VOLUME 38 10 CENTS

CLARKSTON, MICHIGAN 48016

THURSDAY, MARCH 28, 1968 THE 3 SECTIONS NUMBER 31

The blizzard caught some with their tricycles out.

Independence may be paying for ambulance

Richard Rudluff, a partner of Fleet Ambulance Service, talked to the Independence Township board Tuesday night about a possible agreement whereby the township would pay for service within the area.

Fleet Ambulance now has an ambulance stationed at Dixie Highway and Waterford Road. It is staffed by four men. Rudluff said his company has been operating in this area for 14 months and at a loss. Fleet and General Ambulance service both come into Independence, however, General doesn't have a vehicle in the immediate area.

Rudluff said they now serve Independence, Springfield, Waterford and part of Brandon Townships, and they need 100 runs a month, which averages $38.00 each, to break even financially. They aren't getting this number of calls, he said.

Asked if Fleet had any agreements in other communities, Rudluff said Avon and Oakland townships and the village of Rochester have such a verbal agreement. It is on a 6-month basis. Avon pays $500 a month, Rochester $300 and Oakland $50. Crittendon Hospital also provides free housing. The total of all these, Rudluff said, adds up to the $1,000 a month they feel they need to continue the service in those areas.

He proposed a different pay scale for Independence. The figure mentioned was 4 cents per person per month. Which census figures, 1960 or corrected were not decided.

Nothing was decided Tuesday. The board agreed to have the clerk, supervisor and township attorney meet with Rudluff in the near future to discuss the Fleet Ambulance proposal further.

The awful cleanup is now underway at the Food Town Super Market.

Former Ford Farm

Two parcels in zoning

There was considerable discussion of the proposed Deer Lake development of the former Ford property at the Township Board meeting Tuesday before a resolution was passed to rezone two parcels.

Present were the developers, of Deer Lake Development Corporation, Lloyd Kirby, John Halveston, Mahlon Benson, and Ed McNamara, and two of their planners. They sought the rezoning of one 43 acre parcel from Agriculture to Residential 1 (single family) and a 68 acre piece from Agriculture to Residential 2 (multiple).

The resolution doesn't officially rezone the parcels. Rezoning can come only after an amendment has been passed by the board to rezone and a waiting period of 30 days passes after it is published in a newspaper.

The amendment action could come in a few weeks. Prior to that the Development Corporation must come up with subdivision restrictions for their area. These would go first to the Planning Commission, then back to the Board for approval.

One of the restrictions sought by the Board was that only single family units and town houses would be built on the peninsula, and that no more than 6 units would be constructed per acre. The township ordinance allows 12 units per acre.

The developers told the Board, and showed them in several drawings, their plans to try to maintain the present terrain and preserve all the trees they possibly can. In all about 390 acres are included in the development, 340 of these are the former Ford farm.

Being considered for this acreage is a golf course, activities center, open space for recreation housing and possibly a boat storage area. The housing is expected to be for the upper middle and upper income bracket with rent running to $400 a month for some of the attached single family units.

These units would be built in units of six.

Most of the roads in the subdivision would be private with the subdivision owners providing snow removal and maintenance.

Sally Sobocienski, who lives on Northview Drive, found the snow that had swamped the area Saturday, quite a thing of pleasure by Sunday. Perhaps Sally, like many other children and adults realized this could be the last big one of the season.

Jim's Jottings

By Jim Sherman

Spring arrived at 8:22 a.m. Wednesday, March 20, 1968... and, Boy, wasn't it welcome? Bring on the golf clubs, paint buckets, rakes, fishing tackle, outboards, and hats. Yes, I said hats.

I'm a great hat lover. You'd never know it to see me, because I have one old hat for deer hunting, one for dress, and one for work. The red fur lined one is missing patches, the dress black is probably out of style, and the work hat is out of season and worn so badly it should have been discarded long ago.

But, I have hats. I got a duck hunting hat I've never worn, a cap that hasn't come off the shelf since my wife said she didn't like it, a water-proof golf hat that is seldom worn because it never rains on a golf course, a straw that I bought about the time I decided to quit wearing hats and it was misshapen the next time I found it.

I have a railroad man's cap that I was going to wear on the golf course as a joke but never got up enough nerve, a felt fedora I was going to use for fly fishing and I'm a spinning tackle man, and a bright red and white plaid once worn as a star first baseman at a Labor Day celebration in Vernon, Michigan.

Other than the three standbys I like hats for the psychological effect they have on me. A gay hat lifts my spirits. Trouble is when I get ready to go to work its morning, and I'm in no mood to have my spirits lifted. I'm grumpy and I like it.

But, when I go to buy a hat I'm not grumpy, I wait until after lunch, so I end up with no hat for my grumpy temperament and toss on the old one.

One of my favorite comedians is Peter Lind Hayes and the reason he is, is because he does a skit with various hats. He comes on with a tree full of hats and proceeds to adopt the character he feels befits the hat. I like to think I can do the same except my skit times come late Saturday night when its inside, smokey and loud. Then, no one is ready to watch since everyone thinks they are the best comedian in the world.

I would say the greatest influence in the hat market today has come from skiing. Skiers come from Austria and Switzerland and they wear Tyrolean and since skiing is "in" even those who don't ski like to give the impression they do. I wear a Tyrolean and I don't even go to the slopes to pick up my kids.

Today I went down to look for a spring hat. Practically everything had the shape of the Tyrolean. I didn't look close but I assume they have replaced the feather or brush decoration with a straw or dandelion blossom gone to seed. Regardless, I didn't buy one because they didn't put me in a grumpy mood.

Instead, I ordered a double breasted blue sport coat. This will fit both my extreme moods. The double breast is supposedly "in" and will give me the "let's have a good time" air and the blue will go nicely with the mood I'm in 90 percent of the time. Make that 99 percent.

Jim's Gem: Did you hear about the guy who bought his wife a car coat and it was recalled by a Detroit tailor?

Initial plans for new sub approved

Preliminary plans for the Pine Knob North subdivision on the northwest corner of Pine Knob-Clarkston road was approved by the Independence Board Tuesday night.

The property, 30 acres, was previously owned by Arthur Tondou. He retained 10 acres directly on the corner. The subdivision will have 56 lots.

Prior approval came from the township Planning Commission and Oakland County Coordinating committee. Other agency approval is, such as the road commission, is now needed under the new subdivision control ordinance.

Fire takes storage shed at Al's Hdwe.

When the fire call came in at 8:42 p.m. Wednesday that there was a fire at Al's Hardware, 5880 Dixie Highway, the first thought of many was that it was going to be a loss like Food Town 2 days before.

The fire proved to be a storage shed in back of Allen Hinz's hardware. It stored charcoal, wheel barrows, shovels, etc. The wood building, 14 x 24, was a total loss, as were the contents.

The Independence Township Fire Department listed the cause as "spontaneous combustion of charcoal."

Mr. Hinz estimated the loss on the building as $500 and the contents $400 to $500.

One fireman, Bob Tilley, was injured slightly at the scene when a ladder struck him on the head giving him 2 small cuts above the eye.

Dismiss suit on M15 dump

One suit against Independence Township has been dismissed by Oakland County circuit court. This concerned the dump on M-15 and involved Independence and the other two townships who previously owned and operated the dump.

The judge dismissed the case on his own motion for "lack of progress." Some sort of action must be taken by the plaintiff to indicate action within a certain period of time and apparently such progress was not forthcoming.

The plaintiffs must now take action to re-instate the case or initiate a new suit. The township board was informed of the court action by Paul Mandel, Independence Township attorney.

Fire department runs

The Independence Fire Department spent about six hours on Sunday fighting a saw dust fire behind R & D Welding on Dixie Highway. They returned at 2 A.M. and the job of putting out the smoldering fire was accomplished on Monday by a bulldozer.

A call for the resuscitator was also answered on Sunday and early Tuesday morning the department went to the intersection of I-75 and Dixie Highway when a car went out of control.

Silver Star awarded Spec. 4 Daniel Jenks

For his gallantry in action, Spec. 4 Daniel D. Jenks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Jenks, 1192 Big Lake Road, has been awarded the Silver Star.

Under the direction of the president, Spec. 4 Jenks' award came for his action in the Republic of Vietnam, June 21, 1967.

The award said Spec. 4 Jenks distinguished himself by exceptionally valorous action while serving as a machine gunner with Company A, 2nd Battalion, 7th Cavalry during a search and destroy operation near Phan Thiet.

"On the above date his company halted for a brief rest in a densely wooded area, it came under fire from an enemy force. Spec. 4 Jenks, though wounded by enemy automatic weapons fire, moved his machine gun to a good firing position."

The award continued, "Although still receiving heavy enemy fire, Spec. 4 Jenks held his position, killing the enemy machine gunner that had wounded him in the initial burst of fire. By placing an accurate base of fire with his machine gun and by continually exposing himself so that he could detect the enemy, Spec. 4 Jenks was able to pin down the enemy while his unit maneuvered toward the hostile position.

"Spec. 4 Jenks continued to place accurate fire on the enemy until he became unconscious due to a loss of blood and was medically evacuated."

Spec. 4 Jenks is a 1965 graduate of Clarkston High School.

Tournament talk

Once again the crystal ball got a little tarnished as just about all the tournament picks lost. Only Detroit All Saints won and they won by only one point over Saginaw St. Stephen.

The U.P. teams were white-washed from the finals as Menominee, Detour and Wakefield lost. About the only thing the U.P. had to offer was the typical lousy weather.

The only favorite to win was Detroit All Saints. They certainly were deserving of the #1 ranking, 27-0 record. The only team in Michigan to go undefeated. Holland Christian, Menominee, and Ypsilanti all had better than 240 records but left East Lansing with one game in the loss column.

The team to watch next year has to be Vanderbilt. They lost by two points to the Class "D" champion, Flint St. Matthew, 71-69. Vanderbilt is losing only one boy from their starting five. This school has only 74 students in the top 4 grades. This averages out to only 9 boys in each of the 4 grades. When a team comes up with this type of talent, the town can be busting with pride.

The two most agonizing shots in the tournament went to Menominee's Pat Miller and Detroit C.C. Tom Gutkowski. With seven seconds on the clock and Menominee behind by one point, Miller's shot from the baseline rolled around the rim and fell off. Tom Gutkowski missed his second free when the game was 71-70 in favor of Ypsilanti and 24 seconds left. The ball rolled around the hoop, Ypsi got the rebound and scored the winning bucket.

Willow Run had the best shooting team in the tournament. They were not very big, not nearly as big as Holland Christian or Menominee, but they certainly could shoot the eyes out of the bucket.

Flint St. Matthew and Willow Run had the worst records of any team in East Lansing, but once again they proved records mean nothing in tournament play. Willow Run lost 9 games before tournament time and Flint lost 8.

Menominee came 1st class all the way, as they flew to the quarter final and state final games.

Wakefield came the farthest, some 600 miles and Flint St. Matthew the closest - only 45 miles.

It was a toss-up who had the

Notice of Public Hearing

The Planning Commission of Independence Township, Oakland County, Michigan, will hold a Public Hearing on April 18, 1968, 7:30 P. M. at the Township Hall, 90 North Main Street, Clarkston, Michigan, to consider the following change in Township Zoning District.

best looking cheerleaders, but Detroit Austin and Detroit C.C. had the best organized cheering sections.

The worst call of the game came in the Willow Run - Menominee game. The official thought the Menominee boy stepped out of bounds with only 30 seconds left. Most of the fans knew he blew it by guessing.

How about that 75 foot shot by Al Richardson of Ypsi - it must be some kind of record.

A total of 745 teams started in tournament play, with 4 of them champions - Grand Rapids Ottawa Hills "A", Willow Run "B", Detroit All Saints "C", Flint St. Matthew "D".

Over 12,000 Michigan high school boys participated in the tournaments, quite a few now Mr. Forsythe how about a high school girls tournament. I know the state of Iowa has one and the attendance for the state is as great for both boys and girls. I wonder if they have boy cheerleaders?

This is the greatest amateur show put on in Michigan - every one should take the opportunity some time in one's lifetime to witness such an outstanding event!

Another exciting basketball year has passed us by - the basketballs will have to be put away and out come the spring sports - but with our U.P. weather, the snowmobiles will get another workout.

Attends postal convention

Postmaster Elizabeth Ronk attended a three-day Postmasters' Training Conference in East Lansing, Michigan on March 17, 18, and 19, 1968. This was the Seventh Annual Conference to be held under the sponsorship of the Michigan Chapter of the National Association of Postmasters. Sessions at the Conference were of a workshop type with staff and resource personnel being provided by the Chicago Regional Office of the Post Office Department.

A highlight of the three-day Meeting was the banquet held Monday evening, March 18th in the Ballroom of the Union Building, East Lansing. Donald L. Swanson, Chicago Region Postal Director gave the main address at the banquet. Swanson reviewed the progress made by the Post Office during the past year in its efforts to achieve President Johnson's goal of superlative postal service.

Swanson noted that the 1967 Christmas mail handling operation was the most successful and efficient in the Department's history despite an increase of over 3% in mail volume over the previous year. More than 75% of all first class mail was airlifted. He predicted that Postmaster General O'Brien would go before Congress for the establishment of a priority mail category by the end of 1968, which would combine first class and airmail into a single category of mail.

Swanson commended the postmasters in attendance for taking time out, at their own expense, to increase their knowledge and to improve their abilities as postal managers.

More than 450 postmasters from throughout the state of Michigan attended the conference and participated in sessions which concentrated on such topics as: Principles of Managing a Post Office; Courses in Mail Classification Procedures; Procedures in Employee-Management Relations; and a series of other topics related to post office operations.

A window that focuses

If we could have a place out in space to sit and watch the world under us, our reaction to things happening today might be different. Say that we had a window that we could use to focus on particular sections of the world.

At first, we might be confused as to where we should focus our window. Riots in the streets, whispered propaganda fans the fires of war and everywhere we could see the vast distance that separates the haves from the have-nots.

It would also be interesting if our window were equipped with a time machine, something that we could use to compare man, a thousand generations ago, with man today.

Bringing our window into sharper focus on a small peninsula of Vietnam, we might see a lush country being torn apart by the tools of war.

Huddled in some debris, we would see a frightened boy. With his hands wrapped tightly around the stock of a gun, he would be peering through black eyes, poised to kill. His mother isn't caring for the cause that he's fighting, she wants him home—close to her side.

Huddled is another frightened boy. He is a foreigner to the land. Yet, like the first, he's peering out, watching the rubble around him, ready to kill. Also, his mother cares not for the cause. She wants her son back.

With each passing day the mortality rate climbs. The coffins are filled and replacements arrive. Equipment is destroyed and replaced. The resources of the world are pumped into one controlled holocaust. The most precious is the frightened boys that are destined to obliterate each other.

Whether it be a gun, bow-and-arrow, spear or stone, man has always resorted to killing as his means to promoting differences in political ideology. Since the beginning of time, nations have risen to supreme heights and then crumbled into impotency.

For the last, it seems like a thousand years, we have been fighting communism. We haven't gained anything in our fight on the battle field. What is needed in this continuing struggle for freedom is for us to come forward and show the world that we have ideas that work. Ideas that will create a better way of life for man, a better, more humane environment. An environment that has the fresh smell of tolerance, love and understanding. We might then win the war.

How Much is a Million?

One hears so much these days about "millions" and "billions" that it escapes the imagination to try to visualize how much money they actually mean.

Try this for an explanation:
If a housewife goes shopping 40 hours a week, spending $1,000 an hour, it would take her 25 weeks to spend $1 Million. If she followed the same schedule, spending a billion dollars would take her 481 years. How's that for an explanation?

Or, another way to tell the difference between a million and a billion, at the same rate of spending, it would take a housewife, 158,009 years to spend the equivalent of the U.S. national debt.

On the other hand, who would want a wife that is 158,009 years old? (Ontario, Ohio, Tribune)

Subtle psychology will do it everytime. A couple of weeks ago I wrote about non-specific plans for the coming fishing season. Beautifully, the Jolly Green Giant rose to the bait. For those who don't know, Jolly Green is an alias for the boss, Jim Sherman.

Jolly gets around to reading my stuff about two days before you do. After my writing about fishing, he came forward and said, "By golly, we're going to have to sit down and start figuring out when we're going fishing." He thinks that he knows sort of a game of wits between us to see who's going fishing, when.

Now, my problem isn't with Calhoun. If I wanted to go fishing tomorrow... season permitting, all I would have to do is get in the car and go. She's terrific. (That's a plug to hook her over to my side.) In fact, she's so great, that she would even help me pack my bags, make pies, and prepare full scale meals for me to take along. She knows the value in my staying healthy. She knows that I have to have time for recreation, fresh air, and be free of pressure. She encourages me to go every chance I get. But, for the Jolly Green, he's not so understanding. I fully understand his point of view. He too is under a tremendous load. There is the unrelenting pressure to come up with the cash to meet weekly payrolls, pay business expenses and always the worry that someone isn't going to show up for work. For all the strain that he is under, he needs time to go up north, even though he is probably a lousy fisherman. He needs time for golf. He needs time for recreation and fun with the boys. (All the foregoing is a short putt to build his image in his family's eyes.)

This afternoon Jolly let me have a look at a pamphlet type magazine put out by some fishermen. One article told about how a guy can get more time away from his wife for fishing. The article told how it was possible to make excuses in such a way that a guy could fish year-round, spending his time in the north and gradually moving to the warm sunny climate of the south.

It seems for the fellow who wrote the article that his biggest problem was to get out of maintenance chores around the house; mowing the lawn, painting windows and the like.

I have none of those problems. We've got a yard full of critters. All they do is mow-de-lawn, fertilize it as they go and keep everything uniformly trampled.

Putting new windows in the house is gradually eliminating the need to change from storm windows to screens and back again. In another year I plan to get the house sided and eliminate the need for painting. In fact, within the next couple of years, there just won't be any maintenance around our house- ever. The animals, of course, will have to be fed; but shucks, they belong to Cal and I'll continue to help her out when I'm not fishing.

The article fellow advises to miss the opening day of the fishing season. He thinks that to go around making a martyr out of yourself is going to endure you more to your wife and she's going to be more anxious for you to go fishing when you make a big sacrifice.

That's a bunch of baloney. If fishing means enough to the guy, he should let his wife know where he stands and either invite her along or go by himself. The main thing is to go.

Now, to get the jump on the Jolly Green, I'm putting my fly rod in my car tonight. It might have to stay there for a month until the season opens, but I'll be ready. Looks like this year, it's going to be a race to see which one of us is going to get out of town first. I can't see any reason to get caught at the starting line, I'm ready to go right now, or something.

Petula's beat awakened a bigot

By Jim Fitzgerald

I wonder if the beat would go on if Petula Clark quit holding hands with Harry Belafonte and kissed Pete Seeger?

Or: TV can be beautiful. You just have to know when to laugh.

Right now I am laughing at Bob Rierson, program director of WJBK-TV in Detroit. Also at Doyle Lott who used to manage advertising for the Chrysler-Plymouth division.

Both men recently stubbed their touchy toes in TV land and landed in the news. Rierson censored a song sung on the Smothers Brothers show. Lott thought Plymouth sales might suffer if TV viewers saw Miss Clark touch Belafonte on the arm.

Let's laugh at Rierson first for no better reason than he was the first to make an ass of himself. He rubbed out the last few lines of an antiwar song sung by Pete Seeger on the Feb. 25 Smothers show. I watched the show on the Lansing channel and heard the entire song. The forbidden lines implied President Johnson is a big fool for letting American boys die in Vietnam. Big hairy deal. At last report, the Lansing TV station is still standing, unstoned. So are the hundreds of other stations that carried the song.

And WJBK brass must be wondering how Rierson mistook a pebble for a bomb.

Rierson and his fellow executives mouthed the usual nonsense about not wanting to insult the office of the President, no matter what they might think of LBJ personally. They sounded as if they'd been careful not to track mud on the White House carpet. Good lord! It is impossible to rap an office without bruising the man who currently sits in it. And vice versa. Any clown who doesn't realize this shouldn't be a censor.

A few days later, Rierson ate crow but tried to make it look like steak. Seeger's censored lyrics were played on a WJBK news program. The pompous explanation was that it is ok to criticize the President on an informational program, but not on an entertainment show. Good lord again! Using the same foggy reasoning, a newspaper should print my opinion of LBJ on the editorial page but refuse to quote Pete Seeger's opinion on the entertainment page. Bobby Kennedy should quit smiling for votes on the Johnny Carson show, Senator Dirksen should quit making those horrible records, Governor

Reagan should resign, and Will Rogers should have been shot.

All of which is a frivolous fringe of the important point: WJBK, at least on one black Sunday, decided it was unacceptable for an entertainer to say the President is pursuing a foolish policy in Vietnam. It is not necessary to be anti-Johnson to see where such thoughtless censorship could lead: the next step could be to allow only good news from Vietnam and only love kisses for the President. The people's right to know would be limited by a TV station's right to employ stuffed shirts.

Now a b o u t Doyle Lott, the Chrysler-Plymouth ad man. He was in charge of the Petula Clark TV show, just taped for airing April 2. Lott's stomach, or something, was upset when he spied Miss Clark hanging on to Belafonte's arm while they sang a duet. Petula is from England and perhaps she didn't know that Lott-type Americans are all for civil rights but, goodness, their women don't actually TOUCH Negro men. Lott demanded that the scene be shot again, with no further contamination of the master race, please.

(It's too bad Lott wasn't running the Johnny Carson show a few days earlier. Belafonte was host and Miss Clark was his guest. She planted a kiss right on handsome Harry's chops. That would have shocked the stuffing out of Lott's sheet.)

Anyway — Belafonte and a lot of other people objected to Lott's bigotry. The story hit the newspapers. Caught with his Klux showing, Lott mouthed some feeble excuses which impressed no one. He was fired from the Plymouth account and it is hoped that the beat will still go on, even in Harlem.

The funniest thing about guys like Lott is that they usually call themselves liberals. They'll march and carry signs to win justice for the Negro. They'd stand in line to kiss Lena Horne. But, by God, they don't want any black boys messing with their white girls.

And we are certain that Bob Rierson and other WJBK executives would preach loudly in favor of free speech and the right to dissent. Just don't do it between 9 and 10 p.m. Sundays, please. That time is reserved for fighting Bonanza.

TV can be beautiful. You just have to know when to laugh to keep from crying. Δ

Another Day

By Constance Lektzian

David Shaft—The day of the carriage maker

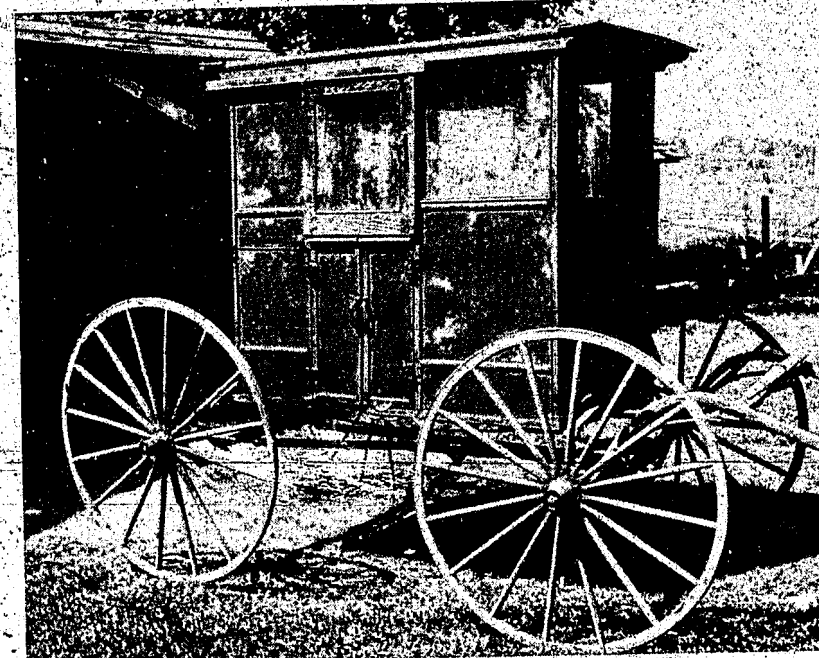

Threat of another war with England hung over the eastern seaboard in the early spring of 1812. There was unrest everywhere and the economy, especially for the working class of people, was shaky. David Shaft, who long years later became a resident of Oxford, was born in March of that year in York state. His parents, Jane and Cornelius, were native born Americans and they and their people before them, had shared in all the early struggles of settling this country.

Families were large in those days, and parents quite often put their young sons to work at an early age or at best apprenticed them to a trade. David was only 12 when he left home and that was young even for 1824. He set his feet on a wandering path for a big share of his life. For a short time he set himself to learn the trade of a miller. When he found that not to his liking, he worked at farming for four years. A farmhand had small chance of coming up in the world and David sought out some other means of earning a living.

Railroads being in their early limited years of development, carriages and wagons were the sole means of land transportation for the majority of the people and goods. They conveyed the farm product to market, rattled the mail over the rutted village roads, jounced passengers between stage stops and got the family to church on Sunday. Not as fast or as smooth as cars, they filled the same position as cars in the culture of their day; and the carriage builders had the same status that today's auto builders enjoy. So at the age of 17, David Shaft of his own free will bound himself to learn the trade of a carriage and wagon maker. This took three years and when he had his time, he followed many of the other pioneers to

The men who built the carriages and buggies in the days before the auto were craftsmen—serving years of apprenticeships for their trade.

Michigan in 1832. He apparently did this just for the sake of the trip because he didn't stay long. He next traveled southward, ending up in Charleston, North Carolina and from there rode one of the early railroads to Petersburg, Virginia. He drove a cab in Richmond before taking off for a look at the nation's capitol. It was here that David got a job painting carriages and wagons and it was to this shop that the carriage of President Jackson was sent to be painted; with David doing the work. Years later, with his children and grandchildren gathered around him, he would tell stories of his stay in Washington.

Even Washington didn't have enough charms to hold him there and he took a job in Steubenville, Ohio painting stage coaches. If David had an artistic streak, it would have come out in this work for stage coaches were gay affairs painted in several colors with touches of gold scroll work. Maybe it was while working on one of the stages that David began to long to see the places that the coaches visited. In any event, his next job was as a stage driver in Ohio and then in Erie, Pennsylvania. By now he had almost made a complete circle; he was only a short distance from where he was born.

After a winter of stone cutting at Lockport, New York, he went to the near by village of Rawsonville, for one reason or another. It was here he met the girl he married shortly afterwards, Eliza Curtiss. He either decided to settle down or she decided for him but in any event, he opened a wagon-making shop there that he ran successfully for many years. Shortly before the Civil War, the Shaft's with their four children, emigrated to Michigan. When the war broke out, David left his ninety acre farm and enlisted in the 1st Michigan Regiment Engineers and Mechanics. After three years of honorable service, mostly with the army of the Cumberland, he returned home. Either from age or inclination, he stopped wandering. Most of the remainder of his life, was spent in the vicinity of Oxford. Here too, in this general area, his four children, daughters Jane and Josephine and sons Gilbert and William H. H. settled and raised their families. The last named son got his name from the first president his father voted for.

What does the employer think of the Co-op program

Editor's note: The Cooperative Education program initiated in Clarkston High School 3 years ago experienced immediate and has had continuing success. The two areas are retail sales and office. The program director, Roger Thompson, has received several letters from employers praising the program and we will be publishing some of them from time to time. The first appear below.

COMPANY: Richardson Farm Dairy, Clarkston
SPONSOR: Mr. don Vachon, Owner

I believe very much in the theory of learning by doing. You can explain how to do a certain job to a student but he does not understand it completely until he has tried it for himself. He is faster and more accurate because of on-the-job training. The student benefits from working with the public and assuming more responsibility. The coop. student seems to take a more active interest in his job and can help out more in other areas of the business that he or she is working in. The program is well worthwhile to the student, school, parents, and employer. I hope to have another coop. student next year.

COMPANY: Thrifty Drug Stores, Drayton Plains

SPONSOR: Mr. James E. Sinclair, Jr.

Learning by doing is certainly the most effective way for a novice to familiarize himself with a vocation. This is true of almost any occupation whether it be in the arts, law, teaching, medicine, pharmacy, firefighting, banking, selling or what-have-you.

I feel that a practical exercise following a lecture, a demonstration, or a conference is almost a requisite to the student if he is to benefit fully. Generally, people will retain more of any instruction if they can participate in a practical exercise following any didactic session. The axiom "There is no substitute for experience" is certainly applicable in the coop. program.

With the coop. program the employer stands to gain by employing coop. students in several ways. One way, of course, is that the student is available for on-the-job training for a large portion of the day. Instruction given at school frequently can be integrated into daily work details if the teachers involved can inform the employers about current studies. I would like to suggest that

By Rev. H. C. Cranston
Drayton Heights Free Methodist Church

"THE ULTIMATE OPERATION"— that's what Time magazine called one of the most amazing strides in the history of medical science. Forty-four year old Dr. Christian Barnard and his medical team removed the heart of Louis Washkansky and placed in the cavity a young healthy heart of an accident victim. Regrettably he died; but since December 3rd, 1967, Dr. Philip Blaiberg and many others have received new hearts in the same manner.

In Christian thought the heart often represents the seat of man's affection and devotion. In this sense, God has been performing heart transplants for thousands of years.

A new heart is needed even to practice the Golden Rule. An Indian was sitting by a fireplace with a friend. Both were silently looking into the fire. At last his friend broke the silence by saying: "I have been thinking of a rule delivered by the Author of the Christian religion, which we call the Golden Rule."
"Stop," said the chief, "Don't praise it; tell me what it is, and let me think for myself." He was told that the rule was for one man to do to another as he would have the other man do to him. "That's impossible; it cannot be done," hastily replied the big chief. Silence followed.
In about 15 minutes the Indian said:
"Brother, I have been thoughtful of what you told me. If the Great Spirit who made man would give him a new heart, he could do as you say, but in no other way."

A new heart is needed to help one find purpose and meaning in life. A California paper voiced the absence of purpose in youth of today. It said "In Berkley we have seen bearded and unkempt youths, more proficient in cynicism and obscenities than in ambition and loyalty, flouting the gifts of a great country. They have lost something along the path of life either in education or in their homes." If the center of the affection is unregenerate, it will lead men searching down the path of immorality, and indecency. For Jesus said, as recorded in St. Matthew 15:19 "For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies, St. Mark's record adds "lasciviousness, evil eye, pride, foolishness, covetousness, wickedness,
and deceit."

New hearts are needed to produce genuine Christians. Many have tried to adopt the traits of a Christian, but an absence of the power of transformation has led to failure. According to St. John 1:12 God furnishes the power for this transformation. "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, to them that believe on his name."
Do we not need more heart transplants in the realm of the spirit?

35 Buffalo Street

By Constance Lektzian

When the tall handsome Victorian structure was built in 1860, the Methodist Church on the opposite corner was a small frame building. Conjecture has it that the Vliet who built the house was also, for a time, the village undertaker. That would have been William VanBuskirk Vliet who could not have been a very young man at the time, but who would certainly have had the family to fill the many commodious rooms.

Later, Josephine Vliet, a niece, and her husband, Charles Smith, lived there. When Josephine was widowed, she built a small white house across from her old residence and sold the larger house.

This was in 1890 and the villagers were agog at the news—not by the fact she sold the house, which seemed sensible enough, but the purchaser, another widow, Mrs. Ira Morley, paid the unheard of sum of $1000 for the house and lot! When good houses could be bought for half that amount, it seemed incredible that a person in ordinary circumstances would pay out that much money.

Perhaps it was because Juliette Morley was not an ordinary person. The widow of a man who had been superintendent of the Bay City schools for many years, she herself was a school teacher. She was also possessed of a great deal of musical talent and in addition to teaching, she gave piano and voice lessons.

Determined to give her two sons, John and Warren, a good home, she decided this house on Buffalo Street, with its nearness to the school and churches, met their needs.

Mrs. Morley was a teacher who took a deep interest in her pupils' welfare. She sponsored in the 1890's - an organization called the 20th Century Club and the students met at her home. In one of the small attic rooms, a little printing press was set up where the members printed the club's monthly publication.

The big house saw a few changes when John Morley took it over at his mother's death. Mr. Morley was for many years a justice of the peace and the parlor at the Buffalo Street entrance became an office and the nearby bedroom across the hall was turned into the consultation room. Here he passed out judgements and performed weddings. He later went into the real estate business and utilized the same office. It was a lively house with something different going on every day. John acquired a collection of clocks—upwards of a hundred of them as the years went by. Most of them struck the hour and a great number of them also struck the quarter and half hour - a rather startling diversion in the midst of a business discussion.

In 1954 the widowed Mrs. John Morley sold the house. Now almost 100 years old, two Hanson families became its proud owners. Paul and Marilyn Hanson along with daughter Polly and the George Hanson's, Paul's parents, find more than enough room for their three generations of family.

The upstairs has been converted into a spacious apartment for the senior Hanson's. This second floor contains two bedrooms, a large living room and even larger kitchen and a full bath. The space once occupied by Juliette Morley's student meetings and printing press are now two storage rooms.

The stairs that lead to the second story, with its massive balustrade and steps, start out much the same as any other stairway. But at the top, they form a 'Y', and the stairs exit in two different directions. The center of the 'Y' is filled in with steps, each longer than the one before. Never before, in a house of any age, have we seen a duplicate of this stairway.

No walls have been moved and no major structural changes have been made.

The entire house reflects an age when lumber was good and plentiful. The wainscoting in the dining room is waist high and all the doors are thick and heavy. This room contains in addition to the dining furniture, a large antique roll top desk and a number of bookcases and is still not crowded.

Cupboards have been added by the Hanson's in the long cheerful kitchen. At the end of this is a door that leads to the senior Mr. Hanson's workshop, where he refinishes and repairs antique furniture. The entire house reflects his handiwork, with cupboards, shelves and bookcases. There are also a small hanging pine chest, a lovely three tiered serving table with removable trays, antiques in green and a number of footstools all turned out by Mr. Hanson in his workshop.

Less than two years ago, the house was covered with aluminum siding in a soft gray, completely in keeping with the era in which the house was built. Shortly after this, fire broke out in the upper part of the house. It was discovered by Mrs. George Hanson in time for everyone to get to safety. It was fortunately put under control before it had spread too far, but it was necessary to replace some of the flooring upstairs and replaster the front downstairs parlor where the ceiling had fallen through.

The two Mrs. Hansons discovered to their horror that the repair men were replacing some scorched doors with modern slab doors complete with contemporary hardware. They dragged the old doors from the trash heap and Mr. Hanson decided since they were not charred, they could be salvaged, porcelain door knobs and all. Today they are hung back in their original spot, sanded and painted, ready for another hundred years.

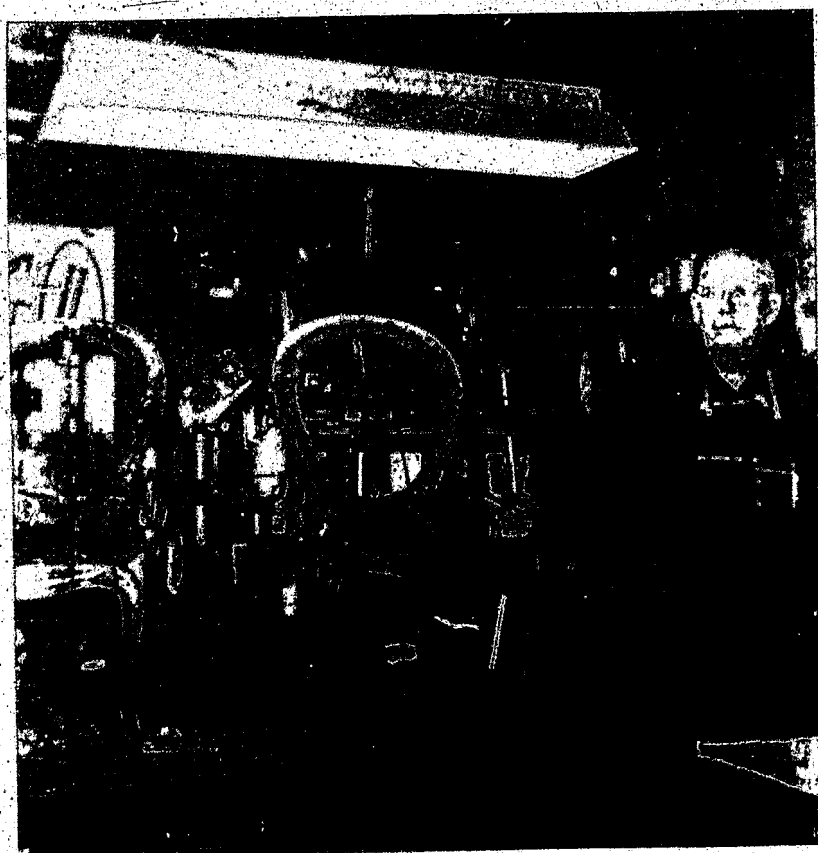

All the windows have beautiful old locks of scrolled metal with porcelain knobs. The windows that had to be replaced after the fire were refitted with this lovely old hardware. Neither Hanson family has any desire to modernize or update their home, only to preserve it in its original state. Everywhere there are lovely old antiques, well-kept with loving care, but used for everyday living.

There is one parallel between yesterday and today - there is still a school teacher in residence. Mrs. Paul Hanson - Marilyn - after teaching for a number of years in this area, is now a very popular and well-liked counselor at Clarkston Senior High.

The old house at 35 Buffalo Street has seen many changes in the village - many trends have come and gone. It stands as a testimony to an era when houses were built with patience, skill and an abundance of lumber.

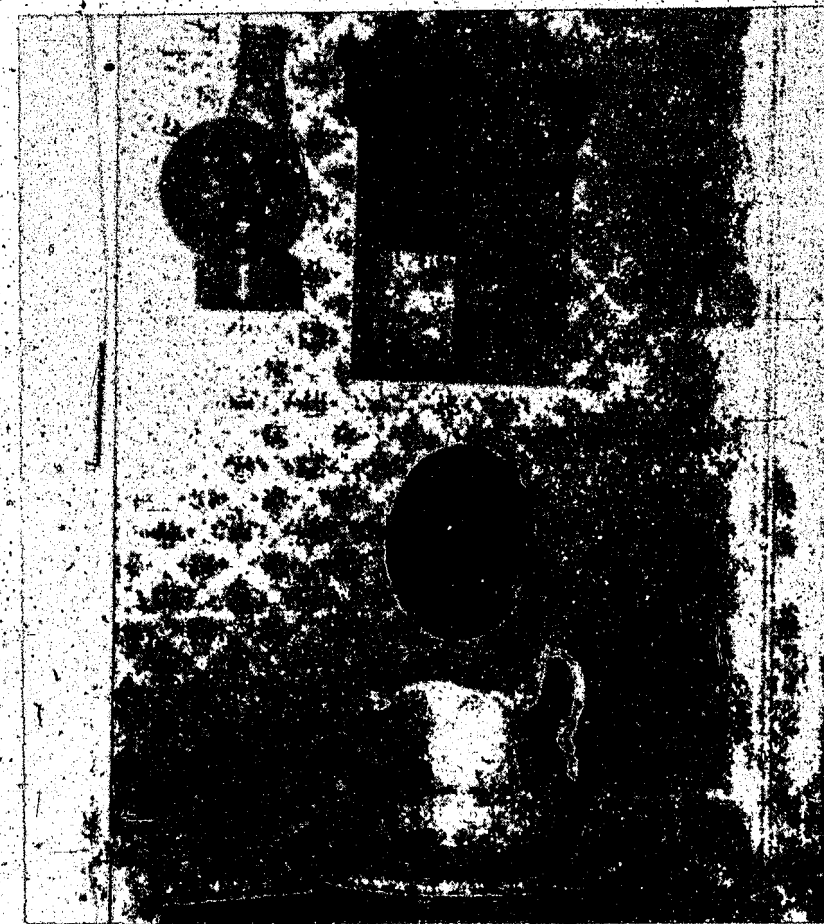

Our thanks not only to the Hanson's but to Mrs. John Morley, now of Pontiac, Mr. Lee Clark of Auburn Heights and Mr. Raymond Day of Rochester for information and pictures.

Mr. George Hanson in his workshop—a very busy place.

Attended Jaycee meet in Tulsa

Flowers and fur shared the reflected interest of Mrs. Jack Dougherty last Friday at the First Methodist Church's Hat Party. The party managed to satisfy many a woman's need to try on something light and springy.

Spring finery went to the heads of many ladies last Friday at the First Methodist Church's Hat Party. Among those giving into their spring fancy, and loving it, was Mrs. Joseph Hubbard (seated). Assisting Mrs. Hubbard in her hat selection was Mrs. Jack Jyleen. Community projects such as this hat party, are nothing new to Mrs. Hubbard, who is one of the original members of WSCS.

Lewis E. Wint, member of the Clarkston Area Jaycees has just returned from attending the annual three-day Board of Directors Meeting of the United States Jaycees in Tulsa, Oklahoma, which convened Thursday, March 21. Wint who is one of the 308 Jaycee board members from every state and the District of Columbia, is also a National Director of the Michigan Jaycees.

During the Tulsa meeting, the Board considered proposed programs and projects for subsequent adoption and availability to all 6,300 local chapters of the organization. New programs that were on the agenda included the areas of public health and safety, governmental affairs, youth development and public affairs. Additionally, the proposed 1.7 million dollar operating budget was reviewed by the Board for the next fiscal year.

At the climax of the meeting on Saturday, the ten planning groups recommended courses of action for their specific areas of programming during the 1968-69 Jaycee year. Major decisions of the Board are subject to action by the general membership at the 49th Annual Jaycee Meeting in Phoenix, Arizona, in June.

Tulsa is the site of the War Memorial Headquarters of the United States Jaycees and the Jaycee White House, home of the national president during his year in office.

Wint is owner of the Lewis E. Wint Funeral Home in Clarkston and is also a Past President of the Clarkston Chapter.

I'll be singing my swan song, if I don't get something scrambled up for this week's paper. Late, late copy from the employees is definitely considered treason, punishable by you know what. Maybe you wouldn't miss me if I became the Canned Columnist of Clarkston, but I would, especially since I had the misfortune of glancing at the Female Help Wanted section of the daily classified. The Stock Market should look so bleak. My choices ground down to this: Under heavy sedation, I could probably be trained for the position of dental assistant... Or perhaps I could seek a fashion career in cosmetics. I thrive on cover up tricks and just happen to have a year's supply of make-up left over from the last such venture...

Someone needed a girl with a good telephone voice. Just last week someone called on the phone and said "Greta?"... or was that "Gertie?"... or was that "Gertie?"...

Got real excited over this one that said "Housekeeper, cook, lovely private room." Shucks in the rush of reading I thought it had said "lively"...

Old age saved me when one soul searcher started out... "Refined lady, 60-65"...

And then there was that tempting call for someone in a candy shop. That application will go in when they start shipping ice cubes out of Africa... Over and over I came across strange words like experience, capable, ability and the like. They shook me up so that I decided even if I was too pooped to poach I would think up something serious and devout. Maybe something on the subject of euchre.
