CLARKSTON, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, JUNE 8, 1934

COMMENT AND CRITICISM

Clarkston has a police department. Our officer drives a car equipped with a police radio and a special siren which he uses only as a warning when it is necessary to make speed or when stopping some offending motorist. Clarkston also has a number of bicycle riders of the younger age who have their vehicles equipped with a warning whistle which sounds suspiciously like the police signal, and this warning of the youngsters is not given with the same good sense or from cause of necessity. We have been asked to pass on the warning that it is unlawful to imitate a police or fire siren, and that's that.

We have heard that given the vehicle for a practical joke and Ben Miller will make the most of it. Any way with a rubber cigar loaded with water our Mr. Miller "put over" one joke last Saturday morning that caused laughing that could be heard a block away. A good time was had by all.

Anyway, if company arrives just after dinner and you have nothing in the house to feed them, just step in the family bus and drive downtown to your favorite store and buy what you need. No longer do you need to sigh because your best pair of silk stockings "collected" a run, just "go to town" and buy another pair. In other words our local, up and going merchants with a desire to please, have decided to call "closing the store at 6" just an experiment that failed and are back on the hours that they kept so many years in the past.

Hol Hum! Well we guess the question of running a motor boat on Park Lake will be settled. Monday the village fathers passed an ordinance with all due form and after 30 days from date it will be unlawful to so operate such craft in such a manner as to cause a nuisance. And as we remarked in the first paragraph, that's that.

ORATION OF THE CLASS OF 1934

Given Commencement Night by Floyd Hursfall

Classmates, Members of the Faculty, and Friends:

Tonight the graduating class of Clarkston High School has completed its course and is descending upon the highway of Life. There are no detours, and this highway is divided into two parts other than straight and crooked; these are the roads of Construction and Destruction. The highway of Destruction is well paved and is the road of through traffic to ruin, but the highway of Construction is blocked by two important obstructions: Depression and Threats of War. I would like to broach the subject of World Peace.

To have peace we must of course stop war; but to stop war we must find the causes, consider the effects and discover a cure.

For the first: War is undoubtedly caused by the lust for power; the greed for land; race prejudices and hatreds; and most of all by the search of manufacturers of certain products for an enormous and incredibly profitable market for their merchandise. The first phase of the causes of war, Power, can easily be seen in the insane attempts of some of history's great men to acquire it.

Napoleon attempted to create a world power—a United Europe, at the expense of thousands of lives and immense fortunes. Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, encouraged by bankers and manufacturers, dreamed of conquering most of the world at the expense of millions of lives, the wasting of thousands of acres of land, and the cost of billions of dollars. Adolph Hitler is building up his power in Germany by attempting to create a super-human race of pure Germanic blood—this fantastic, tho' maybe not impossible, dream is driving people, rich and poor, men, women and children alike, out of Germany at the rate of 10,000 a month and is costing immense sums of money. Mussolini has already made himself one of the acknowledged powers of the world and so have other leaders driven and moulded weak nations to their wills to satisfy the power they crave.

Next consider the greed for land: This has always been an excuse or vital cause for war. England, Russia, France and Japan especially have spent fortunes and lives gaining land. Race prejudices and hatreds have led to wars, as we have seen in our own Civil War, the Boxer Rebellion, and we are now threatened with more war partially because of hatreds created by the last Great War.

Finally, for the most important cause of war let us consider the manufacturers of munitions, arms, ships, airplanes and other such goods which are so useful or rather efficient in those contests of legalized manslaughter. Frenchmen were killed by French made guns; Englishmen were killed by English made guns, and the same for even our own soldiers. According to the best accountancy figures, it cost about $25,000 to kill a soldier during the World War. One class of the Big Business Men never denounced this extravagance because every time a shell bursted fragment found its way into the brain, the heart, or the intestines of a man in the front lines, a great part of the $25,000 found its way into the pockets of these men, the armament makers.

One company, by the name of Krupp, before the war supplied 52 nations with arms. In theory Krupp now smelts only peaceful ore, making locomotives, bridge girders and rails. Actually, Krupp is rearming Germany. Against the treaty of Versailles, Germany receives generous supplies from Sweden (where Krupp controls the armament firm of Bofors) and from Holland; forbidden to export, she ships to the Far East, South America, and any other nation that will violate its own treaty by ordering from her. Yet for all the might of the Krupp Company we must look elsewhere for the heart of the armament business. To the United States, perhaps? After all, we have our duPonts, who "own" the state of Delaware. We have our Midvale Co., which prospered mightily during the war and has continued the manufacture of arms, etc.; the Colt Company supplies machine guns as well as squirrel rifles; and we have our Remington Co., and the Bethlehem Steel Company, but we must look farther. In England there is the firm of Vickers-Armstrongs,

A number of the program participants are from out of town but are well known in Clarkston. one of the greatest exporters of war materials in the world. They have factories in Italy, Japan, Canada and many other countries. The affairs of Vickers are very profitable and England's aristocracy takes pleasure in clipping its coupons. The gentleman to whom most of the task of building up this organization can be credited is Mr. Basilios Zacharias, who came to England as a poor Greek. He is known today as Sir Basil Zaharoff. I couldn't in a five-hour discussion tell you of all the atrocities of this personage, but I will mention that by the end of the war his personal fortune was as high as a billion dollars. So much for Krupp and Vickers-Armstrongs, and the now senile Sir Basil.

The Big Show is France. France stands at the very top. She has today an army which all but equals in number and far surpasses in equipment Germany's vast militaristic machine of 1914. Yet the French threat to world peace does not lie in this army. It lies in the fact that in France the armament makers are not humble solicitors of government orders. Their influence is so infiltrated into the industrial, social and political affairs of the nation that they have a power in some ways beyond the state. The great overruling factor of this inconceivably wealthy and unscrupulous scheme is the Comite des Forges. This organization of iron and steel manufacturers is not as it has been called, "The French Steel Trust." Its activities are more subtle; politics and propaganda are its principal concerns. Its membership consists of over 250 concerns of which over 150 are armament concerns. The Committee controls the Press; it has the ear of the Foreign Office; former Presidents of France have been directors of its subsidiaries. The present president of the Committee is Francois de Wendel. The de Wendels have been Europe's armament makers since before the French Revolution. Yet they have not always been French, nor even always the de Wendels. They were once known as the von Wendels, and the family was happy to serve either Paris or Berlin, or better yet, both. The family's enormous wealth is in its mines and since boundary lines now put most

VALEDICTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1934

Given Commencement Night by Mary Kathryn Hammond

The time has come for the Senior Class of 1934 to bid you farewell. For years we have looked forward to this time with great enthusiasm and anticipation, but now the long awaited event has arrived, we find that our joy is overshadowed by the sadness we feel at the thought of parting with our classmates and teachers.

These past 12 years have held for us an abundance of happiness, and a companionship which we realize will mean much to us in the future. We are leaving behind us the companionship, the teamwork which we shared in our athletic activities. From these interscholastic contests we have learned the true value of cooperation, of sportsmanship. This cooperative, sportsmanlike attitude which we have learned to cultivate will prove invaluable in the years to come.

We find it difficult to say adieu to all the happy memories of the past, to our teachers, that group of men and women who have so ably guided us through our school days, whose counsel was so highly valued by all who sought it. It is they to whom we owe a vote of thanks for many of our achievements during our grade as well as our high school days.

We stand tonight with our hands upon the gateway that leads to higher knowledge. The knowledge that affords us the foundation on which to build a useful future for manhood and womanhood. This opportunity will result in one of two ways—success or failure. Indolence, both mental and manual, will result in failure. Perseverance in our task will bring us success.

First we must be sure that our trade or profession is a good one—one that both God and goodness sanctions, then be true as steel to it. Throw our whole heart, soul and strength into it, and success will crown our efforts. Whether our objective be great or small the same perseverance is necessary. Everybody admires an iron determination to win, and they seek the aid and advice of one who displays such determination. Perseverance will make friends and he who perseveres in business through hardships and disappointments will always find ready, generous friends in the time of need. Perseverance not only makes friends but also creates favorable circumstances and changes the perspective of all things. All obstacles will vanish before a stout heart and resolute energy of soul.

There is a great work for all of us to do, a deep and earnest life work, solemn, real and useful. Life is no idle game, something to amuse and be forgotten. It is a fixed and stern reality, fuller of duties than the sky of stars.

Let us build our lives upon a foundation that will not fall when the floods descend and the winds blow. Let us build upon character, truth and honor.

If day by day we are careful to build our lives with pure, noble, upright deeds, at the end there will stand a fair temple honored by both God and man. But as one leak will sink a ship, one flaw will break a chain, so one mean, dishonorable, untruthful act or word will forever leave its impress and work its influence on our characters. God gives us our minds but we must make our own characters; the mind is the garden and character is the fruit. A good character is a precious thing and the work of making it is the noblest labor on earth. Character, like perseverance makes friends, draws patronage and supports and opens a sure and easy way to wealth, honor and happiness. Its value is the standard of human progress.

Truth is divine in its nature and pure before heaven, and is the foundation of all human excellence, the keystone of sincere affection and the seal of true discipleship to the Good Shepherd. To divert from the truth gives us no comfort, pains the one who forges it and like an arrow flies back and wounds the archer.

The public estimation of truth has numerous examples; one of which was Petrarch, who upon appearing as witness in a certain cause was informed that such was the confidence of the court in his veracity that he need not take any other his word being sufficient. Can there be offered a more obtainable, more gratifying or more noble object of emulation to the youthful heart than truth, the standard by which all things are to be judged?

POPPY SALE NETS OVER SIXTY-SEVEN DOLLARS

The local poppy sale, including Drayton Plains, Waterford and Ortonville netted $67.00 which was considered a very good sale.

Real honor and esteem are not difficult to be obtained, but are best won by actual worth and merit. True honor as defined by Cicero, "is the concurrent approbation of good men and women." The way to be truly honored is to be illustriously good. We must not seek to be honored in any way except within our hearts, within ourselves, for—

"Honor and shame from no condition rise;

Act well your part, there all honor lies."

Now if each and every one of us of this class of 1934 will persevere in whatever their work may be, and make character, truth and honor his motto, we will never cease to be a credit to our parents, our teachers, and to this school that graduates us tonight and sets us to sail upon the sea of destiny. To our teachers and school we now say farewell. To you classmates I urge that the same class spirit that we have enjoyed during our school years prevail throughout our future lives. Let us not become estranged and may we so live that when our final summons comes it may be truly said that the world has been made better by our having lived. With these closing words I bid you classmates a fond adieu.

THE CHORAL CLUB GIVES MUSICAL

High School Auditorium Made Into a Large Living-Room

A very delightful affair of the season took place last Friday evening when the members of the Clarkston community chorus gave their first musicale in the High School auditorium.

The large room was transformed into a spacious, home-like living-room in a summer home. The wicker furniture, the many rocking chairs, and the innumerable floor lamps all tended to make the guests comfortable. To make the room bright and cheery flowers were here and there, some in vases and some in baskets. Rugs were on the floor and occasional tables and end tables helped to make the living-room more complete.

The program proved to be a real musical treat. Mrs. Howard Huttenlocher, the president, opened the program with a few words of welcome to the guests and an explanation of just how the class originated and what it would like to accomplish.

Guest artists from Pontiac and Waterford played several selections on piano, violins and tello and they received very hearty applause. Charles Hutton, the director of the chorus, sang several numbers which were well received. The chorus was presented by their director three times and each time sang two numbers.

At the close of the program the guests were ushered to a large table which was across one corner of the room and looked beautiful with a lace cloth and a candelabra at each end and here they were served punch and cakes. An hour or more was spent in visiting and discussing the possibilities of a community chorus. Although the group had been organized only a few months they felt their first musicale was a fair attempt for beginners and with a larger membership next fall they will perhaps accomplish more. Many of the guests were so delighted with the success of the chorus they thought a musicale of this nature should be an annual affair.

Just before the program started on Friday evening the members met in an adjoining room for rehearsal and at this time gifts were presented to Mr. Hutton, the director, and Mrs. Frank Perrin, the pianist, who took such an interest in the chorus and gave so freely of their time.

Billy and Francis Carter and Bruce and George Dockham of the third grade, who have been with us this year, have been moved into Miss Hine's room.

Third and Fourth Grades
Earlene Walker and Billy Roak visited our room Tuesday. Marilyn Reed is also visiting but intends to stay with us for several weeks. She is visiting her grandma at Williams Lake.

Robert Kline was hurt quite badly last Monday when his bicycle came apart.

There was quite a bit of excitement here last Tuesday as many of our boys and girls were dressed as old men and ladies, fairies, tramps, gypsies, etc. At noon, we left for Mrs. Collins' home where we enjoyed our lunch and a boatride. After the boatride, one of our little girls, who was dressed in blue overalls, straw hat, white shirt, had a lovely surprise for us. Over her shoulder she carried a stick and bundle wrapped in a red bandana handkerchief which contained sticks of candy and candy bars. After returning to school, we judged our costumes. Jack Ivory, who was dressed as a modern miss, and Jean Rosenquist, who was dressed as a Japanese girl, won first prizes for the best costumes. Helen Joyce Smithson, as a gypsy, and Robert Kline, as a hobo, won the prizes for the funniest costumes.

We wish to thank again Mrs. Roehm and Barbara, Mrs. Collins and Betty for helping us to have such an enjoyable time.

The children enjoyed writing letters to Mrs. Roehm and Mrs. Collins. Edward Craft's letter was chosen to send to Mrs. Roehm and Doris Bunker's to Mrs. Collins.

For washing and shaving, for bath and for shower, here is a new service:

ELECTRIC HOT WATER!

How often have you wanted hot water quickly, for shaving or washing, for bath or for shower, and found only lukewarm water in the pipes? How often have you been obliged to heat water on the stove, or climb up and down stairs to light a manually operated water heater and then waited for the tank to heat? You can end this annoyance and inconvenience by installing an ELECTRIC water for as little as 10c a day. Forty gallons of hot water cost 8c a day, and eighty gallons 12c a day. Under this new arrangement, you may also obtain a seasonal rate for electric hot water, should you desire to use the heater only during the summer months. This rate is somewhat higher—about 11c a day for 40 gallons, 13c a day for 60 gallons, and 16c a day for 80 gallons. You may buy or rent an electric water heater, whichever you choose. Rental rates for heaters are low, and if you prefer to buy the heater, convenient monthly terms may be arranged. The low rate for this service is possible through the use of a specially designed heater which stores the hot water during the night hours.

Chapter VIII.
 At her father's advice Nelly now decided to sell the little cottage that had been a wedding gift from him, as well as most of the household effects, and move at once into the larger, finer home. The modest sum she obtained seemed like a real fortune as she carefully apportioned out where each penny should go.
 Myron was both sad and sullen at the many changes in affairs, and while he had really loved his mother, he could not forgive her for hurting his pride. And then he realized he had only a specified amount to spend each month and to him it seemed very small indeed, and Nelly was the happiest she had been since the first few months of their marriage.

 Jack and Marian were seniors in school and she could now have their classmates in and plan little affairs, so their last year in school would be a little happier.
 Father Bingham had made arrangements for them to attend a business college in the city as soon as they had graduated, as his gift to them, and the days were brim full of happiness and eager plans.
 Graduation over, a brief summer vacation spent on the farm, and they were away and the days were long indeed. Myron had drifted back into his old loafing places and Nelly spent much time on the farm. Mother was so frail and there had long been a competent housekeeper in charge, but Nelly loved to sew and make dainty fluffy negligee for her mother, and Marian was always in need of a new dress or two; Jack's shirts seemed to vanish, and she had no sooner mended and mailed back one batch of socks and stockings before another was on its way. So in all she was caring for three households and the days passed all too quickly.

 The children begged for them to come to their graduation exercises, and while Myron flatly refused, Mrs. Bingham insisted that she was quite well enough to go, and as Dr. Marston sanctioned it, there was great excitement in the Bingham household. Nelly had made only one trip to her father's home since her marriage, and the prospect of a trip to the city was a great treat. Anxious to look well for the children, she spent many anxious hours on her more than abundant wardrobe.
 Myron had persuaded her to buy a car when they had first sold their home and they had enjoyed it, Nelly learning to drive from the first, and now he was to take a party on a camping trip while they were away and Nelly had only her mother and father to think of. Such a week as they had with Jack and Marian in the city, spending several days in sight seeing after the graduation. Her mother could not see enough of the shops and made purchase after (Continued on page four)

SPEND YOUR VACATION IN MICHIGAN

Michigan's tourist and resort business brings large sums of money to the state each year. It provides employment for thousands, and greater prosperity for all of us. We can increase that business further by telling out-of-state friends about Michigan's vacation advantages and by spending our own vacations here.

And, no matter which part of Michigan you visit this summer, banish worry by telephoning home and office frequently. Call ahead for reservations, or to tell friends you are coming. Long Distance calls will add but little to the cost and much to the enjoyment of your vacation.

The Michigan Bell Telephone Company is a Michigan concern. It prospers only as does the state as a whole. For the past six years it has devoted advertising space to calling attention to the advantages of Michigan as a vacation land, and will do so again this year. Such advertising is good for Michigan, and therefore is good for the Michigan Bell Telephone Company.

CHEVROLET'S reduced prices reflect in dramatic fashion the record-breaking demand that, month after month, is keeping Chevrolet first in sales. In offering these exceptional values at these new, lower prices, Chevrolet hopes to maintain, during the balance of the year, the high level of employment so necessary to the general program of recovery.

Chevrolet is particularly glad to make this important announcement just at this time when you can see and judge the Chevrolet at the National Exhibits of General Motors Products. Make it a point to look over these cars. Be practical—compare its modern features and these new low prices with those of any other low-priced car. Then you will know even more surely than before why we say with confidence, "Drive the Chevrolet only 5 miles and you'll never be satisfied with any other low-priced car."

purchase, indulging in luxurious personal belongings for all of them in a manner quite unknown to Nelly, and the week ended almost too soon. As was the custom with colleges of that kind, places had been arranged for long in advance, so Jack and Marian were already located in their work, Jack in a drug store to continue his study of pharmacy and Marian as secretary in the Y. W. C. A.

Back home there were days when Nelly thought it must be all a dream, this strange way of living, so different from her parents' home. Myron was there for breakfast and then she never knew when to expect him as he was quite popular now with his associates, especially as he could be more liberal with cigars and, as was the case in the camping trip, he could always be depended upon to take his car to the nearby towns to accommodate his friends, and it never would have occurred to him to send word to Nelly where or when he was going. Often she would hurry with the few morning tasks and be ready to drive the car herself before Myron had finished his breakfast. Occasionally he would drive out for supper and they would have the evening also. Yet in the years to come she was to remember with a grateful heart that she was privileged to spend so much time now at home, for one midsummer day the silken thread of life snapped and with scarcely a sigh her mother's trail little form sank back on the pillow of the divan where she was resting.

of their land in France, the family is now mostly de Wendels with a sufficient amount of von Wendels to manage its German affairs. Regardless of national claims these mines remain in control of one or the other branch of the family. The Francois de Wendel of the present day is the so-called "Big Shot". His connections and directorships would fill pages. He is, among other things, not only a director of the French but of the German de Wendel Companies. Here is the way his disastrous plans are developed. If he needs money he is the Regent of the Bank of France. If he needs political support he is a member of the Chamber of Deputies. If he needs political or propaganda material published he is majority owner in The Journal and is at the head of the group that purchased the semi-official newspaper of the French Government. When Hitler ascended in Germany he was supported by the munitions makers of France. After he gained power the de Wendel controlled newspapers in Paris broke out with a fever of denunciation against the Hitler regime and called for fresh guaranties of security against the menace of rearming Germany. In this one example the whole philosophy of most armament makers reveals itself. "Keep Europe in a constant state of nerves. Publish periodical war scares. Impress governmental officials with the vital necessity of maintaining armaments against the aggressions of neighboring states;" for the armaments industry operates with one curious advantage over any other business in the world: The GREATER the competition the greater the amount of business for all competitors. I would like to end this phase of my discussion by stating a few figures illustrating the profits that were made by some of the concerns in our country during the last war and some that could be made by another: Bethlehem Steel had a profit of over 638 million dollars from 1916 to 1918 or nearly four times its profit for the preceding three years. Curtiss-Wright stock rose 95% and Curtis Aeronautical 232% in January of this year with no other stimulus than the Vinson Naval Bill providing for the construction of about 2,000 naval planes. Excessive private profits from military and naval armament do not merely lay too heavy a burden of cost on the taxpayers. What is much worse they set up a powerful and financially interested lobby pulling for heavy armament and pulling against any method of settling international differences except by the use of what they have to sell. For the second part of our analysis of war let us consider the effects: From my earliest childhood I have been told stories, read books, seen pictures, and am now witnessing the horrible effects of war. Thousands and thousands of men, the cream of the crop, had their lives snuffed out in the Great War and thousands and thousands of those who survived have been and are now suffering the pain of maimed bodies and the burdens of privations caused by loss of ability, positions and money. Probably all of you have seen the Floyd Gibbons war photos published in many prominent newspapers and more than all I could possibly say can be derived from looking through those series. We are now passing through the after-war depression as you all know is not local, not national, but international. Such are the effects of war to end war. So vanishes the glory. By all of these things does the realism of the barbarity of war show itself to the human race.

For the final phase of this minute discussion of war let us search for a cure. We have made a partial diagnosis of this vital disease of war and to me there seems to be two prescriptions: The first economically. There MUST be the complete abolition of private armament traffic. In suppression or confiscation of private armament industries a government is faced with these alternatives: It must disarm; or it must become exclusively an importer of arms; or it must make arms manufacturing a function of the state, which means, in effect, that the state must become a vast arsenal. Moreover, how can the armament business be outlawed when it is a part of the most essential industries of industrialized nations? Is there no hope? We must admit that the armament makers have caught the world pretty tight in their grip. Well, perhaps there is a war coming, but first there is a FIGHT coming and in recent months that fight has loomed most noticeably in France where resentment against the de Wendels and others has been growing more and more bitter. Many groups are beginning to look upon the armorers as national enemies, and you my friends must help to begin the fight which my colleagues and myself will have to help carry on shortly, to clean up our own country of these grafting menaces to civilization. For the second prescription let us face three propositions:

First: The world is dangerously prepared for war—"Sitting around a powder barrel" so to speak.

Secondly: The plain people of the world do not want war—and, unless deceived by propaganda, would veto it.

Thirdly: The only effective argument for this vast and dangerous military preparedness is the real or alleged necessity for self-defense. Now to these three propositions why not add one which ties them all together and provides a reasonable method of escape from the problem they present. Let us call this number four: If the great mass of the people, not just diplomatic representatives, but the rank and file of the common people, would adopt as a basic and unalterable ideal of conduct; as a new universal, worldwide "folkway"; a sort of eleventh commandment, this simple principle: "No hostile crossing of international boundary lines," the present hysterical fear of war would be abated and the necessity for armaments would pass away. (What an ideal! How vital and necessary! NO INVASION of any other land!) We of course reserve the right of national defense and we definitely repudiate national attack and likewise will have no part or support no government in sending any hostile forces across anyone else's boundary line.

And such an ideal must be established for won't it be agreed that a Christian Ideal of forgiveness and the brotherhood of man is one of the most important hopes for redeeming the world from the lamentable condition into which the last war plunged it and which another war would more than again do; and won't you agree that without this ideal politics are a meaningless mockery; religion is an organized hypocrisy; and the churches are a snare? And however hard it may be to learn these lessons and however cruel the pain of them, there was never a time when they are more needed than now!
