Sidelights and tips on our recent family vacation to Washington, D.C.

We took the trip in a Ford van that has a second seat. It's a great way to travel. Everyone but the driver can move around, thus lessening tiredness brought on by traveling long distances.

Figure on getting lost at least once in Washington. We were lost each of the 4 days. It doesn't help to have the Parkways on each side of the Potomac named George Washington Parkway.

Make sure you have very comfortable walking shoes. It takes a lot of walking just to go through each building besides the walk to and from wherever you parked your car.

When you get tired looking for a parking place, park in an area marked "Sight seeing buses only". The ticket only costs $5.00. I know.

Carry some candy bars or even sandwiches. Lines in the only cafeteria and snack bar in the Mall area can be long at lunch time.

See the area lit up at night.

Try to get your Congressman to get White House passes for you. But be exact on when you want to visit this building. I told Bill Broomfield I would be in Washington April 21 and he got passes for that date. Actually that was the date I planned to arrive, and not in time to visit the White House. The guards wouldn't approve the passes April 24. I will never understand why not. They don't let you see anything when you get inside anyway.

Always buy a large or awkward package early in the day and carry it all day long even though you're going to pass the same sales stand as you leave the area. Your arm will feel long enough to scratch your toes without bending.

Until the high school seniors arrived after Easter Monday I got the impression there were no WASPS — white Anglo Saxon Protestants. The Indians (from India not South Dakota), Orientals, Italians and people speaking languages not familiar to me seemed to prevail.

I was really struck by the Chinese influence in the early history of America. George Washington had a collection of China, so did Lincoln. The Freer Art Museum on the Mall is three-quarters Chinese.

Oh, those aching feet!

More than 300 tired and aching hikers did their bit Saturday and raised a yet untold amount of dollars for independence center. More pictures on page 32.

Dump that trash -- May 12 and 19

Independence Township residents have a chance to get rid of unwanted and worthless articles at no cost between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Saturdays, May 12 and 19.

The Independence Township Board, repeating last year's success, has made available the facilities of the Ben Powell landfill on Clarkston-Orion Road.

Township residents, bearing proof of residency, can take advantage of the offer.

Drop-off points for smaller, bagged items have been designated at the American Legion on M-15 north of I-75, the Woodhull Lake community center, the old store at Clarkston-Orion Road and North Eston, and the Maybee and Clintonville roads intersection.

Plastic bags for subdivision cleanups will be available from the Powells during the campaign. No junk cars will be accepted.

Memorial Day parade

Plans for Clarkston's annual Memorial Day parade and ceremonies at Lakeview Cemetery are underway in the American Legion.

The parade, set for 10 a.m. May 28, will form at Church and Buffalo Street, proceed to Main, Washington, Holcomb and White Lake Road to the cemetery.

While floats are discouraged, youth groups such as Scouts, Camp Fire and Civil Air Patrol wishing to take part are invited to contact John Lynch at 625-3994.

Clarkston News garden clinic May 19

Gardening problems—what to seed and how to grow it, what to do about pests, landscaping, soil preparation—will be answered during The Clarkston News first annual Garden Clinic from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 19.

Dave Coulter, garden editor for The Clarkston News, and Tom Ritter, who's run Ritter's Farm Market at 6684 Dixie Highway the past six years will be available at the market to answer all questions.

Dave, whos been 38 years in the garden seed business and who has always had a garden, has established a reputation for knowing the answers about home gardening.

Tom, who has an associate's degree in landscape technology with experience in plant entymology and ornamental horticulture, will speak on those phases of the business as well as disease and pest control.

Anyone with gardening questions is invited to stop by and see them. The service is free.

Doing the family tourist bit

Impressions of D.C., the uncompleted town

By Jim Sherman

They will never finish building Washington, D.C.

That was one of the conclusions we reached after spending 3 days there. It would appear they have been building expressways for several years and they are still at it.

There is also a subway under construction.

Then there is the building of buildings. High rises and higher rises. Underground and overground parking. Office buildings and commercial buildings. When these are completed you can be sure others will be torn down so they can erect new ones.

This wasn't the purpose of our trip to Washington, but it was an obstacle that had to be reckoned with.

What this was was a family vacation. We have a son in college, a high school sophomore daughter and a 10-year-old girl in the fifth grade, yet we have never become a family of tourists.

Life goes fleeting by and we hadn't paused to reflect that perhaps we were missing something in the rearing of our younguns by not loading them in a car and heading to the crowds.

With this conclusion reached through conscientious communicating, we decided the Easter school break would be a good time to take the kids to Washington and wife, Hazel, to early American Williamsburg . . . home of untouchable antiques to whet her collector's appetite.

Weeks before departing 10-year-old Susan began mapping plans and stirring interest. Are we going to Pennsylvania? Yes, through Pennsylvania. We're going to stop at Gettysburg, aren't we? Well . . . Aren't we?

Naturally, we stopped at Gettysburg. And, we recommend it. A stop at a gas station and tourist center gave us the idea we should see the "lighted battlefield". It's across the road from the National Cemetery.

The building also boasts of having the largest collection of authentic Civil War memorabilia in the world. They will may be right.

The lighted battlefield lies on the floor of a theater-in-the-round type auditorium. It has numerous colored bulbs connected to numerous switches in a control booth.

A tape recorder is started and the switchman shows all troop movements, strategic area, campfires and headquarter locations as the narrator tells of the 3-day battle between Union and Confederate forces at Gettysburg.

It was fascinating. It cost $1.50 each. ***

We had made reservations at a Holiday Inn in Arlington, Va., across the Potomac River from D.C. Reasonably nice. $29.00 a day plus tax of $1.74, or $30.74 a day. No indoor pool, and the outdoor one had no water.

Would we like a tour the next day? We had decided a tour would be first on the agenda. Get oriented first, we thought. We wanted the tour . . . until we saw the price.

$7.50 each for a 4 hour tour and the 6-hour tour added up to just under $50 for the 4 of us. We'd picked up some literature in the lobby after registering and learned of the train-tours at $2

each for all day . . . get on and off as we liked at a dozen stops. ***

Bright and early Easter Sunday morning (10 o'clock) we headed for D.C. We found a place to park on Maryland avenue 2 blocks from the Capitol, then walked through an uncrowded parking lot in front of the Capitol.

The closer we came to the white building the bigger gawkers we became. Inside, standing in the middle of the Rotunda we did what every other American tourist does, look straight up.

That's up 286 feet to a painting in the top of the dome of figures we learned later were actually 15 feet high, but which looked normal size from where we stood.

We were told to expect long lines in Washington. Long and frequent. We got in our first line in the Rotunda for a tourist trip through our Capitol.

Five minutes later we followed a tour guild into the original assembly chamber where president Adams held forth. The guide was fine except I was hoping for a sweet, young thing and got a middle aged, balding man.

Up to the House of Representatives assembly room where we were told of how the legislature functions. No wise cracks, just theory of Democracy. Back down to a room below the Rotunda and dismissal.

To us the back of the Capitol faces the Mall. The Mall is the strip of grass maybe a half mile long anchored down on one end by the Capitol and on the other by Lincoln's Monument. The Mall is broken up by Washington's monument.

So, for a while we stood in back of the Capitol and enjoyed looking across the green grass. A closer look at the grass proved it would be a reject if it was someone's lawn. A lot of dirt shows and the grass is in clumps.

By the way, Washington's Monument is also the center of a strip of land anchored by Jefferson's Monument and the White House at each end. Taken together they form a cross.

On each side of the Mall, facing each other, are the buildings that attract the most tourists. The Smithsonian buildings, museums, Agriculture dept., art exhibit buildings and a new, round building under construction which will house statues.

The train-tour jitney arrived. It's more like a low slung, enclosed surrey. It's a bus with a trailer. Now came the uniformed young things filling our ears with "On the left is . . ."

About 2 p.m. we walked into the Museum of Natural History. In front of us was a big Mastodon (elephant?), and Susan became alive. The huge blue whale, the penguins, gerbils, apes, fish, cats, birds of prey and those that don't, Susan, Luan and I saw them all.

Hazel? Well, the bird area is dusty and she started sneezing and left.

After a short snack in the snack bar of museum of science and industry we toured that building. Half of the top floor is devoted to printing, and it was the others turn to be bored.

I loved the locomotive dept. and the other 3 practically ran through it. Hazel went slowly by displays of room settings and dresses of the early days and I trailed behind in the old car section.

So it went. It was covered quite

The "lighted battlefield" at Gettysburg. A graphic description of the fight that was all within a 6 mile by 7 mile area. However, most of the history was made where the bulk of the lights are above.

CONTRAST—This picture may appear confusing, but in it are 3 wide steps in air progress. At the top is the Wright Bros. plane. Hanging behind it is Lucky Lindy's Spirit of St. Louis. At the bottom, just right of center, a spaceman can be seen in front of a "sky lab". One of these will be launched from Florida this month.

Walking his post.

Changing guard at The Tomb

After visiting Arlington National Cemetery I would say seeing the changing-of-the-guard is a must if you're in the area.

Occasionally the thought came of the expense, even silliness, of having living soldiers guard a piece of granite or marble, but the impressiveness of the ceremony dominated.

The guard is changed every half hour, 24 hours a day. It's done in the most precise, military action . . . by the count.

The Sergeant of the guard comes in the area, off to one side, rather casually and at the exact moment he snaps to. He marches out before the crowd and announces who he is and would you please stand.

Then he inspects the replacing guard. The rifle is checked with white gloves with quick, sharp movements. The Sarge checks the new man's cap, tie, belt and shoes with his eyes and you can almost hear them snap.

"Every move's a picture" the Great Ballentine says and it applies the changing of the guard. The smooth walk, the flick of the wrist in presenting arms, the click of the heels in changing directions.

If you didn't watch the change you wouldn't be able to tell if there was one. They all look and move alike.

Present Arms!

Perfect! Even their hands are cupped the same.

thoroughly and we enjoyed it.

We didn't get off the jitney at the Jefferson Monument, but did admire first hand the Lincoln structure. We reread both the Gettysburg Address and his second inaugural address which are carved on the marble.

More than once we inspected the lines at the Washington Monument. Going to the top of the 555-ft. 5-1/8 inch chunks of stone is described as a 2 hour, 70 second trip. "Two hours in line and 70 seconds on the elevator."

Of the facilities in Washington this monument impressed us most. From size alone it is overwhelming. And, it never looks really big until you're close to it, looking up.

An area that failed to impress us was the air and space buildings. The original Smithsonian building has only offices now, no exhibits. Neighboring buildings, house space and air collections, but they are temporary. A new building is being constructed.

Too many of the exhibits are models, paintings, and pictures now to hold our attention. Also, a great deal of it is very recent history.

Nagging youngsters stirred me from early retirement one night and we got a nighttime view of the attractions around the Mall. I'm glad I gave in.

We spent the best part of 2 days touring Washington, D.C. tourist attractions. We did not see it all by any means, but we saw enough. Interest wanes.

Easter Sunday and Monday weren't too bad as crowds go. However, Tuesday morning, with the people back at their desks and hammers, things were different. The expressway traffic was snails pace when we hit it at 8 a.m. on our way to the White House, our last stop before leaving for Williamsburg.

It was 2 miles at the most to the Mall, and I knew right where I wanted to go to look for a parking place. I knew parking would be hard to find. I learned it would be impossible. I learned it by way of a $5.00 parking ticket.

The White House opens at 10 a.m. We went by the first time at 9:00. The line was about a block long and 2 to 4 deep. Illegally parked a half hour later we got into a line 3 blocks long and 2 to 4 deep.

It was beautiful, sun shiny day and people were fresh and friendly at that hour. Thank goodness.

By 11 a.m. we were through the White House and in our car.

That will give you some idea of how much of the White House you see and how long you get to see it. However, I can say I saw the green room, the red room, the blue room, formal dining room and a picture of Ike.

I will never convince anyone that going through the White House is a waste of time unless you want to be able to say "I visited the White House", but I'll try.

We left Washington as we entered it . . . by getting lost, but in between we enjoyed being a family of American tourists.

Seldom seen in reports on Arlington National Cemetery is the amphitheater. It's where official ceremonies take place. Out the back door is the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

She foretells the future

By Jean Saile

A little girl who always knew what her Christmas packages contained has within the last six years recognized herself as a "sensitive" and has seen and warned many people of events to come.

Living in the Clarkston area, she does not advertise her ability. It's illegal if practiced professionally. She "reads" mainly for friends but sometimes takes a paying customer because she believes that people have more respect for paid advice.

Called in earlier this year in a woman's disappearance in Owosso, she was able to pinpoint the area where the body would be found. She's now waiting for the abductors to be caught — probably not for two or three years, she says — but she's "seen" them too.

She's a mother able to greet her children at the door and tell them she doesn't like what they've been doing, then go on to describe what they've been engaged in.

Crimes on her street recently were foretold to her, she claims, as she and her husband drove by the involved homes.

The information later proved true.

She says she maintains a communication with the dead and looks on death as a new adventure. She calls it "passing over" and reports having seen her mother's soul rise from the body and disappear through the ceiling. She's also had contact since, she says.

Also a believer of reincarnation, it's only through many lessons which she thinks it sometimes takes us many lifetimes to learn that we finally achieve heaven, she maintains.

While stating her belief in God, she says she feels all churches "have a view of part of the elephant" and that none perceive better than others. Churches work for those who believe in them, she states.

Subject to vistas which most of us cannot see, she shuns ouija boards, ESP games, etc., contending their use opens up pathways to our baser instincts.

Her world is a world of veiled pictures, some of which she can clarify. It's also a world of noises and spirits.

She tells of a banging near the television one day. "I didn't pay any attention. I screen out those noises like you screen out the children's noise, but my husband asked who was making all the noise at the television set.

"He'd been having trouble with his hip and I told him it was his grandfather who wanted my husband to put a 1/8 inch lift in his heel. He did, and the hip trouble disappeared," she reports.

A sincere woman, one who would be recognized by many people if her name were divulged, she gives the impression of never veering from the truth as she sees it. She claims she can spot untruth in others.

She tells of seeing an absent family member in California, victim of a fight, a bad black eye, and another man who was causing problems. Later the relative returned, still with the black eye, and confirmed her vision.

She has the ability, she says, to see people at any time far away and tell what they are wearing and what they are doing.

While she has never seen objects move, she feels that it happens. A lost item turns up later on a table, and no one admits to having moved it. She has earlier petitioned that if the item cannot be found, it turn up on that same table, she says.

Not all her visions happen, she admits. People who believe her stories of impending disaster take steps to avoid it. People also have free will, she states, and are able to alter the outcome of events.

She recalls telling a friend one day to beware of a certain time of day, car and location. She identified what the friend would be wearing and other presents.

The friend later reported that all circumstances being fulfilled, she had waited at a green light only to see another car run the red light from the other direction.

Women call her to ask if their husbands are running around and with whom. She can describe the interloper, if there is one.

She does not begrudge the phone calls. "Phone calls are a plea for help," she believes.

But she's not psychic about herself. She can remember surprising another woman with the information that the woman was pregnant, but she admits she didn't know that she herself was also expecting until later.

"I can't predict winners, either," she says, but she qualifies it to add that she gives her sister information on the horse races, and that she one time told a friend what the friend and what she would each win at a raffle.

A green candle in the living room still bears testimony to her forecast.

Harvey's loses $1,193

Two armed robbers escaped at 2:30 a.m. Monday morning after holding up Harvey's Colonial House manager Bob Anthes and a kitchen employe.

Sheriff's Lt. Jack Kratt said $1,193 was reported taken as the two made their way outside the building to their cars. The suspects were described as white males armed with a handgun.

Escape was made on foot behind the restaurant, Kratt said.

Harvey's Colonial House is located at 5896 Dixie Highway.

Radar in action

Clarkston Police, having completed their special schooling and become licensed, are now issuing speeding tickets based on radar. Several motorists fell to the technical prowess of the new scanner at M-15 and Church last weekend.

Price arrested in school break-in

Judge Gerald McNally has entered a plea of not guilty for Michael Price, 24, 6320 Eastlawn, arrested at 3 a.m. Wednesday, May 2, in Clarkston Elementary School.

Sheriff Lt. Jack Kratt said bond of $1,000 was required and examination set for May 10 before Judge McNally. Entry to the school was gained through a broken window, Kratt said.

Misdemeanor charged

Alton M. Hamilton, 21, of 4643 Waldon Road has been charged with a misdemeanor, entering without permission, as a result of his surprised visit early Friday morning to the George Thomas home at 5530 Mary Sue.

Thomas reportedly found Hamilton hiding in a closet. Police said he was drunk when he entered the home through an unlocked door.

We won't take a back seat to anybody.

Not when it comes to selling cars. Or trucks. Or recreational vehicles.

Let's start right off with car prices. Lots of "big city" dealers make claims about lower prices and higher trade-ins. There's no bigger myth than the volume dealer saying he deals lower because he sells more cars.

Know why?

Every Chevrolet dealer pays the same prices for Chevy cars and trucks. He can sell a thousand of 'em a day but he still has to make a profit. And that profit margin, believe you us, is just the same for the big guy as it is the smaller dealer. So watch it when you get the low, low price pitch.

Something else you ought to know. We're in the front seat when it comes to higher re-sale values. It's a matter of record we do better in this department up here in Northern Oakland County than in Metro Detroit. People just keep their cars in better shape around here. Score a big one for you.

Another thing. We're closer to you for service and warranty needs. No 80-mile round trips. Just down the street a piece where we're committed to make your service visit easier, friendlier, and more satisfactory.

See what we mean about not taking a back seat to anybody?

Upside down justice

I've come to the conclusion that justice operates upside down in this country.

Murderers roam the street, free on bond. High officials at all levels of government (not just Watergate connected) suffer slaps on the wrist and little else.

Calls to police regarding vandalism generally result in the advice that "you've got to catch them in the act."

Police can tell you the locations of hundreds of "dope houses" within the city, but they say that for the most part they can't do anything about it.

A man who testifies for the prosecution as in the case of the Pontiac bus bombing case winds up with his character besmirched.

And the little guy who breaks the rules can pay dearly. He doesn't know the legal subterfuges.

It's no wonder moralists proclaim this country in bad shape.

The world changes

(From Preservation News, January, 1973)

The famed beagle arrived for a nostalgic visit at the Daisy Hill Puppy Farm, site of his origin, only to find that the old homestead had been replaced with a six-story parking garage. Poor Snoopy. He discovered what frail barriers memories are to the relentless march of progress.

Upheaval and change, both mental and physical, confront us on every side. We have become ravenous for construction that transforms our landscapes and frequently our lives.

No wonder the Snoopys of this world have difficulty keeping their balance ... neat rows of houses now sit astride brazen new highways. The corner grocery has become a bewildering maze of super shops that vie violently for attention. Home is just where you happen to be.

The face of America is changing so rapidly that, in truth, there is little time anymore to collect memories. We have become a mobile, flexible people in a hurry to move forward.

But, even as necessary as progress and change are, there ought to be a little room left for savoring the past.

Perhaps we need more Snoopys to protest the constructive destruction of our memories ... How many Daisy Hill Puppy Farms are there?

Things beyond

by Jean Saile

I guess I'm not very sensitive.

I keep reading articles about people who dream in color versus those who dream in black and white and for the life of me, I don't know which way I dream.

In fact, I rarely remember my dreams, but this has been a different kind of week.

Tuesday night I dreamt about an old friend of mine taking a new job, and the recollection was so vivid that next morning I called her. About the time I was calling her; it turned out later, she had been discussing a job with the person I had dreamt had hired her.

Thursday there was an interview with a "sensitive" and while I may be a bit of a skeptic, there were things she told me about people she'd never met but who are well known to me that caused me some awe.

I was still awash in this second world when a woman I've known as a member of a spiritualist church walked in. I began to quiz her, and again some of the things she told me led me to believe there are vistas beyond intuition which we "insensitive" know very little of.

The thing I am positive of is that both these women, well respected in the community, believe sincerely what they relay. They offer evidence of past happenings as proof of some sort of foreknowledge and unknown powers.

Both these women talk very little about their preoccupations to the general public. As one said, psychic ability is related to fortune telling and fortune telling is related to gypsies and gypsies are related to stealing.

But they point out that spiritualism is Bible based. "Christ cast out devils," said one. The other cited 1st Corinthians, Chapter 12 as the basis for her belief.

In the course of my life as a reporter there have been others I've interviewed who have exposed unusual events to my scrutiny.

I don't know what's there. I do know, for example, that in Russia there are efforts to measure the power of the mind as a physical force and there have been some results.

I also know there's an upsurge in meditation groups, which one of the women called a new name for the old spiritualism.

It's a fascinating subject. It's also eerie once we get beyond our depths of understanding; but probably a little mind broadening wouldn't hurt any of us.

Our local politicians are up to their old spending tricks again. Now that the police millage has generated a little extra surplus there is a rush to spend it.

If our new local gendarme enforces just one local ordinance per day (which doesn't seem like an overwhelming work load), he will write at least 200 tickets per year! Even if there are that many infractions now waiting to be ticketed, what will he do in his second year? Social work I suppose; that should be an endless task.

And I see that Township Hall would also have us vote again on the extra mill for the fire Department. The rationale seems to be that this time the turnout will be light and the firemen and wives will carry the day.

Whatever happened to the public safety idea? Why can't the extra money in the police fund be used to pay for our fire chief, who would then be designated as our public safety director? Why can't the Federal monies be used for the Fire Department?

"If It Fitz . . ."

No heroes at the top

By Jim Fitzgerald

Some teenage friends spent the Easter holiday in Washington, D.C., probably because Florida was too crowded to enter.

"Did you get into the White House?" I asked.

"No," they answered excitedly, "but we got into the Watergate."

Nifty.

Then there is my favorite bartender who used to ply his trade near the capitol building which houses all the great minds responsible for running Michigan. His name is Joe and he used to brag about all the governors and senators whose elbows he helped bend. But not anymore.

Now Joe brags that he used to know Glenda McGuire.

You know Glenda. She's the foxy chick who was on Gov. Milliken's staff until the newspapers revealed that taxpayers were paying her $18,000 per year for doing nothing. It turned out she was a girlfriend of Judge Jimmy Del Rio and her job was part of a political pay-off for Del Rio's support of Milliken in the last election.

Plenty embarrassed by the publicity, Milliken quickly fired Glenda. He is still juggling his staff and trying to explain to a cynical world how his halo suddenly crumbled and dropped dirt all over his boyish image.

What I am doing here, children, is establishing a pattern. 2 teenage boys would rather see the Watergate than the White House. Joe the bartender would rather serve booze to Glenda McGuire than to the governor of his state.

What does it mean? I'm glad you asked.

It means the guy in the street is totally soured by the stink of politicians who will cut any corner on their way to power. It means John Citizen has quit believing in heroic leaders. There aren't any. Ike is dead. There are just ambitious men who can carry all their scruples in their navels.

It means there are no more statesmen to whom people will build shrines. So the populace must worship at $100-a-ticket barbecues staged to finance political campaigns which elect little men owned by the corporation that bought the most tickets.

It means that if John Wayne quits making movies, the people will watch Marlon Brando dance a dirty tango with The Godfather.

Letters to the Editor

"Say it isn't true"

Mrs. Editor,

Is there any truth to the rumor that the township board wants to change the name of our township so that it sounds more Bloomfieldish, Grossepointish, or Beverley Hillish?

Is it true that in four years time our budget has been raised $600,000.00, and that our present $830,000.00 budget will run into the red and that we

Senator afoul of pay limits again

Independence Township's state senator, Harvey Lodge, is making the headlines again. Seems he's paying about double the housing costs afforded elected officials during visits out of state. A bill for $98.85 for lodgings in Miami recently was submitted by him for payment, despite the Senate's recent adoption of a $40-a-day spending limit.

Now reportedly on the annual luxury liner cruise to the Caribbean sponsored by the Greater Detroit Board of Commerce, he may have to do some paying up once home.

Flak over his expense accounts and the recent employment of his wife in a State Civil Service job have been making news for the past month.

can expect a $100,000.00 budget next year?

Is it true that in the budget of 1968-1969 the attorneys fees were budgeted at only $5,000.00 and that last year were paid $53,000.00?

Is it true that the last eight persons hired were already employed elsewhere, and that the un-employed in the township were given little or no chance at the job opportunity? Is it also true that the last eight persons hired have all been chiefs at a cost of over $110,000.00 that most could have been retained on a part time basis?

Is it true that they have now employed an engineer to head the so called D.P.W. department at $17,000 plus to head two men at the water department and two men at the cemetery department? Is it legal for the township to pay a salary and fringe benefits to Johnson and Anderson who in effect is his employer?

Is it true that our building department budget has jumped $60,000.00 in four years?

Is it true that the township hires administrators only, and no so-called "indians"?

Is it true that a nay vote on our present township board is practically non-existent?

Last but certainly not least, is it true that all of the new administrators are going to join the Jaycees?

Say it isn't true.

Mr. Donald DeWald

"Springing up"

Kathy was "Belinda" by Betty Hecker 625-5726

Twenty-five Clarkston area Camp Fire girls attended the Wednesday filming of the Friday morning "Bozo the Clown Show."

Kathy Hearl was selected to be Bozo's helper, "Belinda." Paulette Pelton, Linda DeLisle, Vonda and Tonya Ihrke took part in some of the games and contests on the show.

Driving to Windsor, the five leaders drove the girls through the tunnel. On the return trip, they crossed the Ambassador Bridge. For several of the girls, this trip was the first time they had ever been out of the country.

The Tuesday Morning Ladies Golf League voted unanimously to change the name to the Grace Miner League, in honor of the well-loved and well-known golfer.

The league started play May 1 at the Springfield-Oaks Golf Course in Davisburg.

Recently Junior Girl Scout Troop No. 453 enjoyed a weekend of camping at Camp Sherwood, near Lapeer. The girls all enjoyed working on camping and cooking skills.

During the day, the girls went hiking and set their own trail signs.

Leaders in charge of the trip were Mrs. Vandermark, Mrs. Kevern, Mrs. Vaara, and Mrs. Huttenlocher. Senior scout, Debbie Hoffman came along to help out. The advancements were many and the girls had a great time.

Sally Lindeman and Elizabeth Gregory, teachers at Andersonville Elementary, are recovering (and peeling) from the sunburns they received while in Hawaii during the Easter vacation.

After flying to Hawaii, they stayed at the Ala Monono Hotel, where they swam, lounged on the beach, learned to hula, shopped for souvenirs (bought a "happiness god" among other things), and saw Zulu Cono of the Hawaii Five O television show.

There were earthquake tremors in Hawaii while Sally and Liz were there. They can joke and laugh about it now, as they tell about seeing and feeling the building moving.

And another fact to prove it's a small world.

While Sally Lindeman was in Hawaii, she met a former student from Andersonville Elementary.

Dave Johnson (now an eighth grader) and his parents, Chuck and Kathy Johnson, met Sally for dinner one evening after she first saw Dave and said, "Hey, I know that kid!"

Diane Hoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hoff, 6512 Wealthy, will graduate from Northern Michigan University on Saturday, May 12.

Diane received a bachelor of science degree in secondary education.

Last Sunday turned out to be a bad day for Keith Staley, son of Jerry and MariAnn Staley of Flemings Lake Road.

Keith went on a hayride with the Clarkston Methodist Junior MYF. In one of those freak accidents, Keith fell off the wagon and under a wheel.

His thigh was broken, and he will be in traction in Pontiac General Hospital for the next six weeks. After his release from the hospital, he will be wearing a cast for a while.

The MYF leaders all congratulate Keith on the way he "kept his cool and composure," even though he was in great pain.

Kristy and Amy Rice attended the Oxford Methodist Church Mother-Daughter Tea on Sunday, May 6.

The program featured child prodigy 10-year-old Susan Synnstedt, a violinist. Kristy said, "Oh, she was good. I think that she'll be a big talent some day."

Amy liked the chocolate sandwiches best. (Brown bread). Mrs. Alleman, Kristy's grandmother, won the prize for bringing the most people to the tea, not for having the most children, just for bringing the most.

Sally Lindeman, sixth grade teacher at Andersonville Elementary took 18 of her students to Howe's Lanes last Wednesday, the first of four Wednesday afternoon bowling outings.

The star bowler for the first outing was Freddie Proffitt with a 130 game.

The second grade students in Mrs. Grice's room are preparing for a Mother's Tea on Friday. The children

Marion and George Lawson are home again, for the summer this time. They have been traveling and seeing the country since last fall. George retired last September after working at General Motors Truck and Coach for 36 years. 114 friends honored him with gifts and a dinner at the Elks. Then Marion retired after working at the Clarkston Branch of the Post Office for 20 years.

They were free — so their first trip was through the Smokies and on to Fort Lauderdale, where they visited George's sister and her husband, Helen and Bill Miller. During their six weeks in Florida, they went to Key West and drove through the Everglades. Marion said, "There are just so many lovely things to see."

In February they were traveling through Texas. They visited the L. B. Johnson ranch and saw his burial place.

In late February, they were in Phoenix, seeing George's brother, Richard and his family. In Arizona, land of the Navajo Indian and the Grand Canyon, Marion saw lots of beautiful things. "Mesa Verde and Wolf Creek Pass have lovely colors and rock formations. They are just as lovely as the Grand Canyon, but they are not as large. And at the Little Colorado river, coming out of the Grand Canyon, the Indians have stands set up, selling their jewelry and blankets and souvenirs."

In Anaheim, California, Marion said, "It was a little more on the cool side than in Florida," while they were visiting the R. J. Grundys.

On the trip coming home, they saw the London Bridge, desert flowers in bloom, snow covered mountains, and the Long Branch Saloon in a "very windy" Dodge City, Kansas. In Independence, Missouri they visited the Truman Library.

And on the final lap home, they stopped to visit another of George's sisters, the W. E. Shriber family in Sawyer, Michigan.

Welcome home.

Two Clarkston High School seniors are in the Florida Keys. Cathy Manley and Janet Klein have been friends since the 4th grade. Last Monday, they flew to Florida for a week's stay at a Holiday Inn, financed completely by "themselves."

Cathy works at Rudy's Market in Clarkston and Janet works at Montgomery Ward's. They have been saving for a long time for this trip, and for all the new clothes, too. Cathy's dad, Ed, asked her if she got her new swim suit at half price, since there was so little of it. And Janet's mother just couldn't believe that the girls were really going, until she saw the plane tickets.

Nia Kraud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kraud of Holcomb Road, was named outstanding resident of her dorm at the University of Michigan. Her name will be engraved on the Helen Newberry Joy Award plaque on display at the dorm.

Nia has just completed her freshman year at the university and was resident decorations and social chairwoman this year. She plans to reside in the Helen Newberry residence again next year.

Christmas cards — Future fund raising projects for the center will include the sale of Christmas cards, states Judy Brumback, the center's Ways and Means chairman. There is a current contest at Clarkston High School, the two junior highs and Northwest Vocational Center to produce the design for these cards. The center thanks all participating teachers and students. The winning design from each school will be reproduced and the cards will go on sale September 1.

Center needs — There was a request at the center this week for a used bike. The man's doctor recommended bicycling to improve a muscular condition and he is unable to purchase a new one.

There is also a need for skilled helpers to consult with on some of the center's maintenance problems. If anyone would like to help out please call the center — 673-2244.

Spiritual Message

"Walk in wisdom . . . redeeming the time." — Colossians 4:5

Just a little over a week ago, for the first time in five years, the people of Michigan went on Daylight Saving Time. There had been much controversy over it, as you know. In fact, there had been more than one referendum on the matter and prior to the elections when this issue was to be on the ballot special interest groups, whose businesses would be affected one way or the other by the extra hour's daylight in the evening rather than the morning, campaigned strongly on behalf of their position. The arguments on both sides, for the most part, concerned the use of people's leisure time, which has become increasingly more important to them as they have acquired increasingly more of it.

Due to the complexity of our culture people, generally, of necessity, run their lives by the clock, however, they usually don't appreciate time for the great gift that it is. Benjamin Franklin defined it as "the stuff life is made of." It is God's gift to each of us. Arnold Bennett wrote: "The supply of time is a daily miracle. You wake up in the morning, and lo! your purse is magically filled with twenty-four hours of the unmanufactured tissue of the universe of life. It is yours! the most precious of your possessions." Do we appreciate it as such? Are we grateful to the Giver? Although it is ours to use as we will, do we feel that He has any call upon it or, in gratitude, offer it or any portion of it for His purposes? Needless to say, I believe we should but only our conscience to Him will determine what we do about it.

On the clock at All Souls College, Oxford is the inscription: "The hours perish and are laid to our charge." It is an admonition we shouldn't forget. God didn't give us the gift of time to be wasted or used contrary to His will. He expects us to use it wisely, thoughtfully and well, in knowledge of the past and hope for the future. Henry Thoreau cautioned, "You cannot kill time without injuring eternity." We usually forget the relationship between the two but each day, each hour, come to us out of eternity and returns to it again. Time is short but eternity is endless. We are living and working not just for the moment but for eternity, therefore, how we spend out God-given time has eternal significance. It is the wise person who knows the true value of time.

Sashabaw Cougars Response "overwhelming" to baseball call

Cougars 3-0

Sashabaw Cougars baseball team won their third in a row on Thursday by shutting out East Hills, 8-0.

The Cougars opened the scoring in the 1st inning with 3 runs. Jim Dyke led off with a single and scored on Jeff Ferguson's double. Ferguson then came home on Steve Pearson's home run.

In the sixth inning, Sashabaw added 2 insurance runs in the 7th on an error by East Hills left fielder.

Steve Howe turned in another magnificent pitching performance—giving up no runs, 2 hits and striking out 15. Howe has appeared in 2 games thus far pitching 10 innings and giving up no runs, 2 hits and striking out 19 batters.

Response to the Independence Township Recreation Department's call to play ball has been overwhelming this year with 1,200 boys signing up for the 60-team program.

Bob Davidson, baseball commissioner, wants to assure all parents and players that the Recreation office is doing everything possible to place every boy on a team. "We desperately need about 15 more managers and sponsors to take the teams we have already set up," he said.

All boys have been placed on teams and all boys should have been contacted by now. If your boy does not know the team he is on, he should report to field six at Clarkston High next Saturday at the time listed below, Davidson asked.

Twelve high school volunteers called over 400 boys last week in the Pee Wee and T-Ball Leagues trying to notify the boys. Some 300 boys were organized into team groups last Saturday at the Clarkston High fields.

The Recreation Office has been averaging 60-80 calls per day and is swamped. "Trying to communicate with 45 managers is hard enough," stated Davidson, "but dealing with so many eager youngsters and parents is almost impossible. We are trying to answer each call but presently I have 26 return messages waiting and they just keep coming in. Parents should remember that we still have a month before the season begins and we will succeed in placing every boy on a team," said Davidson.

Davidson also needs an additional 25 boys to work as umpires this summer. If interested sign up at the Recreation Office or in the school office. You must be fourteen years old to umpire this summer. Boys earn $15-$20 a week in this job.

Schedule for Saturday morning, May 12, Clarkston High School field six:

T-Ball, 9:00; Widgets, 11:00. Pee Wee, 9:00, Midgets, 11:00.

Just teams with managers and boys without teams should come this Saturday.

Cougar trackmen not fast enough

The first home track meet for Sashabaw Junior High last Friday at the High School saw West Bloomfield win the 9th grade meet 110-13.

Brian DeQuis took a first place in the 880-yard run with a new school record of 2:15.2. Brian Thompson took a second place in the high and low hurdles — John Atkinson took a third in the mile run — Brian DeQuis took a third in the 440-yard run.

The 7th and 8th grade meet was a tri-meet against Abbott, Orchard Lake and Sashabaw Junior High School. Orchard Lake won with 106½ points, Abbott had 26 points and Sashabaw Junior High had 25½ points.

First places: 11.5 seconds, John Blickensdorf, 110-yard dash; 26.3 seconds, George Thompson, 220-yard dash.

Third places: Mark Stevens, 60 high hurdles; Mike Jameson, high jump; Syd Standring, 440-run; George Thompson, pole vault.

Fourth Places: Mike Jameson, 60 yard dash; Tony Thompson, shot put; Ron Carter, 75 yard dash; Bret Hammett, mile run; Mark Stevens, 100 yard low hurdles.

Gaines is state boxing champ

Glen Gaines, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Gaines of Eston Road has claimed the out-state and state championship for boxers 148-156 pounds in the Junior Olympic Development Tournament recently in Flint.

He is now eligible to compete in the national tournament in Boston.

A sophomore at Clarkston High School, Glen is also a member of the school track team.

This past weekend Gaines went on to win the State AAU championship in Charlevoix with a knock-out, his mother reported.

SPORTS

by Jerry Savoie

Ever hear of a rolling pick-up? In water polo, the rolling pick-up is a very important move in the game. To secure and lift the ball, you have to place a hand on the top of the ball and then rotate it until the palm is underneath. Quite understandably, even a large hand needs some practice in this art. The fact that this pick-up allows you to retrieve the ball with only one hand, leaving the other hand free for swimming, is what makes the pick-up so important.

Clarkston Cafe expanding into new quarters

Owner Paul Rice says the Clarkston Cafe, located at 18 South Main, will expand into quarters next door recently vacated by the Clarkston Shoe Service.

A small party and banquet room seating 60 regular diners or 70 at banquets should be ready by about July 4, Rice said. Also included in renovation plans is a remodeled and expanded kitchen.

The same "early times" decor of the present establishment will be carried through into the new place, he added. A fireplace in the front will be included, he said.

New constable in Springfield

By Betty Hecker

The Springfield Township Board has appointed Don Rogers to the office of constable, filling the vacancy created when Jim Halsey resigned before moving from the township.

The board set the pay rate for the constable's office at $2.50 an hour and 10c a mile for car expense. Both constables, Art Ball and Don Rogers, drive their own cars while on road duty.

The constables will receive $5 per day to serve papers on junk cars, $2 for serving all papers excluding junk cars.

Money goes for roads

The Springfield Township Board approved spending $10,000 of the money received from federal revenue sharing to be used to pay the Oakland County Road Commission for road maintenance.

Springfield Township has 47 miles of gravel roads, requiring 47,000 cubic feet of gravel. There are nine miles of subdivision roads requiring 9,000 cubic yards of gravel. At $4 a yard, this amounts to $224,000.

Building permits

Independence Township issued building permits for $851,906 of new construction during the month of April including 21 new homes and a plastic manufacturing plant on White Lake Road worth $220,000. The new homes were valued at $576,128.

This year's figures compare with $2,041,672 of new construction applied for a year ago.

Behind the Counter

From Keith Hallman

This seems to be a good time to summarize the things we have been saying about prescription drugs, in this column, over the past several months.

The best results from any medicine depends on your physician, your druggist and yourself. You must take part in this three-way effort by following sensible safeguards.

If you go to more than one doctor, be sure each one knows all about the drugs you are taking. When some medicines are used at the same time as others, the mixture can produce bad side-effects that can be difficult to diagnose.

Tell each physician, and your pharmacist, about any bad reaction you have ever had to a drug. A repeated reaction could be even more severe than the first. There are usually other drugs he can prescribe for you.

Don't take additional drugs without telling your doctor. All drugs — including those bought without a prescription — have some effect. Again, various drug combinations can be dangerous. For example, some sleeping pills should not be used with some pain killers.

Tell your doctor if you don't have the prescription filled or if you don't use the medicine. Otherwise, he may think you are not responding to that particular drug. Not taking a medicine as ordered can be dangerous, because it may allow a condition to get worse while the doctor assumes it is being cured or helped.

Meet Don Bradford, teacher

By Betty Hecker

A thinking man, a teacher for 43 years, editor of his own family newspaper, Don Bradford came to Andersonville Elementary School in August, 1962.

Don and his wife, Phyllis, live near Big Lake in their "little red schoolhouse."

Born John Donald Bradford in central Ohio on August 14, 1913, he grew up on his grandparents' farm in Meigs County, Ohio.

When he was eight years old, he decided to become a teacher, specifically a math teacher. The childhood theory being if you were a math teacher, you'd know how to handle lots of money.

At sixteen, Don graduated from high school. Working on the farm all through his teen years, he was able to support himself. He said, "I bought my own graduation suit. I don't think that was a discredit to my grandparents, although today, it might be."

The next five years were busy. Don graduated from college, married and started a family, and taught school for three years.

In 1945, he left teaching to become the secretary of the Cincinnati YMCA, and an agent for the New York Life Insurance Company. It wasn't long, however, and he was teaching again, as an agent instructor for the insurance company.

He was transferred to Detroit in 1955, where he founded Personal Achievement Institute, for sales training and personal development. After a couple years in business, he found, "I needed good selling, good business management, and good teaching. Why not go back to the public school where by law we have students and taxes?"

That was when he came to Clarkston. He said, "An interesting thing along the way, one year I taught at a girls' industrial school. The theory is 'good people work.' The basic thing I found out was these girls were unwanted children, and that's what made them bad, if they were bad. Some day I'll give you my speech, 'Are Ohio's Bad Girls Really Bad?'"

Don has several hobbies, raising sheep, photography and his own newspaper, the Bradfordville News. The newspaper began as a correspondence with all the family. Don grew up closely with 35 or 40 cousins on his father's side, and as their families grew up and married, the circulation has grown to about 200. Like all newspapers, Don's has a feature, family news, such as weddings, births, anniversaries, a farm page (sheep news except: try lamburger instead of beef stew), a roving reporter section (this is Phyllis' territory) and a From the Mailbox section.

"Things I have to say come from a storehouse of years of thinking. My kids call them 'Don Bradfordisms.'"

Don has six children and says, "All my youngsters are married. I have eighteen grandchildren, ranging in age from eighteen years to two months. There are six girls and twelve boys, but only two of the boys and the little baby girl have the Bradford name. It just means that I have more daughters than sons, and the daughters are more prolific.

"I have discovered that people who are quick thinkers have given thought to the subject ahead of time in a general sort of way, so that their quick answer really comes from a storehouse."

"People who do great things are thinkers. Children today don't have a goal, and they don't know where they are going. I thought about writing a book, about thinking, about setting goals, and then I found out one had been published about the year I was born, entitled "Think and Grow Rich."

Tell it to Bob

by Bob Brumback
Clarkston Schools
Special Services Director

It is difficult to be a parent at all these days but to experience the task of helping a child with learning disabilities is a "special" job. Families who have a learning disabled child who has not started school very likely do not even recognize that he will experience such difficulty in school.

When a child is pre-school age it is possible to set up a protective environment at home, or to "hide" the problem, or "live with" the problem, or even to deal with the problem effectively. The child is usually physically smaller and can be controlled easier. The child is not as likely to face consistently unreasonable demands from other adults. It is easier for parents to structure positive experiences at home. Children are more likely to respond to parental authority at earlier ages.

The on-set of school creates a whole new set of problems. The child's frustrations and negative feedback on himself increases rapidly. If he has been diagnosed properly and the information shared with the school, these are reduced but not eliminated. More and more now, children are being integrated into the learning process in positive ways—but not anywhere near the desired frequency. I believe very strongly that the parents of any learning disabled child cannot turn his child over to the school system and expect them to handle the child alone. The parent needs to be the child's advocate and to work very closely with the education personnel in their local school district.

My intention in this article is to point out some of the important areas of involvement between the parent of a learning disabled child and the child. Many of the points that I will make are important to parents of any child and they are not the only important areas. Learning disabled children are more likely to provoke parents into using poor techniques and may utilize that as negative feedback about themselves. There are many traps in the parent/child relationship and I would like to point some of those out.

1. Be consistent in your actions—parents hear this a great deal and they should because it is so important. Consistency has to be combined with a good understanding of the basis of the child's problem, an understanding of how the family operates with itself, and the parent's observations on what discipline is appropriate for the child. It is much easier for a parent to condition specific behavior with their child if that child can predict the parent.

2. Discipline—it needs to be strong and consistent. Again, children need to be able to predict their parents. To be good with discipline a parent needs to differentiate between behavior related to a disability and behavior related to normal development of any child. All the behavior a parent sees with a child is normal for that child. There is a tendency for parents to punish more severely as behavior is repeated. It is important to consistently deal with negative behavior but not with increased severity—repetition is what is needed. It is important for parents to recognize when a child develops a negative self-image so that they are conscious of not getting trapped into useless punishment. A special note here is that you should not lose focus of the other children in the family because of the learning disabled child. They must have the same consistency and control.

The independent view

by Jean Saile

I missed the walk for independence center, and you can blame the vacuum cleaner. If it hadn't been sitting where it was and if I hadn't turned around just when I did and caught my toe, I'd probably have been in shape for the long trek. Plenty of others took up the gauntlet, however, and I'm told Township Trustee Jerry Powell was walking for about $8 a mile. That's not bad.

Snow was reported in Springfield Township early Friday morning, May 4. Sounds almost like a record, one I'd rather do without.

There are times it would be better if one never took the cover off the typewriter. We announced last week in good faith that Clarkston Village Council had changed meeting dates to the second and fourth Monday of the month with the first meeting May 7. I never bothered to check and learn that May 7 is the first Monday of the month. I also knew the move in meeting dates was going to make a conflict with the Board of Education, so we announced that the board meeting would also be May 7. For all you people who went to non-meetings Monday, they're both on for sure next Monday.

That delightful and persistent penny-giver writes, "April showers brought May flowers. But did you realize that May showers are caused by June brides?" Nope, but I do know we're now at $8.93 in the pennies and as soon as we get $10 we're going tree shopping for a "penny tree" for the new township park.

If the pennies continue to arrive, we'll take on a project to buy something for the Senior Citizen Drop-In Center at the Salvation Army.

***

Our visit with a "sensitive" this week was a whole new experience. I stuck around long enough to become clearly convinced that she believed every word she told me. Personal items made their way into the conversation, some of which I liked and some of which I didn't. I've written them down, and as time passes I shall make a personal accounting.

***

Independence Township residents thought Springfield Township's offer to pick up junk cars for disposal was so neat that more than a hundred of them called asking for service here. The response was, "Your cleanup day comes next week." They were still unhappy, we're told. They wanted the junk cars hauled away free of charge as Springfield did.

Gravel decision to wait

By Betty Hecker

The Springfield Township board voted 3 to 2 last week to postpone decision on the rezoning request filed by Emmett Leib, David Field and Earl Voorhees until an environmental impact study has been made and the resulting report turned over to the Springfield Township Planning Commission.

The application to rezone 518 acres off Ormond Road from farming to sand and gravel for a mining operation has aroused township residents to voice their opposition. About 100 turned out for the board meeting.

It was reported that $3,000 has been approved by Oakland County to match funds from Holly, Rose, Highland, Commerce and Springfield townships for the financing of the environmental study.

Royce Maniko, district coordinator for the Oakland County Planning Commission, said he anticipates that the mining industry will participate in the cost of this project. A representative of the Michigan Sand and Gravel Association has requested guidelines for the study, which begins May 10 at 10 a.m.

The study committee has the authorization to hire a consulting firm, and hopefully it will be completed 90 days from that time.

Resident Gene Acey questioned this, asking, "How can we expect to get unbiased guidelines?"

County Commissioner Jim Dunleavy answered him, "If you have a better solution, we'd love to hear it! We must not forget industry is also a citizen. Actually, Springfield Township has come up with the best idea."

Maniko said, "It behooves the community to take this study as a guideline. The township should have as much information as possible before attempting to make a decision." He referred to Williamsburg, Michigan, and its environmental problem that has reportedly resulted from oil drilling.

Resident Nathan Milstein asked to speak, saying "The board voted legally and correctly to engage an environmental impact study. If valid reasons existed for the board's decision to vote for this study, despite an unfortunate time lapse the reasons still exist. I believe that there would certainly be dissension from the community over the board's decision to spend this money, if they were to brush it aside. The fact that five communities are participating further indicates the importance of this study."

Emmett Leib, speaking for the trio, told the board that "this matter is approaching its 14th month, an unreasonable wait, and we are entitled to our legal rights."

Tri-level for young family

By Betty Hecker

Rick and Diane and two-year-old Robbie Wilson live in a beautiful gray brick tri-level home in Springfield Township.

Rick's hobby is landscaping. Diane said, "He loves to work outside. He likes to dig, to work in the dirt. He likes to change things around and to add new things."

These "things" are shrubs, trees, railroad ties, large rocks, and boulders. And the yard is beautiful!

Diane feels that her role is to be a good mother and to take pride in her home.

The living room has light blue shag carpeting, medium blue Mr. and Mrs. Chairs and a blue print colonial sofa, a Boston rocker with medium blue pads, and a pine deacon's bench.

The colonial pine kitchen table is covered with a blue and white checked cloth. A pine fruit compote holds monkeypod wood fruit, a souvenir from their trip to Hawaii last year. Matching pine candlesticks hold candles the exact shade of blue as the tablecloth.

Diane's wall decorations include wooden spoons, plaques, a mug rack filled with bright colored enamel mugs, and a pine shelf with blue jugs and enameled tea pot.

The dining area door wall views the landscaped backyard, the patio and picnic area, and large shade trees.

The Wilson tri-level in Springfield Township.

Robbie's room has royal blue carpeting, a red cord bedspread, red and blue toy soldier wallpaper, and bright white curtains trimmed with red ball fringe. And naturally, a little boy's room has a couple teddy bears.

The master bedroom is elegant, with a dark blue print spread on the kingsize bed.

A nursery is ready, with the crib awaiting the new baby, due to arrive in September.

The gray brick fireplace is the focal center of the family room. Melon orange sofa and chair and a brown leather recliner are colonial styled. The carpeting is a brown orange and green tweed. The lamps on the colonial pine tables are interesting. One lamp is a replica of an old fashioned water pump, and another is made from a glass jar coffee grinder, half full of coffee beans.

Building codes are set up for general health and safety. When they involve a house, let's say, the walls in the house, the code is set up to make sure that the walls are well constructed and safe. The walls must be adequate support for the roof. They must provide insulation and an effective barrier against outside moisture, fumes, vapors, noises, and odors. The walls must be durable and easy to maintain. Doesn't it make you feel better to know someone is watching out for you?

Home Gardening

by Dave Coulter

Grow a garden! Even an automatic transmission shifts for itself! The last average frost date for this area is May 22-May 25, but in 1973 the last frost occurred the morning of June 12. To date we have not enjoyed an average, whatever that is, spring; so it seems that perhaps the home gardener should now be able to gamble and plant other "row crops."

Beet seed is not a seed as we commonly understand a seed, but rather a corky burr, sometimes containing two or three seed or germs. It's possible to have greater than 100% germination from beet "seed," but rarely achieved because nature which provides its own system of checks and balances, has endowed beets with high germination, but low vitality or the ability of the germinated seedling to thrust through the soil and emerge.

Plant beet seed about 1-2 inches apart and after emergence thin the plants to about 3-4 inches in the row and selectively continue thinning the rows as the beets reach a usable state. Don't forget that beet tops make good "greens." The variety, Detroit Dark Red, is grown and available nationally.

Swiss Chard, a cousin to beets, makes darn good "greens" and I prefer it to spinach because it washes, and is thoroughly cleaned more easily. Only a few varieties of chard are available; they are all good, so pay your money and take your choice. Not so generally available is spinach, Giant Thick-Leaved, and I prefer it to the readily available Bloomsdale types which have crumpled leaves.

Spring planted spinach should be planted early and used up quickly because spinach will "bolt" or make seed stalks, when the heat of June comes on.

As long as "greens" are the subject, let's go on with them. Mustard, a cousin to cabbage, is enjoyed by many. Like spinach, mustard is obtainable in curled or smooth leafed varieties. Again I like the smooth leafed types which are: Florida Broad Leafed or Large Smooth Leafed. Southern Giant Curled is widely available and good. Let's end this green subject with turnip greens and the variety, Seven Top, produces no root bulb, just tops for greens.

Broccoli may be planted now and I recommend that you buy the plants and accept whatever variety is on hand. The culture of broccoli is about like that of cabbage, but keeping it bug free is harder than growing it. This is also true of Brussels Sprouts — but the plants fight the bugs.

Most gardeners grow carrots. Michigan is one of the major carrot producing states and almost all of Michigan's commercially grown carrots are grown in deep muck. There, the growers safely grow the long, slim, narrow shouldered varieties such as Gold Pak or Emperor.

However, I recommend that the home gardener grow the half long types such as Danvers Half Long or Nantes. I prefer the Nantes because they are sweeter and almost coreless. Nantes is not tapered, but cylindrical and stump rooted. If your garden is on clay or heavy soil the Chantenay varieties are recommended, because they are short and wide crowned.

There are several varieties of miniature carrots and all of the miniatures are good. The chart in an earlier column disclosed that carrot seed runs into the hundreds of thousand per pound so most people seed them too thickly. It's hard to do otherwise. If you overseed your carrots, thin them to about 1 1/2 inch to 2 inches in the row, then selectively keep thinning them as you use them to accommodate their shoulder width growth.

The culture of Endive, which can add zest to a tossed salad is almost the same as the culture of lettuce. Endive comes in two types, broad leafed, which resembles a butterhead lettuce, and curly types. For the broad leafed endive I recommend Broad Leafed Batavian and for the curled, Green Curled or Ruffec. Plant as you do lettuce and thin the plants in the row to 8 to 10 inches in the row.

Commercial picklers call dill a weed and it grows like a weed and unless you have a garden large enough to grow plenty of pampered pickles for pickling or plan to bunch and sell the dill, it can be a waste of space for home gardens. If you do plan to grow dill for your own use, plant a short row as it won't take much for your own pickles. Commercial dill growers frequently broadcast dill, like grass.

It surprises me how few gardeners have tried growing Kohl Rabi, which is a relative of cabbage, and may be easily direct seeded. It should be thinned to about 3 or 4 inches of row spacing. It produces, above the ground, a baseball shaped and sized ball, from the sides of which the leaf stems grow. Harvest it when it achieves 2 inches in diameter. Cut off roots and leaf stems, wash, peel and slice raw. It has the flavor of mild cabbage or cabbage "Heart," and makes an exciting addition to salads, or may be cooked 'til tender and served hot.

What is veneer? Veneer is a thin sheet of natural wood cut from a selected log on either a giant lathe or on a slicer. The log is secured in position and automatically moved up against a razor sharp blade which cuts the log into slices or "peels" it off in long continuous sheets. The cutting method determines the appearance of the wood and depends on the wood species, the particular log, and the grain figure desired. The three most common methods used are: rotary cut, flat-sliced, quarter-sliced. Veneer thickness varies according to the end use of the paneling itself. The look varies according to the end use of the paneling itself. The look of veneer is lovely for your walls, furniture, and floors.

Motorists advised: Conserve fuel

While gasoline supplies have not reached critical shortage stages anywhere in Michigan, motorists should begin making efforts to conserve car fuel, advises Automobile Club of Michigan.

"With gasoline prices on the upswing, and expected to increase even more this summer, drivers can tighten their purse strings by reducing travel expenses," points out Joseph L. Ratke, Auto Club travel manager.

"Whether you are taking a cross-country trip or a short hop to the corner grocer, there are a number of ways to cut down on auto gasoline consumption," Ratke states.

"By conserving car fuel, motorists can do their part to insure that gasoline remains plentiful throughout the state," Ratke adds. "Any gas shortages are expected to be only local in nature with travelers able to fill up at nearby stations if their first choice is out of fuel."

Auto club officials have issued several recent statements urging motorists not to put off plans for vacation trips this spring and summer because of rumored gasoline shortages.

To help motorists get the most out of their gasoline this season, Auto Club has developed a series of guidelines to help conserve fuel.

- Keep auto engines tuned with special attention to fuel and air filters, plugs and points plus emission control devices in late-model cars.

- Travel at moderate speeds since gasoline mileage is greatly reduced by higher speeds.

- Don't overfill fuel tank since gas can overflow while the car is in motion or when parked on an incline. Fuel also expands and can overflow in hot weather.

"Motorists also can form car pools for office commuting," advises Ratke, who suggests combining short trips, such as taking children to school, picking up your spouse from work and performing shopping errands on the same outing.

"Avoid 'jack-rabbit' starts by accelerating gradually and travel at steady speeds whenever possible as stop-and-go driving increases gas consumption. This can be accomplished by anticipating traffic signals to minimize braking and acceleration," he states.

"Such practices as accelerating hard when climbing a hill or 'flooring' the gas pedal when passing or entering a freeway also should be avoided when feasible."

Motorists are advised not to use long warm-up periods after starting a cold engine. Instead, drive slowly for a mile or so before reaching cruising speed.

Vacationers should consider the following as well:

- Cut down on use of the air-conditioner by beginning your travel day earlier in the morning and pulling off the road during the hottest hours.

- Try to travel lighter than normal. Excess weight puts added strain on the engine and results in less miles per gallon of gasoline.

Auto club reminds that while reducing gasoline consumption, most of the practices it suggests also will decrease exhaust emissions as well as help conserve energy resources.

Opinion

by Jim Briney

The principle of church and state separation has been with us since the founding fathers put together the foundations of our democracy in America.

A major reason it came about was to prevent large denominations from dominating political influence.

Can you imagine "The Protestant Party" and "The Catholic Party" being the major political organizations in this country today?

Northern Ireland aside, it was, and is, a definite principle of the democratic process to maintain a distinction between church and state.

But need SEPARATE necessarily mean OPPOSITE?

Surely our system of government would benefit, as would any, if people of purer motive took an active role in the decision making process.

Too often those who profess religious convictions take the position that politics, and the resulting governments are dirty business not to be condoned or participated in.

Unfortunately, that view prevents some of the best potential leaders from getting involved.

Of the great issues being debated in this decade, it is beyond coincidence that "the church" and "the state" are at odds. For example; abortion and capital punishment. Overlapping occurs on the matter of rights, but by and large, church and state are in separate camps. ("What is good for the state is harmful to man.")

These examples can well be argued, but merely are meant to raise the conflict between the two great institutional influences in our lives, a conflict that may come to a head as a major topic among presidential aspirants by 1976.

Since the original reason for separation has cooled, (how many office seekers in the last election even mentioned their religious affiliation?), it has come to money as the focal point.

To be sure, the above cited examples are people oriented, and lives are at stake, but the majority does not feel immediately affected by the, nor are the institutions of church and state directly threatened by them.

So it comes down to dollars. In this age, for good or evil, it is money largely that creates power. Consequently, the key issue will be taxation of church owned property.

Already it is being considered by distraught cities as a means of increasing revenues.

And, "Why not?", some ask, in light of revelations such as Catholic Church ownership reaping profit from the manufacture of birth control pills.

While that may be extreme, it is not out of the ordinary to document numerous incidences of church profit from traditionally secular enterprises.

To the fullest of its significance church and state separation, whenever raised, must be viewed as a challenge to the sovereignty of both.

Campsites ready for summer

With more than 51,000 campsites available, Michigan's camping industry is better prepared than ever to handle the annual summer rush to the state's forest, lakes and streams, according to Automobile Club of Michigan.

Although state park campsites have been increased by less than one percent since last year, the number of private campground spaces, according to an Auto Club listing, has grown by 19 percent over 1972.

"Few, if any, campers should have problems finding space this summer," said Joseph Ratke, Auto Club touring manager. "Even if their favorite state park campground is filled to capacity, several private campgrounds with vacant spaces should be in close driving distance."

This year the Auto Club's guide to private campgrounds lists 305 parks — 270 in the Lower Peninsula and 35 in the UP — as compared to 255 listed last year. The 305 private campgrounds offer a total of 23,897 campsites.

In comparison, Michigan's 70 state parks offer 14,827 sites. At state forests, 2,829 sites are available and at national forests, 1,789. City, township and county parks — often overlooked by the camping public — now have 8,381 sites.

"One indicator of how the growth of private parks has helped campers is the 29 percent decrease in the number of turnaways at state parks last year as compared to 1971," Ratke noted. "With only a slight increase in new sites in 1972, state parks turned away 59,730 camping families while in 1971 the number was 84,258."

Most private campgrounds, unlike state parks, do take reservations. In its 1973 private campground guide, Auto Club shows the general location of each park as well as a telephone number for making reservations. On summer holiday weekends especially, campers are advised to make advance arrangements before heading for a private campground.

The Auto Club guide also details the wide variety of facilities that are available at private campgrounds. Accommodations range from minimal to deluxe, with most campgrounds either offering a beach or a swimming pool.

Daily rates, according to the Auto Club guide, range from $1.50 to $5.50. These are minimum fees and do not always include charges for electricity and other items.

Campers should have little trouble finding a space if they keep these tips in mind:

- If planning a stay at one of the more popular state parks during a warm weekend, arrive Friday before noon.
- The best time to get state park spaces for weekday stays is Sunday.
- On and after June 18, use the State Park Hot Line to locate campsites. Phone any of these numbers for information: (517) 275-8041, daily between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.; (517) 373-1270, Monday through Friday between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.; and (313) 868-1640, Monday through Friday between 10:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. Campsite information is also available at staffed rest areas.
- Have alternate campsites located on a map should your first campground choice be filled upon arrival. Carry guides listing state, private and municipal campgrounds to also know what facilities are available at each park.
- If you are definitely planning to stay in a private park, phone ahead for reservations.

Is and ought

by Jim Briney

The man who brought General Motors to its knees over the Corvair says that the same thing is happening to the United States government over Watergate.

Ralph Nader told me in Washington, D.C. on Saturday that "Nixon will resign."

In no uncertain terms, the nation's number one consumer advocate said the presidential election of 1972 was "perpetrated by fraud," and "had the facts been known by last September, Mr. Nixon would not have been the Republican candidate. The public would not tolerate — at that level — criminal behavior." Nader added: "No president can withstand the complete shattering of confidence in his administration" that the Watergate incident has caused.

Watergate "is not politics, it's gangsterism, pure and simple."

"Stemming from public outrage the president has got to resign. And he will resign."

Speaking at a conference of reporters, sponsored by More, a journalistic review, Ralph Nader offered that resignation would be healthier and more beneficial in terms of restoring public confidence in the government than impeachment. "Impeachment," he said, "generates a partisan controversy which he (Nixon) can exploit."

From a procedural point of view Mr. Nader said we, in this country, have a lesson to learn from Parliamentary government. Under a parliamentary system the man at the top, directly responsible or not for a scandal even one fifth the magnitude of Watergate, would have toppled in 24 hours. Watergate

I asked Mr. Nader did he not think that the president had done all expected of him in releasing those responsible for his campaign and turning them over to the judicial branch?

He replied: "That is not the question. The question is presidential accountability between elections. If Watergate is not enough to remove a president from office then what is?"

On behalf of the little guy, Nader pointed out that it was two reporters, far from the inner circle of journalists covering the White House, that broke the Watergate story and pursued it.

He allowed that the well known columnists and reporters are brilliant. "So brilliant in fact that they often have difficulty seeing the dark for all their light."

As for those who defend Nixon on Watergate Nader just smiled and said, "How journalists can be cynical about skepticism is beyond me."

Nader envisions the president testifying before a Federal Grand jury called to explore Watergate further. He says such a panel could subpoena Nixon and the president would testify to avoid a clash between the Executive and Judicial Branches of the Federal government.

Should the president resign Nader believes Agnew would go with him.

Under ordinary circumstances that would place Speaker of the House Carl Albert of Oklahoma in the White House.

But Nader is not ruling out the possibility of a special election to fill a vacancy at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. The constitution is vague on that point, and it will take a lot of legal research, but, "I think it can be done, and it should be done. It will show that nobody is above the law," says Nader.

G.M.'s, and now Nixon's, torador believes more will come out on Watergate implicating the president, and building pressure sufficient enough that sloppiness and fraud at lower levels of the election process will wane. "Since the unthinkable has happened, lesser levels will be scrutinized," he said.

Don Rodgers and Leo Szalma were busy men Saturday during the Springfield clean-up.

Old wringer washing machines, broken dryers and refrigerators found their way via a front end loader into a Springfield Township clean-up truck marked "Metal Only."

Refinishing furniture

By Betty Hecker

The first thing to do when thinking about refinishing a piece of wooden furniture is to decide if the piece is really worth the effort, the time and work that you will have to put forth.

You've decided to do it. Okay, now the old finish must come off. There are many varnish removers on the market, but the remover recommended by some of the old timers in the business contains two basic ingredients, acetone and wax. The acetone eats the finish, and the wax holds the acetone which is very volatile and evaporates very quickly.

Read the can for both the ingredients and the directions for use. Follow the safety procedures and recommendations of the manufacturer.

Scrape, wipe, and clean off the jellied old finish. Now comes the hard part. The work begins, for now you sand, and sand, preparing the piece for a new finish. Start with a No. 80 grit paper, a fairly coarse sandpaper. Sand well to remove the blemishes and marks in the wood. After you are satisfied with the first sanding, use a finer grade of sandpaper, a No. 120. Sand some more. Depending on the wood, it may be necessary for you to go on to an even finer paper, a No. 220, (but it is not always necessary).

Use a good grade of sandpaper, example: a red garnet. It may cost a little more, but it saves you time by doing a better job. The grit won't come loose and cause scratches as can happen with a cheaper paper.

If any repair work is necessary, and if gluing is required, use a glue that does NOT dry clear. Use one that will dry yellow, or red. You will want to be able to see that the glue is all sanded off the surface before you start to stain or color the wood.

For plugging gouges or filling nail holes, it is recommended that you use a patching material made from wood itself, and that you select one in the color closest to the color of the wood you are repairing. There are many preparations for patching, from sticks to plastic wood, to preparations with wood fibers in it. Most experts agree that wood putty is the best, however, since it is made from sawdust and is the easiest to work with. Again, follow the directions on the package or container.

One expert advises to do all repair work, especially major repairs, before the old finish is removed, in other words, first.

The type of finish you want for your piece depends on the type of furniture itself, and of all the other pieces in your room.

An oil finish is one application procedure. Oil doesn't require polish, or varnish, and is complete as is.

Oil can be used on all wood, but is ideal for walnut and teak woods. Dust (continued on next page)

Ready for final sanding and reassembling is this desk and matching chair. It's almost finished, having been stained and varnished.

Use proper materials

doesn't affect oil in the work area and the new oil finishes for furniture on the market today are far advanced over the linseed oil used in years past. Linseed oil users know how sticky, gummyess can develop if it is left on the wood too long. The new oil finishes have the ability to be wiped away if tackiness develops.

Oil tempers the wood to make it harder, and actually improves the wood. And lastly, follow the directions on the can.

On finishes other than oil, purchase all your supplies from the same place, from a dealer who knows his materials and how to use them. Ask the dealer's advice, and if possible, show him a piece of the prepared wood. (This sometimes eliminates the discount stores.)

Select the color of the stain. Carefully read the label. Do you need a sealer? or is the sealer already in the stain?

Generally, the directions are to apply a thin, even coat with a soft bristle brush. If the wood is not uniform and there is uneven absorption, spots which appear dark should be wiped with a lintless cloth before the stain sets.

No two products are exactly alike. So follow the recommendations of your salesman and the directions on the can.

After 6-12 hours apply the sealer (if needed), and after completely dry, sand lightly. Never use steel wool between coats of finish. Particles can break off and stick in corners or fancy work, and cause a rough finish.

A good varnish takes a long time to dry. Spar varnish can take from 24 to 48 hours between coats, but the better quality varnish used, the more successful the refinishing job.

Steel wool can be used for the final sanding, for the hand rubbed look.

You're finished! Stand back and admire!

To keep that creation shining, cabinet makers say they use Old English Scratch Remover Polish or a liquid Lemon Oil Polish.

Hand sanding is an important step in the refinishing of furniture. This bedroom chest is on its way to a new life.

Springfield cleanup rated a success

By Betty Hecker
"It's more than we ever expected!"
said Don Rogers, chairman of the annual Clean-up Week in Springfield

Township. "The response has been tremendous!"

He was talking about the huge amount of trash and rubbish, cleaned up from the roadways and from the yards of the residents of Springfield Township.

Work crews with pickup trucks delivered load after load of trash to the haulaway truck trailers waiting behind the Springfield Township Hall.

Residents also loaded up station wagons and the trunks of their cars, taking advantage of the free disposal and of the bright, sunny day to get rid of all the unwanted clutter around their homes.

To give credit to all those who took part in the cleanup will be impossible, for I'm sure to leave out many. But some of the groups who worked are:
The Davisburg Jaycees, the Rotary, Boy
Scouts from Clarkston Troop No. 189,

Brownies from Troop No. 528, church groups in Davisburg — five Clarkston
High School students who just wanted to help, and Supervisor Claude Trim and members of his family.

The Davisburg Jaycee Auxiliary Women served lunch for all the workers, McDonald's Hamburgers at M15 and Dixie donated orange drink and the use of the dispenser for the day.

Al Potter came with his big disposal truck to help move the trash to the landfill.

All in all, it was a good day, a day with community spirit, and lots of hard work.

As one resident put it, "I don't think this township has seen this much activity in a long time!"

Navy beans good buy

By Larrestine Trimm
 Mich. Dept. of Agriculture
 Marketing Information Specialist
 Consumers are buying beans to balance their deflated food budgets and preparing them to an epicurean's delight. Navy beans have been on the plentiful foods list for the last three months and 99 percent of all navy beans grown in the United States come from Michigan, according to Michigan Department of Agriculture officials.

Beans are less expensive than most foods in the protein group. Nutritionists say when beans are served in combination with a small amount of meat, cheese, egg or grain, they can nutritionally replace animal protein.

For elegant bean dishes, you start out with tender boiled beans. Of course, dried beans are the least expensive but for busy cooks who don't have the time to start this way, there are pre-cooked and canned beans on the market. Some canned beans are plain, others are cooked in sauces, seasoned or combined with meat or sausage. Most come in sizes to suit your family needs.

Need a delicious side dish vegetable to accompany that roast? Saute boiled beans in butter and season with nutmeg. When beans are slightly browned, add enough Michigan dairy sour cream to coat them and sprinkle with crisp pieces of fried celery. Or, simmer boiled navy beans in a root-vegetable stock with a generous amount of butter, a mixture of aromatic herbs and an onion stuck with cloves. In about 15 minutes, remove the onion and cloves. Add a little Michigan red wine, salt and pepper to taste. Garnish with tiny glazed onions before serving.

Try spicy Mexican-style recipe for fried or chili beans. Or add a bit of soul to your menu with baked beans and spareribs simmered in a molasses and mustard sauce.

Lumberjack lore

Members and friends of the Oakland County Pioneer & Historical Society will hear tales of the tall timber and the roaring lumber camps of Northern Michigan following their Annual Dinner at White Lake-Oaks on Wednesday, May 16.

Guest speaker for the evening is Glenn Ruggles, president of the Commerce Township Area Historical Society, who has spent years of intensive research in preparing a history of Michigan's lumbering and logging days. A native of Elk Rapids, Ruggles successfully spearheaded a drive to register one of Michigan's largest 19th Century blast furnaces in that town recently with the Michigan Historical Commission.

Ruggles is a teacher in the Walled Lake School system as well as an associate professor at Oakland Community College. He also serves as a member of the Society's Board of Directors.

White Lake-Oaks, formerly known as the Twin Lakes Country Club, is located at 991 South Williams Lake Road between M-59 and Elizabeth Lake Road. A social hour, before the dinner, will start at 6 p.m. For reservations, contact Mrs. Charles Roush, 4685 Fox Hills, Apt. 2, Bloomfield Hills.

Contest winner

Caroline Smith, 16, a sophomore at Clarkston High School was one of 30 high school students who walked off May 1 with $2700 as police not only stood by and watched, but applauded.

Caroline was a winner in the Police Officers Association of Michigan's Annual Essay Contest and the $2700 was Savings Bonds accorded to the winners.

Caroline, who lives at 4863 Clarkston Road, won a $25 savings bond.

More twp. briefs

The first step in creation of a special assessment district to build sidewalks along Maybee Road and Waldon Road near both Junior High Schools was approved.

Engineers were authorized to provide cost studies on constructing a sidewalk on the south side of Waldon from in front of Clarkston Elementary School to an extension of Almond Lane and on the north side of Maybee from Dvorak to the Sashabaw School drive.

The school board has previously agreed to share costs with the township.

Board members considered in executive session but took no action on an Oakland County Sheriff's Department proposal to provide patrol at a cost of $51,780 this year as compared to $51,000 last year.
