Haunted house

The old Knox farm, once a gracious home, has fallen prey to vandals. Now known as the "haunted house" of Springfield Township, its story is on page 3.

Jim's Jottings

By Jim Sherman

Bird watching is not my thing. It's not that I don't like birds. It's just that when I look out the window it's to see the weather, or where the kids are or if the geography has changed.

Occasionally a cardinal flits by or a big rooster pheasant struts across the yard and I call for one of the clan to share the color. The only other feathered interruption I have is of passing geese, and they usually call my attention through their honking.

Geese in flight are magnets to the eye. When the plasterers were working on Hazel's house they told me, "This job wouldn't take long if the geese would quit calling us to the window."

Birds are not fed in our back yard, they are harassed by our dog when they fly near... you'd almost get the idea we rejected them. However, this isn't true.

But neither is it true that I love birds. I wouldn't have one in my house, if that decision were ever mine to be made. (I said the same thing about gerbils and we have one.)

I am fascinated, however, by a newspaper that comes with some regularity from Griggsville, Illinois which brags about being the "Purple Martin Capital of the Nation". Purple Martin fanciers must be in a world alone. Enough information (and money) comes to the Griggsville Wild Bird Society each month that they can produce a 24 page newspaper, without any advertising, with nearly every page devoted to Purple Martins.

A little time with the newspaper has about convinced me to put up a Purple Martin house, though the cleaning has me hesitating.

One of the pages in the society's most recent issue was given to another creature of the trees, the black squirrel. Part of it was devoted to a legend I'd never heard:

The rat and the squirrel both lived in the Garden of Eden. The squirrel's tail was hairless like the rat's before Adam and Eve tasted the forbidden fruit. When Eve handed Adam the apple, the squirrel drew its hairless tail before its eyes, and for this, it was rewarded with the feathery plume it flaunts today.

End of legend. Wow!

The writer of the article must be as much of a squirrel watcher as some people are birds. I'm not, though we have one or 2 around. However, he says the squirrel uses his tail as a rudder in flight, a poncho in stormy weather, an umbrella in the sun.

If the squirrel can get all that use out of having hair on his tail he ought to be darn glad his ancestor covered his eyes from Adam and Eve.

Curriers stunned by wanton burning

Glenn and Sara Currier, her eyes red, sat in the neat kitchen of their new home on Perry Lake Road last Friday morning and tried to think why anyone would set a fire that would destroy 75 goats and their last two years of hard work.

Outside the big old barn, newly insulated, newly equipped, and almost ready to accommodate the Grade A license necessary to a goat milk dairy, smoldered in its own ashes.

The farm tractor sat on charred rubber wheels amidst the ruin.

Toward the road, the relic of the old farmhouse, burned eight years ago, groaned in the wind which swept the hill.

"It had to be set," said Glenn. "We'd gotten some more hay, but it was three years old. It was the last thing to burn." The flames had awakened them at 3 that morning.

The fire started at the northern end of the barn, the only exit for the 75 nannies that was to comprise the Currier's milking herd.

"I don't know whether we'll go on or not," said Sara. "We've just lost $8,000 - $5,000 in a mortgage - that we used to repair the barn. And there was a lot of other people's furniture stored there, too, furniture we were supposed to refinish."

"We'll have to call them, too," she said to Glenn who was trying to reach the insurance company. "We really don't know whether the loss was covered or not," she said.

The Curriers, who have made a practice of taking other young people into their home - some whom they've helped get rid of a drug habit, made the money that supported the farm by refinishing furniture.

They were hoping to give that up as soon as the farm became productive. "Glenn just had another week's work to get that license," she said.

"I don't know. The taxes are so high here. All we want to be are farmers. Maybe we should go west."

A neighbor had stopped by to commiserate with the Curriers and he left.

"Just because we live differently, because we have other people in our home, there are some people who don't like us, but to burn all our hard work and our goats..." sighed Sara.

To her it was unbelievable. She cuddled a baby goat saved from the flames as were two cows and the farm horses.

"We love our animals," she said, and she nuzzled the kid.

Seymour Lake United Methodist Church Women's Society of Christian Service has established a mission fund to enable the Curriers to get back in business. The whole community has been invited to participate. Checks may be made out to the WSCS-Currier Mission, and they will be accorded tax deductible status, according to Sally Cook of Cook's Corner Farm.

CLARKSTON

New twp. employes approved

Thurs. March 9, 1972 3
The Clarkston (Mich.) News

Independence Township is looking for a financial consultant, a Department of Public Works director, and three other employes, most of whom will be paid out of Federal Public Employment Program funds.

The employment of a financial consultant and the DPW director were two of eight goals spelled out in a needs report presented at the beginning of Tuesday night's board meeting by Supervisor Gary Stonerock.

Treasurer Kenneth Johnson voted with Stonerock and Trustee Keith Humbert to initiate the search for the new administrators.

Trustee Tom Bullen voted with Johnson and Humbert to hire a bookkeeper, a building department superintendent and a general utilities man with money from the township's $79,000 federal grant, when his attempt to have the money used to pay Sheriff's patrolmen in the township failed in a 2-2 vote.

Implementation of the contract with the Sheriff's Department still awaits county amendment requested by the board last month, Stonerock said.

One of the main duties of the financial

"Sale Seeker" service offered

The Clarkston News is offering a new "pay only if you sell" "sale seeker" classified advertising listing for a limited time to Clarkston area residents.

Dealers will not be allowed to participate in the program which permits an individual to run an ad up to four weeks. If the item advertised is not sold in that time, there will be no charge.

If it is sold, The News will accept as its commission 10 percent of the advertised price up to $100, 5 percent of the second $100 and 1 percent over $200.

The regular classified section of the paper is still open to dealers and is available for notices of rentals, services, personals, wanteds, etc.

No "haunted house"

By Gloria Bellairs

"Haunted" is an adjective inappropriate for the old Knox farm on Knox Road in Springfield Township. Though 174 years old, it was occupied continuously until last September.

It was then the Grate family moved their last load of furnishings away and the caretaker locked up and left the gracious old home.

Within days vandals started picking the old house apart. The hand blown windows were smashed, the porch pillars pulled away, and the carved corner moldings torn off and taken.

The reputation of being haunted was bestowed on the old farm by young people. A printed invitation to a haunted house party, distributed through Clarkston, Ortonville and high schools throughout the area including Milford, advertised a party there February 18.

By midnight that night the Oakland County Sheriff's Department and other law enforcement officers were called.

consultant will be to prepare the Township budget due for public hearing this year on March 21, Stonerock said.

The name of Bill Wilson, presently Township Water Department Chief, was mentioned by Stonerock to head the DPW. The new administrator will be charged with overseeing operations of the cemetery, water and sewer departments and building and ground maintenance.

Busing vote due March 20

When Independence Township residents go to the polls March 20 to elect a new township clerk, they'll also have the opportunity to state their feelings on forced school busing.

The Township Board has agreed with Edward Manley, chairman of the Clarkston chapter, National Action

Oil seepage to go to court

A class action suit against the Buckeye Pipeline Company to end oil seepage in Deer Lake will be started by the Township Board.

Ed Farrell, president of the Deer Lake Property Owners' Association, presented the Township Board with a jar of oil Tuesday night, which he said he collected on the lake's northern edge.

Apparent failure of the company to empty out a cesspool there, has caused the whole surrounding area to be permeated with the oil, Farrell said.

Baptists host gospel team

Rev. Frank Gonzales and his Gospel Team will appear in services March 13 to 19 at First Baptist Church, 5872 Paramus. Week night services will be at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday services are at 9:45 and 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., according to Rev. Clarence Bell, pastor. The services are open to the public.

Stonerock's other proposals in his opening statement included the acceptance and acquisition of a 40-acre park site and the construction of a new community activities building.

He said he wanted a decrease in multiple housing density as now set forth in the zoning ordinance. He also asked that the zoning classification of Suburban Farms be changed to Residential Estates to encourage single family home construction.

More open space was also asked in the planned unit development zoning category.

He said two new fire station sites should be purchased in the northeast and northwest corners of the Township and his final proposal was a long range goal — construction of Township offices in a more central area of the Township.

Colombiere offers program variety

Colombiere College will host a seminar in Christian thought at 7 p.m. March 11. Sister Corrine Bart will discuss the Eucharist.

The plan and thrust of the spiritual exercises of St. Ignatius will be discussed in a two-hour lecture series at 1 p.m. March 18 at the college. Rev. J. McQuade, S.J., Rev. John A. McGrail, S.J., and Rev. Jules Toner, S.J., along with Sister Margaret Baker, H.V.M. will speak.

A married couples' retreat with emphasis on communication between husband and wife is slated for March 24 to 26, and a movie, "The Gospel According to St. Matthew" will be shown at 8:30 p.m. March 26 and 27 and the college.

Further information on the programs and retreat is available from the college, 9075 Big Lake Road, phone 625-5611.

Group, to include the question on the ballot: "Do you favor an amendment to the U.S. Constitution that would prohibit forced busing and guarantee the right of each student to attend the appropriate public school nearest his home?"

He pointed out that such a vote would have no legal significance; that it would be a "straw" vote telling the state and nation how residents feel about the use of busing to end school segregation.

Public hearings on the condemnation of two homes in the Woodhull Lake area will be held next month. One home is a burned shell and the other, reportedly structurally sound, has a sewage problem.

The Township will use up to $2,000 in a matching program with residents for the purpose of allaying dust on township dirt roads. The money will be used for a sodium chloride program.

Vacant property a headache

By Gloria Bellairs

Old, abandoned and vacated properties in Springfield Township are giving local authorities problems.

Jim Halsey, township constable, told the township board meeting March 1 that some 250 teenagers were recently removed from an abandoned farm house where they were holding a party.

Halsey said nothing further could be done, except to tell them to leave because police did not have the address of the present owner, and in order to press charges the owner or authorized agent must be available.

He said the same held true for homeowners absent for an extended period. "Someone should be authorized in writing to sign a complaint in case of a break-in or unlawful occupancy," he said.

Supervisor Claude Trim asked that residents knowing of vacant properties contact the township offices as to location and the whereabouts of owners.

He added that citizen help could also aid in cutting down the number of complaints of thefts of building materials. Trim asked that anyone seeing a vehicle loading materials from a building site get the license number and description and call the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

Mrs. Mary Jean Cox of 5950 Ware Road, Davisburg, asked the citizens present to sign a petition to support Irene McCabe in her walk to Washington, D.C. Mrs. Cox is a member of the Clarkston Chapter, National Action Group.

The annual township meeting was announced for 1 p.m. Saturday, April 1.

The outbuildings, beset by time and fire groan in the winter wind.

Once fine interiors reflect the degradation of vandals.

Better things expected

A look back at the voting record in last week's primary seems to indicate that not too many of our newly enfranchised 18-year-olds seized the opportunity to vote.

It may be that they're simply not much different from their parents; the turnout reflecting only 21.5 percent participation of those adults and young people, alike, registered to vote.

For the birds

All about "den" trees

By Rose Baird

"Den" trees seem to be a timely subject; as soon as a dead tree is occupied by wildlife it becomes a "den" tree. Usually wildlife prefers a dead tree for pecking out a cozy hole. Although live trees do harbor wildlife, in one instance, a Downy Woodpecker lives in a tiny hole next to a suet feeder; in another, wild bees issued forth from a cavity on a warm spring day and still another in which a tree of 15 years or more has had a well-worn hole at its base.

All the woodpeckers live in a hole or "den." Red, Downy, Hairy, Red-bellied, Pileated, and Yellow-shafted, also called Flicker which the U.S. Department of Agriculture has found with 5,000 ants in its stomach. Other woodpeckers feed on pests of nearby trees. Of course, we all remember:

"Over in a meadow

In a hole in a tree

Lived an old mother Bluebird

And her little Bluebirds three."

Should a "den" tree serve as a "trellis" for a vine, maybe a Virginia creeper or grape, both excellent wildlife food, Catbirds, Cardinals, Brown Thrashers or Song Sparrows may nest there.

When these holes are vacated, a Flying Squirrel, a Nuthatch, a Wren or a Chickadee might move in. Trees with large holes will harbor raccoons, Opossums and some owls. Beneath loose bark, bats, harmless snakes and salamanders might sleep. In crevices and

There has been considerable interest expressed in registering to gain the right to vote among the younger people, and it may have been the foul weather or the fact that the immediate past election was "only" a primary that caused disinterest.

But, frankly, we'd expected better things.

under bark the beneficial ladybugs might hide; and much they are in need of hiding places with less and less wood in the modern dwellings. By the way, each ladybug needs 40 plus soft-shelled insects per day for its survival.

Purple Martins, arch enemies of mosquitoes, take up their abode in hollow trees; anyone who has a "den" tree with a good sized hollow and a nearby oak tree near a lake or stream might wind up with that most beautiful of ducks, a wood duck; he likes acorns and unusual for ducks wants a hole in a tree. With his iridescent blue wings, green top head, red eyes and distinct white markings, he would make a delightful summer visitor. He has been in Clarkston ponds.

In one instance in Europe an "even-aged stand of single trees harbored no wildlife." Much damage was done by forest insects until nesting boxes were installed. So "den" trees are valuable.

We agree with John Vosburgh (editor of "Audubon Magazine" 1961-66) in his recent writings when he drew attention to dead trees as being "still useful" and he advised "to spare them unless they overhang a roadway or are potentially a source of danger to a dwelling" and finally added: "Before you remove a tree weigh it in relation to your own interests." There is use for the bark for edging flower beds and for the decayed material from the tree for garden compost.

"If It Fitz . . ."

I remember St Stephen's

Well, that about does it for childhood landmarks. Please excuse me a long sigh and short sob.

The newspaper says that, after next June, for the first time in 92 years there will be no St Stephen's Catholic School in Port Huron.

Thus disappears more tangible remains of the boy I used to be.

They tore down St Stephen's Church several years ago, probably because it looked too much like a church. Today, churches are disguised to look like night clubs or auditoriums. The idea is that maybe a lost sheep will wander in by mistake and be converted into holy lamb chops before he can escape.

Urban Renewal, that great eraser of children's footprints, long ago wiped out much of the old neighborhood where first I delivered newspapers, and later, delivered mail. The nation was deemed to learn something the paperboy had never realized there was a commercial reason for those red lights in some 1st ward windows. The awakening came one morning via an interesting proposition concerning payment of postage due. Since then I've always said I couldn't recognize sin until I became a federal employee.

But back to St Stephen's, from whence all sin was exorcised at 3:30 p.m. every weekday when the kids were sent home.

I was a student there for 12 years and what I remember most is the nuns in their flowing habits with the bottomless pockets. The nuns were forever running raffles. Parents donated food and then bought tickets on it from their children. Any mother who didn't give at least a can of peas, and then spend 15 cents trying to win it back, was in mortal trouble if she should die before making a full contribution.

Anyway, the nuns were forever dipping shoulder deep

In Lansing

Is and ought

by Jim Briney

This is my last column. While I have enjoyed writing and appreciate the opportunity to do so, I am no longer in a position to serve as "Lansing correspondent."

For well over a year now I have served as administrative assistant to State Senator Donald E. Bishop. Bishop is a man for whom I hold a great deal of respect. He is the kind of individual who continually restores one's faith in the electoral process.

Richard Lugar, the mayor of Indianapolis, who was my employer prior to joining the Bishop staff, inspires the same attitude. Working the past three years for and with such people has been its own reward.

I have decided to leave the Lansing scene, perhaps temporarily, for several reasons. I want to complete the Masters degree program I began in Indianapolis. Poor health after surgery and indebtedness drove me from completion of the degree with only a small amount of time required to finish it.

Now that health has returned and I am out of debt, finishing my academic work is a reality. I want to explore, also, the possibility of other employment, either in Washington, D.C. or Oakland County. And lest this come as a surprise to anyone, I am interested in seeking and serving a term in the Michigan Legislature.

There is a strong possibility that at least one additional House District will be created in our county this year which means that the Primary and General Election will be "open." That is to say that no incumbent will reside within the New District.

I am, of course, interested in this. As one who has sought to unseat an incumbent, I know how difficult that can be. As one who has seen the legislative process first-hand, I know that it is a worthwhile process and I still would like to contribute to it.

Not knowing the decision of the court on the apportionment matter, I have nothing on which to base my hopes for elective office at this time. But, you will be the first to know.

that waited. A nun who had taught biology was suddenly teaching aeronautics. She thought a Piper Cub was a young Boy Scout who played the bugle.

I remember the nuns' marvelous names: Rosario, Lucretia, Clementine, Angeline, and Hortense. Not a Cheryl in a school load.

The draft got me and I remember the furlough before I went overseas. I visited the nuns at their home, mostly to show off my sharpshooter medal, and they made a great fuss over me. As I was about to leave, the nun who had chased me across the bridge suggested that the sisters kneel down right there and pray for my safe return. And they did.

I remember thinking what a silly thing that was to do. Almost as silly as the tears that return to my eyes as I relive the moment.

Three constant companions

by Carl W. O'Brien

My great friend, Dr. E. Wm. Velsey, the widely-known world traveler and raconteur, is in an expansive mood. His subject, during a recent lunch, was anthropology.

Everywhere in the world man is to be found, Bill argued, there also are to be found man's three constant companions: dogs, rats and cockroaches.

The rats come first, says Bill, following migrant mankind like his very shadow.

Next, the cockroach follows hard upon. Wherever man makes his modest meal, these follow his feast.

The dog trails in last of all, but he never fails to appear. No society in the world, from Eskimo to Maori, is devoid of Bowser's company.

Today the dog has become our chief pet, and at least in Western cultures, is sheltered and even pampered.

It was not always so.

In olden times the dog, like the rat and the cockroach, not only dined at man's table but often became the main course there as well, especially as times got hard and meat scarce.

The beloved American Indian, in the days of his glorious reign on this continent, frequently dined on the above mentioned delicacies and was especially a voracious consumer of dog-meat.

The delightful Maoris, from Down Under, feast in present time on rat marinated in sweetened liquor. The Maoris, according to Bill, are a gentle and unspoiled aboriginal people. And if you visit them they will invite you in for lunch, Dr. Velsey says further, — he being a man who has enjoyed many a juicy repast with them in the interests of anthropology.

At various times in history the cockroach has served as hors d'oeuvres on sideboards and buffets from Alexandria in the North of Africa to Johannesburg in the South. The cousins of the Pharoahs gobbled them down with relish and much smacking of lips until Cleopatra's little brother Ptolemy anointed the lowly bugs and proclaimed that the reincarnated spirits of the dead settled in them. Ptolemy made it taboo to lunch on a cockroach lest you eat a returned ancestor by mistake.

Rats were later spared by the same device — they became objects of worship and were taken off the menu. As a result, plague nearly wiped out the entire population of Africa. Carthage crumbled after a century of pestilence when the rat population grew to uncontrollable proportions.

Until recent times the devouring of the rat was a no-no, not because he was thought to be a filthy disease carrier, but most often because he was regarded as a creature to be venerated.

Bill says this little rodent carries a highly toxic acid in its stomach and the hungry cook must, in the cleaning and preparation, be very careful lest the dinner guest get a good case of bubonic poisoning.

At various times the dog, the rat and the cockroach have been despised; at others, widely admired. Such are the fickle tastes of man. The folk lore and religious writings of China, Africa and Europe abound in stories concerning these ever-present associates of mankind.

History records examples of great cities being deserted because these creatures had so infested them. Man moved rather than fight. But it was only a short time until the trio's advance scouts found man's new home and the hordes and swarms joined him at table, sharing his feasts during good times and becoming his grub during lean times.

Our luncheon over, I shook Bill's hand, invited him to stop in again when home from his travels, beat him on the flip for the check and strolled back to the newspaper office.

It had been a very informative meeting.

Letters to the Editor

Garner supporter

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter to clear up some of the mud that is being pitched at Bob Garner, and you will undoubtedly read this before he is aware of what I've done.

I would, first of all, like to say that I've known Bob Garner ever since he and I were four years old. I have seen him grow up and mature, not as an outsider, but as one of Bob's closest friends.

I say one of his closest friends, because I feel everyone Bob has ever met believes he is their best friend.

But the main reason I am writing this is to say that Bob Garner does not want to be elected for Bob Garner, but for the people of Independence Township. Bob is not only bright and mature, but most of all he is a self-sacrificing young man that really cares about all of you and in all earnestness wants to help.

Please give him the chance. Even if you don't vote for Bob, get out and vote. Bob would want it that way. It's just the type of person he is.

Now, finally, I know some people will read this and say that I am biased, and I am biased, but for the best reason I can think of. I know Bob Garner, therefore I believe him wholeheartedly.

Vote Bob Garner for clerk, and I guarantee he won't let you down.

Sincerely,
Dennis Storrs

Complaint registered

Dear Editor,

In order for the voters of Independence Township to be fully aware of what is happening in the township, I think that publicity should be given to the fact that on February 25 there was a complaint filed with Township Attorney Richard Campbell, with supporting evidence, charging Township Supervisor Gary Stonerock with violating the zoning laws of Independence Township.

I talked to Campbell on March 3 and he acknowledged he had received the complaint. He also admitted he had discussed the complaint with Stonerock. I then asked him what disposition he had made and he told me he had give it to Dick Curn to check out.

To me, this is like sending a rabbit into a fox's den to see if the fox is hungry. How can an employe investigate his employer?

I am curious as to what Stonerock's answer will be to this latest complaint. Will he brush it off with another Biblical quote or will he admit his guilt?

Spiritual Message

Rev. Frank A. Cozadd

"LOVE YOUR ENEMIES"

To love your enemies does not mean that you have to like them. It does not mean that we are no longer enemies. Nobody can command us to like what we do not like, for emotions cannot be directed by moral laws.

And enemies remain enemies if their ultimate goals conflict with ours no matter whether we love them or not. So, "love your enemies" does not order us to do something utopian or sentimental.

What it means is that no matter what we feel about another person, or how we oppose his belief, there must be an acknowledgement that what binds us together is greater than what divides us. It is the "personhood" of the other that unites us in something that is above, and greater than, both of us; and our respect for this common ground of being must take precedence over our likes and our beliefs. This is the hardest lesson for us to learn.

We mistakenly imagine that if we could "love" our enemies, then we might become friends or allies; but this is not necessary, nor even possible in many cases. We may always be enemies - but we must treat our enemies as athletes in a contest, rather than soldiers in a war.

It may sound odd, but true athletes "love" their opponents. That is, they respect them as persons striving toward an opposite goal. And they oppose them only within rules that both obey, so that the winner wins on merit, not on fouls.

This is the kind of spirit Jesus was urging upon us, not a sticky sentimentality that tries to blink away human conflict or pretend that people can like each other better than they do. He was saying that it doesn't matter if you like someone or not, it doesn't matter if you agree or not - the only thing that matters is treating the other as fairly and cleanly as athletes do in a championship game.

This is true whether it is international politics in Peking or township politics in Clarkston.

Chicken flyer

by Jean Saile

As probably the most publicized one-time student pilot in Oakland County, the recent rash of plane accidents has left me more disgusted than afraid.

Anyone who would choose to fly in the kind of weather holding during the two most recent accidents — anyone who would not file a flight plan for a trip in such inclement weather — has got to be an accident going same place to happen.

They called me the "chicken flyer" when I was taking my flight lessons, and maybe I was too cautious.

If there were clouds in the sky when I was expected to fly alone, it was "no go." If the wind was stronger than 10 knots, ditto. If the plane didn't sound just exactly as I'd been led to believe a plane should sound, I turned it around on the end of the runway and headed back for the pad.

Some of the people who've been involved in crashes in recent times have had little more experience than I had, and Lord knows, that was little enough.

Actually though, there were only two times when I wished I was anywhere but in a plane.

The first time occurred as I was trying to get used to the short diagonal landing strip at Pontiac Airport. Any flyer will recognize it as the one with the approach over the pond.

There were times when that pond did nothing to me, and there were times when it made my pulse palpitate and my teeth chatter.

On one of those latter occasions, I wound up mired in the mud alongside the runway. The boys in the tower thought it was pretty funny, but I failed to see the humor as I stalked back to the hangar.

Somebody else got the plane out. At the time I could have cared less if they'd scuttled it.

The other time was my first cross-country solo, and like a dum-dum, I'd told my folks who then lived in Saginaw that I'd be flying a Pontiac-Saginaw-Lansing triangle.

As I approached Tri-City Airport near Saginaw, there were severe wind gusts and the tower told me only one runway was open — the one with a bad cross wind. I hadn't accomplished many cross wind landings, but I decided I was game, and on my approach to the strip I saw three figures standing off to one side of the field — my mother, my dad, and my brother.

Well, anyhow, I released the controls too soon and there was an instant when it appeared I might run over all three of them. A gust of wind swept me sideways, and the tower ordered a plane following to circle the airport instead of land. I guess they didn't want him getting tangled up in the wreckage.

Anyway, from somewhere came the automatic response to correct, and I lived.

Everything was just fine, almost. Mom didn't really know anything had gone wrong — for all she knew planes always landed crossways. Dad, having been without sight for years, couldn't see it. But the brother present had to be the one who had spent better than ten years in the Canadian Air Force.

He knew.

Behind the Counter

From Keith Hallman

Even a stark recital of the statistics on blindness in this country can be startling, when we translate the numbers into the actual persons who are suffering from some loss of vision.

For example, the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness estimates there are 430,500 blind people in our country today. Before another year is out, 33,800 Americans will lose their sight.

A child can be given a complete eye examination on the day he is born, but only a minute fraction of the children of pre-school age are tested. Actually, it's believed one in every 20 of these children suffer from amblyopia ("lazy eye") or other vision problems that could be corrected if discovered and treated before school age.

During the last year, about 167,400 school children suffered eye injuries (about half the number of those eye injuries reported in industry), and it's estimated that 12,670,300 school children need some form of eye care.

At this moment, about 1,718,500 Americans are threatened with blindness from glaucoma — again, a disorder that can usually be controlled if discovered and treated in its early stages.

All in all, the N.S.P.B. estimates that half of all vision losses could be prevented. That's another startling statistic — especially when you translate it into "you" and "me" as being the persons whose sight can be saved.

Wolves lose in tourney

By Craig Moore

Pontiac Northern's Huskies nipped the Clarkston Wolves, 64-63 in the district tournament semi-finals at Waterford Mott on Wednesday, March 1 to end all Clarkston tourney hopes.

The Wolves led the greater part of the game but lost it in the last minutes.

Clarkston led 8-0 before Northern started moving. The Huskies really moved when they finally got started and reduced the Wolves' lead to 2 points by the first quarter's 15-13 end.

The Wolves kept ahead of Northern in the second quarter with as much as a 9 point advantage, but by the half, Clarkston led by only 5, 32-37.

Northern kept coming on in the third quarter and as a result gained one point leads twice in the period. Clarkston came out holding a slim 47-46 margin.

A fourth quarter to end all fourth quarters followed. With 2:54 remaining, Pontiac Northern led 62-61. Bill Craig put in a free throw which came about when Northern's basketball coach was charged with a technical while in protest of one of the referee's calls. The shot tied the game 62-all.

Less than a minute remained when Northern went ahead 64-62.

Clarkston's Gary White was fouled and hit on only one of two shots and the Wolves trailed by 1, 64-63. Both teams took shots, none of which passed through the hoop and Northern got the ball and called time-out with 0:20 remaining.

The Wolves got the ball back when a Northern offensive foul was called and took a time-out.

Clarkston brought the ball out, Bill Craig missed a shot and Roosevelt Washington of Northern rebounded it. Clarkston's Mark Warren took the ball away from him and made his shot. The basket was declared no good because a foul was called on Craig before the shot was taken.

The Northern cager made his free throw but stepped over the line in doing so and no point was given.

Four seconds remained and Clarkston had the ball. Bill Craig was fouled and missed his shot on a one-on-one situation and the Huskies nipped Clarkston, 64-63.

Gary White led all game scorers with 31 points and Bill Craig and Bill Bildstein added 11 points apiece to the losing cause.

Bildstein played a fine floor game and was credited with 3 steals and 6 assists.

White also led in rebounding with 12 and Dave Partlo and Mark Warren grabbed 10 each.

Coach McDonald commented that the game was one of those that could have gone either way. McDonald was "just sorry it didn't go our way."

Wolverines down Cougars

Clarkston Junior High ended its 1971-72 basketball season with 2 big victories over Sashabaw Junior High before an estimated crowd of 1700 in Clarkston High gym.

In the 8th grade game, Clarkston won 37 to 30. The game was close all the way with Clarkston maintaining a slim lead. Leading Clarkston scorers were Dave Brown, 11 points; Tim Westover, 10 points; and Wayne Thompson, 8 points. Sashabaw's Weldon Graham had 11 points and Bob Holt 10 points.

The 9th grade game saw Clarkston avenge their Brighton tournament loss by defeating the Cougars from Sashabaw 53 to 38. The Wolverines jumped to a 17-2 lead in the 1st quarter while Sashabaw couldn't get the ball to drop in.

The Cougars held a comeback rally in the 2nd quarter to come within 3 points. The 2nd half saw Clarkston build to a 10 point lead and maintain it until the end.

Leading all scorers was Wolverine Mike Coulter with 18 points. George Porritt had 11 points. Seven of the Clarkston players scored in the game. The Cougars were led by Jerry Whitehead with 12 points and Jeff Casper with 11 points. The win ended the Wolverine season with a 12 wins and 7 losses record.

Clarkston Junior High cagers play "follow-the-leader" after a Sashabaw player during Friday night's game which saw the Wolverines beat the Cougars 53-38. The game gave CJH a 2 out of 3 win record this year with Sashabaw. Streaming behind the unidentified Cougar are Tim Doherty, George Porritt, Randy Limbaugh, Mike Coulter and Jeff Shell.

Survey aids committee

The results of a recent survey of approximately 2,000 Clarkston area youth regarding what they feel are their problems and the needs of the community — what they feel should be shared with parents and what type of behavior is used by them — was to be discussed at a Wednesday noon meeting of the Community Resources Committee.

A similar survey of parental attitudes is also underway, it was announced.

The Community Resources Committee, comprised of interested citizens and professional people, is currently aimed at providing a community center to be known as "Independence House" where various services will be provided.

The group has been offered a facility for the center, and Robert Brumback of the committee said he felt the community center concept could become a reality very easily.

Services to be offered would include family counseling, drug abuse help, crisis counseling, family planning services, venereal disease treatment, help with problem pregnancies, a senior citizens' program and agency referrals.

Space would be provided for social agencies along with facilities for community meetings, Brumback said. He added many agencies have already expressed an interest in participation providing there is community support for the project.

The community center concept will be explained to the people of the area in a program at 7:30 p.m. March 15 at the Clarkston High School Little Theater.

The committee is also engaged in study and recommendations on the area recreation program and police-youth relationships. Citizens interested in helping are invited to participate.

Woodhull says:

Thanks, but no thanks

By Jean Saile

Any Oakland County Planning Commission effort to help in the improvement of the Woodhull Lake area has been shelved, according to Assistant Planning Director Phillip Dondero.

Dondero told about 30 Woodhull residents February 29 he would recommend to the township planning commission that no further effort be made.

He based his decision on the results of a meeting at Sashabaw Junior High School in which 19 persons present asked no further action as opposed to 11 who desired assistance.

"If you ever come back and ask for assistance, we'll be glad to give it to you," Dondero said.

The meeting was the result of action initiated last August by the township board, but in the meantime residents of the area had petitioned against planning assistance.

Said Mrs. Donald DeWald, "Most people here don't trust the township board. We're asking for help, but we don't want it jammed down our throat."

Albert Mann told Dondero the area would rather bypass the township in obtaining available help from the county.

He was the spokesman, however, in killing the assistance plan because it was initiated by the township.

Julie Smith told planning department members, "We who live in the area find the problems are obvious. There is garbage in the streets, littered lots, tree stubs left on Detroit Edison property, absentee landlords who are milking the property. We have township ordinances covering everything, but there is no enforcement."

The Oakland County Health Department was also criticized. The case of a home in which 19 people reportedly lived last summer and where sewage had overflowed so it ran under the house was cited.

"Several people complained. We even went to the prosecutor's office, but they told us the owners were involved in a divorce case and they didn't know who to cite. The problem still exists, however the people have moved, and it's only the cold weather that has helped at all," said Miss Smith.

Fear of any Housing and Urban Development plan which could involve destruction of improved homes in the area was expressed by several people. Holly Stephens pointed out, "We obviously need some sort of help. We tried to help ourselves once. People were invited to join the Woodhull Lake Property Owners Association, and we found out we couldn't even get together enough to keep up three good pieces of lakefront property."

She pointed out that the association could have taken care of garbage problems and seen that roads were chlorided.

Mrs. DeWald reported residents in the area have made accomplishments "and with hard work and stubbornness, and with the help of the township it can be like it was." She spoke of the area of 17 years ago when it was still largely a Jewish summer resort and property was kept in good condition.

Joseph Rhoades, township planning commission member who chaired the meeting, said results of the township planning commission.

Reaction was mixed when Rhoades quizzed the residents how they would feel about an ordinance which would require that all housing be brought up to code before it is sold, or that a sum equal to the costs of the ordered improvements be deposited in escrow. The ordinance is similar to one in the city of Pontiac.

Open space land trust formed

An effort to preserve open land has taken definite steps in Independence Township with the formation of the Independence Township Land Trust.

Incorporated by the Michigan Department of the Treasury as a non-profit organization for the purpose of acquiring land or scenic easements by gifts or purchases, the trust has filed for a tax exemption with the Internal Revenue Service so that all gifts of funds or lands are tax-deductible.

Mrs. Malcolm McCord and Jerome Wilford were appointed auditors of the group at a recent meeting at which by-laws were also adopted.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Wilford and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Kimball have become life members, adding their names to a growing membership list.

Kimball will represent the group on a panel discussing "The Citizen Role - What We Can Do" at the Oakland University symposium, "Do the Laws Secure our Land?" March 21. William H. Whyte, author of the "Last Landscape" and "The Organization Man," will speak.

Land trusts are not a new idea but have become a necessary instrument for permanently preserving land. They have been used effectively in the east by such organizations as the Massachusetts Trustees of Reservations which has been in operation since 1908. Some of the more scenic parts of Cape Cod have been secured and turned over to public agencies as parkland.

Membership in the group, now ready to contact people interested in donating land, is open to all Independence Township residents.

Anyone interested in the preservation of open space, parklands and scenic or historic sites is invited to attend the next meeting at 7:30 p.m. March 15 at the Independence Township Hall.

Oratorical contest open to area boys

Boys not yet 16 years old have been invited to compete in the sixth annual oratorical contest sponsored by the Breakfast Optimist Club of Lakeland.

The contest will be 7:30 p.m. March 21 in the multi-purpose room of the Della Lutes School, 5195 Pontiac Lake Road. Subject of the presentations is to be "Our Challenge - Involvement."

The competition is open to all boys of Waterford and Clarkston School Districts in public, private or parochial junior and senior high schools who fulfill the requirements.

Each contestant is to give a four to five minute speech based on the official topic. The winner of the local contest will compete in a run-off contest in two areas of the state at a later date.

Interested boys are asked to contact Jim Matteson, boys' work chairman, at 673-9450.

Dog alerts family

Mr. and Mrs. James McVeigh of 10912 Andersonville Road, Springfield Township, are regarding their Dalmation dog as a hero this week.

The dog barked at 4 a.m. Monday, alerting the McVeighs to a fire which totally destroyed the inside of their house. Firemen from Springfield, Clarkston, White Lake and Holly fought the blaze for six hours.

The fire was believed to have started in a faulty furnace in the basement. All that was saved were some clothes the McVeighs were able to rescue from the home.

Undertakers implement program

Representatives of 39 Oakland County funeral homes have agreed to a supplementary set of safety procedures for their funeral processions.

After hearing Captain John Amthor, director of the Michigan State Police Traffic Safety Division, tell them he felt the funeral procession didn't represent a traffic hazard for his department, the 39 directors agreed to the following procedures:

1. A yellow flashing light will be placed on the first and last car of all processions.

2. Drivers will be instructed to use their bright headlights and remain as close as safely possible (three car lengths) behind the car in front of them.

3. All procession cars will be inspected before leaving the place of funeral to see that they are complying with the safety requests.

The 39 firms in attendance represent 95 percent of the funeral homes in Oakland County. County Association president Daniel Garrett says the program is their total commitment to preserving the citizens' right to use the highway for the purpose of conveying mourners to the cemetery in a safe, efficient manner.

Dr. Hima Geno knows your problem

Dear Dr. Geno:

My dad says I gotta get my hair cut, or he's going to cut off my allowance. The way I figure it, I gotta take the trimming both ways. Do you think that's fair?

Hairy and Happy

Dear Hairy,

I personally have never felt that a man should be judged by his hair — or lack of it.

Dr. Hima Geno, D.E.

Dear Doctor,

I keep watching afternoon television and I have come to the conclusion that my life is dull. Nothing ever happens to me. We haven't had a suicide, an abortion or a murder in the family — not even an affair. Do you think I should do something about it?

Frustrated

Dear Frustrated,

You can write your own television show, and I would be happy to lend you my expertise on any of the above-mentioned items. I'm usually free after 5 p.m.

Dr. Hima Geno, D.E.

A new look is coming to Main Street, Clarkston, as Bill Race proceeds with the remodeling of Haupt's Body Shop on the corner of Church.

Bill says the big front windows are being replaced with smaller windows and rough sawn board and batten cedar will adorn the front.

Construction up in township

Building permits worth $210,588 in new home construction were obtained in Independence Township during February. The figure is almost double that for the same month a year ago.

Total construction value on permits obtained for the month was $228,010 which included addition and remodeling to present structures

Dental program set for May

Preparations are being made for a fluoride clinic in early May in all Clarkston elementary schools. Under the guidance of the Oakland County Health Department, Dental Division, the program will be administered by a licensed dental hygienist.

Mrs. Gwen Wilton, PTA Health Committee chairman in charge of the program, said students in kindergarten, second, fifth and eighth grades would be offered the treatment.

She said new dental growth at those ages makes it practical that sodium fluoride be administered then.

Cost of the treatment which consists of a teeth cleaning and four applications of the decay preventative is $3. Notices have already been sent home with the children concerning the program, Mrs. Wilton said.
