Storage of garden vegetables is perhaps the easiest and least expensive of all methods of food preservation. The amount of each and of vegetable to be stored will depend upon the family's taste and the amount of canning done. Carrots, beets, parsnips, salsify, rutabaga and turnips must be stored in a cool place and kept very moist. They are usually stored in sand or in leaves so that humid- State of Michigan, Furthermore, ty can be maintained.

Potatoes, cabbage, cauliflower, elery need not be stored in sand or leaves as conditions in the average basement are suitable for good storage.

Apples and pears keep better f they are wrapped before placing in storage. Cabbage should be pulled rather than cut for storage. Then replant the roots in sand. Onions should be pulled for storage when the tops have dried. Then spread out in a well ventilated place to cure for about ten days before being placed in storage. The attic or a cool, dry room in the basement is best for onion storage. Pumpkins and squash require a dry, warm storage and should be placed on shelves so that they don't touch each other.

U. S. Department of Agriculture scientists have found that carrots in storage increased in vitamin content. Carrots tested after 30 weeks of storage under cool, moist conditions showed a higher content of carotene, the basic material of vitamin A, than was present in those carrots before the storage period started. The removal of tops immediately after harvest further preserves the food value in the root.

Congressman Dondero's announcement followed passage by Congress of a House and Senate Joint Resolution authorizing appropriations totaling $133,000,000 over the next 15 years for reforestation work by the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture. The bill provided also total appropriations of $40,750,000 over the same period for revegetation of the nation's grazing lands. This measure failed entirely to provide for federal-state co-operation.

When the joint resolution came up in the House a few days ago, Dondero spoke in support of it, with the reservation that he would later introduce his own cooperative measure.

"Of the 16,000,000 acres of cutover lands in the United States" Dondero told his colleagues, "more than 20 per cent are located in the of the 1,600 billion board feet of timber now standing in this country, approximately 18,500,000 feet are cut and marketed each year. Farmers who have especially large corn crops this year should take special interest in temporary storage. If temporary cribs are too small so that air cannot circulate freely, moldy corn will cause losses. Plans are available from the Extension Office in Pontiac for temporary storage units.

Next week, October 9 to 15, inclusive, is National Fire Prevention Week. This is a week that everyone should check over their heating units, chimneys and make sure that they have no hazards. Fire is a disaster which should not be treated lightly, Last yearover one hundred million dollars worth of property was destroyed on farms in the U. S.

Cookie Faces

Plump, spicy molasses cookies with raisin faces are popular dessert for children's parties, as well as a good after-school snack.

Children love to raid a cookie jar, and how delighted they'll be to discover chewy molasses cookies with raisin faces. These cookies make homey desserts, good with smooth green apple sauce' or other fruit

Both molasses and enriched flour are good sources of food iron, so cookie faces are nutritious sweets.

The cookie faces in the picture are made with raisins. Currants, gum drops, and bits of citron or candied orange peel may also be used.

Tuck a few of these easily made drop cookies into the lunchbox so cookie faces are nutritious sweets: for their rich full flavor. These cookies are packable for shipping and keep remarkably well.

COOKIE FACES

21/2 cups sifted enriched flour teaspoon soda teaspoon salt teaspoon gin

Sift together flour, soda, salt and spices. Cream together shortening and sugar until light and fluffy. Combine vinegar, molasses and sour milk. Add flour mixture to creamed mixture alternately with liquid. Drop by teaspoonfuls on greased cookie sheet. Use currents or raisins for "faces." Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 10 to 15 minutes. Makes about six dozen small cookies.
