Local Woman Wins Recipe Endorsement

Mrs. A. J. LaBoe, Clarkston, Michigan, has just been awarded a Certificate of Recipe Endorsement by Better Homes & Gardens for her recipe, "Italian Spaghetti."

This certificate, which brings national recognition to Mrs. LaBoe, is given by Better Homes & Gardens only to distinguished recipes which pass its testing kitchen's tests for dependability, excellence of taste, and family usefulness.

In addition to the signed certificate, Mrs. LaBoe also received six copies of her endorsed recipe, each bearing the Better Homes & Gardens stamp of recipe endorsement, which she can give to her friends.

In awarding these certificates, it is the magazine's aim to provide proper recognition for the creative work done by women in their own kitchens, and also to raise the standard of accuracy and dependability of recipes as a whole. No other magazine or institution gives this personal recognition and service to its subscribers.

Mrs. LaBoe's endorsed recipe follows:

- Italian Spaghetti
- 1 tablespoonful of Crisco
 - 1 green pepper
 - 1 large onion
 - 2 pounds of round steak, ground
 - 1 small can of tomato paste (about 1 cupful)
 - 2 1/2 teaspoonful of salt
 - Pepper to taste
 - 2 teaspoonful of sugar
 - 1 teaspoonful of A-1 Sauce
 - 1/2 cupful of Chili Sauce
 - Dash of Tabasco Sauce
 - 2 tablespoonful of olive oil
 - 3 drops of liquid garlic
 - 1 can of mushrooms (about 1 1/2 cupful)
 - 1 box of Spaghetti (about 8 ounces)

Cover and let simmer over a very slow fire for an hour. About ten minutes before serving open a can of mushrooms and add to the mixture.

COMMENT AND CRITICISM

360 more days till Christmas.

The end of the old, the start of the new year. Now is the time for the Democrats to remind you of how much they did for you in the last few months and the Republicans to shout that they had the job all finished but the finishing touches and anyone could have done that. The boys in office will tell you what great things they will do for you in the year to come and the boys out of office will explain how much more they could have done if they had had the job. Our guess is that we are going to hear something about politics this year.

Personally the memories of a Huge Christmas dinner, which my healthy appetite allowed me to enjoy to the greatest extent, prohibit much enthusiasm about another "big feed" on New Year's day, but these memories fade fast and I will probably be at the festive board, prepared for action, at the proper time.

May 1934 be a happy year, and all the little days, prosperous.

Chevrolet Dealer Inspects New 1934 Car

Business prospects, both local and national, are decidedly on the mend, in the opinion of Joseph S. Seeterlin, of Seeterlin Bros., Inc., local Chevrolet dealers, who has just returned from Detroit, where he and other dealers from this section "pre-viewed" the new 1934 Chevrolet, soon to be announced.

Joseph S. Seeterlin spent an entire day at the General Motors Proving Ground. There W. E. Holler, general sales manager of Chevrolet, presented the new line of cars, outlining plans and policies for the coming year, and gave every dealer present an opportunity not only to inspect each model but also to put it through its paces on the rugged hills, rough roads, and 4 1/2-mile speed track which the Proving Ground provides.

"With cars like these new Chevrolets to sell, I'm enthusiastic about business prospects for next year," said Mr. Seeterlin. "I went up there expecting a lot of course General Motors' 'knee-action' front wheels had already been announced, with the promise that they would revolutionize the experience of riding and driving.

"I found this literally true. They told us to 'give her the works', to put the car, at 50 and 60, over bumps and ruts we'd ordinarily take in second gear—or better yet, avoid altogether. The absence of jolts, jars or shocks is simply beyond description; it must be experienced to be believed. Yet 'knee-action' is only one of a dozen major features embodied in the new Chevrolet.

"Every dealer I talked to is anxiously awaiting the public announcement of the new cars. Everyone feels as certain as I do that they'll put a real, active stimulus behind local business—and when that sort of thing takes place all over the country, good times will really be on the way!"

"This day we sailed westward"

—From the log of Christopher Columbus

1933 draws to a close. 1934 lies before us. The United States having just celebrated the happiest Christmas in the last four years, is beginning to believe that miracles are still with us and is expecting much of the new year.

"This day we sailed westward," wrote Columbus, as at the end of each day he wrote the log of his course to America. This year we traveled far on the road to recovery. Contemporary opinion is that during the coming year we will travel still farther.

"This day we sailed westward," written in the face of lack of courage of his crew, written anew each day, even tho the new day had failed to sight the land that was to be reached by sailing westward in a course that no map of that time mentioned; written anew even tho he was confident that there was talk among the crew of killing him and returning to Spain; written anew until his task was completed.

As we close our ledger for 1933, we, the people of these United States, can honestly write: "This year we traveled far on the road to prosperity. We traveled in spite of doubt. We traveled in spite of fear. We traveled in spite of those who would wish us failure. We will travel until our task is completed."

With this determination in mind we can meet the new ideas, the new deal and the new year.

C. W. A. AID MAY BE GIVEN TO FARMERS

Survey Being Made to Give Help to Rural Homes

A survey of the rural homes of Oakland County is being made by the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, through the County Extension Office. The purpose of the survey is to secure accurate information as to the amount of modern improvements in the farm home, so that if any future Public Works program should be developed, as much consideration will be given to farm homes as city homes.

This project is being done as a Civil Works project, using unemployed professional women. Similar studies are being made on housing conditions in the towns and cities to gather information that is not available from the census and on which to base plans for possible future civil works or public works projects.

Twelve home economics specialists who have been put to work on this project will call upon the farm homes in our county within the next few weeks. We hope the farm families will cooperate in securing this information. The Extension Division at East Lansing, through your local Farm Bureau Office, is assisting in the survey.

For Homemakers

Home economics radio talks which were an interesting feature of afternoon programs of Michigan State College's broadcasting station, WKAR, last winter and spring, will be resumed Wednesday, January 3. The talks, presented by members of the teaching faculty and women connected with the extension department, will be given each afternoon except Saturday and Sunday, and will vary with the different phases of home economics. The series will open with an introductory talk by Mrs. Amy Newberg, outlining the general plan of subjects to be discussed in the succeeding programs. Problems encountered in planning low cost meals, foods to include in this type of menu, and suggestions for substitutions of less expensive materials for more costly ones while retaining the same food value will be presented in the first few talks. Hints will be given for planning low cost menus as well as suggestions for typical menus for the infant, the pre-school child, the adolescent, the adult, and for entire families, with emphasis placed on the needs of each member in the family. Study outlines based on the home economics programs will be sent on request to those who listen to WKAR, which broadcasts on a frequency of 1040 kilocycles or 288.3 meters.

Liberty Theatre HOLLY

Out of the squalor and tawdriness of a shantytown director Frank Borzage has woven a love story that is certainly the greatest achievement in a career that embraces many, many screen triumphs. The picture, "Man's Castle", already hailed as the "Seventh Heaven" of talking pictures, will be showing at the Liberty Theatre, Sunday and Monday.

"Man's Castle" is the story of a man who couldn't hear train whistles without wanting to hop a freight—and of a girl who loved him so strongly she told him he was free to go. Spencer Tracy as the boy and Loretta Young as the girl have never been cast in roles so perfectly suited to their individual talents. As for Borzage's direction, it suffices to say that he surpasses in poignancy, sincerity and beauty his direction of "Seventh Heaven".

The supporting cast is superb down to the smallest bit player. It includes Marjorie Rambeau, Glenda Farrell and Dickie Moore.

"Goodbye Love" with Charlie Ruggles will be the special midnight attraction for New Year's Eve. This program will begin at eleven-thirty. Roars of laughter will greet Charlie Ruggles in this play which stars him in the role of a love-starved butler with Don Juan impulses.

His rare talents as a comedian are seen to the best advantage in the thoroughly ludicrous character of Groggs. The story opens as Groggs finds himself confronted by the inescapable problem of alimony. He borrows enough money for a final settlement, but only pays his divorced wife an installment and goes off on a vacation to Atlantic City.

He meets Phyllis, a blonde gold digger who takes him for all his money and then leaves him flat. Groggs arrives back at his master's apartment just in time to hear the clergyman pronounce Phyllis and his employer man and wife. Groggs' ensuing efforts to help his master get rid of the gold digger Phyllis provide one of the most uproarious climaxes seen in recent months.

Verree Teasdale as Phyllis makes an attractive and alluring big time gold digger. Sidney Blackmer is sincere in a fine performance of Groggs' employer. Mayo Methot deserves bows for a truly fine portrayal, and Phyllis Barry is excellent as the misunderstood secretary who wins out.

STATE FISH PONDS BEING IMPROVED

One Such Is Located in Rose Township Near Fenton

Crews aggregating 1,000 men, operating under the C. W. A., are now engaged in creating the most extensive improvements and developments ever carried on in Michigan's system of fisheries.

The Fish Division of the Department of Conservation announced today that C. W. A. are now working on eight fisheries projects, ranging from construction of two new trout feeding stations to general improvements on hatchery grounds.

The largest single project is being carried on at the Wolf Lake Hatchery on Highway M-43, ten miles west of Kalamazoo. This station was opened in 1925 with the present hatchery building built in 1931. The hatchery, considered one of the most efficient in the state, has included about 110 acres.

Through the purchase of an additional 160 acres, C. W. A. crews of 400 men are now engaged in building bass and bluegill rearing ponds. Improvements are being made in the hatchery building and superintendent's residence. A truck garage and workshop is being built. A shelter is being built over the 144 outdoor hatching troughs.

In addition to the essential hatchery improvements, crews are now at work improving the grounds to make them more attractive. It is planned to build a picnic grounds and a parking place for automobiles. An old water power mill is being reconstructed. Its building will be used as an ice house.

It is expected that when the work is completed the Wolf Lake Hatchery will be one of the largest fish hatcheries in the country as well as an outstanding beauty spot.

Two trout feeding stations are in the process of development. A station is being built on Cooks Run in Iron County by a crew of 150 men. The station is expected to be finished in time for use next spring.

A second feeding station is being built by a crew of 150 men on the Sturgeon River within the limits of Wolverine. The site was recently given to the state by the Michigan Public Service Company.

Construction and development of various bass and bluegill rearing ponds is being carried on at several southern Michigan sites.

At Hillsdale, additional ponds are being built by a crew of 200 men on an 85 acre site within the city limits. The crew is also improving the surrounding grounds for park purposes.

Three miles from Fenton, 125 men are building ponds on lands recently purchased by the state. These ponds are expected to be ready for use next spring. Eighty men are devoting a part of their time to improving bass and bluegill ponds at Adrian and another small crew is working on ponds in connection with the Benton Harbor hatchery.

Additional ponds and other improvements are being created at the state fish hatchery at Hastings.

Through the use of a crew of 50 men an auxiliary hatchery is being built at Paris less than a mile from the present station. The auxiliary station will house 96 trout hatching troughs.

The fact that C. W. A. labor has been furnished for these projects will advance the state's fish propagation program at least 10 years, according to Fred A. Westerman, in charge of the Fish Division of the Department of Conservation.

SOLAR PHENOMENA AFFECT RADIO WAVES

Engineers Study Sun's Activities for Causes of Variations in Transmission Efficiency

If you are using the telephone, and there is some interruption on the line, you wouldn't expect the source of the trouble to be very remote. But if it happened to be the overseas radio telephone you were using, then the seat of the difficulty might be 93,000,000 miles away.

For transmission conditions on the overseas telephone circuits react to the gigantic influences of the sun. As a result, the engineers responsible for the operation and maintenance of the overseas service find it necessary to consider the effects of solar activity.

Affect Overseas Service

At least one aspect of solar influence is familiar to everyone. That is the movements of the earth with respect to the sun, which provide night, day and the different seasons. Another factor, however, which is highly important to those concerned with radio telephone service involves the changes in solar activity and the rotation of the sun. For when solar conditions are abnormal, it becomes increasingly difficult to keep the service at its normal high efficiency. These engineers, therefore, are constantly investigating changes in our most powerful source of energy, the sun.

When there is a departure from the normal with regard to radio transmission, the earth's magnetism, and the aurora borealis, a change in the activity of the sun is usually observed. Unusual appearances in certain areas of the sun generally accompany such changes in its activity. The most conspicuous of these are sun spots, the most noticeable of a series of phenomena which include bright patches on its surface, clouds of hydrogen and calcium gases, regions of shooting flames, increases in the streamers of the solar corona and changes in sun temperature.

Vast Puzzle of the Cosmos

The speed of solar rotation is so great that the earth only comes under the influences of disturbed areas of the sun as they periodically revolve. At such times as the earth becomes a good target, normal radio transmission is affected by the influences issuing from these regions. During the periods when these disturbances affect the earth, the signal intensity of short waves is reduced and radio telephone service is affected. In the case of very long waves, there is a slight improvement in the daytime, although they are somewhat lessened in strength at night. The European service is affected by these conditions to perhaps a greater extent than the other services.

Bell System engineers are constantly sounding the upper atmosphere, which has so much to do with radio transmission, and have found many interesting facts related to solar and cosmic influences. While these studies have yielded many pieces of information destined to fit into the vast puzzle of the cosmos, there remains much to be learned by further scientific exploration.

Keeps Tabs on Solar Effects

Thus it is that the engineers responsible for the maintenance of satisfactory overseas radio telephone service have such interest in these matters. The chief technical operator of the transatlantic radio telephone control room in New York City keeps a record of all solar activities and their effects on the radio telephone service. This information is studied carefully in order that it may become a factor in the improvement of the service.

Let the car speak for itself

HUNDREDS of thousands of people now own and drive Ford V-8 cars. Some neighbor or friend of yours has one. If we told you what we think of the car, you might say we are prejudiced, so we let the car and its owner tell you.

Economy of operation is one of the first points they will emphasize—the owner will boast of it and the car will prove it.

The 1934 car is even better than the 1933—and that was our best car up to its time. The new car is more beautiful—faster—more powerful—gives more miles to the gallon—better oil economy—is easier riding—cheaper to own and operate than any car we ever built.

You owe it to yourself and your pocketbook to ask our Ford Dealer to let you see this car, and let you drive it for yourself. At the wheel of the car you will be sure to reach a right decision. The Ford V-8 will tell you its own story.

PEOPLE ARE WITH THE PRESIDENT

Eastern Editorial Writer Thus Sums up the Situation

A generation has come to manhood in the United States that has no recollection of the rotund Speaker "Tom" Reed of Maine. Yet today I was reminded of one of his famous retorts when I heard that President Roosevelt proposes to ask Congress for $4,000,000,000 for his reconstruction and restoration agencies over and above the normal appropriations which approximate $3,000,000,000.

When Reed was Speaker appropriations for the first time in the history of the nation exceeded $1,000,000,000 during the life of one Congress.

Wild outcries arose from economists—especially Democratic economists who could have no hand in spending the money. The "Billion Dollar Congress" was a slogan put forth to bring it into disrepute. Reed turned it into a battle cry of victory. "What of it?" he inquired defiantly. "Isn't this a billion dollar country?"

The people allowed it was, and governmental expenditures were a dead issue in the ensuing campaign.

Whether this country has since become a seven billion dollar country or not needs no debate. When we went to war for an ideal—to make the world safe for democracy—we appropriated billions without hesitancy. The people bought Liberty Loan bonds, and paid their greatly increased taxes with patriotic zeal.

The money thus obtained was spent on explosives for blowing men to bits, on ships to carry men to that disintegrating end; on loans to foreign nations destined never to be repaid. All was done cheerily and in the doing of it the nation prospered. Now sums which in the end will approximate those spent in wartime defense are being appropriated for peacetime defense. The economic front is as costly to defend as was the line across France.

The President is obviously going to press his campaign along the lines already familiar. The NRA is, if he has his way to be continued for another year. Gold purchases are to be maintained even though, as yet, the desired increase in general prices has by no means kept pace with the rise in the price of gold. The AAA may be disappointing some farmers, but none the less it is to receive Administration support. In brief it is to be expected that the President's message to Congress will reiterate belief in the efficacy of the reconstruction program and demand its continuance with the necessary appropriations for its maintenance.

It is improbable that any very serious congressional opposition will be manifested. Much of the threatened hostility will in fact be helpful, for the President, like a famous Democratic predecessor, is fortunate in the enemies he has made.

A New York man, closely allied with large financial interests, descended upon me recently in the lobby of a Washington hotel.

"This man in the White House," said he, "is riding for a fall. The people are not so ignorant as they used to be. They remember what happened to John Law when he tried to base a currency system on commodities—in his case the products of South Sea islands. They know all about the French assignats of the eighteenth century, and the German mark. You will find that they will respond to wise financial leadership as in the past."

"Meaning that of the bankers in New York who got us into the trouble from which we are slowly emerging?" I asked.

He failed to respond. The real fact is that in the present discussion of monetary problems the old-time, academic arguments do not touch the people. If John Law swindled a nation with his South Sea bubble, how was he worse than the financiers who helped Insull, Kreuger, the Fox interests, the speculative builders in our big cities to put over their rackets? The difference is that when exposed and overthrown Law did not have the effrontery to pose, nevertheless, as the only champion of honest money. President Roosevelt in remaining deaf to the protests of high finance is winning the confidence of the nation as a whole. The people, it is true, do not always extend to his policies the confidence which they manifest in him. But right at that point he has manifested his political sagacity.

He has not so finally and irrevocably committed himself to any policy that he cannot abandon it if disaster portends. He frankly admits each to be experimental. Any one could be abandoned and his policy reversed without serious loss of "face." But throughout he maintains the attitude of one willing to meet the hostility of the privileged classes in all his experiments for the good of the masses.
