It's 8 a.m. Blocking the entrance to the Crestwood High School in Dearborn Heights, Michigan are a large group of picketing teachers, carrying placards that identify why they are striking.

A student, dutifully on his way to class, which is taught by a substitute teacher, drives his father's car slowly through the picket line. A striking teacher spits a wad of saliva through an open window. It lands upon the student's forehead. Other teachers shout obscenities at the youngster.

The student is an acquaintance of Michael Fayzi, President of the Crestwood Student Council. Fayzi retold the story at a public hearing held by a special Michigan House of Representatives committee studying changes suggested for Public Act 379, the teacher negotiation act a couple of years ago.

At that time, this writer was working with state education leaders who were debating the merits of several bills designed to curb teacher strikes.

Unfortunately, the legislature, after much discussion and years later remains undecided on the issue. This year strikes have hit home. Holly School, despite the efforts of a mediator, are far far apart. East of us, Oxford is experiencing a similar situation.

Previous efforts to amend teacher bargaining laws have failed because of the difficulty in writing legislation that is fair to both teachers and school officials.

Parents, teachers and school officials alike have urged the legislature to provide a better method of negotiations.

In defending the legislatures lack of action, veteran lawmaker and chairperson of the House Education Committee Lucille McCullough (D-Dearborn) commented, "We were trying to get a settlement at the local level, but it hasn't worked out that way."

"The whole problem of teacher unrest centers around two flaws in the negotiation law," said Senator David Plawcki, who lives in the Crestwood School District.

"First, strikes are the only weapon available to teachers if they feel a school board is unreasonable because present law gives them no person to appeal to."

"Second, the lack of legal provisions for economic loss and definitive penalties for most striking teachers leaves a school board with no protection against unreasonable teacher demands," claimed Plawcki.

Michigan's largest education union, the Michigan Education Association (MEA) has supported the unlimited right to strike for years.

The MEA also favors the establishment of a statewide timetable for negotiations and binding arbitration when an insurmountable impasse has been reached.

But a rival union, the Michigan Federation of Teachers (MFT) remains absolutely opposed to binding arbitration. According to John Delo, an MFT member from Taylor, "Compulsory arbitration is full of pitfalls for teachers, students, taxpayers, and the legislature."

"Teachers of Michigan know what they want," said Delos. "That is to bargain in a complete and free atmosphere in good faith."

Across the bargaining table, school board members and administrators, and their statewide organizations are working together to make their position known.

There is an intense concern shared by many board members and administrators that the MEA, the MFT, and the AFL-CIO have the upper hand.

"We're gonna get killed," said Robert Miller, a school administrator, "it's just a matter of how badly we're gonna get killed."

Both the Michigan Association of School Administrators (MASA) and the Michigan Association of School Boards (MLASB) have endorsed legal, limited teacher strikes. However, they have indicated opposition to binding arbitration.

Binding arbitration is opposed because school officials fear a usurpation of local control. At MASA and MASB meetings there has been considerable support to the notion that important bargaining issues should be decided by the people's representatives and not an uninterested third party. Frequent stories of incompetent mediators have interrupted protocol at these meetings.

"The thought of an arbitrator, who does not have to pay the bills, giving contract settlements which could require new and bigger taxes will not be too popular with the taxpayers of this State," claimed Dr. Fred Matthews, a member of the Board of Trustees of Southwestern Michigan College.

Similar sentiments were expressed by Jim Barrett, spokesman for the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce. "We do not believe," Barrett said, "that local school boards should be forced to relinquish decision-making authority to an outside party who might impose totally unacceptable conditions on the citizens of the community."

"We believe that all children are entitled to an educational experience uninterrupted by employee strikes," he added.

Getting a bill through the legislature is a long and lengthy process. But a bill as controversial as this makes the process doubly difficult.

However, the problem of teacher strikes and delayed school starts has been thrashed around Lansing long enough. It's time to get down to business.

It's apparent the problem is not going to disappear. In the five years it's been debated, the problem has only intensified.

Lansing must act. They must give teachers and school boards guidelines to negotiate by. If binding arbitration is unacceptable, other avenues must be explored.

Situations such as Crestwood must be averted at all costs. There's no way our educational system can survive when those who have been charged with the responsibility of teaching our children, resort to spitting and shouting obscenities at those very children.

Question Of The Week

by Sharon Springborn

The PBB disaster, which has been affecting Michigan, its residents and its resources has been going on since 1973, when the fire-retardant chemical PBB (polybrominated bi-phenyl), was accidentally shipped by the Michigan Chemical Company to the Michigan Farm Bureau in place of the cattle-feed additive which was supposed to have been delivered.

The Farm Bureau mixed the PBB with the cattle feed, which was then fed to many different herds of Michigan cattle. The disaster occurred 5 years ago, but the consequences may be felt for many years to come.

The Reminder wanted to know how the people in the Clarkston area thought the mix-up was handled. And 2 people could be felt that the catastrophe was handled as well as could be expected, 7 felt that it was mishandled, and 1 woman had no opinion.

Both Mrs. Joyce Moffett and Mr. Bruce Lessiter felt that the incident involving the mixing of PBB with cattle feed was handled as well as it could be expected to be handled. As soon as the problem was recognized, Mr. Lessiter feels that the people in the government took care of it.

Because Mrs. Anna Lewis hasn't really read much about the problem, she doesn't have an opinion as to how it was taken care of. But even though Mrs. Wilda Masher hasn't studied the problem in depth, she thinks that the whole thing was handled quite badly. "The fact that it happened at all was bad handling, and from what I've heard, they (the public agencies) were slow to catch on to the danger."

Concern for the farmers who lost everything, and the fact that they weren't fully compensated for any loss that they sustained, motivated Rev. Billy Morgan to say that

To the Editor,

We would like to extend our appreciation to all of the people who made this past baseball season such a fine experience for our children. Mr. Taylor, Mr. Marshall and Mr. Kline and their sponsor, D. E. Adams Builders gave our son much guidance and encouragement. They led Art's team to their league's championship.

Mrs. Hardy, Mrs. Hammerstien and Mrs. Modrzejewski and their sponsor Bottom Blues gave our daughter an enthusiastic start in her "baseball career". All of their coaches were firm, kind and constructive. Their sponsors gave them a proud identity, which helped them develop team spirit. We greatly appreciate all of these people for their time and effort spent.

Thank you,
Art & Sally Binard

To the Editor of THE REMINDER:

With regard to Harry T. Williams' letter published in your August 31 issue, I believe that your readers ought to be set straight on his ill-considered, tawdry detraction of our church.

The friends of the Library was accorded the privilege of using our parish hall for their meeting, as have been other community groups, i.e. Clarkston Area Youth Assistance Committee, Camp Fire Leaders, Jayettes, Clarkston Historical Society, the Garden Club and more. We allow such public spirited groups to use our facilities, free of charge, as a community service. We regard this as a responsibility to our fellow-citizens and a civic duty. However, this does not mean that our church or its members are responsible for the thinking or actions of any such group in any way. For Mr. Williams to infer this is utterly ridiculous and deserves, I believe, the same disregard as the rest of his letter.

From his letter it would appear that Mr. Williams went to the Friends of the Library meeting expecting to encounter a controversy. Since this did not come to pass, according to his own admission, obviously he felt it necessary to give vent to his emotions via the public letterbox of our local papers. Let us hope that his catharsis is complete and that the library situation may be resolved by the proper authorities on the merits of the case without resort to further emotion or rancor.

To The Editor:

The residents of Woodhull Subdivision are privileged to have some of the best services available in Independence Township. We have full time "Citizens Watch", to prevent crime, full time "Building Inspection", and full time "Ordinance Violation Enforcement". All of these functions are filled by the tireless (or as some say, "tiresome") Luther C. Fletcher.

Mr. Fletcher regularly patrols our neighborhood, constantly on the look out for suspicious activity. He has a unique system of hand signals that he uses, apparently as a secret code (someone told me it was an obscene gesture...Can this be true?) With his trusty camera and armed with the force of his mouth, he keeps a constant check on all persons attempting to improve their property. We certainly appreciate this service, it would be a shame for any home improvements to be made in the area that didn't meet Mr. Fletcher's stringent standards. His example to us, provided by his dwelling place, which must be one of the seven architectural wonders, and his landscaping, which is enhanced by the wonderful random arrangement of garbage cans, the artistically piled trash and the month long display of lofty horticultural growth (spoiled by recent mowing) really is an inspiration to us all.

In addition to all of the above, Mr. Fletcher also teaches english grammar to all interested listeners. He is especially accomplished in quaint Anglo Saxon phrases, generally consisting of terse, four letter, easily understandable expressions (I was told these are obscenities...Can this be true?) I know the young people of the area are thankful for the opportunity to learn language skills from a real master.

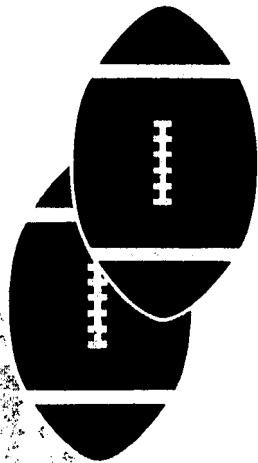

The other residents of our area are going to have to make a real effort to do their part and take some of the burden off Mr. Fletcher. He's been so busy with his dog training, surveillance and enforcement duties that he just hasn't had time to improve his own property. We're going to have to rectify this.

Keep up the good work, Mr. Fletcher, you're more entertaining than a flea circus.

BENEFITS OF MOURNING CUSTOMS

Attending a wake, making a condolence call, offering help to the bereaved—all are two-way acts of care-giving.

These mourning practices directly benefit the bereaved family and one's self. In her book, "Death, the Final Stage of Growth," Dr. Elizabeth Kubler-Ross advises that the purpose of mourning should be to allow for a full outpouring of grief. Mourning becomes the opportunity for the family to re-group after the loss of a member, especially to be able, then, to continue living, loving, working and enjoying one another.

By getting this outpouring of grief early, we help to prevent pent-up feelings of guilt and regret from blossoming later with psychologically unhealthy repercussions. "Getting it out of your system" as soon as possible is appropriate therapy in most instances, experts agree.

This is one of a series of brief articles we hope will be helpful. You may ask us questions for yourself and of public interest.

THOUGHTS 'N THINGS

The basic security of a child is threatened when parents become angry with the child. Self-preservation depends on the care and protection of those who are older, bigger, and more experienced, and the threat of withdrawal of that care and protection creates fear in the child. Different children react in different ways to the situation, but the fear and insecurity are at work. The drive to balance the emotional state becomes activated as a result.

This may be compared to physical hunger. Lack of nourishment threatens physical self-preservation, and the fear of starvation leads to the activation of energy which propels the hungry to search for food. The denial of the desire for food does not change the state of hunger. This must be understood. Needs do not vary, although our attitudes and egos often cause humans to deny them.

Children have no experience to fall back on when threatening experiences arise. They depend on other people to explain about time and circumstances, and to reassure them that their needs will be met at a future time, in spite of temporary delays. They also need more experienced people to teach them positive ways of obtaining the things they need.

The need for emotional security to assure self-preservation in the home becomes exaggerated when the child moves on to experiences beyond home and family life. The dangers are multiplied a thousandfold, and the less secure the home life has been, the greater the threat from an enlarged society.

Since the chances of harm increase, the number of people to create feelings of security must be increased, according to the child's emotional and mental arithmetic. General popularity thus becomes something to be sought after by children. The most popular child in school is expected to be the most secure child, and the least popular child is assumed to be the most insecure.

The children are not the only humans that believe this. Most parents and teachers believe it too -- and every attempt of kind and sympathetic adults to push the unpopular child into group activities reinforces the belief of everyone involved, that popularity is a sign of normalcy and achievement. It is, in other words, a goal to be sought after. The unfortunate result is that too many children pay too big a price for popularity, and miss the opportunity of developing a worthwhile sense of inner security.

In the younger years, "sameness" is king. Being "different" or standing out in a crowd is painful, because the child who stands out is self-conscious, and cannot deal with it. Like small animals, children seek the shelter of invisibility by attempting to blend into the background.

It takes an experienced adult to explain that coping with differences and difficulties is good practice, and builds strength and confidence. It also takes an experienced adult to explain how high a price one must pay for popularity.

We modify our behavior according to the responses we get from other people. The child who is bent on attaining popularity must always adjust the self to the needs of the people whose acceptance he or she requires. Words and actions and deeds must constantly be weighed in terms of the reactions of others. The more this is done, the less experience the child has with truths regarding the self. So much time must be taken up in activities that involve other people, and so much adjustment of the self - in order to please others, is necessary, that the child has little time to deal with the internal self. He or she eventually becomes a stranger to the self.

The more dependant the child becomes on others, the more frightening being "alone" becomes. The older the child becomes, the less adaptable he or she becomes. Then, following the crowd becomes a matter of assuring security or self-preservation. This becomes a danger to the individual when the teen period is reached, and emotions really take hold. Preservation of the self through personal choices based on personal knowledge of individual needs gives way to behaving according to group dictates. Being exposed as "different" then becomes a fate worse than death.

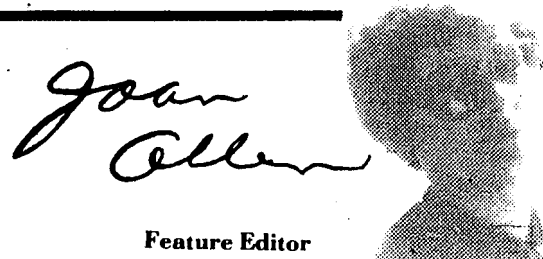

Experience in the teens cannot be dismissed as childish behavior. These children in adult bodies are required to answer for their actions. They are given freedom to make moral choices when they may lack any understanding or knowledge of the purposes of morality.

They are given the tools of destruction with little knowledge of responsibility of the consequences of misuse. Some manage to survive the whole period without ill-effect. Others bear the pain of things that cannot be undone, for the rest of their lives.

In fact, children should be discouraged from seeking popularity. They should be encouraged to spend time alone, and time developing their individuality. They should be encouraged to weigh their words and actions so that they say what they think and mean, and not what others may want to hear. Above all else, they should learn to be true to themselves and the person they will be in the future.

I do not mean, of course, that children should not be taught good manners, or consideration for the rights of others. Those things should be second nature to a child by the time school attendance is required, and is part of civilized behavior. I refer, rather, to a rather common practice of pushing all children into group activities, and encouraging them all to be extroverts. A lack of friends does not necessarily mean that a child is anti-social, maladjusted, or unhappy. It may simply be a sign of inner activity that does not require the companionship of others. In fact, the introvert child often becomes a leader among adults just because of being one jump ahead in intellectual pursuits. The introvert child who chooses music and other art forms over the companionship of peers very often gets the jump on those peers later on in life when what one "is" counts more than a well developed personality.

Too many friends and too many social activities can be as bad for a child as too many sweets, and limiting good times can be as difficult for parents as limiting sweets, but spending time developing the self can be encouraged even in very young children. It is up to the parent to offer opportunities, and to encourage it, and to encourage patience in the child.

Though I believe that over-popularity is more harmful in the long run, I appreciate the fact that lack of popularity is more worrisome to most parents and children than too much popularity. After all, having hope for the future is difficult when someone is unhappy in the present. So how does the parent deal with it?

What we all need is love and appreciation and acceptance. If we find it in our homes, we can deal with a lack of appreciation and misunderstanding outside the home--so the most important thing a parent can give an insecure child is acceptance. That is more important than dealing with any personality problems the child may have.

Next comes the "two heads are better than one" action, in which parent and child talk over the things that they like about other people, and the things they regard as negatives in other people's personalities. Such discussions should be regarded as discussions about the communication techniques of people, and which ones are apt to succeed in dealing with other people, and why.

What is most important is that the child realizes that behavior is learned, and that it can be changed if it is not getting good results. "You give the impression" others that you are a person that doesn't care about them," is far different than "You don't care about other people." It puts the problem in proper perspective.

Statements that don't allow for the fact that children believe that their parents "know" what they are, can be very damaging to a child. The parent who tells a child that he or she is "bad" in any way, makes the child "bad". That is one form of obedience that most parents don't want.

Letter to the Editor

I agree with Ms. Balzarini's recent editorial about the library situation getting out of hand. It has gotten out of hand for the Friends of the Library, or at least its leadership. Their lobbying for Mr. Lahiri's removal as librarian has backfired. It has awakened support for him that the Friends did not know was there.

One way they want to compensate for their misadventure is to erase the tapes. There never was such an effort to get Mr. Lahiri fired. He has not been put on probation until next April. The Friends never did distribute literature and comments to the press on Mr. Lahiri's lack of "managerial skills" supported by falsehoods and innuendos. Ms. Balzarini's editorial drops any such facts about her friends' activities down the memory hole.

Harry T. Williams

Letter to the Editor

Dear Joan,

Your column in the August 31 Reminder is the only one of yours I've ever read, being new in the area. Also, it is the best thing of this sort that I remember reading--you seem so honest and sincere.

All of mankind is seeking and learning and growing through the experiences they go through day by day and moment by moment.

You mentioned wanting to share with others, and wanting them to share with you. So I'd like to do a little sharing. I'm a member of a group called ECKANKAR, which is "The Path of Total Awareness". I'm Editor of a statewide newsletter called the Whispering Wind, and I'm enclosing one--just something I thought you might enjoy seeing. If you have any questions or comments feel free to communicate.

Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,
Judy Bill

Clarkston Historical Society's Crafts and Cider Festival to be Held September 22-24

The Clarkston Community Historical Society's fourth annual Crafts and Cider Festival will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 22, 23 and 24 in the Village Park on Depot Road, Clarkston, Michigan. Hours for this event will be 10 A.M. to 6 P.M. on Friday and Saturday and 10 A.M. to 4 P.M. on Sunday.

Craftsmen for this year's festival have been gathered from all over Michigan and from out of state. In addition to last year's potters, weavers, leaded glass artisans and photographers, demonstrating artists will be in attendance this year.

Craftsmen specializing in hand wrought gold and silver jewelry, blacksmithing, mobile sculpture, and wood work will join artists working with soft goods such as macrame, applique, quilting and Japanese bunka.

Citizens Advisory Report

To be Presented to Bailey Lake PTA September 14

The Bailey Lake PTA has invited chairman Bob Vandermark and subcommittee chairmen Dick Degner, Barbara Vedder and Jim Brennan of the Citizens Advisory Committee to present their report to the public in the first meeting outside school board meetings since the report was presented in June.

Following a short business meeting at 7:30, Thursday, September 14, the chairmen will discuss the work of the committee during those previous six months of investigation and give some idea of how the final decisions were made. It is also hoped someone will be there to present the so-called "minority" report, as opinion within the committee was not entirely unanimous. Questions from the audience are anticipated.

The meeting is open to the public and not just to members of the Bailey PTA or parents of Bailey Lake children. New people in both the neighborhood and the community are invited to attend. Babysitting and movies for children three and older will be provided for parents who could not otherwise attend.

Since implementation of the report would affect every member of the community, the Bailey Lake PTA is anticipating a large turnout.

FORECAST

by Robert C. Davis

Much drier than normal conditions continued over most of our 4-township area for the second consecutive month. Rainfall totals for August ranged from 0.65 of an inch in Ann Arbor to 2.85 inches at Tipsico Lake/Rose Township. Locally, the northern Clarkston station reported 2.08 inches and the eastern Clarkston station reported 2.03 inches for the month.

Based on an analysis of long term National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (N.O.A.A.) rain gages in southeastern Michigan, our 4-township area should have received about 21 to 22 inches of precipitation for the year through the month of August. Out of the 6 gages in our local rain gage network for which we have complete records to date this year, only the Pontiac Township/Elizabeth Lake station has recorded above normal precipitation. This station has recorded 22.30 inches of precipitation through the month of August.

At the other end of the scale, the Drayton Plains/Oakland Lake station has recorded only 15.64 inches of precipitation this year, which is nearly 6 inches below normal.

The remaining gages and their yearly precipitation to date are as follows: Fenton - 16.17 inches, Union Lake - 20.73 inches, northern Clarkston - 16.04 inches, and eastern Clarkston - 17.26 inches. This data seems to indicate that the northern portions of our 4-township area are suffering the most from the lack of rainfall.

Temperatures during August were slightly above normal for the first time since July of 1977. Based on data from the eastern Clarkston station, temperatures ranged from a low of 45 degrees on the morning of the 4th. to a high of 91 degrees during the afternoons of the 13th. and 14th.

Home gardeners should be aware that there is a 10% chance of a frost or freeze in this area by September 25, a 50% chance by October 11, and a 90% chance by October 27.

The rainfall map was prepared by Robert C. Davis and Susan E. Rosin, and was sponsored by Johnson and Anderson, Inc., Consulting Engineers.)

Whys and Wherefores
Choice Tidbits from Our News Files

Poor Clarkston High School. Insiders say injuries to their first and second string quarterbacks have delayed progress as they prepared for their opening game against Grand Blanc.

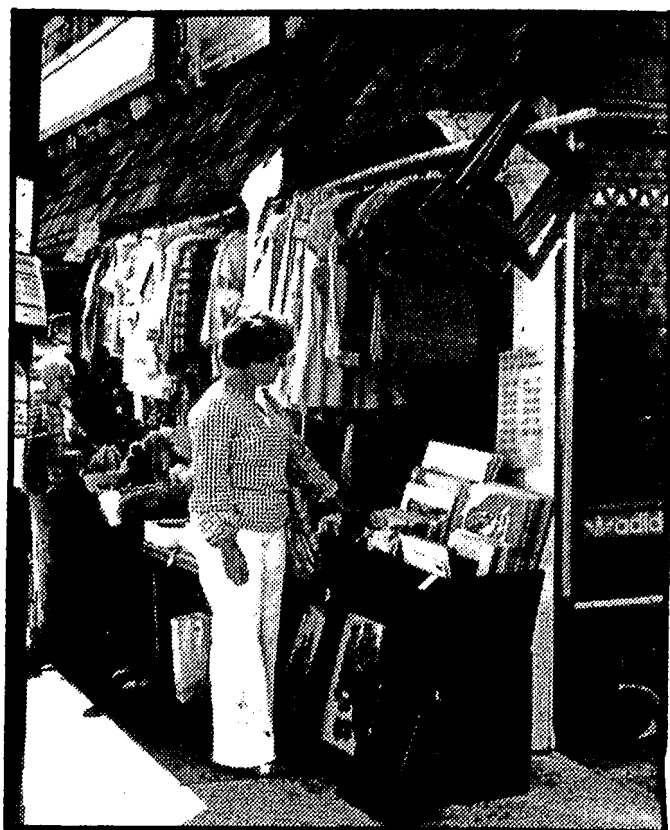

The Historical Society's Craft and Cider Festival will definitely remain in downtown Clarkston. There was some discussion earlier of moving it out to Ritters Farm Market where there are plans underway to open a Cider Mill.

Well, that letter from our artistic friends at Clarkston High School was delivered to Bob Seger right on schedule. Unfortunately, he has still not replied to it. Rumor has it the rock star has sold his home off of Rattalee Lake Road, but is still planning to locate elsewhere in the area.

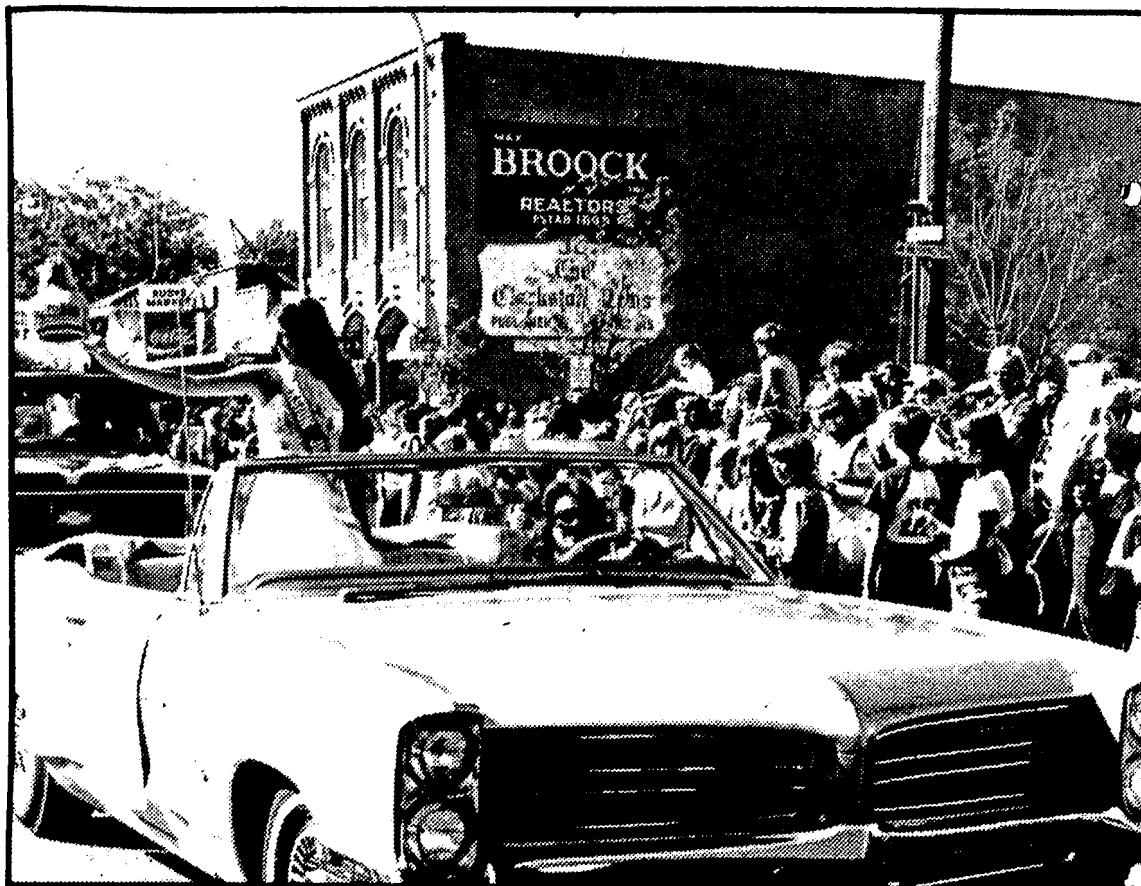

One highlight of Clarkston's Labor Day Parade was a surprise water fight between a Goodrich fireman lurking in the crowd and a truck full of Waterford firemen.

U.P. residents exist in a sports world "no-man's-land" caught between Michigan & Wisconsin teams. One dyed-in-the-wool Lion came down for the Lion-Packer Game with an extra $50 just to buy souvenirs. It was a long trip home for that disappointed fan, especially since the rest of the group cheered for the Packers.

LABOR DAY WEEKEND IN CLARKSTON

Labor Day weekend started early with sidewalk sales in the village for browsing shoppers.

Clarkston's Junior Miss Kathy Wyckoff added a touch of glamour to the parade.

Pioneer days were recalled by the Dixie Saddle Club.

Games and races for kids of all ages were featured at the annual corn roast held by the Campbell-Richmond Post of the American Legion.

Bill Dennis, Administrative Assistant for the Clarkston Schools, was the first annual Goatherder of the Year as a result of a drawing held by the Clarkston Village Players in a whacky fund-raising effort. The presentation of "Matilda" was made by CVP President Russ Inman [left]. When the crowd departed, Dennis was left holding the goat with a dismayed expression on his face.

Question of the Week

the disaster wasn't really handled well. He also feels that the two companies involved got a "slap on the wrist," but thinks that they might have made up for the problem somewhat by being forced to pay any claims by farmers or affected state resident.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lietzke agreed on the point that the PBB disaster was handled terribly, and the whole thing should never have happened. But seeing that it did, Mr. Lietzke didn't think that the situation was handled quickly enough, and by the time that it was, an enormous amount of damage had already been done.

Two people who didn't feel that the problem was handled quickly or efficiently enough are Mrs. Donna Montreuil and another Clarkston resident who prefers remaining anonymous.

But with most people thinking about the disaster's not being handled quickly enough and the loss of the farmers who had to do away with their herds of beef or dairy cattle, one woman, Mrs. Marjorie Morris, is thinking about the people who must live in the area where tainted cattle are buried.

Mrs. Morris stated "I know if I lived in Mio, I wouldn't want to go on living there where all of those contaminated cattle are buried. I don't know if they're handling it (the PBB disaster) right even now."

Village of Clarkston, Minutes of Regular Meeting
 August 28, 1978 Village Hall, 375 Depot, Clarkston

Meeting called to order by President Hallman at 7:30 p.m. followed by the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Roll: Present - Basinger, Byers, Schultz, Thayer, Weber
 Absent - ApMadoc

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The council discussed whether to publish the entire minutes or a synopsis of them in the Clarkston News, especially the legality and cost difference. Treasurer Art Pappas will supply us with the last few Clarkston News bills for minutes publication.

Trustee Schultz reported that the state highway dept. had notified him that placing signs on I-75 designating three exits for Clarkston would create confusion for motorists, so they will not be doing it.

The council discussed Gar Wilson's request to purchase a used loader for snow removal at a cost of $11,500. They felt that this is too large an expense for something that would only have a limited use. Leasing the vehicle was discussed, and Gar was authorized to look into the purchase of a front loading truck.

Trustee Schultz will check on the sand in the storm drains near Clarkston Mills.

Correspondence from Acting Police Chief Kimball was read, concerning his recommendation to make an ordinance for rules in the park. The council discussed this situation.

Moved by Schultz, seconded by Thayer to have the attorney draft an ordinance prohibiting people in the park between 10 p.m. and 8 a.m. except by special permission by the council. Motion carried unanimously.

Trustee Schultz reported that there would be a folk concert in the park this Wednesday and wanted to know if they could be paid with funds in the village bank account. The council felt that since that was the band committee's money, that they should be the ones to give this approval.

Correspondence from Township Clerk Chris Rose was read, requesting the council to approve placing the ballot proposal of levying one additional mill for police protection on the November election ballot, which the township has already authorized. President Hallman reviewed the village's financing of police protection, and the council and Mr. Rose discussed the ballot proposal.

Moved by Thayer, seconded by Basinger to authorize the township clerk to place the request for one additional mill for police protection from 1979 to 1988 on the November election ballot for village residents. Roll: Ayes- Basinger, Byers, Schultz, Thayer, Weber. Nays- none. Motion carried.

Treasurer Art Pappas distributed financial reports to the council.

Correspondence from the Township Zoning Officer was read, desiring direction from the village concerning the recent addition to the parking lot of the Methodist Church. They will be notified that the attorney has indicated that this is permissible under the terms of our zoning ordinance, but the matter of changing the ordinance has been referred to the planning commission in case of future similar requests.

Correspondence from the Dept. of Natural Resources was read, stating they had no record of dredging permits for the Olde Sturbridge subdivision north of the village. Trustee Basinger will check into this.

Correspondence from Blue Cross-Blue Shield was read, stating that we would be changed from a group rate to an individual rate now, since we employ fewer than five full-time persons.

Moved by Weber, seconded by Byers to adjourn at 9:15 p.m. Motion carried unanimously.

The next meeting of the Northwest Oakland Senior Citizens' Housing Advisory Committee will be held on Thursday, September 14, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., at the Springfield Township Hall, 650 Broadway, in Davisburg.

At their last meeting, they decided to formally establish a multi-community Senior Citizens' Housing Advisory Committee to serve the northwest Oakland area. This includes the following communities: the Townships of Holly, Groveland, Brandon, Rose, Springfield, and Independence, and the Villages of Clarkston, Holly and Ortonville. The purpose of the Advisory Committee is to:

1. Determine the need for senior citizen's housing in northwest Oakland County;
2. Identify and select the best means available for meeting these housing needs; and
3. Prepare and submit a proposal for the development of senior citizens housing, including the delivery of essential support services, to an appropriate funding source.

The Advisory Committee will be made up of representatives from local governments, senior citizen organizations, community education, human service agencies, and community service organizations.

For further information call Collin W. Walls, at 634-3111, or Bill Doub, at 569-4208.

OU Mime Ensemble to Demonstrate

Oakland University Mime Ensemble will present a 45-minute lecture-demonstration of the fools' school on Saturday, Sept. 23, to preview new courses for senior citizens and children, which will be offered fall term through the Division on Continuing Education.

The free lecture-demonstration begins at 2:30 p.m. in the recital hall of Varner Hall, located in the southeast corner building on campus. The campus is accessible off I-75 via the University exit.

The two new nondegree courses, which will be offered with basic mime courses beginning Saturday, Sept. 30, are Magic and Clowning for Senior Citizens and Creative Dramatics for Children.

Magic and Clowning for Senior Citizens is an introduction to the art of magic and clown techniques useful for entertaining at hospitals, street fairs, and parties. The course will be conducted for five weeks from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., Saturdays. Creative Dramatics for Children provides a springboard into children's theatre. Students participate in improvisations derived from children's literature. The course will be held from 10 a.m. to noon, Saturdays, for 10 weeks.

The basic courses, Mime and Pantomime and Illusion and Improvisation, also will be offered Saturdays beginning Sept. 30: Mime from 10 a.m. to noon and illusion from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. All courses are instructed by members of The Mime Ensemble, Michigan's professional performing mime company, now in residence at Oakland University, and under the artistic direction of Thomas Aston.

To obtain details about registration, call the Continuing Education office, 377-3120.

COMMENTARY: Is Winning the Only Thing?

by Carol Balzarini

This is the Reminder's fall sports issue with team pictures, athletic schedules and interviews with the coaches. But it's the coaches who concern me the most. Perhaps I should preface my remarks by saying that I am not now, now have I ever been, a really athletic person. Needlepoint is my most strenuous exercise and running is something I do only when the telephone rings.

As a reporter, the wife of a sports nut and the mother of two year 'round athletes, I've had my share of opportunities to view teams of all types, and coaches of all types, in action.

My tolerance level is in direct proportion to the age of the players involved. If a professional football coach comes close to having a heart attack in the course of a game and you don't have to be an accomplished lipreader to know what he's saying, it doesn't bother me. As a matter of fact, the display is usually pretty funny. Besides that, what most of those players are paid should compensate for any verbal abuse.

College athletes I figure are old enough to make their own decisions and many have their hearts set on professional careers anyway. What they tolerate in coaches is their business and I guess I agree, to a certain extent, different coaches use different methods to achieve the same results.

From the high school level on down, however, is another matter as far as I am concerned. Nothing will ever convince me that insults, obscenities, and public embarrassment are required to ensure a winning team. And if that is what it takes to get a winning team, who needs it?

I remember only too well one little league coach who made his small players run their legs off whenever they lost a game as a punishment. I saw another one just this summer attempt to substitute a bigger and better player for a smaller, less consistent one at a crucial point in the game. The coach claimed the smaller player was injured. He wasn't physically hurt, but his feelings obviously were.

I've seen softball coaches scream like fishwives at their girls whenever they made an error or failed to get a hit or even encourage them to increase the margin of victory as much as possible to make the coach look good. Or how about the coach who only uses his top players while leaving the rest to warm the bench? A lot more little egos have been deflated in the name of sports than big egos have been inflated.

This whole train of thought was unleashed as a result of a recent incident. In the traditional clash between two ninth grade teams, one was victorious by a wide margin leaving the other scoreless. The losing team was herded to the far end of the field where the coach proceeded to give a performance that far surpassed any even given by Leonard Bernstein at his most energetic. Had it not been for the setting and the uniforms the coach could easily have been mistaken for an orchestra conductor.

It was evident to all spectators, although they were mercifully spared the audio portion, that he was unhappy with his players and their performance. But for a grown man to publically embarrass both himself and his players in that way was unforgivable.

It just seems to me that somewhere along the way, some coaches have lost sight of what athletics is really all about. Whatever happened to teamwork and fair play and good sportsmanship and physical conditioning and just plain fun? Whatever happened to mutual respect and kindness and consideration and cooperation?

Or is winning, by any means, the only thing?

"Nothing will ever convince me that insults, obscenities, and public embarrassment are required to ensure a winning team." Carol Balzarini

Tungate Takes Charge of Clarkston's Athletic Hopes

"I really wasn't involved with that. Different types of people, different ideas between coaches and administrators do happen. It should be pointed out, however, that no one was fired...." Tungate on last spring's coaching resignations.

by Carol Balzarini

Paul Tungate, Clarkston High School's baseball coach for the past twelve years, will function as the school's new athletic director this year. The programs were formerly directed by administrative assistant Conrad Bruce who handles several areas including contract negotiations. It is hoped an athletic director in the school itself will improve communications.

Tungate's athletic background would certainly seem to qualify him for his new duties. In addition to baseball, he has also coached junior varsity football and ninth grade basketball and tennis in another school system.

It will be his job to not only serve as a liaison between the school's athletic programs and boosters clubs and other special interest groups but also to schedule games and officials and purchase equipment. He will also do the "legwork" for coaches such as supervision, paper work, arranging scorers and timers, leaving them more time to devote to coaching.

Tungate is anxious to promote athletics as part of the educational process. He feels it's just as important as academics because it teaches kids to get along with each other. It's his job to make sure that process continues.

The new athletic director would also work actively for any justified millage should the occasion arise. He realizes that millage defeats all too often result in athletic cuts.

Tungate has seen the plans drawn up by Anderson-Lesniak for more efficient use of the school system's secondary athletic facilities. While the proposal is the "ultimate" plan, Tungate does feel there is a real need for better use of the grounds and facilities.

Some facilities need to be updated while some are just lacking. Tungate sees the need for another baseball field, a softball field, and better fencing. New tennis courts are needed because the old one can't be resurfaced again. The track is not regulation size, it should have eight or ten lanes instead of the present six. Only dual meets can be held at CHS but not league meets.

On the positive side of Clarkston High School's athletic program are the kids, Tungate said, who have done well despite the fact facilities are not the best. He also credits a dedicated coaching staff which relates well to kids.

He assesses the football program as "above average." Basketball, both boys and girls, is "coming back," although he calls girls basketball a "stable" sport along with baseball, track and girls volleyball, good well-established continuing programs.

Football this year is in the rebuilding process as is boys basketball, girls tennis, wrestling and boys golf. Skiing, of course, is just starting. There will be a coach this year but there are no definite commitments as yet.

Tungate declined to comment on last spring's resignations of several coaches except to say, "I really wasn't involved with that. Different types of people, different ideas between coaches and administrators do happen. It should be pointed out, however, that no one was fired." Tungate attributes the overall problem to one of a "communications breakdown."

He feels the former coaches did a "great job" of coaching but that it was another era and he'd rather look forward than back, "nothing more really needs to be said about that."

About his resignation in June from coaching baseball, Tungate explained he was just ready to move on to something else even though he had no definite plans at the time. When approached about the position as athletic director, he said he only agreed to take it under certain conditions to which administrators agreed.

Tungate said there is no question in his mind about the necessity of having an athletic director in the building. But he found out in a hurry that it should be a full-time job. Tungate teaches three hours in the morning and devotes the rest of the day to athletics. With 140 events from September through February, a lot of time and effort is required to coordinate them. If the job were full-time, the athletic director could take on both of the junior high schools too. Their athletic programs are now being handled by the assistant principals.

Only Three Starters Return from 9-0 Football Squad

by Carol Balzarini

Clarkston High School has a new football coach this year, Bill Valasco, who has five years of coaching experience behind him in the Bloomfield Hills system.

Valasco has inherited just three of twenty-two players from last year's team which finished 9-0 in the Greater Oakland Athletic League (GOAL). That team lost to Brother Rice in the quarter finals while Rice went on to become state Class A champions.

Valasco's philosophy of coaching football stems from his own personal experience in that sport. High school football provided him with a four-year scholarship at Michigan State University.

"Football's been good to me," he said. "I'd like to make it good for other kids. Winning makes it more fun but they are kids and football isn't their whole life."

Valasco wants them to grow as people as well and not just as football players. He would never consciously try to embarrass them in front of other people, the team maybe, but no other.

As far as working them is concerned, Valasco says there is more conditioning now, more running. Even though he works them hard he still realizes they are just kids.

Unquestionably Valasco is rebuilding a team. He says mistakes are to be expected but the team will get better. The first game won't be any indication of what the team can do, whether the Wolves win or lose. Most of his starters are seniors, but Valasco regrets he does not have a large contingency of juniors.

The new coach is also pleased with this year's schedule which sees a weak Oxford eleven replaced by a strong team from Grand Blanc. He sees his toughest opposition coming from Andover, Rochester and West Bloomfield although Milford and Waterford Kettering will be good. These six teams form the GOAL.

Valasco added, "I'm not sure where we fit in. If we improve, we'll be contenders, if not, just also-rans. But I think we'll improve."

Two factors make his task even tougher at the outset--quarterbacks Bill Kratt a senior, and Scott McKoin, a sophomore, are injured, leaving junior Nick Lekas to start against Grand Blanc in the opener.

Valasco is certain both injured players will be ready for the game with Lake Orion Dragons on September 15. "They'll play if they're ready and I'll be sure they are or they won't play," he said.

Although he has only worked with the players for a short time, Valasco had nothing but praise for them. There's a large number of great kids on the team," he said, "and I wouldn't trade any of them."

Coach's Goal is to Become "Established" in Tennis

Varsity girls tennis at Clarkston High School is an off-again, on-again sport depending on how many girls can not only play tennis but are also willing to play it as a school sport. As a matter of fact, coach Linc Smith's primary goal is to establish a tradition of a girls' tennis team at the high school, "nothing more grandiose than that" as he describes it.

Smith, who teaches in the learning resource center at Clarkston Junior, has coached the boys' team for the past two years. This is his first year with the girls who had no team last year but one the year before.

His prospects are varied with some players from private clubs, some from the recreation department program and some with no tennis experience at all. Thirteen girls have expressed an interest in tennis although it only takes ten to be a team. Smith feels he can hardly afford to discourage those extra three.

In a tennis match, there are four singles and three doubles. His most promising players are Shannon Satterlee and Katie Smith, both seniors, junior Rosann Morrow and sophomore Kathy Williamson; they will probably be his singles players. Doubles players will be selected after more practice.

Smith sees his league as a tough one because the other communities have already established a tennis tradition.

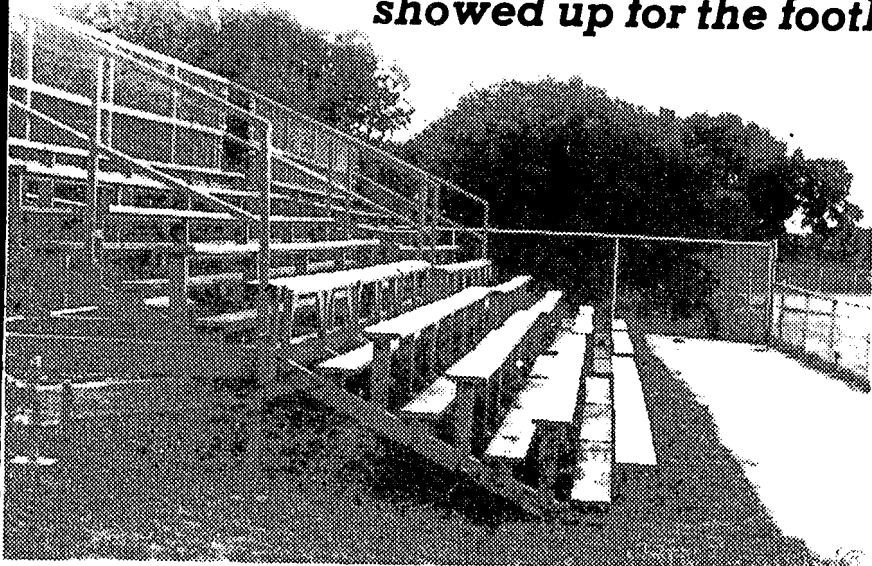

From the current popularity of tennis locally, he shouldn't have too much trouble attaining his goal of a girls' tennis team.

Three Return to Lead Basketball Hopes

Since team tryouts were held the second week in August, the Clarkston High School girls' basketball team has been hard at work preparing for their season opener with Lake Orion, September 12. Their home opener is September 14 with Avondale.

Coach Jan Modesitt is pleased to have three returning senior letter-winners from last year's team who are also this year's tri-captains, Kay Pearson, Pam Blower and Jeannie Odell.

Pearson is a 5'9" forward who averaged 10 points and 7.5 rebounds per game in spite of being sidelined for twenty percent of the season due to illness. Modesitt describes her as "a fine outside shooter and a tough rebounder." Pearson was named to the second team for the league last season and was an all-country honorable mention.

Blower is also a 5'9" forward who works effectively at the guard position. Although hampered with injuries last year, Modesitt expects her to be strong this year and see a lot of floor time.

Odell is a 5'11" center whose height Modesitt plans to use to the team's best advantage this year both offensively and defensively. She is described as "aggressive and enthusiastic." Odell was the team's most effective shot blocker last season rejecting 46 of the opponents' shots.

The remaining players on the team are juniors. Rae Anderson, Kelli Ketzler and Lee Vedder are forwards and Terry Collier, Kass Conway, Linda Foster and Lisa Steel are guards. Team managers are Kathi Dennis and LBeth Haddad.

Modesitt expects her girls, although inexperienced, to do quite well this season owing to the strength of the front line and the height of the team. She feels success will depend on the effectiveness of the guards.

Competition in the Greater Oakland Athletic League (GOAL) will come from Bloomfield Hills Andover whose advantage is their experience, but Modesitt thinks her girls can overcome that advantage.

At the time The Reminder was preparing editorial copy for this special section, the golf team had not been selected....thus, we have no report from their coach. However, we do wish them the Best of Luck!

GIRLS BASKETBALL TEAM

CROSS COUNTRY TEAM

 Team coach is Errol Solley.

Cross Country Team a Question Mark

State Finalist Gordon Sanders Back to Lead Team

Errol Solley, track and/or cross country coach at Clarkston High School for the past nine years, is having a tough time trying to asses this year's cross country team.

He has lost three members of last year's team, two to work and one to another school. Seven runners are seniors but not all are experienced. And, too, cross country performance can depend on a number of things including mental attitude, the weather and the terrain over which the course is run.

Return senior Gordon Sanders is Solley's brightest prospect. Having finished fifth in the state last year and thirteenth the year before, Sanders has a good shot at the number one spot this year. His best time has been 14:40 for the three-mile run.

Other seniors on the team include Charlie Byers, Paul Boberg, Steve Hyde, all with previous experience, Kurt Kristopek, Linda Palazzola, and Jeff Biagini.

Juniors include Gentry Ellis, Mike Ulasich and Mark Foos. Foos has not as yet returned to school, however, and this will be the first year for Ulasich.

Sophomore runners are Scott Ferguson, Dan Hahn and Ed Mc Innis.

Solley says the factors affecting the runner's performance are varied. Some will run better in hot weather, some in cold. If a runner thinks he can't win, he won't. Sometimes the Course itself will determine success or failure, as they run on school grounds, golf courses and even through woods and fields. The coach call cross country "a real psychological sport."

If the season goes as hoped, Sanders should win all of his races in the dual meets. Solley would also like to see the team finish in the top of the GOAL as they usually do except for their fourth place finish last year. Milford and West Bloomfield, he said, usually take top honors because they have larger teams.

Only seven runners from each team can run in the varsity event. All others run in the second event as either exhibition runners or as a junior varsity team if there are seven of them.

Just One of Those Days

The couple had saved their pennies for a long time. They wanted a very special stove, and were content to do with their old one until they could afford it. Finally, they went shopping, and bought a beautiful white marvel. This stove had a combination oven. It would work as an ordinary oven, or as a microwave oven, and they were thrilled with it.

They experimented with the stove for several weeks, and then were ready to unveil it. They invited several couples for a Sunday dinner -- and were up bright and early to fix their meal. They planned to prepare and bake chicken, potatoes, squash, home-made rolls, and pie, and then set them aside, to be reheated via the microwave oven towards the end of the cocktail hour.

With the two of them working, they managed to turn out a beautiful meal, get dressed, and greet their guests, completely relaxed. The guests, however, had not seen the stove, and became a little nervous as the cook continued to look unflustered after a few cocktails.

Finally, the hostess disappeared into the kitchen, and placed the chicken, potatoes, and squash into the oven and set the microwave timer. She went back to the patio for a few minutes conversation, and then hearing the timer ring, hurried back to the kitchen. She was absolutely flabbergasted, however, when the oven refused to open for her.

She hurried out to get her husband, and he returned to the kitchen, and was also unable to open the oven door. Interested guests then joined them to marvel over the beautiful stove -- and everyone had advice to offer -- but the oven still refused to release the dinner to the hungry crowd.

Everyone read the book of directions thoroughly and tried to open the oven, but it remained locked. Then the host grew desperate, and called the manufacturer's emergency number. He got a lot of sympathy, but no help. The manufacturer's representative figured that somehow the cleaning lock had been activated, but there was simply nobody available for service on a Sunday.

The host went to a fast-food place and bought everyone hamburgers and french fries, and the hostess served her pie. Nobody could tell whether she was laughing or crying, but they all tried to have a good time in spite of the fact she was having "just one of those days."

When the repairman arrived on Monday, he managed to open the oven, and fix the stove -- but it was too late to save the chicken dinner. He said it looked delicious anyway -- which was small consolation. Then the hostess did cry!

WORLD, TAKE MY SON BY THE HAND

MY SON STARTED SCHOOL THIS WEEK. It's going to be strange and new to him for a while.

And I wish you would sort of treat him gently.

You see, up to now, he's been King of the Roost.

He's been boss of the backyard. I have always been around to repair his wounds, and to soothe his feelings.

But now—things are going to be different.

This morning, he's going to walk down the front steps, wave his hand and start on his great adventure that will probably include wars, tragedy, and sorrow.

To live his life in the world he has to live in will require faith and love and courage.

So, World, I wish you would sort of take him by his young hand and teach him the things he will have to know.

Teach him — but gently, if you can.

He will have to learn, I know, that not all men are just, that not all men are true.

Teach him that for every scoundrel, there is a hero — that for every crooked politician, there is a dedicated leader — that for every enemy, there is a friend.

Let him learn early that the bullies are the easiest people to lick.

Teach him the wonders of books. Give him quiet time to ponder the eternal mystery of birds in the sky, bees in the sun, and flowers on the green hill.

Teach him that it is far more honorable to fail than to cheat. Teach him to have faith in his own ideas, even if everyone else tells him they are wrong.

Try to give my son the strength not to follow the crowd when everyone else is getting on the bandwagon. Teach him to listen to all men, but to filter all he hears on a screen of truth and to take only the good that comes through.

Teach him to close his ears on a howling mob — and to stand and fight if he's right. Teach him that the word AMERICAN ends with . . . I CAN!

Teach him gently, World, but don't coddle him because only the test of fire makes fine steel.

This is a big order, World, but see what you can do . . .

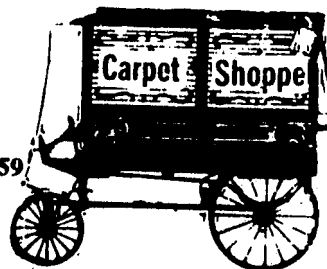

He's such a nice little fellow.

WHAT'S HAPPENING

by Marilyn Bridgeman

Let's talk, you and I. Let's talk about fear." This is Stephen King's opening line in the foreword to his newest book, NIGHT SHIFT. It is a fair warning for what is ahead.

NIGHT SHIFT is a collection of short stories written by the author of CARRIE, SALEM'S LOT and THE SHINING.

Having read King's other books and now after reading NIGHT SHIFT, I am convinced he is the Poe of today.

Each story is very different, but they are all about normal places, people and things—suddenly something very slight seems abnormal. Then the terror starts to build until the reader is unable to put the book down.

King describes the reason people enjoy horror stories as the "let's slow down and look at the accident syndrome". In other words, people enjoy feeling the emotion of fear when they know that they are safe. It makes them appreciate their own vulnerability.

NIGHT SHIFT is an easy way to experience that tingling sensation of fear because you can take a rest after each story and give your mind a chance to think of more pleasant things. That is if you can get rid of the images King draws so clearly with his writing.

It is hard to forget THE MANGLER, a pressing machine in a commercial laundry that has a taste for human blood. Or the unusual children who seem to be the only inhabitants of a Nebraska town. Then there is THE BOOGEYMAN; is he for real? This story had me checking my closet for days.

These are some of the most obvious of King's tales of terror. Some of the other stories are so subtle that until the end, you are never quite sure where the author is going. This anticipation is part of the suspense.

From the introduction by John D. MacDonald, til the last page, NIGHT SHIFT is a book which will keep you enthralled. Especially the story THE QUITTERS, which has to be the most unique way of quitting smoking I have ever encountered.

Pontiac Symphony Celebrates 25th Anniversary

The 1978-79 season marks the Pontiac-Oakland Symphony's 25th. Anniversary as a community orchestra. Through it's "SILVER SOUND" season, the Symphony offers a musical variety to please all concert goers.

The Symphony, under the direction of David Daniels, includes professional musicians, local amateurs, and students of Oakland University playing in the orchestra for college credit. This season's concerts will all be performed at Pontiac Central High School.

The first concert on October 27 features return visits from the Symphony's previous conductors, Francesco DiBlasi and Felix Resnick. DiBlasi, currently conductor of Oakway Symphony, was the Pontiac Symphony's first conductor and was instrumental in organizing the orchestra. Felix Resnick replaced DiBlasi in 1961 and continued as conductor through the 1976 season. Works to be performed include Enesco's RUMANIAN RHAPSODY NO. 1 Felix Resnick conducting; and Wagner's PRELUDE TO DIE MEISTERSINGER, Francesco DiBlasi conducting.

on December 1, pianist Fontaine Laing will perform Schumann's PIANO CONCERTO with the Symphony. Miss Laing has performed at the Detroit Institute of Art's "Brunch with Bach" series, and is a performing member of Tuesday Musicales of Detroit.

Jazz comes to the Symphony on March 2 when soprano Jan Albright and the "Doc" Holladay Quartet join the Symphony for David Baker's LE CHAT QUI PECHE. The annual family concert on Sunday March 25, includes the delightful WALTZ OF THE FLOWERS from Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite, and offers an excellent program to introduce children to symphony music.

The last series concert on April 20 features John Dvoras conducting the Symphony and Oakland University Chorus in the majestic Brahms' REQUIEM.

For further information, the Symphony office is open mornings and may be reached at 334-6024.

In addition to the five subscription concerts, the Symphony is planning a special RICHARD RODGERS CABARET ON January 20, 1979 at the Main Event Restaurant at the Pontiac Silverdome. Included will be music from SOUND OF MUSIC, SOUTH PACIFIC, KING AND I, and will feature guest conductor Ernest Jones in Richard Rodgers' VICTORY AT SEA.

Champagne Benefit for Symphony

A champagne Benefit will be held on Sunday, September 24, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Rachwal from 4 - 7 p.m. to celebrate the Silver Anniversary of the Pontiac-Oakland Symphony.

The Symphony Board of Directors and the Women's Association to the Pontiac-Oakland Symphony are hosting the event and have extended invitations to all former Board and orchestra members.

The event is open to the public by reservation and tickets may be obtained from the Symphony office, 10 W. Huron, Suite 209, Pontiac 48058. All donations are tax deductible.

If you are looking for land to build your own home on, make sure you check local building regulations before you make your final purchase. There may be laws concerning local water table depths, distance from already existing underground pipes or lines, or those all important zoning laws that might prohibit building in the spot you have picked out. This research ahead of time can save a lot of heartbreak and expense later.

At BOB WHITE REAL ESTATE 5856 S. Main St., 625-5821 we are responsible for maintaining the highest ethical standards of the real estate profession, and our highly qualified and well trained staff are at your service. We share your desire to sell your property quickly at the best market price obtainable; your area broker since 1947, we will use our experience, knowledge and facilities to handle negotiations effectively and efficiently. Open: 9-9 Mon-Thur; 9-6 Fri, Sat; 11-5 Sun.

Houses - or "It takes a heap of living to make a House a Home!"

by Joan Allen Part IV

Once we had decided to sell our ranch style house with a bigger than average yard, rather than sell the cottage, we began looking for a house that already had carpeting and drapes, and a landscaped yard. We soon became discouraged. Though the area was growing, there were very few houses available. The ones that were for sale were too small for a family of five, or had been build by do-it-yourselfers who should never have tried to do it themselves. On the other hand, there was a brand new subdivision being built not far from where we lived. The lots were small, the houses big. It wasn't long before we'd put a deposit on a lot. We knew better, but we did it anyway--caught up in our enthusiasm over the models.

Now, while all our moving had been going on, I had returned to college for a teaching degree, and had been substituting three to five days a week. I was so in love with the new house we were building, however, that I decided I would stop working, and spend my time on our "permanent" home.

Our children were older now, so I didn't have to choose carpeting for practicality, except for the family room, so I chose what I wanted to. That included a flowered carpet for the dining-room which I fell in love with on sight. In fact, I chose everything for that house because I loved it. I felt that were really ready to "settle in" and become house people like the rest of our respective families.

We did have one problem. Our backyard ran downhill, and was quite steep, as the sub was built at the top of a hill. We were told that a lawn would be impossible back there, unless we had it terraced first. We had not included that type of work in our budget.

Friends told us where we could get of load of concrete cheap. We ordered it. It was delivered--and unloaded next to the curb in front of the house. The lord and master of the house was out of town. The kids and I could not pick up one piece of that broken concrete. It weighed a ton--I'm sure of that. A frantic call to a relative in the construction business solved our problem. He knew of two big men that did yard work, and they would come to our rescue. I still don't know how they did it, but they moved the concrete by wheelbarrow, and terraced the yard.

My love for the house turned to boredom that first winter. There was room for everything, and everything was in its place, and there was nothing for me to do. I did some sewing and knitting, and we had company over, and a couple of parties for the kids, and I had too much time to sit around. That's when I began to write.

The beginning of our second year in that house was also the beginning of our eldest daughter's last year of high-school. My forty-fifth birthday was coming up. I was told by lots of people that I had to prepare myself to say good-bye to my first baby. "Once they go away to college," they said, "they never come home to stay again." I thought of making her room into a shrine, but I knew she'd leave too much junk behind for a good shrine. This was the child who had every letter that had ever been written to her, every report card she'd ever received, every stuffed animal she'd ever acquired, and, because she'd always gone by the nickname of "Tiger"--every sort of "Tiger" memorabilia that had ever been invented. I began to feel old, and lonely, and as if I soon would be put out to pasture. I decided that what I really needed was to have a party, and I did.

It was at that party that one of the guests began to tell my husband about their recent move. This couple had taken the plunge and sold the family home and moved

by Mandy Mitts

Dear Mandy,
Our son was married two years ago, while he and his wife were in college in another state. They did not have a wedding or reception at the time, though we wrote notes to friends and relatives and said they were married. Now they have both graduated, and are coming here to live, and work. We would like to have a wedding reception for them now. Would that be proper? proper?

Nora & Al

Dear Nora & Al,

A party to introduce the couple to your friends who have not met them, old friends who wish to welcome them home, and relatives, would be fine now. Don't call it a wedding reception though or there are those who will think you are requesting wedding gifts. This is not proper, though some who wish to give them gifts will do so no matter what you call it.

Mandy

Dear Mandy,

I work in the office of a professional man. His wife keeps sticking her nose into the office business, and she really drives me bananas! The other day she came and complained because the plants looked dry, and the waste-basket hadn't been emptied, and then she complained about the strength of the coffee in the lounge down the hall, and suggested that I begin making it. I'm ready to tell the boss to keep her out of the office or I'll quit. What's the best way to do it?

Top Sec.

Dear Top Sec.

There is no way to handle this problem and keep your job. If your boss does not mind his wife issuing orders in his office, you'll have to put up with it, or resign.

Mandy

Dear Mandy,

My daughter had a picture taken for her father's birthday present. When she got the proofs back, she didn't like any of them. The photographer had said she could have her deposit back if she didn't like the pictures, but now he says that she has to order some, though he will retake them. We don't want her to go back to him. What should we do?

D.M.

Dear D.M.

Have you got the photographer's offer to refund the money in writing? Does the photographer have a signed agreement to purchase pictures from you? If there is no written agreement from either of you, a lawyer might be of help. Your decision should be based on the money involved. How much has your daughter deposited? What size of an order must she place? It might be best to let the photographer try again. You may like the new pictures well enough to order, and the matter will be solved.

Mandy

Dear Mandy,

I've never had a weight problem, but now that my youngest child is in school, I find that my weight is creeping up. I'm not really over-weight yet, but I'm beginning to panic. Don't tell me to get out of the house, because I enjoy the peace and quiet and I have no interest in clubs, etc. Any ideas besides wiring my jaw?

Gaining

Dear Gaining,

Any event, such as seeing the last child "leave the nest" is apt to be a traumatic experience--and eating frequently relieves some of the tension that is created. There are other ways to relieve that tension, with better results than weight gain. A few of them are learning a new skill, such as painting, sewing, or playing a musical instrument. Setting up a reading program is another way of making your time alone both pleasurable and rewarding.

Good luck!
Mandy

Congressman Broomfield Reports From Washington

By proposing a reduction in the capital gains tax rate, the House of Representatives took a needed step to bolster productivity, increase jobs, and strengthen the economy, said Congressman William S. Broomfield (R-19th. Dist.).

"The health of our economy and its future growth is intrinsically tied to the availability of money for investment purposes. Without this investment capital, companies cannot expand, and new companies with new ideas and new products cannot get started.

"For the consumer, this means that products become more expensive since plants cannot modernize and new products cannot get into the marketplace. For the worker, this translates into fewer jobs and higher unemployment rates because economic growth cannot keep up with our expanding work force.

"Yet, until the recent House-passed bill reducing the capital gains tax rate, investors had to pay a larger and larger share of their profits from investments to the government. The capital gains tax was sapping the incentive for investors to put their money into new ventures," Broomfield said.

Capital gains are the profits realized from investments in stocks, real estate, and other capital assets held for at least a year. Under current law, the maximum tax rate for capital gains is slightly over 49 percent.

Under the House-passed bill, the maximum tax rate for capital gains would be 35 percent. Along with the reduction, however, there is also a new 10-percent minimum tax provision on a certain portion of capital gains to assure that everyone will be paying some tax.

Besides the reduction in the tax rate, a significant provision in the tax bill would index the gains to increases in the Consumer Price Index beginning in 1980. Thus, artificial gains caused purely by inflation would be excluded from taxes.

The problem in inflation has inhibited investments because investors have often found that, while they pay an enormous tax on an inflated capital gain, they actually had no profit or even lost money in terms of constant dollars. The indexing of capital gains will serve as an added inducement for people to invest their money, Broomfield explained.

"These proposed changes in the capital gains tax rate are the first incentive to capital investment since the creation of the investment tax credit some fifteen years ago. The overall effect will be to strengthen our economic growth--something in which we all have a vital stake. I hope the Senate and the President will agree with the House on the importance of these changes in our tax law," Broomfield said.

Davisburg Youngsters Attend Gymnastic Camp

Nancy Hanes, Physical Education instructor at the Davisburg Elementary School once again accompanied a group of students to the Wolverine Gymnastics camp in Wolverine, Michigan. The camp extended from August 27 through August 30.

The boys ranging in grade levels four through nine attended the camp to further develop their skills in ground tumbling, vaulting, aprallel bars, high bars, the trampoline and side horse. Other fun activities that the students enjoyed were fishing, hiking, horseback riding, and swimming.

The boys attending the camp were: Lenny Alvarez, Jeff Farrell, Tim Gardella, Jeff Houston, Mike Howard, David Laatsch, David Rabaja, Matt Sennett, Craig Smith, Kurt Stack, and Scott Sutherland. This was the third year in attendance for three of the boys.

Roger Bechtol from Truman High School in Taylor was Camp Director. His team is number one in the State.

Miss Hanes not only accompanied the group of boys, but acted as a couch at the camp. Her role as couch allows for reduced tuition for the boys attending.

Earlier this summer from July 31 through August 5, six girls attended a like session at Camp Wolverines. They are: Brenda Alvarez, Jennifer Campanoni, Julie Sennett, Tammy Taylor, Denise Wollen and Melissa Wollen.

This activity was started as an outgrowth of the intramural tumbling program at the Davisburg Elementary School.

Neighborhood Children Guests at Kozlowic Picnic

A picnic was held on Saturday, September 2 at the home of Mrs. Joann Kozlowic for the children residing in her neighborhood.

Hamburgers and hot dogs were served, and some parents donated food and beverages to the picnic. Games, such as a sack race and balloon toss, were also held, beginning at about 1:00 p.m.

Approximately 30 children attended the picnic, which was held on Labor Day weekend because the holiday provided free time for everyone. Also, it was just before school began, and gave the kids an opportunity to have one last "fling" this summer.

Cebalt Completes Air Force Basic Training

Airman Steven K. Cebalt, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Cebalt of 13479 Neal Road, Davisburg, has been assigned to Lowry AFB, Colo., after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland AFB, Tex., the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations. Completion of this training earned the individual credits towards an associate in applied science degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Airman Cebalt will now receive specialized training in the supply field.

He is a 1978 graduate of Holly High School.

Know-It-All Grow-It-All

by Bonnie Hale

Maranta, or as they are more commonly known, prayer plants, derive their name from the way the leaves open and fold according to the light. In the light the leaves are held horizontally. The leaves fold up in a vertical position, as if in prayer, when it is dark.

The prayer plant is a very interesting plant when grown on a table under a lamp. When the light is turned on after dark, the "sleeping" leaves awaken and spread to their horizontal position in a matter of a few minutes. After the light is switched off, the leaves then become vertical.

Maranta leuconeura kerchoviana, also known as red-spotted arrowroot or as rabbit track, has grayish green oval leaves with two rows of reddish brown spots resembling animal tracks which run parallel to the central ribs. When the plant matures, the track become dark green.

Maranta leuconeura massangeana, Massange's or Leige arrowroot, is noted for the fishbone pattern of their veins that are red and yellow. The undersides of their leaves are purple.

If the humidity is too low, the foliage dries and withers, usually in the fall. Should this happen, cut the dry leaves off and water every two weeks very sparingly. Usually about March or April the plant will start to make new leaves. Gradually increase the amount and frequency of waterings.

Prayer plants do best in bright indirect light or curtain-filtered sunlight. Grown under artificial light, at least 400 foot candles a day are needed for twelve hours a day. The soil should be kept moist at all times except during the winter months when it should be allowed to dry slightly between thorough waterings. A 5-10-5 fertilizer can be applied monthly from March thru October.

When the plant becomes too large it can be transplanted to a larger pot. In the early spring the plants can be propagated by dividing the plant and roots.

King's Cove—a condominium complex that looks like large colonial homes. We were impressed by the bridge over the stream, and the woods that surrounded the entrance to the area—even in February. We drove around, and decided that when our middle daughter left for school three years hence, we would move into a condominium too. Just for fun, though, we stopped at the model office to talk to the salesman.

"If you think you might eventually move in here," he said, "you should do it now." He explained that a few units in that "phase" were to be three bedroom units, but that future ones would most likely be two bedroom units. He pointed out one unit that was under construction and we went to look at it. It had a large living room a large dining room, a good sized kitchen and breakfast area, and three bedrooms and two and a half baths. It also had a full basement, which the salesman informed us, was being turned into a fourth bedroom and bath for families with a college student.

The unit we looked at had a huge oak tree outside the bay window of the living room. We'd never had a big tree like that. The unit backed up to the stream, railroad tracks, and wooded flood control land. Nobody would ever build behind it and ruin the view. We oohed and aahed, and realized that it would belong to someone else if we waited three years. We went home and thought it over, and put a deposit down on it the next day.

The ultimate in steam cleaning is only a phone call away!

Note this bottom-side view of the Rug Doctor Vibra Brush method carpet cleaner in action.

- Hot water and cleaning solution jets into the carpet.
- Vibra Brush (like electric tooth brush) agitates carpet back and forth 3,400 times each minute. This breaks soil loose and polishes each carpet fiber to a clean, brilliant finish. This type of brush does not distort pile.
- Powerful suction extracts hot water and loosened soil back up to waste tank.

We are the only cleaner in the area that has the VIBRA-VAC METHOD
