An easy way to SAVE COAL—

... turn out every other light!

If you operate a business establishment using electric lights for outdoor display, here is a simple and practical way to conserve electricity. The plan is already being followed by some users of electric signs, theater marquees, show windows, etc.

The Government asks you to save electricity in every way possible, to conserve fuel, transportation, manpower and other critical resources. Even though electricity is not rationed and there is no shortage in this area, SAVE voluntarily wherever you can, as much as you can.

Our Boys and Girls In The Service

(Continued from page one) inside that you ate breakfast with— or having three ships return out of the six or eight you saw off, and reading the story of those missing ships in the faces of the lucky ones who got back? You had breakfast with those lads, too, remember? just a few hours ago—and now they're a smear of blood and bone and flesh over there somewhere. And it takes a week to fully realize that they are gone—that they won't suddenly pop up at the mess-table, or swing into your room for a drink of wine and a minute's bull-session. Not that it slows up the lucky ones—they're back the next day over those targets, bombing and shooting our way to victory. You can't beat these boys—they're the best—and every American should feel his heart and head swell as he reads of what they're doing. It's not that they can't be beaten; they just never heard of defeat—it isn't in the American soldier's vocabulary—they won't be beaten.

So maybe you can get an idea of why we're amused and amazed at the stories of sacrifice on the home front. But don't you worry—at the same time we know you're back of us and doing your best. If we weren't sure of it, we would not have come over here in the first place and we certainly wouldn't be able to stay and fight and win. You're doing it over there, so keep it up, and we'll clean this mess up and come home. Only—we've got boys in this squadron with seven and eight decorations, for bravery and everything else, who never would think of wearing them plastered on their chests to show the world how good they are.

I received all the packages in good order, especially one full of comic books—those kids! A whole building full of pilots, bombardiers, etc., read those comics! Reading material really gets around over here. Also received a most welcome package from the Service Mothers' Club. I wish you would convey my sincere appreciation to them for their kind thoughtfulness. As for yours, they were grand, Mother, especially the nuts—delicacies are rare here.

We are very comfortable in our present camp, at least comparatively. There is almost no danger here now, except for my gasoline stove. It blows up quite regularly once a week, but I almost nonchalantly douse it with a fire extinguisher, and the only harm done is to the wall. Two more fires and I'm forced to rebuild my wall—it's almost burned through. Phil is fortunate in his laundry troubles—until we moved to Italy we never had any water to wash clothes with and rarely enough to wash faces. I'm still washing red dust out of my neck. Please send Phil's address if you haven't already—my book was destroyed in one of the fires. I'll write as often as possible. I think some of my letters have not reached you judging from the dates.

You won't get 'em soon after the war either. The automobiles of the future will be sturdy, cheap, and good to look at, but scientists forecast they won't be those fantastic dreams most people expect. Read what Robert Potter, Science Editor, has to say on this controversial subject in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next week's Sunday Chicago Herald-American.
