Localite To Be In Vegas

A Central Michigan University folk song group, the "Ascoots," recently accepted a contract to sing at the famous Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas next September. The group is lead by John Allison, banjo player, of Mt. Pleasant. Singing with him are Larry Olliffe, left, son of Mrs. Marjorie and the late Bert Olliffe of Ortonville, Clarkston, and Ted Webb of Cadillac. All are seniors at C.M.U.

Is it possible to wave the flag too much? Provided of course, that you wave it with integrity? Is it possible to study Lincoln or Shakespeare too much? Is it possible to read the Bible too much? The great, the good, the true, are inexhaustible for inspiration, example and strength. I believe that we are not waving our flag enough, not nearly enough. It seems to me that we are developing a tendency to be timid or even apologetic about waving the stars and stripes. Walk up and down the streets on July 4th and count the flags. It is our nation's birthday, a sacred day in world history, the most important day of America. Why isn't the flag flying on every rooftop and from every home and building? This complacent attitude is strong evidence of cancerous patriotic decay. The flag is a symbol of our national unity. It is the spirit of our undying devotion to our country. It stands for the best that is in us... for loyalty, character, and faith in democracy. Isn't our flag a synonym of the United States of America? Does it not represent man's greatest, noblest, most sublime dream? Is it not the zenith of achievement, the goal to which generations have aspired? Ladies and gentlemen, I believe it is time for us... for the mad, rushing Twentieth Century American...

to stop for a moment and think. Let us arrest our near reverential admiration of material success and return to the spiritual and ethical values. Let us imbue and rekindle in ourselves and our children the so-called old-fashioned way of patriotism, a burning devotion to the principles and ideals upon which our country was founded. Should not every home own and proudly display the colors on holidays and other such occasions? Isn't the flag Patrick Henry, Jefferson, Franklin, Washington, Nathan Hale, Gettysburg and Valley Forge, Paul Revere, Jackson and other great men and women who have given us our heritage. When you look at the flag can't you see the Alamo, Corridador, Pearl Harbor, The Monitor, The Merrimac, Wake Island, and Korea? Least we forget, isn't the flag Flanders Field, Bataan, Iwo Jima, Normandy, Babe Ruth and Davy Crockett? The great events of our past and present are wrapped up in our flag. It is a symbol of this blessed nation, a giant in industry, education and commerce. Millions of fertile square miles, wheatlands, coal mines, steel plants. Our great republic, the chosen infant destined to be man's last and remaining hope for suffering ing humanity, a shining beacon of light, noble and glorious, the haven for the oppressed and persecuted and truly God's gift to mankind.

That is what the flag means to me. Can we wave it too much? I don't think so.

(Editors note) Free copies of "Can We Wave The Flag Too Much" are available by writing Independence Hall Association, 2720 Devon Ave., Chicago 45, Illinois.

Another Day . . .

By Connie Lektzian

Notice all the husbands and wives out house hunting this time of the year? Driving smooth running cars over paved roads into neatly landscaped subdivisions, and complaining when the search takes longer than anticipated? Time was when the women didn't go along to pick out a home-site but this was due to geography and not indifference; and time was when there weren't roads but trackless plains and forests to carve into towns and farms.

By the 1830's Michigan had lost its early reputation as a place full of swamps and fever; and settlers were coming in an ever-growing stream. There was a great responsibility attached to locating the right piece of land, for often several families picked one or two of their members to scout the country in search of farm land. Usually, the men tried to get to Michigan by spring, find the land that suited them and put a claim on it, and then head back home in the fall. Many of these settlers came from New York state, like Bildad Phillips and his nephew Bine Bathrick, who found themselves in the fall of 1832, still without a claim. Hearing about some acreage on the Sashabaw plains that hadn't been settled, they stopped at the cabin of Thomas Beardlee in Independence Township to inquire directions. Too busy to accompany the other men, Mr. Beardlee sent along his eight year old son, Charles, to show the way. The search covered more miles than anticipated, and the men left Charles at an old camp site and pushed on further. They planned to return for the boy later in the day, but when they tried to get back, they were unable to find the way thru the dense forest. At nightfall, they came to the cabin of another settler, miles from the place where they had left Charles.

When the youngster realized that the men were late in returning, he started off in search of them. Wisely, he used the camp as the hub of his search, going out several miles in every direction, each time returning to camp. As darkness settled down over him, he made preparations for the night, knowing the men, unfamiliar with the region, would not be able to find him until morning. His main problem was keeping warm, as he was barefoot and the night became increasingly colder.

The Beardlee's, alarmed when the men and their son failed to come home, started a search with some of the neighbors, while Bathrick and Phillips started out the next morning, trying to locate the spot where they had left the boy. The Beardlee's reached the camp first, where their son was calmly waiting for someone to come along and find him. The hardy little pioneer wasn't nearly as shaken as the adults were by his experience.

The two men settled on section 23 of Independence Township early the next year, and Bildad Phillips later became one of the Township Supervisors. Section 23 is still largely acreage, but the subdivisions known as Sashabaw Creek Farms is in the south eastern corner of that section.

The Book Nook

Peter Freuchen's Book of the Eskimos.

Guest Reviewer Mrs. Brooke Bennett.

It was with only half-hearted interest that I started to read this amazing book about the Eskimos. I was soon completely absorbed in it.

Peter Freuchen, a danish explorer whom you may remember as a onetime colorful contestant on TV's "664,000 question" lived with these people off and on for two generations. His wife, Navarana, was an Eskimo, and with the famous explorer Knud Rasmussen, he ran a trading post at Thule, Greenland for many years. (Thule, incidentally, he founded and named in 1906. Its fame as an Air Force base came later.)

The Arctic region is now accepted as being that northern area which has a July mean temperature of 50 degrees F. The Eskimos who inhabit this region live in a world where even the slightest deviation from normal for example, a change in the trek of the seals, may mean disaster. A place where death and danger are daily companions, yet they think it a beautiful world. They lack most things much of the world considers necessary for

Local Quartet To Make Recording

Just before press time, word was received from campaign headquarters in Detroit, by Marlene Ostrander, manager of the Patriots, that the quartet will be on the band wagon for Mr. Romney during his campaign from the end of July through October.

The Patriots, a quartet composed of four local boys, Milton and Marvin Frick, Willie Knox and Danny Althouse, are no doubt on their way to the top in show business.

Many people heard their singing commercials during the grand opening celebration at the Pontiac Mall. The group not only sang the commercial over radio and TV, but could also be heard inside The Mall, walking, then hesitating momentarily to sing for the enthusiastic teen-agers who gathered around them.

The Wollenda Brothers well known for their high wire act, who appeared during The Mall's opening, were indeed impressed with the very moving song dedicated to Mario, crippled during one of their acts in Detroit, and written by the boy's manager, Marlene Ostrander. Mr. Ostrander, who lives in Clarkston, has composed many songs which have been highly responsible for many of the opportunities the quartet has encountered.

Following an appearance at a Walled Lake Rotary Club meeting, attended by Senator Bromfield, the Patriots were rewarded with a letter from Mr. Bromfield in Washington, commending them on their ability and future.

Just a few of the appearances made by the quartet are as follows: Waterford CAI Fair; Big Brothers Convention in Lansing (the possibilities of) The Brothers adopting the Big Brothers Theme, written by Mrs. Ostrander; (pending); Sportsmen's dinner; sang "My State of Michigan," also by Mrs. Ostrander, over FM radio during Michigan Week.

BOOK NOOK

 survival. But the Eskimo culture is perfectly adapted to the severe Arctic conditions.
 With the advent of the white man, particularly from the time of World War II and the development of military establishments throughout the Arctic, living conditions have improved greatly, but basically the Eskimo culture remains unchanged.
 Peter Frechen thoroughly explores the Eskimo culture, past and present, going into great detail about their family life, social life, mores, hunting skills, the area geography, and the like. However, he has successfully interwoven his adventures and experiences living with these people whom he loves dearly. His book has the air of a great adventurous yarn and is as intriguing as any novel. The story of the unique and fascinating Eskimos makes absorbing reading.
 In attendance were two new members, Mrs. Lee Hathaway and Mrs. Donald B. Lovett, both of Clarkston, and six candidate members.
 The next regular meeting will be the second Thursday in September.

Local Residents Make Archaeological Find

The apparent arthritic condition of a very old Indian makes a lively discussion topic at an after-class coffee session in the student center at Michigan State University Oakland. The old Indian was at the coffee table recently, but in a paper bag. His bones had been uncovered the week before by students digging in an Oakland County gravel pit.

The Division of Continuing Education at MSU did not know what to expect when it set up a non-credit course called "American Archaeology for the Amateur." The course was described as nine lectures and field trip. The instructor is Leonard Griffin, a musician and junior high school teacher by vocation. By avocation, he is an archaeologist with an abiding belief that amateurs can make a genuine contribution to archaeological discovery. He's been proving this by working with professional expeditions in Michigan & Illinois during his summer vacations. He's long been concerned by the fact that—until this course—there was no place in this area where amateurs could get training in the field techniques and methods used by professionals.

The spring term class started off in the usual way with a variety of occupations represented by the students in the evening course. Two of the group were amateur archaeologists: Donald R. Hays, A General Motors chemist from Birmingham, and David G. Kives who teaches English at Eastern Junior High School in Pontiac. Kives has spent two summers on archaeological expeditions in Jordan. The remaining eight students came purely out of curiosity and the desire to learn.

Stanley T. Irish of Royal Oak is assistant superintendent of schools in Clarenceville. A Fred I. Burns of Rochester is a carpenter. Then there are Richard K. Albyn of Rochester, architect; Mrs. Dolores Deter of Pontiac, legal secretary; Ivan W. Grabhorn of Rochester, equipment engineer for Michigan Bell Telephone Company; Mrs. Mary J. Hetenyi of Rochester, artist and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace D. McLay. Mr. McLay is a lawyer and Jane McLay runs a nursery school in Clarkston.

After five lectures, Griffin decided it was time his students were ready to dig. The purpose of the first field trip was to learn methods, but an unexpected bonus occurred when the group found bones. What they discovered proved to be an ancient burial ground.

Conversing with a bulldozer operator at the site, Griffin learned that other bones had been uncovered there including some skulls with a round hole cut from the top. "We found no such skulls," Griffin said, "but such holes were typical of the burials of a group of Indians who once lived north of Imlay City. Until now these particular Indians were never associated with the Oakland County area." By implication Griffin dates the bones as possibly 700 years old.

"We were just about ready to go home the first day," Mrs. McLay said, "when I struck a leg bone. After that we just kept digging until dark." Before this class, Mrs. McLay confined her digging to her pupils' sandbox and her flower beds. From now on she may do it anywhere.

Memorial Day the class was out looking for a village site near the burial ground.

It matters not to these students that the course ended, as far as MSU is concerned, on June 11. The coffee klatch in the student center was more to plan future field trips and a way to keep the class together than to discuss the evidence of arthritis in the bones of one of the Indians. The group is forming a new chapter of the Michigan Archaeological Society to be known as the Clinton Valley chapter. Class member Donald Hays, who is secretary of the Michigan Archaeological Society, and instructor Leonard Griffin are helping with the organization, but the impetus is from a class too interested in a new-found subject and enjoying one another too much to quit meeting.

The Clinton Valley chapter will welcome other interested amateurs and also any leads on Oakland County sites. Inquiries can be made by calling Mr. McLay at FEderal 8-9609. Mr. McLay's secretary has been warned that this is also the number to be called if anyone finds bones!

It happened 100 YEARS ago

The oldest incorporated trade association in the country, the United States Brewers Association, was organized in 1862... the same year that

IN MICHIGAN, hearing of the gallant fighting of the 1st, 4th, 5th and 7th Michigan regiments against the Confederacy, folks all over the state toasted their troops' bravery with foaming steins of beer.

For then as now, beer was the traditional beverage of moderation. But beer means more than enjoyment to our state. The Brewing Industry pays more than 16 million dollars in taxes to Michigan each year, money that helps support our parks, hospitals and schools.

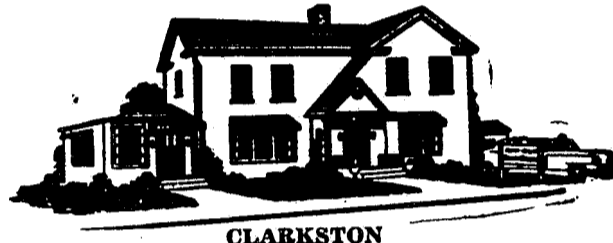

TODAY, in its centennial year, the United States Brewers Association still works constantly to assure maintenance of high standards of quality and propriety wherever beer and ale are served.
