HINTS ON TREE CARE OFFERED BY U-M LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

In late summer and early fall a weakness may begin to show up in trees because of the effects of growth, lack of proper food in the soil, and damage caused by insects or disease. Right now is, therefore, a good time to take a close look at your trees, suggests Harlow O. Whittemore, professor of landscape architecture at the University of Michigan.

Many persons don't realize that trees draw a very large amount of water from the soil, especially those with luxuriant foliage. A very satisfactory method of watering deep tree roots is to raise a rim of soil around the tree out about as far as the branches go, forming a basin which should be filled with water perhaps two or three times a week.

On sloping ground this won't work, Professor Whittemore says, so it is recommended that drain tiles three inches by twelve inches be set vertically in the ground with the top just at the surface so as not to interfere with moving the lawn. These should be set about four or five inches apart under the trees and filled with water down into the ground where the tree roots can get it.

During dry weather these should be filled with water about twice a week. At the same time, you may feed the tree by dropping a handful of "10-10-10" (nitrate-phosphate-potash) fertilizer into the hole about once every 2 months at the time you water the trees.

Another method of tree feeding is by means of holes made to a depth of about twelve inches and then a cupful or two of chemical fertilizer funneled into each hole and hole refilled. This treatment will last for as long as ten years but is recommended about every five years.

Still another method is the use of a water auger by which a pipe with water pressure is forced down into the soil, the water forming its own hole. Attached to the pipe is a jar with soluble chemical which dissolves into the water which goes into the ground so that the tree is fertilized with a chemical solution for as much as three feet deep into the ground.

Professor Whittemore says another treatment is a combination with the organic method. It consists of working a compost of decayed tree leaves into the ground by spading. In this case, some chemical fertilizer should be worked in with the compost. This method has the advantage of improving the soil as to texture, the water-retaining capacity, and the action of beneficial bacteria.

In particularly dry climates where long periods of rainless weather are experienced, tree leaves and compost can be laid directly on the ground as a mulch to hold moisture. But this must be accompanied by watering in one of the several ways mentioned.

When planting trees in such regions, or even in regions of moderate rainfall where the soil is sandy, the U-M man cautioned, plant the tree in a bowl-shaped depression which can be filled with water when needed. The depression will serve to catch and retain rain water.

SAFETY GROUP TO CAMPAIGN AGAINST FIRE

"Let's Grow Up, Not Burn Up". That's the slogan for Fire Prevention Week for 1954.

The campaign will be launched next week, Oct. 3 to 9, following a proclamation by President Eisenhower.

The National Fire Protection association, cooperating with the Michigan Rural Safety Council, is sponsoring the program in Michigan.

David G. Steinicke, extension safety specialist at Michigan State College, points out that next week's campaign will stress four points—careful use of machinery, safe stoves, keeping children safely away from matches, and how to save your life if caught in a fire.

Stienicke notes that of the thousands of fire victims annually, many could have saved themselves.

The Fire Prevention association, sounds this warning: Don't give fire a place to start.

FLOOR DECAY PREVENTED WITH PAPER

If you have one of those basementless houses, now is the time to crawl underneath it to cover the soil.

That's the warning from Arthur Bell, Michigan State College extension agricultural engineer. With cold weather coming the moisture from the soil will condense on the floor boards and joists. Then it won't be long before the wood will start to decay.

Bell points out that the remedy is simple. The cover, laid on the wet soil under a house, acts as a barrier against the rising moisture. The cover may be asphalt coated paper such as roll roofing, laminated papers with a water-proofing material, or thin metal foils. He advises lapping the cover 2 or 3 inches.

When the soil is covered under the house, says Bell, it is possible to safely close the ventilating spaces on the foundations in cold weather to conserve heat. He also suggests nailing a one-inch insulation on the bottom of the joists underneath the house.

PRE-HARVEST CORN PICKER CHECK URGED

It won't be long until farmers start to get their corn pickers in operating condition for the fall harvest.

Clarence M. Hansen, Michigan State College agricultural engineer has the note of warning: Time the picking and harvesting of corn to make sure the corn is mature.

It's just as bad to pick immature corn as it is to let it wait too long, Hansen says. Most of the corn in Michigan will mature between Oct. 10 and 20.

Hansen also cautions farmers against leaving corn in the field until the middle of winter before it is picked, and he adds:

It wouldn't hurt to get the picker out of the tool shed and check on its condition and power take-off speed. The power take-off should be kept up to the recommended speed—with the tractor running at full throttle.

Hansen recommends a slow traveling speed. Excessive traveling speed will shell a lot of corn and build up losses. Most manufacturers recommend a speed slower than 2 miles per hour.

Hansen suggests tightening husker roll springs to reduce shelling. The ear retarder may also give trouble if it is adjusted too close.

A tight retarder may force excessive trash into the wagon. An efficient fan is needed to remove the trash and give a clean load of corn, he advises.

AUTUMN SLOWS DOWN BATTLE OF BUGS

This year's concluding shots in Michigan's battle on bugs will be fired within the next few days on the southwestern front against Japanese Beetle while the war on Gypsy Moth around Lansing will become a scouting activity until the invading army shows itself next spring, according to G. S. McIntyre, director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

Airplane spraying of 800 acres in the heavy fruit areas around Coloma will be undertaken within the next few days in attempts to destroy any Japanese beetle larvae that may have dug in. At the same time 110 acres if land at Niles will be manually treated against the invading pest. The Federal government will aid the state financially, and Berrien County will pay for spray materials.

Japanese beetle were found at Coloma last summer, the first time that the dangerous insects were ever discovered in the state in a rural area. Several hundred were trapped there and at Niles.

The year before traps placed throughout the state by the Michigan Department of agriculture's Bureau of Plant Industry caught only 89. The beetle is one of the most damaging insects. It feeds on more than 200 plants including fruit trees, according to C. A. Boyer, chief of the Bureau.

Last spring Gypsy Moth which has done millions of dollars of damage to crops and shade trees in the East was discovered for the first time in Michigan in the outskirts of Lansing.

After funds were provided by the "Little Legislature" which was called into session, 86,400 acres around Lansing were sprayed with DDT solution by airplanes. A thorough check of the sprayed territory by Federal and State specialists proved that eradication had been complete.

However evidence of Gypsy Moth was discovered outside the sprayed area in other adjacent land. Between now and spring the Michigan Department of Agriculture will scout parts of 17 townships around Lansing in Ingham, Eaton, Clinton and Ionia counties, and the regions to be sprayed next spring when the caterpillars emerge will be determined by surveys this fall and winter.

FROSH HERALD START OF FALL ACTIVITIES AT MICHIGAN STATE

More than five thousand freshmen and transfer students arrived on the Michigan State campus for the first time Monday, Sept. 20, for a week of orientation activities.

The new students were the advance guard for the student body of more than 15,200 who enrolled for the fall term. They spent the week in orientation procedures which included testing, physical examinations, counseling and enrollment.

M. S. C. President Dr. John A. Hannah addressed the parents of the new students and then spoke to the new student to start the orientation week.

Classes started Monday, Sept. 27, which also was the opening date for Michigan State's evening college and for college work offered via television on WKAR-TV.

The estimated fall term enrollment total of 15,000 was 600 more than for the same term a year ago, said M.S.C. Registrar Robert S. Linton. He said the enrollment figure reflected the high percentage of students returning to the campus from last year.

In addition, the new total reflected an approximate increase of 15 percent in those enrolled in graduate or advance work, Linton said.

The infinite allness of God, good, and the consequent unreality of sickness and discord will be stressed at Christian Science services Sunday.
Readings from the King James Version of the Bible and correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy comprise the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Unreality."

That real dominion and power are derived from God is brought out in the Scriptural passages to be read, including the following statement by Paul (II Timothy 1:7): "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

From Science and Health the following selections will be among those read (414:21-23): "The Scripture declares, 'The Lord He is God (good); there is none else beside Him.' Even so, harmony is universal, and discord is unreal."

The Golden Text is from Matthew (7:18,19): "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit; he is hewn down, and cast into fire."

LIVING STANDARDS CONTINUE TO RISE

Congressman George A. Dondero says that critics of the present national administration and of recent Congressional actions who have asserted that American living standards are falling, are contradicted by authoritative figures made public within the last week. As a matter of fact, he said, living standards are continuing steadily to rise.

"Food consumption and housing improvements," Congressman Dondero said, "generally are considered the basic criterions whereby any rise or fall in living standards may be judged. Greater food consumption by the American people, and substantial increases in the amount of available new housing, especially in the middle and low cost brackets, are being registered each month."

"For example, American families bought more groceries in July of this year, the latest month for which complete figures are available, than in any previous month in American history. Sales for July, 1954 totaled $3,105,000,000. The previous peak was in December, 1953, when retail grocery sales aggregated $3,018,000,000. In July, 1953, the total volume of sales was $2,897,000,000.

Congressman Dondero added, "Grocery sales for the second

"Hartfelt" Thanks

No loss is without a gain, they say. When our barn caught fire last Friday, the helpfulness of neighbors, friends, et al, was overwhelming. The work of the fire department in protecting our other property was most effective, for which we are grateful.

Although we are barnless, we feel we have more than made up our loss in the discovery that our friends and neighbors can be helpful and kind at a time when we needed them the most.
