COMMENT AND CRITICISM

As is the custom at this time of the year, we ask you to kindly note the expiration date printed after your name on the address label. We try to keep our subscriptions on a "paid in advance" basis for your benefit and ours. For your benefit because some of you do not like to have the paper continue after the expiration date. For your benefit also, because a paid in advance subscription list attracts the better class of advertisers, producing more revenue for the paper and allowing a better paper for your enjoyment. When one considers that most popular priced newspapers, of which ours is one, costs us more per copy than the selling price, you can realize the importance of advertising income in our balance sheet. We will gladly bill you later if that dollar is not handy right now. You can mail your subscription to us or leave the same at O'Dell's Drug Store.

We hear that the candidates are somewhat worried about the lack of interest shown by the voters and their seeming interest in whether Detroit wins the pennant or not this year. We have studied the question a little with this result. Considering the importance of selecting proper public officers for the coming years, we do not believe the voters are indifferent or that the more serious aspects of public life are being shelved by baseball, but they are thinking the matter over in the quiet of their homes. This is not just a plea for more advertising but consider this. Have you or many of your friends seen the Tigers play this year or is your baseball limited to the radio and the sport pages? With page after page devoted to the game what chance has a few columns about politics to grab any attention? Just a matter of keeping the attention of the public.

We hear so much about how fast we live today. Our forefathers took off six months to a year and traveled across the continent in a covered wagon. Then automobiles cut this time down to days and aeroplanes give one the privilege of eating breakfast in New York and dinner in San Francisco. Perhaps the same is true of vacations. Some take a month to rest for the coming year. Some take a week and see how far they can go in a fast motor car. And some like yours truly take the afternoon and visit the circus—laughing enough at the clowns to forget the troubles of the past year and lay up a supply of good humor to last till the "big top" goes up again next year. Nor do we wither at the scorn of those who detest the dirty, dusty, traveling amusement enterprises. We noticed a lot of you enjoying yourselves.

Things must be improving. When one considers the number of people who start their week-end trips on Thursday, Friday or Saturday they must be working part of the week to get the money to go tripping with. Incidentally their returning time is from 5 till 10 on Sunday evening—and what a long steady stream of traffic they provide.

Old Spinning-Wheel Again in Use

Mrs. William Jones Willing to Revive Old Art

After trying in vain for many, many months to obtain carded wool for her spinning-wheel, Mrs. William Jones of Miller Road is happy to let all her friends know that at last she has been able, through the kindness of Durand Ogden to get the wool and spin at her leisure.

This old wheel was one that was used many generations back in the Miller family and to-day Mrs. Jones is the proud possessor. She is one of a very few who remember how to spin, because only deft hands can do such intricate work. Mrs. Jones would welcome anyone who wishes to see her spin and she would greatly enjoy giving instructions to any who wish to learn. A spinning class would be an ideal thing for busy fingers.

Annual School Reunion An Event of Last Week

Clarence Phillips Appointed Historian

Last Saturday afternoon approximately one hundred former pupils, teachers, and school boards assembled on the grounds of the old school on North Main Street for their annual reunion.

Happy thoughts of days gone by and pleasant memories of school days seemed to deduct a few years from the age of each one present and all entered into the afternoon's program with enthusiasm. At noon a pot-luck luncheon was served. The menu was varied and the eats were plentiful. While no one suffered from overeating yet no one left the grounds hungry.

After the luncheon a program of this and that was enjoyed. The regular business was taken care of and at this time J. M. Munson of Ypsilanti, a former superintendent of the Clarkston School, suggested that a history of the school from the time it was built be compiled. Mr. Munson explained to the group that there was a great need for such information if they intended having these reunions each year and holding the interest of all the former pupils and teachers. Clarence Phillips was then appointed historian. The officers for 1935 were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Lillian Walter Lessiter; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Mildred Walter Beardslee; chairman of the menu committee, Miss Ada Scraec.

It was decided that the next reunion would be held the third Saturday in August, 1935.

The program of talks, music and readings was thoroughly enjoyed and each participant received a great ovation. Mrs. Beulah Jones, this year's president, gave a short talk and extended greetings to all present. Mrs. Charles Chamberlain, of Royal Oak, gave two readings which were very well received. It seems the folk in this vicinity never tire of hearing Mrs. Chamberlain and are always so happy to have her in their midst. A member from several different graduating classes said a few words, reminiscing a little and at the same time expressing their joy at being able to attend such a gathering. Mrs. Lillian Lessiter was spokesman for the first graduating class, that of 1887. Clarence Phillips, representing his graduating class, gave a short talk. Mrs. Ada Galligan, Pierce responded for the class of 1889 and Harry Barry of Detroit for the class of 1894; Mrs. Mabel Stadtmiller of the class of 1906 read a poem which was written by her young son. The community singing which was led by Mrs. E. D. Spooner of Waterford was entered into most heartily by the whole assembly and everybody around Clarkston was aware of the fact that the school reunion was taking place in spite of the excessive heat.

The second annual school reunion closed late in the afternoon with the full assurance that next year it will be bigger and better. There were many out of town visitors; former teachers and pupils who had not been in Clarkston for quite some time.

CLARKSTON BASEBALL FANS CRAZY OVER TIGERS

Excitement over the race in the American League is at fever heat, with the Detroit Tigers enjoying a 5 game lead over the New York Yankees and less than 40 games yet to be played. The standings on Thursday morning were: Detroit, won 77, lost 41; New York, won 72, lost 46. The Tigers went east last week and have won 6 out of 10 games on the seaboard, three from the Yankees and three from the Boston Red Sox, while New York has won but 6 out of 11, two from the Tigers, three from the St. Louis Browns and one from the Cleveland Indians. The Tigers will finish at home next month while the Yankees will play almost all of their games on foreign fields. If Detroit can keep its regular lineup intact for the balance of the season, there is little doubt but what they will be returned winners. And then will come the big classic, the World's Series, in which the National League representatives are almost certain to be the New York Giants.

CLARKSTON LOSES TO HIGHLAND PARK

Team Will Disband Due to Lack of Attendance

Clarkston Independents were defeated by Darling's Highland Park team by a score of 10 to 1, on Sunday. Clarkston had 1 run, 5 hits, 3 errors. Darling's gathered 10 runs, 10 hits, 1 error. Batteries were: Clarkston, Visgatis and Mervin, Darling's, Smith and Liddy.

Owing to lack of attendance and other conditions the team has decided to disband and wish to thank all persons who have contributed to their support this year.

It is the opinion of the News that Clarkston should have a base ball team, and that the team should be properly supported by the home people. Perhaps one of the best things for boosting a town is the baseball team. We feel that the team has made fine progress for its first season and trust that the next season will see another team. The News has had pleasure in working with the team on publicity and we wish to thank L. J. Chamberlain who has acted as baseball reporter this season.

Business Management

AT a time when business management and trade practices are under critical examination and much is being said of reform, it is well to consider what constitutes sound business management, what are the qualities which lead to success.
 Business management expresses certain qualities of thinking. Every business or trade policy, whether of local or far-reaching effect, is first formulated in thought before it can be given expression in the conduct of business affairs. It is essentially mental in origin and nature. The merchant, executive, or board of directors has in thought some method to pursue or object to attain. The policy or practice evolved is directly the product of the kind of thinking which he formulated it; hence the importance of carefully choosing the right mental qualities, thus making use of the power for good which they express. Instead of the unsatisfactory and unreliable qualities of narrow and selfish thinking.
 Honesty is plainly an essential quality in the councils of sound business management. If honesty is expressed, the business will be founded on a rock that can never be shaken under investigation. Honesty has nothing to hide and nothing to hide from. This quality of thought helps one to know what is the right thing to do, and when to do it. It does not change with the shifting winds of argument. It is respected by all right-thinking people, and it carries within itself the law of its own success. By contrast, dishonesty, even in a degree, is foolish and futile. "Provide things honest in the sight of all men," counseled Paul, who was well qualified to write on sound rules for business.
 Justice is another divinely derived quality which insures fair dealing with all, under all circumstances. It never misleads, and does not permit false impressions to go abroad. It takes into account the interest of all concerned and establishes for those who exercise it a permanent reputation for trustworthiness. Justice does not risk the future for an unfair temporary advantage, and avoids questionable alliances. It leads men to mind their own business, and mind it well, and to enjoy the fruits of their work. By contrast, injustice and greed are poor substitutes to trust with the management of any business.
 Obedience to law is another of the qualities of true wisdom. Much complaint is heard today of restrictive and regulatory legislation. Strict obedience to law, both moral and legislative, would unquestionably result in less need for legislation. In any event, obedience to law will make for a sound business management, while intentional disobedience is never a sign of wise management.

 It is in the thinking of those concerned with the right, thoroughness, peace, courtesy, constructive vision, courage, and so on, are combined with honesty, justice, and obedience to law, business management is certain to be in good hands. These qualities of thought carry the positive force of true wisdom. "Against such there is no law."
 Christ Jesus, while still young, was about his Father's business. The Master knew well that whatever form or organization it might have in human activity, true business is always the expression of God, Infinite Mind. He taught the ground work of sound business. He stressed love for God and man as the first requirement. He gave the rule that needs no further law or supplement. "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." He gave also the unfailing business forecast, based on that rule: "With the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."
 Christian Science is again teaching and demonstrating the divine rules of life which the Master laid down for the permanent good of mankind. Many thousands of men and women today are finding their lives enriched and blessed by the earnest study and application of this Science of Christ, or Truth. They are finding it applicable to every manner of problem.
 In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mary Baker Eddy has written (p. 128): "The term Science, properly understood, refers only to the laws of God and to His government of the universe, inclusive of man. From this it follows that business men and cultured scholars have found that Christian Science enhances their endurance and mental powers, enlarges their perception of character, gives them acuteness and comprehensiveness and an ability to exceed their ordinary capacity." Wherever it touches business, Christian Science broadens men's vision and reveals ways and means of attaining good by doing good—of attaining right results by doing right; and thus achieves the only real success which can ever withstand the buffetings of economic cycles. It teaches a strict observance of true law for it is only in accordance with the spiritual laws of God that anything truly worthy and enduring can be established and sustained.
 Eddy sounds the call to a new, yet old, dispensation among men who she says (ibid., p. vii): "The time for thinkers has come. Truth, independent of doctrines and time-honored systems, knocks at the portal of humanity."—The Christian Science Monitor.

MEMORY GONE, HEIR IS FOUND IN RAGS

Brazilian Police Pick Up Youth Lost Two Years.
 Rio de Janeiro.—Paulo Prado do Amaral, principal heir to the fortune of his grandmother, Donna Josina do Amaral, was found walking the streets of Sao Paulo. Missing for two years, he was famished, clad in rags and suffering from amnesia.
 Two weeks ago the young man was picked up by the Sao Paulo police as a vagrant. Soon after his release, he was recognized by a relative, who took him home. It was learned his memory was a blank.
 Donna Josina do Amaral, who controlled a fortune of more than $2,500,000, made a will in which she left the bulk of her estate to her grandson, Paulo Prado do Amaral, now about twenty-one years old.
 Other members of her family during her lifetime brought legal proceedings to set aside the will. While these were pending, notice of the death of Donna Josina do Amaral appeared in newspapers.
 At about the same time her grandson vanished. Police investigating his disappearance learned that the grandmother's death notice had been falsely published by her son, Mario do Amaral. Nearly a year later, on October 11, last, she was found in a closet of a residence in Rio de Janeiro, where apparently she had been held prisoner.
 Her death on November 20 complicated the police investigation and intensified the family dispute over the fortune. Her son, his wife and two servants were held for investigation. A host of relatives is contending for the estate.

WHY Vehicles in the United States Pass to the Right.

The Conestoga wagon, the freight-hauling vehicle of the early days, is responsible for the present custom of vehicles passing on the right in the United States, according to the bureau of public roads. Before the extensive use of the Conestoga wagon it was the custom to pass vehicles to the left, following the earlier English rule.
 In England in the days when men traveled armed on horseback, it was the custom to pass to the left so that the sword or pistol arm would be on the side of the man passed. Later, in travel by coach or wagon, the driver sat on the right side to give his right arm free play in wielding the whip and passing to the left he was better able to avoid entanglements with the wheels of passing vehicles. Traffic passes to the left to this day in England.
 The drivers of the Conestoga wagons rode the left wheel horse. Passing to the right was more convenient in spite of the fact that it was the custom to pass to the left, as in England. Drivers riding the "lazy board" of the Conestoga wagon—a board between the two left-side wheels that pulled out and could be ridden when driving from the side of the wagon—preferred passing traffic to the right, and traffic was passed on that side.
 The deep wagon ruts in the single-track roads made by the Conestoga wagon drivers were followed by other traffic. This explains why vehicles pass to the right in the United States.

Why Darwinian Doctrine May Have to Be Modified

It was Darwin who first pointed out the significance of color in nature. The insect called a "walking stick" is indistinguishable from the surrounding twigs, and certain butterflies look like leaves. Why? So that enemies will pass them by in blissful ignorance. If a color is particularly garish in an insect or a lower animal, it is supposed to have a frightening effect or to give warning of a vile taste. Gaudy petals are assumed to be signals to attract a pollen-bearing insect from another flower.
 Even one who is not a biologist must be struck by this anthropomorphism. In other words, Darwin assumed that the lower animals, including the insects, see the world as we see it. But is the assumption justified? Dr. Frank E. Lutz of the American Museum of Natural History has been making experiments which show conclusively that it is not. All of which makes one wonder if the whole Darwinian doctrine of mimicry and the purposefulness of color must not be modified.—New York Times.

Why Senate Has to Ratify

The Constitution provides for the appointment of executive officers by the President, "by and with advice and consent of the senate." Six appointees of the Presidents to their cabinets have been rejected by the senate: Roger B. Taney, appointed by President Jackson to be secretary of treasury; James M. Porter to be secretary of war, David Henshaw to be secretary of the navy and Caleb Cushing to be secretary of the treasury, all by President Tyler; Henry Stanbery to be attorney general by President Johnson, and Charles B. Warren to be attorney general by President Coolidge.

Fair Plans

"Great," said Governor Comstock when James B. Jones, president of the State Fair Association, showed him the plans for the 1934 Fair at Detroit, August 31 to September 9. "At a recent meeting Mr. Jones was given the support of prominent business men, radio executives and publishers."

Marian set out in high spirits and wrote many items in a little book on the way to the city and visited many shops she had never dared to go in before, for Robert had given her strict orders and a card to present and set figures that sent delightful little shivers up her spine.

"Funny thing to me," said Charlie, "he seemed to be in love with the mother and now he flops and is going to marry the girl."

"She's a lady, anyway, that girl, and she told me she would not have a thing changed in the misses' room and that's a good sign. Most young girls would have ordered it all done over at once, but she says, 'Don't change a thing, Mrs. Pearson, I love it!'"

And Robert and Marian kept merrily on with their plans, whispering, and in gay spirits, even if Robert's leg was worse than they thought at first.

Jack sent a great box of roses and was coming for Sunday and Marian and Mrs. Pearson arranged his room together and Mrs. Pearson displayed the linens and the stores about the house and Marian assured her that they would use some of them very soon and visited with her in a way that Mrs. Pearson would have been ready to die for the young misses, as she now called her to Charlie.

Sunday morning was an ideal spring day and Charlie and Jack and Marian went for a walk. The nurse made Eleanor comfortable in a wheel chair by the window and disappeared. Robert came limping slowly in with a large box under his arm and pulled his chair up very close and opened the box in Eleanor's lap.

"How beautiful!" was all she could say as she gazed at the contents.

"My mother's jewelry," he explained. "I thought you might like to see it. And they began to examine the various pieces.

He selected a cluster diamond ring and slipped it on her finger. "This was one of mother's favorites."

"I don't wonder at that. I never saw one so exquisite! And isn't this a beautiful chain?"

As she held it up in her fingers he slipped it over her head and looked for the bracelet that matched.

And there Marian and Jack found them on their return, and Marian, too, must see and try on some of the pieces.

Charlie did not feel right about the matter and told Mrs. Pearson so and she very calmly told him that Master Robert was right no matter what he decided to do or whom he was going to marry.

Robert made several telephone calls and had many business callers and Marian had announced to Mrs. Pearson that there would be company on Tuesday and a wedding, but a caterer would serve the supper as she and Charlie would be guests. All of which left poor Charlie and Mrs. Pearson more muddled than ever.

Eleanor looked very sweet and pretty in the wheel chair, with a soft blanket around her, and the quilted jacket she had purchased so long ago that lonely night at the church bazaar. Robert had always liked to see her slip it on as the blue seemed to bring out the blue of her eyes, and he too like Eleanor said it made him think of ladies of gentle birth who had been taught to sew a fine seam.

Marian had brought the little jacket back the first day and the nurse had thought it ideal for the injured shoulder.

Charlie had brought in his choicest hyacinth to brighten the room, the very one Eleanor was coming to see when the accident occurred, and Marian had suggested to him that some would look very pretty in the big room for the wedding on Tuesday, but warned him not to mention it to her mother as it was a surprise. And Charlie had fetched and carried palms and blooming plants from the greenhouse, ever anxious to please, and he and Marian had a delightful time arranging while Robert visited Eleanor in her room.

On Monday, while Marian was on one of her rush shopping trips down town, Charlie, with much hesitation, ventured to speak of a very delicate subject.

"You will be remembering, Master Robert, of a mistake you made in the old days, and while I'm sorry to be mentioning it, I would like to keep my word. You'll be remembering the fine necklace you threw in the fireplace in disgust and I picked it out and said, 'I'll save this for a fine girl you'll be marrying some day,' and I'd like to put it on Miss Marian's neck, with your permission. You remember you told me she was a thoroughbred and a finer young lady there never was, God bless her!"

"Why, Charlie, you old rascal, have you kept that piece of foolishness all these years? I was only a boy then and it did hurt and she sure played me right. Do as you like, old friend. Marian will appreciate it, coming from you, and then we'll forget it, Charlie."

Chapter XXX

Tuesday morning, and it would be hard to decide who was up first, Robert or Marian, for when the latter came running down stairs Robert was very carefully arranging a tiny white satin box in the center of a dainty corsage bouquet of pink rosebuds, lilies of the valley and tiny blue forget-me-nots, and he gave Marian a peep into the box before sending it in to Eleanor.

They had breakfast in the dining room and both were in high spirits, and left hand in hand to visit Eleanor. She was propped up in bed with the open box and a mystified look on her face, which turned rosy and smiling as Robert very daintily bent and kissed either cheek and saluted her with, "Good morning, dear, and does it suit?" referring to the ring she held in her hand. While Marian hugged her and said, "Time you were up. Can't stay in bed on your wedding day. Hair dressers and what not will be here and you'll have to look your best or I'll grab the prize."

Her face alternately flushed and paled as she looked at the diamond ring and plain circle together in the bouquet and Robert's happy face and the past days flashed by in a second of time. "Marian, what are you talking about and what are you two plotting?" But Robert had his arms about her and his head was saying: "You'll forgive us, won't you, dear? I just couldn't let you go away again." And Marian was talking at the same time and saying: "Not a thing to do, mother, but look sweet and happy and just you wait until you see the lovely things I've got for you."

Eleanor wiped away happy tears as she said: "Who could resist you two?" adding after a minute's pause, "even if I wanted to." So she was kissed and hugged again and Marian was away and back with an arm full of boxes and away again after more, this time warning Robert that he could not have even a tiny peek at the wedding gown till the proper moment.

Eleanor suddenly remembered she could not walk, and how could she get a wedding dress on over that bandaged shoulder, and asked Marian as much.

"All arranged beautifully by your daughter, who would be very envious of any one else but you."

Jack joined them at luncheon in Eleanor's room and the beauty operator had made the lovely hair and fair face more lovely still, if such were possible.

Ask Farmers to Help On Forage Inventory

Michigan farmers will be asked to help in making a survey of the available livestock feed by filling out and returning a report form on the subject mailed from the office of Verne H. Church, State agricultural statistician.

This inventory of feed resources is being conducted over the whole United States and the information found will be used to make future plans for drought relief work. The feed records from each state will be sent to Washington and will be compiled there.

Michigan is concerned in this matter as many of the counties are listed in the secondary drought area and assistance from the federal government will be partially based on this survey of feed resources. The report blanks will be mailed and in the farmers' hands immediately. Unless the farmers cooperate in filling them out and returning them, relief measures here will have to be conducted blindly. Farmers who have a surplus of feed are as much concerned in filling out the blanks as those who do not have enough feed. The government wants to know where there is excess forage which can be bought and used in areas where there is too little.

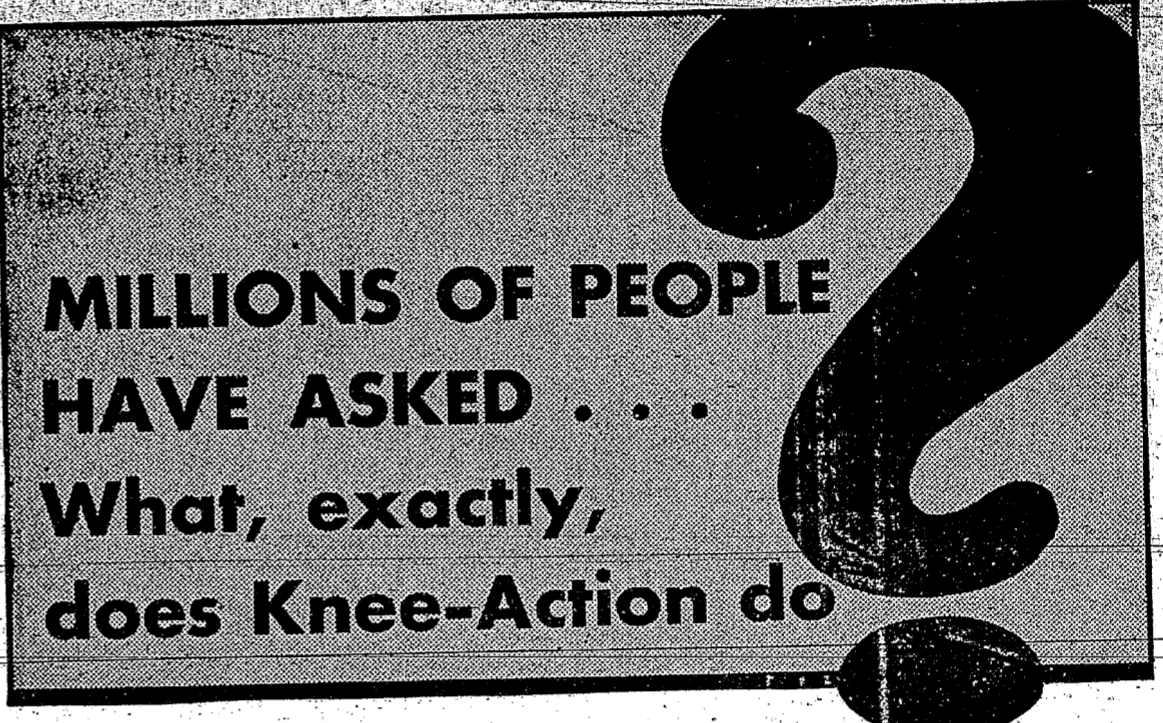

HOLIDAY FALLS ON ELECTION DAY

The state law makes no provision for a religious festival which this year falls on September 11.

In Michigan the sun sets and the holiday ceases at 9:49 p. m. and this will allow those who take part in the holiday one hour and 11 minutes to arrive at the voting booths before they close. The state election law declares that all those waiting in line outside the voting booth at the prescribed closing hour shall be allowed to vote.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

"WE NEED OUR TELEPHONE NOW MORE THAN EVER"

"Now that baby is here, our telephone is more of a necessity than ever. I have to do most of my shopping by telephone. And it enables me to keep in easy touch with Dad and Mother, with Frank at the office, and with all our friends."

"But the important thing to me is the assurance that we can telephone the doctor, firemen, police or other aid instantly, day or night, should anything happen."

Telephone protection and convenience can be had for only a few cents a day. To place an order, call, write or visit the Telephone Business Office. Installation will be made promptly.
