people that we needed security guards."

Prices rose with the popularity of black-and-white photography. In 1970, for instance, a print of Adams' "Grand Tetons" sold for about $150. Today, that same print, if you can even find one, is valued at $18,000.

Bohemians at rest

Before he opened his gallery, Tom Halsted had made a living working a freelance photographer for advertising agencies. To help out, Carol would develop film in a converted dark room in their house.

"We were so young," said Carol Halsted. "We didn't have much money, no health insurance, and didn't even think about the future. It was all about the present."

After their first year, the $10,000 revenue matched expenses. "(The next year) an IRS agent visited the gallery because they thought we were a front."

For their part, the Halsteds in the 1960s didn't look sinister. Tom had a heavy, Amish-like beard (no mustachio). But in temperament, they were clearly bohemian, said Carol.

In fact, they were groupies. "For us, life was a living theater," she said.

Although neither knew each other when they attended the same high school, Tom and Carol were introduced by a mutual friend at a Trader Vic's when they lived in New York in the late 1950s.

At the time, Carol was studying with Martha Graham, and Tom was pursuing freelance photo work. The career of his roommate, Noel Paul Stookey, was skyrocketing as a member of Peter, Paul and Mary. (Stookey also attended Birmingham High.)

The Halsteds toured with the group. Along the way, they met a Who's Who of American folk music, including Judy Collins and Tom Paxton. And then there was the time Tom recalled seeing a funny, young comedian named Bill Cosby at the "The Bitter End."

New York, for the Halsteds, was just the beginning.

They returned to Birmingham, married in 1963, and set out to find their way.

With two children, a grandchild on the way, a thriving gallery and impressive career as an academic arts administrator, Tom and Carol Halsted have found the proper focus of art and family.

No need to wait for the "vibe." It's all around them.

TRAVEL

Head to Chicago for Rockwell exhibit

BY DOUG JOHNSON
STAFF WRITER

If you want to be part of Norman Rockwell's victory tour around America you will have to travel to Chicago sometime between Feb. 26 and May 21.

The Rockwell exhibit will come no closer to Detroit.

The exhibit features 70 paintings and all 322 of his Saturday Evening Post covers and is in Atlanta through the end of January.

In Chicago it will be installed in two rooms at the Chicago Historical Society's building, which is in the south end of the city's Lincoln Park (well north of The Loop).

This exhibit, a new book by the curator of his hometown museum (in Stockbridge, Mass.), and a recent 90-minute documentary on PBS are all part of a renewed interest in Rockwell.

Rockwell has been dismissed as too sentimental, too corny, too much of an illustrator — he did Boy Scout calendars for heaven's sake — to be considered an American master. He couldn't ever match up to Homer, Hopper, O'Keefe, Pollock, Wyeth or even Warhol or Grant Wood.

Or could he?

It is interesting to note the full title of the exhibit: "Norman Rockwell: Pictures for the American People." It's as if to say: here is America's favorite artist; critics, art historians, pundits of high culture be damned. This show is for the American people he so richly evokes in his work.

It is also interesting to see that this tour ends in New York City, at the Guggenheim Museum, the famed circular, "ultra modern" structure conceived by another American master, Frank Lloyd Wright.

Here, the foremost depictor of small-town life comes to terms with the teeming, cosmopolitan, American mecca for art and artists: New York City.

How un-Rockwell.

Baby-boomers and their parents best remember Rockwell and those 40 years of covers for Saturday Evening Post. It is said he never took on serious subjects until very late in life. By a poll of readers of the Post, his favorite cover is a boy and his grandmother saying grace in a small diner.

Supposedly by his own admission he painted an America he wanted to see; Rockwell's covers from the Depression do not reveal the despair that gripped the country.

The show comes more than two decades after his death and appears to be designed to bridge the turn of the century with a look back at our best and brightest moments: soldiers back from war, kids at the soda fountain, a whole family at the Thanksgiving table, a couple getting their marriage license. All his covers seemed infused with his sly wit, and like Hitchcock, he sometimes put himself into his own pictures.

THE NORMAN ROCKWELL ESTATE

Problem: "The Problem We All Live With," an oil on canvas work by Norman Rockwell, is one of well-known works that will be on display in Chicago.

Visitors to the exhibit will learn about his meticulous methods, his use of preliminary sketches and models, and about his life through a biographical timeline that includes photographs.

After Chicago the show goes to the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, D.C., then to San Diego, to Phoenix, back to Stockbridge (the Norman Rockwell Museum) then on to the Guggenheim for a long run (November, 2001 to mid-February, 2002).

Rockwell would have been pleased. He often expressed doubt about his his ability and his place as a bona fide artist. But as Steven Spielberg tells us in the PBS show, he painted the American dream better than anyone else — so well, in fact his name became an adjective: "We just drove through a 'Norman Rockwell town'; or, It was a 'Norman Rockwell family gathering.'"

You can call (312) 902-1500 for tickets. The museum's number is (312) 642-4600. As of this week the Illinois Ticketmaster Web site was not listing this event.

The Drake Hotel, Doubletree Guest Suites Hotel, the Westin Hotel and the Four Seasons Hotel are close to the museum. About 60 hotels are taking part in a Chicago WinterBreak promotions and are advertising lowered rates for weekends through March. Call (888) FUN-EVENTS or (800) 2CONNECT about various other deals and events.

for many kids, means nothing more than a quaint phrase from a Disney movie.

It's precisely the works of Sophocles and the thoughtful paintings of artists like Schefman who challenge us to become more aware of delicacy of life.

Sophocles recognized that by exploring pathos, human beings learn that compassion and character is among the noblest traits.

Calling the removal of Schefman's painting a "private matter" is like saying that Greek tragedy is only for masochists and the terminally melancholic.

In the great Parthenon in the sky, Sophocles must be smiling.

Or crying.

art is about understanding. Picasso said: "We all know that art is not truth. Art is a lie that makes us realize the truth, at least the truth that is given to us to understand."

Picasso's dealings with Vollard, the first owner of the collection, did not bode well for the artist financially or emotionally, said Klein.

Vollard was one of the first art dealers to pay attention to influential artists like Picasso and Van Gogh, but he didn't do so for the love of art.

"It was purely about money for Vollard," Klein explained.

The "Minotaurs & Models" collection, like the Blue Period and pieces of Van Gogh's work, were purchased by Vollard at insultingly low prices. He was known for storing his purchases until the artist's reputation flourished and then sold them for huge profits. The pieces at the David Klein Gallery are tagged from $15,000-$35,000.

"Picasso loathed art dealers," Klein said. "Vollard paid him little for his talents. Picasso's well-known despise of art dealers in the end resulted in the fine condition of these etchings," Klein said. "That's somewhat ironic."

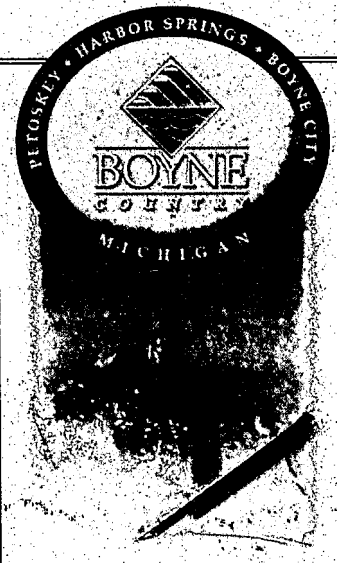

But, perhaps it was Picasso who had the final laugh in his dealings with Vollard. The last three etchings of this particular collection (not available at the Klein Gallery) are very unflattering portraits of Vollard.

Klein, by the way, is not at all like Vollard.

BOOKS

Local author quenches thirst for knowledge

Brewed in Detroit: Breweries and Beers Since 1830
Peter H. Blum
Wayne State University Press, $34.95

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER

When you think of manufacturing in Detroit, you automatically think automobiles. But this area has been the home to a diversity of manufacturing concerns from salt mines to steel mills to chemical plants.

All that hard work in all those industries and on construction crews generated a powerful thirst. It was only natural that immigrant brewers would try to slake that thirst with the working man's favorite beverage, beer.

Peter H. Blum, a longtime employee at Stroh Brewery and Stroh family archivist, has written a thorough and lively account of the many breweries that filled that important social function from the 1830s to the present day. Blum's book is part business history, part social commentary and part celebration of the brewer's craft.

In the early days, when transportation was slow and unreliable and beer was highly perishable, local brewers supplied the area taverns and private homes. Blum traces the beginning of Detroit brewing to the British, Irish and Scot settlers. These early brewers created the heavy ales, porters and stouts that were the preferred drink of the British Isles.

They would very quickly be replaced by German brewers who brought the lighter, golden yellow pilsner that would become the standard for American beer. Detroit's large Polish community also produced their own brand of beer.

Blum begins his book with a colorful section reproducing advertising posters, calendars, serving trays and labels. Throughout the book, Blum tells collectors what might be available from the many defunct breweries and how rare they are.

The author follows the color picture section with a short history of beer and an explanation of how dry grain is transformed into that effervescent elixir.

The heart of Blum's book is a series of short histories of all known Detroit brewers, following their fortunes from beginning to end. The longest section, of course, chronicles the history of Detroit's most successful brewer, Stroh, which at one time was the third largest brewer in the United States.

Brewing has always been a highly competitive business, but the competition became especially charged following the repeal of Prohibition. Though many brewers went under during the long drought, some, including Stroh, used their factories to make soda pop, ice cream and other products until the folly of Prohibition became evident. When repeal came, the survivors were ready to fill the void including such brands as E&B, Tivoli, Koppitz and Altes.

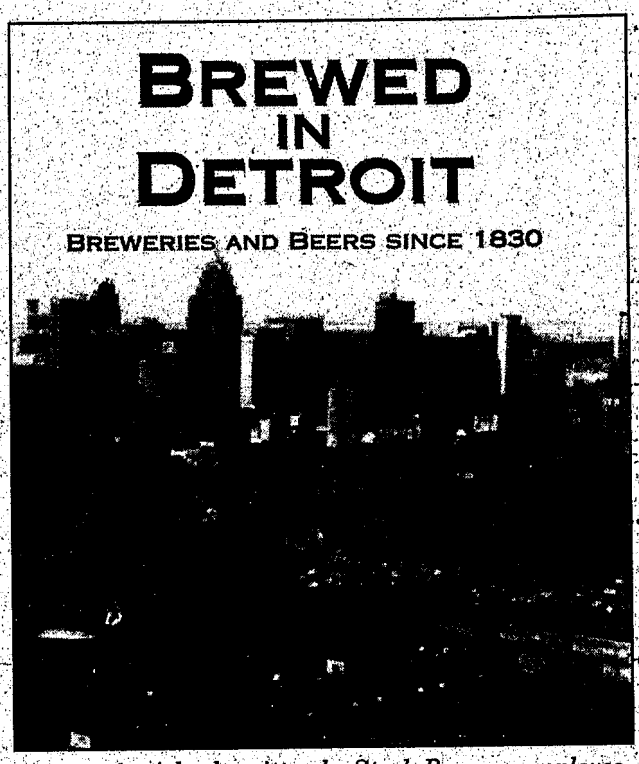

By the end of the war, three breweries fought for supremacy in Detroit – Stroh, Goebel and Pfeiffer. Anyone who was in Detroit during the 1950s will remember how spirited a competition this was. For much of the decade Pfeiffer held the top spot until a changing market and poor management decisions caused its decline. Goebel was noted for sponsoring sports programs, but it was soon bought out by Stroh.

Noting the national decline of regional brands, Stroh gambled on becoming a national player. The company bought Philadelphia's Schaefer and then Milwaukee's Schlitz, at one time the nation's top brewer.

The company closed its Detroit plant. But, in the end, Stroh could not compete with Budweiser and Miller on the national scene, and last year the company sold its brewing operations to Pabst and Miller.

But Blum's story of brewing doesn't end there. He writes about the rise of micro-breweries and brewpubs. The desire for more variety in styles has led to a mini renaissance in the brewer's art.

The book is richly illustrated with historic photos and advertising. The pictures of the often ornately designed breweries are a special treat.

Case study: A book written by Stroh Brewery employee and archivist Peter H. Blum provides an in-depth look at beer breweries in Detroit, dating to the early 19th century.

From league races to unlikely heroes — they're all unpredictable

Here we are, within a week of February, and the races in all the Oakland Activities Association sports are about as clear as my windshield was after driving on these wet snow-soaked roads in recent days.

Just when Clarkston's boys basketball team appears ready to take over the league, it loses a tough game to Southfield-Lathrup, a team expected to be rebuilding this year. Lake Orion's basketball team is in serious need of healthy bodies after seeing its best scorer and best athlete sidelined.

In this time of unpredictable games and unlikely stars, the door is wide open for any team to step up and take command of the different OAA leagues. Pontiac Northern is in the middle of a schedule that's tougher than a dollar steak. The Huskies lost a high-scoring game to Flint Northwestern before taking on Ferndale and Birmingham-Detroit Country Day. Don't think a stretch like that will be easy for the Huskies to overcome, and they could be ripe for a sag in the standings.

Should that happen, the Wolves are as good a candidates to take over league supremacy as anyone. This is Clarkston's deepest team in years. Players like Cody Senkyr, Bryan Endreszl and Matt Pearsall, all tremendous athletes who would log major minutes almost anywhere else, come off the bench for Clarkston. All three of those players were key members of Clarkston's regional-champion football team, yet are not in the top nine in coach Dan Fife's rotation.

Depth like this makes Clarkston an impossible team to defend because of its flexibility. That depth, along with the greatly improved play of guard Kevin Stalker, and the inside work of Adam Schapman and Andy North make the Wolves the team to beat from here on out in the OAA Division I.

■ Looking for a Home: No Oakland County team has to travel for practices and games as much as the Clarkston boys ice hockey team does.

Since the arrival of coach Bryan Krygier in the fall of 1998, the Wolves have slowly moved their home games away from Lakeland Arena in Waterford to different, more available, locations such as Viking Arena in Hazel Park and Cranbrook in Bloomfield Hills.

One of the sites Krygier liked for games won't be seeing any slapshots or saves in the near future. The West Bloomfield Arena, located at the corner of Drake and Walnut Lake Road, has been shut down by West Bloomfield Township because of various safety violations. This has left Krygier scrambling to reschedule game dates that had been booked at that arena.

Despite having to hold most practices near Flint, and most games at least 20 miles away from home, the Wolves have racked up a number-seven state ranking and an 11-3 record. The players have to transport themselves to practices at places like Ice Mountain in Burton and the State Fairgrounds just inside the city limits of Detroit. Only this year did the program receive a financial boost from the Clarkston Board of Education, who picks up the tab for game ice time.

The hockey team is the only one in Clarkston to be ranked in the top 10 all season. If the team gets by Port Huron Northern at regionals, a final four trip is very possible.

■ Cardiac Kids: A salute goes out to the Oxford boys basketball team for giving us the most dramatic game of the week in its 60-54 overtime win Tuesday over Ortonville-Brandon.

For two-and-a-half quarters, the Wildcats appeared dead while Brandon did anything it wanted. But Oxford pulled together and staged one of the most remarkable comebacks I have seen in recent years.

Clarkston matmen come up short in upset bid of Troy

BY BRAD MONASTIERE
STAFF WRITER

Thursday's battle between the Clarkston and Troy wrestling teams was billed as being a key meet in determining the Oakland Activities Association Division I champions.

Thanks to a couple key wins in the middle weights, the Colts took control of the league race with a hard-fought 40-25 win over the Wolves in a dual match at Clarkston. With the win, Troy improves to 7-1 overall and 3-0 in the OAA I. Clarkston is now 6-4 overall and 2-1 in the league.

After building a 17-0 lead, Troy withstood a Clarkston rally and won a couple of key, close matches that made the difference.

"There were so many pivotal matches. At 171, we had to get the pin, and we did," said a pleased Troy coach Gary Harlan. "Our wins at 145 and 152 were also huge."

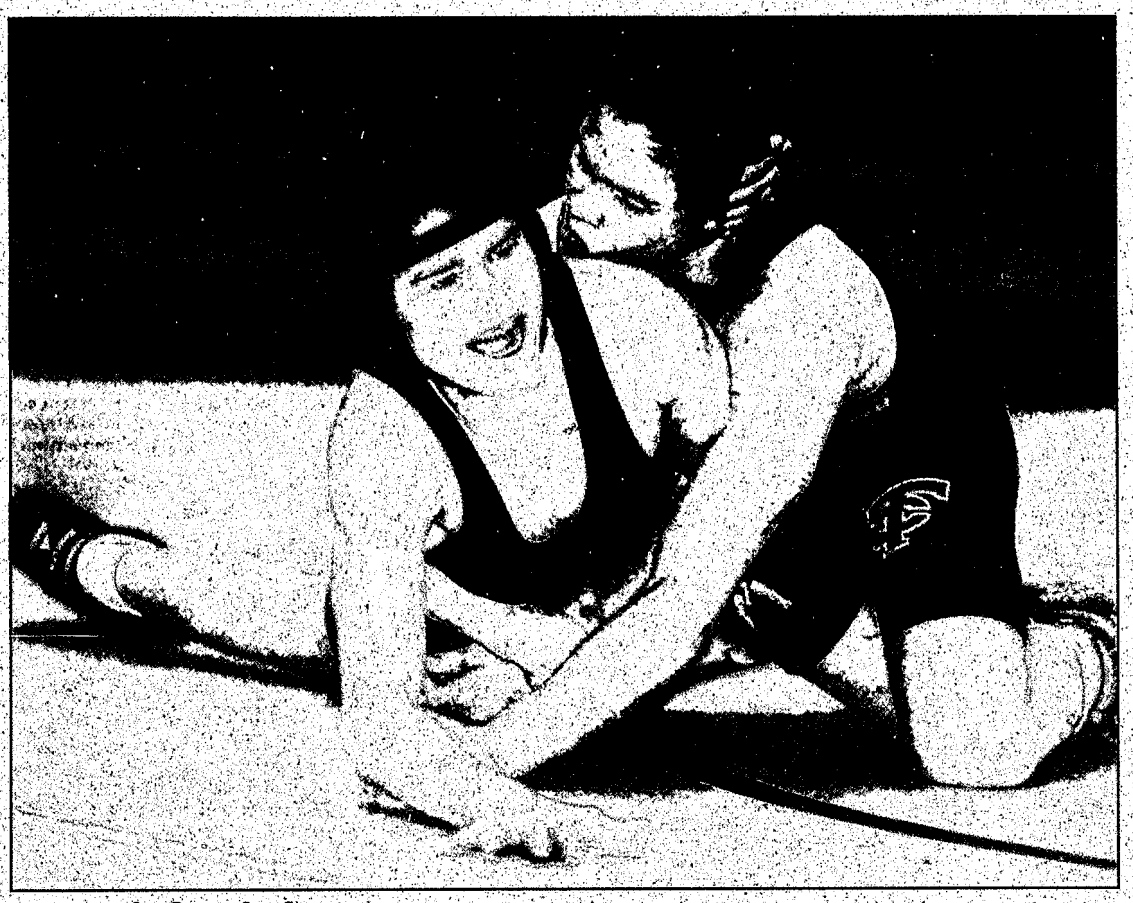

Clarkston racked up 15 straight points after digging its 17-0 hole thanks to wins by Nate Parker (10-7) at 130, Dave Endreszl (pinfall) at 135 and Dave Welanko (pin) at 140.

But Troy's Pat Lemay responded with an impressive 18-5 win over Clarkston's Brian Chism at 145, and Ruben Baraiac rallied for a clutch 6-4 win over Clarkston's Bret Gove at 152. Gove held a 4-3 lead late in the third period, but an escape and takedown in the final minute of the match wrapped up three key points for Troy.

Clarkston pulled back to within 24-19 thanks to an 11-3 win by freshman Clint DeGain at 160. But Troy responded with wins by John Elliott and Scott Ferstle at 171 and 189, respectively, to clinch the victory.

"We're in a good position," Harlan said. "We've got Rochester in a week and a half, then (Troy) Athens. Rochester beat us up pretty good last year, so we'll have to be ready for

Wolves title repeat hopes in severe jeopardy

BY MIKE SCOTT
SPECIAL WRITER

After winning the Oakland Activities Association Division II volleyball title last winter, the realization of not repeating is starting hover over Clarkston like a cloud of dust over Pigpen.

The Wolves suffered their second league loss of the season by falling to Ferndale 15-7, 15-13 Thursday night on the road, dropping Clarkston into third place in the seven-team division.

The Eagles (6-9-1, 2-3) took advantage of a strong passing attack and poor Clarkston defense to jump out to a quick lead in the first game and successful serving in the second to come back from a six-point deficit.

Senior Kelly Grogan finished the match with eight consecutive service points, including two aces. Most of those serves found a hole in the middle of the Clarkston defense.

"I don't know what happened, it was a good week of practice but (Ferndale) was the much better team tonight," said Clarkston coach Gordie Richardson. "They kept their poise and they passed the ball better."

Clarkston passed the ball better at the start of the second game in large part because they did a better job of getting the ball to 6-foot middle hitter Brittani Brewer, who led the Wolves with six kills and three blocks. The senior touched the ball only a couple times in the first game.

The Wolves led 9-6 when Brewer took over for a short period, recording a kill and block kill in between Jennie Winn's second ace of the match for a 12-6 lead.

It was 13-7 when Ferndale's Tiffany Grogan stepped up to serve and immediately helped to score three points. Richardson called two timeouts and made a pair of substitutions within a period of three points but it didn't help weather the storm as Ferndale came back to post the sweep.

Juniors Mary Warchuck and Andrea Gower combined for five additional kills and the Wolves missed only one serve in the second game. Winn and Falck combined to lead Clarkston in passing, but all too often they were unable to set up Brewer and Gower along the front line.

Katie Greenwood led Ferndale with seven kills and a block. Faye Lambros added four kills and three assists and Hayley Suratt recorded nine digs for the Eagles, who were focusing on the Clarkston match, according to Ferndale coach Amanda Rosman.

"We felt this was going to be a big challenge and we really wanted to win it," said Rosman. "I don't know if it was our best match of the season but it was certainly one of our better ones."

Richardson expressed his displeasure after the match because none of his players seemed to step into the leadership role, either on the court or in the huddle after the Wolves fell behind.

"We certainly need to generate more offense, especially when (Brewer) isn't in the front," he said. "Somebody needs to step up and say, 'I'm the leader', but no one did that."

The Wolves passed the ball well in a successful tournament last Saturday at Grand Blanc but Thursday they were tentative. At other times, Clarkston players failed to communicate and it was clear once the match was over that Ferndale had been the fundamentally better squad on that night.

"We just can't play not to lose," Richardson said.

Rosman said a key to her team's success was a drastically improved serving performance. Ferndale

Clarkston heats up to topple Mott

After a rough start, Clarkston's hockey team showed Waterford Mott why they are ranked in the state Division I Top 10. The red-hot Wolves exploded for three goals in 43 seconds in the second period en route to an 8-4 victory.

BY BRAD MONASTIERE
STAFF WRITER

For two periods, Waterford Mott was keeping up with the hottest hockey team in Oakland County — Clarkston.

Although Mott held a 4-3 lead late in the second period of its Wednesday night game, the Wolves exploded for three goals in 43 seconds, on its way to defeating the Corsairs 8-4 in Oakland Activities Association crossover game played at Viking Arena in Hazel Park.

The win improves Clarkston to 11-3-0 overall this season.

The three-goal flurry by Clarkston was started by junior forward Jon Bemis, who tipped in his second goal of the game on a play that was started by a long pass from Steve Janowiak to Jason Stoecker. Bemis tapped in a nice crossing pass by Stoecker to tie the game at 4-4.

Sophomore Nick Turner scored the game-winning goal for Clarkston, capping his first career hat trick late in the second period.

A key in Clarkston's six-game winning streak has been the play of its top line — Bemis and senior captains Anthony Facione and Bill Kalush. The three have combined for an eye-popping 50 points in the team's four games since the first of the year.

"The seniors are starting to be more responsible. We expect them to score, and they are scoring," said coach Bryan Krygier. "They all have a knack for finding the net on offense. They all want the puck on their stick and they know how to finish."

Facione and Kalush were actually held in check against Mott, recording only one assist apiece. But Clarkston's depth proved to be too much for the Corsairs to overcome.

Freshman Myles Purdy scored his first career goal, while junior Ryan "Tex" MacKinnon and senior Jason Stoecker also blasted in goals for Clarkston.

"The seniors are playing the way we expect them to play," Krygier said. "They are bringing up everyone else's level."

Clarkston outshot Mott 45-33 in the game. Senior Steve Badger got the win, and continues to put up impressive numbers. His 1.55 goals against average and .920 save percentage rank among the best in Oakland County.

His support from the team's young defensemen has also improved in recent weeks. The Wolves entered the season with only one experienced defenseman returning — senior co-captain Tom Newman. But the play of converted forward Jeremy Gabriel and freshmen Jimmy Lattanzi, Ron Knoebel and Purdy has improved, making the team much better off.

"I'm very pleased with how the defensemen have been doing," Krygier said. "It's easier to teach players a system when they haven't had one before. They don't have any old habits to fall back on, and they pick it up much quicker. That helps a lot."

The Wolves enter a rugged part of their schedule this week, taking on defending state champion Redford Catholic Central Wednesday at the State Fairgrounds. Saturday, the Wolves look to avenge a loss to Birmingham Unified in a game at Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook.

Shalom Baptist wins fourth straight, 64-41

Lake Orion Shalom Baptist's boys basketball team cruised to its fourth win in six games this season Friday night.

Shalom had four players score in double figures as it defeated Lapeer Cornerstone Christian Homeschoolers 64-41 at the Pontiac Howard O'Dell Center. Senior gaurd Eric Attwell led the Hawks with 16 points, while junior guard Richmond Shaw contributed 14 in the win.

Jim Dahlke led Cornerstone with a game-high 19 points.

Shalom travels to Warren Baptist Christian Tuesday.

Odai scores 26 as Lake Orion upsets Lahser

BY BRAD MONASTIERE
STAFF WRITER

In the first half of Friday's boys basketball game, Lake Orion coach Jim Manzo warned his team not to get giddy during its excellent start.

But by the end of the game, Manzo and the Dragons were giddiness personified as Lake Orion erased three straight frustrating losses to topple once-beaten Bloomfield Hills Lahser 47-39 in an Oakland Activities Association Division II game.

Thanks to some terrific team defense and amazing 3-point shooting by sophomore guard Odai Baylor, Lake Orion held off a third-quarter rally by the Knights to stage the upset and improve its record to 6-4 overall and 2-3 in the seven-team division.

Baylor's 23 first-half points sparked the Dragons to a 31-14 halftime lead. But the Knights (8-2, 4-1), who were in sole position of first place going in, responded with a 20-8 third quarter that made it a five-point lead for Lake Orion. But improved defense and ballhandling gave the Dragons the win.

"We told the kids at halftime that Lahser was too good not to make a run at us, and they did," said a sweaty Manzo after the game. "We learned from the last three games, that we lost by a total of eight points, to be more patient, play good defense and get to the foul line, which we did."

Longtime Lahser coach Chris Drogosch said the 17-point halftime deficit was too much for his team to overcome.

"It was a situation where we got back to within five, but we used so much energy to get to that point, we couldn't finish it off," he said. "We still got some decent shots in the fourth quarter, but our legs gave out on us."

Baylor was brilliant in the first half, at one point swishing seven straight 3-pointers that brought the entire Lake Orion crowd and bench to its feet with every shot. Baylor finished the night shooting 9-for-14 from the field, including 7-for-9 in threes, and tallied 26 points.

"I got great passes from my point guard Chad Day, and the guys set great screens for me," Baylor said. "Everything just came together for us tonight. It was a true team effort."

Baylor poured in 14 points in the first quarter, helping Lake Orion to a 16-10 lead. He nailed three more treys and the Dragons went on a 15-0 run in the second quarter to take a huge halftime lead.

"Odai was just unconscious," Manzo said. "He's capable of doing that. But give Lahser credit. They made adjustments in the second half and other guys stepped up."

Joe Finland, Lahser's 6-foot-7 senior center, was held to just one point in the first half, but asserted himself in the third quarter. He scored eight points in the quarter, including a pair of three-pointers as the Knights quickly sliced Lake Orion's lead to 39-34 entering the fourth.

Then the Knights turned as cold as the weather outside. They didn't score a point until Finland's baseline bankshot with 1:21 left in the game, which cut the lead to eight points. But the Knights would get no closer.

was over 90 percent as a team serving the ball and their placement was even more effective.

"It was a clean, relaxed passing attack and once we grabbed the momentum the girls thought they would win," said Rosman. "And the players that came off the bench were ready when they did get in the match."

This was the first dual meet Clarkston has had to wrestle without the services of heavyweight Jon Robinson, who is out for the season with a broken right leg. Aaron Karnes wrestled in Robinson's place against the Colts, and figures to be a tough customer for anyone. Harlan expressed his sympathy regarding Robinson's setback.

"I feel terrible for him, because he's such a good kid and means so much to that team," said Harlan. "Mike DeGain is the classiest coach I know. He's coached three of his kids, and they are all good kids, and that reflects on Mike."

Also registering wins for the Colts were Nick Best at 103, Danny Mason at 112, Andrew Dixon at 119, Jimmy Mason at 125, and Mark Ottney at heavyweight.

Chris Jaroneski, wrestling in place of Pat DeGain, who was held out to rest an injured thumb, recorded a 39-second pinfall win at 215 for Clarkston.

The Wolves are off until Wednesday when they travel to Rochester Adams to take on their long-time nemesis. Adams, league and county champion the past two years, has fallen on hard times this year, but this rivalry still ranks as one of the best in Oakland County, among all sports.

Coach Jesse Heck stuck with five players through the entire second half and overtime, and all five made huge plays that made the difference.

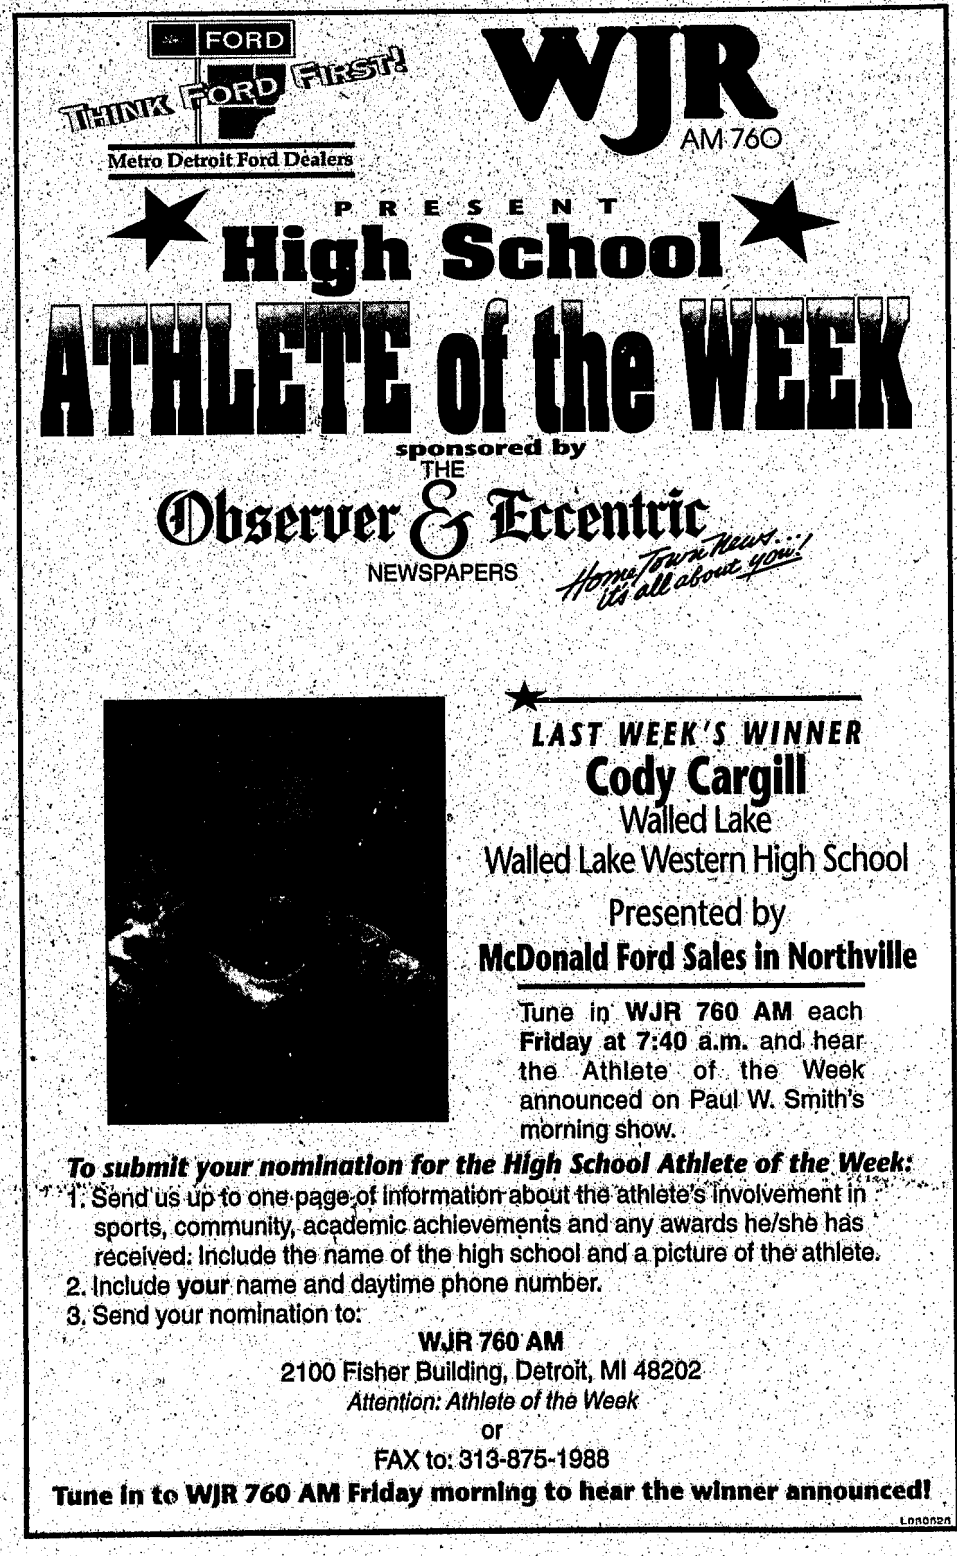

It's clear this team is much better when junior center Mike Spencer is active offensively. He has the ability to overpower most of his opponents in the low post, and knows how to finish. His inside work draws in defenders, leaving sharpshooter Dave Inman open for threes.

I was also impressed with the overall scrappiness of Joel Gallo, Dave Rayner and Frank Boni. They did all the little things, like make strong bounce passes, setting wide screens and boxing out that made the difference in the team's 23-point comeback. Although those players didn't score the points Inman and Spencer did, Oxford would not have won without them.

A win like that can help jumpstart a season, and the Wildcats show no sign of slowing down. I also should thank my man Dave Inman for the nice welcome he gave me after the game. It's great to be here, Dave.

We're a whole lot closer to home.

Whether you're looking for a job or looking for someone to help you get the job done, your Hometown Classifieds are the place to look.

Let's face it, if you're hiring these days you know how hard it is to find just the right person. You don't want someone from three counties away who has to spend hours battling traffic—not with the weather they're predicting for this winter.

You want to look for people right here, maybe not in the neighborhood, but close enough to arrive fresh and ready to work.

It's the same when you are making a job change. You want something close enough to keep you out of the '90s gridlock that's going on out there.

You want enough time in the morning to get a calm start and you don't want to spend half your paycheck on gas. You, too, would probably like something close to home.

Well, we have the answer for you.

Hometown Classifieds—the classifieds in The Observer & Eccentric, HomeTown, and Mirror Newspapers— is an employment powerhouse. We list hundreds of jobs; many of them are right in your own backyard!

We've put them online, too, so you can access them anytime at oeonline.com

It's a wonderful thing!—thousands of employers and employees getting together through our Hometown Classifieds.

You could be one of them!

HONDA INSIGHT COMBINES GAS AND ELECTRICITY IN A FUEL-SAVING UP-TO-DATE DESIGN

Honda hybrid: The Honda Insight, above, uses both gasoline and electricty to achieve its 61 to 70 mph performance. Below is a look at the dash board.

BY KEN VAN STEENKISTE
STAFF WRITER

Auto manufacturers are betting on what effect the events of the coming century will have on their industry. And you can be sure that it is a bet they don't want to lose.

The millions car companies sink into research and development yield the vehicles of the future. A wrong forecast of what market conditions will be like tomorrow may mean billions in lost sales and wasted research dollars.

With that in mind, consider Honda's Insight: a car for which the term "revolutionary" seems to have been invented.

The car — a small two seater debuting in a market dominated by truck-zillas — will surely have its detractors. SUV drivers from coast to coast will split their sides with laughter when they hear about the Insight's 1.5 liter three cylinder engine. Listen, you can almost them laughing now.

Say what you will about its size, the car is revolutionary nevertheless, because the world has not seen anything like it.

The one thing about the Insight that's no laughing matter: its 70 miles per gallon rating. It gets slightly less in the city, 61 mpg. But that's still more than double the miles per gallon most conventional automobiles can claim. In fact, if you drive a SUV, that's probably a quarter of the average fuel consumption you're getting now.

The car charges it's batteries by using energy derived from braking, there's no need to plug it in anywhere. It's small — a two seater — but sporty looking. It's not one of those goofy egg-shaped electric cars from the eighties.

And it's not a go-cart.

"If your read the reviews the Insight has gotten in Car and Driver and the other auto magazines, you know that this is a substantial vehicle, the (integration of) the electric engine is seamless. It performs like any other Honda," said Art Garner, public relations manager for American Honda.

Garner compares the Insight's acceleration and handling to Honda's 1.5-liter Civic Hatchback.

With its affordable sticker price hovering around $20,000 and mainstream marketing (you can order one at any Honda dealership), the Insight has environmentalists jumping for joy. It has already garnered the accolades of the Sierra Club, a 108-year-old environmental organization that has never given awards for environmentally-friendly consumer products. Until now.

"After years of criticizing automotive companies, we began to realize that many were about to start making vehicles that were really cleaner," said Daniel Becker, director of the Sierra Club's Global Warming and Energy Program based in Washington, D.C..

For years car companies having been playing a chicken-and-egg game with so-called "alternative fuel" vehicles, trying to discern what will come first — vehicles like the Insight or consumer demand for them.

To Becker, the answer to that question is simple.

"If the auto industry has a product and they want to sell it they need to create a market," he said.

So far, according to Garner, that market demand has shown itself in areas of the country with higher-than-average incomes and levels of education. And, of course, California, with its pollution-wary public and stricter air-qaulity rules.

Honda is expecting more places to fall in line with California. The company is essentially betting that within the foreseeable future there will be a sea change in the forces that drive the auto market, and this change will increase the demand for vehicles such as the Insight.

That will depend on a lot of factors, not the least of which "is the price of gasoline," Garner said.

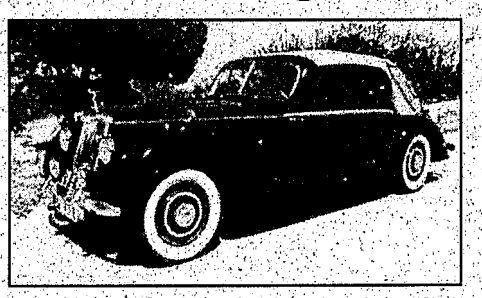

1951 Riley is unique British classic touring car

BY RICK FEIBUSCH
© AUTOWIRE.NET - SAN FRANCISCO

Al Edridge of Palos Verde, CA was born and raised in England in the 1950s and started looking for a unique British classic car to restore in the late-1980s. He spotted a classified ad for a reasonably priced 1951 Riley convertible. Al remembered these swoopy beauties from his youth so he grabbed it even though it was only about 80% complete and in many pieces.

The body and chassis were loaded on a trailer and brought out to Riley Club member Hema Ratnayane's house in Altadena, CA for refurbishment. There the body was removed from the chassis and the work began.

The chassis was sandblasted and powder coated while the body was checked for rot and damage. Though most of the wood was sound, the main timber sections down by the rocker panels that attach the body to the frame were rotted and needed replacement. When the body was ready to drop onto the frame it was discovered that all of the rubber blocks, metal pins, and attachment pieces needed to be replaced as well, so the job slowed down until the parts arrived. In the meantime, Al rebuilt the engine, retaining the original poured babbit bearings. The engine was first tested resting on it's oil pan on the garage floor and roared to life without a hitch! It's run well ever since.

The finished and painted body was then installed onto the chassis. The restoration took about four years to complete, partially because Al and Hema Ratnayane spent a lot of time looking for the "right" parts. All of the body parts were plated and painted off of the car and were fitted as they were needed. Al Edridge's Riley is beautifully restored and runs as good as it looks. The 2.5 liter OHV four can propel it's rather large and heavy carriage (about the size of a Kaiser Darrin) at reasonably high speed, though one must master the torque curve and know exactly where to shift. In fact, the whole car takes a while to get used to. It steers hard and brakes hard and then there's all of that shifting . . . But performance is not what the car is all about, though when you put it into the perspective of the other cars available in 1951, it's no slouch!

Positions available in the health-care field

Looking for a well-paying career where the "Help Wanted" sign is out all the time? Consider the health field. Prospects are diverse, and the hiring forecast looks good through the next decade.

Nursing is by far the largest health-care occupation with R.N.s holding about 2 million jobs as of 1996, according to the Bureau of Statistics 1998-99 Occupational Outlook Handbook. It's considered one of five occupations to have the most jobs. Although two out of three R.N.s work in a hospital setting, the fastest area of growth is predicted for home health-care and nursing homes.

Job opportunities also include public health, occupational health (industrial nurses), supervisors, nurse practitioners, and case managers. The average annual salary for nurses in 1996 was $44,400.

"If you're a nurse, there's really a wide spectrum of opportunities," said Karen Andrews, director of human resources for Henry Ford Hospital Downriver and Western Regions.

A nursing career can be structured to fit a nurse's home environment, a plus factor for young mothers and fathers or veteran nurses wanting to ease up on their hours. Three out of 10 nurses work part-time, and there's a variety of shift work — mornings, afternoons, nights and weekends.

"There's a lot of flexibility in scheduling that can make it attractive," said Dahlia Klein, rehabilitation manager and case management coordinator at Botsford Hospital.

As baby boomers age and medical advances allow more people with critical problems to survive, the need for physical and occupational therapists will grow, particularly in the out-patient and home-care area. "Health care is changing. More of the care is done less in the hospital, more in the home," said Andrews.

Radiology technicians also will be needed, from the basic radiographer, or x-ray tech, to a mammography technician. The latter is becoming a specialty area, said Andrews, especially with government regulations requiring health care facilities to be mammography compliant to a specified degree.

The Bureau of Statistics 1998-99 Occupational Outlook Handbook lists faster-than-average growth for the following health careers through 2006. (earnings based on 1996-97 figures):

- Occupational therapist. Most jobs in rehabilitation and psychiatric hospitals. Other settings include offices and clinics, home health-care, nursing homes, community mental health, adult day care, and residential care. Annual base salary: $42,700.
- Physical therapist. One of the fastest growing fields. Competition into accredited physical therapy programs is intense. By 2001, all accredited physical

Find ways to make your job less boring

GEORGE HAYES

Q. Sometimes I become bored with my job. The people are great and the money is fine. How can I determine whether to stay or go?

A. I'm convinced that, after about two years, the average worker has been exposed to most of what is "new" in a new position. By this time, most skills and procedures have been mastered. The faces have become pretty familiar. For most of us, the beat goes on with only minor variations.

There are, of course, millions of exceptions to this dismal scenario, particularly in growing companies. New products, new procedures, new computer systems and new employees keep things interesting. Most organizations, however, are not able to keep everyone challenged on an on-going basis. For individuals, change is often incremental, requiring only minor adaptations to get the job done. Your original excitement evolves into ennui.

So what are your options?

Stay where you are, but try to become reinvigorated by enhancing your work. Figure out new ways to do old things. Ask for more or different assignments. Volunteer to work in another area for a while. Come up with some suggestions to make or save the company money. Arrive at a different time. Stay late.

Stay where you are and accept a measure of boredom as an integral part of the job. In many industries, therapy programs will be master's. Annual base salary: $48,000.

- Radiology technologist. Field includes radiographers, radiation therapy technologists and sonographers. Jobseekers will face competition since hospitals have begun to merge radiology with nuclear medicine technology. Ann Engelgau, manager of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Services at Botsford Hospital, has worked in physical therapy for 21 years. In spite of regulations imposed by managed care, she still finds her career rewarding. "Oh, absolutely. The core is still one-on-one patient involvement. You're assisting someone with returning to productive living. That's what it's all about."

there will always be some slow periods. Understand that sticking with it through the tedium is as important as hustling when things are hot. It's part of the job description. It is a skill.

Leave, but understand that you will probably face boredom again within the next few years. Even in growing companies, things eventually settle down. An organization's drive to routinize and standardize will always exist. Even change can become predictable. Also, you can sometimes make yourself busier and still be bored.

The inevitable task of managing boredom requires a hard look at personal goals and needs. No job is going to be stimulating every minute of the day. But when time just crawls by, week after week, it might be time to reassess.

Q. An interviewer said he wanted to walk out to the parking lot with me to get a look at my car. Why?

A. The interviewer could have been a car aficionado who just came back from the Auto Show, a person with some stupid ideas about how to evaluate people, or simply a loon.

We occasionally run into managers who believe that the kind of car a person drives and how clean it is "tells a lot" about a person. It's their own clever little interviewing technique. However, there is no research in existence which correlates job performance and car model or cleanliness.

The employment world is full of goofy little screening devices that have little job-related validity. Years ago, when smoking was less taboo, I knew a general manager who wouldn't hire anyone who smoked a pipe. His reasoning: "Anyone who has time to fool around with one of those things won't concentrate on the job he has to do." Pipe smokers apparently can't focus very well.

I went through a stressful interview once in which the big question was: What would you rather have, money, power or fame? My answer supposedly told the manager everything she needed to gauge my odds of success.

There is actually a "right" answer to this little gem, but I guess I blew it.

Some quirky little questions are actually illegal, but that doesn't stop people from using them. One Southfield interviewer always wants to know the occupations of candidates' parents. Why? Financially successful parents raise better kids, of course.

Silly ideas like these only reflect the tastes and biases of the interviewer and have zero value in assessing suitability for a job.

Furthermore, they really tee me off — a money hungry kid from blue-collar stock who drives a dirty car and sometimes enjoys a pipe.

Lead paint need not be removed

HOUSE DETECTIVE

BARRY STONE

I'm buying a home that is 35 years old, and the seller says she's not aware if there's any lead paint present in the house.

The man who inspected the home did not reveal any lead paint in his report because he doesn't test for it.

There is no law requiring removal of lead paint from older homes. There is, however, a disclosure requirement. Sellers must divulge any knowledge regarding the presence of lead paint. This rule, however, is of marginal benefit, since most sellers have no way of knowing the composition of paint in their homes.

Lead paint is almost certain to be found in most older homes, but professional testing is needed to be certain. Some home inspectors perform lead tests. You can find them in the Yellow Pages under the heading of Lead Testing and Consulting.

Prior to 1978, most wall and trim paints contained lead, which improved the ease of application and durability. According to most older painters, the quality of paint has not been the same since lead was eliminated.

The mere presence of lead paint does not pose a significant health hazard, because actual exposure to lead toxicity only occurs: (1) when particles of the material are inhaled, as when painted surfaces are sanded; or (2) when chips of paint are ingested, such as when small children teethe on the woodwork.

If you plan to remove any of the old finish, have the paint tested before commencing work. If lead content is verified, removal should be assigned to a qualified professional.

And be sure that neither you nor your kids chew on the woodwork.

E-mail your questions to Barry@housedetective.com

Hometown Village is entry to Waterstone

First of two parts

Hometown Village, single-family site condominiums, is the most affordable entry-point to Waterstone, a master-planned, resort-style community in Oxford Township.

Buyers can get into Hometown Village for just under $160,000.

That not only buys a home but access to several private lakes, a community beach, a golf course, rolling topography and open spaces in one of the largest residential developments under construction in the area.

Waterstone, a former gravel operation, is bounded by Lapeer Road (M-24), Burdick/ Seymour Lake Road, Dunlap Road and Granger Road.

Hometown Village's entrance is off Burdick/ Seymour Lake Road about 1-1/2 miles west of Lapeer Road and downtown Oxford.

"I think this will be one of the most exclusive neighborhoods you can live in in Oxford with all the amenities we're offering, with the lakes, with the golf course," said Katie Laforet, sales manager for Delcor.

"We'll be priced at the lowest end," she added. "I think it will be a fabulous investment."

Delcor intends to build 160 homes in Hometown Village, 88 in the initial phase.

Seven floor plans are available – three ranches, four colonials.

Prices range from $158,900 for a ranch of 1,050 square feet with two bedrooms and two baths (one of each on the main floor, the others in the basement) to $204,900 for a colonial of 1,800 square feet with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

At those price points, the plans are functional but don't contain a lot of features normally found in new residential construction.

Standard features at base price in all plans at Hometown Village include two-car garage, basement, dishwasher and carpeting throughout.

Ten-foot-high ceilings and eight-foot-high doors, standard features, will give the homes a more spacious appearance, Laforet said.

A fireplace ($3,500) and air conditioning (about $3,000) are extra. Buyers may add 100-150 square feet to the great room ($7,900) and finish the basement ($23,900-$24,900) to include a rec room, bedroom and a full bath.

Vinyl siding is the primary exterior material.

Quality construction is a hallmark with Delcor, said Ron Richards, superintendent on site.

"We're proud of ISO-9001," he said. "It's a standard we maintain over building systems throughout. Every one of our contractors has to provide us a checklist so we can check workmanship. We make sure it's built to out standards."

"We're the first home builder in America to be ISO-9001 certified," Laforet said. "It's finally a way to measure quality."

"We're giving them great curb appeal," Richards said. "From a mechanical standpoint, they will be well built. We'll definitely guarantee a quality package."

All kinds of people will be attracted to Hometown Village, Laforet projects, from first-time new builders to families with children to empty-nesters. "We believe we'll hit all markets," she said.

"You have the I-75 corridor, you're close to recreation (Bald Mountain State Recreation Area), close to shopping and close to work," Richards said.

"I think the Oxford schools are pretty much sought after, pretty well established," he added. "You still have kind of a rural flavor out in the sticks but still somewhat near the city."

Models under construction are expected to be ready by mid-February, homes for occupancy by spring. Delcor has a sales office on site.

Hometown Village will be served by Oxford water, a sewer system and sidewalks.

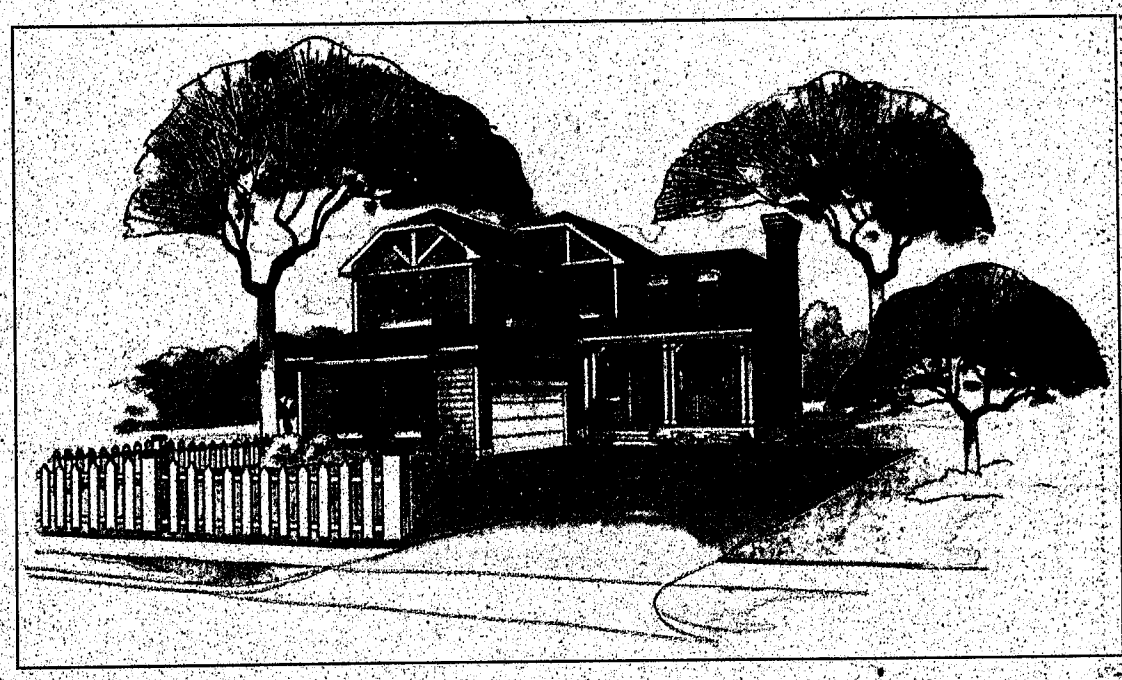

The property tax rate is $26.81 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price on new construction. That means the owners of a $180,000 home there would pay about $2,400 the first year.

The monthly maintenance fee of $40 includes trash and snow removal. Owners are responsible for maintaining their own lawns.

Although a few lots in Hometown Village go for base price, most carry a premium ranging from $1,000 to $10,000.

Next week, we'll explore the mid-range-priced product in Waterstone offered by Ivanhoe-Huntley/ MJC in Lakeridge and the upper-end product offered by Boulder Pointe Homes in the Shores and the Bluffs

The sales office at Hometown Village of Waterstone, (248) 969-3200, is open 1-6 p.m. weekdays, noon to 6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, closed Thursdays.

Wellington: This colonial with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths is one of seven models offered by Delcor at Hometown Village of Waterstone.

No matter where you build the Oakland, it's impossible to look at the tile roof, stucco walls and generously windowed exterior without thinking of sunshine.

High arched windows on every exterior wall of this contemporary Mediterranean-style home add drama, inside and out, while capturing light from every angle.

In the front, a low stucco wall separates the driveway from a lushly planted entry courtyard. Stately columns flank the lofty gabled entryway.

Viewed from the rear, the Oakland is equally attractive. The exterior of the hexagonal great room, graced by high-arched multi-paned windows on three sides, has a carousel feel to it. A patio adds to the effect, wrapping around the entire back expanse.

The spacious country kitchen is open to the vaulted great room, with only an eating bar between. Other amenities include generous counter and cupboard space, a step-in pantry, built-in range and oven, and an additional oven and microwave combination.

At the juncture of kitchen and great room, an open stairwell spirals up to a wide vaulted loft that is open to the great room at the rear and the entryway in front. Side walls are six feet tall but the loft is much higher at the center. To convert this space to a cozy library retreat, simply bring in some bookshelves and a couple of easy chairs.

Bedrooms are located at opposite ends of the Oakland. The sumptuous master suite features a huge walk-in closet, oversize spa tub, skylight, shower, private water closet and twin vanities.

The other two bedrooms share another large bathroom that also has two vanities. Utilities are convenient to the bedrooms as well as the garage.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $20 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Oakland 10-037 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring nearly 300 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Getting that first house

So, you're earning a good salary, the future is bright and you rent because owning a home is too much responsibility.

Consider buying.

"If you don't own a home, you're missing out on a good investment that 67 percent of Americans have already taken advantage of," says Richard Roll, president of American Homeowners Association. "And you're probably spending too much money on rent and income taxes."

For more info, go to http://www.ahahome.com

Of course, home ownership may not make sense if you anticipate moving in the next year or two, or a job change is imminent. But don't overlook the advantages.

Here's how to get your priorities straight.

If you've got a steady job and a decent credit history, you're a prime candidate for a home loan.

To figure out what you can afford, use what lenders call the 28 percent guideline. Generally speaking, a lender will recommend keeping your monthly mortgage payment to less than 28 percent of your monthly income before taxes, give or take.

If you're already spending nearly that much on rent, your landlord is the only one making money on the deal.

Scared by the idea of forking over 10 percent of the price in a down payment?

Don't worry, there are various first-time homebuyer loan programs that only require only 3-5 percent in a down payment.

And if you're worried about the monthly payment, don't forget to factor in the tax savings.

Three major items are deductible from your federal income taxes – mortgage loan interest, including any late fees; purchase points, also known as loan origination fees; and, property taxes. Just the mortgage interest alone could slice several thousand dollars off your taxable income.

Be creative in finding money for the down payment.

Let's say you're getting married. American couples spend $16,000 on the average wedding. How about taking half of the budget and devoting that to the down payment on a home?

Chances are you'll still have a great wedding but you'll have your own place to go to after the honeymoon.

Or on a more modest scale, how about saving some money right now?

Start watching what you spend every month on vacations, clothes, sporting equipment, restaurant meals and other discretionary expenses. Put yourself on a budget and sock away some money.

Don't want the hassle of yard work or cleaning the gutters?

Perhaps a townhouse or condominium is for you. Apart from reducing your maintenance hassles, you may find condos or townhouses more reasonably priced than single-family, detached homes. Chances are you'll find other people in your age group living there, too.

GMC to 'attend' home shows

General Motors plans to expand its show appearances.

In an attempt to connect with customers on their home turf, GMC will participate in nearly 30 home and garden shows across the country this year.

The Detroit show runs March 23-26 at Cobo Center.

"Homelife is GMC's new promotional platform that targets consumers interested in home improvement, decoration and gardening projects," said Bob Kraut, Pontiac-GMC director of advertising and sales promotions.

"GMC trucks are seen as capable tools for people who enjoy these hands-on activities. The partnership will further enhance the association between GMC trucks and home do-it-yourselfers," he said.

In addition to the home and garden events, GMC will promote its homelife association through advertising, web marketing and other partnerships.

At each show, GMC will showcase its six nameplate brands through a 60-by-60 foot traveling product display. Each GMC vehicle exhibited will be outfitted to reflect various home activities such as gardening or home improvement.

Larger-than-life projection screens will project homelife related photography. Product experts will be on-site to answer vehicle questions.

Through GMC, Michael Holigan, homebuilder and television personality, will give consumers an opportunity to win an authentic Michael Holigan-built home deck, up to a $6,000 retail value.

Starting Jan. 1 through Dec. 31, 2000, consumers may enter the sweepstakes at designated GMC dealerships and GMC-sponsored home and garden shows. In addition, Michael Holigan CD ROMS will be raffled at each home and garden show.

Consumers can find official sweepstakes rules at www.gmc.com

The home and garden event sponsorship will help GMC market to a broad consumer base it says has high quality standards, pride in their environment and accomplishments, and a need for functional, reliable vehicles.

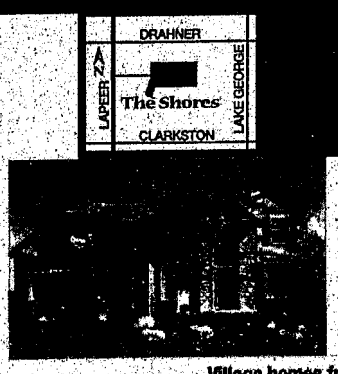

Consumers with these needs represent a significant market opportunity and have a strong propensity to purchase GMC vehicles, the company says.

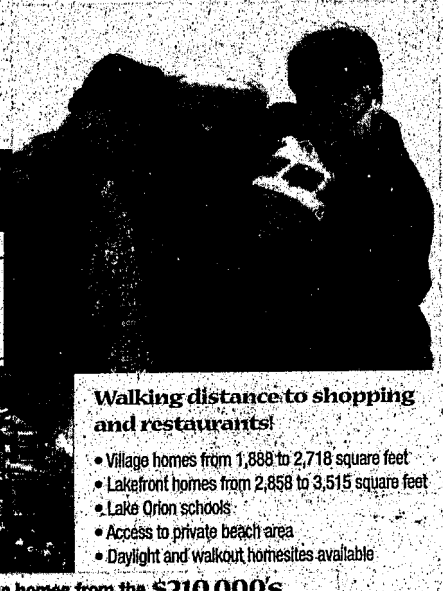

"This innovative partnership works well with GMC's brand positioning because home and garden hobbyists seek products and tools that are the best and offer more capability than may be needed," said Kraut.

Septic systems need some TLC

If you're part of the 25 percent of rural and suburban homeowners that have a septic system, isn't it about time you got to know how it works?

Though not usually top of mind when you think of household maintenance, your septic system shouldn't be overlooked.

Unlike a city sewage system, septic systems are the responsibility of the individual homeowner. A septic system acts as a safe and natural way of collecting, treating and disposing of wastewater and sewage.

And while septic systems may not be the most glamorous topic, they do deserve attention.

"Even though a septic system is an efficient waste management unit, it can lead to major headaches for homeowners if not properly maintained and treated," said Charles Steward, Manager of Biotechnology Research and Development for Reckitt & Colman Inc.

"When it comes to septic systems, remember that a little care and maintenance go a long way," he added.

Homeowners should, first and foremost, know how their septic system operates, Steward said. The drains and sewage pipes carry the wastewater from the house to a large underground collection tank that is usually made of concrete or reinforced fiberglass.

Bacteria, and the enzymes they produce, are at the very heart of the septic system. In the tank, enzymes and beneficial bacteria digest much of the solid organic waste or break it down, turning a portion of it into liquids and gases.

This allows treated wastewater to flow freely out of the tank into a distribution box where it is carried along by outlet pipes to specially constructed drain fields for dispersal into the soil.

If not properly maintained, excess sewage solids can build up in the tank, eventually causing the system to reverse, break down and possibly back up into bathrooms, kitchen sinks and laundry basins.

Steward offers homeowners the following steps to help keep a septic system healthy:

■ Use septic friendly products. Avoid pouring straight bleach, left-over paints and concentrated cleaners down the drain when cleaning up.

■ Have your septic tank checked by a pumper every three to five years, and pumped when necessary.

■ Always remember not to flush napkins, paper towels, cigarette butts and other non-biodegradable products since they cannot be broken down easily.

■ Avoid dumping grease and oil down the drain after cooking.

■ Use a septic system treatment, such as Rid-X® Septic System Treatment, once a month to help keep beneficial bacteria and enzyme levels high.

The treatment's bacteria and enzymes work to break up sewage within the tank. In times of high water use or increased use of household cleaners, homeowners can help protect themselves by increasing treatments to twice a month.

■ Use the water saving functions on dishwashers and washing machines. If possible, limit your laundry loads to two daily, giving your septic system a break in between.

■ Throw garbage in bags versus using the garbage disposal to minimize build-up.

■ Keep a diagram of where the septic system is located in case an accident does happen and the system needs to be inspected immediately.

Burglars generally fear home lighting

(NUI) - How safe is your home from burglary? What can you do to prevent unlawful entry?

Crime experts say the best prevention – especially from a cost standpoint – is adequate lighting, because burglars prefer darkness to daylight.

According to the U.S. Department of Justice, the average burglary nets the criminal $1,148. For far less money and a little bit of your time and effort, you can lessen the chance of being victimized.

The experts at Regent Lighting Corp., a safety and security lighting company, offer some suggestions.

Check your vulnerability by answering the following questions:

■ Are each of your entranceways sufficiently lit?

If not, consider mounting automatic dusk-to-dawn or motion-activated lights in these areas. These types of lights are energy-efficient and work to scare off intruders as well as to welcome guests.

Dusk-to-dawn lights turn on automatically at night, then turn themselves off again in the morning. They provide security lighting for the outside of your home even when you're away. They also save energy by turning off automatically.

Motion-activated lights turn themselves on whenever motion is detected, scaring off intruders as well as welcoming guests. Motion-activated lights also provide energy savings, since they only come on when you really need them.

Regent offers motion-activated lights in many different styles, including solid brass decorative lanterns for your entry, as well as floodlights for the corner of your home.

■ Are lights mounted high enough so crooks can't unscrew the bulbs? Eave-mounted, motion-activated floodlights can solve this problem.

■ Does your street have adequate lighting? Report any burnt-out streetlights right away. Check with your local public works department if lighting isn't currently offered in your neighborhood.

■ Can your power be shut down? Keep your electrical access box locked so that intruders can't cut the power and kill your lights.

■ Nosy neighbor or best ally? Know your neighbors well enough so that they would recognize a strange car in your driveway or an unwanted person around your property. And do the same for them.

■ Are you helping potential intruders? Most burglars are opportunists. Don't help them break into your home. Store any ladders or tools that could help an intruder in a locked tool shed, garage or basement.

■ Does your home look occupied when you are not at home? Consider new, motion-activated floodlights that turn on a lamp inside your home when the outside light is activated.

Mortgage rate update

Mortgage rates rose in the Detroit area last week except for the 1-year ARM, according to a survey of local lenders by Freddie Mac and www.MortgageDetroit.com:

■ 30-year fixed mortgages averaged 8.21 percent with 0.9 fees and points last week, up from 8.16 percent with 0.9 fees and points the previous week.

■ 15-year fixed mortgages averaged 7.79 percent with 0.9 fees and points last week, up from 7.74 percent with 0.9 fees and points the previous week.

■ One-year adjustable rate mortgages averaged 6.53 percent with 1.1 fees and points last week, down from 6.63 percent with 0.9 fees and points the previous week.

■ One Year Ago the average 30-year was at 6.83 and 1.0 points and fees, 15-year 6.46 and 1.0 points and fees and 1-year ARM 5.56 and 1.1 points and fees.

How to weather power outage

If the power goes out, check the fuse box to see if a blown fuse or tripped circuit breaker is the cause of the outage. Check with neighbors to see if their power is out.

Avoid downed power lines. Call 911 if you spot any.

Keep refrigerators and freezers shut to help preserve the food inside.

Turn off and unplug lights and appliances to prevent electrical overload when power is restored

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"IT NEEDS WORK!"

Have you ever seen this headline on a newspaper advertisement of a house for sale? The same ad may read, "handyman special for sale." We are talking, of course, about the home that requires an investment in time, and money to put it in shape. If you own a home that needs work, you have a basic decision to make when you put your home on the market. Will you do the work and sell it for a higher price or will you let the buyers purchase it for a below market price and fix it up themselves? Before you enter into such a decision, it may be helpful to consider the following questions:

WHAT WORK IS NECESSARY AND HOW MUCH WILL IT COST?

Are the improvements major or minor? If at all possible, you should pay for the work yourself and realize a higher sale price if the work needed is only a matter of decor and/or cleanliness. These would include paint, wallpaper, and perhaps carpeting and window treatment. If the home has to overcome some deficiency such as improper electrical service, the need for a new roof, or a kitchen that requires a complete updating, these tasks may be best left up to the next owner.

HOW MUCH TIME IS NEEDED TO MAKE REQUIRED IMPROVEMENTS?

Can you make the necessary improvements and still meet your relocation timetable? The timing of your sale is important. Interest rates and the health of the local economy do affect the amount of buyer demand for your home. If you are in a strong market presently, you may not want to take on improvements that might not be completed until your present hot market has cooled off. Or, if the real estate market is rather predictable for the foreseeable future, it may be worthwhile to take the time to do the necessary fix up and clean up.

HOW WILL THESE IMPROVEMENTS AFFECT THE SALE PRICE?

Is it worth the extra time, effort, and costs to fix up your home prior to sale? You will need three numbers; the potential sale price without improvements, the actual cost of improvements, and the potential sale price after improvements are completed. Don't make this analysis without the help of a professional. Be sure to use the services of a Realtor when you decide so sell your home. Your Realtor's valuable experience and market knowledge can help you make your selling decision with confidence.
