Appeal is Made for Clothing and Food

Everyone Can Aid in this Manner

Almost every member of the township can find some old piece of clothing, blankets, shoes, rubbers, or what have you that is of no use to him but that might be of some value, comfort and shelter to some one not so

At this time an appeal comes from a group of local organizations that tablished in Clarkston. are cooperating in the matter. The Literary Club, the Amercian Legion, the Legion Auxiliary, the Order of Independence Star, the Township Board, and the Student Council of the Clarkston High School, have formed a welfare organization and campaign with representatives from each group working on the committee with the sole objective to secure enough clothing and food for those who are in need of it.

The Student Council and the American Legion are cooperating on the matter of food stuffs. The groups will place barrels in the stores in Clarkston and in the school and all donations placed in those barrels will be carefully distributed by investigating committees from those organizations. The entire committee is working on a plan to clothe any in need of it in

It was in the little town of Elk Rapids, about eighteen miles north of Traverse City, on beautiful Grand Traverse Bay that Mr. Ban-ninger first saw the light of day. With the exception of a few years, his entire life has been spent in this state.

Since the days of Benjamin Franklin no bit of literature has visited so many suburban and rural homes as the weekly or home newspaper. For generations it was regarded by its avid readers as the symposium of all the worthwhile news, and its editor-ial page expressed views on current topics that were generally accepted as crystallized public opinion.

The home newspaper performs a high mission. Without a newspaper your community cannot progress and would remain stagnant-if not die in time. The ambition of your publisher is to try to give readers the best paper possible, but this cannot be done without cooperation and team work. Former Governor Fisher of Pennsylvania says, "The Weekly Newspaper does more to mould the sentiment of the Nation than any Advertisements are a record of progress. They are interesting and instructive news of the business. They light the way to better buying, and help to spend your money wisely. In closing, we express the hope that we may shortly meet all our readers face to face. In the mean time we extend a cordial invitation to all who may wish to make our acquaintanceship. We ask the patience of our readers during this crucial period of reorganization.

Toys Always

No youngster will feel that Santa Claus has come unless there is a toy or two in his stocking. Walk down Saginaw street with any of them, and you'll see the possibilities of joy in the toy assortments the windows hold. Tea parties are so much fun, especially when dishes with story book pictures can be used. Plenty of snow means that skates, sleds and toboggan will be in demand. And on the stormy days when weather forbids enjoying winter sports, trains, building blocks, paint books, and games will be welcomed as heartily by mother and by the children.

A Gift for Dad

Mother and Dad are apt to be practical minded this year and a nice order book for groceries and meat will undoubtedly be welcome. Perhaps Dad needs some new tires or a new battery for the car.

Joseph Himmelspach, Farmington. The address of the evening was given by Mr. Houston, who spoke on "The Boys of Today—The Men of Tomorrow." Stating that 4,000,000 boys are pledged to the principles of Scouting, he said that the purpose of the Boy Scout program is "to make real men out of real boys." "There is no possible standard by which we can calculate the contribution which Scouting has made to the nation," he said. "Its e hibit is 4,000,000 boys who have come under its influence and its test of service lies in the strength of their character and the contribution which they are individually making to the welfare of their country and to their fellow men.".

Mr. Houston told of the new 10 year program of the Bov Scouts which has for its aim to enroll one out of every four boys in Scouting.

"This is not only the program for the Boy Scouts. It is a program of citizenship, a program of and it may be a program of civilization if we can endow America with one out of every four new male citizens a four-year Scout trained man. "There is a need for citizenship which understands the functions of government and which supports a government that fulfills its functions, a citizenship which is intelligent, just and tolerant. It is this type of citizenship which the Boy Scouts of America fosters and encourages. Its product—the young manhood of today and tomorrow—is the contribution to the nation which it serves."

Extension Group

The Clarkston Station Extension Club met at the home of Mrs. Henry Wells on Thursday, December first, with seventeen present. The lesson consisted of a discussion on the correct use of dress accessories and the making of purses and scarfs. A cooperative dinner was enjoyed at noon and three new games were played in the afternoon. The club completed 12 garments for the Red Cross this month. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. George Smith. The date will be announced later.

When Conductor Watt Davidson spied two women's purses in his train at Grand Rapids in a seat just vacated at Tustin, a half mile back, he pulled the whistle cord, consulted with the engineer, watches in hand, and they backed the train to Tustin. The women were just about to leave the station when back came the Pennsylvania train and their purses.

Oxbots Are Awake In Winter Months

Michigan farmers who want to keep in condition for their annual summer battle with insects are advised to turn their attention to the oxbot which the entomology department at Michigan State College says can be eradicated by organized community effort during the winter and spring months.

This pest, which is also known as warbles and as grub-in-the-back, is the larvae of an insect which lays its eggs on cattle during the summer. The larvae hatch, are transferred in to the animals mouth when it licks itself, and then travel through the tissues till they find a resting place just under the skin on the animal's

A hole is made through the skin of an animal and the oxbot larvae rests until ti is ready to transform to an adult. If permitted, the larvae passes through the opening in the skin, pupates in the ground, and then changes to an adult fly ready to com mit further damage.

Damage to hides, meat, and condition of the cattle attacked cause losses of many thousands of dollars an nually. The larvae can be killed by the application of a compound called Gusanol. This material kills the insect but does not injure animals in any way. County agricultural agents are familiar with the method of treatment.

Dates Are Chosen For Farmers Week

Dates for the annual gathering of the agricultural clans of Michigan have been set for Jan. 30 to Feb. 3 when farmers' organizations from all parts of the State will meet at Farmers Week at Michigan State College.

Farmers Week had its origin in the years when farmers' institutes were held in most of the counties of the State. Several speakers on agricultural subjects were sent from the College to meet groups of farmers who lived near enough to the meeting place so they could steer a horse and cutter through the snow drifts and still have time enough at the meeting to thaw out before it was chore time

The institutes became so popular and the demand for speakers so numerous that often it was impossible to send a member of the College staff who had technical training in the line of farm work of most interest to the audience. Crops men talked in fruit growing sections, livestock specialists discussed better pigs before groups of dairymen, and dairy husbandry professors told how to produce milk when the audience wanted to know the correct sprays for potatoes.

Insufficient funds at the College made it impossible to secure enough speakers for the numerous meetings so Farmers Week was created to meet the demands for information in all types of farm activities. Thirty organized groups now have special programs at the College during the Week. General meetings provide en-tertainment, shows being in the best products of the farms, and contests permit visitors to put their abilities against each other.

Changes Proposed --- New Chevrolet on --Display Saturday

Chevrolet's new 1933 models will go on public display, Saturday, December 17, it is appounced by company officials. Plans call for simultaneous showing at all of the company's more than 10,000 dealer. showrooms in the United States. One of the new cars will be in Leo Hatherly's show room that day.

For the building up of parts banks Chevrolet manufacturing operations have been under way since October, with full quotas of men now back at work in the foundry and manufacturing plants. First public display of the new cars will add the 36,000 members of the sales organization to those other thousands already employed on the new line.

Dealer orders for the first consignment of 50,000 display cars have already been placed, and many retail orders have been reported placed with dealers in all parts of the country, according to H. J. Klingler, vicepresident and general sales manager. He stated, however, that it was still too early to attempt an estimate of total retail orders now on hand, inasmuch as his company's policy has been to receive field reports only at ten day intervals, and those reports cover only actual deliveries of cars to consumers. He said, however, that a poll of pre-announcement buying is now being taken to determine the volume of orders from retail purchasers, already on hand.

A large number of dealers have already pre-viewed the new line at the General Motors proving ground at Milford, groups from different parts of the country having been here for a regular all-day presentation program presided over by Mr. Klingler daily for the past ten days. Remaining dealers will pre-view the cars shortly at scheduled meetings held at zone headquarters in key cities throughout the country.

Interest engendered among the dealers by the new Fisher draft" ventilation, the increased wheelbase and other new features is resulting in what appears to be the largest accumulation of pre-announcement orders yet experienced by his company, Mr. Klingler stated.

"Honorary Coal Passers"

According to the Navy Recruiting Station, Detroit, there hangs in the reception room of the battleship New York two coal shovels that have a brass plate attached which announces that King George of England and King Albert of Belgium had used these shovels to fire the boilers of this ship, on occasion of their visit to the New York when this vessel attached to the British Grand Fleet during the World War. It is said that "Honorary Coal they were made Passers."

This paragraph is taken from an article by Clarence G. Strub, professor of embalming and plastic surgery, on "The Theory and Practice of Embalming" in the October issue of the National Funeral Director. Professor Strub has included in his resume of early embalming practices, a very interesting story of the Egypt ian burials.

Embalming, as generally under stood now, is comparatively new None of the processes of disinfection and arterial injection were known prior to the discovery of blood circulation by Harvey in 1680 and the first isolation of microscopic organ isms by Van Leeuwenhoek in 1683. The Egyptians followed a process that required over two months to complete, using a hundred pounds or more of spices and drugs.

In his article, Professor Strub gives a graphic description of the rites followed for a wealthy burial: "After death had taken place, the body of the deceased was brought to the embalmers by the friends and relatives. To these persons were displayed various models of completed mummies varying greatly in materials, workmanship and cost. The favorite model was that of the god Osiris, which was reserved for those who had led worthy lives and also, undoubtedly, those who had led sufficiently productive lives to be able to

The Perils of an Incisor

"In the second operation, a mark of the length allowed by law was made on the left side of the abdomen by one called the Scribe. A second, called the Paraschistes, or dissector then made the incision along this line with a flint knife, or Ethiopian stone, and immediately ran away amid a shower of stone from the friends and relatives of the deceased. Although this attack was probably more or less of a religious formality, we are told that in many cases torture or even death at the hands of the friends was the lot of the unfortunate em-Balmer who made the incision, so great was their respect for the dead.

"All thoracic and abdominal viscera, with the possible exception of the heart, were removed through this single incision and thoroughly washed in wines and spices. After bathing the cavity with the same materials, they returned the organs, anointed them with oils, spices and gums and closed the incision.

"The body was now submerged in a potassium nitrate solution for from 70 to 90 days, after which it was thoroughly dried and completely wrapped in linen bandages.

"The mummy case consisted many layers of cloth fastened gether with glue and fitted to the form of the body while still damp and pliable. Ornaments of gold, beads and paintings depending in quality and quantity upon the wealth of the person, were applied to this layer and the whole incased in a sarcophagus of wood or stone.
