Soaring 1,089 feet into the heavens, it tops the famed Eiffel Tower by more than one hundred feet and rises higher than any New York City skyscraper except the Empire State Building. In addition to housing TV and radio antennas, the Tokyo tower has two observation platforms served by highspeed elevators. The first, approximately 390 feet above ground, is at the height of a thirty story building. Far more spectacular, however, is the lookout at the 738-foot level.
