LARGEST BUCKS IN SOUTHERN MICHIGAN

Michigan's north country is famous for deer, but farms and wooded areas in southern portions of the state often produce the biggest bucks.

Among the big deer taken in southern Michigan during the 1957 season was a 225-pound, 10-point buck bagged in Ingham county by George Perry of Leslie.

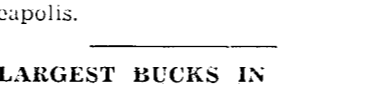

Bruce Willis of Jackson got his deer—a 198 pounder—at the Waterloo recreation area in Jackson county.

Both of the big whitetails were three and one-half years old. The deer were field dressed when weighed.

The average southern Michigan deer is larger than his northern counterpart because of the abundance of food in lower sections of the state.

HOCKEY WITH HUBER

By FRED HUBER

THIS BEING the holiday season and a time of good will to all, it is an ideal circumstance to turn one interesting phase of hockey, the uninformed official. That is a rather peculiar word, and is not to be confused with the uninformed official. He is a rampant type according to most close hockey fans.

In football, save for the statisticians, all of the officials are on the field and are clearly identified by their striped jerseys. Even the official time, and the official device to signal the end of time, are on the field.

Baseball is about the same. Except for the official scorer, all of the officials are the umpires whose traditional blue serge is a standard part of American uniform dress.

In basketball the scorer and the timekeeper are rather anonymous persons, but as in all sports, hockey included, the scorers and statisticians are mathematical individuals whose judgment never comes into play.

However, while all hockey fans are familiar with the striped jerseyed referee and two linesmen, most all close followers are equally unaware of four other substantial persons who have no designating uniform or insignia.

Hockey's Minor Officials This quartet, along with a scorer and a statistician, are designated in hockey nomenclature as "minor officials." No one knows just why.

Actually the quartet, which includes two goal judges, a game timekeeper and a penalty timekeeper, are introduced by name in a pre-game announcement. This does account for mild recognition among attendants at the game, but since it long precedes, timewise, the Stroh sponsored broadcast and telecast of the game, and since only on rare occasions do Budd Lynch and Al Nagler have reason to identify them, they are certainly the great unknowns among the radio and television fans.

Duties Are Obvious Their duties are rather self evident. The goal judges have few, if any, counterparts in team sport. They sit in small cage enclosures behind the goal and signal whenever the puck crosses the goal line. Their duties do not include judging how it crossed, whether legally or illegally, but merely that it crossed.

The game timekeeper, whose clock board usually includes penalty time clocks, as well as the game timeclock, and a scoreboard, too, is the busiest of the quartet. He must be a man of almost perfect vision and hearing, and must have a rapierlike reaction.

It is the official scorer who usually undergoes the heaviest barrage of player criticism of the lot. However, perhaps at this season of the year even players adopt the theory of kindness toward officialdom.

Holiday time makes extra demands on time, energy and your budget. The musts of meal preparation become "the quickest to do and tasty too". Let your food shopping list start with poultry, ground beef and a roast that doesn't need to be watched while cooking, suggests the MSU Marketing Information Agent, Mrs. Josephine Lawyer. Some of the frozen meats will be a help too.

A few left over nuts from the Christmas baking? Don't worry. They will keep if you can resist using them in a salad or chop looked vegetable. Nuts in the shell keep best in a cool, dark place. The MSU Marketing Information Agent, Mrs. Josephine Lawyer. For storage up to a year in the home freezer, why not package in recipe-size packages. This makes it easy to use a cup of frozen nuts for any recipe.

School News

YOUR ROVING REPORTER
by Lorraine Juliano

Being that this time of year means so many different things to so many different people I thought that you readers might be interested in hearing just what the Christmas season means to so many of the different students here at the High School. I know that here we will find a number of different opinions which will probably all lead up to the same things in general thought, Christmas doesn't only mean the giving of gifts, but what is most of all important is that it also gives us a chance to really get out and worship the Holy Family and it's also a time for love, not just the giving of gifts, although who doesn't like to receive gifts? Well, let's get on with our interviews.

I first happened across one of our most popular freshmen, Jane Zumbunner, who said the following:

"Christmas has always been a time of year that I look forward to for more than just the giving and receiving of presents. I think that more of us should start to realize that happiness for Christmas not only lies in the receiving of gifts but also in the realization that we should also be happy about the child Jesus and want to worship him. I really can't express in words the way that I feel about Christmas, but I really think that some people should start to realize that the true meaning of Christmas lies in that little 'Babe in the manger'."

I then got a very inspiring interview from Sophomore, Lynda Engelman, who had this to add to our list: "I think that the true meaning of Christmas is something very beautiful and dear to most of us. But there are a few in this world who seem to think nothing of the Christ child when it comes time for the Christmas season. What would Christmas be without the small Child who means so much to so many of us? I really like Christmas, in fact it's my favorite time of the year, but not for the fact of the giving of gifts. Christmas, to me, is more dear when I start to think about the true meaning of Christmas, that all the gifts in the world could ever be."

My next interview came from Junior, Diane Pace, who commented in the following way:

"If it wasn't for the tiny child at Christmas time, then I don't think that Christmas would ever be so inspiring to us as it is now. When I hear all of the Christmas caroling, and the chimes and see all the excitement on the faces of all the happy people, adults as well as all of the children, it makes me want to stop and think that I hope they all understand the true meaning of this holiday season and I hope that they all will remember to give some praise to the tiny child of long ago who has done so much for us."

And finally, I got this opinion from another one of our Seniors who flocked around and trailed after him. I had finally reached the conclusion that he was merely some old hermit who had come out of hiding with a sudden burst of admiration for the younger set, when suddenly I noticed another man who looked exactly like the first. He, too, wore a red suit and had long, white whiskers. He was perhaps a little fatter, but essentially he was the same person. As I flew over other cities, I encountered hundreds of other men dressed in the same attire. Needless to say I was thoroughly confused, and for that matter I still am to a certain degree.

On one night, a million automobiles, it seems, were on the highways. Everybody seemed to be going somewhere. People were loaded with huge boxes and packages covered with lovely ribbons and wrappings. Some people were just loaded. Everywhere people seemed to be having a good time, eating, drinking, and engaging in boisterous laughter. However, in a few places the scene was entirely different. In some parts of town, the houses are not decorated at any time, and while so many of the newer, more modern homes are filled with laughter and merriment, there is seldom any cause for merrymaking in the tumble-down shacks where the youngsters wear ragged clothes and have little to eat, and in some cases no heat.

In still other places, the scene was yet different. I visited one of the earthlings places of worship, and there I found peace, solitude and quiet. The number of people in these places was very small in proportion to the number who were having a wonderful time on the outside.

In a few dimly lighted taverns the scene was again changed, but that scene is not worth printing in this letter. I must say that this week has confused, bothered and amazed me. I am overwhelmed by the way the human atmosphere has changed. Perhaps the custom on earth is to have a celebration of this sort annually. Perhaps a few people are paying homage to some great martyr, of whom I have not yet heard. At any rate, I shall continue to survey the situation and endeavor to make further reports on earth happenings.

to Mars:

Greetings,
Since I last reported from this planet, many interesting things have taken place. The entire appearance of the earth is being changed. The shops where the earthlings purchase goods have been decorated with strange looking ornaments and colored paper. The dwelling places of the people are becoming nurseries, bakeries, and in some cases, distilleries. These people are actually bringing trees into their homes, and planting them next to windows and in corners! In some cases the houses are decorated on the outside with bright colored lights and funny looking animals.

One day I saw on the streets of the fair city of Pontiac, the most peculiar looking human being that I have yet encountered. He wore a bright red suit, with a broad black belt, and had a growth of whiskers that must have been growing for years. I watched him as closely as I could, with wonder and amazement. He seemed to have nothing to do except talk to children who flocked around and trailed after him. I had finally reached the conclusion that he was merely some old hermit who had come out of hiding with a sudden burst of admiration for the younger set, when suddenly I noticed another man who looked exactly like the first. He, too, wore a red suit and had long, white whiskers. He was perhaps a little fatter, but essentially he was the same person. Some people were just loaded. Everywhere people seemed to be having a good time, eating, drinking, and engaging in boisterous laughter. However, in a few places the scene was entirely different. In some parts of town, the houses are not decorated at any time, and while so many of the newer, more modern homes are filled with laughter and merriment, there is seldom any cause for merrymaking in the tumble-down shacks where the youngsters wear ragged clothes and have little to eat, and in some cases no heat.

In still other places, the scene was yet different. I visited one of the earthlings places of worship, and there I found peace, solitude and quiet. The number of people in these places was very small in proportion to the number who were having a wonderful time on the outside.

In a few dimly lighted taverns the scene was again changed, but that scene is not worth printing in this letter. I must say that this week has confused, bothered and amazed me. I am overwhelmed by the way the human atmosphere has changed. Perhaps the custom on earth is to have a celebration of this sort annually. Perhaps a few people are paying homage to some great martyr, of whom I have not yet heard. At any rate, I shall continue to survey the situation and endeavor to make further reports on earth happenings.

Poinsettia Cookies And Coffee
Capture The Christmas Spirit

At Christmas-time, cookies are more than cookies — they're the wonderful symbols of our very happiest holiday. Poinsettia Cookies are new this Christmas and you should add them to your holiday baking list. They're lovely to look at and their almond flavor makes them the perfect accompaniment for hot coffee. You don't need a cookies cutter to make Poinsettia Cookies. All you do is cut your dough into two-inch squares. Then make a one-inch slash diagonally from each corner toward the center of each cookie. Fold in every other point to the center and place half a candied cherry in the center. Viola! . . . there you have your poinsettias!

Of course, everyone will love your Poinsettia Cookies and they'll love you even more when you serve them with fresh, steaming coffee—another must for holiday festivities!

Poinsettia Cookies
1/2 cup shortening
1 teaspoon almond flavoring
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg
2 cups sifted enriched flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 tablespoons milk
1 1/2 cups rolled oats (Quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
Candied Cherries

Beat together shortening, almond flavoring, sugars, and eggs until creamy. Sift together flour, salt and baking soda and add to first mixture, mixing thoroughly. Stir in milk and rolled oats, mixing until blended. (Dough will be quite stiff.) Roll out dough to about 1/8-inch thickness on canvas or board sprinkled with confectioners' sugar. Cut into 2-inch squares.

To form poinsettias: make a one-inch slash diagonally from each corner toward center of cookie. Fold in every other point to the center; place half a candied cherry in center of each cookie. Place on greased cookie sheets. Bake in moderate oven, 350° 8 to 10 minutes. Remove from cookie sheets immediately. Makes about 5 dozen.
