Pine Knob traffic pact reached

A traffic and crowd control agreement for five rather than eight deputies has been reached by Pine Knob owners and the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

The contract, which calls for five uniformed deputies to work an average of six hours every night there is a performance at the music theater, should not cost more than $36,000 for the season. Between 90 and 120 shows are scheduled for the theater's third year of operation.

Representatives of Indusco Corp., owners of the property, also agreed to pay the $34,000 outstanding on last year's $42,000 bill before the June 8 opening, according to Oakland County Auditor Chairman Daniel T. Murphy.

The new contract provides for the county to be paid the overtime rate of $10 an hour for each of the five deputies on duty at Pine Knob.

"Five, we think, can handle the biggest crowds," Murphy said. "I thought they were overstaffed last year."

He noted that if a situation arose in which more deputies were needed, it would be the type of problem for which the sheriff's department would send out cars anyway.

On those nights when the crowd is small and we can get by with fewer than five men, we will do that," he said.

The main purpose of having uniformed deputies at the music theater is for traffic control, Murphy noted.

However, this year will not have a "lax period" during the performances but will work on the Pine Knob grounds on crowd control and general security. This will allow Pine Knob to cut its internal security staff, which last year numbered 16.

Attending the contract negotiating session between representatives of the county and the owners and operators of the theater were Independence Township Supervisor Robert Vandermark and Director of Police Services Jack McCall.

Township officials had vowed that the theater would not open unless the contract matter was resolved.

"I'm very pleased that everyone has worked together and cooperated to work out an agreement," Vandermark said following the meeting.

by JEAN

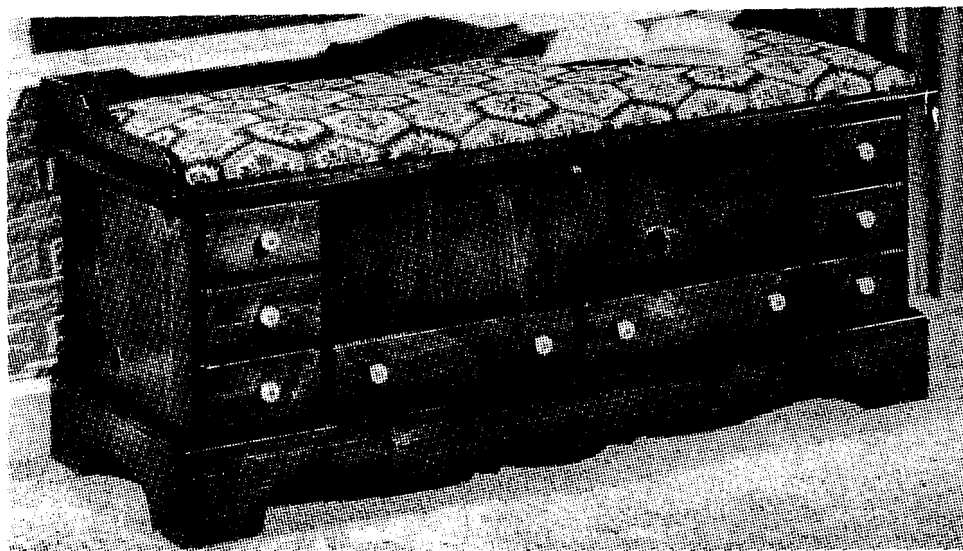

Are you a brunette and need some tips on coloring? Well, use a bronze frosty sheer makeup foundation first, than an apricot blusher. Remember to apply blusher just on cheekbones, jaw and nose, and blend it in well. Eyes are most alluring when mauve-shadowed on lid. This is great, because as you know brunettes are the ones who can wear mauve shadow well. Don't forget a bit of gray for softening effect on eyes. Simply apply a line of grey at the crease in the lid, and use dark grey mascara. Deep red lipstick is a great contrast with all these muted tones.

If your hair needs coloring . . . come to the experts at "SALON OF BEAUTY" BONNIE JEAN'S HAIR STYLISTS, 5488 Dixie Hwy. Tel. 623-1411. Open 7-8:30. Sat. 7:30-3. Tinting, Frosting, Bleaching and other phases of Hair Color available here. Friendly staff to assist you.

Voters promise millage support

Fifty-eight percent of Clarkston School District voters say they support the proposed four mill increase in operating tax levy which will go to the voters June 10.

The findings is revealed in a telephone survey undertaken for the school district by Polly Carrithers of Oakland Intermediate Schools.

She also learned, however, that a majority did not know that the four-mill increase will not be added onto the total tax bill. The district's intention is to reduce the bonding levy in the district by a proportional amount so that the overall school levy of 28.21 mills will remain substantially the same.

The district currently pays 21.21 mills for operation and 7 mills for bonding. A new state ruling has made it imperative that the district cut back on its bonding millage so that the amount raised will equal only those payments which fall due in one fiscal year.

Dr. Leslie F. Greene, superintendent, says he feels he can hold the overall millage at the same level, but with the approval of voters he can make the district eligible for more state operational funds by hiking the current 21.21 operation levy to 25.21 mills.

A mill is figured at $1 per $1,000 of state equalize valuation applied against property.

Mrs. Carrithers found that a majority of those contacted couldn't think of anything about the schools in the district that bothers them. Lack of facilities was mentioned by 9 percent, with no more than four percent citing such items as, administration, teachers, discipline, drug and tobacco usage by students and lack of materials.

She said of the 307 persons interviewed 75 percent intend to vote in the election and 5 percent said they were unaware there was to be an election.

What those interviewed said they liked best about the schools was friendliness (13%), a feeling the school program is effective (16%), the teachers (10%), and the administration (7%).

Approximately a third of those interviewed said the Clarkston News is their chief source of information about the schools; a quarter cited the Oakland Press. Another third indicated that their best source was word of mouth information from students, school employees, friends and acquaintances.

Asked to imagine unlimited money for their schools, a quarter of those interviewed would first invest in buildings and facilities. An eighth specified gyms and physical education programs at the elementary level, and ten percent would like more and better teachers. Six percent definitely want a swimming pool. More instructional materials, instructional specialists, and vocational education were each listed by five percent.

The Clarkston News is the chief source of information about school matters for 41% of the parents, and 29% of non-parents. The Oakland Press was cited as a chief source by 27% of the parents and 31% of non-parents. Parents showed only a slight edge over non-parents in being aware of changes in the tax law that would affect the total levy.

With unlimited money to spend for schools, a third of the parents would put it into buildings and facilities, compared to an eighth of the non-parents.

Discipline of school children was cited by ten percent of the non parents as what bothers them most about the Clarkston Schools, but by only five percent of the parents. Lack of facilities bothers but 3% of non-parents and 13% of the parents.

Parents and non-parents seem to like the same things about their school system, with the major difference being reaction to the teachers. Fifteen percent of the parents say it is the teaching staff that they particularly like; five percent of non-parents mention teachers.

Of those who say they support the millage, 16% had heard about the change in the law, 61% have children in school and 77% expect to vote. Of those who said they did not support the millage, 7% knew of the change in the law, 33% have children in school and 66% expect to vote.

Two-thirds of the millage supporters did not name anything about the school that bothers them; half of the non-supporters could. However, lack of facilities was mentioned by 10% of those who support the millage, but by none of those who oppose the millage.

Sample cells in Precincts 1, 7, 9 and 10 were large enough to indicate 60% support or better in those precincts. A third or more of the voters sampled were undecided in Precincts 2, 3 and 4. The 48% support indicated by Precincts 3 and 4 is the lowest in the district.

We're high unemployment area

Feds earmark $52,000

Because of a high 9.9 unemployment figure for Independence Township estimated by the Michigan Employment Security Commission for the months of June, July and August last year, the township may be due for a federal windfall of $52,000.

The United States Department of Labor issued the figure last week, despite Congress' failure at this point to act on appropriations for its Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. The appropriation figure, approved by the House at $250 million is now being considered by the Senate at $400 million, according to Robert Chisholm, Oakland County project director of the manpower program.

Chisholm said the money, designed originally as a continuance of the PEP program whereby local governments were able to hire the unemployed at salaries of up to $12,000 a year, carries the restriction that 95 percent of the funds go for wages and salaries for currently unemployed. He said employees hired under PEP would be continued under the new program, as well. PEP was discontinued during the current fiscal year, and local governments had to pick up the tab if they wished to retain those federally sponsored employees.

The federal funds, once their amount is determined will be allocated to those communities having more than 6.5 percent unemployment, Chisholm explained.

He said the figure cited for Independence Township is based on a three-county tab kept in Detroit, and had to have been pulled out on an estimated basis.

Unemployment here last summer seemed not to indicate that high a figure, but in November, December and January it could well have approached the 9.9 mark due to auto shop layoffs and a consequent fall-off in the economy.

The March tri-county unemployment figure is seen at 8.7, having leveled off from 9.7 in March, Chisholm reported.

Chisholm said he had advised township officials to prepare a program in cooperation with county officials to utilize the money. Formal application for the funds will have to be made by the county, he said.

The funds, if they come through as Washington is announcing, could provide for the full time employment of five people for a year.

Police appeal board organized

Independence Township now has the police appeal board called for in the ordinance which established its police services department last fall.

Named to the board were Township Treasurer Betty Hallman and Trustees Keith Humbert and Jerry Powell

The board would meet to hear any complaints about Independence Township police officers from citizens or other members of the department. After evaluation of the complaint, the appeal board would make a recommendation back to the entire township board.

Commission may zone for local landfill

Now under consideration for inclusion in Independence Township's new master zoning map, yet to be adopted, is a landfill area.

Planning Commission members are hopeful that if the township makes provision to handle its own refuse, it may be able to head off regional plans which call for location of a 200-acre landfill within the township to serve most of north Oakland County.

Planning Commission Chairman Mel Vaara said the commission also passed a resolution requesting that all information regarding a landfill for this area be funneled through the planning body. He said some members were disgruntled because the landfill had never been brought to the commission's attention.

DPW Director George Anderson was there to explain the state law which requires every county and every municipality of more than 10,000 population to have a solid waste disposal plan by July 1, 1974. He said there is also the threat of proposed legislation to ease condemnation of lands for landfill purposes.

Currently, one of three proposed landfills for the county is a dot on a map west of M-15 and north of Hubbard Road.

The commission also began the one-by-one discussion of objections raised to its proposed zoning map during a recent public hearing. Vaara said each objection is being studied, and the results of the commission's findings will be discussed at a second public hearing, yet to be announced.

Draft registration

Forms to enable young men to register for the draft by mail are available at Independence Township Hall. Officials there suggest that those who have just turned 18 register to vote and register to draft at the same time.

Residents will rebuild Walters Lake dam

Residents of Sunnybeach Country Club Subdivision who said they were short on cash but long on a willingness to work were taken at their word by the Independence Township Board—they soon will have close to $1,900 worth of materials with which to rebuild a dam and install new culverts.

Members of the subdivision association attended the last two board meetings to seek help with the flooding problems in the area east of Eston Road.

In the torrents of two weeks ago, some 40 lots and numerous basements were flooded by water overflowing a creek that runs from Walters Lake through the subdivision.

With culverts in bad repair and of insufficient size to handle the overflow, residents finally just cut a trench through Meadowbrook Street.

Meanwhile, Independence Township Director of Public Works George Anderson, on the request of the board, was getting estimates on materials to replace the culverts and repair the Walters Lake dam, which Anderson said he doubted would make it through the winter without busting.

The board voted May 21 to purchase 54 feet of 36-inch culverts for Avalon and Meadowbrook streets for about $886 and to spend up to $1,000 on material to repair the dam.

The residents will get some advice from Anderson, who said the project requires not so much engineering expertise as just plain work.

Immunization clinic

Oakland County Health Department will hold its June Immunization Clinic Thursday June 6 from 1-4 p.m. at independence center, 5331 Maybee Rd.

Immunization shots will be given by county health nurses to all children of Oakland County residents free of charge. If you have a child ready to enter school in the fall or preparing for summer camp, please come in and take advantage of this service.

T.B. testing is also available for adults as well as children.

New owners brim with ideas for Town Shop

Clarkston's Town Shop is about to become the site of offices and a mini-mall according to Mitchell Dechter of Southfield [from left] who says he will open offices there; George Smith, former owner of the building; Dr. and Mrs. Michael Wittenberg, who plan offices for his podiatry practice and her Associated Occupational Therapist Inc.; and Mr. and Mrs. Terry L. Iles of Master Developments Inc. who are remodeling the building.

Everything from offices to small 500 to 1,000 square foot boutiques are planned for the Town Shop, 31 South Main, according to its new owners, Dr. and Mrs. Michael Wittenberg of Middle Lake Road.

Brimming over with ideas of the items the "mini-mall" could feature, the Wittenbergs are now concentrating on renovation of the rear of the former clothing store for offices.

Dr. Wittenberg, who has a podiatry practice in Flint, will open an office there and Mrs. Wittenberg, who is president of Associated Occupational Therapists Inc. will move her headquarters there from Detroit.

Also planning to rent space in the new complex is Mitchell Dechter, a Southfield attorney.

The store has three levels which the Wittenbergs see as being eventually turned into a beehive of minishops. Terry L. Iles of Master Development Inc. of Auburn Heights has been employed to design the facility.

Once the Clarkston Mill, the shop has been used for many things, including a pool hall and an ice cream parlor. It was most recently the Town Shop, a clothing store.

Many of the artifacts from the old days are turning up in the attic and basement of the store, the Wittenbergs report. Some of the original mill stones are still on the property, they've found.

Clothes, jewelry, flowers, even a tuna bagel shop on the side projecting onto Depot Road are envisioned.

The upstairs attic, converted with skylights, would be ideal for a florist and spice shop, says Mrs. Wittenberg. The basement she sees as eventually becoming "The Underneath" - either a specialty shop or restaurant - maybe featuring old Humphrey Bogart movies.

The Wittenbergs have lived in the Clarkston area a year. They find the rural turn-of-the-century atmosphere fascinating and claim they want to restore the building "back to its cobblestone antiquity."

"The things we want to do will take the right kind of people helping out," they say. They're hoping that residents interested in opening mini stores will contact them at their home, phone 625-2296.

Ortonville Museum open Sundays

Starting June 2 the Ortonville Museum will be open to the public from 2 to 4:30 p.m. each Sunday. Members of the Ortonville Community Historical Society will serve as hosts and guides through September 15.

Scouts ready Show-A-Ree

Boy Scouts from Clarkston, Davisburg, Drayton Plains, Waterford, Lake Orion and Oxford will be taking part in the annual Manito District Scout Show-A-Ree from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. June 1 at Springfield-Oaks Park in Davisburg.

Forty-five live action exhibition type booths and camp sites will be on view to depict the many vocations, avocations and skills that boys acquire through the Cub Scout and Scout programs.

The show will be open with a flag ceremony and ribbon cutting at 10 a.m. the Waterford Jaycee 1894 National Washboard Band will perform at 8 p.m. Waterford Jaycees will judge the exhibits.

Bicentennial needs you

by Ruth Basinger

The Independence-Clarkston Bicentennial Commission not only needs, but desires the participation of as many township residents as possible to plan and carry out the 1976 commemoration of our country's founding . . . starting now!

If you can be proud of our township as it was, as it is, or as you would like it to be, please offer your suggestions for projects in the following three areas which are specified by the National Bicentennial Commission.

HERITAGE, to be an enduring achievement—a preservation of something from the past. This could be a publicly owned building or other landmark; a published history; or a museum, for examples.

FESTIVAL, to take place in 1976 or in anticipation of 1976—plays, parades, pageants, demonstrations, exhibitions, etc.

HORIZONS, to be ongoing into the future. Any project to improve the quality of life in the future. This is a category of infinite possibilities. Two examples are first, environmental such as tree planting; second, cultural such as establishing concerts or classes.

Aside from ideas as to the nature of projects, the commemoration needs your contribution of time, (with or without labor and talent), and encouragement . . . now, please!

To volunteer call Bill Martin, Chairman; Ginny Schultz, 625-3062; or Jean Saile, Media Chairman, 625-3370.

The Clarkston Community Historical Society cordially invites all Independence Township residents who are interested in history or the preservation of historic sites to membership. To join please call Nancy Prucher, 625-2582, Ginny Schultz, 625-3062, or any other member.

Save the church!

The old Clarkston United Methodist Church, Buffalo and Church, is for sale, and in our opinion, it would be a mistake to see it sold to a private owner.

The church is steeped in history—more than a century old—and it has the room to accommodate the functions of a community center well as permitting its upstairs to be used for a museum.

The emphasis is switching to history with the approach of the community's Bicentennial in 1976. Artifacts of the earlier years are coming out of basements and attics, and the community needs some place to store them.

Preservation of the church, in combination with its use for display of these relics, provides a dual goal that in our estimation is worth striving for.

More than that—the church is equipped with a kitchen which would make it an ideal community meeting center.

Federal funds and private grants will be available to the community for any worthwhile historical undertakings during the Bicentennial celebration. Those plus private donations could do the job.

We hope various clubs in the area will consider making the saving of the church one of their goals for the coming years.

The old Methodist Church -- worth preserving as an historical site and as a community center as well

I can tell you right now (and it's the Thursday before as I write this) that the weekend was a wet one. I do not know at this point whether it rained or not, but that is beside the point.

The deluge started Thursday night at the high school gym. Young elementary students gathered to sing and play some of the songs that may have evoked some of the pleasures of an earlier era.

I sat there beside my husband, trying to hide from him (a most pragmatic man) the welling tears. My throat lumped—and the fact is, I blubbered.

I do that even when there are no Saile children taking part in the performance. Young voices raised in harmony, young instrumentalists all playing in time to the same music—they turn me on.

Flags do, too, and the sight of the very young or the very old stepping out proudly behind their country's emblem is enough to start the deluge.

This tendency to dampness is at best an embarrassment, and there are times when it is downright detrimental to my weekly paycheck.

Charged with capturing such events on film, there have been occasions when I have not been able to find the viewfinder for the water.

I am not alone in this particular foible, I have learned. Other members of Sobbers, Anonymous have contacted me furtively to reveal they, too, suffer from over-emotionalism.

Why, I asked one of my favorite shrinks, this tendency to open the waterworks?

He disillusioned me—muttered something about life passing by, and happier earlier times, and all that rot. And then he said something that struck home.

"You're a sentimentalist," he said. "Stand up and cheer—my country and all that stuff."

"You're right!" this ex-patriated Canadian responded.

But then, it's true there has never been a Saile child who played in a high school marching band, and I always cry when marching bands play, too.

"Tears aren't always sadness," he said. "They reflect joy, pride and deep emotional feeling."

I guess what he means is I'm still a country girl at heart.

Priest wears wrong garments

by Jim Fitzgerald

It is splendid that President Nixon has his own private priest to part the red sea of acrimony which is floating the desks in the Oval Office.

The Rev. John McLaughlin, a Jesuit priest, is also a fulltime presidential aide with an office in the White House. This has not been a good season for presidential aides, what with indictments and jail terms and forced resignations. It was clever of Nixon to bring in a man of God to restore some dignity and credibility to the presidential team. Father McLaughlin is obviously doing a good job, even if he was a 3rd choice behind Norman Vincent Peale and Danny Thomas.

But I think Father McLaughlin is making a mistake by never wearing his Roman collar when he appears on TV in a Nixon commercial. He dresses the same as every other sincere spokesman, with a striped tie and conservative suit. He might as well be giving one of those aspirin lectures.

If I were writing the McLaughlin scenario, I would dress him something like St. Francis of Assisi. The long, horsehair cassock with rope belt would underscore the absence of vicuna coats in the Nixon administration. The long staff would be fine for shepherding newsmen and keeping Dan Rather from testing the authenticity of the halo. And the pigeons of peace, one on each shoulder, would speak for themselves. If need be, they could speak for themselves all over the newsmen.

Can't you just see it now on the White House lawn? Wow. Dressed like that, Father McLaughlin could sell a used car while Nixon was still fiddling with the odometer.

I'm all for Father McLaughlin and his political parish. I have to be. Remember a few years ago when many clergymen were participating in civil rights and anti-war demonstrations? A complaint often heard was that they should stay in their pulpits and preach the Gospel, rather than picket the Pentagon and help Martin Luther King to overcome. But I disagreed. The ministers should minister to the people who really need it. I always said: They should go into the streets and help the oppressed and protest injustice and march against an immoral war. To me, this was more important than showing up at 10 a.m. every Sunday to read a few verses and tell everyone coffee will be served in the fellowship hall following services.

So I can't back down now. Obviously, President Nixon feels he is the victim of a terrible injustice. Just as obviously, Father McLaughlin agrees with him. So no one should insist he act like a regular Jesuit, and get a job teaching theology and coaching basketball at St. Alfonse High School.

Father McLaughlin feels he is needed in the White House to help the American people to understand swearing is wrong for little kids but healthy for Presidents. And obstructing justice is a crime for your Uncle Harry but a patriotic duty for statesmen with law degrees.

So be it. I might be tempted to join George Meany in wondering when Father McLaughlin hears confessions. But that would be wrong.

Letters to the editor

Girls' sports important Busing wrong kids

To the Editor:

As a former student at Clarkston High School, I am acquainted with the attitudes of Principal William Dennis and athletic director B.J. Hanson regarding sports. It was very much in keeping with those attitudes that Sue Latter, Vadna Seyler, Judy Henderson and Nancy McAlevy would be barred from running in the regional track meet at Madison Heights Madison last Friday. Female athletes are not taken seriously at Clarkston High School.

Sue Latter is an obviously talented runner, who ran as an exhibition runner with the Clarkston boy's team last season was allowed to run in regional and state competition. With only one or a few girls it appears the rules can be stretched.

However, this year an increasing number of young women are entering into the sport, dependent on the contingent decisions of school officials. There is no program for girls, and yet officials can at any time declare the girls exhibition running with the boy's team sufficient participation to exclude them from further competition according to the new MHSAA ruling. With this situation the result in the future can always be: the girls run in nothing and run unprepared.

Such actions by officials are blatant discouragement of female athletes. Yes, sports builds character, but that includes girl's character also.

Sincerely,
Cara Kopplin

[Editor's note: Sue and the girls did run in the regional meet after all, and Sue is now qualified to enter state competition June 1. She placed second in two regional events.]

To the Editor:

The overcrowding problem at Bailey Lake School appears to be a foreboding of things to come. The map provided by Mr. Vaara at the past school board meeting showed a concentration of facilities in the Southeastern Quadrant of the Township and a dire lack of facilities in the Northwest Section.

The Proposal to Bus Walter's Lake Area Students, who currently are some of the closest residents to the school, seems to be only a stop gap measure at best. Rather than add expenses, i.e. Bus gasoline, oil and repair, (Clintonville Rd. is the best "washboard" in the county), why not save money and fuel by letting the students closest to a school attend there and bus those who are coming in from the Western extremes to a closer facility.

Mr. Vaara should have his computer conduct an impartial and comprehensive study of all areas in the total Township and present the results to all the people, rather than just the few facts he chose to select. We believe such a study would show the need for a new facility in the Northwest Section of the Township and the lack of a problem at Bailey Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Rathsburg

Supports Leak

Dear Jean,

Dave Leak has earned my respect in this past year that he has served as President of the Clarkston Board of Education. He has helped us establish priorities and act on them, he has helpfully mediated between divergent opinions on the Board.

He has encouraged discussion among Board members and encouraged citizen participation, and he supports the right of the voters to decide on further facilities for our schools.

I encourage you to re-elect him.

Robert D. Walters

Clarkston El shorted

Just one Taxpayer and Parent

In directing your tirade against the Clarkston Elementary School, you have put yourself into a class with many other people in this district -- those who have much to say but have never personally taken a trip through the school.

I have had children attending that school for 13 years and have actively participated in the P.T.A. almost every year. I have also visited the other schools often and been able to compare the physical aspects of all. There is good and bad in all, but I don't believe that any has a playground as ill equipped or in as bad condition as that at Clarkston El.

The library has been pushed around for years and now is stuck away in the corner of the storage room. The children see their movies while sitting on the floors in the hallways. They are also served their lunches from makeshift tables in the hallways.

For years the PTA has raised funds for the school and always been turned down on their ideas of improving the physical deficiencies found in and around the building. "Because the parents from the other schools would complain that our school was getting more than theirs!" And we weren't requesting movies from the school board - this has also been turned down and also for the same reason.

Yes, I would be very upset about my child being changed from school to school, but I think a couple of portable buildings might be welcomed at our school for we really, truly do need some extra space and we couldn't complain about the other schools having more than we - we would welcome any improvements with open arms! Oh yes, I can look forward to 10 more years of having a student at Clarkston El. and the PTA will probably still only be allowed to spend their money on window shades, file cabinets, library books and phonographs.

Sincerely,
Nancy Tilley

we need SEMCOG

Dear Editor:

Currently there is much debate over regional government as set forth in Metropolitan Fund's Regionalist Papers. Much of this debate focuses on the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG), which Metropolitan Fund proposes should be the primary vehicle in the formation of a mandatory regional government system.

However, Metropolitan Fund's proposal conflicts with the stated goals of SEMCOG, which exists as a voluntary association of local communities in Southeast Michigan. Its purpose is to develop long-range regional plans for transportation, sewage, and solid waste removal systems, land use, recreation and similar needs of Southeast Michigan.

As such, SEMCOG is an open forum where local communities can identify, approach, and solve problems that are obviously regional in scope. Rather than another layer of government, the council protects local autonomy. It does this through direct participation of local elected officials who vote to accept or reject regional plans to have impact on their communities.

SEMCOG may well be the last front for elected officials to protect their local interests. Regional problems and the need for regional services will not go away. We must address these issues together, as local communities, through a voluntary association.

On June 6th, the Oakland County Board of Commissioners will vote on the continuation of their membership in SEMCOG. I believe a rejection of membership in this voluntary organization will be an endorsement of mandatory regional government and a clear signal to the legislature to quickly implement the Metropolitan Fund recommendations.

I urge my fellow commissioners and all communities to increase their involvement with SEMCOG, to keep regionalism in Southeast Michigan on a voluntary basis. SEMCOG is the best mechanism we have to protect local autonomy and to resist forced regional government.

Sincerely,

Lawrence R. Pernick

Last week I could have said, "What I know about the Greek might be compared to my knowledge of the president's prior information of Watergate. I've heard a lot about both, but really feel I know very little about either."

That changed with one little gathering. I and a dozen other press type folks were guests of the membership of St. George Greek Orthodox Church in Bloomfield Hills.

Frequent shouts of "Ya'ssoo" (Good life to you) helped give the evening a festive air, and a philosophical remark by Fr. Gouvelis, "Have a good time—that's what it's all about"—provided the theme. It could also be the Greek national anthem.

A taste of Ouza, a Greek liqueur, a little wine with their dinner, and pleasant conversation made a memorable evening.

Never have we been in a group more hospitable and intent on having a good time. Sure, they want some publicity for their June 21, 22, 23 festival, but they weren't too obvious about it.

If this congregation is half as friendly during their festival as they were May 20 to us it's you out there who will benefit from their fair.

And, when you go try practically any of their foods, but particularly Souvlaki (skewered pork) and Arni Psito (roast leg of lamb) charcoal grilled.

This Greek festival is at the church, 1/2 mile north of Square Lake road on Woodward, Friday evening and 11 to 11 June 22 and 23.

Jottings also get s letters. This one arrived 4 months ago and I just found it on my desk.

I'm a nurse and I work in the Medical Dept. of General Motors. A few days ago I came across some timely advice offered by Fred Hulsenbeck who works in our Sanitation Dept. and who is also the father of Frank Hulsenbeck of the Oxford Police Dept.

I thought you might be interested in this for your Trivia Column. This is his Hematological Prophylaxis:

I. For good blood in the Summertime: (a) Sasifress-tea (this thins the blood).

II. To keep away bad blood in the Winter-time: (a) Take spice-wood and chop it up. (b) Make tea (Thickens the blood for Winter.)

III. For colds, grippe, etc. and to get rid of bad blood: (a) Go out in the woods, and get some mullen. Also chop down some Polecat Bush. (b) Make tea. (c) Drink it and soak your feet in hot water. (d) Go to bed and sweat.

Descriptions of concert scene vary

Observers are unwilling to agree on even how many young people attended The James Gang concert at Springfield Oaks County Park Sunday, May 26.

Estimates range from 10,000 to 16,000.

All are ready to give credit to the members of the crowd who attempted to keep it under control.

"For the most part, the kids were pretty nice," commented Chief James Curtis of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, who was in charge of traffic control around the park.

"The only success, I can truthfully say, was all the young kids in the area who worked so hard," said Springfield Township Supervisor Claude Trim. "They worked all day, making conditions as pleasant as they could."

"Common Ground Young people are utterly fantastic, and so in the Tribal Council on Huron Valley," said park manager Gerard Lacey of the young security forces. "They handled traffic on a par with the sheriff's department."

"There weren't any more beer cans than on a normal weekend," he added. "Kids were issued plastic bags and the whole crowd put the garbage back in the bags."

All reported it was a good day for beer sales in the area, with the closest stores being sold out by 4:30 p.m.

The only other facet of the concert on which there was general agreement is that it was a bad day for bladders (with lines of 30 or 40 persons continually at each Port-a-John) and a bad day for stomachs and heads (with the tent clinic doing a brisk business).

Statistically, four persons required hospitalization (three for drug overdoses), three vehicles were reported stolen, two persons were arrested for being drunk and disorderly and there were two property damage accidents.

Estimates of illnesses range in the neighborhood of 35 to 40.

Curtis said the traffic going and coming from the concert was backed up three-and-a-half to four miles—that it was worse on Davisburg Road going in and on Andersonville Road, going out.

He initially had eight deputies on duty. Before the concert was over, there were 16 uniformed officers from the sheriff's department working in the area of the park.

There were plainclothesmen on duty too—and who was constantly followed around by a concertgoer yelling, "Here's a narc! Here's a narc!"

Nevertheless, undercover officers made 30 drug buys in a three-hour period, Curtis said.

Vehicles filled the six parking lots of the park, designed to hold 3,500 cars, and overflowed onto two of the golf course's fairways, which Lacey said were undeveloped.

Lacey said a couple of women on Andersonville Road had complained, and another was upset because kids ate on her lawn.

Lacey maintains that, for that size, the crowd was orderly.

"If you went to Tiger Stadium for a baseball game with a similar number of people, you'd have a greater incidence of trouble than we had," he maintained.

"Out of a crowd of 15,000 there was one fighter, King Kong's brother," said Lacey. "He was throwing beer cans on the stage and it took eight to pull him off. If you put a bunch of adults together, there'd be more trouble than that."

"For all the people there, we had two streakers."

While reports may vary slightly, subjective descriptions of the concert range from "a good scene" to "a bad scene" to "just a plain scene."

Trim, who led a drive which resulted in the relocation of two other scheduled rock concerts to Pontiac, was sickened by what he saw.

"After seeing what I saw there Sunday, the saddest thing is that these kids are ours and they're our next generation and our next leaders," he said. "This is not the right direction we should provide for them."

View from inside the park

By Eric Mobey

Mostly in their early 20s, the young people who gathered to hear The James Gang Sunday were younger than those at the average rock concert.

The influx created what was rumored to be a seven-mile traffic jam around the outdoor complex. Many of the musicians playing the concert had great difficulty getting through the snarled traffic.

The gates opened at noon, and those in the sell-out crowd quickly staked their areas for the day's event. They were well-prepared—with coolers, Frisbees, grills, food and blankets.

The drug of the day was, far and away, alcohol. The small number of Port-a-Johns was inadequate for a crowd of thousands, guzzling beer. Two persons were sharing the toilets at once, but still the lines were never-ending.

The surrounding woods soon became the secondary toilet facility.

Security for the concert was handled by Common Ground, a crisis intervention center in Birmingham, and the Milford Tribal Council. Very few uniformed policemen were to be seen in the concert area. The peer group security force seemed to have a good relationship with the crowd.

Some drug overdoses were reported. There were also some bad drugs laced with strychnine being sold as THC and LSD. Some people became ill as a result of the bogus drugs and were aided by the security people. Ambulances were on hand to take the seriously ill to the hospital.

Mark Parenteau, a disc jockey from WABX-FM, handled the M.C. work on the show. He did his best to make the crowd comfortable as it awaited the groups who were stalled in traffic.

In all, five groups played at the concert—Jamus, the Strawbs, Quick-silver Messenger Service, Roy Buchanan and The James Gang. The sound system shorted-out a few times, but the music went on. There were the usual long breaks in between acts, but generally the music went well.

The James Gang concert is the only rock concert that will be played at Springfield-Oaks this summer. The two other concerts, including Leon Russell, have been moved to Wisner Stadium in Pontiac. Apparently Sunrise and Golden Goose Productions, promoters and presenters of the concerts, decided the move to Pontiac was easier than facing more local opposition from the Davisburg community.

Precedent-setting camerawork

By Pat Praunagel

There are rock concerts which have tended to be milestones.

There was the 1967 Monterey Pop Festival which established a number of San Francisco-based musicians as national stars, particularly after D.A. Pennebaker released his film of the events the following year.

There was the Woodstock Festival in 1969, which brought forth a new nation that "was half a million strong."

For those who had been unable to make it to the scene, or those who wanted to relive it (or make a fast buck off it), there was Michael Wadleigh's film which documented to some extent the goings-on there.

The James Gang concert at Springfield-Oaks County Park Sunday set another precedent—it was the first time Oakland County Sheriff's deputies used video taping as a tool of law enforcement.

Sheriff Johannes Spreen gathered a few of his men together for a screening of the video tape Tuesday morning.

He was pretty enthusiastic about the possibilities of using video tape for training purposes, for record-keeping, for evidence ("If a judge will let us use it.") and for crowd control.

"One camera judiciously used can save an awful lot of policemen," he said.

Cameraman for this project was Deputy John Taylor. He commented, and Spreen agreed with him, that he could have used a back-up cameraman in plainclothes at times when he was jostled by the crowd.

Generally, however, his subjects were friendly. Some waved, some yelled and some toasted him with beer.

Unlike Pennebaker's and Wadleigh's efforts, Taylor showed little of the performances by The James Gang or the four other groups that appeared.

Under the direction of Chief James Curtis, who was in charge of traffic control for the sheriff's department, the video tape had many scenes of lines of the video tape Tuesday morning. There were the lines of traffic up Davisburg and Andersonville roads, stretching over the horizon. There were the queues of kids before each of the Port-a-Johns, standing with varying degrees of impatience. There were the rows of boys, generally with their backs to the camera, who chose not to use the official toilet facilities.

Reminiscent of an idyllic scene of "Woodstock" is the vignette in which a modest young lady with a pained expression steps behind a tree. Moments later, she returned to the screen, smiling and sashaying her way back to the center of activity.

Taylor's glimpse of a rock concert is a brief 22 minutes. In truth, it definitely falls in the dry documentary category. But, still, it takes one back to colorful films of a bygone era, which gave brilliant images for the eye and a theater-full of music for the ear to direct to the other senses.

Racing law changed

Non-profit organizations will be able to conduct one speed exhibition a year in Independence Township, if they obtain a license according to an ordinance amendment adopted May 21 by the township board.

The request of Clarkston Jaycees to hold a snowmobile race last winter was denied by township officials on the basis that Jaycees could not comply with the safety restrictions of the 1963 speed exhibition ordinance, drafted to control permanent raceways.

Also altered at the township board's last meeting was provision for an eight-foot fence around raceways. The fencing now can be six feet high topped by three stands, or one foot, of barbed wire. The later change was proposed by Clerk J. Edwin Glennie after negotiations with local police and firemen held with representatives of Waterford Hills Road Racing Inc., who are required to comply with both the ordinance and a 1963 consent judgment.

Catallo named vice president

Civil War reenacted

A colorful Civil War Exhibition will take place Saturday and Sunday, June 1 and 2 at Addison Oaks Park south of Leonard.

A dozen teams of Civil War buffs from Michigan, Ohio and the northwest area will compete for prizes in nine events Saturday. They will fire authentic Civil War muskets, carbines and revolvers.

The teams will parade Sunday in authentic uniforms and compete again in team events.

Clarence G. Catallo of Davisburg has been elected a vice president of E.F. Hutton and Company Inc., the nation's second largest investment banking and brokerage firm. He is manager of the firm's office at 26711 Northwestern Highway, Southfield.

Joining E.F. Hutton in 1965, Catallo was named regional commodity manager in 1967 and officer manager in 1971. In 1973 he was elected assistant vice president. Before coming to E.F. Hutton, he was with Allstate Insurance.

A native of Detroit, Mr. Catallo received a B.S. degree from the University of Detroit.

He is a member of the Southfield Chamber of Commerce, the Porsche Club of America, Land O'Lakes Flying Club, Conservation Club and the American and Michigan Quarter Horse Association.

Catallo is married to the former Sharron Teschendorf of Detroit. The Catallos have two children.

Uniformity sought in local codes

Uniform ordinances for the village of Clarkston and Independence Township are being considered with the aim of making law enforcement in both communities more efficient.

Jack McCall, director of the police services unit which serves both the village and the township, has recommended that the village council adopt eight of the township's ordinances, deleting conflicting statutes on the books in Clarkston.

The ordinances are to be referred to village attorneys for investigation prior to action at the council's next meeting June 10.

Both the village and the township are served by three law enforcement agencies: the township's police services department, the ordinance enforcement officer of the township's building department and the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, McCall noted during his discussion with council members Monday night.

"We started a long time ago to update ordinances in the village," he said, commenting that some still need revision.

"Uniformity is the key" to applying laws in two communities served by the same officers, McCall said.

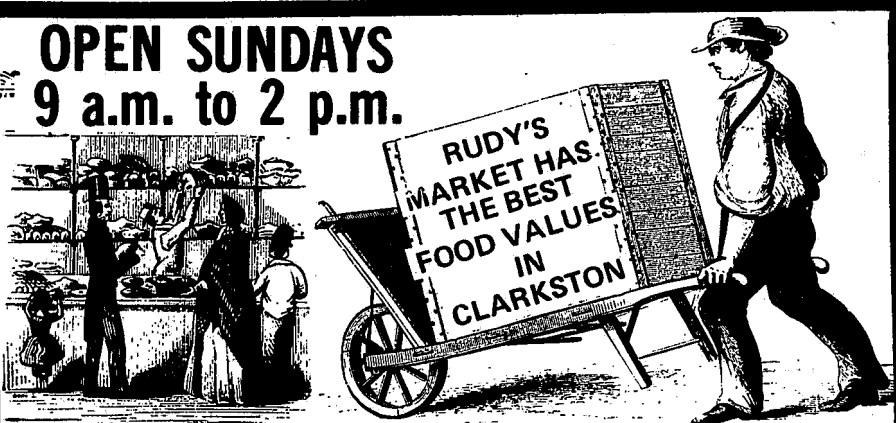

"If you have a police officer going from one jurisdiction to another, he doesn't see a painted line at the village limits," he said.

"Some of the present ordinances just don't meet the standards they should," he added. "I'm talking mainly in the area of nuisances, junk cars, etc."

McCall noted that some of the violations covered in the proposed criminal code already are in the village ordinances, but that there is no uniformity. He also commented that the village has no law governing the operation of motorcycles, like that recently adopted in the township.

Other ordinances being considered are those dealing with itinerant merchants, nuisances, junk yards, disposal, anti-litter and abandoned vehicles.

Girls remain No. 1 in league

The girls' varsity softball team kept a slim hold on first place last week as they won two games and lost one. Their record now stands at 7 wins and 2 losses.

Monday the Wolves dropped a league game to Clarenceville by a score of 19-16. Although Clarkston out-hit the Trojans 13 to 7, the game slid out of reach due to weak pitching and fielding. Cathy Bunton collected 6 RBI's in the losing effort.

Wednesday was another story as the girls defeated Kettering 22-7. Much of the credit for the win goes to pitchers Dede Biller and Billie Carroll. Starting pitcher Dede Miller gave up only 3 hits in 5 innings. Relief pitcher Billie Carroll did an outstanding job allowing no hits and striking out 6 in 2 innings. Leading hitter of the game was Diane Curry who collected 4 RBI's on a triple and a double.

Friday Billie Carroll went the distance for Clarkston as she pitched the Wolves to a 39-7 romp over Rochester. Rochester's many errors account for the high score. Catcher Cindy Hunt and second baseman Jane Church displayed fine defensive play as they picked off Rochester's two attempted steals. Leading batters for the day were Nancy Chartier who collected 5 hits and Cathy Bunton with 4.

The JV team picked up two wins and one loss last week as they defeated Clarenceville and Rochester, and lost to Our Lady of the Lakes. The JV record is now 4-4.

Monday the JV's defeated Clarenceville 36-4. Winning pitcher Sherry Nowicki struck out 7. Leading hitter was Jody Combs who connected for 5 hits including a home run.

Wednesday the JV's lost the Our Lady of the Lakes varsity team by a score of 30-21. Kettering has no JV game so the JV's agreed to take on the older Lakes team. Clarkston had a nice afternoon at the bat as Vicky Verch was 4 for 5, Missy Bojansyk 3 for 4, and Allison Booker hit a home run.

Friday the JV's defeated Rochester 19-3. Winning pitcher Sherry Nowicki collected 3 hits including a double and a home run.

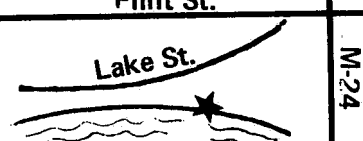

Pitcher DeDe Miller delivers the ball for Clarkston High's girls' softball team.

I NEED YOUR VOTE ON TWO IMPORTANT ISSUES
 IN THE JUNE 10th
 SCHOOL ELECTIONS

1. BECAUSE OF NEW STATE LAWS YOUR TAXES FOR BOND MILLAGE WILL GO DOWN

YOUR SCHOOLS NEED 4 MORE OPERATING MILLS
 —To continue present services in view of inflating costs.
 —To buy temporary classroom units to relieve congestion at grade schools.
 —To support special education programs.

THE TOTAL TAX SHOULD INCREASE VERY LITTLE PLEASE SUPPORT THE 4 MILL INCREASE

2. Do you want me to continue to represent you as a trustee?

—I have been very active the past four years
 As a trustee on your school board
 As a member and officer of The Oakland County School Board Association
 As a member and officer of "Task Force 28" in Oakland County

To perform for benefit

Stacey Patton, 9, [center] and Maria Patrucci, 10, both of Clarkston, are among the Rolladiettes working with instructor Diane Danules in preparation for the "Spinning Wheels" show at the Waterford Township skating rink June 4 and 5. Some 150 skaters between the ages of 4 and 25 will be in the 8 p.m. shows, which are to raise funds for their state and regional meets. Tickets, at $2, can be purchased from skaters or at the door.

Subdivision approval given

A tentative preliminary plat for Woodland Hills Subdivision, with two access roads going onto Maybee Road, has been approved by the Independence Township Board.

The township board, concurring with the Oakland County Road Commission, originally had required the developers to include plans for ingress and egress onto Pelton Road.

However, residents along Pelton Road voiced strong objections to the requirement.

The 250-lot subdivision is being planned by Occidental Development Corp. of Southfield on a 38-acre parcel between Maybee and Pelton roads east of Sashabaw.

County offers boating classes

The Marine Division of the Oakland County Sheriff Department will conduct a class on Pleasure Boating from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. May 21 and May 28 in the Oakland County Auditorium.

Paint your mailbox week

This is the week that the nation's nearly 23 million mailboxes become targets for sprucing up for better appearance and greater security of the mail.

The annual observance, which this year, has designated May as Mailbox Improvement month, by the U. S. Postal Service, began generations ago in small towns and rural areas, and involves special community efforts to repair, repaint, and generally "spruce up" mailboxes.

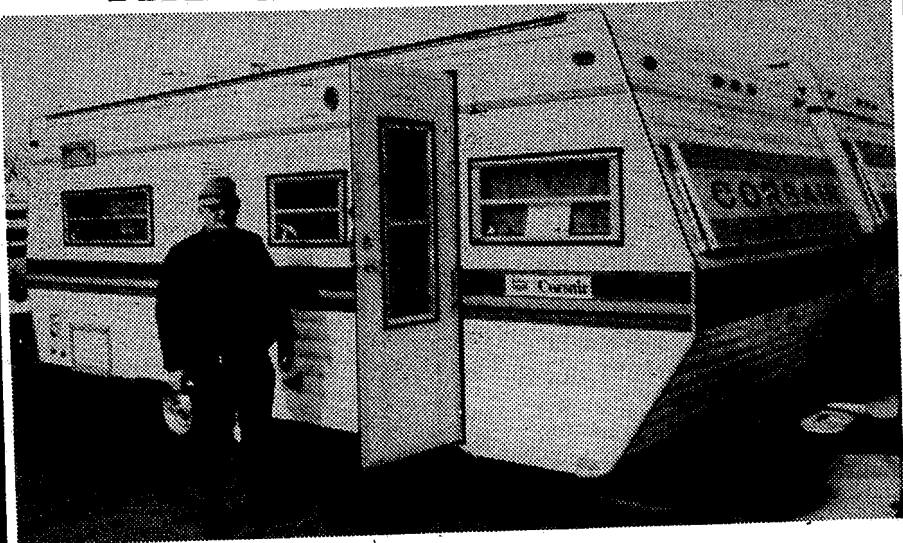

"Nationwide, some 45 million customers are served by 31,000 rural mail routes and the importance of the program grows each year as more and more Americans move to rural and suburban areas," Postmaster Ray Klein said.

"Here in Clarkston, 5,249 customers are served by 11 rural mail routes," he added.

Postmaster Klein said all postal personnel directly involved in suburban and rural deliveries are being instructed to cooperate with householders in making certain their mailboxes comply with regulations on safety and accessibility.

Irene Holmes arranges some of the Oriental and English china and crystal items on sale in her Piccadilly Place antique shop in Waterford.

Piccadilly-style hospitality

Stopping for a spot of tea seems quite the natural thing to do at Piccadilly Place, where Irene Holmes will tell you about the antiques in her new shop in a friendly, chatty manner.

The shop, in a portion of a house at 5844 Dixie Highway, Waterford is open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. The best time to be there is on the hour, when Mrs. Holmes' numerous clocks announce the time.

From Lancashire, England, Mrs. Holmes has five rooms full of period antiques-furniture, jewelry, glass, china and bric-a-brac.

She particularly likes, and is an expert on, Oriental and English imports. For herself, she has a Royal Doulton collection.

Mrs. Holmes, who formerly operated Piccadilly Place Period Antiques in Highland, moved about a month ago into the Dixie Highway building she shares with 4-H Real Estate.

Her landlady is Mary Hillman, "my co-mother-in-law," Mrs. Holmes said.

Her daughter Carol is married to Mrs. Hillman's son, Larry Finkle.

Mrs. Hillman drops in for tea too. "We commiserate," commented the Piccadilly Place proprietress.

Kuthy files for county exec

Gene Kuthy today announced his candidacy for county executive with a vow to reform county government in Oakland County.

Kuthy, 43, of West Bloomfield Township, is a Democrat.

Kammer seeks senate seat

Pledging a walking campaign throughout the 50-mile long 17th state senate district, Pontiac City Clerk Kerry Kammer last night announced his candidacy for that position before a crowd of 200 persons gathered at a reception held in his honor.

"I will walk through everyone of the 17 townships and 4 cities, and I will discuss the crucial issues of 1974 with the people of the 17th district," Kammer said.

Kammer, running as a Democrat, will oppose Republic incumbent L. Harvey Lodge. Lodge, 71, is already an announced candidate.

Kammer cited the economy and honesty in government as major issues of 1974.

"These are the issues that we have found to be utmost in the minds of citizens," Kammer said.

"I feel people are entitled to something better than a 60-cent loaf of bread or gallon of gas. Nor do they need professional politicians wasting their tax-money."

I have attempted to run a tight shop in the City Clerk's office. I intend to offer that same program in Lansing."

Kammer also announced his plans to make a complete disclosure of his personal finances and campaign contributions. He was one of the first candidates in Michigan to make such a disclosure in 1972.

"Oakland County government has been kept invisible to enable a small clique to run it without answering to the people," he charged.

"The creation of the office of county executive provides the first real opportunity to clean out the morass of inefficiency and red tape."

Kuthy suggests that his own professional background as a governmental consultant, business manager, and attorney makes him fully qualified to carry out this reform.

Dunleavy will run again

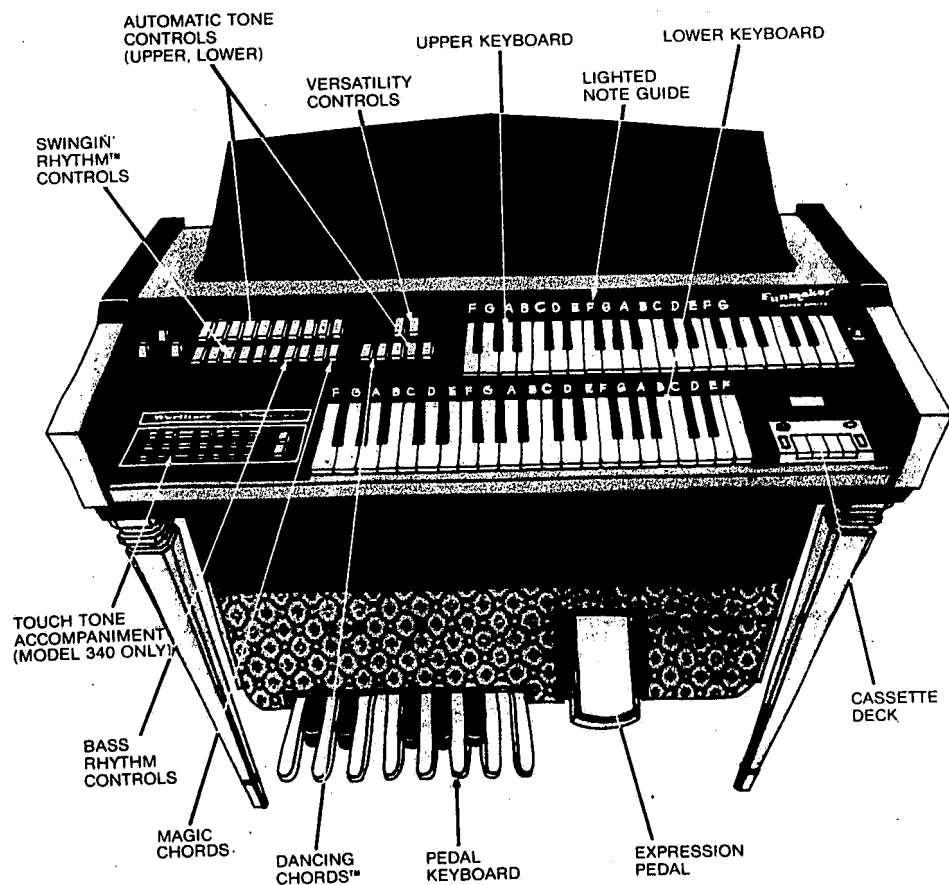

Oakland County Commission James W. Dunleavy, who represents the southwestern portion of Clarkston and Independence Township, has announced his intention to seek reelection.

Dunleavy, of Highland Township, is chairman of the County Planning and Zoning Commission, vice chairman of the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission, and serves on the Transportation and Aviation and Local Government committees of the Oakland County Board of Commissioner.

A Republican, he counts among his feats in office the ability to get millions of tons of gravel on local roads that had not seen any for years, and his work on property tax reduction and equity. He is a member of the Michigan Association of Counties taxation committee.

A believer in strong local government, he is opposed to the Southeastern Michigan Council of Government because he says, of its potential in becoming another level of government and its erosion of local control.

Named queen

Cindy Heazlit, daughter of the Robert Heazlits of Cramlane Drive, Independence Township, will be installed as honored queen of Clarkston Bethel No. 25 at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, June 1 at the Clarkston Masonic Temple. Also to be installed are Kathy Johnston, senior princess; Shirley Dennis, junior princess; Lana Barnfather, guide; and Leslie Johnston, marshal.

INDEPENDENT view

by Jean Saile
and Pat Braunagel

Establishment of a village bank for the kind of green stuff that grows has been proposed by Village President Keith Hallman.

Some $3,500 has been budgeted this year to begin tree planting in the village, but Hallman thinks it might be a good idea to plant some seedlings on village-owned property for future reforestation along streets in the community.

Village council members agreed and are investigating the feasibility of such an investment.

Gerard Lacey of Springfield Oaks reports he has signed the Detroit Symphony Orchestra to play at the county park at 8 p.m. July 4.

Don't forget the Waterford Optimist Bike-a-thon for Ecology June 2. The majority of the proceeds will be donated to Drayton Plains Nature Center. Two 17.5 mile laps make up the 35-mile route beginning and ending at Pierce Junior High on Hatchery Road. Anyone can enter, but children under 12 must have adult supervision and a permission slip. Sponsor sheets are available at the Nature Center.

The Center is planning a variety of short environmental courses for students 5 to 18 years of age this summer. Each session, composed of three classes is $5 or $8 for non-family members. The 5-8 group will explore natural handicrafts, fishing, plants and general nature study. Older students will study pond, forest, and animal life, some of it as found in the suburbs. The 9-12 group will concentrate on survival and pioneer life.

The citizens-comment policies of the Clarkston Village Council and the Independence Township Board present a study in contrasts.

Few people ever attend the council meetings. Similarly, a typical township board meeting will be conducted before an audience containing a couple of reporters, a couple of citizens and two or three department heads.

Members of both bodies have bemoaned the lack of public interest in their public meetings.

A resident who has something to say to the council can say it without setting through two or three hours of mundane business.

As Village President Keith Hallman put it recently, "Our committee reports can be interrupted."

Not so at the township board meetings.

Bowing to pressure from department heads who get tired of waiting around to give their reports, the board has set a first-come, first-served policy of getting on the agenda. Deadline for obtaining a spot on it is noon of the Friday preceding the Tuesday meeting.

If you don't make it, you can wait until the "statement by citizens" portion of the agenda, listed before "adjournment".

Some residents from the Walter Lake area tried that last week. There were about 16 of them when the meeting started at 7 p.m. After awhile, some went out behind the township hall for a smoke and/or soft drink. Some didn't come back in.

Eventually, by the time they were heard at midnight, the contingent consisted of two couples. They had witnessed a lot of local government in action.

HEALTH HINTS

BY Keith Hallman, R. Ph.

A recent study suggests almost two-thirds of those receiving a doctor's prescription didn't get it filled, didn't take medicine as directed, or stopped taking it too soon. Many discontinued the drug when symptoms disappeared, but before the disorder had really been corrected. Remember: "Take as directed."

Driving reflexes

by Pat Braunagel

Many long years ago, kiddies, you could get a driver's license without having graduated from a formal course of instruction.

All we had to do then was prove to a couple of examining officers that we had mastered the skills necessary to give us the freedom of wheels.

Our instruction had been strictly informal.

Yet I suspect that even in this day of automotive academics, kids pick up some important information from older family members which is gradually developed into a set of reflexes that are an important part of each motorist's skill.

My driver education started as soon as I was old enough to see over the dashboard.

"That's a yellow line," I remember my Uncle Earl, who was also the family tease, pointing out to me. "What does it mean?"

"It means you can't pass another car," I beamed back.

"I just passed one. Should I get a ticket?"

"But, Uncle Earl, it was going the other way."

Actually, my uncle taught me more about the cumbersomeness of the English language than about driving. However, on other outings, his repetition of the warning not to pull quickly back on to blacktop when a wheel has skidded off the pavement instilled in me an idea which probably later saved my life.

When the proper time came, my father became my official tutor on just about every gravel road in Ingham County.

Outstanding in my memories of this term is the incident which occurred as I was tooling down a road and spotted in my all-too-immediate future a steep hill with a 90-degree turn at the bottom.

It was a time for trigger-quick reflexes or trigger-quick advice.

I opted for the latter from my father—to wit: "Step on it!"

My maneuvering as I gunned it downward and into a sideward slide would have made me an honorary member of the Keystone Kops in anybody's book. Fortunately, there was no cop with a book around.

Dad's reaction to this episode cannot be reprinted here, for fear it will be read by some youngster who has not undergone driver's training under paternal pedantics.

"I meant the brake—to step on the brake," were his first words which can herein be reported.

As he stomped around the car to get behind the wheel he was mumbling something about it's being alright to give women the vote, "but they should have stopped short of drivers licenses."

I learned then and there that it was better to go with your own instincts than follow the screamed advice of a terrified passenger.

Dad, who became infatuated with the gadgetry of the directional signal, did wind up drilling one idea into my head: that it is physically impossible for a car's wheels to turn a corner unless they have first been activated by the turn signal.

He proved his faith in this axiom this one day when we were driving down two sandy tracks through a north woods, miles from anything that could honestly be called a road. When we finally reached our remote cabin, Dad switched on the turn signal—supposedly, I commented, to clue in any wildlife that might be interested in our plans.

Mom, for her part, contributed to my driving training with another important reflex. It was the pre-safety-belt standard: if you're going to stop unexpectedly, stick out your right arm to keep the kid from going through the windshield.

You'll never know how many times I've thanked Mom for that, and how many times that reflex has saved cameras and bags of groceries.

MAKE A MENTAL NOTE

But wouldn't that be bribing the child?

BY JAMES AND ELLEN WINDELL

Psychological staff members of the Oakland County Juvenile Court and Clinical Resources, Incorporated

"Jody wastes time and never seems to be ready for school on time."
"Harold just won't dress himself."
"Marlene doesn't come straight home from school."

These are some problems that parents present -- asking for advice. Frequently, recommendations will encourage an approach that emphasizes rewarding the child for the desired behavior.

Many parents respond to this approach by saying, "But that would be like bribing the child. I want him to do things because he wants to."

Part of this, at least, has some merit. We all want our children to do things because they have an inner need to do it and receive some internal satisfying feeling after it is done.

But, there are some children, as well as some adults, who don't have either such needs or receive such inner satisfaction.

All behavior develops because it was consistently rewarded in some way. We learn early in life to smile because smiling evokes pleasant responses from grown-ups. Most children do not develop eating disorders because their parents gave them much praise and attention for eating well: "What a good eater"; "He's a good boy, look how he eats everything."

It is such consistent social praise and attention that is most effective in our learning positive behaviors and attitudes. We all need payoffs of one sort or another to do what is expected of us.

There is a reason to fear the effects of bribery. A bribe is a reward for being bad. It is a short cut to getting what we want from a child, but with the long term effects that we don't want.

What happens in a bribery situation is that a child acts up and the parent says, "If you don't cry until we get out of the store, I'll give you some candy." The child has learned not to be patient in stores, but to cry in order to get candy.

There are more proper uses of rewards for managing a child's behavior.

One way is to wait for the child to do what you want and then say, "I'm so pleased that you got ready for school on time today. I'm really proud that you are so responsible and helpful."

The other way is to talk to the child and work out a contract for future behavior: "Since you like pizza, when you get ready for school on time five days in a row we will go out together for a pizza on Friday night. Agreed?" This reward consistently given for desired behavior and mixed with generous praise and favorable comments will eventually lead to an inner need to continue the behavior to win the parent's praise. There is no bribery in either approach.

The old Methodist church

... by Connie Lektzian

Peter, with his wife Mary and their infant son Ephraim, had come to Clarkston in 1836. He was a very devout man and a practical one, too. Those heaps of stone would have only taken up space on his farm, but it was hard work hauling them and often helping the masons put them in place.

Money was needed and Peter Addis gave $500 toward the building. The corner stone was laid about the first of June of 1873 and in December of that year, the church was completed and dedicated. A brick building, forty by sixty feet, it stretched up two stories, surmounted by a spire. A total of $9,000 had been spent in its construction.

Early missionaries started Methodist classes as early as 1834 in the eastern and western sections of the township. The western group was known as the Sashabaw class. In 1836, in the vicinity of Clarkston, Arza Crosby, John Merrill and William Malby and their wives formed a class.

In 1840, Silas Smith joined the group and served as a local preacher. It was through his encouragement that the first church, a small frame building, was erected. It took the members two days to build it and six years to afford the glass for the windows. It was used in good weather only, with the members trudging to the schoolhouse in snow or rain until 1847.

Getting the church enclosed encouraged others to join and by a year later, there were 35 members. This membership increased to 65 in 1857 by what was described as a "gracious revival" with Rev. Ira W. Donelson as the pastor. Jonathan Petty was a class leader for at least a decade and seemed to have wielded a great influence. In 1872, Reverend J. A. Bancroft who appears to have been a very moving preacher, added another 30 members to the roll.

By now, the frame church was not only too small, but had become very dilapidated. It was decided in January of 1873 to tear down the old building and put up another larger one on the same site.

U of M past band conductor in concert

Dr. William D. Revelli, past conductor of the world famous University of Michigan bands, will appear in concert with the Waterford-Kettering High School Symphony Band at 8 p.m. June 1 at the school. Tickets are available at the door.

Years later, the congregation outgrew the old brick building and moved away. By now some additions had been built on the back but it still hadn't proved large enough. More recently, the church has been owned by the Salvation Army and used, not only as a place of worship, but a meeting spot for senior citizens. Now it is going to be empty again.

Its foundations contain material from the land of Clarkston itself, its walls have held the celebrations of life for countless families. Much of local history has touched here.

Real Estate HAPPENINGS

by Bob & Marvel White

To many potential buyers, nearness to transportation, schools, churches, shopping facilities, recreational facilities, or places of employment will be the governing motive, when they begin to choose a house. This is especially true of one-car families. If these concerns are important to you as a buyer, let your real estate professional know right away. He will be able to suggest certain areas to you, and will know immediately how to place you in the best possible relationship to those facilities most needed by you and your family.

From listing to closing, the courteous professional salespeople at BOB WHITE REAL ESTATE, 5856 S. Main St., 625-5821 can meet your real estate needs completely; why not call us first with your listing. And if you're looking for a home, we will help you buy at a fair price, with suitable financing, with a minimum of effort. Open: 9-8 Mon-Thur; 9-6 Fri; 10-4 Sat; 2-5 Sun; & by app't.

HELPFUL HINT:
Uncluttered rooms look larger and more attractive—so remove extra furniture when you're selling your house.

THE OLD METHODIST CHURCH

Generations of families have worn down the threshold of the entrance. The old double doors have swung open for over a century to admit people into its services, to weddings, funerals and baptisms. The building has known other owners, but never escaped references as the old Methodist Church.

The structure had its beginning in the fields of Peter Addis' farm. He had found, as most farmers in this area, that one crop his land never failed to produce was rocks. Peter took the biggest of these on his stoneboat to the building site of the church. Here these huge boulders formed the foundation that endures today.

Charlie Gardener Sez:

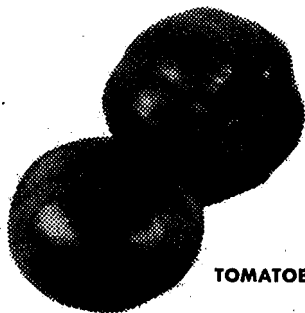

Spring is Here, Frost danger is past (we hope)
It is time to get planting. Food prices are up so let's grow our own. It is easy, it is fun, it is healthy.

Charlie has—

TOMATOES. All the good kinds. All size plants, some even have tomatoes on them. (Not ripe but getting close).

You don't have to have a back yard to grow vegetables. Grow them in containers on your patio or porch.

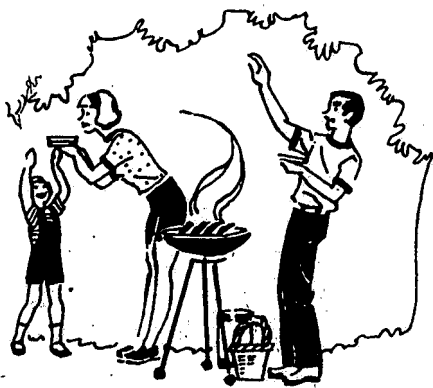

We have a free (yes, free) booklet with 12 pages on how to grow tomatoes 15 different ways. It also gives hints on growing flowers and how to keep those pesky bugs away.

TOMATOES

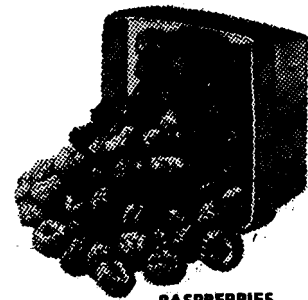

Charlie sez to remember and buy it from the grower. He knows how to get the best plants ready for you. The greenhouses are always open for you to visit. Charlie is already thinking of winter as the poinsettia plants have arrived for next Christmas.

One last item: You can still apply pre-emergent crabgrass control.

Also we have other Vegetable Plants and Seeds. We have many, many varieties of petunias, marigolds, zinnias, ageratum and others. Even Anchusa (that's a pretty blue flower).

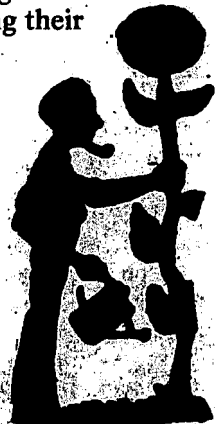

The potted rose bushes are growing by leaps and leaves. It won't be long before they will bloom. We also have some beautiful tree roses and those very hardy, dainty miniature roses. The flower is smaller than a dime.

RASPBERRIES

Small fruits are always a good bet. Rhubarb, asparagus, grapes, raspberries, strawberries are nice to have and you don't have to plant every year.

Let's make it a fun year in the garden. Get the whole family interested. Maybe each person can have their own section of the garden or each can specialize in doing their own thing. (No pot please).

If you have any questions or problems, stop in or call and we will be glad to help.

Tabor-Ogg rites

Miss Christine M. Ogg

A May 18 ceremony at Waterford Community Church united Christine M. Ogg and Ronald W. Tabor in marriage. The bride is the daughter of Irene Ogg, 6851 Clintonville Road. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harlin Tabor of Pontiac.

Barbara Rombach served as maid of honor and Steve Tabor was best man. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Richard.

The newlyweds entertained guests at a reception in the church parlor. They will make their home in Lake Orion.

Curriu-Barnett vows

Miss Terri Barnett

Lakeland United Presbyterian Church was decorated with white carnations and yellow gladiola for the wedding Saturday of Terri Barnett and Lawrence Curriu.

Rev. Roy Lambert performed the traditional ceremony before some 250 guests.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Barnett of 341 Grange Hall Road. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Curriu, 3180 Warringham, Waterford.

A white gown of satin with a chiffon overlay was chosen by the bride. Daisies and ruffles on the skirt provided eye interest. Her veil, handmade by her and her mother, was edged with lace and held with lace and rhinestones. She carries daisies, carnations, ivy, a white orchid and yellow roses.

Sharon Glover of Pontiac, sister of the bride, was matron of honor in a lime green dotted Swiss gown featuring daisies and an old fashioned wide brim hat. Cheryl Baum of Pontiac and Cynthia Vaughn of East Lansing, bridesmaids, wore similar gowns in purple and blue. Tammi Barnett, the bride's niece, served as junior bridesmaid. She was attired in pink.

Carey Ann Glover of Pontiac and Lee Ann Barnett of Ortonville chose white and yellow in their role as flower girls. Kurt Glover, the bride's nephew, was ring bearer. The bride was given in marriage by her older brother, Edwin Jr., due to her father's recent hospitalization.

Terry Curriu, brother of the groom, was best man.

George Baum of Pontiac and Dave Curriu, brother of the groom, seated guests.

Following a reception at Thomas Hall, the newlyweds left for a honeymoon in Toronto. They will live in Ann Arbor.

SUMMER JOBS - Teens 14 and over who are interested in summer employment may contact an OCCEO representative any Wednesday in May or June between 3 and 4:30 p.m. at independence center, 5331 Maybee Rd. Clarkston. The representative will interview and refer teens to various employers.

The OCCEO representative will also counsel teens and give instruction on what to expect in filling out job applications. They will discuss proper dress and techniques which will help increase the teens' chances for employment.

BUILDING USE - The independence center building will be available for use by groups this summer. According to Betty Bond, coordinator, the center got very little use last summer. All the groups who meet regularly all winter left for the summer. She would like to see better utilization of the center's facilities this June, July, and August. Please contact a center volunteer for further information - 673-2244.

June is a tenth grade student at Clarkston High School. Congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Johnson and family of Snowapple, attended the graduation of their daughter, Vicki on May 18.

Vicki graduated from St. Joseph School of Nursery in Hancock.

The family enjoyed the trip and were real happy to be able to attend. It was a new experience for several of the children as they hadn't seen the Mackinaw Bridge.

Best wishes to you, Vicki.

Fourteen-year-old Mike Olney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Olney of Hidden Lake, had a bad lawn mower accident on May 21. It seems Mike was mowing at the Clarkston Cinema when the wheels got stuck. He reached down to release the wheel when it spun throwing his hand under the mower. He lost the first joint of the middle finger and his forefinger is badly mangled.

Well, Mike, we are thinking of you and we know everything will be just fine. The young heal fast, thank goodness.

Robert Bennett beat the other 16 entries, with Mike Boberg coming in second and Jeff Stonerock third.

The boys also recently went on a "hobo hike" from St. Daniel's parking lot to Deer Lake, making plaster casts of animal tracks they spotted on the way.

They are now preparing displays for the county-wide Indian Jamboree Saturday, June 1 at Springfield-Oaks County Park. The public is invited to the 10 a.m.-6 p.m. event.

Spiritual Message

"WHAT DO YOU REMEMBER?"

Memorial Day just past is a time to remember. It may mean parades, bands and floats to the young, but it started as a time to remember lives given in war for country and graves to be decorated in their honor. We tend to remember the traumatic (unless it is so severe as to be blanked out entirely) and the great festive happenings like a wedding or graduation or promotion. Some of our hurt people remember the terrible things done to them. A black woman in Detroit's well-manicured west-side landscape was raising her children alone, supporting them as a talent booking representative. But her life began to be harassed by rocks through windows, hate letters and other destructive incidents. She was about to give up and move until some friends and groups came to help. Now her memories are a little more balanced with good things, alongside the bad.

How we remember and what we remember often colors our whole slant on life and country.

In religious terms, if we remember that we felt God with us through hard times, instead of focusing only on the severity or unfairness of our calamities, then we can go on in a positive way, and 'cope', as the British say.

Our memory bank is hardly ever as one-sided in deposits as we think in a low moment.

What can you remember today that will not defeat you tomorrow, but will help you face tomorrow with confidence?

Do you remember a soul-searching President Lincoln, or a violent John Wilkes Booth? Do you remember the goof of the township hall on your sewer, or the firemen who rescued your burning home? Do you remember people who slight you, or people who stand by loyally in your troubles?

Memory can be upgraded and deserves to be.

Tips on canning your garden goodies

"Canning is the most popular method of preserving fruits and vegetables," says Portia Morris, extension food specialist at Michigan State University.

Here's a review of home canning procedures by Dr. Morris:

Home canning uses heat to destroy molds, yeasts and bacteria that cause food to spoil. Heat also stops actions of enzymes that cause undesirable changes in flavor, color and texture of fruits and vegetables.

Process produce in a boiling water bath, or a pressure canner. The method depends on the food you're canning.

Never try to process foods in the oven! The jars may explode. And the temperature of the food in the jars does not get high enough to destroy all harmful organisms.

For top quality canned food, choose only perfect produce: firm, fresh fruits and young, tender vegetables. Can them as soon as possible after harvest.

Wash all fruits and vegetables, even if they will be peeled, under running water or in several changes of water to remove dirt and hard-to-kill bacteria. Rinse the pan or sink thoroughly between washings.

Don't let produce soak; it may lose flavor and nutrients.

Fruits and vegetables may be packed into jars raw or preheated and packed hot. (This will be explained in detail later for each product.)

Most raw fruits and vegetables should be packed tightly because they shrink during processing. A few—corn, lima beans and peas—expand during processing and should be packed loosely.

With few exceptions, pack jars with some space between the food and the lid. This "head space" varies with the food being canned.

To keep food at the top of the jar from darkening, cover it with syrup, water or juice. (This darkening will not harm the food, but will make it less attractive.)

Process fruits, tomatoes and pickles that have a high acid content in a boiling water bath.

Put jars of raw-packed produce into water that is hot but not quite boiling. Place hot-packed jars directly into boiling water.

Add boiling water if necessary to bring the water level an inch or two above the tops of the jars. Avoid pouring the boiling water directly on the jars—they might crack. Then cover the canner, bring the water to a rolling boil and begin to count processing time.

Remove the jars as soon as processing time is up and tighten the seals if necessary. Do not open a jar to replace liquid that boiled out in processing—seal the jar as is.

Cool jars top-side-up on a rack or a folded cloth. Never set a hot jar on a cold surface. Space the jars so air can circulate freely around them.

All vegetables, except tomatoes and pickled beets, must be processed in a pressure canner to be sure they are free of harmful organisms that cause food spoilage and food poisoning.

Vegetables for pressure canning may also be packed raw or hot. If hot-packing, cover the food with the liquid you cooked it in rather than with plain boiling water. The cooking liquid probably contains vitamins and minerals that should be saved.

To process vegetables in a pressure canner, follow these steps:

—Pour two or three inches of boiling water in the bottom of the canner.

—Set the filled jars on the rack in the canner so that steam can flow all around each one. If you put two layers of jars in the canner, stagger the second layer so no jar is completely above a jar in the lower level.

—Fasten the canner cover tightly so that steam escapes only through the vent—the petcock or the weighted gauge opening.

—Once steam is pouring steadily from the vent, let it escape for at least 10 minutes to drive all the air from the canner. Then close the petcock or put on the weighted gauge.

—Let pressure rise to 10 pounds (240 degrees F.). Once the pressure reaches 10 pounds, begin to count processing time. Keep the pressure constant by regulating the heat under the canner. Do not lower pressure by opening the petcock.

—As soon as processing time is up, remove the canner from the heat. Let it stand until the pressure is zero. Do not rush the cooling by pouring cold water over the canner. Wait a minute or two after the pressure reaches zero and tilt the far side of the cover up so steam escapes away from you. Remove the jars from the canner and cool.

Properly canned food should keep for a year if stored in a cool, dry place. Always check home-canned food for signs of spoilage before using, however (see chart). Bulging lids or leaks may mean food has spoiled. Spurting liquid, off odors or mold are other indications of spoilage.

"Improperly canned vegetables may contain botulism, a deadly form of food poisoning," Dr. Morris warns. "There is no danger of botulism if food is processed correctly in a pressure canner in perfect condition, but don't take chances: boil-home-canned vegetables before tasting. Bring all vegetables to a rolling boil. Cover and boil all but corn and spinach for at least 10 minutes. Those two should be boiled 20 minutes."

Q. Is it safe to can food without salt?

A. Yes. Salt is for flavor only.

Q. How can I keep fruits and vegetables from darkening?

A. Add 1/4 teaspoon of crystalline ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) per quart of fruit before processing. Buy at grocery, drug or department stores.

VILLAGE OF CLARKSTON MINUTES OF REGULAR MEETING MAY 20, 1974

Meeting called to order by President Hallman.
Roll: Present—Basinger, Granlund, McCall, Schultz, Weber.
Absent—Thayer.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Jack McCall and Anita Davison were present to complain about the lack of restoration work done by their homes by the sewer contractor. They mentioned that their area was torn up in March of 1973, and that restoration had already been done to some areas that had only been torn up last September. Spots along the Mill Pond and Parke Lake were also mentioned that needed further restoration work, since they still have low areas. President Hallman will check further on this.

Tree re-planting in the village was discussed by the council members.

Police Chief Jack McCall reported to the Council the advantages of having a uniform set of ordinances between the village and the township for better coordination of enforcement. The Council discussed adopting some of the township ordinances along this line. Trustee Basinger recommended that the eight ordinances referred to by Chief McCall be referred to the attorney along with present village ordinances covering these areas for his study and recommendations.

Moved by Schultz to adopt a resolution authorizing Chief McCall to apply for parade permits in the village for Memorial Day, Fourth of July, Labor Day, and Christmas during 1974. Seconded by Basinger. Motion carried unanimously.

Moved by Basinger to show present Federal Revenue Sharing Funds as expended in the following manner: Police, $6411.91; Parking Lot Improvements, $1141.85; Village Hall, $338.75; and Special Assessment, $482.59. Seconded by Schultz. This is through March 31, 1974. Roll: Ayes—Basinger, Granlund, McCall, Schultz, Weber. Nays—none. Motion carried.

Moved by Granlund to allocate Federal Revenue Sharing Funds for the 1974-75 entitlement period of $4058.00 for Public Safety and Police. Seconded by Basinger. Roll: Ayes—Basinger, Granlund, McCall, Schultz, Weber. Nays—none. Motion carried.

Moved by Schultz to proclaim the week of June 24, 1974, National Autistic Children's Week. Seconded by Basinger. Motion carried unanimously.

New ideas from CHS

by Bill Condon

I think it is generally assumed that students are not a productive part of society until they graduate from school and get a job. As far as I am concerned, this is as ridiculous as saying that the oil companies are losing money because of the energy crisis. To demonstrate what the students are doing to increase progress in the United States, I offer these examples:

Last Thursday there was quite a bit of excitement in the Clarkston High School chemistry lab. It turns out that a student, Melvin Pierce, had developed a new substance that was completely invulnerable. It could not be affected by chemicals, extreme high temperatures, super cold temperatures, high pressure, or any of the most destructive forces that man, and nature, are able to produce. When Melvin was asked what he would call this revolutionary new substance, he replied, "Crabgrass".

A great technological advance was made the other day in one of the industrial arts classes. A student invented a new type of missile that was guaranteed to save the government millions of dollars. What it does is blow up in the factory.

Another student discovered a new mineral, which has unique properties never before observed. The most unusual property is when it is placed on a piece of ice, or other cold surface, it becomes a perfectly round disc, 1 inch thick and 2 inches in diameter, resembling a hockey puck. This new material was named "Bobby Ore".

A biology student recently developed a solution to the energy crisis. What she did was to cross a daisy with a battery, and she came up with a power plant.

It should be obvious to anyone that although most high school students look like they aren't doing anything productive, appearances may be deceiving.

The last day for seniors at Clarkston High School is Tuesday, June 4. Graduation will take place Saturday, June 8, at the Pine Knob Music Theater.

Sampling Clarkston hospitality and getting reacquainted with their son, Roberto, an exchange student at Clarkston High School, are Dr. and Mrs. Romeu Marra and daughter, Teresa, of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. While here they celebrated Dr. Marra's birthday at an open house at the Donald Johnson's home on Hogback Lake Road. Teresa, a child psychology major at the university in Rio, visited Clarkston High School, and the Marras were also able to visit Marcia Johnson at Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City and Jim Johnson, who had stayed with the family two years ago in Brazil. The Marras and Tony Zanetti, who also lives with the Johnsons', plus Clarkston's other exchange students, left Thursday morning for a visit to Washington, D.C. The Marras will leave Washington to spend four days with their nephew, Sergio Mendes, who will appear August 19 at Pine Knob.

Memorial Day Observance 1974

Young David Orr takes a serious view of the Memorial Day parade from a vantage point aboard the back of his dad, Randall Orr of Gibbs Road.

The American Legion color guard leads the way.

World War I veterans took their place of honor for Memorial Day services Monday at Lakeview Cemetery. From left are Cliff Waterbury, a pharmacist's mate first class; Vernon A. Ridgeway, a private who graduated to become Past Barracks Commander of the Davisburg post; C. C. Chamberlain, who served as a sargeant with the Army in France for 15 months, and O. C. Adams, a corporal in the Marine Corps who served aboard the ship U.S.S. North Carolina.

There were pretty girls like these in the Sashabaw Junior High Band.

There is nothing quite so haunting as "Taps" played slowly and well at the close of Memorial Day services at Lakeview Cemetery.

Camp Fire Girls and Girl Scouts gathered to pay tribute to deceased veterans.
