Residents to vote on EMS upgrade

■ Voters will be asked in August to approve a millage renewal for Independence Township Fire Department as well as a 1-mill tax increase for Advanced Life Support services.

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

Independence Township voters will decide on a fire millage renewal during the August primary election as well as a 1-mill increase to upgrade Emergency Medical Services to Advanced Life Support status.

Township board members approved the ballot language at their meeting Tuesday. The renewal is for the 2.4 mills that is currently levied for fire and EMS operations. The fire millage was set at 3 mills several years ago, but has been rolled back continuously because of the Headlee Amendment. Both the renewal and increase are for four years.

The two levies will be separate items on the ballot. If both are approved, the new levy would be 3.4 mills. That means a person with a home with a taxable value of $100,000 would pay $100 more per year for a total of $340 for fire and emergency medical services. One mill generates $1,066 million per year.

The money from the millage increase would be used to hire 12 new firefighters who also are paramedics, buy advanced life support equipment and two ambulances. The cost would be approximately $1.15 million. Sometime during the second year of operation, the department expects to begin getting reimbursements from insurance companies for the ambulance runs.

At a special meeting last week, fire department personnel presented the need for better emergency medical services and some options with projected costs. If the proposed millage passes, it would pay for the most comprehensive of the plans presented.

Currently, the township relies on a private ambulance company to transport patients to the hospital. However, sometimes patients must wait while the vehicle comes from outside of the township, which is unacceptable to fire personnel. Those minutes are critical to life or quality of life in the event of a

TEACHER OF THE YEAR

Top educator takes the prize — a car

What a sentiment: Pine Knob students hold signs.

BY SUSAN B. TAUBER
STAFF WRITER
stauber@oe.homecomm.net

The announcement of the Clarkston Community Foundation's Teacher of the Year winner had all the elements of a first-class event.

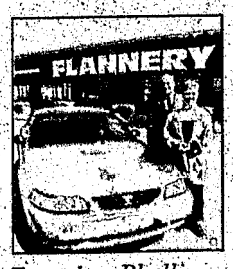

Clarkston High School trumpeters were trumpeting, dignitaries were smiling, family members were beaming, young students were chanting and the winner — Phyllis Ness of Pine Knob Elementary School — looked like she just might float away on a cloud of happiness and surprise.

How perfect that Ness teaches her first-grade class in a portable room outside the school building. It allowed youngsters to line the Pine Knob hallways and the outside entrance before she made her entrance into the building. Every student held a sign that read, "Mrs. Ness is the best!"

And waiting outside the media center to give her an extra-special greeting were her husband, Bud, and her children, Ben, a Wayne State University student; Maggie, a CHS sophomore; and Sophie, a Pine Knob fifth-grader.

"The principal (Kathleen Leh) called up Friday to tell us Phyllis was selected as Teacher of the Year," said her husband. "I don't know how we managed to keep it a secret over the weekend, but we did."

"This is unbelievable. I feel like queen for a day," Ness exclaimed. "I hope you don't want a speech."

But she did go on to give many thanks. She also mentioned the other deserving finalists in the competition. They are Karen Yakmalian, fifth-grade teacher at Clarkston Elementary; Maureen Moss, general education partner at North Sashabaw Elementary; and Jodee Cobeil-Blaszkowski, first-grade teacher at Independence Elementary.

"When I learned who the finalists were, I felt so proud and honored to be in their company," said Ness, a teacher in Clarkston's school district for eight years. She began teaching in Toledo in 1974.

Clarkston Foundation President Sherry Regiani explained how the selection process worked. This year's competition was for kindergarten through fifth-grade teachers. The nominated teacher had to be employed by Clarkston Community Schools for at least five years. Students, staff, family or friends could make a nomination by filling out information in an extensive packet. The nominated teacher also had to complete some forms.

Then the selection committee reviewed the nominations and made classroom visits to observe the teachers. Committee members were Dave Harrison, Sheila Ritter, Mel Vaara, Don Kevern, Larry Stout, Natalie Hewko and Bill McGregor.

Candidates file for local political races

Leaders in Independence and Springfield townships will be chosen during the August primary as every candidate for office filed as a Republican.

A couple of local incumbents have some competition while a couple of new trustee faces could grace township board meetings next year.

All seven township board positions, including the three full-time elected jobs, expire this year. In addition, in Springfield Township, the Park Commission and the non-partisan Library Board members also are up for re-election. Voters will choose county commissioners, state representatives and Congress members. All township positions are four-year terms. The county commission, state representative and Congress jobs are two-year terms.

In Independence Township incumbent Supervisor Dale Stuart is challenged by surveyor Gary Stonerock, who was supervisor in the early 1970s. Clerk Joan McCrary is challenged by former school principal George White. Treasurer Jim Wenger is running unopposed.

In the trustee arena, incumbents Larry Rosso and Dan Travis are running once again. Adding to the field of candidates are Dr. Robert Aranosian, head of the emergency department at POH Medical Center; Dan Kelly; Mel Vaara, retired assistant superintendent of schools and former two-term trustee and Zon-

New museum exhibit features Clarkston at work

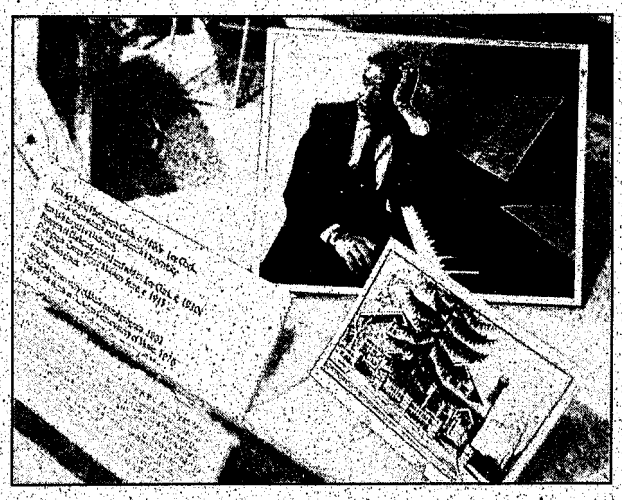

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

It wasn't so long ago that the Clarkston area was predominantly farms. But even so, the town of Clarkston was important to the farmers, and the farmers who bought goods and services kept the town alive.

To show how area residents have made a living over the years, the Clarkston Heritage Museum has unveiled a new exhibit, "Clarkston, From Farm to Factory."

It's the museum's second exhibit. It opened to the public on Saturday. The museum is in the Independence Township Library and is open during regular library hours.

Museum curator Toni Smith said this exhibit relies less on paper records and has more interesting artifacts than the previous exhibit that looked at the first 100 years of education in the community. Display cases were moved around and more area is dedicated to open space to accommodate the many school groups that are expected. During the last six-month exhibit, 500 children came through on field trips.

Interesting artifacts: The museum's Farm to Factory exhibit features many items that give insight into how Clarkston-area people lived over the years.

STAFF PHOTOS BY STEVE CANTRELL

One stop shop: Clarkston Heritage Museum Curator Toni Smith and other volunteers have put together a new exhibit showcasing the Clarkston area's farming and business heritage. Behind Smith is a photo of the dry goods store run by the Walter family.

Smith said she wondered how much really sunk into the little minds until one day when she was working in the office.

"I heard this small child tell his parent everything," she said, down to the little jokes Smith had made during her presentation. "I knew that someone had paid attention."

This time people will learn all about the farms and businesses that made up the community up until about the 1940s, Smith said.

"Maybe not a factory in our terms, but something other than farms," she said.

The town and all the services it provided and the farms were interdependent, she said.

Visitors will see Dr. Sutherland's book of births as well as a list of twins he delivered. Small displays show items from O'Dell's Pharmacy, the dry goods store, the Maybee and Ellis family farms and the Carran Sisters' Millinery. The Clarkston State Bank dubbed itself "the farmers' bank."

Clarkston, of course, had the mills, but it also had Vulcan Metal Works in the 1910s. The millinery also was in business around that time. A photography studio, Petty's Art Studio, began in the 1890s. The Clarkston Conservatory of Music also is represented in the exhibit.

Smith's favorite item in this new exhibit is a letter from a farm family asking a woman named Lizzie Nelsey to come work for them and explaining that they had two cows.

"It's kind of wonderful to read," she said.

The exhibit also includes two quilts from the late 1800s.

"It (quilting) was one of the jobs of a woman," Smith said.

Each exhibit takes three months and at least $3,000 to put together. The volunteers work with what artifacts they have. Smith added that the museum, exhibits and office together have significantly increased donations of artifacts from a couple a year to six or seven in the past few months. They are always looking for more, she added.

Concert music and an art exhibit in the same venue.

A scenario like that could be anywhere — Orchestra Hall, Cranbrook Institute of Arts or Meadow Brook Theatre.

This scene was played out at Clarkston High School Performing Arts Center's upper lobby last Thursday evening at the public reception for the CHS Student Art Work display. Visitors saw drawings, paintings, graphic poster designs, pottery, collages, scratch board drawings and a special senior exhibit all done by CHS art students.

The reception coincided with a concert by CHS music students in the auditorium.

The three-day art show included 200 pieces of original work. Art students set up the exhibit on display boards lent to them by Oakland Technical Center-Northwest.

The idea behind the exhibit was to garner interest from the public and from students in the CHS art program.

CHS student ranks 10th in nation for computer programming

BY SUSAN B. TAUBER
STAFF WRITER
stauber@oe.homecomm.net

Parents, if you're alarmed because your youngsters seem addicted to video games, take heart. They might turn out like Olivier Suritz.

Olivier recently placed 10th in the nation in a Visual Basic Programming competition at the Business Professionals of America National Leadership Conference in Minneapolis. He earned the right to compete after placing third in the state competition. He placed first in the earlier regional contest.

Olivier also passed his Microsoft Word 2000 certification exam and he earned his A+ certification for fixing computers.

All this is quite an accomplishment for the 19-year-old from Belgium who is a foreign exchange student at Clarkston High School. Olivier lives with his Clarkston host parents, William and Beth LaHousse, and his two host brothers, Derek and Greyson LaHousse. Olivier is returning to his native home with his parents, Patricia and Claude Suritz, on June 16 after living in Michigan for 10 months.

■ 'When I was 8 years old, I started playing video games. Even then, I wanted to create my own games.'

Olivier Suritz
CHS foreign exchange student

Olivier said his interest in computer programming began with video games. "When I was 8 years old, I started playing video games," he recalled. "Even then, I wanted to create my own games. That's what attracted me to computer programming."

He's hoping to follow in his father's footsteps as a computer programmer. From his accomplishments while at CHS, he's on his way.

Olivier plans to attend college in Belgium. "The whole college cycle there is much cheaper than it is in the States," he said. "There are a lot of American students who go to college there."

The young man who speaks several languages said he's impressed with the computer department at CHS.

"I was so excited when I came here and saw they were offering Visual Basic Programming. I started studying on my own," he said. He also did an independent study to earn his computer hardware certification. He fills the rest of his school day by working as a French class aide and attending other classes. He's also taking a college class in business law.

Olivier said the test at the national conference was harder than he expected.

"I had to write a data base program for adding new contacts to a telephone list. It took me the entire one-and-a-half hours allotted for the test to complete it," he explained. He also had to take a multiple-choice test.

Olivier's CHS computer teacher, Patricia Topping, is really proud of him. "He's been so self-motivated," she said. "He really goes above and beyond what is required of him in the classroom."

Other computer students of Topping also have done well in competitions this school year. Michael O'Brien earned first place in C++ Programming; Dan Jorgenson, second place in Visual Basic Programming, and Adam Bridgewater, sixth place in Computer Aided Graphics at the BPA regional competition.

Adam took fourth place in Computer Aided Graphics, and Dan eighth place in Business Spelling in the state competition. A committee selected Adam's design of a concept car for a pin that students will use to trade for other pins at the 2001 BPA National Conference in California.

Five programming teams represented CHS at the May 5 Ninth Annual High School Programming Contest in Flint. They competed in a field of 26 teams. Only half the teams completed one of the six problems presented to the teams.

Four Clarkston teams placed in the top 13. The team of Jon Thorndycraft and Jon Tomlinson placed second. They completed four of six problems.

Jon Thorndycraft, Michael Fischer and Alice Knoebel will travel as a team with Topping to the American Computer Science League competition in Houston, Texas, over the Memorial Day weekend.

"I'm so pleased with the efforts of my students," Topping added. "By being involved in these three major organizations and competitions, students are challenged to work above and beyond the classroom environment. They're motivated to exceed their limits and celebrate the possibilities of success in their field of study with students from all over the world."

Representatives battle over airport audit as costs mount

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

LEGISLATIVE WATCH

■ Republicans defend the review as appropriate, considering the amount of state and federal money that flows to Metro. Democrats say it is all politics ...

Expenses of the Legislature's Detroit Metropolitan Airport Joint Select Committee may have reached the $200,000, according to Rep. Raymond Basham (D-Taylor), well over the amount originally allocated for a review and audit of airport operations.

That price tag would include $50,000 in direct costs and the rest in salary and other expenses incurred, for instance, when state staffers attend meetings about the issue, Basham estimated.

But according to Rep. James Koetje (R-Grandville), the costs aren't anywhere near that high. Yes, he admitted, the committee has exceeded the $10,000 mentioned in the resolution creating the committee, but that had been expected. The resolution allowed for additional costs with the approval of the Speaker of the House and the Senate Majority Leaders. So the Select Committee has not exceeded its original authorization, he said.

Partisan battle

It's the latest round to be fired in the partisan battle over Metro Airport. Last year, after a federal review of the snow-related delays that left passengers stranded on planes for hours in Detroit, state lawmakers launched into an audit of airport operations of their own.

Specifically of concern are 33 contracts for services to the airport including food concessions, construction, maintenance, parking and snow removal. Preliminary results indicate there are no records to show that 21 of those contracts were subjected to a competitive bid process.

Republicans defend the review as appropriate, considering the amount of state and federal money that flows to Metro. Democrats say it is all politics, little more than a continuation of a feud between Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara and House Speaker Chuck Perricone (R-Kalamazoo).

In any case, the six members of the committee agreed to order up a report from the state Auditor General's office about the cost of the review itself, to be presented at every future meeting of the panel.

Democrats also allege that Republicans are dragging the audit out.

State auditors would have already completed their work if the airport would turn over the documents they need, Koetje said. "If fact, they'd have been done months ago."

Former airport director David Katz said he wanted information requests from the auditors to flow through his office so he could log them, to determine what records had been turned over and which had not. The practice initially continued under new director Les Robinson.

But auditors complained that caused long delays in getting the necessary documents. Some requests for records remain unfilled three to four months after having first been made, Koetje said. It took more than 120 days to fill a request for a copy of a county ordinance, he said.

"They say they are cooperating with us, but that kind of falls on deaf ears with me," Koetje said.

Rep. Mickey Mortimer (R-Hanover) said the purpose of the state review is to bring the airports operations into alignment with "generally accepted accounting practices." And he said he hopes the committee can make recommendations, when it's done with its work later this year, to assure taxpayers that public money is being spent wisely at the airport.

Authority — $65 million

Mortimer said he believed the state has the authority to conduct the audit, because the airport receives some $65 million from the state and federal governments each year. Basham questions the state's legal authority to conduct the audit. Normally, airport officials would report to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, which would be the appropriate body to order up such a review, Basham argues.

Mortimer contends that Basham's criticisms of the committee are simply intended to diminish the impact of its work when the audit report is finally issued.

"I suspect he's just carrying the water for his party caucus," Mortimer said.

ing Board of Appeals chairman; and David Wagner, a retired service manager for a car dealership. Trustees Jeff McGee and Neil Wallace have chosen not to run for re-election. Kelly's occupation could not be confirmed before deadline.

Springfield Township Supervisor Collin Walls is being challenged by Jeffrey Decker. Decker could not be reached before deadline for comment. Neither Clerk Nancy Strole nor Treasurer Lois Stiles has a competitor.

Trustees Margaret Bloom, Elaine Field-Smith, Richard Miller and Dennis Vallad are all running again. Challenging is David Hopper, who is currently on the Planning Commission.

Only six people got into the race for the four-year, seven-seat Park Commission. Those running include incumbents James Ashley, Dorothy LaLone, Jean Vallad, Diane Wozniak and Michael Patterson. Newcomer Cheryl Apple also is running. Patterson is the only Democrat in the group.

"What that means is there would be an opportunity to fill that position with a write-in," Clerk Strole said.

She added write-in candidates also have a set of filing rules to follow.

Park Commission members Loretta Ashley and Kathy Russeau choose not to run for their four-year positions.

The Library Board, a four-year term, is non-partisan and Strole said those names won't be on the ballot until the general election. Incumbents Kristine Bower, James Banes, Barbara Kochan-Dove, Ruth Gruber and Kathleen Rollins are all running for the six-member board, which requires a four-year commitment. The newcomer is Jeannine Rawe. Sandy Chester decided not to run for office.

The election for the county commissioners terms also will be decided in the primary because all the candidates are Republicans. Independence and Springfield townships span Commission Districts 2, 3 and 4.

In District 2, incumbent David Galloway is the only candidate. District 2 features a contest between incumbent Larry Obrecht and challenger John Spocaeski. In District 4, incumbent Frank Millard is opposed by Jim Runestad and Russ Schulte.

Unlike the county commission race, the contest for state representative will have to keep until November. Ruth Johnson (R-Holly) is being challenged by Democrat Patrick Doyon for the two-year job.

In the ninth Congressional district, three Republicans, Grant Garrett, John Geisler and Carlos Iovannitti, will compete in the August primary for the chance to face Democratic incumbent Dale Kildee of Flint.

All candidates have until 4 p.m. Friday to withdraw from the election.

Chrysler dealership to expand

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

Passersby on Dixie Highway or even Big Lake Road probably will not notice the beehive of activity going on at Clarkston Chrysler Jeep.

Owner Chuck Fortinberry says the business has exceeded what he had anticipated in its first five years at that location and he is ready to begin construction on a 9,400-square-foot addition to the back of the Springfield Township dealership.

For customers, the doubling in size could mean faster service when their car is in the shop. Work is to begin soon on the "T"-shaped addition to the back of the building. Fortinberry hopes it will be completed by fall. The work will be done by The Garrison Co. of Farmington Hills, the same company that built the dealership.

The addition will double the size of the service area, Fortinberry said there is a small body shop in the back now. That will go in part of the addition, and the service area will be expanded. A couple of employees will be added initially. Technicians' time will be better used. If a hoist is in use and held up because of a part or the technician needs a customer approval on a procedure, that hoist is tied up. The only way to move on temporarily to another car is to take that one down and move it out, which takes time. With more hoists, jobs can be juggled more easily.

"We're looking at making our technicians more efficient," Fortinberry said.

Another improvement for the staff will be an automatic car wash. Because there is a septic system on the property, the cars are hand washed, and all the soapy water has to be reclaimed. An automatic car wash will take care of that, he said, adding that they like to return customer cars nice and clean.

Fortinberry lives with his wife and children in Independence Township. He's been selling cars since he was a teenager. He started out in his parent's driveway, much to his father's dismay.

After college, he worked for Chrysler in the sales and marketing department. He said he always knew he wanted to own a dealership and opened his first dealership in 1985 on Dixie near Maybee Road. At that time it was tough being a Chrysler dealer, he said. It was before the headquarters opened in nearby Auburn Hills and there were many General Motors customers in the area because of Buick City in Flint and the giant Orion plant.

Today that's changed as the number of Daimler Chrysler executives as well as vehicles has increased in the Clarkston area, he said.

Michigan's moms take aim at politicians

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE
SPECIAL WRITER

Shirley Bryant feels power and hope.

Her teen-aged son, who suffered from a mental illness, died by his own hand with a gun he was able to purchase off the shelves at Kmart, as easily as a camera or a basketball.

Bryant, who is director of community relations for Birmingham schools, was one of about 3,000 Michigan Moms attending Sunday's Million Mom March on the National Mall in Washington, D.C. The group included at least 150 from Oakland County.

"I felt more powerful," Bryant said, supported by a contingent of Birmingham Moms who flew to the nation's capital with her, and surrounded by what is now counted as three-quarters of a million supporters of common sense gun control.

Together they got the message from a bell made from melted-down handguns rung by children who had been affected by gun violence. Together they got the message from stories of gun violence told by people of many backgrounds from all over the nation.

Together they got the message that Sarah Brady has been sending ever since her husband was shot nearly 20 years ago during the attempted assassination of President Reagan.

"You are the future," Sarah Brady, flanked by her husband in a wheelchair, told the hundreds of thousands of women, children and men on this perfect spring day in Washington. "The lawmakers must change their minds or in November we will change the lawmakers."

■ 'I am damn mad at the lack of concern from our Michigan legislators. I looked up the gun control voting records of Joe Knollenberg and Spencer Abraham and they're abominable.'

Shirley Bryant
—Oakland mom

"I feel more hopeful than I did," Bryant said. "I identified with the mothers who had lost children. I am damn mad at the lack of concern from our Michigan legislators. I looked up the gun control voting records of Joe Knollenberg and Spencer Abraham and they're abominable."

As emotionally-charged as the day was for Bryant, others who had not been so closely affected by gun violence also found tremendous meaning and incentive.

"I had a very emotional moment," said Lori Spillane, a young Troy mother of two who was instrumental in organizing Oakland County for the march. She saw a woman carrying a sign "If not for a handgun I would be here with my sister."

"And here I was with my sister," Spillane said, as she and Linda Pruss sat side by side on the flight back to Detroit.

For Spillane, who sandwiched the march in between being a wife, mother and full-time logistics manager, it turned out to be worth every minute. "I think there are a lot of politicians who aren't going to sleep as well," she said.

Signs wielded by Michigan Moms were highly visible over a large area stage right of the podium. Of particular note was a large hot pink one shaped as a mitten, carried by Amy Pines of Birmingham. On one side it said "Michigan Moms Vote" and on the other it stated "Good-bye Spencer Abraham." Many people used it as a landmark to find their way back to their seats.

Pines, who attended with her mother and sister, said more than three hours of the bus ride back to Detroit was devoted to brainstorming the gun control campaign to come. "The tone of our return was what we are going to do next," she said.

The list runs from a Father's Day picnic with speakers who will detail the exact stages of gun control bills in the Michigan Legislature and the U.S. Congress, to being involved in gun buybacks and making bells from the melted down artillery, to manning a speaker's bureau, to working the polls. "We're setting up our first meeting right away. We're not going away."

Pines said at first she felt "kind of bitter when we rose to sing the National Anthem and seeing the Capitol in the background and knowing we had to come so far to make Congress listen. But then, I turned and saw all the people and the waves of all the different state signs and I thought, that's the country."

"It's an awesome experience to stand between those two monuments with all those people" who are there for the same cause as you are," said Denise Newman, who is planning to work on educating people in her Troy neighborhood.

tion, I wanted to be a kid again so I could go to your school," Harrison told Ness.

Julie Brookes, who works as an instructional aide with Ness, nominated her for Teacher of the Year.

"Julie is my angel in the classroom," Ness said.

As exciting as it was to see Ness led through the lineup of supporters, it was that much more fun watching her select an automobile for her use for one year, compliments of Flannery Ford in Waterford Township.

This is the first time this prize was part of the Clarkston Foundation's Teacher of the Year package.

General sales manager Steve Hazzard walked Ness and her family through the fleet of cars. Ness kept returning to the candy-apple red, two-door 2000 Mustang.

"But, Mom," Sophie said, "it only has four seats and there are five of us."

Ness laughed and explained she'll still have the family van.

There was a drawback to the Mustang — it had a stick shift. Ness never drove a stick shift before. She was concerned about learning. That gave Hazzard a chance to demonstrate his teaching skills. By the time they came back from the test drive, Ness was in the driver's seat. The family went out to lunch while Hazzard's staff spiffed up the car.

And today there's probably a shiny new Mustang parked in the Pine Knob parking lot.

"I've never won anything before," Ness said. "This is overwhelming." In addition to her free car for one year, Ness had the day off work Monday.

All the Teacher of the Year finalists received a $250 grant to use for their classroom. Clarkston State Bank provided the funds for the grant.

The foundation is hosting a reception in the four nominees' honor from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 31, at Clarkston High School, 6093 Flemings Lake Road. Anyone wishing to attend should contact Harrison at Clarkston State Bank, (248) 625-8585.

Bud Ness expressed how grateful his family is to the foundation for recognizing his wife's dedication to her job.

"What people don't see is the long hours she puts in at home on her personal computer, her dedication to the students and what she does to keep up with her own learning in order to be a better teacher, even after all these years of teaching," he added. "We are so proud of her. It's nice for her to be recognized this way."

cardiac arrest, said Robert Cesario, department EMS coordinator.

"We get there and we initiate care and then we wait and we wait and we wait," he said at the earlier meeting.

Having ambulances with paramedics on board means a high level of care as well as transport can be administered within 10 minutes of a call. The same caregiver also would stay with the patient all the way to the hospital.

Assistant Fire Chief Steve Ronk said Tuesday with passage of the ballot language, the department can now begin in earnest to educate the public about what the department wants to do.

The board discussed how much money and the extent of the ALS services the board should ask for.

Independence Township Supervisor Dale Stuart said the proposal should be put before the voters as soon as possible. He also said the board should be sure to ask for enough money to do the job right.

"I think we go to the public with a proposal that will take care of the problem," he said.

One of the options given by the fire department included only a couple more staff and no ambulances. The second option included transport, but not as much staff as the third option.

Stuart said he thinks the community needs two ambulances that are adequately staffed.

"Option three is the only one that does this," he said. "I think the danger with this is not asking for enough."

Fire department personnel have said that more staff is needed in case of multiple runs at the same time.

Trustee Dan Travis said the board should go with option three if that is what the department thinks is in the best interest of the public. He said he has had to call for an ambulance twice at his own home.

"We did have to wait for the ambulance," he said, although it wasn't a long wait. "But every minute is a forever."

Treasurer Jim Wenger said whatever the board decides to do, educating the public about it is crucial.

Trustee Neil Wallace said he hopes there is enough time to do an adequate job of letting people know what the proposal is. He thinks the program could have been more transitional, beginning with a more modest staff and equipment request. That could have been accomplished by just asking for 3 mills total.

The board had to decide Tuesday because if it wanted the item on the August ballot, the language had to be to the county Wednesday. Wallace said although he voted no on the proposal, he will still assist in getting the millage passed.

He added waiting until November would give the board and department more time to talk to citizens.

Stuart said Tuesday officials will get to work refining a proposal to explain what is planned to the public.

Free maps available now

The Road Commission for Oakland County county road maps are now available to the public for free at its Paul Van Roekel Service Center.

The Paul Roekel Service Center is at 2420 Pontiac Lake Road (at County Center Drive West/Summit Street) in Waterford Township. Maps will not be mailed to individuals unless they provide a self-addressed stamped envelope and the appropriate postage.

For information about the maps and to find out the postage and envelope requirements, call RCOC Clerk's Office at (248) 645-2000.

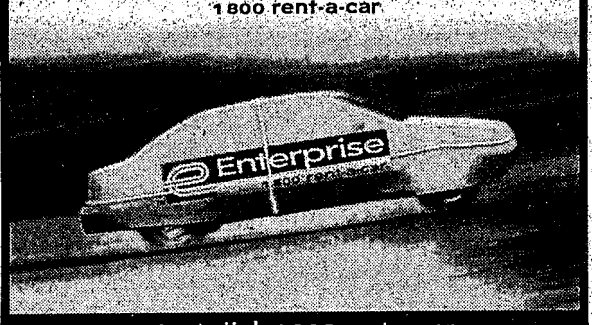

The commission previously sold the maps, printed in 1996, for $1 each in an effort to recoup the cost of printing. Since 1996, many new subdivision roads have been added, which are not shown on the map. Consequently, RCOC plans to reprint the maps in the next year or two. The maps will be free until then.

Bouchard to speak at Oakland Police Academy graduation as 40 new officers complete training

Following 15 weeks of training, the Oakland Police Academy graduates its basic police training class June 9. The academy is located at Oakland Community College's Auburn Hills Campus.

Commencement ceremonies begin at 8 p.m. in the Oakland County Commissions Auditorium, 1200 N. Telegraph, Pontiac. Oakland County Sheriff Michael Bouchard will be the principal speaker.

Twenty-one of the 40 students represent police agencies in Oakland, Macomb and Lenawee counties, including the Adrian, Pontiac, Royal Oak, Shelby Township, Southfield, Waterford, Warren and Oakland County Sheriff's departments. These students entered the academy as officer trainees after they were accepted for employment by a law enforcement agency. The agency then sponsored the trainee in the academy's basic police training program.

The other graduates are self-sponsored students who have met State of Michigan standards for entering the field of law enforcement. Such cadets find employment after graduating.

Two basic police training classes, enrolling approximately 50 students each, are held each year. In addition, the academy presents specialized programs in such topics as police interview technique, police dog training and a staff and command school for upper-echleon personnel. Approximately 3,000 law enforcement officers attend the Oakland Police Academy each year.

The graduates and their hometowns or agencies are:

She'll have help. Pruss, too, inspired by the message from the march is set to: "Tell everyone I know to get involved, to get educated about what's going on, and to vote."

"I felt the power of this group," said Carol Murphy, a law and psychology teacher, who wore her Million Mom March T-shirt to her Rochester High classes the next day.

She appreciated the way the day's events unfolded. "You got to hear so many views. Someone represented all of the different cases we've heard through all the years. But "It wasn't just look what happened to me. They had a game plan, a direction.

"It really motivated me to so something — get a letter writing campaign going, look closely at lawmaker's voting records, set up an organization that students can be part of."

■ 'I think there are a lot of politicians who aren't going to sleep as well.'

Lori Spillane
— Oakland organizer

Like the inspiration the Million Mom March organizers took from another female-begun, grassroots movement, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Murphy wondered about a student group based on the success of MADD's offspring Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD).

"We were thinking about SAVE - Students Against Violent Endings," she said. "I had a lot of teachers and students who were very interested in that I was going."

Joanie Wurster of Bloomfield Hills and her mom, Rosemary Paul, saw the signs and stage being erected the day before the march. It was then that she had the feeling "I'm going to be a part of national history." It was fed as they wore their Million Mom March T-shirts on the streets of Georgetown. "We felt like celebrities. People came up to us and said, 'We're so glad you're here.'"

They weren't alone. On the subways, in the restaurants and hotels, people came up to commend them from coming "all the way from Michigan."

"You saw all the people from all over the country there and you had real hope that it could make a difference," said Marcia Mumbrue, who lives in West Bloomfield. She shared the day and a spot on his maize and blue University of Michigan blanket with her son Brad, a West Bloomfield High School graduate who is now a D.C. resident.

"The organization gives you hope," Marcia Mumbrue said. "It was just so well planned. It was a very satisfying Mother's Day."

Be patient
Work will result in safer roads

The road construction season has arrived, and already Clarkston-area residents have been caught in bumper-to-bumper traffic as they make their way to and from work, school and extracurricular activities.

Resurfacing work on M-15 north of I-75 to the Genesee County line is resulting in commuters seeking alternative routes through the Clarkston area and putting more cars on already congested roads like Sashabaw.

■ We advise everyone to be patient and to remember that the Michigan Department of Transportation, Road Commission for Oakland County and local road agencies are giving us what we asked for — smoother, safer roads.

Also, the impending resurfacing of I-75 from M-59 to M-15 will mean even more traffic on Clarkston-area surface streets as frustrated motorists exit, looking for ways to keep moving.

We advise everyone to be patient and to remember that the Michigan Department of Transportation, Road Commission for Oakland County and local road agencies are giving us what we asked for — smoother, safer roads.

"We can't have it both ways," noted Frank Cardimen, president of the Oakland County-based Traffic Improvement Association.

We agree.

The Clarkston Eccentric asked the TIA and AAA Michigan for tips to help Clarkston-area residents make it through the construction season.

Both Cardimen and AAA Michigan spokesman Jim Rink said the best thing to do is to simply accept it, realizing that the road construction will eventually make motorists' lives easier.

Beyond that, they suggested that motorists:

■ Leave early to give themselves plenty of time. "Then you won't be so frustrated when you come across construction you knew would be there," Rink said.

■ Have patience. (This is easier to do if you allow extra time.)

■ Observe posted speeds. Rink said several deaths are associated each construction season with motorists driving too fast through construction zones. Plus, fines for speeding tickets are doubled in construction zones.

■ Start work earlier or later than most people, if that's possible.

■ Car pool.

■ Walk or bike for quick errands to the store. (You may get there faster.)

■ Stay informed about where construction is. Call 1-800-AAAMICH for construction updates or visit AAA Michigan's web site at www.aaamich.com/travel/traffic

Public-private partnerships ensure quality of culture

There are those who look at the $28 million in gifts given last Tuesday to the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and claim that with such private support there should be less need for public funding.

The donations were part of a $125-million fund-raising campaign to finance a new administrative office building, renovate Orchestra Hall, erect a high school for the performing arts, and build the DSO's endowment.

Overlooked in the celebration of generous philanthropy, however, is that the state of Michigan also supplied $10.75 million or nearly 40 percent of the recent financial contributions.

The answer to perpetuating cultural institutions and enhancing the cultural life of the region isn't simply to rely solely on the good will of wealthy individuals and foundations. On the contrary, the future funding support for cultural institutions must be based on a deeper partnership between the public and private sectors.

Ten years ago, the state unwisely cut back on public funding to the Detroit Institute of Arts. As a consequence, the museum reduced staff and hours of operation. Sure, the DIA has succeeded in finding alternative means for funding, but what about the long-term impact of the negative perception about the area's support for culture?

It would be imprudent to associate Gov. Engler's imposed cutbacks in the early 1990s as the direct cause for the unprecedented successful fundraising campaigns at the DSO, DIA, Detroit Zoo and other cultural institutions. The reason these campaigns have succeeded has more to do with the historic growth in wealth during the 1990s, than from any policy to reduce public funding to the arts.

■ Perhaps we all must realize that the quality of culture is a mirror of a society's collective soul.

To simply claim that those with the financial means to donate money should be obligated to support the arts and culture misses the most significant feature of a pluralistic society. Art and culture in a democracy should represent a diversity of perspectives and sensibilities. The privileges of wealth shouldn't be a prerequisite for determining which cultural institutions are supported.

A broader public debate about the nature of the private-public partnership is needed. Those with great financial resources should continue to demonstrate their support, but there's a role for others.

Arguably, the much talked-about cultural tax could be a catalyst for such a debate. A cultural tax would levy a quarter of a mil on property. The tax revenue would support the region's cultural institutions and local arts/cultural groups. (Currently, the issue is mired in political wrangling among the Oakland and Wayne county commissions.)

Perhaps we all must realize that the quality of culture is a mirror of a society's collective soul.

Ask your county commissioner where he/she stands on the cultural tax issue.

Let's have an open and frank discussion about how all of us are responsible for the quality of culture in our region.

Tobacco money needs to go toward prevention

The Board of Directors of Tobacco Free Michigan Action Coalition applauds the House of Representatives for supporting teen tobacco prevention. The House approved an amendment to HB5274, the career development budget, which will appropriate $10 million to the Michigan Council of Foundations for teen smoking prevention. This is the first tobacco prevention program funded with some of the $8.5 billion Michigan will receive from the tobacco settlement. TFMAC hopes the Senate will approve the House initiative.

We view this House appropriation as an important step in establishing a comprehensive tobacco prevention program in Michigan. Tobacco use robs Michigan residents of their health and is a significant financial burden on our state's economy, both in direct medical care costs and lost productivity. Let us follow the successful lead of states like California, Massachusetts and Florida, which have dramatically reduced smoking rates through increased funding and implementation of successful tobacco prevention programming. With Michigan ranking fourth in adult smoking rates, the time for decisive action is now.

We strongly support the efforts of the Michigan House of Representatives and the decision to increase tobacco prevention funding. We hope that we will continue to see the legislature's use of tobacco settlement money for its intended purpose – the reduction of the smoking rate in Michigan.

Multiple rates hinder Internet sales tax collection

Phil Power's column regarding the collection of sales tax by Internet and catalog sellers overlooks one very important point. Because of the way our state governments have structured these taxes across the country, the feasibility of collecting the tax becomes almost insurmountable. We are dealing not with one tax rate, but literally thousands of different rates applied in thousands of different ways. Michigan has a very simple structure — one tax rate statewide. However, in many states you must add a city, county, rapid transit, or other special authority percentage to determine the correct rate. The mailing address itself is usually not sufficient to determine the tax rate. Questions arise as to whether to collect the tax on the shipping charges or not. This varies by state. One state I know requires that the tax be collected if the transportation charge is shown on the merchandise invoice, but is tax-free if a separate invoice is issued for the transportation. What merchandise is taxed and what is tax-free? Some taxing authorities collect tax on food, clothing, medicine; others exempt some or all of these categories. Do you really expect a merchant in Texas to know that certain clothing items are exempt from sales tax if bought the week before or the week after Labor Day (as has been proposed in Michigan)?

The only way that sales taxes can ever be collected on interstate sales is for the Congress to establish a uniform interstate sales tax rate and devise some formula for sharing those revenues. I have complete confidence in the Congress to come up with a rate and sharing formula that is unfair to everybody and satisfies no one.

Marchers on wrong track

The Million Mom March has gotten vast media coverage despite the fact that they are often hysterical, illogical, and their goals are unconstitutional.

It has been proven that states that allow concealed gun permits have lower crime. The keys to lowering gun violence are prosecuting criminals who use guns to commit their crimes and educating children in the safe use of guns.

Deposit on grocery carts?

My husband and I have discussed the issue of grocery carts being left in the parking lots causing some major dents in cars whenever there is any wind. He informed me that in Germany they charge you $1 for a grocery cart. If the cart is returned, the $1 deposit is then returned to you. There were no carts left in the parking lots. If the seniors or others are taking the carts, I bet there are some kids that would love to receive their $1 deposit, as would the seniors themselves.

The deposit idea keeps our streets clean of a lot of bottles and cans, why not carts? I think all grocery and shopping centers should have deposits.

Don't let kids take a vacation from learning life's best lessons

AL ROBERTS

It is hard to believe, but it is that time of year once again. Youngsters are preparing for the last month of school and looking forward to a summer vacation. Parents are transporting their children to activities and yearning for some "down" time. Teachers are frantically working to help pupils meet prescribed performance standards and anticipating the slower pace of life that summertime usually provides.

■ Assist children to understand that accepting responsibilities builds character and sets the stage for future success. Keeping commitments is important whether at school, at home or in the community.

Well, it certainly has been a hectic school year and I, too, would like to take a moment to catch my breath. In spite of the natural inclination to seek rest and relaxation, let's not surrender to that temptation. Much is at stake and we cannot afford to lose the precious time necessary to help our children be the best they can be. In fact, if we are to meet the demands of our own mission, to help our learners exceed their own expectations, there is no time to waste. I hope this article will make a point — time is a precious commodity, and a resource that can never be replaced.

The challenge we face is formidable. What is the best way to allow our youngsters to "stop and smell the roses," while at the same time, helping them prepare for life? After all, there are only 24 hours in a day! First, let's agree that balance is a good thing and admit that children, like adults, need some "down" time. But, let's also understand that at this time of year there is all too often a tendency to ease up on expectations.

Striking a good balance is tricky, but allow me to share a couple of thoughts with you. Parents, teachers, administrators and community members can help strike that balance by taking a few simple actions:

■ Encourage youngsters to make the most of each and every opportunity. It doesn't matter if it is a field trip or a family excursion, a classroom lesson or something one learns away from school. The important aspect of any experience is to learn from it!

■ Assist children to understand that accepting responsibilities builds character and sets the stage for future success. Keeping commitments is important whether at school, at home or in the community. It is easy to "bail out" when things get frantic or when the weather gets nice. However, learning to be persistent is an extremely valuable lesson.

■ Make clear to students that academic performance and good behavior is expected at all times. It shouldn't matter if a youngster is at home or in school, at a friend's house or in the park.

Yes, time is a precious commodity and a resource that can never be replaced, but regrets can be avoided. If our standards are consistent, our expectations clear, and we trust our kids, they usually do the right thing!

Children prayed and believed, and a little baby was healed

DAN DEAN

Written on a chalkboard in a small schoolroom in Waterford I have never seen, there is a list of names. One of those is that of my 3-month-old son, Joshua. I understand that on Wednesday, May 10, stars were added to next to his name and at noon the students stopped their lessons and they began to pray for my son.

On that same day, a world apart from the classroom at St. Stephen's Lutheran School, my wife and I held our little bundle of joy tightly. Our tears flowed, part happy that the surgery to correct a birth defect was finally about to happen, and part fear, because of the risk associated, especially with that of a little boy two days past his third month of life.

■ The surgeon was beaming because he was able to connect Joshua's esophagus directly to his stomach ... It was the best news we have heard in three months. Miraculous is what we called it, and the surgeon would not deny it.

In those three months our son has not seen the sun or the grass or even breathed anything but the stale air of a hospital setting. There is nothing like the disheartening feeling of seeing your baby lying in a hospital bed knowing there is nothing you can do to make him better.

Yet 22 students who have never met little Joshua kept praying and believing.

My wife Cathy has spent every waking moment at our son's side. She has held him, sung to him, fed him through a tube in his stomach and in the words of one of his nurses, "obsessed" over the suction of his saliva, which collected in a pouch where his esophagus abruptly ended instead of being connected to his stomach as it should have been.

The surgery was expected to last anywhere from three to five hours. We prayed, and we waited. We took naps and we waited. Then two hours into the surgery we went down a flight of stairs to the surgical waiting room to see if there were any updates. Fifteen minutes later our surgeon walked in with a grin from ear to ear.

Children prayed and believed.

The surgeon was beaming because he was able to connect Joshua's esophagus directly to his stomach — a best-case scenario, but one the doctor admitted beforehand was very unlikely. It was the best news we have heard in three months. Miraculous is what we called it, and the surgeon would not deny it.

Many, many people have prayed for Joshua. Co-workers and family have been supportive. But, there is nothing like the innocence of children in a classroom of all places, willing to stop, pray and believe that God would help a little baby they have never met. That just touches my heart.

There is a surgeon who is going to meet with fellow pediatric surgeons and brag on the success of the operation. Nurses will be praised for their efforts. Neonatal doctors will pat each other on the back and a hospital may receive accolades for the handling of a rare birth defect.

None may ever know of those students' devotion.

Yet, we are convinced Joshua's successful surgery is due to all the prayers said on his behalf, especially of those by the children at St. Stephen's. Someday we hope Joshua can meet Dave Dunsmore's fifth-grade class. Praying and believing in the unseen takes a leap of faith. Hopefully they will be as touched by the sight of Joshua as we will be by meeting those who stopped their school work to pray and believe.

There's no justice in this system

PHILIP POWER

Justices of the Michigan Supreme Court are elected statewide. Candidates are nominated respectively at the state Republican and Democratic conventions, but they appear on the November ballot as "non-partisan" judicial candidates.

Most voters have no idea who they're voting for, much less the qualifications and judicial philosophy of the candidates. Moreover, in recent years enormous amounts of money — as much as $1 million for one campaign! — have been raised to finance these campaigns, giving the distinct impression that justice in Michigan's highest court is up for sale to the highest bidder/contributor. And, given the increasingly partisan cast the Court and its decisions have demonstrated in recent years, it's not surprising the political rhetoric has become increasingly shrill and unseemly.

This is a terrible system. Consider but two current examples.

Last week, I received a visit from Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Edward Thomas, who almost certainly will be a Democratic Party nominee for Supreme Court Justice. Judge Thomas, who worked his way through college and law school on the assembly line, has an excellent reputation as a thoughtful, balanced and thorough judge. In fact, he was ranked among the top 10 judges in the Detroit metro area in a 1991 article in Detroit Monthly magazine.

I asked Judge Thomas what the judicial canons of ethics allowed him to talk about while campaigning. Not much, it turns out. He can talk about decisions he has made, but only if the case is all over and not before an appellate court. He can discuss his judicial philosophy, but he can't talk about any matter of substance that might ever come before the Supreme Court.

After our conversation, I made a note to myself: "Ed Thomas is real nice guy. He's smart, decent, thoughtful, down to earth. Too bad he's running for Supreme Court."

What I meant is that Judge Thomas is about to be caught in the maw of big-time judicial politics in Michigan. He'll have to raise tons of money, campaign day in and day out throughout the state, take lots of abuse from his opponents and suffer a gag rule that insures he talks in irrelevancies. And when Election Day rolls around this November, it's a sure thing he will be nearly as unknown across the state as he is today.

So whether he wins or loses is little more than a crap shoot. That's a lousy way to pick a Supreme Court Justice.

Example two has to do with the flap that arose last week surrounding Robert Young, Jr., who was originally appointed to the Michigan Supreme Court by Gov. John Engler and who almost certainly will be a Republican Party nominee for election this fall.

Young, who is African-American, was the target of a flyer put out by the Michigan Democratic Party and distributed at the recent National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) dinner in Detroit. The flyer asserted that Judge Young is a "staunch believer that Brown vs. Board of Education was wrong." ("Brown" is the landmark case outlawing racial segregation in schools.)

Young promptly wrote Mark Brewer, Democratic State Chairman, saying that "this statement is a lie . . . an attempt to create an ugly, racist campaign to impugn me as Michigan's only sitting African American justice. Such virulent race-baiting has no place in our political discourse." Young pointed out that he is on the record (in an Aug. 22, 1999 editorial in The Detroit News) as "a beneficiary (of Brown) — and I think society is a beneficiary — of ending segregation." He also demanded a retraction and a public apology, as well as threatened a lawsuit.

Brewer says Young told a group of lawyers last year that "Brown was wrongly decided." And, indeed, it's been a long line of argument among conservative jurists that lots of U. S. Supreme Court decisions are based on "sociology" rather than hard law. So it's entirely possible Young may agree with the substance of the Brown vs. Board of Education opinion while at the same time disagreeing with the juridical logic the Supreme Court used to reach its decision.

So what are we make of the whole brouhaha? Just this. It's the most current example of how politicizing the selection of Michigan Supreme Court Justices has resulted in partisan rhetoric that is shrill and unseemly.

Don't hold your breath, but wouldn't it be great if all the candidates, Democratic and Republican alike, actually said what they no doubt think and condemned our system of electing Justices for the fraud it really is?

More Ozone Action Days seen for SE Michigan this summer

By Mike Malott
HomeTown News Service
mmalott@homecomm.net

Ozone Action" days always occur on warm, cloudless, "gorgeous" summer days.

"The sky is bright blue. It's the kind of day we wait for all winter long," said Anita Blaisus, manager of Public Outreach for the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. "Some folks think that if they can't see it, it's not a problem. You can see smog, and that tells you the air is dirty, but you can't see ozone."

Ozone in the stratosphere protects humans from ultraviolet radiation, but at ground level it is a pollutant. High concentrations can be an irritant to the lungs, causing breathing problems, especially for sensitive people, the young and the elderly. Those who work or exercise outdoors are also at risk, because they inhale deeply as a result of their physical activity.

Laura DeGuire, environmental air quality specialist for the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, says the effect is like a "sunburn on the lungs." For most, it is likely to be a minor problem, but repeated exposures to high levels of ozone can lead to more serious health consequences later on.

Environmental experts predict there will be a high number of Ozone Action days this summer. SEMCOG and the Clean Air Coalition of Southeast Michigan — a collection of more than 30 businesses and environmental and health advocacy organizations — are urging citizens to participate in Ozone Action days this summer, taking steps to reduce pollution on days when the conditions are right for high levels of ozone.

The ozone season, running May through September, is likely be another record-setter this year, according to Jeff Jaros, senior meteorologist for the air quality division of the MDEQ. He expects to see more than the record of 25 Ozone Action days set in 1999.

The reason is that the weather is expected to be hot and dry. No, Jaros said, it is not a result of global warming. Rather, it is due to low precipitation levels during the winter and spring months. Light snowfalls after January and little spring rain has left the soil in southeastern Michigan relatively dry. Moisture in the ground typically has a cooling effect, Jaros explained, carrying heat away as it evaporates. But since the ground is dry this year, higher than normal temperatures are forecast for the region.

Jaros said he does not expect it to be as bad as the summer of 1988, when Michigan set a record for the number of days over 100 degrees. But he does predict temperatures to be above normal. And there is a possibility that the drought now being experienced in other parts of the country could occur here.

Ozone is created when hydrocarbons — from automobile and lawn mower exhaust, industrial emissions, gasoline vapors and even fumes from household cleaning chemicals — react with oxides of nitrogen and sunlight. And residents can have a significant impact on ozone level by taking the recommended steps to reduce hydrocarbon emissions on days declared as Ozone Action days.

An estimated 58 percent of ozone comes from auto emissions, Blasius said. Residents can reduce that by driving less. "Linking trips" helps cut emissions because car engines produce less exhaust once they are warmed up, DeGuire said.

Gasoline fumes account for 8 percent of the ozone. Waiting to fill up car tanks until dusk will help.

If you must get gas, at least don't top off the tank, advised Blasius, a Canton resident who also serves as the manager of the coalition's ozone program.

"When you fill up all the way," she said, "you just push all those fumes right back out of the tank and into the atmosphere."

Another 7 percent of the ozone levels come from lawn mower and motorboat exhaust, which have engines with no pollution controls.

"Our polls show 80 percent of the residents in southeast Michigan recognize the program and 77 percent participate in Ozone Action days in some way, taking some action. The most popular way is by not mowing the lawn. What a surprise!" Blasius said, laughing. "Our motto is grab the lawn chair, not the lawn mower."

Residents can use Ozone Action days as an excuse to put off other chores as well. Household cleaners, degreasers and paints all add to hydrocarbon content in the air. In fact, Blasius said, household chemicals account for another 7 percent of the ozone in the air.

Industries do contribute to the problem, according to DeGuire, but regulations have reduced their emissions drastically in recent years. There are 130 sources of industrial hydrocarbon emissions in the region, and they can be made to shut down on high ozone days, she said. Still, it is not unusual for high ozone levels to occur on Saturdays, when those businesses are already closed. The majority of ozone comes from residents.

The Clean Air Coalition's six-year-old Ozone Action effort is a "premier" program, DeGuire said. It was one of the first in the country and has served as a model for similar programs in western Michigan and elsewhere in the Midwest.

The program gathers together meteorologists from the state MDEQ and the private sector, who meet daily to talk about weather conditions predicted for the following day. If the conditions are right, they'll issue an advisory, which is disseminated by SEMCOG.

Residents can look for advisories over the Internet by checking the SEMCOG home page at www.semcog.org. Advisories are also issued by phone, at (800) 633-3AIR. Television and radio stations and local newspapers also frequently carry the ozone advisories as part of their weather forecasts.

Everybody has role when ozone alert sounds

Tips for reducing pollution:

- Avoid using gasoline-powered lawn and garden equipment. Mow lawns the day before or after an Ozone Action Day.
- Avoid refueling cars on Ozone Action Days or fill up after dusk and don't "top off" the tank. Avoid spilling gas at the fuel pump.
- Reduce auto use whenever possible. Plan to carpool, use public transit, bike, walk or combine errands to reduce emissions.
- Stay out of congested traffic and long lines at the drive-through window. Idling engines release a lot of emissions.
- Brown bag it at work instead of driving to a restaurant for lunch.
- Keep speeds down and accelerate slowly.
- Keep all of your engines (car, boat, lawn mower) well-tuned.
- Make sure gas caps are on tight and not missing. Park in the shade to avoid emissions from a sun-heated gas tank.
- Conserve energy at home and at work.
- Avoid using oil or solvent based paints, degreasers or lighter fluids. Opt for water-based cleaning and painting products whenever possible.
- Apply paint with rollers and brushes instead of sprays. It cuts down on fumes.
- Enjoy barbecues, but avoid using charcoal lighter fluid.
- Consider natural gas, propane or electric grills as alternatives the next time you replace your backyard or patio barbecue.
- Take advantage of teleconferencing. Why drive to a meeting when you don't have to?
- Stay informed. Ozone Action days are announced during weather reports on both television and radio and in local newspapers. Advisories are posted on the Internet at www.semcog.org. They are also announced on a hotline, (800) 633-3AIR.

Teachers make a lasting impression

As we near the end of another school year, I find myself attending lots of functions in which teachers are being honored or remembered. It is impossible to sit through these functions without thinking about the important teachers who affected my life.

Each teacher had a place, obviously, but there were several who stood out above the others. They were the several that I loved for one reason or another: Mr. Richard Morse, who directed the Pontiac Central band in which I played. He helped begin each and every morning — through the three grades of high school— with music and passion.

Mrs. Carolyn DeGrace, who taught my fifth-grade class at Roosevelt Elementary in Keego Harbor. She shared my first name and my love for pet parakeets, taught me to enjoy reading and corrected, constantly, my mispronunciation of the word "interesting."

Mr. Lewis Hayner, who taught me 12th-grade English, also at PCHS. Mr. Hayner, without knowing or intending it, convinced me to pursue a college degree in English — and to value the importance of a re-write. Mr. Hayner initiated me into philosophical thinking. And he filled my last year of high school with wonderful laughter.

Mr. Hayner, I think, launched me

Springfield family has rich history

■ Property that Springfield Township will set aside as a nature preserve will be named after Letha and John Dolza, a couple with an interesting story.

BY SALLY SLAUGHTER
STAFF WRITER
sslaughter@oe.homecomm.net

In Paul Dolza's Springfield Township home hang three extraordinary charcoal drawings. One is larger than the other two and depicts a stallion rearing on its hind legs at the behest of its trainer. The pieces on either side are profiles of a man and a woman.

"Look at the date," Dolza says.

It is March 1914. Dolza's father, John Dolza, was just 12 when he created the works of art. He had not yet left Italy, but it's no surprise that the creative mind and able hands that drew those pictures would earn doctorate degrees in mechanical, electrical and aeronautical engineering, see success in the American automobile industry and have 122 patents to his credit.

"The V8 in Chevys today were his design," Paul Dolza said.

He also designed the first autopilot system and the engine controls for the allied bombers used in World War II. The latter were designed in 10 days.

John Dolza died 14 years ago, but his wife, Letha Dolza, is 92 and lives in Fenton. One of her gifts to her family is music. She still works with her granddaughters on their piano playing.

"She still plays, and she plays well," Dolza said.

Pieces by the likes of Russian composer Sergei Rachmaninoff are in her repertoire.

Happy at home: Paul Dolza and the family dog, Anastasia, enjoy their 1863 home on land his parents bought 40 years ago.

Letha and John Dolza were longtime property owners in Springfield Township and left 300 acres off Davisburg Road near the Rose Township line to their five children. Recently Springfield Township used its power of eminent domain to buy 78 of those acres as part of its plans for a new civic center. The new civic center is to be located on 7.5 acres of township property at the front portion of the Shiawassee River Basin Preserve. The preserve was purchased years ago with state grant money. Because of that, the township must set aside a like amount of land elsewhere in the township as recreation land. The Dolza property is to fulfill that requirement.

The area will be called the Letha and John Dolza Nature Preserve. Paul

Coke memorabilia collector owns many of the real things

■ The Coca-Cola exhibit, housed in the log home on the grounds of Fish Hatchery Park, is open to the public at no charge.

You'd think that by now, Richard Lohff would be tired of the colors red and white. Not so, he says. After 14 years of collecting Coca-Cola memorabilia, he still stops for the soda pop's colors when he's out cruising.

"It's addictive because of the color," Lohff says, explaining his love for items associated with the product. "You drive by an open garage sale, and if you see red and white, you stop."

The bulk of Lohff's collection, along with some items owned by fellow Waterford collector Bill Davis, are on display at the Waterford Historical Society log cabin through the month of May.

"It's a drawing card for getting more publicity for the historical society," says Lohff, explaining why the exhibit was established. Previously this year, the historical society has had displays of vintage clothing and trains.

This month's display features hundreds of Coca-Cola items — from antiques to new — and includes everything from a wooden train whistle to glasses to old bottles and cans to postcards, knives, posters, toy trains and more.

Lohff, a Waterford Township resident, is a life member of the historical society and a long-time drinker of the beverage.

He began collecting Coca-Cola memorabilia in 1986, he says, after friends gave him a coke machine.

"I used to drink a lot of Coca-Cola and a couple people gave me a Coca-Cola machine. It started from there," he says. "It's a little bit overwhelming for people to think that people collect this."

Lohff is a member of the 300-person Great Lakes Chapter of the Coca-Cola Collectors Club. The Great Lakes Chapter is a division of a national collectors' organization that has about 3,500 members.

"My main interest is 1936 items because that's the year I was born and it was Coke's 50th anniversary," Lohff says, adding that Coca-Cola was invented in 1886 and that, initially, it contained cocaine.

"The first advertisements were to relieve tension and relieve fatigue because it had cocaine in it until 1906," Lohff says.

Lohff's favorite item in his collection is a tin, crest-like sign, about the size of a plate, which sold originally for 42-cents, according to an old magazine Lohff owns. His sign, worth much more money, is only the second he has seen.

Lohff and his wife, Joyce, regularly attend national conventions in other states, as well as some in Michigan. At the conventions, which attract thousands of visitors, they buy new items and sometimes sell old.

"I have had a lot of items given to me," he says. "If somebody gives something to me, I don't part with it."

Among the items in the exhibit are commemorative bottles, a selection of paraphernalia devoted to the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta, experimental Coca-Cola plastic cans, a 1984 Detroit Tigers World Series can collection, trays, old advertisements, pins, dishes and toys.

The Coca-Cola exhibit, housed in the log home on the grounds of Fish Hatchery Park, is open to the public at no charge. The hours are 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Saturdays and 1-4 p.m. Sundays. The historical society buildings are also open 10:30 a.m.-2 p.m. Wednesdays. In lieu of an entry fee to the Coca-Cola exhibit, donations to the historical society are accepted. The number for the historical society is (248) 623-2449.

Dolza said his parents are deserving of that tribute.

"If it had not been for their natural love of this land and maintaining this land over the last 40 years to the point that several conservancies were interested," it would have been developed, Dolza said.

He said the family is happy that the township plans to maintain the land in its natural state. He has about 120 acres of the original farm and leases some out to a farmer. Dolza and his wife, Sarah, have two daughters, Letha ,12, and Regina, 9. Dolza also has two grown daughters, Christina and Paije.

One of Dolza's nephews also lives on the property. Dolza and his wife moved to the Civil War-era home in 1980. Dolza is an airline pilot and his wife is now a homemaker. Sarah Dolza holds a master's degree in guidance and counseling.

Dolza said their home was originally a convent built in 1863. Large neighboring homes dot the landscape along Davisburg Road, and Dolza said they are the products of high profits from sheep farming during the Civil War. Demand for wool for uniforms drove prices up.

The Dolza home is filled with antiques.

"My mother was a tremendous antiquer so a lot of them got here that way," he said.

The parlor where his father's drawings hang above a family piano is filled with family heirlooms.

■ John Dolza ... saw an ad that said body designers were needed in FlintThe artist went west and arrived in Flint, thinking body designer meant drawing nudes. He never dreamed it meant designing cars.

John Dolza came from a large family in Turin, Italy. The day after his formal schooling was finished, he was smuggled out of the country because he did not want to serve in the Benito Mussolini regime. He was 27. Dolza came to New York in 1929 not knowing a word of English. He learned to get around my talking to his parish priest in Latin. Being an artist, he got a job painting sets for a Catholic church's theatrical endeavors. Later he worked for one of the electric companies. Exactly which one escapes the memory of his son.

But life was hard.

"He was literally dying of pneumonia on a church step," Paul Dolza said.

He was nursed back to help by a benevolent couple and eventually saw an ad that said body designers were needed in Flint, Mich.

The artist went west and arrived in Flint, thinking body designer meant drawing nudes. He never dreamed it meant designing cars.

"They (General Motors) interviewed him and realized there was a lack of communication," Paul Dolza said.

He got the job and in time was chief engineer in charge of power development. He was one of the catalysts behind the GM Tech Center in Warren, which opened in the early 1950s, Dolza said. The varied brick colors in the complex's buildings are the product of his artist's eye.

Growing up poor in Italy, Dolza longed to sprawl out here in Michigan. He had the chance to do that and indulge his wife's love of what is now Paul Dolza's home by buying the property. The elder Dolzas never lived there.

Letha Dolza was Letha Potter, and her family owned the land at the corner of Dixie Highway and Davisburg Road once known as Potter's Corner. She used to drive by the place in the horse and buggy, Paul Dolza said.

"She just always loved this house," he said.

But through the years, his mother has not wanted to move from her Fenton home, he said.

Dolza said his plans for his family's property don't include much beyond keeping it in its natural state.

on a quest that continues even today.

There was a fourth teacher whom I also wish to remember here. I cannot recall her first name. It is lost along with a lot of my childhood memories. She taught fourth-grade at Roosevelt Elementary School and her last name was Richardson.

I realize now, from the vantage point of adulthood, that she had a remarkable capacity for insight and compassion.

As I think of her, I wonder what Robert and I must have looked like to her. How we must have appeared in her classroom when she was trying to teach. What it was that we together — out of the entire classroom — somehow emitted, at age nine or ten, that moved her.

What I remember of her is that she had curly white hair and glasses and that she was a little bit stout. That she wore flower-printed dresses. And that she understood and valued puppy love.

I remember Robert too. He had black hair and brown eyes and was handsome. He looked, somewhat, like a child version of Roy Rogers. He had the same style. The clean-cut glint in his eyes and the wonderful smile.

I do not remember how Robert and I met but at some point we fell earnestly and completely into puppy love. Somewhere along the line, Robert and I discovered each other and we made a solemn vow — born of pure innocence — to remain true to one another for life.

Robert gave me a ring (one with a long and convoluted history that involved his teenage cousin's love life) just before he moved away with his family — forever, I pledged that I would never take it off. And I went home and cried.

I never spoke of my grief to Mrs. Richardson, but she must have somehow sensed it, for one day at the end of the year — months after Robert had moved — I returned from lunch to find her personal copy of Robert's school picture on my desk.

It looked up at me, all Roy Rogers-like and it smiled and made my heart leap with joy and longing. Mrs. Richardson's simple gift spoke volumes that resonate even today.

I still have that picture, some 40 years later. I still carry a soft spot for Robert in my heart. And one for Mrs. Richardson too.

Bless her heart for recognizing that the hearts of children are important places, too.

Wonders of nature cause our faith to blossom, grow

REV. ROGER CAMPBELL

This week has been our annual spring faith builder, the week when our backyard comes alive with blossoms and birds. We have nine flowering crab apple trees (each planted and named for one of our grandchildren) and all week they've been in full bloom. Our mountain ash must have hundreds of blossoms, announcing a coming fall harvest of bright orange berries to delight the birds of that season.

A lilac bush caught the corner of my eye this morning while I was taking in the panorama of colorful trees and flowers from my study window. And our two 40- foot white birch trees are in full leaf, reminding me of another miracle.

Several years ago, these impressive, stately, birch began losing their leaves and looking stressed so I called in an expert to tell me what was wrong and what we could do for them. He said they were infected with birch bore and there was nothing we could do; that we should enjoy them while they lasted but was clear that wouldn't be very long.

My wife, Pauline, who often gets bored with the advice of experts, refused this depressing diagnosis and came up with a treatment of her own. She simply stood under these condemned trees and prayed for them. Now, more than a decade after our birch trees were pronounced terminal, they are thriving. This morning they received their spring spraying and the professional who did the job (from the same company who pronounced their imminent demise) left a note saying how good they look. It's not the first time answered prayer has bugged professional pessimists.

Thirty years ago, when we came to see this lot, thinking about building, there wasn't a colorful bud or blossom on it. One spindly maple tree stood on each front corner, near the street, and most of the topsoil had been scraped away, leaving bare gravel.

"It's a beautiful lot," my visionary wife said.

I couldn't imagine what she saw that I didn't.

The natural beauty surrounding us was evident: the hills in the background, the lakes; but the lot looked pretty bleak to me. Still, knowing Pauline's eye for beauty was sharper than mine, I agreed to the purchase and over the years I've watched the picture she saw that day develop.

A few years ago, while walking around our once barren lot, I counted forty eight trees, thirty six shrubs and a variety of flowers all seeming to be placed as if some great plan had required them to be there. And, of course, it had: Pauline's plan.

This transformation from barrenness to beauty didn't just happen, it was designed and required plenty of time and hard work, much like the plan and process God uses to change us from what we are to what we can be.

Design demands a designer. And an increasing number of thinkers are accepting this simple, yet sensible, truth. Their view, known as intelligent design (ID), is gaining respect in academia and the media.

Why not?

How else can we explain those thought to be terminal who have lived long and happy lives in answer to the prayers of those who refused to give up on them? What else could have transformed those who were once so bored with life that they were seduced by suicide into praising, productive, people?

The wonders of nature and miraculous changes in people cause faith to blossom.

No wonder! God's ID is all over them.

He has to battle the tricky, red-faced Carr, a man who "gives terrible names to wonderful things." The mayor of their town gives them five things to name, and the final one, "that very strange feeling, a dreamy kind of cheer, the feeling that makes you feel so good when a special friend is near," stumps Carr. # Dandelions deserve better treatment at hands of man

OAKLAND ... NATURALLY

JONATHAN SCHECHTER

I failed to notice the "despised lawn weed" until the stranger emerged silently from a marsh marigold-lined stream bank in the dry cedar woods of northern Michigan. She glanced about, and purposefully strolled to the lake's edge, settling in among a clump of dandelions. She sat in my favorite spot, cradled by the earth, caressed by wind. That was reason enough to make my introduction. Her accent hinted British. Another alien.

About eight hours after the dandelion-induced introduction, lightning flashed over the lake. Soon, silhouettes of a few dozen rural firefighters shimmered in front of vortexes of twisting flame that illuminated the needles of tinder dry hemlocks. She and I hunkered down amidst a confluence of fire, earth and water to watch the night drama in a pleasingly tangled world of cedars, with a cast of loons, coyotes, barred owls, and a least one exhausted steelhead trapped under a log in an icy cold stream.

The steelhead would die. The owls remained silent. The firefighters disappeared into the darkness. Perhaps a coyote howled. We talked of beautiful lakes around the world. As a storm front raced across the lake, pushing the smoke away and giving rhythm to waves, she confirmed her alien status. Dandelions were forgotten.

The next afternoon, I reluctantly drifted south, just another sardine packed into the tin can of I-75, and a few hours later I crossed the Oakland County line. Within minutes of crossing, I could not help notice the abundance of dandelions. I thought back to the British woman smiling among her delicate patch of precariously located lakeside dandelions, for it was her ancestors, and mine and yours, that brought the alien dandelion to the New World. Now, we ignore the dandelion until the yellow heads speckle the landscape creating wild beauty, or in so many homeowner's view, a target for warfare.

A continuing battle

With just a few dozen miles to go before reaching home, I stumbled upon multiple scenes of homeowners waging war. Homeowners armed with metal prongs, ripping out dandelions by their deep roots. And here and there, lawn "service" trucks parked at curbside, as rubber-booted "lawn-thugs" sprayed dandelions with military-style determination. Wasted effort. And then I remembered what day I had missed, again.

May 5 and 6 heralded the seventh annual return of the Dandelion Mayfest and National Dandelion Cookoff at Breitenbach Wine Cellars on Old Rt 39 in Dover, Ohio. Perhaps next year I will attend the celebration. Dandelions – when prepared properly – are delicious, edible and highly nutritious treats, a fact that has been stated and restated and confirmed and reconfirmed time and time again. If you don't want to take the word of the now-deceased guru of edible wonders, Euell Gibbons, then you should delve into the works of international known ethnobotanist and author, Dr. Peter Gail, who is also the president of Defenders of Dandelions. Some orderly folks would not like this man.

"The 'dandy' irony, says Gail, "is that we go to garden centers each spring to buy herbicides to kill our dandelions, and then go the grocery or health food store and buy them back in over 200 commercial products which contain dandelion as a primary ingredient. Both the chemical and the herbal industries are laughing all the way to the bank at how ignorant we are about the nutritional and health-promoting virtues of this remarkable plant."

And today, as I scribbled a few notes and thought back to the wilder nature of northern Michigan, I happened to glance down to the barn. Three sets of reptilian-appearing legs moved stealthily through my field. Every few seconds, the emus paused and ripped at the earth. The prey? Dandelion heads. Perhaps you should take their lead and put dandelions to good digestive use. You might as well accept the fact that the deep-rooted dandelion aliens have achieved permanency.

Give up fighting them. Go eat'em.

Do not share this column with your lawn service company. They won't like me.

Regional weekend: It's time to all it all on the line

It's time to lay it all on the line.

With regional weekend for girls golf, boys tennis, and boys and girls track & field just a couple days away, for each athlete that has hopes of participating at the state finals June 2-3 for the above-mentioned sports, this weekend is the time to shine.

Here's a breakdown of what Clarkston, Lake Orion and Oxford can expect at there regionals this weekend.

■ Tennis anyone: Both Clarkston and Lake Orion are enjoying fine seasons, with Clarkston winning the OAA Division II and Lake Orion the OAA Division III. But both have a daunting task to finish in the top two Friday at the Troy Athens Regional to advance to the Division I state finals. On hand at Athens, arguably the most competitive regional in the state, is top-ranked Birmingham Brother Rice, and three other ranked teams in West Bloomfield, Troy and Troy Athens.

Realistically, Clarkston, which has a dual-match win over state-ranked Rochester Adams, should finish in the top five, but with this many quality teams, scoring 16 points to become an additional state qualifier is just too difficult for the Wolves, as well as for Troy and Athens.

As for Lake Orion, the Dragons just don't have the guns to post a threat. Rice and West Bloomfield, the OAA Division I champion, are the class of this region. Stick's Picks: Brother Rice and West Bloomfield advance to the state finals June 2-3.

On the links: Clarkston is enjoying a fine debut season, finishing fourth at both the Oakland County Division II and Eccentric tournaments, and Lake Orion leapfrogged from sixth to third place this season in the OAA Division III. But despite their progress, both will have a difficult time advancing from the Saginaw Heritage Regional, which will take place next Monday at Sawmill Golf Course.

Brighton, Davison and Grand Blanc are three traditional powers and are the favorites to move on. Stick's Picks: Brighton, Grand Blanc and Davison advance to the Division I state finals June 2-3.

Oxford will be one will be one of five Oakland County schools heading to the Hartland Division II Regional on Friday, held at Hunter's Ridge Golf Course. The Wildcats have had an up-and-down season, but should finish in the upper half at this regional But will they have a low enough score? Stick's Picks: Clio, Flint Powers Catholic and Hartland advance to the Division II state finals June 2-3.

■ Keeping on track: Clarkston and Lake Orion will compete at the Division I Port Huron Northern Regional, while Division II Oxford will head to Linden on Friday.

At Port Nuron, both Clarkston and Lake Orion will contend for the regional titles in the boys meet, while these two teams will battle for second behind state power Romeo on the girls side.

As for individuals, there should be a bevy of state qualifiers.

In the boys meet, expect Clarkston and Lake Orion to go 1-2 in the 3200-meter relay. The Wolves will also score tons of points in the distance races. David Sage is favored to win the 1600 and 3200 runs, teammates Kevin Breen and Brett Quantz should go under 2-minutes in the 800. Rafael Fauza is also a threat in the high jump, Bubba Clement could qualify in the shot put, and the Wolves' 1600 relay quartet is among the best in Southeastern Michigan.

As for Lake Orion, Spencer Aston (1600) and Michael Colt (3200) have shots at qualifying, hurdlers James Johnson and Nick Stout are both destined for glory, Andy Paulsen could beat the mark in the discus, and Brad Miller is among the leaders in the

Wolves become Lahser's latest victim

Clarkston's girls soccer team stayed with state-ranked Bloomfield Hills Lahser for half Tuesday evening, but not even junior Sarah Morgan could keep the powerful Knights at bay in a 5-0 OAA Division II loss.

BY MIKE SCOTT
SPECIAL WRITER

Clarkston learned on a rainy Tuesday night why Bloomfield Hills Lahser is considered one of the favorites to win the Division II state championship in girls soccer.

Even on the slick field, third-ranked Lahser's superior speed up front was evident in a 5-0 Oakland Activities Association Division II victory over Clarkston in Bloomfield Hills. It was the Knights' second shutout of the season against Clarkston.

For the Wolves (5-6-4, 3-4-3), it was a storyline that has plagued them in losses all season, as Clarkston was unable to muster much of an offensive attack. Then again, very few teams have been able to score on Lahser (15-1-0, 9-0-0) all season.

Senior Erin Galloway's header off a cornerkick nearly 10 minutes into the first half proved to be the game-winner, but the Wolves stayed close for the next 45 minutes, largely because of the play of junior goalie Sarah Morgan, who made well over 30 saves on the evening.

Lahser, which attempted 50 shots, finally began converting on some of the scoring chances 15 minutes into the second half when senior forward Mari Gorga pounced on a loose ball in front of the Clarkston net and beat Morgan for a 2-0 lead. One minute later senior sweeper Jamie Chioni scored from just inside the penalty box for a three-goal advantage — and the Wolves never came close to threatening the Lahser net again.

"I think the girls stepped up their intensity a little bit in the second half," said Lahser coach Gary French, whose team has been ranked among the top three squads in Division II all season. "We did a better job of following our shots in and getting second chances."

Freshman Lindsey Walker and senior goalkeeper Jenny Bernhart, who moved to forward in the closing minutes, scored late goals for Lahser, which has already clinched the OAA II title. Lahser's lone defeat came at the hands of Troy Athens, ranked No. 1 in Division I, in early April.

Clarkston coach Tami Mitchell was pleased with her team's first-half performance and praised Morgan for keeping the score respectable throughout the match.

"I think there's no question she's an all-state goalie with the performance she had tonight," said Mitchell, who will lead her team against another state-ranked squad in Troy this evening. "Some of the saves she made were unbelievable.

"In the first half we did a pretty good job covering their runs, but the girls seemed to let down once they scored in

Clarkston's boys of summer rebound from slump to sweep Rochester

BY DANIEL STICKRADT
STAFF WRITER
dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

Both Clarkston and Rochester have hit a mid-season slump on the baseball diamond. So when the two met up on Monday, something had to give.

After being in command, visiting Rochester succumbed to Clarkston's powerful batting lineup in the bottom of the fifth inning, where the Wolves scored four runs to tie the game at 5-5. And then Clarkston blew the game open with a four-run sixth inning en route to a 9-5 league triumph.

The two teams also played a six-inning non-league game following the OAA Division I contest, and the Wolves (13-7, 5-3) were able to post the sweep with a 14-9 triumph over the Falcons (8-13, 3-5), who have lost an uncharacteristic five straight and seven of their last eight.

"We're slowly starting to come out of it," said Clarkston coach Phil Price. "We have been slumping as of late. Slowly but surely, we're starting to return to the way were playing before. We still have a long way to go, however. We can play so much better than we have been playing."

Clarkston did not start two of its top players in Chris Mitchell and Francis Hodges in the first game, but the two were inserted in the fifth inning and were instrumental in helping the Wolves rally for the win, which kept them in third place in the seven-team division.

Mitchell belted a two-run single to left, which was part of the four-run fifth, and then added the game-winning RBI single in the sixth-inning explosion to help the Wolves. Hodges, meanwhile, belted a double and later scored an insurance run in the sixth, while the senior right-hander came on in relief and pitched the final two innings, allowing just two hits with three strikeouts for the win.

"I sat those two out because they have been struggling a little, but they came in and gave us a lift," said Price of Mitchell and Hodges. "They were key reasons why we rallied to win."

Rochester scored its five runs over the first three innings, courtesy of a two-run triple from senior Ryan Good in the first, an RBI single from senior Jeff Goins in the second, and an RBI double from junior Court Berry-Tripp and a sacrifice fly from sophomore Dan Takashima in the third.

However, the Falcons struggled from that point on and couldn't push any more runs across the plate.

"We looked good there for a while, but then things kind of fell apart," said Rochester veteran coach Bob Dieters. "But Clarkston is a good team, and good teams can hurt you like that."

Clarkston senior Bret Gove went 4-for-5 with an RBI triple and Brett Crawford laced two hits and scored twice to lead Clarkston in the opener. Sophomore Grant Abraham was 2-for-2

Clarkston thinclads sweep Rochester

Wolves' boys contingent inches closer to OAA Division I title; regionals, league meet on deck

BY DANIEL STICKRADT
STAFF WRITER
dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

The weather was a bit misty, but nothing was going to dampen Clarkston's hopes for an Oakland Activities Association Division I track & field title.

The Wolves' boys contingent, despite the weather, toppled visiting Rochester 77-51 Tuesday to finish its dual meet season a perfect 6-0. Clarkston's girls also posted a victory — by the slimmest of margins — edging Rochester 65-63 after the Wolves won the 1600-meter relay to clinch the win.

"That was big," said Clarkston girls coach Gordie Richardson, whose squad finished 5-1 in the ultra-competitive league. "This was just a great meet — an exciting meet."

Clarkston's boys coach Walt Wyniemko knew his thinclads needed a stellar effort against the Falcons (3-2, 3-2), a team that defeated perennial power Pontiac Northern last week, and the Wolves more than rose to the occasion.

"These guys stepped up despite the conditions," said, Wyniemko, whose squad needs at least a second place showing at the OAA Division I championships for a league title. "This is a great senior class; great senior leadership and these guys want (a league championship) bad. These seniors are very instrumental in us going undefeated in this league."

Clarkston won 10 of the 16 events en route to the win, but Rochester coach Mark Merlo isn't displeased with the pair of setbacks.

"Every time we race Clarkston, it's a competitive meet," he said. "We had some very good performances despite the weather; both teams did. Clarkston was just a little better than us today. But I am not unhappy with how we competed as a whole."

In the boys meet, Clarkston's 3200 relay unit of Dan Burke, Matt Haver, Brett Quantz and Kevin Breen got things started for the Wolves with a first-place clocking of 8:26.0.

David Sage added three wins, breaking the tape in the 800 (2:02.2), 1600 (4:28.5) and 3200 (9:59.1). Junior Mark Carlson also won the 400 (51.8), Adam Gebus the 200 (23.1), Kevin Breen the long jump (19-9.75) and Rafael Fauza the high jump (5-10) for the Wolves.

Clarkston also added two more relay victories, as the foursome of Shane Bennett, Carlson, Cody Senkyr and Adam Gebus won the 800 relay (1:34.4), while the unit of Paul Mesi, Carlson, Senkyr and Paul Tinetti crossed first in the 1600 relay (3:37.0).

Eric Thielemans paced Rochester with a pair of wins, taking the 110 hurdles (15.3) and 300 hurdles (40.4). Eddie Hillary also won the shot put (50-5), Adam Cooley the discus (124-6), Brian Parker the 100 (11.2), and the foursome of Matt Ferstle, Christian Hutchinson, Sydney Hicks and Parker the 400 relay (44.7).

The girls meet, however, was much closer, but Clarkston's unit of Brittani Brewer, Nina Zamora, Nicole Fisher and Rachel Uchman edged Rochester by four seconds in the 1600 relay with a time of 4:12.5.

Brewer also won the high jump (4-10), 100 hurdles (17.4) and 300 hurdles (50.3). Lindsay Brandt added a win in the 400 (1:03.0), Uchman won a competitive 800 (2:26.1) and the long jump (15-6.5), and Kirsty Walford took the 200 (28.5).

The Wolves also won the 3200 relay (10:32.0) with the foursome of Karyn Erkfritz, Carla Delvecchio, Uchman and Fisher.

For Rochester, Leigha Christian won both the 1600 (5:18.0) and 3200 (12:04.0). Jane Schell topped the field in the shot put (33-10), Amy Bicknell the discus (97-2) and Rachel Roth the 100 (13.7).

The Falcons also picked up a pair of wins in the sprint relays, as the unit of Roth, Megan Giessl, Megan Matuzak and Lindsay Malik won the 800 relay (1:54.9), and the group of Roth, Lisa

Wolves finish 3rd at Fred Pieper softball tourney

BY BRAD MONASTIERE
STAFF WRITER
bmonastiere@oe.homecomm.net

Clarkston's softball team has made a couple of terrific showings at the tournaments it's been in this year, yet has nothing to show for it.

The Wolves went 4-1 at Saturday's Fred Pieper Memorial Tournament in Royal Oak, losing to Clinton Township Chippewa Valley in the semifinals, 6-2. The teams were tied 2-2 until junior pitcher Lisa Ferguson twisted an ankle sliding back into first, and had to leave the game. Senior pitcher Candace Morgan rebounded from the loss to pitch Clarkston to a well-earned 2-1 win over Hartland in the tournament consolation game.

In pool play, Clarkston (21-9) defeated a pair of state-ranked teams on its way to taking first. In the opener, the Wolves shut out Flushing 3-0 and edged Richmond 2-1, between routing Detroit King 12-1. Ferguson won all three games on the mound for Clarkston.

"We got very good defensive play all day," Clarkston coach Al Land said. "Our wins over Flushing and Richmond were well-played games by both teams, and we did just enough to win both."

After Ferguson got hurt against Chippewa Valley, Morgan had to come in cold from the field and pitch to one of Macomb County's top teams. Land said her rustiness showed, while Clarkston's offense couldn't generate any support, ending the Wolves' hopes of winning the two-day tournament.

"Candace just wasn't warmed up enough to pitch to a team like that," Land said. "We can win ballgames with Candace, and she came back and pitched very well against Hartland, a pretty good team."

Senior Melanie Arnold played her usual game in the tournament, getting on base 15 out of 18 times she was at bat. Land also complimented the play of junior catcher Tracey Honey, saying she stepped into a tough spot and has excelled.

"Tracey is as good a catcher as we've had here in recent years, though Amanda Jenkinson was pretty good," Land said. "She's a talker back there, and has a nice, strong arm. She's done a good job at learning the position and deserves a lot of credit for helping us have the season we are."

Ferguson could be out from one to three weeks, and is just the latest Clarkston player to be nagged by injuries. Junior Nicole Thrift, who was having a nice offensive season, jammed a thumb and didn't play in last week's sweep of Royal Oak Kimball. Junior shortstop Lindsay Simko also has injured ribs and is questionable for the Adams game.

Land said his biggest concern is two-fold. Getting the players healthy, and making sure the team's chemistry isn't disrupted when they return.

"If we were healthy, I would be concerned about getting ready for districts," Land said. "But I worry about how much time we'll need after they come back to get used to playing together again. I just hope we can get everyone back by then."

On Friday, the Wolves host Rochester Adams in another key league showdown, starting at 4 p.m.

Tran, Malik and Giessl won the 400 relay (55.6).

Both schools will compete in regionals this weekend, Clarkston at Port Huron Northern and Rochester at West Bloomfield, before heading to Rochester Adams Tuesday for the seven-team OAA Division I league championships.

high jump.

In the girls meet, Lake Orion's Ashley Patten is expect to qualify in four events, the 100 hurdles, 300 hurdles, the 800, and the 1600 relay.

The Dragons also have senior sprinters Nikki Brown, Andi Thomas, Somer George, and Kelly Gleeson, along with sophomore sprinters Holley McClusky, Nicole Perryman and Crystal Adams, that could sneak in either the 100 or 200, or as members of the 400-, 800- or 1600-meter relay units. There are a lot of close seeds in these events, so it should be interesting.

As for Clarkston, the Wolves should dust the field in the 3200 relay, and challenge Lake Orion and Flint Central in the 1600 relay. Nicole Fisher (800, 1600, 3200 relay, 1600 relay) and Rachel Uchman (long jump, 800, 1600 relay, 3200 relay) could be multiple-event qualifiers, while Brittani Brewer (high jump, 300 hurdles, 100 hurdles, 1600 relay) is another individual who could score big and qualify. Karyn Erkfritz (3200 relay), Carla Delvecchio (3200), Nina Zamora (1600 relay, 3200 relay) and Lindsay Brandt (high jump) are other Wolves that could reach the standard.

As for the team winners, here we go. Stick's Picks: Clarkston (boys) and Romeo (girls) win team titles.

At the Linden Regional, Oxford's Karen LeRoy (800, 1600, 3200, 3200 relay) is a bona fide four-event qualifier. Caryn Inman (400, 1600 relay, 3200 relay), Payge Salquist (1600 relay, 3200 relay) and Megan McTaggert (1600 relay, 3200 relay) could also head to the state finals.

On the boys side, Oxford's best shot comes from senior Eric Ghiaciuc (shot put) and Chris Daniels (high jump). Scott Davidson (300 hurdles) could also pull off a surprise.

As for teams, based on scouting reports, look for an out-of-the-area school to take home trophies Stick's Picks: Corunna wins both meets.

Wolves 4th at Clarkston Invite

BY DANIEL STICKRADT
STAFF WRITER
dstickradt@oe.homecomm.net

A swirling wind had an effect on many of the performers at Saturday's Clarkston Track & field Invitational, but not enough to slow Lake Orion's fine season.

The Dragons continued their best season in school history at the girls-only meet, scoring 70 points to finish third in the 13-team field.

Detroit Renaissance, the two-time defending Class B state champions, won the meet title with 87 points, while Pontiac Northern edged out Lake Orion for second with 71 points.

Clarkston was fourth with 66 points, while Sterling Heights Stevenson (56), Birmingham Marian (29), Warren Mott (25), Berkley (22), Bloomfield Hills Lahser (21), Northville (19), Bloomfield Hills Andover (14), Sterling Heights (10) and West Bloomfield (2) rounded out the field.

"Considering it was the day after prom and the terrible wind, we still did well," said Lake Orion girls coach Sharon Kline. "Another thing that hurt us was that Holly McClusky got hurt in the long jump and we had to take her out of the two sprint relays. But overall, I'm pleased."

Lake Orion won three events, courtesy of the legs of Ashley Patten. The sophomore won the 100 hurdles (16.0) and 800 meters (2:18.7), and joined forces with Melissa Ehrecke, Crystal Adams and Julia Cummins for the win in the 1600-meter relay (4:13.1).

Host Clarkston rode the strength of three victories to its fourth-place finish, as the unit of Nina Zamora, Nicole Fisher, Karyn Erkfritz and Rachel Uchman won the 3200 relay (9:48.3), while the foursome of Beth Randall, Courtney Bates, Jesse Ressler and Sarah Stolk won the novice relay (4:53.8), a rare event which encompasses a 400, 200, 200 and 800 in order. Fisher also won the 1600 meters (5:25.5).

"Detroit Renaissance is a very good team," said Kline. "They have classy coaches and were good in a lot of events. I don't mind finishing behind a team like them."

Both Lake Orion and Clarkston compete Saturday at the Port Huron Northern Division I Regional.

the second half," Mitchell continued. "There's no question they are a great team."

French was not surprised that his team was able to use its superior team speed to an advantage even on a wet surface. In the second half, Lahser consistently beat the Clarkston defense with long passes up the middle to such forwards as sophomore Anne Hafeli, senior Defne Altan and Walker, a sophomore.

"We try to get forward in our attack as much as we can and overall we did that tonight" concluded French.

and scored a run for Rochester.

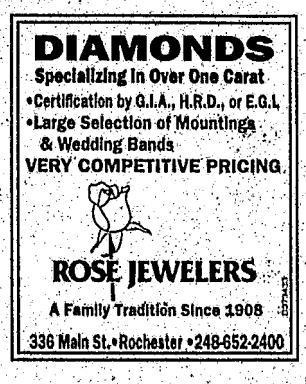

In the nightcap, Clarkston freshman pitcher Matt Orris got his first varsity win, going all six innings before the game was called due to darkness. Junior Rob Bryan led the way by going 3-for-3, including a double and a three-run homer for five RBI. Hodges added three hits and Gove contributed two hits for the Wolves.

Good led Rochester with three hits and scored twice.

I know it's lame, but it's National Safe Boating Week

Outdoor insights

BILL PARKER

While near record low water levels are the biggest concern for most of Michigan's nearly 1 million registered boaters let's not forget about boating safety as we head into National Safe Boating Week, May 20-26.

Last year, 28 people died in boating-related accidents and 23 of them were not wearing a life jacket.

"If life jackets had been worn, it's possible that 23 of these Michigan boaters may still be alive today," said Van Snider, president of the Livonia-based Michigan Boating Industries Association.

The fatal accidents weren't limited to large pleasure boats either.

Twenty-one of the 27 boats involved in fatal accidents were 16 feet or less in length. Ten of the 27 did not have a motor and 14 of them were kayaks, canoes, rowboats, paddleboats and/or personal watercrafts.

The theme for this year's National Safe Boating Week is "Wear Your Life Jacket – Boat Smart from the Start," which pretty much sums it up.

Michigan law mandates that every boat must have at least one Coast Guard approved life jacket, in the appropriate size, on board for every passenger.

If your boat is 16 feet in length or greater you must also have a throwable flotation device. In addition, life jackets must be worn by water skiers, people riding personal watercrafts, and children under age six.

Boating has a $3 million impact annually on Michigan's economy according to the MBIA. The state features 1,406 public access sites, 800 marinas, 860 marine dealers, 115 boat manufacturers, 131 trailer and accessory manufacturers and 86 Great Lakes Recreational Harbors.

If you're in the market for a new or used boat, or are simply interested in seeing what's on the market plan a trip to Metro Beach Metropark in Mount Clemens for the annual Spring Boat Show, the unofficial kickoff to the boating season.

Boat show on tap

Sponsored by Boat Show USA, the event features hundreds of boats, trailers and boating accessories. Show hours are noon-8 p.m. each day. Admission is $5 for adults and children under age 12 will be admitted free.

If you're planning an outing to one of Michigan's 11,000 inland lakes or, especially, to one of the Great Lakes, its a good idea to call ahead to see if the particular ramp you plan to use in operation. Dozens of private facilities have already closed up shop and 10 state-run boat ramps on the Great Lakes are restricted to small boats only. Ramps in Chippewa, Delta, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Huron, Manistee, and Leelanau counties have restrictions in place and the DNR has removed the skid piers from these sites.

To check if a state-run facilities is open to all boats or not call the DNR's Parks and Recreation Division at 517-373-9900, or visit the DNR Web site at www.dnr.state.mi.us.

Salmon Stakes results

The 22nd annual River Crab Salmon Stakes charity fishing tournament, held April 29 in St. Clair, netted $97,000 for family service clinics throughout Michigan and set a record for participation as 1,562 anglers entered the event.

Ron Maschke had the biggest King salmon at 18.75 pounds, John Richardson caught the largest steelhead at 7.2 pounds, Danny Owen landed the biggest brown trout at 10.18 pounds and Steve Jackson took the top prize in the coho salmon division with a fish that weighed 3.4 pounds.

NAWA Tourney results

Kelley Howard of Garden City and Ryan Lescoe of Westland teamed up to place sixth in the recent North American Walleye Anglers Team Tournament on Lake Erie.

The two local anglers were fishless on the first day of the two-day tournament, but dominated the second day with a four-fish catch that went 20.52 pounds, including the big fish of the tournament that weighed 8.76 pounds. The next closest competitor on the second day weighed in just 9.22 pounds. They pocketed $438 dollars for their effort.

Steven Butler of Westland and Jim DeVries of Canton placed 11th with three fish that weighed 7.03 pounds. Waterford's Byron Niekamp and Moe Niekamp, of New Bremon, Ohio, placed 13th with two fish that weighed 5.34 pounds.

(Bill Parker writes a weekly outdoor column for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. Hunters and anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to: Outdoors, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI 48009.)

Tree-mendous

Planting an idea: Working with forestry experts, A FAMILY TREE of Rochester Hills has created the Tree Hugger, meant to commemorate life through a tree. The product is a 2-by-6-inch, stainless steel plaque. It "hugs" the tree by means of a light tension spring that is encased in plastic and expands as the tree grows, holding the plaque securely but gently in place. The metal won't rust or release toxins into the tree. The Tree Hugger will grow with a tree from birth to maturity, or it can fit an existing tree (just give the size when ordering). A FAMILY TREE will engrave a name or custom message on the plaque to preserve a memory, note an event or honor an accomplishment. Cost is $39.95, which covers 24 engraved characters; additional characters are 25 cents per letter. Call (248) 651-5210 or visit www.afamilytree.com

Center of attention

By design: *Mia and Kurt Voparil, founders of Watch Hill Antiques and Interiors, announce the recent opening of the Watch Hill Birmingham Design Center, 645 S. Eton in Birmingham. The 8,000-square foot showroom was created as a "one-stop shopping" destination for the home and garden by partnering with other area companies. It offers European country antiques, custom pine furniture, pine and cherry tables, chairs, mirrors, original wall art and an extensive line of eclectic home accessories. Idea gathering, interior design and custom orders are featured services. The design center complements the Voparils' store at 330 E. Maple in downtown Birmingham. ## Super bowl

A-commode-ating art: *The Sally Huss Gallery, 415 Main in Rochester, offers handpainted sinks and commodes by local artists JoAnna Pillsbury and Juliann Roush. These fish and mermaids are one of their designs. The pieces are fired at 2,000 degrees after the painting, so the designs are there to stay. The pedestal sink retails for $650, the commode for $998. # File claims now on defective heater part

JOE GAGNON

The phone is ringing at a mighty clip for the appliance doctor these days. Calls are coming in from all over Michigan from homeowners who are hearing for the first time about the defective dip tube in hot water tanks.

Missouri courts have decided on a settlement between the six hot water tank manufacturers and plaintiffs so that all six manufacturers will be paying the costs of having the problem corrected.

If you have a hot water heater made between August 1993 and October 1996 and it carries one of the following brand names — American Water Heater Co., A.O. Smith, Bradford White, Lochinvar, Rheem Manufacturing and State Industries — you may be having the problem. There are some exceptions, such as Sears Kenmore products, which do not have the defective dip tube installed on their products. Retailers Home Depot and Lowes also state their products do not contain the defective part. That means 14 million hot water heaters are defective, rather than the original estimates of 24 million.

For those of you who have had the repairs completed, you only have until the end of June to make a claim. This proof of claim you must file will entitle you to $175 in reimbursement costs. If your costs were higher than this amount, the claim will be handled by a special panel.

Anyone who has not taken action by now must request a claim form which they will use to receive the needed repairs. This form must be requested before the end of December 2000. You will have only six months from the date on the claim form to call the plumber, after that, you're out of luck. The claim forms can be obtained by calling 1-800-329-0561 or writing to Dip Tube Litigation, Claims Administrator, P.O. Box 9338, Garden City, NY 11530-9338. You can also visit the web site at www.diptubesettlement.com

My opinion

I've just found out that the manufacturers are all getting together and bringing a lawsuit against the company that produced the defective dip tube. I have asked since I discovered this problem, why do all manufacturers buy a dip tube from only one company in this country? Something is not right here.

The other major thing that bothers me is who knows about this defective dip tube. We know, you and I, and many homeowners around our immediate area, but what about the rest of the country? I can tell you for a fact that even though we received excellent coverage by the media around here, and ABC television reported on the issue, many millions of Americans are in the dark on this subject. I'm getting calls from around the country from people who were talking to a relative in Michigan. I have not seen or heard any concentrated effort by these six manufacturers to educate or make the public aware. Does this mean that the more consumers who don't file a claim equals a lesser payout by the product producers? They have set deadlines that are very early, even though they spent three years selling us the defective products. Something is not right here.

You might note that I was not invited to the settlement hearing held three weeks ago in Kansas City. If so, we would still be in front of the judge. I believe that hot water tanks were once made to last 15 years or longer. Now, they last five to seven years. That is a shameful disgrace.

I find it almost impossible to trust a producer of products who did virtually nothing to make the public aware of their defective hot water tanks. Have you ever seen the inside of a hot water tank after you have used it for several years? Let the world of science make this their story, meanwhile stay tuned.

George Lott of Livonia wants to know whether he should purchase an extended warranty for three years for $160 on a new furnace and air conditioner from the company that installed it. The warranty would cover labor and parts except for the the humidifier and the thermostat.

"After looking in the original warranty I find that the ALL the parts are guaranteed from the original installation for three years, so I'm actually only saving on the labor for an additional three years for $160," Lott writes.

"The company, when questioned, would not provide any further information even when pressed, stating that my canceled check was all I need for proof of the additional policy."

I believe George should purchase the home warranty plan from utilities (Edison or Consumers Energy) and he will be further ahead.

Joe Kern of Dearborn Heights noticed a small amount of a white sand substance at the bottom of his hot water heater when he drains it every two weeks.

That is nothing but mineral matter, and it's nothing to worry about.

'Fabrique technique' sets confidence in style

BY MARY KLEMIC
At Home Editor

mklemic@oe.homecomm.net

If the thought of mixing and matching fabrics gets you mixed up and feeling you're no match for it, think again.

Interior designer Jennifer Birdsong Raffo has developed a way to help make decorating easy. Called "fabrique technique," the system starts with choosing a fabric. This is the "anchor fabric," and the decorating scheme is built on that.

"(People) think there's a big mystery (to interior design) and there's not," Raffo said by phone from Stuart, Fla., where she is the owner and president of a residential and commercial design firm, Della Bella Interiors. "I'm trying to take the guesswork and mystery out of it."

Raffo, who has worked as a designer for more than 20 years, wrote a book, Fabrique Technique. She presents seminars that go step-by-step through the selection and coordination of fabrics. Her technique can be a tool for both consumers and interior designers, encouraging confidence and communication.

Raffo will give a seminar 2-4 p.m. Saturday, May 20, at the Jo-Ann etc store, 43570 W. Oaks Drive in Novi. Cost is $15. The first 30 people who pre-register will have their names entered in a raffle for a free Fabrique Technique book that will take place at the end of the event. For more information, call Jo-Ann etc at (248) 449-8491.

Raffo encourages people to trust their instincts. "You can do it" is a theme that runs throughout her book and her conversation. At her seminars, she has participants go and select a fabric, telling them it should be "something that calls to you."

"Everybody has a creative side," she said.

Your anchor fabric should be "something that you love," Raffo said. It could even be an area rug. And you don't have to start with designing an entire room.

"If you want to start small, start with throw pillows, a footstool, a valance treatment," she said. "That way you haven't invested a lot of money. It's a great way to get your feet wet."

The colors (for floors and walls) and additional fabrics you select are based on your anchor fabric.

As you choose fabrics to coordinate with the anchor fabric, classify them according to six characteristics: color (each fabric should have at least one color in common), pattern size (there should be one small, one medium and one large pattern), pattern shape (curved and straight), contrast, texture and sheen.

Raffo always liked to mix and match fabrics. A client told her, "I've never known anyone like you who knows how to mix and match fabrics," Raffo said. When she couldn't answer the client's question about how she did it, the book was the result.

"'That's the problem with you artists,'" Raffo said the client told her. "'You never stop to analyze why you do what you do.'

"I took her challenge upon myself (to) figure out why I did what I did. It took me a year to figure it all out."

It took Raffo another 2 1/2 years to get her fabrique technique patented. The book was published in 1998.

(The book is sold in fabric stores, not bookstores, for $19.95. To find where it is available or to order it, call Raffo at (877) 223-0394; or visit Amazon.com or Raffo's Web site, www.fabrique-technique.com)

"I was trying to make it easy for any consumer to understand," Raffo said. "I didn't put in big words or terms they wouldn't understand."

The compact (about 8 inches square), spiral-bound book makes it easy in other ways, too. It is a handy workbook that is convenient to carry and features stickers to put on fabrics and space for notes and figures.

Toronto offers garden delights

MARTY FIGLEY

Now that summer vacation is upon us, or will be soon, a trip to Toronto and a visit to some of the neat nurseries and lovely gardens may fit into your plans.

My reason for going was to attend the annual meeting of the Garden Writers Association of America. To make matters simple, I took the train out of Windsor.

The trip took about four hours so I packed a lunch, although food is available on the train. It's a nice, easy ride. Toronto is about 240 miles from this area, so driving would take about five or six hours.

For information, call Rail Canada at (800) 561-3949.

There is lots to do in Toronto, from museums, shopping and eating to visiting some very special places. Public transportation is excellent.

One particular place the children would love (and so would you) is Cullen's Gardens and Miniature Village in Whitby, Ontario. Call (800) 461-1821 for the hours.

A total of 160 1/12 scale buildings are displayed throughout the 38 acres. The buildings are arranged in gardens such as the rose and topiary, peacock den and ruins. Several miniature trains run in and out of the gardens and are quite a sight. Special floral displays take place throughout the year.

For water garden aficionados, a visit to Picov's Water Garden Centre and Fisheries, the site of 10,000 square feet of state-of-the-art fish raising and holding facilities, is a must. It's very close to Cullen's.

A short ferry ride to the Toronto Islands will put you in another world, away from the hustle and bustle of the city. Some of the gardens are very formal or full of fun. Many recreational activities are offered.

The ferry is on Queen's Quay West at the foot of Bay Street, just minutes from downtown. For a ferry schedule, call (416) 391-8193; for island information, (416) 391-8195.

This June marks the first anniversary of the Toronto Music Garden. It is also on Queen's Quay.

Part of the city's 40-acre Harbourfront parkland system, this garden springs from the imagination of renowned cellist Yo-Yo Ma, garden designer Julie Moir Messervy and filmmaker Niv Fichman. The garden is made up of six "movements" inspired by the First Suite for Unaccompanied Cello by Johann Sebastian Bach. Call (461) 973-3000.

I guess a trip to Toronto wouldn't be complete without a visit to Casa Loma. I arrived too late to tour the castle (and the stable area), but the gardens are lovely and feature eight areas such as the Upper Terrace, Secret Garden and Woodland Walk.

Special garden programs and talks take place at the castle during the summer. Call (426) 923-1171.

Spadina, a restored Victorian garden featuring historic fruit trees and a cutting garden, is magnificent. It's just across the street from Casa Loma.

A gardener's visit to Canada would hardly be complete without a visit to the 2,700-acre Royal Botanical Gardens.

Two acres of roses are quite impressive and in the spring the world's largest lilac collection is overwhelming. The picturesque rock garden constructed in an abandoned gravel pit is another must-visit place.

Over the years this garden has grown to its present size, with 127 cultivated acres and the rest a managed natural area. Trails are provided for easy access.

A Nature Interpretive Center at the Arboretum introduces the general public to the geology, history, wildlife and restoration of the natural area and the largest freshwater marsh restoration project of its kind in North America.

Way to play: Play structures offer benefits along with hours of imaginative play. Children develop social skills and creativity while enjoying the many facets of outdoor play. The equipment helps build healthy minds and bodies. Modular systems provide flexibility for growing families.

Think back to your childhood and the endless hours you spent on your backyard swing set.

Vivid colors adorned the tubular frame that held plastic molded seats hanging from thin chain links, a slanted aluminum slide and maybe even thin, hollow cross-bars off to one side. You didn't seem to mind the screws and nuts protruding out of the A-frame tubes and joints, even if their rusty edges left you with a nasty scratch.

Today, tubular A-frame swing sets have given way to impressive wood structures commonly referred to as play gyms, play systems or playscapes.

When your child is ready for the physical challenges and imaginative play associated with a play structure, it's easy to become confused about which way to turn to make such a substantial investment.

You want quality but might be afraid you'll have to sacrifice the size of the structure to accommodate your budget. The average cost of a play structure is approximately $1,800, which includes some sort of deck clubhouse (or fort), a slide, swings and maybe one or more simpl

Hundreds of play structure choices are available th brochures and catalogs. It's a matter of selecting one th growing needs.

"I think our customer service, overall product appe our product are the items that set us apart," said Traci Rainbow Recreation of Michigan in Northville, a comp own line of redwood play systems.

Play it safe

Beyond budget, environmental protection and appe concerns many parents have about play structures.

"Cargo net climbers work well as ladders. The rungs are set a foot apart so children won't get stuck in them. We also put handles at the top of our ladders for easier grasp."

Consider the number of children you have as well as their ages. The play structure you select should fit the needs of your children.

Meeting needs

"Tailor the structure to your kids' ages, your yard size and the potential to expand the set (modularity)," Noettle said. "If you have a 3-, 5- and 7-year-old, consider accessories you'll need to satisfy all three kids."

Many play structure accessories conform to the needs of younger children.

"Parents have the decks installed lower to the ground," said Rick Schulz of King Bros. in Auburn Hills, a company that carries both the Woodlawn Playcenters and Backyard Adventures lines. "Rocket slides have high sides so they're very appealing to parents of young children."

When you get ready to invest in a play structure, Schulz recommends parents think five years ahead to determine their children's needs both now and then.

Modularity is important. It gives families the opportunity to add on as the children's needs change or disassemble the structure easily in the event of a move.

"You can add on towers and swing beams," Schulz said. "Rock and climbing walls are becoming more popular ways of getting up to the deck.

"People used to worry about their kids getting caught in enclosed turbo slides, but there's really no way they can because the openings are too big."

Older players

While play structures provide your children with endless hours of imaginative play, they also help keep children off busy streets, away from exploring hazardous environments, and within the comforts of their own back yard.

"I've had customers buy systems for their 12- and 13-year-olds," Lampe said. "When we grew up, swing sets didn't support older kids. That's all changed."

Take steps to take it easy as family

DIANA KOENIG

Q: We need some time away together as a family. We aren't sure where to go or how to plan a vacation.

A: Time off from your normal routine is important. My motto is, "Work hard and play hard!" If you work many hours you need to balance this time with rest and relaxation.

Begin by making provision in your household budget to pay for a family vacation. For some people you will need to save money for six months to a year. Other households may have enough cash to make immediate plans.

Look at your calendar and choose the days you want to schedule a trip. Mark "vacation" on the days you have chosen. The number of days you choose will depend on how much vacation time you have and how much money you have budgeted.

Decide where you would like to travel. We are creatures of habit and routine, therefore we tend to repeat vacations that we have enjoyed. Go somewhere new! If you are usually a beach hound, go to the mountains.

Read through travel books and magazines for ideas. Look on the Internet under travel. Rent travel videos of places to visit. Look at photo albums of friends who travel.

Consult your local travel agency for sightseeing attractions and prices. Travel agencies offer a wonderful service. They will save you time shopping for the best prices, they have access to discounts, and they have knowledge and expertise that you may lack.

You may also choose to be your own travel agent. Where do you start once you have chosen where you are going?

■ Call and request tour information from the place that you will be visiting. They will send you hotel, tourist attractions and restaurant information.

■ Use a local coupon book. The coupon books usually have discounts on hotels, car rentals and amusement parks from other states.

■ Call at least 10 hotels in the area you will be visiting. Ask about special discounts. Find out if it includes a breakfast or any meal plan. Ask to speak with the manager. He is more likely to give you a good deal. I have saved additional money just by talking with the hotel manager.

■ Call several car rentals to check rates. They can vary as much as $60. Make sure you get all the facts and you are comparing "like" services. You may save money with one rental agency but it may not include unlimited mileage. Research the facts carefully.

■ Ask the hotel at which you have booked reservations where you can obtain discounts on tourist attractions. Local retail stores you would be familiar with offer discounts that you wouldn't be familiar with.

■ Call several airlines to compare prices. Listen on the radio or television for special rates they periodically offer. If you aren't locked into a particular day there may be discounts for weekday or weekend travel.

■ If you know of a friend or relative who has taken a trip at the location you are planning, ask them for suggestions on food, travel, accommodations and attractions. Pioneering an area is adventurous but can also create some unnecessary stress.

■ As you begin collecting information you will need a system to organize your materials. Don't scatter the papers on your counter where information could easily be misplaced.

■ As you begin collecting information you will need a system to organize your materials. Keep everything pertaining to the trip in a small file box or storage container. Don't be tempted to scatter the papers on your counter where information could easily be misplaced.

Relax and enjoy the wonderful trip you have planned!

Today's refrigerator bulletin: "Create the perfect vacation with organized planning!"

Check it out: Use photo checklist

MONTE NAGLER

We all know that pilots go through an extensive checklist before and during takeoffs and landings to assure that we'll arrive safely at our destinations.

As a photographer, you should go through a checklist also to make sure that your pictures "arrive safely" in your photo album.

Consistently good results depend largely on good habits. Many of the disappointments experienced when pictures come back from the lab can be avoided by using a checklist.

Never assume that everything is all right. Check it once, check it twice – you'll be glad you did. Here's a checklist to get you started:

■ Check to make sure there's film in the camera and it's advancing properly. With manual cameras, watch for the rewind knob to turn as you advance the film. On automatics, "E" for empty will appear on the LED screen.

■ Check to see that the back of the camera is properly closed. And be careful not to knock your camera. The back could pop open and ruin the film.

■ Check battery power. Whether manual or automatic, your camera instructions will show you how.

■ Check to see that the lens is securely fitted to your camera body.

■ Check the ASA setting on your camera. Make sure it corresponds to the film that you're using. Many of the newer cameras automatically read the ASA.

■ Check what film is in your camera, especially if it hasn't been used in a while, and make sure it's the film you want. Placing the end of the film box in the holder on the camera back will always keep you reminded.

■ Check that there is no unwanted filter mounted on the front of the lens. For example, if you've used a polarizer filter during the afternoon, make sure you remove it before snapping those nighttime shots.

■ Check your automatic camera to make certain it's in the right mode for the subject you're shooting. With manual cameras, be sure the shutter speed is fast enough to stop any action or that the aperture is small enough to give you the required depth-of-field.

You can probably come up with more items for your personal checklist. In any case, your photographs are sure to check out for impact when you begin using a checklist.

Check it out: By following his checklist, Monte Nagler was assured that his photo of the Carbel Mountains on the island of Martinique came out just fine.

How sweet it is with these desserts

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

It's May. Graduation parties and weddings are in the developmental stages, and sweet tables maybe the central focus along with the graduates, brides and grooms.

Decorations and linens for the sweet table can pack a visual punch, or you can keep the table a simple backdrop and let the desserts remain center stage.

A retro theme works for either a more casual wedding or a great grad party.

Wayne Harley Brachman, author of "Retro Desserts: Totally Hip, Updated Classic Desserts from the '40s, '50s, '60s and '70s," published by HarperCollins Publishers Inc., 2000 (hardcover, $27), is the perfect resource for completely cool childhood (and certainly some adult) favorites.

CREAM-FILLED DEVIL'S FOOD CUPCAKES

Makes 24 large cupcakes

For the devil's food cake:

Non-stick vegetable spray for coating muffin tin

1 1/4 cups cake flour

1/2 unsweetened Dutch-processed cocoa powder

1 teaspoon baking soda

1/4 teaspoon baking powder

1/2 teaspoon salt

10 tablespoons (1 1/4 sticks) unsalted butter at room temperature

1 1/2 cups sugar

3 large eggs

1/2 cup buttermilk

1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1/2 cup brewed strong, hot coffee

For the vanilla cream filling:

3 tablespoons vegetable shortening

3 tablespoons unsalted butter at room temperature

1 cup confectioners' sugar

1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1 cup light corn syrup

For the ganache frosting:

5 ounces semisweet chocolate, coarsely chopped

3/4 cup heavy cream

1. Make the devil's food cake: Set a rack in the middle of the oven and preheat to 350 degrees F. Generously coat a 12-slot muffin tin with non-stick vegetable spray.

2. Into a large bowl, sift the flour, cocoa, baking soda, baking powder, and salt together – three times.

3. In a mixing bowl, beat the butter and sugar together at high speed for 15 seconds, until combined. Add the eggs, one at a time, beating until each is incorporated. Continue beating until light and fluffy, about 6 minutes more.

4. With the mixer on its lowest setting, beat in a third of the flour mixture. Beat in the buttermilk and vanilla, then another third of the flour. Beat in the coffee and then the remaining flour.

5. Fill the cups of the muffin tin two-thirds full and bake for 15 minutes, or until the centers spring back when lightly pressed and a cake tester comes out clean. Set the pan on a rack to cool.

6. Make the vanilla cream filling: With an electric mixer, beat together the vegetable shortening and butter until blended. Turn the mixer down to its lowest setting and gradually add the confectioners' sugar. Turn the mixer back up and beat at high speed until light and fluffy, about 5 minutes. At a drizzle, gradually beat in the vanilla and corn syrup until the filling is the consistency of mayonnaise, about 2 minutes more.

7. Scrape the vanilla cream frosting into a pastry bag fitted with a 1/4-inch plain tip. With a small knife, carefully carve a 1-inch round by 1-inch deep plug out of the bottoms of the cupcakes – you're going to need the plug to refill the hole, so don't chuck it out. Fill with the vanilla cream. Cut a 1/4-inch disk off the cake plug and cover the exposed cream.

8. Make the ganache frosting: Put the chocolate in a small bowl. In a small saucepan, over medium heat, bring the cream just to the simmering point. Pour the hot cream over the chocolate and, working from the center out, gently stir with a whisk to melt the chocolate and blend until smooth.

9. Dunk the cupcakes into the frosting to coat, then place on a rack, frosted side up. Transfer to the refrigerator for 20 minutes to set before serving.

GLORIA NYCEK'S POLISH TORTE RECIPE

This recipe comes from Gloria Nycek of Dearborn. It was a treasured recipe from her husband Stan's family, and was chosen by Neiman Marcus for its 1993 edition of "Pigtails and Froglegs."

Don't use a food processor to grind the nuts. My makeshift grinder, a microplane food rasp, ground the nuts into fine powder.

Serves 8-10

Ingredients for the cake:

Butter for greasing pan

10 eggs, separated and at room temperature

1 cup confectioners' sugar

1/2 teaspoon almond extract

1 cup ground nuts (you can use almonds or the nuts of your choice)

1 cup rye bread or biscuits (not the cracker type), dried and ground, plus more for coating pan

1 teaspoon baking powder

Ingredients for the filling (frosting):

5 whole eggs, at room temperature

1 cup granulated sugar

1 cup plus 2 tablespoons butter

1 teaspoon instant coffee mixed with 2 teaspoons water

Kahlúa (or any flavored liqueur of your choice, optional)

Additional equipment:

9-inch round baking pan

Directions for the cake:

Place the oven rack to middle position. Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Butter the baking pan and lightly coat with bread crumbs.

In a mixing bowl, combine the egg yolks with the confectioners' sugar; beat until white. Add the almond extract.

Mix the nuts with the bread crumbs and baking powder. Add to yolk mixture.

Beat egg whites until stiff; fold into the egg and nut mixture. Stir lightly and pour into the prepared pan. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 15 minutes.

Reduce heat to 350 degrees F. and bake another 30 minutes.

Directions for the filling:

Beat 5 whole eggs with sugar in a double boiler, stirring until thickened. Cool this mixture, stirring occasionally.

Take a vacation from a vacation

LISA LUCKOW-HEALY

The whirlwind of a school year is rapidly dwindling down to summer vacation time. Families begin to dream about their lists of vacation activities that are bound to take them to faraway places or simply the comforts of their own back yard.

But too much of a vacation can send your family in the opposite direction. You might all need a vacation from a vacation.

It may take the backyard enthusiasts two weeks to two months before burning out from too much of the same things.

Does your family fall into this trap? You diligently spend numerous springtime hours planning backyard and neighborhood activities your family "troupe" can't wait to do, including hosting the neighborhood summer day camp, tending to a vegetable garden, swimming and fine-tuning Rollerblade or skateboard skills.

Was it a dream or did you really hear your children say they wanted to stay home and play with friends over summer break? The activities are fresh, exciting and homework-free – for a limited time. Suddenly you hear, "I'm bored," or "Can't we go somewhere?"

There is always the flipside of the summer vacation equation. Your family has spent so many summers staying home to enjoy the things you can do in and around town that you all feel you need a change of venue. You ask everyone to sit down for a family meeting to plan one or more summer getaways. By the time you're done, your family's wish list resembles something only the world's greatest marathon runner can complete.

Somehow you all venture out to every place on the list. By August, everyone is exhausted. More than one family member threatens to donate the suitcases to Goodwill, and the laundry pile is a miniature version of Mount Everest.

Vacation is supposed to alleviate stress and extinguish the boredom of the daily grind. You have to remember to think this way whether your family stays home or travels. No one wants to spend summer break tired and irritable. No one should have to take a vacation to relax and enjoy summer after they've just returned from a vacation.

Remember a few simple rules of thumb to make this time part of a summer to remember.

Don't set your expectations too high. Think through your adventures. Remember the reasons for your family's choices.

When you set your summer vacation expectations too high, the odds are your family will run into boredom or exhaustion before the start of the next school year.

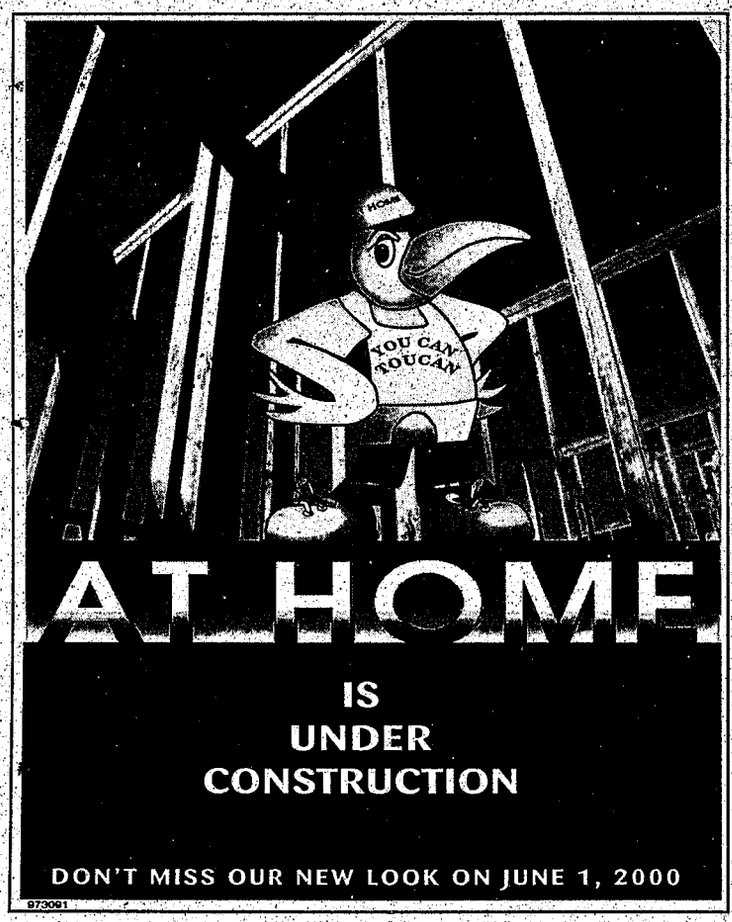

If your family chooses to stay in town, be realistic about what everyone hopes to accomplish. Add or take away activities when and where your family feels this is appropriate. Your goal is a fine balance. Don't get frustrated if that balance isn't achieved every day. Look at the big picture and decide where you or other members of your family can compensate for what's lacking.

By doing too much on an out-of-town vacation, some, if not all of your family, is bound to experience burnout, and only remember that part of the vacation, not the previous days' more memorable aspects.

Think about what your family will do on your backyard or out-of-town adventure. Details can make or break even the best-laid plans. Although the planning might become somewhat tedious work, the payoff is well worth a successful end result.

Don't forget the reasons for your family's summer vacation choices. Packing too much in, whether in town or off on some adventurous getaway, can infringe on the reasons why you all made the summer plans to begin with: being together and spending quality time as a family.

HomeGoods opening home fashions store in Oakland County

BY MARY KLEMIC
At Home Editor

mklemic@oe.homecomm.net

Home is where the heart is, and the heart of activities – entertaining, cooking, relaxing – for many people as well.

"Their house is important to them ... They're very conscious of their house," said HomeGoods spokesperson Debbie Weisberg.

Consumers don't have to be self-conscious about giving a room a new look, or furnishing a dorm. A lot can be done by spending a little. That's the theory behind HomeGoods stores, which are opening their doors in Michigan this month.

The first HomeGoods stores in the state will open in the Bloomfield Hills Town Square, 2185 S. Telegraph at Square Lake Road in Bloomfield Hills, and in the Carpenter Plaza at Carpenter and Packard in Ypsilanti, 10 a.m. Sunday, May 21.

HomeGoods is the home fashions subsidiary of TJX Companies Inc., which includes T.J. Maxx and Marshalls.

Each showroom offers a selection of brand name and designer home products – including bedding, bath products, home decor, housewares, accent pieces, gifts and seasonal merchandise – at 20 to 60 percent off department and specialty stores' regular prices.

Going Southwest: Items from HomeGoods changed the room at right into one with a Southwestern design theme (far right), at low cost.

"It's the basics plus," Weisberg said. "The (range) of merchandise is just tremendous. Everything you could want ... for the home."

The accompanying photos give an example of how accessories from HomeGoods can transform a room, in this case, giving it a Southwestern theme.

Here the walls are cream color and the hues of the accessories are earth tones – cocoa, burnt orange, olive green and sand. Textures and designs are mixed.

Among the HomeGoods pieces used were a decorative adobe chimenea and a printed and fringed pillow, each $19.99; a Southwestern framed print, $16.99; and a mosaic tile end table and a 3-1/2-by-5-1/2 handwoven area rug, each $69.99.

Always joking: Female comedian Connie Ettinger of Franklin gets silly on the stage at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle in Royal Oak where she and five other women will perform stand-up on May 21 in Sorry About the Apple.

NO APOLOGIES NEEDED

Sorry About the Apple showcases women comics who prove they can hold their own

BY NICOLE STAFFORD
SPECIAL EDITOR
nstafford@oe.homecomm.net

When Connie Ettinger and D'Anne Witkowski do stand-up, and a male heckler blurts out opinions and mean sentiments, the female comics don't usually try to get the last laugh.

That is, fire off a witty, embarrassing comeback with shut-them-up impact.

Neither local comic is "there yet," they say of their development in stage comedy.

"I'm a 120-pound demeanor and female. I don't feel I can cut down some drunk guy and make it to my car that night," jokes Witkowski, whose "day job" is studying English at the University of Detroit-Mercy.

Anyway, embarrassing the heck out of a heckler may not be their comedic style.

Though, Witkowski, a Clarkston native who now lives in Royal Oak, may be well on her way. When a heckler recently yelled out "take off your shirt," the 22-year-old comic came back with, "Settle down, Dad," and got a few laughs.

Witkowski and Ettinger are two of six women comics in Sorry About the Apple, an all-female showcase of stand-up acts on Sunday, May 21 at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle in Royal Oak.

The program deviates from stand-up's standard format — an MC warm-up followed by a 25-minute feature performer and headliner, a model created by Mark Ridley.

There's no hierarchy of performance in Sorry About the Apple. Once more, it's all women, so the audience gets "a concentrated dose of women comics," says Ettinger, who came up with the format and pitched it to Ridley.

"And, I think they'll be delightfully surprised at the caliber of humor that they're going to see," says the Franklin resident, a "recovering" attorney.

What: Sorry About the Apple featuring stand-up by six local female comedians
When: 7:30 p.m. Sunday, May 21
Where: Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle, 269 E. Fourth Street in downtown Royal Oak
Tickets: $10, call (248) 542-9000

Whose funny?

Under the standard format, audiences rarely see more than one comedienne, if even one female comic, leaving many comedy-goers with the impression women aren't as funny as men.

There's a stereotype about female comics, says Witkowski. "It's believed that men are funnier, are more capable of handling a crowd and so forth. ... Male comics have to prove that they're not funny. Females have to prove that they are."

Audiences are also quick to conclude female comics only joke about menstrual cycles, pregnancy, relationships and housewifery. "I suspect that when people see a lineup of six women performing, they expect a night of man-bashing, and nothing

Comic books aren't just kids' stuff

BY NICOLE STAFFORD
SPECIAL EDITOR
nstafford@oe.homecomm.net

The silver age of comic books may have passed by long ago, thanks to video games and computers, but the genre is far from dead.

In reality, it's branched out, creating new categories and targeting different audiences, particularly older readers.

Otherwise, attracting more than 300 comic artists from across the country to participate in an event like Motor City Comic Con, slated May 19-21 at the Novi Expo Center, would be impossible.

What: Motor City Comic Con featuring hundreds of comic creators and collectors, an appearance by actor Jonathan Frakes, who plays Commander William Riker on Star Trek New Generation, pop culture collectibles and more
When: May 19-21
Where: Novi Expo Center, 43700 Expo Center Drive
Tickets: $15 per day with three-day and children's passes available at a discount; call (248) 645-6666

"There are quite a few comic books written for the mature reader today," said Michael Goldman, a Farmington Hills resident and president of Motor City Conventions and founder of Comic Con. "One of the biggest stereotypes about comic books is that they're for little kids. There are comic books for 6-year-olds and 60-year-olds."

In its 11th year, Comic Con focuses on two aspects of popular culture: comic books and television and film with a science-fiction angle. The event began as a comic art convention and gradually grew to encompass other areas of pop culture.

■ Jonathan Frakes, who plays Commander William Riker on Star Trek Next Generation, is this year's featured celebrity guest

So, in addition to the hundreds of comic illustrators and writers that come to talk about their craft or sell and promote their work, Goldman tries to bring in stars from cult favorites like Star Wars and Star Trek.

Jonathan Frakes, who plays Commander William Riker on Star Trek Next Generation, is this year's featured celebrity guest.

Surely, avid readers and collectors of comic books, budding strip illustrators and sci-fi fanatics have been anticipating Comic Con for months.

However, the general public may find the event of interest, too.

To begin, there's a hodge-podge of pop culture merchandise and activities at Comic Con.

Film scripts, both signed originals and reproductions, are available for purchase. Other finds include Pokemon games, toys, action figures and other collectibles.

ARTS FESTIVAL

Greektown fest dazzles with sights, sound, food

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER
lchomin@oe.homecomm.net

Blues, baklava and art works – the Greektown Arts Festival brings out the best in all three, so it's no wonder crowds continue to flock to the historic area year after year in search of a good time.

When: 5-10 p.m. Friday, May 19; 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, May 20; and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, May 21
Where: Monroe, Beaubien and St. Antoine streets in downtown Detroit
Information: Call (877) GREEKTOWN

The long and steady parade of visitors appeals to top artists from across the country and makes for a strong show of talent.

Presented by the Greektown Merchants Association and the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans, this year's festival features 128 exhibitors working in media ranging from painting to photography, sculpture, glass, clay, fiber and jewelry. The event runs Friday-Sunday, May 19-21.

"It's the intimate setting of Greektown. It's a special place with all the great restaurants, bakeries and fine shops," said Dave Roberts, festival coordinator. "It is the only art festival held on the streets of downtown Detroit with historic buildings from the 19th century."

See related story on page E3

It's no coincidence that visitors will find artists demonstrating their craft just as they do at the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair because the Michigan Guild's been putting on that show for 30 years. Now in its 10th year, the Greektown Arts Festival showcases many popular elements of the Ann Arbor fair. The Guild's Imagination Station is always a hit with children who enjoying making art and then taking it home.

The Festival Stage brings talented musicians to the streets, and tours give a glimpse inside the historic Greektown buildings. The Laikon Cafe, Fishbone's and other area restaurants offer a variety of ways for attendees to rest and refresh.

"There's new artists, a lot of exciting new media and a lot of really great entertainment with Larry McCray and the phenomenal gospel group The Mighty Royal Lights of the Tru Light Temple," said Roberts. "Over the years, we've improved on the stage area and entertainment. In the early years there were no headliners or big name draws."

Techno music reaching more crowds

BACKSTAGE PASS

ANN DELISI

As someone who has been on the receiving end of voluminous recording industry hype, I've always been intrigued by artists who reach their audience in a direct, non-mainstream way.

There may be no greater example of media-resistant artists than those who create the Detroit area's biggest musical export — techno music. You may not be familiar with names like Carl Craig, Richie Hawtin, and Derrick May, but they have an incredible following in places like London, Belgium, and Amsterdam.

"Detroit's techno artists are big in Europe because radio stations in the United Kingdom and other European cities are given the freedom to play what their listeners want to hear. In London in particular, musical trends are created by the feedback from the clubs where techno music rules," said Ron Pangborn, music producer for Detroit Public TV's Backstage Pass.

Although it may seem on the surface that techno producers revel in their anonymity, they are masters at building a loyal audience. Derrick May, along with former Belleville High classmates Juan Atkins and Kevin Saunderson, is credited with originating the "techno" form. As an international DJ, electronic music producer and founder of Transmat Records, he has total control in the creation and distribution of his music. While that may seem like a unique arrangement in the mainstream recording industry, it is not unusual in techno. Craig is CEO of Planet E Records, and has created music under various guises including Paperclip People, Innerzone Orchestra and his own name. Hawtin helped to establish Plus 8 Records and now records under his Minus label.

There are signs that techno artists are making themselves more accessible to those that aren't necessarily "plugged in." Craig will serve as artistic director for the Detroit Electronic Music Festival noon to midnight, Saturday-Monday, May 27-29 at Detroit's Hart Plaza.

"Techno music really needs these type of events if the artists want to broaden their visibility. They've been very successful in using the club scene to mobilize their audiences, and it seems like it is just a matter of time before major record companies realize their potential," said Pangborn.

A rare, if not unprecedented, television gathering of Detroit's techno artists will take place on the next edition of Detroit Public TV's Backstage Pass airing 7:30 p.m. Sunday, May 21. Carl Craig, Richie Hawtin and Derrick May will make appearances to reveal the ins and outs of their under-publicized segment of the music industry.

Hart Plaza festivals? TV appearances? It appears the reclusive days of techno music are over.

Wearable art

Celia Block looks forward to returning to the Greektown Arts Festival because of the atmosphere. The West Bloomfield artist began bringing her painted silk jackets, scarves and shawls to the show in 1995. Block designs, each is a garment she paints and sews herself.

"I grew up in Detroit and have been going to Greektown since I was a child," said Block. "I love the area. I like the restaurants, the street ambiance. My whole family wants to visit me during the festival because it's in Greektown."

Whimsical wonders

The Greektown Arts Festival is giving Steven Dark a chance to visit his family in Livonia. The Alabama potter hasn't been back for a few years so he's hoping to see some old friends and make new ones at the festival. A graduate of Clarenceville High School in Livonia, Dark primarily sells his stoneware vessels and table top fountains at shows in the south where he's won several awards.

"I'm excited and a little nervous, but I'm looking forward to coming home and bringing my new work," said Dark, owner of Pottery Central in Gulf Shores. "I call them my chicken pots. They're quite whimsical and (have) storytelling. I'm a frustrated writer that uses his three-dimensional work to put down what he can't say."

Dark, who earned his bachelor of fine arts degree in ceramics from the University of South Alabama and a master of fine arts from Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, does about 10 shows a years.

Fine jewelry

Michael MacManus returns to the Greektown Arts Festival for a third year. A Bloomfield Hills jeweler, MacManus creates silver jewelry with and without semi-precious stones. He describes the work as contemporary with simplicity in design and style.

"I used to do sculpture but I switched to jewelry because I wanted to work in a smaller scale making adornments for people," he said. "Jewelry shows self-expression."

could be further from the truth," says Ettinger. "While we all work, I don't think there have been many forums for women comics to showcase their talents. It is a male-dominated industry, not to say that we've been held back because of that. I've been treated very well. But it is a little bit harder. The networking is more difficult."

And, networking is big in comedy. It's how stand-ups come across opportunities to show what they've got on open-mic nights and then win feature slots for scheduled performances.

"There are certain areas of socialization that aren't open to us," explains Ettinger. "Particularly women who are married or in a relationship. ... I don't want to spend six nights in a bar performing comedy. And, if it's just a matter of hanging out at a bar and maybe being asked to come on stage, I have better things to do."

No apologies

While Ettinger and company aren't really "Sorry About the Apple" their acts are far from Judy Tenuta-style stand-up.

And, as a group of performers, their subject matter runs the gambit.

Witkowski, for example, talks about WWJD (What Would Jesus Do) bracelets, baby-sitting and working as a bank teller. Her ice-breaker is: "I feel a little uncomfortable. I'm wearing underwear that's too big for me."

And, yes, there's more on big underwear after.

Joining the lineup are Gilda Hauser, Leslie Ann Thompson, Sheila Lovely and Donna Zetterlund.

Hauser, a Southfield resident who teaches improvisation and stand-up at Mark Ridley's and appears every Tuesday in Totally Unrehearsed Theater at the comedy club, talks about dating.

Thompson, a gay and lesbian activist from Royal Oak, kids around about being in a long-term lesbian relationship. Lovely, a wife and mother from Grosse Pointe Park, talks about being married. Zetterlund, of Fraser, simply pokes fun at a handful of everyday occurrences.

"It's well-balanced," says Ettinger. "There's a mix of humor directed at both women and men."

Funny is funny

Besides, good humor is just that, say Ettinger and Witkowski. Audiences don't care which gender is on stage cracking jokes, so why should they?

"Yes, women bring different experiences to comedy, but the best comedy and the best comics are not up on stage acting. They're being themselves and relating their life experiences in a humorous fashion," says Ettinger.

True, gender has an impact on a person's outlook, and consequently, sense of humor. "But I don't believe in pigeon-holing myself. I write for everybody and write for myself," says Witkowski. "And, I try to stay away from humor that's a put-down to either women or men. Sure, gender affects everybody, whether you want it to or not, but I don't think it's as clear-cut as people think."

Comics from page E1

Anime refers to Japanese animation — will run features of the form in a private screening room.

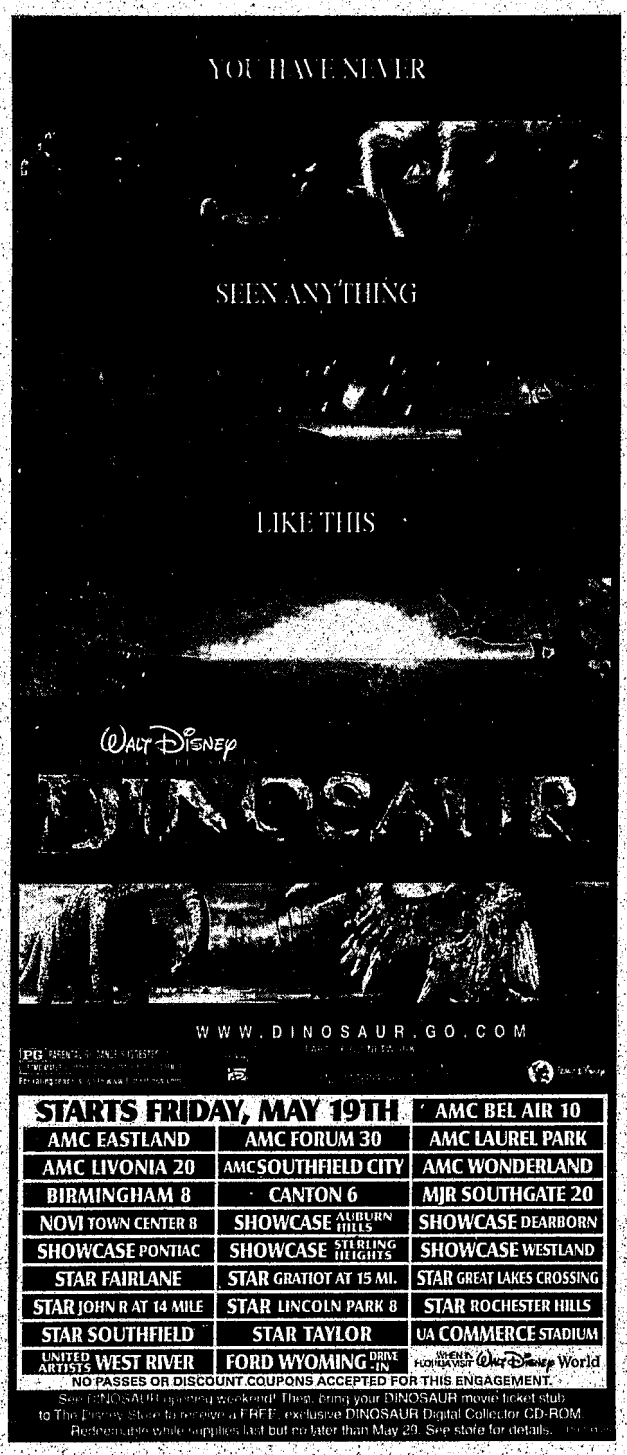

Once more, the show may even convert a few non-believers into comic book lovers. The Friends of Lulu, a group of comic book fans who promote the form to women, plan to attend.

Others may simply discover how the form has evolved, according to Goldman.

"The stories are really written for adults," he said. "There's been a big place in the market for comics that are intelligently written. They're not just about the guy in spandex flying off to save someone. They're comics for thinking."

Besides, comic books offer a unique entertainment experience, said Goldman.

"When you take great art and great storytelling and put it together, there's nothing like it. Not even television. For me, comics have always allowed me to use my imagination. It's not like television, which is kind of mindless. Comics still require you to think."

SRO's You Should Be So Lucky is spiced with elements of dark comedy

BY HARRY KNITTER
SPECIAL WRITER

Playwright Charles Busch couldn't have had an inkling about the coincidental impact the title of his play would have.

Neither did the staff of SRO Productions.

When SRO scheduled You Should Be So Lucky, which runs through May 28 at the Southfield Senior Parks and Recreation Center, it couldn't have known its opening would coincide with a Michigan resident being so lucky.

Embarking on its 11th season at the Southfield theater, SRO's opening production in March was A Bad Year for Tomatoes. In July, it presented Agnes of God. In October came The Last Night of Ballyhoo.

In the No. 2 slot, SRO scheduled Busch's You Should Be So Lucky and cast Dennis Hubel as Mr. Rosenberg.

With Nancy Harrower as director, the play opened Friday, May 12. Then, on the same day, along came Michigan's $61 million lotto winner Larry Ross, and suddenly Busch's title has uncanny relevance to a breaking news story.

When the play debuted in 1992, the production was labeled a screwball comedy, and as far as Harrower is concerned, the description still fits.

"It's good, and it's different," Harrower said. "We could go on doing Neil Simon forever, but we decided to go a different route. This play is fun and it's funny."

Harrower also said the story line is spiced with elements of dark comedy, which seems to be a popular way to sustain the interest of theater audiences these days.

Evidence: the Avon Players in Rochester are producing meat pies from cadavers in Sweeney Todd; and the Birmingham Village Players begin Forever Plaid with a car crash that kills all four members of the cast.

Apparently, the opportunity to laugh at death on the stage, however bizarre it may be, is a desirable ingredient for a night of theater.

SRO's full-house opening night audience for You Should Be So Lucky responded enthusiastically to the performance given by the veteran cast. Richard Sparks plays Christopher; Kathy Booker is Polly; Timothy Seguin, Jr. is Walter; Amy Welland portrays Lenore; and Janice Leadbitter plays Wanda Wang.

The story line begins with Christopher inheriting $10 million. Christopher then attempts to cause a fatal heart attack through a series of offbeat antics. He's aided and abetted by his wacky sister.

While a paltry $10 million inheritance may not incite Ross and his family to take such unexplainable actions, it is sufficient to carry the plot of You Should Be So Lucky. And, it's a play that gives members of the audience much to like.

What: You Should Be So Lucky, presented by SRO Productions
When: 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, May 19-20 and May 26-27; 2 p.m. Sunday, May 21 and 28

Greektown festival offers blues, funk

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER
scasola@oe.homecomm.net

Nearly a decade since the release of Ambition, an album that launched Larry McCray's musical career, the Arkansas-born and Saginaw-bred guitarist confirms his status as one of the most powerful blues men around.

Presently, he's preparing to kick out a few new tunes at this year's Greektown Arts Festival. Influenced by such music greats as Jimi Hendrix, George Benson and Wes Montgomery, McCray is the festival's opening night music headliner.

"We're just gonna try to have an intense show," he said in a recent telephone interview. "I'm really anxious and happy to have new music available for the people. I think the time is right for the band."

With a new album in the works, the man who last declared he was Born To Play The Blues (1998) returns to Detroit to celebrate the 10th year of the festival.

McCray is more than ready to showcase new songs like Blues Is My Business, Love Gone Bad and the tentative title track Believe it. While he said the music he's been playing for years hasn't changed much, it has shifted focus "in terms of what people are into at the time."

Today, blues has to appeal to rock, reggae, soul and R&B audiences.

"People are into very rhythmic music," said McCray. "You have to do these things to continue to survive."

McCray's new material "rocks harder," contains a wide array of rhythms and strong vocals, but never strays from its blues origins. "I came from a history of it," said McCray. "My family were blues listeners and musicians before me. I always needed music with more of an inner soul."

Ready, set, go

The time is right to celebrate spring, and the Greektown Arts Festival is a befitting event to kick off metropolitan Detroit's season of outdoor entertainment.

New to the Greektown festival this year is The Brothers Groove. They'll start their engines at 6 p.m. Friday with their delicious blend of funk, jazz, rock and blues. While singer/keyboardist Chris Codish has played the festival with the likes of

Larry McCray

Johnnie Bassett and Thornetta Davis – who also return this year – it's a first for the group.

Expect an all-original set that's bound to include crowd favorite Pressure Cooker. Bassist Jim Simonson, a Clarkston native, said the festival gives people a great reason to visit the city.

'Time Code' a challenge for the eyes

BY JON KATZ
STAFF WRITER

Time Code isn't one of the worst movies of the year so far. It's four of the worst movies of the year so far.

You'll hear that it's a breakthrough and is greatly innovative (and it is), but you'll also be intimidated by the warning that if you don't like it, you don't "get it." But most people stop calling each other chicken around the fourth grade.

Time Code is an ambitious gimmick, far worthier of discussion than its plot. Shown as a continuous four-way split screen, Time Code goes against the traditional filmmaking grain in numerous ways. Director Mike Figgis (Leaving Las Vegas), bringing his musical background to bear, literally arranged the basic screenplay on music paper as a string quartet, with bar lines indicating minutes. There was no script as such.

His 93-minute concertina was then shot in real time with four hand-held digital video cameras rolling simultaneously in different (and sometimes identical) locations. Movies have played out in real time before (Alfred Hitchcock's Rope), but could never be shot in one unbroken and unedited take because of the limitations of 10-minute film magazines.

Over two-dozen actors were given story outlines and rehearsed hitting exact marks at exact times. Much of the rest, according to press releases, was improvised. Figgis, as one of the four camerapersons, could control only his own setup once they were shooting.

They shot the film 15 times – a total of 60 individual versions – and used the final day's work, complete with four fortuitous earthquake aftershocks that occurred while the cameras rolled.

Only the sound levels were manipulated to nudge your attention to a specific quadrant. The viewer, in effect, becomes the film's editor, selecting which corner of the screen to concentrate on at the moment.

So why be down on such an apparently important work? For one thing, the story stinks. Something about a small Hollywood movie company auditioning for a new project. Salma Hayek (Dogma) is a bisexual actress who does a Monica Lewinsky on Alex the producer to get hired. Meanwhile, her jealous lesbian lover, Jeanne Tripplehorn (Mickey Blue Eyes), who is also Alex's mistress, is outside in a limo listening to the wireless microphone she planted on Salma.

Saffron Burrows (Deep Blue Sea), Alex's wife, is somewhere across town crying to her therapist. And while this is going on, a performance artist is pitching an idea to the rest of the company's staff: a film shot in real time with digital cameras. They laugh her out of the office.

ELLIOT MARKS

One-quarter time: Saffron Burrows stars in "Time Code."

As a result of this boorish plot, the four-way split is pretty much one part storyline and three parts tedious filler. Look in the lower left, there's a close-up of a clock. And up there on the right, there's Jeanne Tripplehorn chewing gum, snorting coke or playing with a cigarette lighter for minutes on end. And down there in the lower right, a security guard stands around, maybe waiting for the next aftershock, which is the most action in the film anyway.

Time Code has its place as a film school project or a demo tape for Sony's digital video cameras. It is a technical achievement in that the idea proved functional.

When they find a story that's even one-fourth watchable, they may have something.

Travis lands headlining U.S. tour

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER
scasola@oe.homecomm.net

For a band that's got two Brit Awards under its belt but had been relatively unknown in the States, Travis couldn't have asked for better luck than snagging the opening slot for Oasis' recent trek through the country. One listen to the band deemed Britain's favorite makes it easy to see what all the buzz is about.

From humble beginnings in 1996, singer-songwriter Fran Healy, guitarist Andy Dunlop, bassist Dougie Payne and drummer Neil Primrose have risen from the ashes of art school and various bartending and shoe store clerk jobs. With the long-awaited American release of their sophomore album on Epic Records, The Man Who, Travis is finally getting the attention they have so long deserved.

"It's been brilliant," said guitarist Andy Dunlop, in a telephone interview from Atlanta May 5. Nabbing the opening slot of Oasis' tour was surely an important career move for Travis, whose British success has only begun to trickle into U.S. territory. "We knew it was important," he said of the exposure.

But Detroit got a taste of Travis two years before the recent, sold-out Oasis show. On tour with Chapel Hill's prized trio Ben Folds Five, Travis performed at The Shelter, below St. Andrews Hall. "I remember the loud metal show (upstairs)," said Dunlop in an accent as thick as fog on a dreary Glasgow day. But Travis is moving up, literally, up the charts and up the stairs to St. Andrews main stage.

The Man Who has garnered enough attention to cause quite a stir on either side of the Atlantic. The title of the album was taken from Oliver Sack's book The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat. Dunlop considers it to be quite an ambiguous title, allowing listeners to come to their own conclusions about its meaning.

But the title also offers an answer to all the journalists who considered the band's first album, Good Feeling, too much a mix of emotions. "The press kept saying we were a schizophrenic band," explained Dunlop.

While he maintains that the album was meant to be true-to-life rather than a reflection of psychosis, The Man Who offers a much more even flow, both musically and stylistically. But Dunlop said that it was "purely by accident."

Fran Healy writes the band's songs on his guitar in his room, then brings them to the attention of his bandmates. "At any stage you can sort of ruin it as a band," said Dunlop. "So many bands over-play." Travis' motto would be something like, "Keep

Local bands compete for dream gig

STEPHANIE A. CASOLA

What musician doesn't strive for the level of success that could only be contained by the largest entertainment venues in the area?

It's a dream most musicians in the metro area share – walking out under the smoky lights, beyond the velvety curtains and onto the stage battered from a long history of rock legends and up-and-comers to look out into a sea of people filling every last pavilion seat and spot on the hill at Pine Knob Music Theatre.

What musician doesn't strive for the level of success that could only be contained by the largest entertainment venues in the area? In an effort to make those dreams reality for local bands, The Palace Sports and Entertainment Inc. organized it's Opening Act Contest.

In it's second year, the contest offers some of the best local bands an opportunity for exposure unlike any other. "Because Meadow Brook, Pine Knob and The Palace are such large venues in comparison with most other venues and clubs in the area, we have the opportunity to showcase local artists on a larger scale," said Amy Bryson, publicity manager for PS&E. "This contest allows us to give talented local musicians the experience and exposure of performing in front thousands of people they may otherwise not get to do."

Out of 251 submissions from area bands, eight finalists were chosen by a panel of judges who book and promote the events for the three venues. The judges considered all genres of music and asked for feedback from local media to narrow down their choices. Only three will win opening spots for artists performing at Pine Knob Music Theatre in Independence Township this summer and Meadowbrook Music Festival in Rochester Hills. The finalists in this year's competition are Blue Dahlia, Domestic Problems, Scott Fab, Kingsnakes, Knee Deep Shag, Molly, Rooster and Southfield.

Ten judges (including myself) have been chosen based on their knowledge of and interest in the local scene, to narrow down the group to three lucky winners. Finalists will be judged on their overall performance and stage presence. Each band is allowed 10 minutes of stage time to perform about two original songs.

Ken Karasek, drummer of Rooster and a former Rochester resident, said he's "extremely thrilled." "We all are. It's always been a dream of ours to play the Palace, Pine Knob or Meadowbrook."

Together since 1997 and based in Lake Orion, Rooster's twangy Americana rock sound has catapulted the band from the local scene to performing regular gigs across the Midwest and recording in Nashville. The band's debut, Solid State, has been followed up by recent recordings with producer Clarck Hagen (Chet Atkins, Ray Stevens). "We're gonna do the best we can," said Karasek. "We're completely prepared."

The Kingsnakes entered the contest last year, but didn't make it to the finals. The blues-rock quintet based in Westland will rely on sheer musical ability to be a worthy competitor. Bassist Tom Diaz said he doesn't think of the show as a competition. "It's just gonna be fun to go," he said of Meadowbrook, the biggest venue the 3-year-old band has ever played.

They'll be up against the power-pop of Grosse Pointe-based quartet called Southfield – a band that got it's start after singer-songwriter J.T. Harding won prize money on VH-1's Rock and Roll Jeopardy and used it to record a CD. Ferndale's Scott Fab will draw on his soulful sound and past performances with the likes of Sheryl Crow to compete in the competition.

From the Kalamazoo scene, Blue Dahlia and Knee Deep Shag are ready to battle it out. Blue Dahlia gained national radio airplay with three singles from the band's self-titled 1997 debut, and has recently release of a 4-song EP, Estival. Guitarist Becky Pingston is a Clarkston native and vocalist Leslie Boughton is a Plymouth native.

Knee Deep Shag will prove to be a worthy contender, holding such accolades as the 1999 Detroit Music Award for Best Urban/Funk Artist. On the heels of the band's latest and most profound album to date, Good Disguise, Knee Deep Shag can pack a house.

Then, of course, you've got the Grand Rapids set, Domestic Problems and Molly. Together since 1993, Domestic Problems is a virtual party onstage, six members strong. Capturing the comical mayhem of a DP show, the band released Live last October and has shared the stage with heavyweights like the Dave Matthews Band, Morphine and Ben Folds Five.

With half as many members, G.R.'s punk-pop trio, Molly, relies on three-part harmonies and songs chock-full of hooks. Citing influences from the Sex Pistols to Poison, band members have said they try their hardest to make the songs come alive.

Armed with guitars and some good old rock 'n' roll know-how, these finalists will follow in the footsteps of last year's winners, including The Atomic Numbers and Sister Seed.

Bryson noted that the Opening Act Contest is a beneficial opportunity for all musicians involved, win or lose. "Performing in front of thousands of unfamiliar faces can also serve as a huge confidence builder for the artists," she said. "The contest itself is a perfect forum for artists to get direct feedback from music writers, promoters and other people in the entertainment industry. And being able to say 'performed at Pine Knob or Meadow Brook' certainly can't hurt!"

it as simple as possible."

"The vocals are most important," said Dunlop. "You can smother a song."

One song on the album, Slide Show, went through many incarnations before reaching its final form. "We wanted the sound of a car behind it," recalled Dunlop. "We tried recording it in a car." After "too much noise and bumping about," producer Nigel Godrich (Radiohead, Beck, Pavement) opted for a backdrop of recorded street sounds. "Nigel is very much a perfectionist," said Dunlop. But it worked.

The band even went so far as to start the engines of several cars in a parking lot. "I think it's incredible," said Dunlop of the album critics call a must-have. "It was the first time we sounded like we sounded in our heads."

Four years after the band began, four friends solidified a space in the current wave of pop music trends. They're not so schizophrenic after all. "We got to know each other after playing so many live shows," he reasoned.

Touring steadily since last spring, the band will head back to London after the next round of shows. But they still insist Glasgow is home. "We moved to London to get a deal in the first place as a band," said Dunlop. "There was more of a chance in London."

Dunlop's musical roots trace back to his early teens. "I used to play piano when I was younger," he said. "I got into guitar. It was easier to carry about with you."

Having parents who listened to Scottish country music and developing an early obsession with metal – of the ACDC and Kiss variety – Dunlop's early influences were scattered somewhere between the two. He picked up a guitar at age 13 and hasn't turned back.

Dunlop, now 28, said he doesn't notice much difference between touring in the States and touring in Britain. "I think people are people no matter where you go." It's that sweet sincerity that's gained Travis a sterling reputation in pop music.

While The Man Who spins its web around new American fans, Travis has already written enough material for a third album and plans to go back into the studio by the end of summer. Travis hopes to team up with Godrich again and record in sunny Los Angeles. Expect the new material to reflect the sounds of a more optimistic British quartet, without abandoning the drifting melancholy beauty of The Man Who.

Perhaps the band's been too long away from the rainy Scotland days they remember. To borrow from another British foursome, where Travis is concerned, "Here Comes The Sun."

See Travis with guest Leona Naess, 6 p.m. Friday, May 19, St. Andrews Hall, Detroit. All ages. $13. (248) 645-6666.

Breakfast Club features big menu in quaint surroundings

BY NICOLE STAFFORD
SPECIAL EDITOR
NSTAFFORD@OE.HOMECOMM.NET

Everybody feels at home at the Breakfast Club.

The downtown Clawson eatery, though close quarters, achieves a charming, homey ambiance that could easily be mistaken for a bed-and-breakfast.

True, the atmosphere is distinctively quaint. Pale yellow walls are punctuated with country collectibles. Powder blue tablecloths and jars of freshly cut daisies and yellow mums sit on tables. And, white lace curtains hang inside the dining room's two bay windows.

Built in the 1920s as a gas station, the building has housed a seafood store and catering business. On the outdoor patio, where seating is ample, white lattice resin chairs sit beneath green and white umbrellas and an old-fashioned lamp post.

But, everybody, even the alternative crowd, feels comfortable here. The reason — the restaurant's diverse menu draws an equally diverse crowd.

"We have Rastafarians and 80-year-old couples on Sunday mornings," says owner Penny White, a graduate of Eastern Michigan University's restaurant management program who has managed fine dining restaurants in London, Chicago and Los Angeles. White, who began her food career at age 15 working at a Little Caesars, also was a culinary instructor at Livonia's Schoolcraft College.

The Breakfast Club

Where: 280 South Main Street, just south of 14 Mile in downtown Clawson, (248) 288-9366

Hours: 7 a.m.-2 p.m. Monday-Sunday

Menu: Mix of creative breakfast entrees and old-fashioned morning favorites, as well as standard lunch fare and gourmet lunch specialties

Cost: Breakfast, about $6.50, lunch, $4.50-8.25

Reservations: Not taken

Credit: Cash and personal checks only

On the side: Limited indoor seating; outdoor patio dining available for summer; catering and special orders available; expect a wait of 15-20 minutes for breakfast after 9 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday; new menu featuring additional lunch items available by June

The philosophy behind the eatery, her first restaurant venture — "a step above on every breakfast" — shows.

The Breakfast Club's French toast, an item that garners a great deal of attention (being 4-5 inches thick) is prepared like bread pudding. Brioche, croissants, Texas toast and homemade cinnamon rolls are stacked up, then soaked in a vanilla-egg batter. Fresh berries and a streusel topping just add to the mega toast's size and character.

There are more than just a few surprises on the menu. Scottish porridge with vanilla-soaked raisins replaces ordinary oatmeal. Eggs, New York Style — that's scrambled with cheddar — is on the menu. Mushroom omelets come with the Portobella version only.

Open 7 a.m.-2 p.m. seven days a week, lunch is served at The Breakfast Club, too. Though breakfast is the focus, business has been good, so White is expanding her lunch offerings with a new menu due out in the next few weeks.

Except for additions — Eggs Florentine with Hollandaise Sauce on an English muffin, $6.95; and Cheese Blintzes with Michigan Tart Cherries, $6.75; the breakfast menu will remain the same.

White's new lunch entrees primarily are customers' favorites from the daily special board: Chicken Breast Stuffed with Mushrooms in Puff Pastry, $8.25; Prime Rib with Baked Potato and Vegetable, $8.25; Country Chicken Crepes, $6.95; and Mushroom Pasta Parcels with Portobella Cream Sauce, $6.75.

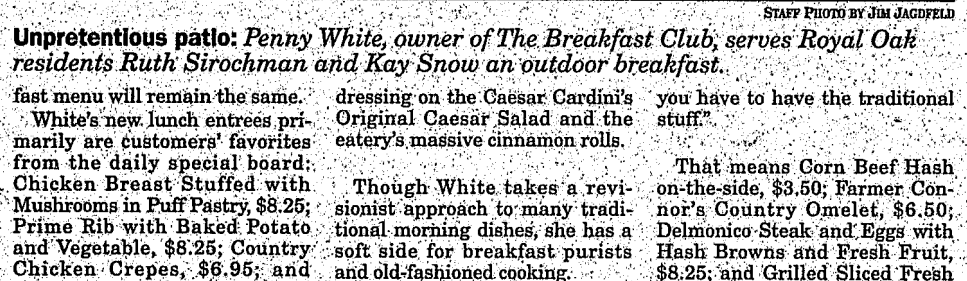

Homemade items include quiche (two choices daily), four soups du jour, the light, tangy dressing on the Caesar Cardini's Original Caesar Salad and the eatery's massive cinnamon rolls.

Though White takes a revisionist approach to many traditional morning dishes, she has a soft side for breakfast purists and old-fashioned cooking.

"We try to be on the cutting-edge of breakfast foods," she said. "We try to surprise people a little bit. And, I try to do a variety, so people don't get bored, but you have to have the traditional stuff."

That means Corn Beef Hash on-the-side, $3.50; Farmer Connor's Country Omelet, $6.50; Delmonico Steak and Eggs with Hash Browns and Fresh Fruit, $8.25; and Grilled Sliced Fresh Tomatoes, $1.50.

As if surprised by her own menu planning, she says "people just like tomatoes with their breakfast."

Sweet Lorraine's expands to west-side location

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER
KWYGONIK@OE.HOMECOMM.NET

A Laurel Park Place Mall shopper wanders into the newly opened Sweet Lorraine's at the Livonia Marriott and asks, "Are you open yet?"

Shhh ... don't tell anyone. They've been open nearly a month, and it's the best-kept secret in Livonia.

Guests at the hotel have been "Sweet" on "Lorraine" since the restaurant opened in April. It's become their home away from home and a surprise discovery for shoppers, office workers, and people in the neighborhood who didn't know it moved in.

Lorraine Platman is meeting in a corner booth with her kitchen staff. Suddenly, she jumps up and goes to the kitchen. She emerges minutes later apologizing and explaining that she had to tell one of the staff about the way a sandwich was served.

"It's a grilled sandwich. It's supposed to be golden brown and the cheese melted," she said.

Platman cares about food. That's one of the ingredients of her success. She and her husband Gary Sussman, her business partner, have been pleasing customers for years at the Sweet Lorraine's on 12 Mile and Southfield roads in Southfield.

She's a hands-on owner and pushes her staff to excel.

Executive Chef Clark DeKett, who studied culinary arts at Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills, agrees.

"We're working harder, but we're considerably more satisfied," he said. "We enjoy the food. It's challenging and satisfying. It has a global perspective. It's a very large menu."

DeKett compares the orchestration of a meal to playing the piano. "You can play notes and read music, but you've got to get the melody down. It's the nuances, the taste, that make a product wonderful."

Consistency is also important. Repeat performances have to be as good as the first. Platman's recipes include notes on presentation, and she's a stickler for detail. "I want to be able to reproduce the same dish next year," she said.

Everything, even the bread and desserts, is made fresh daily. The menu reflects what's in season and changes accordingly. Duck was added as a regular item, along with "French Onion" Steak Tenderloin – Angus beef tenderloins served over garlic toasted croutons, caramelized onions and a French onion sauce, topped with melted mozzarella cheese.

There are a number of vegetarian items. Specials and soups change daily. Cream of tomato soup is offered daily because customers requested it.

"It's for people who are on a time, dollar and calorie budget," said Sussman.

Desserts are comforting and reassuring, ones Platman remembers from her childhood in England – Apple Brown Betty, Blueberry Bread Pudding and Strawberry Rhubarb Crisp. They're warm desserts served with a dollop of Ray's ice cream.

There's a premium bar, 25 wines by the glass and 40 international and domestic beers, including one produced by Local Color Brewery in Novi. The lemonade is always freshly squeezed, and you can get an espresso, a cappuchino or smoothie.

Diners eat in an open, colorful and comfortable setting. "We wanted something curvy to bring the ceiling down to make it more intimate," explained Sussman, pointing to shapes that resemble clouds. "We wanted it to be fun but comfortable."

Stephen Sussman and Howard Ellman of Birmingham were the restaurant's architects.

Haydn Kramer, general manager of the Livonia Marriott, has been a fan of Sweet Lorraine's for about 10 years.

"Whenever I had special friends in town that's where I took them," said Kramer. "They have great food, cool music, and I thought, 'Why can't I have this at my hotel?'"

One day when he was dining at Sweet Lorraine's in Southfield, Kramer wrote his idea to bring Sweet Lorraine's to the Livonia Marriott on a business card and gave it to Platman.

Platman is working on the breakfast menu and introducing some of Sweet Lorraine's popular brunch items. Making her guests feel special is a priority.

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

I and my neighbors are concerned about the planning commission's approval of a developer's rezoning request in a neighboring subdivision.

Do we have any basis, other than politically, to seek recourse in the courts.

I believe you are raising the question of whether you would have standing to pursue the municipality in a lawsuit in connection with the granting of rezoning.

To establish standing, you must show that you were or would be injured in a manner different from the rest of the other residents.

In fact, you must be able to elevate your position from that of a general resident to one with standing to sue because you have been injured in a manner which can be clearly distinguished from the other residents.

If you can establish that somehow you were (or will be) injured distinctly from the other residents, you can have a basis to pursue the township.

You are best advised to have your homeowner's association attorney review this matter to determine whether, in fact, the association would have the legal as well as economic ability to pursue the matter.

Courses help first-time home owner

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER
dfunke@oe.homecomm.net

■ 'There are so many questions. Each class goes off in different directions.'

Buying a home, especially the first one, can be scary and exhaustive.

Inexperienced, would-be buyers embark with the warning: You better be careful because this is the biggest investment you'll ever make.

As if that weren't enough to kill confidence, there are all kinds of new concepts like buyer- versus seller-agency, credit history, purchase agreements, points and inspections that can confuse along the way.

Plus, more different kinds of mortgages available now than ever before.

Get smart before you start, the professionals advise. There are plenty of opportunities to learn, and they don't involve a lot of time or money.

Classes available

Realtors and mortgage companies sponsor seminars on a regular basis, usually free and designed for first-time buyers. There's no obligation to ultimately use the services of the instructors, but most would appreciate if you did.

Ben Hendricks, loan officer with Approved Mortgages in Canton, say most attendees are oblivious when they come in.

"They have no idea what's going on, and if you don't know the questions to ask, you can really be taken. That's the scariest thing out there.

"There are so many questions. Each class goes off in different directions," Hendricks said. "Closing costs and escrow account set-ups when all the numbers come together is what more people are concerned about."

—Karen Minicilli-Codd, senior loan officer with Old Kent Mortgage in Farmington Hills, covers a lot of ground in her classes.

"I get into budgeting, finding a lender, the importance of getting approved (mortgage) before looking, finding a Realtor, locating a neighborhood," she said.

Good questions

Participants come with questions, many relating to qualifying for a mortgage. "They're not aware of all the programs that allow them to get into a home now rather than a year or two years," she said.

"When you've never bought a home before, you haven't been through the process, you don't know what to expect. You don't know what the first step is," Minicilli-Codd said.

Ignorance isn't bliss for most folks who attend her seminars, said Rosemary Firestone, a Realtor with RE/MAX 100 in Novi.

"They always ask good questions," she said. "They want to avoid getting the wrong house, one that costs a lot of money and is a problem house. Financing would be second.

"Sometimes they're getting married, sometimes they're tired of renting after the landlord makes changes or raises prices," Firestone said. "A few have been living in their own house for a while and don't know about (market) changes they should know about."

That's why Firestone often has other experts — title insurers, inspectors, lawyers — on hand to help answer questions.

Participants speak

Lisa and Mark Darr bought a house in Plymouth after attending one of Firestone's home-buy classes.

"It was very informative, an opportunity to hear what really needs to be done, step by step ... getting the mortgage (pre-qualified) first, looking for homes, getting an inspection," Lisa said.

Dr. Eileen Burd bought a home in Northville Township after taking a how-to class from Firestone's team.

"I really knew nothing. I hadn't had the opportunity to buy a home before," she said. "It was really low pressure, very much for information. It wasn't, 'Use us, use us.' It was, 'We're here if you need us, but here's what you need to know to buy a house.'

"Really, the most important thing I learned was to get pre-qualified," Burd said. "That helped a lot. I didn't waste a lot of time. My tendency was to find the house first."

Vicky Childers added, "It wasn't so much a matter of learning anything special, but more a sense of feeling comfortable and establishing trusting relationships with people you need to trust when doing real estate transactions."

Sometimes, you can find a class at a local college or a community center if you are getting ready to look for a home.

For instance, "Buying and Selling Your Own Home" begins tonight at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. The charge is $49 for a three-evening course. For more information, call (734) 462-4448.

Upcoming fair

Upwards of 4,500 are expected to attend the seventh annual Detroit Metro Home Buyers Fair 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 20, at Cobo Center in Detroit. It's free.

"The goal is to provide prospective home owners with the practical tools needed to make home ownership achievable for everyone," said Bruce Carr, chairman of the event and vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of Michigan.

That association, along with the Fannie Mae Foundation and the Detroit Pistons are fair sponsors.

"We are targeting first-time home buyers and those who would otherwise feel that they couldn't qualify for a mortgage," Carr said.

Patsy Street, a vice president with Ross Mortgage in Oakland County, intends to participate as an exhibitor.

"As a company, we'd like to walk away with a couple of mortgage applications, but to educate buyers is a big thing," she said.

"A lot of these people are young, first-time homebuyers ... and they just really need to know what it's like to get into a house today," Street said.

Visitors who stop at her booth can get information on how large a mortgage they can expect to qualify for given their assets and salary specifics.

Mark Rosen, community relations and housing manager for Credit Counseling Centers headquartered in Farmington Hills, also expects to participate.

"For the most part, people are interested in our services because they know they have credit problems," Rosen said. "They have questions about the lenders there ... and just need a middle person to lean on."
