"Permitting other than wife to use fishing license", illegal possession of 1,200 pounds of live catfish, possessing a fawn without a permit, spearing frogs with artificial light, operatng a motorboat in a reckless manner, and carelessly setting fire, destroying another's property, were some of the 457 transgressions of Michigan conservation laws last month, subsequently reviewed in the courts.

Conservation officers making the arrests lost not a single case. One case was dismissed, one was carried to circuit court, six were adjourned and six offenders were put on probation. In the other 443 cases more than 300 days of jail sentences and more than $5,500 in fines and costs were assessed.

Most common breach of the conservation laws in June was fishing without a license, which accounted for 125 of the cases.

Ortonville

In 1917 it again became necessary to enlarge the school. The frame school was then moved to its present location and used as a warehouse. The present brick structure is the two enlargements which were made.

At the time of the World War. young men of Ortonville bravely enlisted. Among them was James Leece, cashier of the State Bank at that time. William Narrin, who was then local postmaster, assumed the position of cashier. Later Leece again took over the duties.

The streets of Ortonville were paved in 1921. Nine years later, in 1930, M-15 was paved.

1934 was a big year for the Ortonville populace. A homecoming in the summer attracted several former residents and ontsiders. Another thing to be remembered is the severe windstorm that swept through Oakland County at that time.

Now in 1940, ninety-two years after the founding of Ortonville, we have a population of approximately 700 in Ortonville and vicinity.

The D. U. R. service has long been discontinued and a bus service added.

Our business places include: a restaurant, hotel, shoe repair, post office, hardware, 3 grocery stores, barber shop, feed store, recreation hall, beauty shop, bakery shop, funeral chapel, 2 doctors, machine shop, 6 gasoline stations and three garages.

Dr. M. J. Uloth, who came to Ortonville in the late 90's remains in active practice here.

The two oldest structures in Ortonville are the mill and the house owued by Leslie Saunders. The latter was the house built by Thomas Tripp in Both churches are active and have outstanding young people's organizations. Rev. Andrew Pratt is pastor of the Baptist church and Rev. Harold Pontiac. Dakin pastor of the Methodist church.

The school student body numbers over two hundred and graduating classes for the past six or seven years have numbered from twelve to twenty graduates. There are now nine teachers in the high school faculty as compared to the one or two at the earlier schools.

Reuben Wiels is now President of the village. Mrs. Harry Oliver performs the duties as clerk and Mrs. Lillian Allen those of treasurer.

Nelson Smith is president of the Shipper's association and H. A. Profrock is vice president and manager.

The present cemetery association is headed by William McCauley. Homer Croup is secretary and Frank Brigham treasurer.

Favorite resorts near Ortonville include: Bald Eagle Lake, Big Fish Lake and Lake Louise. The most popular of these is Bald Eagle, named because of a family of Eagles, which had its home on an island in the lake. In former days the Indians frequented it because of the good fishing there. At present it is a settlement of its own. Approximately 50 cotrict camp afford am ple opportunities for a summer vacation for city dwellers and tourists. Gasoline stations, an inn, grocery store, garage and wonderful beach make up the settlement.

Another spot for tourists and picnickers is the Ortonville State Park, located approximately two miles north of the village. Its rolling wooded hills make it a place of beauty. It has good picnic facilities, a club house and playground.

Thus ends the history of the village of Ortonville, founded by Amos Orton in the early 19th century. >

Lemonade is still just about the most effective "thirst allayer" on a summer day when the thermometer soars and everyone gasps for a cooling drink. Today, however, no one would dream of boiling the lemon juice according to Chinese custom. Freshly extracted juice directly from the fruit is the first requirement for good lemonade. The longer it stands, the less flavor and health content it has.

Nothing could be purer than the juice in citrus fruits, which is ideal replacement for the water the body loses in perspiration when the sun's rays are over-active. Food authorities recom-mend fresh fruit juice beverages first as cooling drinks, for they actually mitigate the effects of heat.

When you drink a big glass of lemonade, you really do cool off, research workers have found. Exposure to high temperatures may cause as much as 50 per cent loss in vitamin C from the body tissue. For replacement, nothing is better than citrus fruits, most abun dant in vitamin C. Lowered vitamin C reserves go hand in hand with "that tired feeling," so keep up your lemonade intake!

For a cool, old-fashioned lemonade that will hit the spot, remember three rules. Use fresh lemon juice and plenty of it. Use ice, and more ice. Don't make it too sweet-it's more refreshing a bit on the lemony side. To sweeten, try honey or sugar and water syrup to get the professional touch.

For Homemakers

If your family is patient enough to try eating results of cooking experiments, then conduct a little culinary research by cooking such things as cucumbers and radishes and vegetable soybeans.

But, warn members of the home economics extension staff at Michigan State College, if the family objects to experiments and revolts against anything but good old standby foods, then the following suggestions may better be tossed out the window:

Unusual, for instance, is to take some of the garden surplus of radishes, try cooking and serving with a milk or cream sauce, or serve tender green onions on toast for something different in midsummer.

Or if the heat affects a cook to the extreme, here is another adventure troit Sunday Times, tells of efforts to that may surprise the dinner table occupants. This consists of fried, boiled or baked cucumbers. One experimenter suggests paring the cucumbers, cutting in half lengthwise and stuffing with tomatoes before baking.

Before the stuffing is put in, the boatlike halves are scraped to remove the center pulp and the shells then are parboiled for about 10 minutes. Cook some chopped onion and pars-

Protection at Last

After waiting 158 years Congress protecting the American bald eagle, the bird whose figure stands on the Great Seal of the United States. An authority on eagles, Representative Charles R. Clason of Massachusetts, sponsored the legislation. Representative Clason felt that something should be done by the federal government to supplement the laws which have been passed by more than forty of the states to protect this bird from extinction. A fine of $500 and six months imprisonment is the penalty for molesting the eagle.

The choice of a symbol to represent the new nation after the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776 was slow and rather difficult. Three times Congress appointed committees to choose a design for such a seal. The first committee consisted of "Dr. Franklin, Mr. J. Adams and Mr. Jefferson." They could not agree on a design because each one had a different idea. Franklin wanted Moses shown drowning Pharoah in the Red Sea; Jefferson wished to show Moses leading the Children of Israel through the wilderness while John Adams wanted Hercules between Virtue and Sloth. None of these plans pleased Congress and the report was "laid on the table."

A second committee appointed the following year fared no better. In 1780 Francis Hopkinson suggested a design of 13 stripes and 13 stars with some allegorical figures. This met with congressional approval until the cost was discovered and again the idea was dropped. Two years later another committee consulted with the artist William Barton, who suggested that the American bald eagle be used but when he read his report to Congress he left out the word bald.

Franklin, who was in France at the time, was dissapointed at the choice and even went so far as to say that the American eagle was a "lousy bird" and he thought the tur-
