Gladys Anthonyand Lloyd Sibley Wed in Pontiac

Lovely ceremony took place last Sat.

Miss Gladys L. Anthony, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl P. Anthony, of 194 Mt. Clemens Street, Pontiac, was united in marriage to Lloyd M. Sibley, at a lovely afternoon ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Saturday; January 80. . The Nuptial vows were spoken under a floral arch in one corner of the living room of the Anthony home, where an improvised altar stood. The arch was before a bank of ferns and flowers and candelabra lighted either side of the altar. A white bell hung from the center of the arch, under which the bridal pair stood,

The bridal procession was led by little Miss Maxine Bennett, threeyear old cousin of the bride, who daintly distributed pink rose petals in the path of the bride as she entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The bride was gowned in a modish gown of blue lace over satin. Her fowers were a bridal shower bouquet of white roses. Mrs. Adolph Gussie, sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor and was gowned in pink satin. She carried a bouquet of pink joses. Mr. Hiram Sibley, of Pontiac, served his brother as best man.

s best man. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Stephen C. Lloyd, of Lansing, before a group of relatives and intimate friends. The group, included people from Holly, Clarkston, Saginaw, Pon-tiac, Flint and Marlette. The couple left without revealing their plans for a trip. They will reside in the Sibley home at 129 N. Main Street, Clarkston

Turner got sick in the jungle, We stole his map because he wouldn't give it up, and left him dying because he was dying and helpless. Clayton had some idea of trying to get help to him when we wouldn't and couldn't earry him out. We wouldn't, because it was no nse. The map wasn't any dse, either: We were in luck to get out alive, and we weren't much allve. The trouble was Turner didn't die, and he did get. out. Well, the boys have been paying Turner got out. That was a break for him. Let's turn around now and look at Mr. Blair. Maisle, about how long did you find Mr. Blair a dependable. citizen?",

"Please don't, Howard," the woman sald:

'Excuse me, Maisie. - Sorry, but you'll not mind if I say it was about a month. No reflection on you. It's just Acton. Where is the old devil sitting? Oh, there he is, see, over there. Never mind looking at Acton. We've seen him before. Give his lady a look. Beauty? You don't know the half of it, I do. I introduced Mr. Blair to that lady. When less than a month from now Acton tells that lady he thinks he'll be on his-way, he will be but he won't know where. Nemesis, Maisie. Acton is on his way to the coroner. - There you are, Lieutenant, murder as plain as day. Poor Acton. no chance. Do you want to take me in charge? Mr. Blair hasn't a chance. He hasn't half the chance. of Clayton in the Dutch Mill, of Brown against the hunting knife, of Trembly with the red lights out, or of Roberts with the open window. What he's up against is temperament, his own and the lady's. I know the lady, and he doesn't. The sucker never gets an even break. And why should he? Maybe you^{think} you ought to warn him. Why not? You're a policeman. Here's a crime shaping up under your nose. He'd laugh at you? I don't know what the lady would do, but I think that just at this moment she'd laugh at you. I think they'd have you sit down and amuse them. She might swear at you in three or four languages. She is adept. Funny thing! The first time I saw that lady she still had the knife in her hand. don't want to elaborate, but it was red. There was a drop which was slowly growing big enough at the point to fall. Fascinating sort, of thing to watch. The gentleman in error was on the floor. That was in Sumatra. The verdict in effect was that the gentleman was not only a d-n scoundrel but a d-n fool. Coming back from Hawaii who was on the boat but this tiger-liky. They're going to dance. Watch them.

"Do, you know the lady?" Stanton asked Maisie. "I never saw her. I've never heard of her.' "Is Ashley kidding us?" the lieutenant asked.

'How should I know? Do you mean did Howard see her with the knife and a drop forming on it? Maybe." "There's your exhibit, Lieutenant," sald Ashley, turning half around. "You're a remarkable detective, don't you know. You're the only one who ever started with the solution of a

"Nevertheless il am curious, albeit 1 am also convinced; but here is another thought. I have seen nothing of this in the news. I read the papers with the fidelity of an old-man wh keeps contact with the world by reing. It seems odd that Blair and Asl ley could kill, each other or be killed without a paragraph of news escaping to this country. I doubt that they have been inconspicuous with their considerable income and their flashy temperaments.

"Even if our intriguing little story of vengeance is not known abroad I'd think the murder of two Americans of wealth would have produced e-line or two on this side, Possibly it was printed and I overlooked it. Possibly you could have some channel of information strictly and wonderfully secret. You see how I am impressed by the potency of the police. That impression is derived from admiration of you. Justify me by letting me know if you have any information as to this liquidation of my old friend Tom Turner's passion for getting even, and believe me your servant to command and your friend,

"Most cordially, "Asa Darling."

The news was not astonishing to Stanton, but it was news. He found he was sorry that Ashley had not survived, an odd regret, but one which the fate of the cheerful assassin somehow could evoke. The lieutenant telegraphed Mr. Darling that he had no information, and his inquiries at headquarters found that none had been given the Chicago department by the French police.

The next morning April 18, he read in the Tribune a short story from Paris, which gave the outlines of the event. The relation of Blair and Ashley to the Turner will had been forgotten or was unknown, and the police intelligence as to the deaths of the two Americans was delayed in reaching the news distributing centers.

Stanton read that an American named Blair, had shot a fellow countryman named Ashley in a quarrel over a woman who had shot and killed the murderer. The woman was thought to be an Eurasian. She was hysterical, almost maniacal, in the custody of the police.

An odd reversal of all expectations, Stanton thought-Ashley killed by Blair, Blair killed by the woman. The Turner will had been administered. The outraged gold-hunter had accomplished his full purpose. He could rest easy. The men who had injured him had been extinguished by his purpose arising out of his grave. He had had fun.

FEBRUARY 5; 1932 anyone could see that Blair was out of form. They will all fall once. Acton had his experience coming and long overdue. This girl was something he for once seemed to want to keep? She looked like a reptile to me, and I think Howard was truthful when he said she was polson to him but she was beautiful. That doesn't quite seem the word And wouldn't he lovely. It had to be comething polsonous, and she did not try much to disguise it. Probably that is why Blair was infatuated. He may have fallen really in love; with the little brute because she was vile and dangerous

"I do not know whether she really was attracted to Howard or just wanted to make trouble. Maybe he was the type of man who could fascinate her, just as Acton was the type of man who could be fascinated by her.

"If he'd been interested in the girl Malsi would have pulled her own freight, but I was sure he wasn't and I am sure now. It was just his wild contrariness. The night it happened, which, come to think of it, was hight efore last, we were at dinner seprately, that is Howard and I, and hair and the polson. Blair left her ward to come to her table. He did and as he was talking to her he did nol tea Blair behind him. Blair shot him the got up, went to Blair's side, took in gun from him as if she thought of hiding it and shot him. He fell on top of Howard and there you were. Then she began to shriek. That seems to be the end of the Turner will as a police case. There's a boy, isn't there, who inherits? It was wicked to keep him from his father's money, but then it was the father who did, and he knew what he wanted. I suppose the police will make it more or less uncomfortable for me for a while, but when I am permitted to I am returning. I have some money. Ashley was generous to me, but he was extravagant in everything he did and there never was much to lay aside. I'm retiring to scratch up a respectable living. As a careerist I'm quite plainly through, but a fellow continues to live. When I can I'll see you if you have an interest for more details. The police here will think funny I'm writing to a lieutenant of Chicago police and when you take another look at it, isn't it funny? Adlos, Maisie."

The lady was right as to the French police. Commissioner Russell had a cablegram of, inquiry which Stanton answered by letter giving an outline of the Turner will crimes and making plain Maisle's lack of complicity. That, he thought, might help her.

Another letter brought young Mr. Turner back to mind, being from him. He inquired if any of the men involved in his father's will had dependents who might be suffering from what had been caused by it. He wrote:

"You know I would not have interfered, if I could, to prevent my father and these men having it out to his satisfaction, but as to other people, that is an entirely different matter. We are to have so much money that it will be almost disturbing, and I know that if my father thought that in having it out with these men he. had hurt a canary bird or kitten belonging to one of them he would have been hurt himself. So let me know, Lieutenant, if you know of any canaries. We think we'll add anothe half-acre to the garden and maybe buy a Vermont farm. Drop in on us some time. Mr. Darling sends you his regards and expresses his hope to see you again." Stanton sent the young man the name and story of Maisie and had in return a telegram reading, "Good Get me her address.". Later in the year, in July, the lleutenant was back In the East, on leave from the Chicago department and on a duty which contained more personal distress than he had experienced in any other police case. Young Turner had implored him to come. Mr. Darling and his servant Pompey had been found dead in the Newburgh home. It was the opinion of Mr. Darling's physician that his patient had died of a heart attack as he sat in his chair. Pompey had fallen in the hall, his head resting on a chair. An injury at the base of his skall could indicate a blow. It could also be explained as n consequence of his fall. It seemed fairly incredible that Mr. Darling and his servant had died hand in hand, as it wore, of natural causes, but it would have been accepted as the fact/if it had not been found beyond question that the house had been entered. On Mr. Darling's table—and this was the wholly inexplicable thing—was a hunt-ing knife which opened a binde at each end, four-Inch blades in a silvermounted teakwood handle with a silwords: "Espanal a single with a single spield inset, and entred in ex-guisite and minute lettering with the words: "Espanal a sangre, a carne, a feugo a succor the cry of the Spanish troops in the Fury of Abt-worp. For whatever might be the im-plications of its heing on the table of Mr. Durling's room with he and Pom-pey were round dend, it was the knife on which Preston Brown had been Idlied in the hunting lodge of Little Buttes des Mortes in northern Wis-consin on the banks of Lac Vieux Des-ert at the rise of the Wisconsin river. The Turner Will Is Administered "It might interest you," was about the last thing Ashley said to Stanton, "to know that I'm going to take care of Maisle. That girl has always fixed her clock so she never had even a good chance at a breach-of-promise suit, and of course she's never been within miles of allmony or a dowry. Slie's been a fine girl, but prudence hasn't been her partner, and she won't have much she can take to the bank. So Maisle and I will regard ourselves as the surviving veterans of this war: What would you think of us settled down in an Italian garden by an Italian lake, with poplars and cypress? An Italian moon and Malsio playing. Chopin. Home from the wars April 17 the Beutenant had a letter trom-Mr. Darling. After greetings, he wrote:

But the thing has become so comic that I must tell you about it. I am your boy friend who didn't have any idea how deep the water was. Acton has broken all precedents. He remains infatuated. His gal has had a million names. Let's call her now Marcella. Laugh this off. Acton is faithful, and she is trifling with me. Maisie urges me to get away. I can't. The girl is polson to me, but the plot interests me. The whole thing is going against law, order and predestination. How can anyone live in so crazy a world? You're a nice copper. want you to get this. Nover trust logic or experience or even probability or plausibility. Good crimes always deny everything. But then you know that. You're a good copper or I wouldn't be writing you. Watch your step. What do you think of me as the victim of Marcella's affection? Muiste says go away. So it may be But not just now. Good old Blair is just a fathead. Once a fathead al-ways a fathead. He hasn't got a chance. He's a nice old brute, but he'll do for himself somer way, even if it isn't going, just as I expected it to be and as it should have been, and I can't tear myself away until it happens. You know the world's blg enough only for one of us."? In the following mail a letter came from Maisle herself. She explained that Ashley had written the day he was killed and had laid the letter aside intending to address an envelope later.

Ashley had been genuinely kindly, she said. It was hard to say whether he was the most twisted or the least twisted of the oblique characters involved in the will. On one occusion you-took one view, on another occasion another view. But whatever else he might be he had a vein of kindliness.' She continued :

Jeff Hubbell has had a great many lucks killed very recently by dogs They number 14 to date. The other case is that thieves have taken over 40 gallons of high test gasoline from the North End Filling Station owned by John . Visgatis.

Mr. Hubbell has seen the dogs rush into his yard, grab a duck and run. The ducks have been killed and torn to pieces. It is not known who the owners of these destructive dogs are, but unless they are kept on their own property, or at least off of other's property where damage might occur it looks as if the village might be minus a dog or two.) These dogs have no right to be loose if they are destructive. Other duck owners have also been losing ducks in this manner

The gasoline taken from the Nor End Station has disappeared myste iously but the management now ha a guard stationed in hiding to catch the culprits should they return for more gas. The thefts have evidently occurred-at night and very cleverly as the tanks remain locked.

These warnings come in time to keep anyone guilty of offense out of trouble.
