COMMENT AND CRITICISM

Well, that week is over—Gone but not forgotten. The only show I got into, sans price, was the Micky Mouse show and all they had were white rats.

If the banker casts the old "fish eye" on your application for a loan it must be that your collateral is bad. According to the Democratic newspaper, The Boston Post, "Millions of dollars in postal savings deposits are being turned back to the Treasury by the banks: $187,000,000 of these deposits which the banks formerly considered valuable have been given up in the past three months. Banks are loaded up with money and unable to make profits at the low interest rates prevailing. Only recently a large local (Boston) bank loaned $100,000 to a city for a few months, the interest totaling but $48 for the period. Bank resources are enormous but good investments are lacking. The idea that business is clamoring for credit and the banks refusing to lend is fictitious."

After you finish reading this paragraph, and while it is on your mind, please lay down this paper, take out your driver's license and note the day it expires. A large number expire this year, perhaps yours does. If so, it will not cost you a cent to drop into the office of Ed. Seterlin and have him check a new application for you to send to the Secretary of State for your new permit to drive for three years. Ed is generally around the office during the week, and is always on the job on Saturday.

Please read as far as the third sentence of this paragraph. We are going to refer to advertising—please, not about the News. So read this. The first rule of advertising is not to mention so many specials that you confuse the reader or the whole advertisement may fall flat. Consider then the poor public, who has to read a political dodger which so befuddles the poor public that he knoweth not whether he is to vote for the candidate or buy razor blades. Probably after election, the candidate will have plenty of time to shave with his razors during the time he would like to have represented his constituency and might have, if the public had only known what he wanted.

NOT LOST IN THE WOODS BUT LOST IN THE SWAMP

Lover of Nature Has Strange Experience

Last week was one for the records as far as Clarkston is concerned. Along with all the other incidents and accidents about town we can add a swamp story which might have resulted in a very sad happening.

One of our visitors, Guy Edward Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Price of Los Angeles, is a great lover of nature and he was told by some of the boys that the lowland south of town was the haunt of pheasants. Curious to see the mother and her young birds Guy Edward decided to walk along beside the stream when on his way, from town to the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wieland on the Dixie. In doing so the boy met with disaster. He made a fairly good start, but before long he found himself sinking into soft, marshy ground. Every step he took seemed to send him farther into the mire. At last he was in too deep to take another step and he knew he must get help. His cries were of no avail until some young people happened to go along Depot road on their way to the lake, to swim and the screams drew their attention. They went for help and the officers were summoned. Strong lights were thrown over the swamp to locate the boy because the night was getting dark. The boy was spotted and was extricated by means of a rope.

This incident will linger in the mind of Guy Edward Jr. for a long time and it is very doubtful if he will ever forget his trip to Clarkston in 1934.

Amusements Attract Unusual Crowd

Pet and Doll Parade, Main Feature of Week

Main and Washington Streets were scenes of much activity the latter part of last week. Many visitors were in town and many residents of years ago called on friends and relatives. The attractions on Washington Street made it a real midway and this furnished amusement for old and young, especially for those who rarely get to the city and who haven't been to a circus or a fair in many years.

Wednesday evening most everyone in town was seen on Washington Street. Little groups congregated here and there, some standing in the middle of the street chatting, some playing the games that were along the way, some waiting for a ride on the ferris wheel, others getting their fortunes told, the little children enjoying the little auto ride and everyone seemed to be having heaps of fun.

Thursday evening, of course the midway was just a drab scene, resulting from the terrible storm which passed this way earlier in the afternoon. Even so, many people crowded along the street, curious to see and know what damage had been done. The place was in darkness, of course, and everything was dripping wet. One of the large tents where some of the side shows took place was flat on the ground, the micky-mouse show was blown over and all that was in running order was one of the games.

Friday evening, the whole town was astir on account of the movies and the street dance. After the movies, the crowd spent some time on midway, patronizing the different side-shows and games and also the lunch counter which was operated by the ladies of the American Legion Auxiliary. About ten o'clock part of Main Street just south of Washington Street was roped off and many enjoyed modern and old-time dancing to music by Doc Marsh's orchestra. The dancing stopped about twelve o'clock and this gave everyone a chance to get a hamburger or a hot-dog and a cup of coffee and take one more stroll down Washington Street before going home.

Saturday afternoon the program was mainly for the children. About four o'clock quite a crowd of little folk with their dolls and pets lined up for the parade. Every entry was a picture. The parade was headed by a bride, Betty Cole, and a groom, Vivian O'Roark. Betty carried a bird cage with canaries in it and Vivian led a dog. Their costumes were quite comical and to them was given the first prize, a large bouquet of flowers. Every entry was worthy of a prize, but not many prizes had been secured and this made a very difficult task for the judges. However Mr. Wilson who was the manager of the whole affair came to their assistance and helped to decide who should receive the prizes. The awards were given to the following children, Genevieve Terry who led a little dog, Mary Porritt with her dog, Jackie Craven leading his dog and Billy O'Roark and La Vern Hoyt with a goat and wagon.

After the parade the crowd assembled on Washington street to watch the running races. The awards for racing were given to Billy Wilson, Robert Magerman, Jimmy Allen, Mary Cell and Ann Russell. The prizes were donated by some of the merchants in town as their share in making the day a success.

Saturday evening the streets were crowded. In fact, so crowded that a person who got down town after nine-thirty had to spend quite a few minutes finding a parking space. The excitement on Midway kept up until midnight. Many were here from Davisburg, Waterford, Drayton Plains, Birmingham, Detroit, Pontiac, and from most of the surrounding community. The old and the young had plenty to do and plenty to say. Even Mr. Frank Yeager decided that a person was just as old as he felt and he made up his mind he wanted to get a bird's eye view of the town and about ten o'clock he boarded the ferris wheel and enjoyed a ride.

The American Legion received a percentage of the money taken in by the games that were operated and this money like most of the money that is spent by the Legion will go towards helping some disabled comrades and their families.

By Sunday morning most of Washington Street had been cleared and by Monday morning the street looked as if nothing had taken place.

Many of our visitors are still with us, while many are far away and perhaps will not return until something of this nature is staged another year.

Mr. Wilson, manager in charge, will put on a celebration at Rochester next week and invites his friends to visit him there.

Miss Phyllis King Honored at Shower

One of the many gay occasions honoring Miss Phyllis King who is to be an August bride was given last Friday. Mrs. Roy Spencer and daughter Miss Charlotte entertained a number of friends in the grove at the rear of their home on North Main Street.

The afternoon was spent hemming towels and aprons. One of the guests made the bright suggestion that it would be rather unique for each one to put their own initials and also those of the bride-to-be on the towels. This was done with the hope that when Phyllis is far from Clarkston she will just have to see these towels and at once her mind will wander back to that pleasant afternoon spent with her friends at the Spencer home. After a few social hours afternoon tea was served.

Former Representative Passes to Rest

Burial Was in Lake View Cemetery Thursday

Early Tuesday morning the death of A. B. Hubbard occurred at his home on Holcomb Street. Although he had been ailing for some time, he was not compelled to remain in bed until a few weeks ago.

A. B. HUBBARD

Mr. Hubbard was a native of Oakland County, born in White Lake Township June 21st, 1860, the youngest of a family of six. He was a member of the White Lake Presbyterian Church. In October 1884 he married Miss Roby Pearson. He purchased the farm interest of the other children and managed the home farm for a number of years. When he retired he moved to Clarkston and here he and his family made their home.

Mr. Hubbard had what might be termed a magnetic personality, because although he was a strong Republican he had many warm Democratic friends. Everyone who knew him or came in contact with him respected and loved him. Even when his health was failing and would have given up he was optimistic and cheerful and always tried to see the bright side of everything. He enjoyed visitors and never tired of talking politics.

Mr. Hubbard was well known over the whole county. As a boy he attended the Pontiac High School. In 1922 he was elected State Representative and served one term. He also served on the State Tax Commission for many years. Those who worked with him in Lansing and elsewhere respected him for his frankness and determination.

Those who are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving father and grandfather and a devoted husband are, his wife, a daughter Florence, at home, a son Joseph P. Hubbard, who lives on a farm just out of Clarkston, and three grandsons, Eugene, Robert and Russell Hubbard.

Funeral services were held at the home on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 with Rev. Geo. A. Hill of the White Lake Presbyterian Church officiating. The following friends acted as pallbearers, L. F. Walter, Owen Virgin, George E. Marshall, Arthur Stewart, Edward Ormond and Frank Wood.

Burial was in Lake View Cemetery, Clarkston.

The Penny Supper Is a Treat for Many

Those who attended the Penny Supper given by the Ladies' Aid at the Methodist church on Wednesday certainly enjoyed a tasty and well-balanced meal. The food was served cafeteria style and Miss Phyllis King acted as cashier.

The ladies had prepared plenty of food and a good variety and they were a little disappointed at not having a larger crowd. The prices were exceptionally reasonable and those who did attend expressed the wish that they would like if the Aid would serve Penny Suppers often, especially during the warm weather.

Extensive Damage Wrought by Storm

Clarkston in Darkness for Several Hours

The electric and wind storm that passed this way last Thursday afternoon was the most terrific so far this year. Much damage was done throughout the county. Telephone lines were crippled and the power lines were shut off in a good many places. Trees and fences were blown down and all along the highways the sign boards were strewn around. The roofs of barns were lifted and carried for some distance. Windmills were knocked over and for a time everyone wondered if they were in the path of a cyclone. Oxford people were in the midst of celebrating a homecoming and the wind played havoc with decorations, amusements, picnics and whatnot while the rain drove the merry-makers to shelter. One of the churches in Oxford was so that it got a good sweep of the wind and the steeple as well as the front of the church was torn off and crashed to the ground.

In the vicinity of Clarkston, fruit trees were torn up and many large trees that have been beauty marks for many years lost some of their branches. One large tree that stood alongside of Judge Morley's home was blown down and took some of the porch with it. Another large tree in front of Mrs. Nettie Lambert's home on North Main Street was toppled over. Several trees on J. Thompson Miller's property were damaged, and some were blown down. A barn, on what is known to most everyone in the community as the "Miller Ranch" was wrecked. It seems this barn was built many years ago and has stood up against many severe storms but the velocity of the wind Thursday was too much and the barn collapsed.

The walls of the old "Hill House" down on the Dixie have stood for almost a year since the inside of the building was burned, but the storm forced the side walls to cave in and now only the end walls are left standing.

The house-car, belonging to Mr. Wilson, who was in charge of the carnival operating in Clarkston, was completely wrecked. The car turned upside down and was smashed to pieces and the food and clothing that was inside was ruined. A number of those in charge of the concessions on the midway were camping in tents on the property back of the Bank. These folk had to run for shelter while their tents were flattened or tipped over. Their camp was a dismal sight.

Clarkston was in darkness for several hours Thursday evening and in some homes oil lamps and gasoline lamps were brought out of the attic while others used candles to furnish a little light until the Detroit-Edison could get the necessary repair work done.

When we hear reports from other districts of the loss of lives and loss of cattle, we can consider ourselves very fortunate. Our losses were small compared to those in the outlying districts. We may have had to suffer damage to trees and buildings and perhaps had to clean up the litter in the streets and yards but as yet there has been no report of any deaths in the immediate vicinity, resulting from the storm.

of Mrs. Percy King, assisted by Mrs. Nettie Osborn, Mrs. Ruth Earl, Eleanor Mehler, John Mann and George King. The long tables were stretched the full length of the dining room and vases of flowers were used as decorations. Lemonade was served with the dinner. Mrs. Mayme Baker pronounced the blessing.
 H. B. Mehler acted as master of ceremonies and conducted the meeting which followed. Each person was tagged so they could be freer in speaking to each other, thus giving an informal atmosphere to the occasion.
 The program, which was arranged by Mrs. Mehler, Mrs. A. McCaffrey and Mrs. Bessie Owen, was presented in the auditorium of the school.
 Invocation was pronounced by Rev. H. A. Huey.
 The orchestra gave three interesting and pleasing numbers. Not all of the members were there although it was Mr. Burt's wish that as many of those who had played in the orchestra could take part. Many of them were away on vacations, however.
 Walter Perry of Detroit was present and played his part in the orchestra. Mr. Burt led them very efficiently.
 Community singing was enjoyed. Mrs. Ava Lunger was at the piano and Mr. Burt led the crowd in singing "Auld Lang Syne", "America the Beautiful" and "School Day".
 Mrs. Charles Chamberlain of Royal Oak gave two readings in her usual charming manner. These were well received.
 The teachers responded to short talks. Miss Alice Shattuck led the talks. She asked how many were there who attended school when she was teacher. She called the roll. There were 10. Mr. Buzzell of Holly who taught at the same time many years ago was unable to attend. However those who attended school while he was teacher stood up and the count was 17.
 Much merriment was caused when George King said, "I'd just like to know how many are present who helped fill the wood box."
 The following former and present teachers gave short talks or took some other part in making the program a success: Mrs. Mamie Donaldson O'Connor of Pontiac, Mrs. Eddythe Crawford Jones of Franklin, Mich., Glenn Campbell of Williams Lake Road, Miss Mary Jacobus of Vassar, Mrs. Ava Lunger, Mrs. Mayme Baker, Russell Galbraith, Howard Burt Sr., H. B. Mehler and Mrs. Mehler.
 Dr. John Warren of Detroit and Roy Maxim of Utica, Mich., were also called upon for a few words.
 The spirit of friendliness and good will reigned throughout the entire day.
 Plans for next year's reunion were arranged.
 The officers elected were:
 President—Walter Whitfield.
 Vice Pres.—Glenn Campbell.
 Corresponding Sec'y—Mrs. Bessie Chamberlain Owen.
 Sec'y and Treasurer—Mrs. Helen Spooner Mehler.
 Committees will be named by the officers.
 The reunion will be the first Saturday in August, in 1935.
 Those registered were from Washington, D. C., Washington State, Columbiaville, Mich., Utica, Mich., Detroit, Pontiac, Royal Oak, Vassar, Mich., Clarkston, Springfield, Mich., Sashabaw Plains, Drayton Woods and the territory about Waterford.
 The oldest pupil was Mrs. Jennie McCann. The pupil coming the longest distance was Mrs. Fay Windiate Booker who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Wesley Stevens, and is from the state of Washington.
 Games were played under direction of Russell Galbraith.
 Credit is due all committees who worked so diligently to make this reunion a real event. Miss Anita Harris, who was chairman of the committee on invitations, had a real task but she and her committee went to no little effort to secure the names and addresses of a great many who were difficult to locate. A little co-operation from all present this year would help next year's committee a great deal.

 Claude Chapman, who was chairman of the committee on ground arrangements, certainly had everything worked out in fine style and this committee proved that it wasn't afraid of a little hard work.
 Let's look forward to a bigger and better reunion next year.

Mrs. Mae Hall of Pontiac was in town on Saturday and attended the school reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Terry and family attended the Perry reunion on Sunday. There were 40 present.

CIRCUS POSTERS PLEASE KIDDIES

MISS CATHERINE ALBERT

Get ready! The Circus is coming! The Al G. Barnes show, one of the world's largest, will exhibit in Pontiac on Friday, August 17. Three special trains are used this season to transport this great organization from city to city. Traveling with the great organization are 1,080 employees in addition to 108 advance men. Twenty-two tents covering twelve acres of ground house the transient city in the daytime. The circus has its own doctor, lawyer, dentist, U. S. postman, detectives, blacksmith, carpenters and, in fact, every artisan in the average small city.

The famous Al G. Barnes menagerie, declared to be the finest and most complete traveling zoo in the world, is a part of the show. Many new, rare and costly specimens of the wild animal kingdom have been gathered from all parts of the globe. Tigers, gnus, Vlaak Varks, lions, tigers, camels, dromedaries, zebras, leopards, panthers, yaks, emus, jaguars, elands, seals, and three herds of elephants are but a part of the traveling university of natural history.

The wonder spectacle of all time, the "Fiesta of the Rio Grande," a gorgeous processional fiesta of old Spain, is used this season as a prelude to the circus proper. More than 1,000 men, women, horses, camels and elephants take part in this never-to-be-forgotten pantomime of enchantment. Upwards of $70,000 was expended on the wardrobe. The mighty audiences which daily greet the magnificent production are among the largest that have ever been drawn world-wide.

Great stars from eighteen foreign countries, the respective champions, together in the history of the amusement in their line, participate in the gigantic display of arenic numbers. The trained wild animal displays are headed by Miss Mabel Stark, Johnny Myers and Capt. Terrell Jacobs. In massive steel girded arenas will be seen performing lions, tigers, jaguars and pumas, all subjugated by master trainers. Forty dancing horses and forty dancing girls will be seen in a horse show unparalleled. Among the sixty equestrians will be "Poodles" Hanneford, the riding clown, and the Hanneford family of equestrians. The petite and charming Esther Escalante, intrepid aerialist, comes from old Mexico to thrill and amaze you. From Europe will be the amazing Flying Clarkonians, international aerialists. Sixty clowns will furnish fun for the little folks.

Performances will be given at 2 and 8 p. m. Doors will be opened an hour earlier to permit an inspection of the zoo or to enjoy a concert of popular and operatic music by Prof. Redrick and his military band.

"It has been grand; almost too good to be true. It seems like a nice dream. But it will be nice to have Jack and Marian back. They are having such a good time too, and keep asking what I am doing."

The second week seemed to pass more quickly than the first and although they formally spoke to each other as "Mrs. Bates" and "Mr. Hamilton," they felt that they had known each other for years.

Chapter XXIV

There were so many nice things to go to when there were two that the return of the children made no difference. Rather, it completed the circle, for Mr. Hamilton always had to contribute to concerts and many public affairs and apparently produced tickets out of the air and they had several pleasant evenings at places where the Bates family, unaccustomed to city ways, had not yet learned to go.

The "children" were delighted over the prospect of Thanksgiving day in the country as they had done in the old days, and the day was all that could be wished for. They made an early start as Jack and Marian must be home to take part in a vesper service, but even at that Aunt Martha had long been watching down the highway, and was out to greet them, her face wreathed in smiles.

Jack, when presented, won instant favor with a sweeping bow as he presented a gay box of candy, and Marian, with thoughts of her grandmother Bingham, had brought a dainty cup and saucer. Eleanor took from its tissue wrappings an embroidered pillow, while Robert had bought a pot of choice chrysanthemums for the table, so much attention quite upsetting the dear old soul.

Then, to their surprise, she informed them that she had sent the woman of all work home for the day that she might cook and serve the dinner herself.

"Just the thing!" exclaimed Eleanor, hiding her astonishment. "I've just been homesick to help with a real Thanksgiving dinner. You just bring your rocker right out in the kitchen and boss the job. Mr. Hamilton can tend the fire and I'll bet you youngsters can find some greens and apples to decorate the tables."

Catching the spirit of Eleanor's gay pretense, all scattered before Aunt Martha could protest, but Jack and Marian came up behind unawares and carried the surprised old lady, chair and all, out into the kitchen, adding to the merriment and laughter, and then scampered away before she could scold them.

The turkey was partly roasted, the vegetables prepared and pies made, so Eleanor, with rolled-up sleeves and borrowed apron, was not long in adding the finishing touches, while Aunt Martha chatted constantly of bygone days when she was a young housewife.

Jack and Marian under her directions set the table with the best linen and made it very festive with greens and rosy apples. Robert thought he never would get that dinner carried in, Eleanor wondered what they would do with it all, and Aunt Martha radiated happiness. To crown it all, Jack passed his plate for a third helping and Aunt Martha fairly burst with pride at this compliment to "her" cooking.

They spent a happy hour before the fireplace popping corn for the young folks to take home, and Aunt Martha insisted upon them taking a bag of nuts and a basket of apples, and the afternoon passed too quickly. The time to say regretful good-byes came all too soon for all of them, leaving Aunt Martha alone with pleasant memories for days to come, and while Jack and Marian were soon lost to sight down the highway, Eleanor and Robert drove very slowly homeward in the early twilight.

Chapter XXV

"How about a cup of tea and toast and jelly?" asked Eleanor.

"And a fire in the grate," added Robert, in an easy way they had fallen into—a comradeship with no pretense.

"Time to think of Christmas now," said Eleanor, as they enjoyed the cozy warmth and food.

"I would like a tree and just everything this year. Last year was a sad one and I resolved not to let it ever happen again. Would you like to join us?"

"More than I can tell you, and I'd like to get the tree, and, with your permission, a gift for each. Let's go shopping tomorrow, or very soon. Life seems quite like living now. I've taken a family to provide for Christmas and perhaps you will help me with that."

There were dolls to be dressed for the church and a big one for her little friend down stairs, and Robert first aid in all the preparations.

The tree almost filled the room and chairs were piled high with ribboned gifts, and the kitchen had a wonderful smell of good things.

Such a happy day in contrast with last Christmas! Eleanor wondered if this were all a dream, or was the other just a bad dream and this the real? Such fun in opening gifts! Robert had chosen a smart traveling bag for each of the children, Marian's fitted in the daintiest of pearl and Jack's in very masculine monogrammed leather, and for Eleanor an exquisite French beaded evening bag with gold mountings and a gold piece inside for luck. Marian had monogrammed handkerchiefs for him, and Jack a huge box of everything any man could wish for in toilet articles, and Eleanor had selected a gorgeous hand mounted desk set, the first gifts he had received since his mother's death, and his unfeigned delight brought tears to all of them.

Marian set them to laughing again by deciding to hug him for her gift, and Robert hung on to her while he pretended to look for a bit of mis-deote. The children left early and Eleanor and Robert sat visiting in the firelight. They made a foraging trip to the kitchen and Robert made coffee and brought it to the table Eleanor had set near, and he knew in his heart that here was the only woman he would ever love, but lacked courage to speak lest he even lose her friendship, while Eleanor thought more than once how lonely it would be when he went home and wished he were going to stay.

She brought the bag he had given her and held it so that the firelight flashed on the jeweled frame and thanked him again, saying, "I shall always treasure it." And he wished again he had the courage to speak.

New Year's eve was to be Robert's treat and he had reserved places at one of the most select places to watch the festivities of saying good bye to the old year and greeting the new. Eleanor had decided on an extra gown for herself and Marian as the occasion demanded something quite different from their usual quiet gowns, and she would carry her new bag for luck.

She had never imagined any such revelry and gaiety, but perched the ridiculous little cap on her head the same as the others around her, and though she and Robert did not dance, Jack and Marian did, and they joined in the circle for "Auld Lang Syne" at midnight. By the time they had made the rounds of several places it was nearing morning and Eleanor insisted that they catch a bit of sleep and all have breakfast with her, a good omen for the coming year—not alone but with loved ones close.

There were weeks following when Robert complained that he did not have a chance to see her at all for the friends she had made in church work began to include her in social affairs and there were luncheons and teas, and she in turn must entertain small groups.

Chapter XXVI

While preparing lunch one day the telephone rang and a strange voice spoke:

"Is this Mrs. Eleanor Bates? I am Mrs. Warden Wilson and have met you quite frequently in church and you have always been so gracious I am going to ask a great favor."

"Oh, yes," Eleanor responded, "I remember you, and only hope I may be able to grant your request."

"I am not explaining in full now, but have invited quite a company for this afternoon to meet an old friend, a musician visiting here for a short time, and one of the ladies who was to serve has disappointed me. At this late hour would you consent to serve at one end of the table? Really I am so upset and it would be such a favor."

"Of course I will and think it lovely of you to ask me. What time do I come and what shall I wear? I am sorry you are so annoyed."

SHORT TERM LOANS OFFERED FARMERS

Made Available at Low Interest by County Association

Farmers interested in getting short term loans from a government agency may now do so without the usual red tape, according to Fred J. Beckman, secretary-treasurer of the Pontiac Production Credit Association, a farmers' co-operative non-profit organization.

Delays experienced in closing loans have been eliminated, Mr. Beckman declares. Farmers who have a good security can get loans from $50 to $500 and over in a very short time. Applications can be made at any time in Room 4, Post Office Building, Pontiac, Michigan. The rate of interest is five per cent per annum. There is an advance fee of $2.50 which goes for inspection of collateral.

Loans will be made for any agricultural purpose, buying of stock, feed, supplies, to pay bills, to make repairs, etc. The stock is owned by farmers, and all profits, if any, go to make a lower rate of interest. The Federal government has supplied the capital.
