Waterford Meets Airport Sunday

In the final game of the series, in which the championship of the Oakland County Baseball League will be decided, both the Airport and Waterford will have won one game.

In the final game, Sunday, Waterford should and probably will quiet down and play their usual good game—the kind that placed them in the finals. The game will be played at Waterford at 3:00.

STATE MATTERS OF INTEREST TO ALL

Digest Prepared in Office of the Secretary of State

The financial responsibility law which becomes effective Oct. 17, is intended to protect persons and property from the acts of irresponsible persons on the highways. From scores of letters sent to the Department of State, it is evident that many motorists believe the new statute makes automobile insurance compulsory.
 The law proposes to keep off the highways reckless drivers, who are involved in accidents or who fail to observe highway laws, and may not affect the vast majority of Michigan automobile drivers. Similar laws are now in effect in 20 states and several provinces of Canada.
 After conviction of a major violation of motor vehicle laws or after failing to satisfy a judgment of $300 or more growing out of a traffic accident, the motorist's license and all registration certificates of the automobile are suspended. In order to reinstate the license, the motorist must settle the judgment in the manner specified in the law and also must furnish the Secretary of State with proof of his financial responsibility to meet the costs of any future highway accidents.
 This can be done in three ways. The motorist may deposit $11,000 with the state. He may file a surety bond or a real estate bond with two sureties providing for a maximum of $10,000 for personal injuries or death and a maximum of $1,000 for property damage; or the motorist may file a certificate showing that he carries motor vehicle liability insurance for the necessary amounts.
 The sub-committee of the Legislative Council studying highway finance laws, recommended last week that no changes in the method of financing highway construction and maintenance be made by the forth-coming special session of the legislature. The sub-committee declared that this work should be left to the 1935 session of the legislature.
 The legislature may be called into special session within a few weeks if the federal government finds some plan of financing the state's institutional building program. Michigan embarked on an extensive program in 1929; reduced appropriations drastically in 1931 and then halted the program completely this year. Legislative action is necessary to alter the state law regarding state indebtedness.

at school?" will help the mother to see that the self-help tasks and duties are done the same way in the home as at school.
 Regular hours at home should include a definite time to get up, on Saturdays and Sundays, as well as during the school week. This time should be early enough to give the child ample time to dress, eat, and leave for school in a leisurely manner. Hasty should be avoided so that they will not be started with a sense of strain.
 Hours of free, undirected play should be arranged outside of the school period, and if the child is nervous and excitable, sufficient rest periods planned. It is well to have the child spend a few minutes lying flat on his back on the floor just before luncheon and supper.
 A definite program in the process of going to bed is especially necessary. A period of "getting ready for tomorrow" is advisable just before bedtime. During the time the child bathes, arrange his clothing to be worn the next day, to lighten the burden of getting ready in the morning. If the child is permitted to check the buttons on his clothes, select clean hose, and other things to be worn, it will give him a sense of responsibility, and will help him to realize a connection between his home and school life.

Hunters, Attention!

The 1933-34 digest of Michigan hunting laws, now being issued by the Department of Conservation with all hunting licenses, gives sportsmen an additional service through a list of all conservation officers in the state and their addresses.
 The Digests list the officers' names, addresses, and the county over which they have jurisdiction.
 The list is expected to be of service, especially to hunters going into strange territory, since they are invited to use the local conservation officers to obtain conservation information.

THIS representation of what the world will offer the wheat farmer for his wheat shows clearly the relationship between supply and price. Since 1928, when the world supplies of wheat first became burdensome the price has been low for the most part. The pictures at the top of the chart show that when the supply is low, the world will pay a good price for wheat, but when supplies are too big, the world won't pay as much. As the supplies (shown by the black bars) have climbed, the price (represented by the shaded parts) has sunk lower. The wheat administration seeks to bring the wheat supply of the United States into line with demand by reducing acreage, and thus to make the price nearer parity; that is, the point at which the return from a bushel of wheat will buy as much as it did in the pre-war period, 1909-1914. The 1933 crop year is not far enough advanced to show definitely what prices will be.

BETTER PICTURES ARE NOW ASSURED

As Film Industry Comes Under the NRA Regulations

It is evident from the hearings on the motion-picture code now in progress that the public will get better and cleaner films in future, and the owners of small as well as large picture theaters throughout the country will no longer be subjected to such impositions as being required to rent three or more inferior pictures in order to obtain the promise of one "superfeature".

The producers, who have been merged under the code with distributors and all other elements in the industry, upon the insistence of NRA, agreed in advance to increase wages 14.6 percent and reduction of hours from an average of 60 per week to 40. Barring plagiarism is under consideration, together with many alleged unfair practices, such as lending of artists and writers, and definite steps have been taken to improve the condition and prospects, if any, of the 27,000 extras said to be in Hollywood, seldom more than 800 of whom receive any employment. This will be done by eliminating favoritism and members of the families or friends of executives or employees of the companies or persons who do not need the income for such service, whether competent or not. Will H. Hays voiced the pledge of the entire industry to maintain moral standards in production of films.

NRA Violations

Now that the National Recovery Program has entered into its second phase, namely, that of assuring compliance to the President's Reemployment Agreement, it is important that the general public be informed as to the correct procedure for reporting violations of the President's Reemployment Agreement. The task of securing compliance now rests with the local N. R. A. Compliance Boards which may have been, by this time, established in each locality. Inasmuch as such Boards are charged with the responsibility of securing compliance, all complaints of violations should be reported to them.

In the past many grievances have been addressed to the District Office of the U. S. Department of Commerce, Detroit, Michigan, and it is the purpose of this letter to inform you that all infractions of the President's Reemployment Agreement should be directed to local Compliance Boards.

Complaints against industries now operating under approved codes, of fair competition should be addressed to the code authority designated for that industry.

Authority of the local Compliance Board extends only to those organizations operating under the President's Reemployment Agreement.

HANDLE POTATOES WITH EXTRA CARE

If You Wish to Reduce Losses Caused by Short Crop

Income from potatoes on Michigan farms can be increased this year even with the unusually short crop if extra efforts are made to avoid the usual shrinkage caused from careless harvesting, handling, and storage, according to the farm crops department at Michigan State College.

One of the most common losses is incurred when potatoes are left in the ground until they are damaged by a severe freeze. Frozen potatoes rot in the field and in storage. Those tubers which are only chilled are discolored and have an objectionable flavor when cooked. October 15 is about the limit of safety for harvesting potatoes even in the southern tiers of counties.

The appearance of the potatoes has quite an effect upon their market price. Cool, clear days are best for harvesting if it is possible to choose the time. Soil sticks to the potatoes if they are dug on rainy days or if the ground is very wet. It is best to leave the potatoes on top of the ground for an hour or so after they are dug. They then dry enough so the dirt falls off and the skin of the tuber is a better color.

Running the plow of the potato digger too near the surface damages a lot of potatoes that could be readily sold. Potatoes injured by fork tines when dug by hand are ruined for the table, and often damage other potatoes in storage when the injured spuds rot.

Many potatoes are bruised because they are tossed too far into crates when they are picked up. Bruised potatoes rot readily in storage and are discolored even if they are used before they spoil. Hauling potatoes loose in wagons bruises many more tubers than would be injured if they were handled in crates.

Stored potatoes need air. Piles should not be so large that part of the tubers receive little ventilation. Doors and windows of storage cellars should be kept open whenever possible during the first few weeks potatoes are stored. Temperatures should run from 50 to 60 degrees in the storage period.

The area of Australia is 2,974,581 square miles.

Her letter reads: "I am 53 years old and my height is 5 ft. Last year I weighed 154 lbs. I have been taking a half-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts, making no change in my diet. Now I am less round the hips, and only weigh 147 lbs. dressed. But I feel lighter and can now run upstairs, which before used to make me gasp for breath. Everyone says how well and 'fit I look.'" Big Girl Show Is Coming Soon

The Greater Marcus Show of 1933 is announced for a single midnight performance only at the Oakland Theatre, Pontiac, Friday, September 29. In point of magnitude the attraction is outstanding. With a company of nearly seventy persons and a special train of two baggage cars and pullmans required to transport the outfit from stand to stand, the Marcus Show of 1933 is for sheer size among the largest that have ever appeared in Pontiac at either popular prices or higher scales.

"La Vie Paree" is the provocative title of the exhibition, which is described by an ecstatic space-grabber as "an untrammeled orgy of wanton pleasure such as might regale the blasse habites of Club Guinan."

On this occasion all flesh—no play on words intended—will prevail. For the full two hours and a half of the nocturnal goings-on the cinema will be shuttered. All seats will be reserved and placed on sale at the box office. Prices are 83c and $1.10 tax included; mail orders accompanied by remittance in full and self-addressed, stamped envelope will be filled in rotation. Believing that the tabasco seasoning of "La Vie Paree", while savory to the sophisticated, might prove too spicy for adolescents, the management warns that children of less than sixteen will not be permitted to attend.

STUDENTS MAN PRINCETON SWITCHBOARD IN EVENING

Telephone service at Princeton University is handled by girl telephone operators during the day, by students in the evening, and by the campus police after midnight.

There are 325 telephones on the campus, involving 290 miles of wire, and according to statistics recently compiled by University authorities, the daily average number of calls from the campus is more than a thousand.

Thirteen trunk lines lead to the University private branch exchange, in the east wing of Nassau Hall. Girl operators are on duty up to 6 o'clock in the evening, when the University switchboard is turned over to students, who alternate on the job until midnight.

By then most of the telephones are disconnected and the thirteen trunk lines are connected to such places as the infirmary or the police office, from which it may be necessary to make emergency calls. Anyone off the campus calling the University number after midnight gets the police office, where he learns the night number of whatever extension he wishes to call.
