Lease for Beach area being prepared by village

A joint meeting was held on Tuesday evening between members of the Clarkston Village Council and members of the Independence township board. Subject of discussion was the Deer Lake Beach.

Both governing bodies for some time have wanted to derive a lease arrangement that would be beneficial to residents of the area.

Jack Banecky is the attorney representing the Village and Paul Mandel is the township board's attorney.

Although neither of these men were present for Tuesday night's meeting, the Village council authorized Mr. Banecky to draw up a lease which will then be presented to the township for their approval.

In other action at the meeting discussion evolved around adopting the township building code for the village. The council are now in the process of getting approval for the township to handle the inspection.

Fire takes life of area woman Sunday

Fire claimed the life of a township woman last Sunday morning. Mrs. Imogene Alexander, 58 of 6527 Clarkston-Orion Road lived alone at that address. Neighbors summoned the Independence township fire department when they noticed smoke pouring out of her one story stucco home.

The call was received at 11:48 A.M. When firemen arrived they had to break in the back door. Mrs. Alexander had apparently tried to reach the door, but had collapsed from smoke inhalation. One section of a sofa had burned completely and dropped through to the basement. It is believed that the fire originated there.

Firemen state that there has not been a fire casualty in the area since the late 1940's. However, there have been 3 major house fires in the past 6 weeks. A night-time blaze routed the occupants of the Hanson home on Buffalo street in Clarkston early in January and 3 weeks ago the Charles Kelley family lost their home and all their furnishings and barely escaped themselves when an early evening fire struck.

It was necessary for the firemen to remain at the Alexander home for about an hour. There was extensive damage to the interior of the house.

Mrs. Alexander was born in Chicago, Illinois March 5, 1909 but had lived in this area for the past 20 years. She was employed as a teller at the West Huron Branch of Pontiac State Bank. Prior to the merger of the Clarkston State Bank with the Pontiac Bank, she had been employed at the bank here.

Her services were conducted from the C. F. Sherman Funeral Home in Ortonville at 2 p.m. on Tuesday. Rev. Lewis Sutton of the Clarkston Methodist Church officiated. Burial was in Lakeview Cemetery.

Firemen check the hole in the floor where a burning sofa dropped to the basement in the Alexander home last Sunday morning. Mrs. Alexander lost her life in the fire.

Mrs. Imogene Alexander's house located at 6527 Clarkston-Orion road.

One man injured in 3 car accident

An accident involving 3 cars happened last Tuesday, February 14 at the corner of Sashabaw Road and Pine-dale Street. According to the sheriff report it happened at 6:20 P.M.

Pickett 42, of 3627 David K. in Waterford could not stop and hit the Symonds car in the rear. As it bounced into the intersection, Symonds was struck by a car driven by Pearl Bradley, 67 of 4245 Sherwood in Ortonville.

Jim's Jottings

Didn't water always taste better out of a dipper?

One reason I enjoy playing Indianwood Golf and Country Club is that after the fifth hole there is a pump with a dipper attached. That is the world's greatest water, especially in August.

One of the few porcelain pieces Hazel keeps around the house that I use is a big cup to drink water out of. It improves the taste 100 percent. Now what in the world did I do to make me bring up this subject?

It always means more to have our readers comment on things in the News, but I'd like to pass along what one so-called newspaper expert thinks about Jim Fitzgerald's column that appears on our editorial page.

For the third year in a row he has been named best in the state in the class "original personal columns. A guy named James Jesse, publisher of the Boca Raton (Florida) News was the judge in the Michigan Press contest this year who gave Jim his third-in-a-row.

Now the poor guy has eliminated himself from competition next year. New rules say he can no longer win more than 2 years in a row. The readers are the losers, cause now he will lay back and fake his way through his weekly column that originates in the Lapeer County Press.

Where else? Where else but in a used car lot should a dealer meet his future wife. That's where Tom Rademacher, new Chevy-Olds dealer here, met his bride. Of course, it was before he became a car dealer. He was a salesman at the time when the woman of his dreams happened by and...

Clarkston wins two more

By Mel Vaara

With methodical systematic order Clarkston disposed of Holly & Milford 74-60 and 70-53.

In the Holly game the interest was stirred up over the transfer of 6' 5" Gary Mize to the Varsity. Mark Richard has the mumps and Coach McGrath was impressed with Mize's play so up came the big boy.

Dan Fife scored the 1st bucket in the game (he scored 14 in the 1st period) and Gary Mize excited the large crowd when he responded with the 2nd goal in the period. His sophomore class gave him a standing ovation over Gary's 1st two points in a Clarkston Varsity uniform.

Holly attempted to slow things, ala Northville and Bloomfield Hills, but Coach McGrath didn't give Holly the opportunity as he had his boys running like demons from the opening tip-off. Fife's scoring fell off in the 2nd period, but Nicoson and Allen took turns scoring to give Clarkston a 38-25 half-time lead.

The 2nd half was more of the same with the Wolves outscoring Holly by seven points in the 3rd quarter. Clarkston held a 21 point lead in the 4th quarter and Coach McGrath opened up the bench with 5 minutes to play, this enabled Holly to outscore Clarkston 22-16 in this quarter.

Once again Dan Fife led all scorers with 34 points, followed by Tom Allen 15, Randy Nicoson 11, Gary Mize and Mark Erickson with 5 each.

The Milford-Clarkston contest was a rather drab affair. I was expecting a closer game with the thought of Milford being sky-high for the contest. But from the opening tip-off one could tell it would be a run away for the league champions.

Once again the Clarkston fans outnumbered the Milford congregation by almost 2 to 1. There was a vast number of empty slats on the Milford side.

The Clarkston Dad's Booster Club was sporting new buttons, it sure is nice to have such a faithful following. By the way, quite a few of these Boosters were very instrumental in quieting things down at the Northville game. Many of these deeds went unnoticed.

Clarkston had a 33-20 half-time lead with Dan Fife having 13 of them. Randy Nicoson added 8, Tom Allen 5, tall Gary 4 and hustling Rich Bass 3.

The Wolves increased the lead to 20 points in the 2nd half, and the Wolves played cat and mouse the rest of the way.

Dan Fife scored 32 points for the 12th time this year he was over the 30 point total. Next was Randy Nicoson with 10 points, Mark Erickson hit a hot streak in the 2nd half and ended up with 8 points.

This win gives the Wolves a record of 14-1. I believe this is the finest record of any Varsity Basketball team at Clarkston.

J.V. splits two

The Junior Wolves won over Holly 58-50, but lost a Van Patrick Cliff Hanger to Milford 68-67. This gives Coach Hanson and his army a fine record of 12-3.

Even with the loss of Gary Mize Clarkston had no trouble in disposing of Holly 58-50. Bob Palladino was again high with 17 points, Dawson Bell was next with 14. Eric Hood added 10, Jeff Keyser 8, Rich Porritt 4 and Charles Granger 3.

In the 3rd quarter Clarkston had a 21 point lead and as the saying goes—"How to blow a sure victory in 5 easy lessons". The younger set threw the ball away, took bad shots, poor defense and ran into foul trouble. Three starters fouled out Dawson Bell, Rich Porritt and Jeff Keyser and as Coach Hanson commented, "the boys panicked".

With 3:12 left on the clock Palladino was called for traveling, Clarkston led 61-60. Milford returned the favor and in turn fouled Hood. Hood made the 1st on one and one. Clarkston 62-Milford 60. Hood missed a shot from the key and Palladino missed a 1 and 1 situation. Hood and Granger took turns fouling a Milford player, score now tied 62-62. Palladino missed another one on one situation. Keyser fouled out and Porritt followed him to the bench via the same method. Milford led 65-62 with 1:42 showing on the clock Hood fouled a Milford player, Milford now led 66-62.

Palladino missed a shot from the corner, Milford scored again 68-62. Palladino made a 15' jump shot, and Granger made a free throw, Milford on top 68-65. With less than 30 seconds left Hood, Kastin and McMillian missed close in shots.

Showing only 5 seconds on the clock Bob Palladino was fouled. Bob sank both of them. Time ran out and Milford had a victory 68-67. Those three minutes made up for the lack luster Varsity game.

Eric Hood was high with 24 points, followed by Palladino's 12, Bell's 11, Porritt's 8, Keyser's 8 and Granger's 4.

The 9th grade and 8th graders played 3 games against each other with the 9th grade winning 2.

In the 1st game the lowly 8th graders upset the mighty 9th graders 51-45. At one time the 8th grade had a 20 point lead.

The second game was a reverse of the 1st contest. The 9th grade had a 21 point lead in the 3rd quarter, but the 8th grade gave them fits and almost caught them. With less than a minute left, 9th led 59-58. A couple of blown shots and poor defense was too much to overcome and the 9th grade had a hard earned victory, 65-60.

The 3rd game was complete chaos. Both teams played miserable ball. The 9th grade overcame everybody's errors and had a 39-28 victory.

It's how you hold your mouth, and, Jeff Keyser gets 2 points for this effort. JV's won, 58-50 over Holly.

A flick of the wrist nets 2 points for JV's Eric Hood, No. 54. Looking up is Dawson Bell, No. 11.

Benjamin. Wendy Priebe of Clarkston was the flower girl and Mark Benjamin of Rose City was the ring bearer.

Have you seen the bunnies?

Is there something about these snowbanks and repeated snow flurries that makes you think of spring? Does a look at the thermometer and the weather report conjure thoughts of the Easter bunny?

The best remedy is a trip down town and a look in the window of King's Insurance. A collection of tiny china rabbits make up the attractive window display there now. The display is guaranteed to make one believe that spring and Easter are just around the corner.

The collection belongs to Mrs. David Nadolsky of Chicago. She is the former Shanna Stewart, daughter of the David Stewart's of Clarkston.

The collection has been assembled over a 25 year period and had its beginning from a small crystal rabbit which was a gift. Many of them have been gifts, others assembled as mementoes of travels. The group just grew and grew as collections have a way of doing.

The dainty porcelain and china bunnies defy description. There are even a pair with real bunny tails.

For belief again in the Easter Bunny, a trip to the window of King's Insurance will confirm it. Children will be especially intrigued with these china miniatures.

SPRING VACATION

Volunteers needed

Volunteers are still needed at the Oakland County Children's Village School, according to one who is happily working there as a volunteer. Mrs. Fidelia Yale, who used to teach at the Andersonville school is doing volunteer work there by helping with reading classes. She is enthusiastic over work that other volunteers are doing there but states that the need is great for women who would be willing to work in the library at the Village which is located at 1075 N. Telegraph in Waterford township.

Volunteers are needed to work one or two hours in the library so that the children could check out books. They are also needed for recording books that children have read, to keep bulletin boards neat, exciting and up to date and to obtain special materials for science and other subjects.

The enrollment at the school fluctuates throughout the year due to the short stay of the pupils. The county finances the school and the Waterford Township School District administers it.

Federal Revenue Declines for State Roads

The State Highway Commission has had quite a lot to say in the last two years about the extent to which its revenues for new construction have been declining. In the 1966 session of the Legislature it sought a rise in the state tax to offset the decrease.

But the Legislature was faced with bigger money matters and nothing was done about the proposed gasoline tax increase. The same request is or soon will be before the current Legislature. Again, there seems little prospect of action, since the emphasis will be on state tax revision.

For some reason, not much of the revenue predicament facing the State Highway Department has got through to the public. They have some knowledge of the fact that money for new expressways is much harder to come by. But there is no awareness yet of the extent of this shortage.

It is real enough. One reason is that most of the earlier expressways followed the interstate network pattern, which meant that they were eligible for 90 per cent federal aid. Now any extension of the expressways usually has to fall under a different formula—50 per cent federal aid and 50 per cent state money. A new extension of US-131, north of Grand Rapids, comes under that category. It is expected to be the same with the scheduled extension of US-31 expressway north of the Muskegon-Oceana line.

In addition to this, the federal government has announced that it will withhold $40 million in federal funds previously allocated for Michigan in the first half of 1967. This is a sizable chunk of federal aid which isn't going to be available on schedule.

Maybe some or all of this sum will be released earlier than now anticipated. On the other hand, there could be longer delays in the expected amounts of federal aid for highway construction. Not much has been said by the federal administrators on this subject, but there plainly was a stretch-out in the last months of 1966 and it may continue for some time to come. The federal agencies often had other explanations. But curtailment in federal aid has been evident for many types of public works, highways included.

Last week, Ardale W. Ferguson, chairman of the State Highway Commission, said that 82 projects valued at $186 million and scheduled through 1969 have had to be postponed to some degree for lack of funds.

With so many revenue uncertainties, it is difficult at this stage to know what shape a solution should take for the highway department. But it is certain that new construction will slow down unless added highway revenues are produced.

The tax reform debate ahead in the Legislature should include an answer to this problem. Unless it does, there will be greatly increased pressure in 1968 for a gas tax increase in Michigan.

Ask Fran: Who Is the Patsy?

by Jim Fitzgerald

A boyhood memory plus Bobby Baker equals Patsy and leaves me with a question to Ask Fran.

The memory is of my older sister, Jean. She is the one who lives in Southfield, dyes her gray hair black, and has the same last name as mine even though she is married. This distinguishes her from a Detroit sister with black hair who dyes it gray; a broken-nosed sister who lives near Gordie Howe in Lathrup Village; and a sister in Mt. Healthy, Ohio who married a guy named Gabby which is the same as Sandy Koufax marrying a girl named Strike Out. I have no brothers which does not explain the way I walk, so shut up.

Jean was 17 years old, I was 15, and Linda (black hair dyed gray) was a crawling 1-year-old. Jean was entertaining a group of girlfriends, including a giddy gal named Irene. Irene sat on my mother's new coffee table, which had a glass top. Unfortunately, Irene did not depend solely on her brain for weight. The glass broke, crinkle-crackle, in millions of tiny slivers.

"Your mother will kill us," said Irene.

"Don't worry," said Jean who quickly picked up Linda and sat her poor kid in the middle of the glass.

"Hey Mother," yelled Jean, "come see what the baby did."

Linda couldn't talk yet, I was afraid to squeal because Jean knew too much about me. Jean and Irene were home free.

And that was my introduction to Patsy. A Patsy is a fall guy, a sucker, the poor devil who gets the blame. The ideal Patsy cannot defend himself—such as Linda hadn't learned to talk.

Another good example is the Patsy who doesn't work here anymore. Around a newspaper, for instance; it is always nice to have a reporter who just quit or got fired. Anything wrong gets in the paper, Patsy did it. And he just left for a new job in Lower Africa.

Bobby Baker, the ex-Senate aide who embarrassed LBJ, pointed to the finest Patsy of them all during his recent trial, Baker said he didn't swipe those campaign funds, Senator Kerr gave them to him. How about that, Senator Kerr? Oh, sorry, Senator Kerr is dead. Somehow I think Bobby read the Obituaries before he went to court.

All of which leads me to the point of this epic essay: I want to Ask Fran who is the Patsy responsible for the most irritating TV commercial to come along since that goofy couple who spent their honeymoon in the bathroom admiring his shaving cream.

If you watch TV at all, you know that "Ask Fran" is the name of this unbelievably stupid advertisement. Fran is obviously patterned after Ann Landers. Ann should sue. Fran wears a hat to prove she is a Career Woman. She has a face that would cut glass and a voice that reminds you of a fingernail file slicing blackboard.

A typical adventure for Fran is to get a letter from some broad who complains that boys like her until she opens her mouth—"and then they treat me like I'm a square." Chic Fran tells the neglected dame to put Laveris in her open mouth—"add that fact to your figure, honey"—and she'll have men panting at every pore.

Fran delivers all of her wisdom with wagging head and arching eyebrows. She cuddles up to the camera and lets you know, honey, that she understands and everything is going to be alright.

What bugs me most is that Fran is so incredible she is almost hypnotic. I watch her as I would a snake. I am afraid to look away for fear she might come out of the tube and clever me to death.

The Laveris people can't actually think this nauseous nonsense is selling their product. I am certain they have a form letter prepared to explain Fran to irritated viewers.

The letter probably says that Fran is a horrible mistake dreamed up by an ad man named Pat Patsy who has since taken another job in Bulgaria where he died of bad breath.

PEEKIN' into the PAST

25 YEARS AGO IN THE CLARKSTON NEWS

Mrs. Ray Clark is the new president of the Clarkston Literary club. Roll call was "What public work would you choose to do?"

The Rotary Club held their second meeting in their rooms in the Opera House building. A dinner was served under the leadership of Earl Terry and Joe Seeterlin. The club has installed a gas stove, steam table, and dining tables and under the leadership of Roy Alger, club president, intends to serve their own meals.

At least 100,000 volunteer nurse's aides are needed within the next 12 months.

A letter from Mrs. C. G. Waterbury who is spending a few weeks in Florida says that the people of Florida especially along the Atlantic coast realize that this country is at war. Just off of the coast there has been torpedoing, tankers burning and all along the ocean front they have been having black outs. The freighters travel only during the daylight hours and are convoyed by bombers and destroyers.

10 YEARS AGO IN THE CLARKSTON NEWS

The Independence Township primary election held on Monday showed a preponderance of Republican ballots as had been more or less expected.

Ripples from the Pool

By Faith Poole

There were ripples that rocked this boat last week! The reason—much more news and many more pictures than this paper had room for. Readers, of course are aware of the fact that the amount of news published is in direct ratio to the amount of advertising sold.

Blame it on the weather if you like, but our advertising lineage dropped to a point where it was necessary to print 8 pages last week. Our thanks to those people who were understanding when their news was held. Pictures taken last week will all be published in this edition.

*** This is one of the few times that there is no photo to accompany the "Another Day" column. We just couldn't figure any way to take a picture of old newspapers that would have reader interest. But readers should be intrigued with Connie's account of the varied attempts of publishers to start a paper in Clarkston during the early years of the village.

*** Someone has said that our big snow has now turned to stone. That I can believe, the big dent in my car door came from hitting a snow bank. It sounds improbable, but a quick turn into a driveway heaped with the stuff can produce such a result. Just when I was about to take the blame for the incident, my husband, gallant soul that he is, says he believes he did it. I'll never argue!

There will be two performances on March 18, both to be held at the Junior High School. The Clarkston Women's Club are handling the sale of tickets and the publicity for this annual Children's Play.

*** The pledge card which solicitors for the Library Fund Drive are using is reprinted in this week's issue. The door to door canvas is still going on and will until March 9. Residents who wish to prepare their pledge cards in advance may do so by clipping the card from this paper.

COMPLETES RECRUIT TRAINING

Marine Private Andrew D. Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon C. Gray of 3892 Percy King Road, Waterford, was graduated from eight weeks of recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot in San Diego recently.

He will now undergo about three weeks of individual combat training and then, after leave at home, will report to his first Marine Corps assignment.

The intensified Marine recruit training emphasizes rigid physical conditioning and survival techniques, both at sea and ashore, to develop self-confidence and endurance. Marksmanship with the M-14 rifle and 45-calibre pistol are equally stressed, and close order drill instills the traditions of Marine Corps teamwork.

A thorough study of basic military subjects; hygiene; first aid and sanitation; and the customs, courtesies, history and mission of the Marine Corps serve to polish the new Marine's recruit education and prepare him to join Marine combat forces.

Student writes of experiences in Cairo

Arriving in California recently was Judy Hoffman of 9543 Whipple Shores Drive, Clarkston. She had just completed a semester's work aboard the S.S. Ryn-dam, the floating campus of Chapman College. Miss Hoffman left New York last October and has gone around the world while studying with approximately 500 other college students from nearly every state.

Chapman, which is one of California's oldest colleges offers course work designed to meet the needs of undergraduate and graduate liberal arts students in modern shipboard classrooms, laboratories and studios.

Facilities include 14 classrooms, a modern science laboratory, an oceanography lab, an especially selected library, a 280 seat theater, modern audio-visual equipment and a completely staffed hospital.

During the fall semester, the students visited 19 ports in its 110 day voyage. First port-of-call was London, followed by Lisbon, Malaga, Motril, Marseille, Rome, Athens, Istanbul, Alexandria, Port Said, Suez, Bombay, Colombo, Port Swettenham, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Kobe, Yokohama and Honolulu.

Curriculum parallels that offered on the land-based campus, but is altered to take advantage of the itinerary to prepare students for exploration of the ports of call. While the campus is traveling between ports, classes are held 6 days a week. There are the usual extra-curricular activities too such as a weekly newspaper, yearbook, service and special interest clubs debate, music and drama presentations, dances and sports.

Miss Hoffman who will be returning to Colorado State at Fort Collins in mid-March is the Area Representative for Chapman College. She urges interested area students to contact her at her home here for more information. Her phone number is 625-2050.

Following are excerpts from an article written by Judy regarding her homestay in Cairo, Egypt.

My homestay in Cairo is history now, but for two days and two nights I was part of an upper class Egyptian family. My "sister" for the two days was a beautiful lass who celebrated her 19th birthday January 5.

I met Malak Ghazaly at the American University in Cairo, where she is in her first year of sociology studies. We entered a building fronting on one of Cairo's busy streets and took an old self service lift (elevator) to her family's fifth floor flat.

I unconsciously held my breath as we rose up the open shaft in the little compartment that appeared to be supported solely by a slender, fiber cable.

Dinner gave me opportunity to try a variety of foods, some new to me, all delicious. We began with a common dish called "molok" or green soup. Rice served with tomato sauce followed this, then chicken and potatoes. Side dishes included eggplant salad, bread with date jam, and two kinds of pickles (homemade, of course). For dessert I sampled two lemons: one, very tiny and sour, and another, very large and sweet.

Malak and I shared many common ideas, including our first loves: horses. We were up very early the next morning, for we were going to Giza to ride horses around the pyramids and ruins. Our intention was to beat both the sun and the tourists to that famous desert site. The horses, all Arabians, were well-trained and beautifully cared for. Upon our return to the stable our Arab guide put one of his prized "dancing" white Arabians through his paces. These specially trained horses independently execute salutes and other maneuvers upon group signal.

Naturally, before leaving the pyramids I had to try my hand at camel riding. After I mounted, the camel lurched to her feet, and at the driver's command "Susie" and I were off at a bone-rattling gait. I didn't know now to "post" to it, sitting to it was impossible, and I couldn't stop. But Susie took heart and eventually halted.

Malak had to return home to change into a skirt before going to her class at the University. I found the A. U. C. so Americanized as to seem much like home. However, slacks are still not acceptable apparel for women.

Professors at the A. U. C. are from the U. S. All the social and academic procedures are patterned after American institutions. While sitting in on one of Malak's lectures, however, I noted some interesting differences. The lecture was conducted on a somewhat high school level. The professor took care to speak with extreme clarity at all times, even writing topic ideas on the blackboard. I noticed that he was continually reminding the students not to chatter among themselves, which they did persistently.

I mentioned this to the professor in conversation after the class. He pointed out to me that it was not only the nature of the Egyptians to be very eager to learn, but also to be extremely talkative. Also, he explained, they would often ask each other what he had said because they were embarrassed to ask him to repeat. English is still a considerable barrier to some.

From the games we went to the University theater for an exchange of one-act plays between Chapman and the A. U. C. A fullscale party with a buffet dinner and dancing followed at a large flat. I certainly found the Egyptians to be most generous, kind, and witty. Barriers of language or nationality were entirely lost to sight as Arab "jerked" with American to the rhythm of the Beatles. One student explained to me that this situation would only happen among A. U. C. students. If I were to go to one of the Egyptian colleges in Cairo, I would experience a drastic difference in academic systems and social customs.

Thus far I had had little chance to talk at length with Malak because of the many activities. Once started, we were absorbed with comparing backgrounds and religions, and speculating on our futures.

Living with Malak are her mother, a divorced sister, a brother-in-law and his two darling children: a girl aged one, and a boy nearly four. The children's mother died from typhoid and other complications one year ago. Malak's father died when she was but five, so Mrs. Ghazaly had had much to cope with. Fortunately she has been well-to-do and has not had to work to support the family. The entire household simply engulfed me with their warmth. I am being honest when I say I became a part of that family in little over 48 hours.

The lives and actions of the family center around their devout acceptance of Islam and their strict adherence to the teachings of the Koran. Malak and I found striking similarities in our faiths. Whether the name be Allah or God, I feel certain that He to whom Malak and I turn in prayer is the same one. Malak's mother follows the formal tradition of prayer five times daily. That day, while in the "second Cairo," the bazaar, the muezzins' call to prayer was heard. We paused in our shopping long enough to go to the nearby mosque. Hundreds of people of every social class were gathered there, equals in prayer.

I'm hoping that in the not too distant future I may be able to return in kind at least a part of the kindness I received by entertaining Malak in my home. Her visit to the U. S. is only in the dream stage for both of us. But so were my thoughts of visiting Egypt but a few short months ago. The Moslems have a beautiful phrase which they use in regarding any future possibility: Incha Allah—"If God wills." As with many things, this prayer we now share.

Reaching out . . .

-FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY-

O Lord God, with my whole heart have I sought Thee; O let me not wander from Thy commandments. Psalm 119:10.

George Washington left public life in 1796 at the end of his second term as President, returning to his beloved Mount Vernon at the age of sixty-four, a statesman of world wide renown, a man of sound moral principle and a great Christian. The Farewell Address announcing his retirement is one of the greatest State Papers ever put forth for the guidance of the American people and we quote from it here only in small part.

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity," said Washington, "Religion and morality are the indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the name of a patriot who would subvert these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. Let us ask, where is the security for property, for reputation, for life itself, if men lack the sense of religious obligation? Therefore one should with due caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of education on the minds of men, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.

These are the winged words of a prophet, of a man of wisdom and understanding, of a man of great faith, truly the Father of his Country.

Eternal God, our strength and our Redeemer: Move us, we pray Thee, to great faith in the presence and the power of Thy guiding Hand and in Thy Providence and Mercy. AMEN.

Everett Butters

House held a dance every Saturday night. Week-ends were the busiest with the trains bringing crowds in from Detroit on Friday night. And it was an enforced law that no one ran around town in their bathing suits—people who didn't stay covered were fined. There was a Chataqua offered several times a summer—refined vaudeville with lots of speeches.

These were prosperous times—the bank gave out the fact they had over 2000 accounts. But when a full size newspaper began publication in September 1939, the picture had changed. When William Stamp started the Clarkston News, a full scale depression was under way and this was reflected even in the ads. People weren't buying—they were trying to sell. Clarence Phillips, a township supervisor, advocated cutting the wages of county and township officers, commenting that the prosperity that had raised these salaries had declined and so should the salaries. A prime rib roast was $.25 a pound at Waterbury's Meat Market and milk sold for $.08 a quart. Michigan Bell pushed their product with ads that implied that the man who was job hunting had a better chance for a position when his employer could reach him more quickly by phone. And almost every one was job hunting.

By Constance Lektalan

Man seems to be a creature that just has to know what is going on in the world. This might be simply insatiable curiosity or a deep concern for his fellow man but he wants to know 'what' and 'who'. 'Where' isn't always important, and 'when' isn't always vital but he wants to be informed. It was undoubtedly this yearning for learning that started newspapers. The first recorded effort to keep the public informed of current events was the Roman 'Acta diurna' started by Julius Caesar and posted daily in public places.

There were people in the Clarkston area long before 1830 and they had as great a bump of curiosity as anyone else but they didn't have a newspaper until 1877. At that time the Clarkston Enterprise made its appearance, and was issued every two weeks until about the end of 1878. It seems incredible that there wasn't a paper of some sort until after the Civil War. We surmise that during the War Between the States, there is a possibility that the telegrapher at the railroad depot might have received battle news and lists of the Michigan soldiers killed or wounded, and posted this at the depot or relayed it to the village. For its size, Clarkston had a great many boys in service, and it's hard to believe their parents and wives would have waited patiently until someone rode into another village to get the news of the war.

Printers were sometimes drifters in those late days of the nineteenth century and one day, prior to 1805, one drifted into Clarkston and started a weekly called the Clarkston Record. This was printed on what was known as a bed press, a flat arrangement that had to be inked by hand with a huge roller. This elderly publisher, being a stranger in town, needed help getting news items. Lee Clark, just beginning high school, got the job of hustling up news about the village and surrounding area. Since there was only one telephone in the entire village, this was done strictly by shank's mare. After about six months, this paper ended publication.

In 1895-96 a paper called the Clarkston Advertiser was brought out every Friday. This was published by the same editor that published the Holly Advertiser and was a four page issue. This was followed by a period of about 25 years when the art of visiting and making afternoon calls hit an all time high. There was simply no other way to get these vital statistics such as who was marrying whom and how much corn was selling for.

Lee Clark after his schooling was completed was established in the monument business with his father. Their shop was located in the field stone building that still stands on the corner of Main Street and Waldon. Mr. Clark was also assistant cashier in the Clarkston Bank. He saw a need for a news outlet so it was decided to place a large blackboard up in the bank. If a farmer had livestock or produce to sell, he placed an ad there. If there was a birth announcement or a meeting of the Ladies Aid coming up, it was posted in the bank. About 1920 this evolved into a small lively newspaper with Lee Clark as editor. This was known as The Community News. It started as a folded sheet of four pages, measuring over all about 8 x 10 inches. This grew over the next few years and selling first for $.50 a year and then for $.75 and in its ads and social items, presented a vivid picture of that prosperous, still leisurely time.

While there were many small businesses in the village, the area was still largely populated by farm people

Early risers last Sunday had a chance to see these local girls on television. Sue Vascassenno and Rose Theriot of the Oakhill 4-H club appeared on WWJ-TV, Channel 4. The girls were demonstrating "Line and Design in Dress" with their State Show-Winning demonstration.

They collected $102.79. Flanking them are two second place representatives, Vicki Kidd and her teacher, Mr. Bidenger. Their total was a very close $101.63. In all $779.50 was contributed from the school.

Local woman named to U.F. board

Mrs. Vincent Bronsing of 8648 Thendara Blvd., has been appointed to the governing board of the Pontiac Area United Fund Women's Division. The appointment was announced by Mrs. Merrell Petrie, Women's Division chairman.

Mrs. Bronsing, who last year served as Independence Township, Area II chairman of the Pontiac Area United Fund Campaign, will represent Independence Township on the governing board to assist with the work of the recently reorganized Women's Division.

Reelected to another term on the board is Mrs. James Cowen, 6170 Overlook Drive. Mrs. Cowen was overall Women's Campaign chairman of the P.A.U.F. drive last year.

The reorganized structure places emphasis on supplementing the educational and promotional work of the Pontiac Area United Fund and to coordinate the activities of women interested in the work of the Division, according to Mrs. Merrell Petrie, Women's Division chairman. All women's residential campaign activities are constituted directly under the P.A.U.F. campaign division structure.

"We are confident that the new concept of our volunteer division will bring about a better understanding of the vital role the United Fund and agency services play in the community," Mrs. Petrie stated.

Future activities will include public forums on health, family and social concerns, agency tours, exhibits, speaker's bureau, and volunteer opportunity and awards programs in co-operation with agency services. These programs will be made available to township residents as are all U.F. agency services.

Recognizing the changing times and the need for a change of emphasis, committee members have made by-law changes, formed new committees and prepared job descriptions during the past several months. Basic changes include provision for a broader base of volunteer representation from townships and agencies affiliated with the Pontiac Area United Fund, the formation of a community service committee, and provision for a rotating board.

FREE NURSING COURSE OFFERED

Illness and injury occur in every home at some time, and the fact that mothers are usually the overburdened "nurses", is well known. How to make the best use of time, conserve energy, carry out the doctor's orders and comply with local health regulations in caring for the patient are of vital importance to mother's patient and family.

A free Red Cross Home Nursing Course will help mother to learn how. It will also give her knowledge and training that she could use to help herself, her family and her community during a local disaster.

Such a course is being offered again at the Oakland Region, ARC headquarters 118 Franklin Blvd., Pontiac, Michigan, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., beginning Monday, February 27.
