COMMUNITY TANK IS RECOMMENDED

To Sheep Raisers for Dipping Flocks in Mass

Michigan sheep raisers have found that by building a community tank for dipping flocks internal and external parasites of sheep can be controlled at very low cost, according to the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College.
 It has been possible to treat as many as 1,800 sheep in one day by combining the efforts of the flock owners and by using the tank and sorting pens designed by agricultural engineers at the College. The sheep are drenched for internal parasites while they are in the pens waiting to be dipped. Both treatments cost less than two cents per head.
 Improvements obtained from the treatments include better fleeces and higher wool prices and more rapid gains in weight of the animals. Flocks infested with mites or lice have ragged fleeces and the animals themselves are kept in poor flesh by the annoyance of the insects. Internal parasites are a direct drain upon the vitality of animals. Lowering vitality makes the animals susceptible to diseases.
 The dipping tanks are built from removable forms, the plans for which are furnished by the College agricultural engineering department. Construction costs are low and the tanks last many years. Most of the materials needed except the concrete and hardware are present on the farms where the tanks are built.
 Specialists from the animal husbandry department have supervised the treatments of flocks where large numbers of sheep have been run through the tanks. The procedure is not complicated and can be done satisfactorily by any careful sheepmen. County agricultural agents can furnish directions for both drenching and dipping sheep.

For Homemakers

A bargain is something which offers exceptional value for its price, and according to this definition some of the organs are among the best bargains in meat, suggest home economics institution management specialists at Michigan State College.
 The various meat organs available on the market make up quite a lengthy list, including liver, kidney, heart, tongue, brains, sweetbreads, and tripe. Some of these are unusually good buys, giving a lot of minerals and vitamins.
 Liver stands at the head of the list and should be included in the regular family menu. It is especially good for the growing youngsters who need to manufacture red blood cells. Liver contains a large amount of iron and copper, as well as an anti-anemic and a growth-promoting principle.
 Liver of different meat-animals can be used as well as just calf liver, which at the present time is kept out of the bargain class by its high price. Beef or pork or lamb liver generally cost much less and are just as valuable for building red blood cells.
 The chief point to remember about cooking liver is not to overdo it. Use a moderate temperature and cook only long enough to change the color. It is already tender and too long cooking will result in dark, leathery liver.
 For the sake of flavor, lamb and pork liver should be scalded before used. The cooking method used should be adapted to the age of the liver.

 Kidneys are almost as valuable as liver for building red blood cells. They contain a good deal of iron and some copper, and three vitamins, A, B, and G. The rules for cooking kidneys are practically the same as for liver.
 Heart is another bargain, being high in iron and low in cost. Heart is less tender than liver or kidney and the best way to cook it for tenderness is to brown it in fat and then cook with water in a covered dish in a very-moderate oven.

CREDIT ASSN. IS ACTIVE IN COUNTY

Farmers Are Using Means to Obtain Production Loans

Fred J. Beckman, secretary-treasurer, reports increased business in the Pontiac Production Credit Association. Over 600 applications totaling approximately $500,000.00 have been handled through the local association.
 The capital stock of the Pontiac Production Credit Association has been increased to $160,000.00 in order to provide ample credit for the farmers of this community, according to Mr. Beckman.
 The Association makes loans in Oakland, Macomb and Livingston counties to farmers who have personal security to offer and some ability to repay.
 Contrary to the general opinion, the Production Credit Associations were not set up as emergency organizations but as permanent organizations to provide credit to eligible farmers at a low rate of interest which is 5% per annum.
 Mr. Beckman states that loans are made for any agricultural purpose including the purchase of livestock, machinery, fences, feed, seed, the refinancing of debts incurred for agricultural purposes and for repairing or erecting new farm buildings. Many farmers are taking advantage by paying cash for their purchases.
 Owing to the necessary procedure in closing loans, farmers should anticipate their requirements and make application in advance of their needs.
 Further information may be obtained by calling at the office located in the Post Office Bldg., Pontiac.
 The golf season was officially opened at Holly Hills last Saturday, and there was some play there on that day and again on Sunday, but weather conditions were not ideal.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE IS COMING AGAIN

Movie Star to Be Seen Here in "The Little Colonel"

That bundle of screen magic, five-year-old Shirley Temple, will soon be thrilling and delighting her army of local movie fans in a new picture. Reports from other cities indicate that in "The Little Colonel", Fox Film has given her an ideal vehicle for her acting, singing and dancing talents. It will come to the Holly Theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

She co-stars with Lionel Barrymore in this popular story of Southern prejudices, adapted from Annie Fellows Johnston's series of "Little Colonel" stories, which were the favorite reading of millions a generation back, and whose appeal is perennial.

"The Little Colonel" is the story of a Kentucky belle who marries a Yankee, against her father's wishes, and is promptly disowned by a proud old aristocrat, who is still living in the days of the Civil War. Barrymore is the obdurate Southern aristocrat. Shirley plays the cameo colonel whose dancing feet, smiling eyes and honey-colored curls make a withering attack on the heart of the stern rebel.

HELPING FARMERS OUT BENEFITS SPORTSMEN

It was a common custom in Michigan a few years ago for a farmer to "work out" his taxes on the township or county road.

A Detroit sportsmen's organization borrowed the idea by "working out" the right to hunt.

Like most Michigan sportsmen, the club members were having difficulty in finding a place to enjoy their sport. They decided to do something about it. Small groups visited farmers last spring with the proposal that they were willing to give a specified number of hours of work on the farm during planting and harvesting time for the privilege of hunting on the farm during the fall. Every farmer readily consented.

When the small game season opened last fall every member of the sportsmen's club had a good place to hunt—and where he had earned the privilege.

The plan worked so successfully that the organization is again soliciting farmers for jobs.

The Heart of the Community

THE yellow moon drops below the horizon. One by one the houses darken as silence settles over the countryside. It is a time of rest, of slumber.

But there is one building where rest does not enter, where the windows never darken; for the work of the telephone exchange, like the work of a sleeper's heart, must go on by night no less than by day.

Here trained operators, alert and skilful, sit at the junction of many wires. Here are linked all who would speak across the miles of darkness. . . . Somewhere an anxious mother is wakened by a childish, fretful cry. . . . Somewhere furtive footsteps betray the presence of a prowler. . . . Somewhere, in a cellar, smouldering rags send warning smoke drifting through a home. . . . At some lonely crossing two cars crash and overturn.

In these emergencies, help is as close as the nearest telephone. Over a waiting wire speeds the call for aid—for the doctor, police, fire department, an ambulance. If that wire were not waiting, there would be heavier penalties of grief and loss; help, at times, would arrive after help had ceased to be of use. Faithfully rendering a vital service both night and day, the telephone exchange plays a part which makes it, in a sense that is very real, the heart of the community.

Science Gives Back Lost Voice and Job

His voice gone after an operation, and with it his job, John Schmidt got both back by means of the Bell System's artificial larynx. Photo shows him using the device.

John Schmidt's voice has been restored to him by science, after four years of absolute silence, and with it has come back to him also the job which he lost when he lost his power of speech.

Four years ago Mr. Schmidt, who lives in Streator, Ill., was forced to undergo a throat operation for the removal of his larynx, in which the vocal cords are located. When it was over, he could not utter a sound. Still comparatively young and active, Mr. Schmidt found this a grievous affliction.

Although unable to carry on his accustomed work, he was given another job by his employers. His handicap proved too great, however, and they finally notified him that he would have to go.

Then Mr. Schmidt heard of the artificial larynx developed at the Bell Telephone Laboratories and sold at cost by the Bell Telephone System to persons afflicted as he is. Coming to the Chicago office of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company, he tried out the device, and was delighted to find that he could at once pronounce several words. He took a set back to Streator with him that night, and soon became so proficient that he was called upon to give a demonstration of it before a medical meeting.

His employers have been glad to be able to give him back his old job. "If I knew that I could not get another artificial larynx, I would not take $10,000 for my set of equipment," said Mr. Schmidt not long ago.

BANK BANDITS FLEE AS OPERATOR ROUSES TOWN

When a bandit gang took possession of the village of Cambria, Wis., one day recently, terrorizing citizens and attempting to blow open a bank safe, their efforts were thwarted by Miss Erna Rousch, telephone operator in the town.

Miss Rousch heard the explosions. She then found that all telephone wires had been cut, and from the window of the telephone office she saw a man with a shot gun in front of the bank. So she operated the fire siren, which is controlled from the switchboard, thus assembling scores of citizens in the main street of the village.

The citizens were met by gun fire as two more charges of nitroglycerin rocked the bank building. The bandits became frightened by the assembled crowd, however, and fled in an automobile before obtaining any cash, although they were successful in blasting away the outer door of the bank vault.
