Man Drowned Sunday COMMENT AND CRITICISM

We are reliably informed that i was not a gold rush that enticed people to the Northern part of Michigan, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. It was just the opportunity to enjoy three days of a mid-summer vacation. Better times, a better and longer weekend trip, the fact that everyone outboard motor boat. Handicap Pheasants

A possibility that the ring-necked pheasant crop in lower Michigan will be retarded or impaired by the heavy spring rains and flood waters is seen by Dr. Glenn W. Bradt, farmland-game specialist of the department of conservation.

Bradt points out that precipitation Auxiliary of the American in the Lansing area alone is more Legion will have a pionic at Williams than five inches above the average so far this year. In the United States the development of improved roads for automobiles has been a notable achievement. In the highway systems of the several states, the total mileage of improved roads is about 325,000. The voice highways-the voiceways for the nation's telephonesare not broad, hard-surfaced cement, asphalt and macadam roads, but threads of copper wire. On poles and in cables overhead, and in cables underground, there are 87,000,000 miles of these voice highways in the United States. Unlike the 325,000 miles of automobile highways out in the open, about 92 per cent of the voice highways are inside of lead cable sheaths. Furthermore, about twothirds of the voice highway mileage is in cables in conduit underground. The open highways of the nation add greatly to the mobility of life by doing their share in shortening time and distance. The copper voice highways, along which the electrical waves bear the spoken word with the speed of light, outnumber them in miles by about 276 to one.

HAY HARVEST NOW IS IN FULL SWING

Wet weather during the weeks that Michigan is admiring one of the best Mrs. William Hunt spent the week hay growths in years is stimulating use of the new idea of filling silos with good quality green hay.

In a survey made by staff members at Michigan State College, the hay crop, especially from alfalfa and sweet clover offers an excellent yield, but much of it is lodged and stemmy and hard to cure even if the weather for the next two weeks turns dry.

The remedy is to place the first cutting in the silo, says H. C. Rather, head of the farm crops department, and J. G. Hays, extension dairyman at the College.

One of the drawbacks to making silage from hay is that the material drates that will ferment and prevent spoilage. Experimentation at Michigan State College and at other state colleges offers a solution. Add some sweetening.

Forty to sixty pounds of molasses to each ton of silage will add the necessary carbohydrates. The molasses usually is mixed with an equal volume of water so that it will run easier and mix with the cut feed.

Cutters should have sharp knives and should be set to cut the hay in half inch lengths or even a little Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Girst and shorter. The molasses is mixed with ments prove this is a more "messy' job. If molasses is not available, 20 pounds of sugar to a ton will do the same job, but costs a little more.

According to Miss Julia Tear, assistant professor in textiles at Michigan State College, neekbands ought not to shrink at all. Even sleeves after they are washed and ironed a few times should not shrink up more than a quarter inch in length.

In the division of trade standards of the federal bureau of standards, the following minimum measurements have been recommended to manufacturers of men's shirts:

The collarband ought to be stamped for size. For a size 15 shirt the circumference of the chest ought to be 46 inches. The front should have a length of 33 inches and the back should be the same length. Armholes ought to be 201/2 inches around and sleeve widths at the middle of the sleeve ought to be 16½ inches around. One recommendation may not be so satisfactory, especially if a shirt is being put on in a hurry. That is for seven pearl buttons, but the idea of stitching them on four ways would seem a good one. It's those buttons that roll off on the floor that increase the size of headaches. To top off rec ommendations is the one that the cloth should have a tensile strength of 75 pounds, the pull necessary to break a strip an inch wide. That's for the warp, as the filling need have a

This three-dimensional miniature display in the Museum of the City of New York, built to scale and correct in every detail, depicts a group of Important citizens gathered in the Hotel St. Denis in New York City in the Spring of 1877 to hear Alexander Graham Bell lociure on and demon strate his recently invented telephone-the first introduction of that instrument in New York, where more than 1,500,000 are now in use.

munications exhibit of the Museum of the City of New York is a miniature three-dimensional group commemorating an important event which took place just 60 years ago. Accurate in scale, complete in detail, and authentic in the setting it recreates, this tiny "still life" represents Alexander Graham Bell's original introduction of the telephone in New York City.

First Telephone in New York

The date of this occurrence was May 11, 1877. The scene which the miniature reproduces so faithfully is a gathering of distinguished citizens in a "gentlemen's parlor' in the Hotel St. Denis, then one of New York's best hostelries, located at Broadway and Eleventh Street. Among the group were President Barnard of Columbia College, Professor Peet of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum and other important figures They had met to hear Mr. Bell describe and demonstrate, for the first time in New York, his speaking tele phone.

Lectures Roused Interest in Invention

This lecture was one of a series which Mr. Bell gave in the Spring of 1877, as a result of the interest in the telephone among scientists, educators and others following its successful demonstration at the Cen-tennial Exposition in Philadelphia in the Summer of 1876. These lec-tures served not only to demonstrate the practicability of the telephone but to supply the inventor with some immediate and welcome cash return from his epochal invention.

Wires Carried Cornet Solo

Reporting the gathering in the St. Denis, New York newspapers next Other displays in the Communica-day recorded that Mr. Bell-had tions Exhibit show the development planned to demonstrate the tele of the mall service, the telegraph, phone simply by stringing a wire radio, and other means of communibetween two rooms in the hotel, but I cation.

Among the displays in the com- | when he saw the size and importance of his audience, he decided something more spectacular was in order. He therefore sent an assistant to Brooklyn, where he located a cornet player. The group in the hotel therefore heard "The Last Rese of Summer" as a cornet solo, a song. "Hold the Fort," and the voice of the assistant from Brooklyn through the box telephone on the table.

Phone Was Early Box Type

The box telephone, the first type known to New York, is clearly shown in the miniature display. Beside it are pliers, screwdriver, and hammer, no doubt the tools Mr., Bell used to connect the wires which disappear over the transom, presumably on their way to Brooklyn. Of the figures shown, all correctly turned out in 19th Century style, some are listening to Mr. Bell, one is sketching him, others are bending over the table to examine the miraculous box which transports speech and music from a distance, and one is pointing his ear trumpet to catch every sound.

A Typical Interior of the '70s

The room in which they have met is carpeted in red and green, deep red velvet window draperies reach the floor, the glass curtains are of lace, and on the green walls are pictures of George Washington and a gallery in the Louvre. The chairs and sofa are upholstered in green plush, and a gas chandelier illuminates the room. It is a typical ele-gant interior of the 1870's. By no means all the Museum's.

communication exhibits are miniatures, Starting with one of the box telephones, it traces the develop-ment of the service, by photographs and by examples of actual equipment, through the years to the modern long distance switchboard. Other displays in the Communica-

"In the grand finale, Blinky was matched against the city champion, an Allen round-head, and I bet all I could beg, borrow or steal at odds of 5 to 1. The odds were easy to get, for word was passed to the city slickers that poor old Blinky was a one-eved cock. guess you know who spread the report. "Blinky never showed better pitmanship, Wherever the round-head struck my pride sideslipped and put his glass eye in front of the gaffs. After that the round-head's needles were too dull to mend a pair of openwork stockings and the match was in the bag.'
