Issue still rages

How many trustees?

By Pat Braunagel
Associate editor

Independence Township voters will elect two more trustees along with other township officers this fall, as far as Township Attorney Richard Campbell is concerned.

However, rumors that Campbell's opinion might be challenged in court were adrift even before his written statement had been received at the township hall this week.

"I've had people say, 'The hell you will,' when they heard about adding two trustees," said Township Supervisor Floyd L. (Whitey) Tower. "Some said they didn't come to the (annual) meeting because they thought that had been settled in '72."

A unanimous 28-person vote at the April 1 annual township meeting changed the number of trustees on the township board to four, increasing the board's size to seven members.

The issue of adding two more trustees was last considered by the Independence Township electorate in 1972. Voters defeated the proposition 2,056 to 1,872 at the May presidential primary that year.

Some thought that settled the issue. Others didn't.

When he heard March 31 that the question might be raised at the annual meeting the next day, Tower said he called Campbell for advice.

"Campbell said to go with the annual meeting vote," Tower recalled.

Two other townships in Oakland County, Highland and Milford, refused to consider the question April 1 on the basis of legal opinions they had received.

Last week, the legal staff of the Michigan Townships Association informed Independence Clerk Christopher Rose that the local township had to stick to a five-member board.

"They said we had set a precedent in 1972 and changing it would require a new election," Tower reported.

He returned to Campbell for a written opinion.

Five want school board seat

Five people have filed to run for the spot David K. Leak is vacating on the Clarkston Board of Education.

Those who filed are: Michael Barron, 9935 Dixie, Springfield Township; Rockwood W. Bullard III, 63 W. Washington, Clarkston; Mary Jane Chaustowich, 11060 Clark, Springfield Township; Marc Cooper, 11300 Andersonville, Springfield Township; and Floyd Dale Smith, 6520 Amy, Independence Township.

Monday was the deadline for filing nominating petitions for the seven-member board. The election will be held June 12.

"I'm sure those who filed will be candidates, but we have to validate the signatures on the petitions before they get on the ballot," said Clarkston School Supt. Milford Mason.

Barron, 34, is president of DeCender and Barron Structures Inc. in Troy.

Previously a Warren resident, he was graduated from Western Michigan University in 1967 and taught school in the Muskegon and Flint area.

Barron and his wife Phyllis have three children. He is currently a member of the Royal Order of the Moose, Clarkston Branch, and is also a licensed real estate broker.

Bullard, 33, attorney with the Patterson and Patterson, Whitefield, Manikoff and White law firm of Bloomfield Hills, is a 1962 graduate of Clarkston High School and served with military intelligence in Vietnam. Bullard was graduated from Wayne State University and received his legal education at New England School of Law in Boston.

Bullard and his wife Mary Jane have two daughters.

Chaustowich, 41, is a former teacher in Detroit School District.

She was graduated from Wayne State University and has a degree in liberal arts and sociology. Besides teaching, she has served on the staff of Hudson's Department Store and worked in reservations at United Airlines.

Chaustowich and her husband Frank have two children, both of whom attend Andersonville Elementary School.

Chaustowich currently serves on Independence Township's Library Board and is active in the Clarkston Women's Club. She is on the Parent-Teacher Association (PTA) Board and is a member of the Clarkston School District's Citizens' Advisory Committee.

Cooper, 28, is religious coordinator at the Oakland County Jail in the Oakland County Complex.

Cooper, who graduated from Clarkston High School in 1967, is an ordained minister and works as Christian education director at Pine Knob Community Church, where he also founded a printing department.

He and his wife Martha have two children and a foster child who is enrolled in a special education program for the deaf at Lahser High School in Bloomfield Hills. Their son attends Andersonville School, which their daughter will enter next year.

Smith, 39, is director of transportation services for Oakland Intermediate School District.

Smith received his doctorate degree from Michigan State University in 1970. He is president of the Michigan Association for Transportation and has served on Clarkston School District's Citizens' Committee of 50.

Smith and his wife Donna have four children, all of whom attend Clarkston schools.

NOVEC budget slashed for 1978-79

By Pat Braunagel
Associate editor

The budget for the next school year at the Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center was slashed by 17.3 percent Monday night, with two teaching jobs and one entire program among the victims.

"It pains me no end to have to do this because of poor planning on the county's part," Clarkston School Board President David K. Leak said.

Because of construction projects at all of the vocational centers in the county, the operating budgets for each have had to be cut 10 to 20 percent, according to Clarkston Schools Supt. Milford Mason.

The vocational centers are financed through the Oakland Intermediate District but are administered by each of the districts in which they are located.

A $1,000,462 budget for 1978-79 was adopted for the local center in November. The total was cut Monday night to $826,678.

With the budget slashes went the jobs of two learning reinforcement teachers at the center, Patricia Evans and Catherine Roller, both tenure teachers. One of the teachers will be absorbed into the junior high program in the school district and the other will be able to "bump" a recently hired learning disabilities teacher from her job.

The Clarkston Board of Education therefore voted to give Laura Larson notice that her employment in the district, which started in February, would be terminated at the end of the school year "due to a shortage of operating funds at the Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center."

Board members emphasized that the need to cut the budget was not the fault of local school district administrators or of those at the center.

The problem can be traced directly to intermediate district, they noted.

"My personal opinion is that they are not going to recover in '79-'80," Mason said.

Major portion of financial support for the vocational education system comes from a half-mill countywide tax.

There has been discussion about asking county voters to boost the levy to three-quarters or one mill, Mason said.

"The intermediate board has declined to do so," he said.

Besides the two learning reinforcement positions in math and reading, the altered budget also axes the center's heating and air conditioning program.

The instructor who has resigned from that program will not be replaced. An aide was cut from the library staff, a new source of financing was found for a custodial position and the para-professionals' workday was cut from six to five hours.

Mason said he put some $53,000 back into the operating budget by discovering and switching proposed equipment purchases which ought to have been assigned to a capital-improvement bond issue.

Traffic may yet get untangled

Clarkston Village President Keith Hallman has received approval and a pledge of $11,000 from the Oakland County Road Commission to improve the White Lake Road-Holcomb Street-Depot Road intersection.

In a letter to Hallman, Managing Director John Grubba said the road commission approves of the road improvement plan by Reid, Cool and Mischalski.

The plan calls for widening White Lake and Holcomb, both county roads. Both will be widened from 21 feet to 26 feet for approximately 150 feet in each direction.

The grade of Depot Road will be raised as it approaches the intersection, resolving the blind intersection problem.

Grubba gave Hallman the okay to have construction plans prepared.

The entire cost of the improvement has been estimated at $33,000. However, Grubba said the figure seems low and should be checked out further.

Village Clerk Bruce Rogers said the road improvement cost estimation has been checked out by Kieft Engineering, the village engineering firm. Kieft found the $33,000 figure to be acceptable, Rogers said.

Hallman, who has been vacationing in Florida, was notified of the approval and bid via telephone. He has been working with the, Oakland County Road Commission on the intersection improvement plan for several months.

The road improvement is part of the Reid, Cool and Mischalski plan to handle some of the extra traffic expected from the Clarkston Mills development.

Two communities have ordinances like one considered for Clarkston

By Julie Jacobson

"Many of the structures existing in Clarkston in 1872 exist today much as they did then. The visual presence of its past is responsible for the unique character of the community's personality ... the containment of this value in one overall historical district is a valid approach."

Land Use Development Plan

Librarian's job on the line

By Pat Braunagel
Associate editor

Sushil Lahiri, Independence Township's director of library services for seven years, is fighting to keep the job he could lose within a month.

He has asked for, and has been told he will receive, a second closed personnel hearing before the Independence Township Board.

The second hearing, to be scheduled for later this month or early in May, is "to satisfy everyone that we have had a proper hearing," Independence Supervisor Floyd L. (Whitey) Tower said.

Tower said the board had "indicated decisive action" following its March 17 hearing.

The supervisor said he sent Lahiri a memo after that meeting, but beyond that he would make no comment.

Lahiri said he has asked for a follow-up to a survey conducted last summer by the Wayne County Federated Library System, of which the Independence Township Library is a member.

"So far as I understand it, I have implemented every recommendation," he said. "I think they should call the person who did the survey.

"Then only, I think, can they pass any final verdict on my performance. That's the way I feel, and that's what I told the supervisor."

One of the major priorities of Clarkston's newly approved land use development plan is the suggestion of establishing a historical district by means of an ordinance.

Specific information regarding Clarkston's historical preservation ordinance will be presented at a meeting to be scheduled in May by the Clarkston Community Historical Society. Until that time, a look at two other Michigan communities with historical districts can provide some practical information on the role and benefits of an ordinance.

"The main purpose of an historical ordinance is to create more interest in the concept of history," said Jeff Jones, chairman of the study committee for Romeo's historical ordinance.

"Our ordinance has preserved and protected historical architecture. It has caused enough interest so that old houses were restored beyond recognition. Now, they are just beautiful."

Romeo's master plan, a similar plan to Clarkston's new land use plan, was adopted in 1968. It was not until 1973 that the historical ordinance was approved, affecting an area of one square mile of the village.

A historic district commission was formed in Romeo to enforce the guidelines designated in the ordinance. The commission makes recommendations to homeowners who want to add onto their homes, or effect any other structural changes on a historical building.

"The village planning commission has been very strict in not allowing big changes in the district," Jones said. "They really follow the zoning ordinance, which encourages people who want to restore their historical homes. They like to know that a gas station won't be going up next door to their historical home."

Jones said the ordinance encouraged people to take an interest in restoring their homes.

The idea of providing a community center in Clarkston is now under discussion on a level more formal than family-room conversations but still less official than governmental action.

Robert Brumback, a member of the organization that "used to call ourselves Community Resources Committee," said a community center was on the agenda for a Tuesday night gathering of the group.

The members, he told the Clarkston Board of Education Monday night, want to know if they should pursue the idea. In a recent Clarkston News/Jaycee survey, 40.6 percent of those responding said they would like to see a community center developed here.

The school board, unanimously agreeing with a motion made by its Vice President Robert Walters, went on record as supporting "in spirit" the planning of a community center.

Brumback said the Independence Township Board also would be asked for its opinion.

Last year Springfield Township voted not to participate in the Oakland County Tornado Alert System and some citizens feel that was a big mistake.

Springfield Township Supervisor Collin Walls said specifications and implementation cost were not included in detail when the township was initially approached regarding the tornado alert system. Since he has received phone calls from concerned residents he has decided to schedule a special public hearing to discuss the tornado program on May 9 at 8 p.m. at the Springfield Township Hall.

Springfield Township residents can rest assured, their fire chief says—if a fire breaks out, their volunteer firemen will be on the scene at once with the best emergency equipment available.

The latest firefighting vehicle added to Springfield Township's fire department is a bright red, high-pressure pumper called Number 16. It carries 1,000 gallons of water and over 1,500 feet of hose.

Last November the township purchased the Bean fire truck for $53,000 and it has already assisted in putting out 10 fires in Springfield and neighboring communities.

"When we get a fire call we send three fire-fighting vehicles out," said Marlan Hillman, Springfield Township fire chief. "We have another engine identical to Number 16 and we have a unit for getting victims out that also carries 500 gallons of water."

Besides working to combat blazes and answer emergency calls in Springfield Township, the department will go out on calls to help Independence Township, Holly, Groveland and other nearby communities. Hillman reports a "fine relationship" with all fire departments in those areas.

Hillman, who became fire chief when his father Charlie Hillman retired from the position, said he is the only charter member left in the all-volunteer department.

"My father started the department in 1948 because of the community's need for its own fire fighting service. Now we have five emergency vehicles and 22 volunteer firefighters."

In 1977, Springfield Township Fire Department showed a total of 145 runs with a loss of $7,025 in homes and dwellings for the year. A major activity was fires and collision calls for trucks and autos. Those losses amounted to $16,950.

Competition adds sum awards in Clarkston

By Carol Teegardin
Staff Writer

To their teacher's delight, eight Clarkston Junior High School kids are opening up their math books and studying voluntarily.

"Last month Eastern Michigan University sent a comprehensive exam for CJHS math teachers to distribute to their students," said Judy Duke, math department head at CJHS. "Highest scorers were awarded a certificate of achievement by Eastern Michigan University Professor Donald Buckeye."

The eight winners were also invited to participate in a state-wide math final on May 13 at Eastern Michigan University. The finalists in that contest will compete in a math final scheduled to be held at Central Michigan University.

Over 800 junior high school students from throughout Michigan will attend the event, and Duke said the CJHS kids are cramming for it already.

"Our students are gathering in the halls, classrooms—anywhere they can find a place to sit and study," she added.

Besides working on prime numbers and percentages, they're figuring out decimal sets, operations of whole numbers, algebra problems and non-decimal bases.

"The math exam Eastern sent spurred an increased student interest in the subject," said Duke. "Even the sixth graders are checking geometry books out of the school library."

She said students in seventh, eighth and ninth grades who thought math was routine and boring are now seeing it as a "challenge."

The winners at CMU will receive trophies for their achievement. Registration for the event is $1, and bus transportation will be provided by the Clarkston School District.

Lori Martin (above) is one of math winners. Other students who were finalists in contest are Terry Miller, Renea Hamilton, Nicole Bliss, Ken Miller, Chuck Jacobs, Robert Bresler and Eugene Buchheister.

Baby boom, or what?

by Pat Braunagel

Amid the general jubilation surrounding the birth of a new grandchild in a friend's family recently, I thought I detected a possible trend.

The mother, holder of a doctorate degree and a professional job, had begat her first child in her 37th year.

Two more announcements of approaching maternity from friends in their late 20s and early 30s convinced me that some checking-up was in order.

"Are we having a baby boom?" I wondered.

Oakland County Health Department records, while not yet complete for 1977, show an increase of about 500 births in the townships in the last third of the year. While Pontiac hospitals report an increase in deliveries, they are not yet inclined to label it a boom.

"Pontiac General Hospital deliveries are up, but then Pontiac General has its regional neo-natal unit and intensive care facilities for the newborn, and that might be attracting an overly large percentage," said its chief of staff.

"We had five to 10 percent more deliveries in 1977 than in 1976," said Pat Lamberti, executive assistant at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital. "But then, we've got a brand new unit, more modern and colorful—and that might be attracting more people than ordinary."

"We set a record in 1977: 2,441 births," said a spokesperson for St. Joseph Mercy Hospital. "We have some outstanding programs for pregnancies and delivery, and the husband can stay with his wife right through delivery. That may be making a difference."

A check of infant-wear stores revealed increased buying—"just within the last five months," said a representative of Judy's of Waterford.

"And you know something?" she volunteered. "I'm part of the boom."

Married for six years, she and her husband are expecting their first child. So are three of her high school friends, all of them married about the same time, she said.

"I think couples have been waiting to become financially established before starting a family," she said.

Population statistics tell us that the post-World War II baby boom is in its own reproductive stage, and part of the increase is undoubtedly because of that, Dr. James O'Neill of Pontiac General pointed out.

But those boom babies have been less anxious than their parents to get another baby boom started.

Stolen glove is missed

To the Editor:

Sometime after school on Wednesday, April 6, a student from Clarkston Junior High School arrived home with a well-worn, but still serviceable, red baseball glove which he claimed to have "found."

By the time he arrived home, the very legible name of the glove's owner, Stephen Carlson, had been completely removed. The glove itself had little material value since it had seen many a game over the years. It has a great deal of sentimental value to our family, however, for it was given to Stephen by a very close friend shortly before he died.

We know we will never see the glove again. However, if it should be returned, no questions will be asked. If not, we hope it means as much to the thief as it did to Stephen.

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Carlson

Jim's Jottings

Naming the game

by Jim Sherman

On an occasion or two a holder of public office has chided me about our industry using the general term "politician" instead of naming a name.

After all, the reasoning goes, all politicians should rarely be included in a single statement of condemnation or praise. A vote is seldom unanimous.

Yet, these same office holders who criticize us for not singling out individuals use the word "press" to include all weekly newspapers, dailies, radio, television and magazines.

Too, I heard Sen. Don Reigle condemn Congress for failing to pass some act . . . just as if Congress was some aloof body and he was a bookbinder in his daddy's print shop in Flint.

And, Governor Bill Milliken credits or discredits the "legislature" in his speeches.

So, I guess I'll quit using the all inclusive "politician" when they start pointing their fingers more directly.

One more parting shot at a politician . . . singly. President Jimmy Carter, upon returning to Washington from his trip to South America and Africa announced that the Ugly American image is gone.

He may have gotten that opinion in Black Africa, but the Brazilians were not totally for Carter's programs. And, as I recall our image in various other points of the world is still considerably tarnished.

I didn't intend this column to be all political, but now that I'm half way through . . .

Those who return our money to us from Washington after retaining 50 percent, are frequently criticized for not knowing where the real need lies.

Like, maybe they know in generalities there is poverty in Detroit, but don't go far enough to see that these moneys are properly spent.

A case in point is the Pontiac Parks and Recreation department. The federal government, through the CETA program is trying to make jobs for the unemployed.

Of course, the hard core unemployed, those who will not work, cannot be reached. That's one point our government should face.

Anyway, the recreation folks in Pontiac have been given more of our money this year than last so they can hire more unemployed.

Trouble is there may be more people than there is work to do, and the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act may be teaching people how to make money without working.

Whereas, perhaps our money should have gone into programs since the order has gone out to increase the ball player fees this season. Another tax on the taxpayers.

'If it Fitz . . .'

Takes ADC over marriage

by Jim Fitzgerald

Luther beat hell out of his sweetheart, Elaine, and she went running to the cops. Soon, Luther was facing an assault charge in Detroit's Recorder's Court. Because his cash flow was somewhat impaired, Luther ended up with Delahanty, a court-appointed lawyer, representing him.

Luther's story was told to me by Delahanty, except Delahanty isn't his real name. He insists that his real name must remain secret because: "The State Bar Grievance Board looks dimly upon lawyers generating professional publicity for themselves and I'm already in enough trouble with those Englishmen."

As you may have noted from something I've written previously, the most affectionate feeling I can usually generate for a lawyer is apathy. But Delahanty has caught my fancy because of his articulability. I like the way he says things.

For instance, when Delahanty celebrated St. Patrick's week in a singles bar, he could have examined the absence of his wife by simply saying she is an Italian with little appreciation for Irish drunks. But Delahanty did much better than that.

He called his wife "a service-connected disability acquired in Italy during World War II." Beautiful. The government probably sends him a disability check every month.

But let's get back to Delahanty's client, Luther, and Elaine, the woman Luther slapped around . . .

Luther explained to Delahanty that he'd been sweethearting it with Elaine for a couple of years—since right after she turned 16, he emphasized. The difference between sweethearting it and commonlawing it is mainly financial.

Sweethearts, lacking the funds to set up permanent housekeeping, get together mostly on the weekends, returning to their separate homes during the week.

Delahanty also learned that Elaine, having delivered one child of Luther's was on ADC. She was also six months along toward delivering Luther's second child.

Elaine, Luther said, had repented of having sicked the cops on him for assaulting her. She wanted to kiss and make up.

"Can't we forget the whole thing?" Luther asked.

Delahanty patiently explained that the cops had gone to a lot of trouble to bring Luther to court and it wasn't that simple to get them out of the picture. But Delahanty had an idea.

Delahanty related Elaine's change of heart to the detective in charge of the case. "Elaine is on ADC," Delahanty said. "If Luther marries her, she'll be off ADC and Luther, instead of the taxpayers, will support the kids."

The detective liked the idea and agreed to adjourn the case for a month to allow Luther to make wedding plans. After the wedding, the case would be dropped.

Luther wasn't crazy about Delahanty's plan, but he reluctantly agreed to go along with it. So, on the next court date, Delahanty asked Luther if it had been a nice wedding.

"We ain't married yet," Luther said, "but we got the license. Is that enough?"

"Do you think these cops are new in the village?" Delahanty retorted. "If you want them to forget about the case, you have to marry Elaine."

Delahanty won a second adjournment, giving Luther another month to escape the cops by marrying Elaine.

At his next court date, Luther arrived arm-in-arm with Elaine. Her 8½-month pregnancy was not well-concealed.

"Are you two married?" Delahanty asked.

Luther pulled Delahanty to one side and confided: "To tell you the truth, Mr. Delahanty, Elaine just ain't ready for marriage."

Luther got two years. Elaine is still on ADC.

Springfield Christian Academy's baseball team won three games last year and lost seven.

"Last year's team was made up of junior high school-aged boys," said Vanaman. "This year's teammates are a little older and more experienced in the game."

This season runs until May 20.

Springfield Christian will play Rochester Hills Christian, Oxford Christian, John Rice Baptist Academy, Juniate Christian and Sterling Heights Christian School.

No place for hunters

The wetlands area between the two major parks in Independence Township is a good place for wildlife, but it's no place for hunters.

Gun shots were heard in the area "as late as eight days ago," Township Parks and Recreation Director Tim Doyle told the township board April 4.

Deer are among the wild animals which roam in the area, which Doyle described as "fairly delicate."

Doyle said he would like Clintonwood Park closed to hunters by township ordinance, which could be enforced by Oakland County Sheriff's deputies and township officers.

Hunting is prohibited at Clintonwood Park only by township board resolution. A similar resolution by the county parks and recreation commission prohibits hunting in Independence Oaks and all other county parks.

The commission would like Independence Oaks to be included on the township's list of no-hunting areas covered by ordinance, County Parks and Recreation Director Eric Reickel said this week.

Women's softball

Independence Township Parks and Recreation has scheduled a meeting for all teams interested in playing women's softball this summer.

The meeting will be held at Independence Township Hall on April 18 at 8 p.m. Those present will discuss league structure, fees, game nights and game rules. No more than two representatives need be present. For more information call 625-8223.

Lynne Peters, a junior at Northern Michigan University in Marquette, won a first place award in swimming in the intercollegiate varsity sports/1978 winter sports season. She scored 43 1/2 points and had two first places.

Sportsmen elected

Ronald L. Soncrainte, an Oakland County Sheriff's deputy and archery enthusiast, is the new president of Oakland County Sportsmen's Club, Waterford.

Soncrainte, 35, is one of the youngest presidents in the club's 35-year history.

A graduate of Waterford Township High School, Soncrainte has been with the sheriff's department for six years. Before that, he was associated with a building supplies firm.

A big game hunter with bow and arrow, the new O.C.S.C. president just returned from a wild boar hunt in Tennessee, where he downed a trophy boar.

Other new officers are: Robert C. Dickinson, first vice president; James R. Rentz, second vice president; Arthur Miracle, secretary; Arthur E. Guthaus, treasurer; and Andrew M. Wojick, sergeant-at-arms.

Men's softball

There are still openings in the Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department's men's softball leagues.

These include the open Independence Water League on Monday and Wednesday evenings, the Wednesday and Friday evening league, the 30-and-Over League on Sundays and the Industrial League on Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

3. Parents—to identify and deal with any disabilities or unusual development patterns.
4. School—to identify needed services to help children profit more from their beginning school experiences.

The schedule for pre-kindergarten screening in the school building your child will attend is as follows:

- April 19, Tuesday—Clarkston Elementary
- April 19, Wednesday—North Sashabaw Elementary

Comparing historic communities

Most of the historical homes were purchased by younger couples and were completely restored to conform to the original time period.

"People have taken off aluminum siding, removed decaying porches and replaced rotten millwork on the outside structure," Jones said. "The concept of preservation became very important to this community."

Before the ordinance, most of the homes in the Romeo historical section were painted white, Jones said. But after the ordinance went into effect, many homeowners decided to paint the early 19th Century homes various colors, the original colors of the time period.

"These houses weren't painted white originally," Jones said. "When we studied the home colors of the time, we found that earth tones were used much more than white. Browns, greys, beiges, greens and blues replaced the white on a lot of our houses."

In Franklin, the historical district ordinance has been in effect since 1971. Bess Reed, chairman of the Franklin Historical Commission, said the ordinance has promoted civic pride.

"I have no doubt that the preserved district has raised property values, in an indirect way," said Mrs. Reed. "It has definitely prevented things from deteriorating."

Mrs. Reed said the historic commission has a role similar to a building inspector, advising persons who want to tear down a building, add a fence, put up a sign or construct a new building.

"We discourage people from painting their houses odd colors," she said. "And aluminum siding is not conducive to the historical district... We've found that people appreciate the guidance we provide."

When asked what power the historical commission has in enforcing these recommendations, Franklin planning commissioner Betty Lee Francis called the commission the "last word."

"If someone sees a red light, they stop for it," Mrs. Francis said. "You don't have to, but there are certain rules and regulations you simply follow."

Mrs. Francis said the planning commission and historic commission like to keep in touch and often send representatives to each other's meetings.

"The planning commission, the historic commission, the zoning board of appeals and the village council all play a role in historic preservation," she said.

Mrs. Reed said it is important to stress the guiding aspect of the ordinance.

"We must remember that this is only a plan, a guide, a suggestion," she said. "It is by no means the law."

Energy Outlook:

Returning to Normal.

The nation's longest coal strike has now become history and shipments of coal are returning to normal. For Detroit Edison customers this means you have all the electricity you need, but we hope you will continue to use it wisely.

Unlike many other states, Michigan was able to avoid mandatory power cutoffs through careful planning and the cooperation of business, government and consumers. By buying electricity from outside sources and by burning alternate fuels like natural gas and oil, Detroit Edison was able to stretch its supply of coal and help avoid shutdowns and layoffs. Of course, this was more expensive and the costs will be reflected in higher electric bills for April, May and June. For the average customer using 500 kilowatt hours, this could amount to between $2 and $3 more than billed in March.

The recent crisis once again points out the need for energy consciousness on the part of everyone. So while coal is beginning to move again, Detroit Edison would like to remind all its customers to use good judgment in their use of electricity. This especially holds true for major energy users like refrigerators, furnace blowers, air conditioners and electric clothes dryers. The more wisely these appliances are used, the more the savings in energy and money will count up.

Detroit Edison thanks you for your cooperation during the coal strike and reminds you to save where it really counts. The power is in your hands.

Liquor license vote tabled

Springfield Oaks is dry

Springfield Township officials had promised a definite "yes" or "no" vote on the controversial liquor license for Springfield Oaks Clubhouse. But the issue was still in limbo at their April 5 board meeting.

"We asked the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission and the Fuller-Oaks Corporation to send for a new liquor license application stating certain provisions," said Collin Walls, township supervisor. "They did what they were supposed to do. They wrote the liquor control commission, but because of internal problems there, they have not received a reply to date."

"We have to wait until we hear from the commission before we can vote," Walls added.

On Jan. 11, E.A. Fuller and George Lekas, owners of the Oaks Corporation, requested a transferable resort liquor license to use in conjunction with the food and beverage concession they operate at the county-owned clubhouse. They were denied by a majority vote.

Due to petitions signed by Springfield residents in favor of the license, and a lawsuit threat by an attorney representing the concessionaires, the board held a special public hearing on the license last month. After the hearing, board members deecided to vote again on the license providing it states the following provisions:

- Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission be named co-licensee in case the concessionaires leave Springfield Oaks Activity Center.

- The SDM carry-out liquor permit and dance permit attached to the license be cancelled.

"We hope the application will be sent to the township offices before their May board meeting," said Eric Reickel, director of the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission.

"If the Oaks Corporation gets a 'yes' vote on the liquor license this time, it will take effect sometime in late summer."

Enrollment down, revenues up in 78'

In a "very tentative" preliminary budget, Clarkston Schools Supt. Milford Mason predicts the district's revenues and expenditures will increase about $444,000 next year.

A $10,740,858 preliminary 1978-79 budget, put together by Mason for the Oakland County Tax Allocation Board, was accepted by the school board Monday night. In preparing the budget, Mason predicted that the district would lose 98 students next year.

School Board President David

K. Leak noted this is the first of three budgets prepared annually. The third budget, drafted after the costs of all employee contracts have been determined, usually goes to a public hearing in October, Leak noted.

Trustees

Campbell stuck to his guns, citing a 1977 Michigan Court of Appeals case in which the judge ruled that township electors at an annual meeting can increase the number of trustees from two to four. The case involved

Montrose Township.

"The question was clarified in Lixey versus Montrose Township," Campbell said.

The township attorney also said that the two new trustees should be elected this fall.

"I think they have sufficient time to permit them to be nominated in the next primary and run in November," he said. "I see no reason why they couldn't."

Trustee Jerry Powell, a Republican, is the only board member whose term does not expire this year.

New legislation requires that all township officers elected in 1978 be named to two-year terms.

"In 1980, they will begin to have four-year terms, including all the trustees," Campbell said.

Regardless of what Campbell ruled, Tower said he had received "indications both ways" that the opinion would be challenged.

"I'm sure we'll have other input," he predicted.

Pine Knob Elementary

Media center a haven for learning

Naomi Hazinski and Jack Hines look over collection.

Susan Kott, media specialist at Pine Knob Elementary, chats with visiting students last week.

By Carol Teegardin
Staff Writer

Students at Pine Knob Elementary can't wait to check books out of their media center now that the collection has been increased.

"Besides adding new books, we have puppets, film strips and cassettes," said Susan Kott, media specialist. Last Monday and Tuesday Kott invited all students to look at materials on display.

Students also participated in a contest called "guess the number of new books." The winners received either a Star Wars album or $5 gift certificate to McDonalds Restaurant.

Puppets, film strips and cassettes are part of the new collection at Pine Knob Elementary. The books on stock are already being held for children who want to check them out.

He's found his forte

Country Living

By Julie Jacobson
Staff Writer

After spending much of the '60s sampling careers in California, 33-year-old Alan Malfitano says he has found an occupation in Clarkston he plans to spend the rest of his life pursuing: jewelry making.

He is a silversmith, working in the Tierra Arts and Design Shop, 20 S. Main. Although he has been creating jewelry for only a year and a half, Malfitano is known by some of his Clarkston customers to have created some attractive and unusual pieces.

When his sister, Joan Koppetz, owner of the Tierra Shop, offered to teach Malfitano the craft of silversmithing, he left sunny California to live in oftentimes-not-so-sunny Clarkston.

"She is really an artist," he said. "She taught me all I know. But the ironic part of the whole episode is that when we were little and I told her I wanted to be an artist, she said, 'don't you know that all artists starve!' " he laughed.

The jewelers' works on display in some of the glass cases in the shop are characterized by highly detailed engravings on the copper and silver necklaces, bracelets, pins and belt buckles.

Malfitano uses an ancient method called "repousse," entailing the use of various tools to form a flat piece of metal into a three-dimensional object. It is a detailed form of engraving.

"When I first showed an art professor friend of mine some of these pieces, he looked at me with a weird look and said, 'Do you know what this is?' " Malfitano recalled. "I didn't. He informed me that it was an ancient form of jewelry making called 'repousse.' " I just said it was my own technique."

The pieces he refers to are Egyptian influenced. The ancient pattern shows through on many of his necklaces, bracelets and belt buckles. All his jewelry is hallmarked or signed "Osiris," after an ancient god of death, he says.

When Malfitano was in college and considering various vet schools to attend, he almost went to one in Egypt, just to be close to the art, he says.

In addition to being interested in veterinary science and Egyptian art, Malfitano came close to becoming a priest.

"After going to a parochial school in both elementary and high school, I decided to become a priest and went right into the seminary out of high school," he said. "But they told me I was too idealistic to be a good priest. I lasted one semester."

Malfitano spent the '60's in many varied occupations around California. He even moved to the mountains, like many other young people at that time. He says he hopes to return there someday and spend all his time creating jewelry.

"But first, I want to find out everything about silversmithing," he said. "And besides, I love Clarkston. You know, country living and all that."

While many artists are known as recluses and social misfits, a typical Malfitano is putting his artistic abilities to work in the Clarkston community. He is a member of the small but dedicated Beautification Committee, where he is drawing the plans for barrel planters to be installed in the spring.

Malfitano says he sometimes works night and day on his jewelry. He admits there are some days when inspiration doesn't come as easily, but those days are spent making repairs around Tierra.

"Most of my pieces are made for special orders," he said. "But when I get an idea in my head, I just can't do anything else until I put that idea to test."

When asked his opinion of modern day art design, he was vehement.

"Today's jewelry is trite. It is a disgrace to what it used to be," he said. "People used to wear it to ward off evil spirits and to cure diseases. It was used to protect the wearer on many different levels. Now it's disgusting."

Malfitano's solution to the problem: a modern day renaissance.

His work carries this idea through. Ancient Egyptian gods kneel, arms extended ... ancient birds spread their wings ... the whole method has a primitive beauty emanating from his gleaming products.

Malfitano is proud of his craft. He wears many of his pieces. One intricate copper bracelet, a heavy band of copper twisted into an Egyptian pattern, adorns his wrist.

Is jewelry making much different than other occupations?

"Reporters and jewelers are much the same," he said. "We both take various elements ... you, with works and me with metal ... and create something that people want to find out about."

Al Malfitano and his sister, Joan Kopicetz, are accompanied by a friend, Snoopy.

Coping with kids

Teenagers and stepparents

by Jim and Ellen Windell

By Jim and Ellen Windell
"I can't live with him or without him," a mother of a teenage son tearfully confided. The problem was that her son from her first marriage and her present husband could not get along.

At first there was some hope that given time they would be able to establish a relationship, but after two years the family life had become so tense that the husband finally declared that either the son left the home or he himself would.

The mother and wife caught in the midst of this crossfire feels bombarded from two directions while also feeling herself pulled apart emotionally. It is no easy matter to give up your son or your husband, both of whom you love.

In this situation, the mother felt affection for them both but had also begun to feel angry and hostile to both because they were not making a better adjustment.

The son, although in increasing trouble since the remarriage of his mother, felt guilt for those problems in addition to the ones he caused in the family.

He often told his mother that he was to blame for the family discord and that he should be the one to leave. His mother, he reasoned, had a right to happiness in her new marriage. Nevertheless, his inability to handle his feelings concerning his stepfather led to skipping school, drinking and curfew violations which only intensified the resentment and mistrust between his new father and himself.

As a result of his own difficulties with learning to love and respect his stepfather, he began to think of himself as worthless and inadequate.

This is not an uncommon situation in families where there has been a remarriage. The wish of the natural as well as the stepparent that the children come to view the stepparent as a legitimate parental figure in the family is often unrealized. Children, particularly adolescents, just may be too loyal to their own parent to accept a stepparent.

The eventual acceptance of a stepparent can be made easier if some simple guidelines are followed. The stepparent should not try to take the natural parent's place. There is usually no chance of this happening, at least not very soon after the marriage. The new stepparent must be caring and patient as the young person tries to deal with his feelings about having a new mother or father.

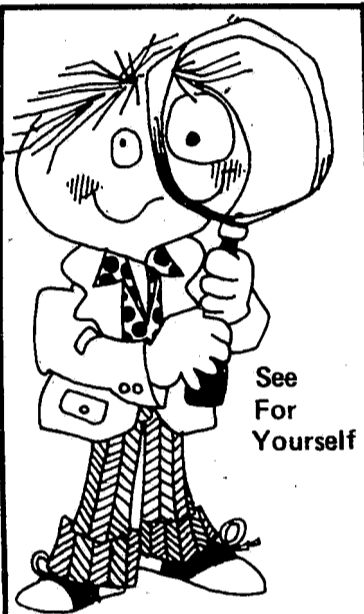

The stepmother or stepfather should not demand an emotional response from the teenager. There should be no rush to win the child over nor to give up a parental role ("He's your child, you handle him from now on") and just be a spouse.

Both the child and stepparent need time to come to know each other, and they both should accept the attitude that they need not love each other (and therefore the relationship with the original parent need not be threatened) now or ever.

Couples relate in real estate

By Carol Teegardin
Staff Writer

Since selling real estate has turned into such a lucrative business, more and more married couples have gone into the profession to work as a team.

In this area, several couples work side-by-side in real estate firms. Though each office situation is different, the couples unanimously report being in the same profession gives them a "common bond."

"We're rarely in the office at the same time," said Marvel White, who works with her husband Bob, owner of Bob White Real Estate on Main Street in Clarkston.

Both licensed brokers, Bob sells commercial property while Marvel manages the residential end of the business.

"Bob opened the office in 1947. After our children were grown, I decided to get my real estate license," Marvel said.

To get into selling real estate, one has to be sponsored by a broker in order to take classes.

After 30 hours of training, a state test is required before a license is issued.

To become a broker, a person must be able to show experience in listing and selling homes and be able to pass a state exam.

"Our son Robert is working with us now in the office and hopes to get his broker's license soon," said Marvel. "When the three of us get together after work we vow not to talk about real estate, but somehow we always end up on the subject."

Shirley and Don Carpenter, co-owners of Realty World/D&S Carpenter, Inc. on S. Main in Clarkston, have a different story to tell.

Shirley started out in real estate before her husband Don. She obtained her real estate license in 1967 and worked with a firm in the area. After she got her broker's license she started up a small real estate office in Clarkston.

"My husband encouraged me to get my real estate license," said Shirley. "A few years later he got his license and joined me in the business."

The Carpenters moved to their present location in 1975.

"Now Don manages the office and I do all of the listing and selling," said Shirley. "I make the money and he manages it," she laughed.

Shirley is proud to report she has turned over $3 million in real estate sales in 1977.

Being a woman in real estate hasn't always been easy for Shirley. She said when people come in and ask for the "man of the office," she just grins and bears it.

According to Shirley, real estate couples in the village bend

Shirley emphasized that she and her husband don't compete with each other in their business venture. "We're co-owners," she said. "And, we work together—both at home and in the office."

Bob Swanson, owner of Swanson and Associates Real Estate on Dixie Highway in Springfield Township, listed the advantages of having his wife, Maria, work in the office selling real estate with him.

"When I'm busy, Maria can go out and show a house and vice-versa," he said. Bob has been licensed to sell real estate since 1972. Maria obtained her license in 1976.

"In real estate you work nights and weekends—it helps to have a wife who understands that schedule," he said.

Bob added it also helps to have a wife who understands real estate "jargon," because he talks about the business "all the time."

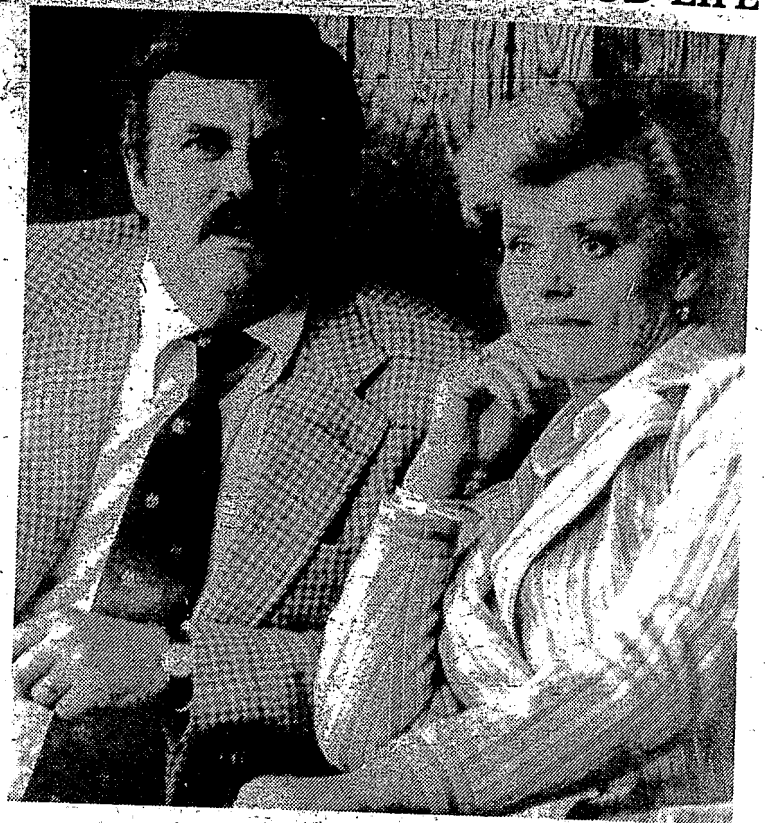

Millie and Duane Hursfall of Duane Hursfall Real Estate Inc., in Clarkston, say working together in real estate gives them a common interest and results in more stimulating conversation.

Duane, a broker since 1959, renovated a 125-year-old home on Church Street into their present office. Millie, a real estate salesperson, works as Duane's office manager and closing secretary.

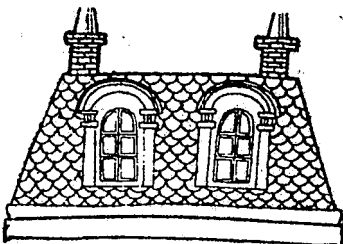

"He's the boss," said Millie. She can actively sell real estate, but chooses to work in the office.

Realtors influence growth: Milliken

Realtors are not just sellers of property, but are shapers of tomorrow's communities.

Their policy-making roles in the communities in which they work was alluded to by Gov. William Milliken last week as he issued a proclamation for Michigan's Private Property Week, April 16-22.

A more militant stance was taken by the president of the North Oakland County Board of Realtors in a statement he issued about the part realtors play in the defense of the free enterprise system.

"Realtors are in the front line of defense against those who would destroy the free enterprise system; a system that has carried America to greatness in the last 200 years," said board president Charles Williams.

The purpose of observing Private Property Week is to remind people of their basic rights as Americans: the right to own property and the right to participate in the free enterprise system, according to the board of realtors.

Milliken congratulated realtors on their performance in protecting those rights.

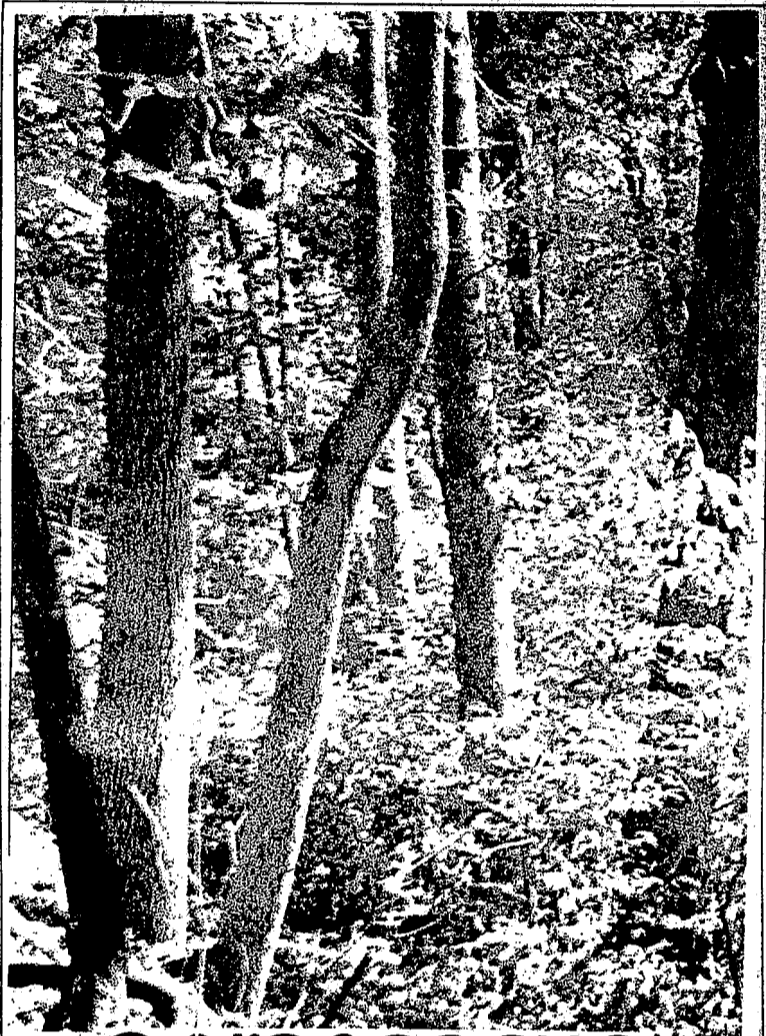

"Citizens of our state are safeguarded in their property transactions by the integrity and professionalism of realtors, are helped by their cooperative search for solutions to problems besetting our cities, towns, villages and environment, and enjoy the benefits of the farsighted programs initiated by realtors to make America better," Milliken said.

Plan smooths way for home buyer

One thing that can change exuberance over a new home into disappointment, and taint the buyer-seller relationship, is a breakdown in any of the systems which keep a house functional and comfortable.

The need to call a repairman adds frustration and perhaps regret to the feelings experienced by a family in the process of moving.

As protection against this eventuality, the two Realty World broker offices in the Clarkston-Drayton Plains area now have available a broad home insurance plan for the house that is being resold.

The plan is available in Michigan exclusively through Realty World brokers, according to Jean Lanphar, president of the organization's Michigan region.

The Realty World Home Protection Plan, administered by American Home Shield, provides the home seller and home buyer with either one- or two-year coverage on such home systems as plumbing, central heating, central air conditioning and electrical systems. There are options for annual renewal.

"Our Realty World Home Protection Plan also covers certain major appliances like the disposal, built-in trash compactor, built-in dishwasher, oven and range," Mrs. Lanphar explained.

"The unique feature of this plan is that it can be obtained without on-site inspection," she said, "so long as we are assured verbally that the systems and equipment protected are in working order at the time it goes into effect."

The plan covers the buyer of a resale home.

It also is available to the seller, who can obtain limited coverage on the plumbing system, electrical system and hot water tank for a period lasting from 15 days after a listing is taken to the date of closing.

"The program," according to Mrs. Lanphar, "is especially attractive to resale home buyers since they are assured that any of the vital systems and equipment protected will be repaired or replaced for nothing more than a small service charge during the coverage period."

"All the buyer need do to obtain service during this time is to call the appropriate toll-free phone number requesting service. Within minutes, he will be recontacted by a local sub-contractor who is affiliated with American Home Shield and who will then set up a date to perform the service."

The two Realty World broker offices in this area are D and S Carpenter Inc., 60 S. Main, Clarkston, and Kimberly and Associates, 4428 W. Walton, Drayton Plains.

Lake Oakland Woods attracts young couples

By Julie Jacobson
Staff Writer

A large percentage of home buyers in the Clarkston area are young couples with incomes over $30,000 a year, according to a study conducted by Edward Rose and Sons, builders and developers.

The first 60 percent of the buyers in the Lake Oakland Woods subdivision, located near Maybe and Sashabaw Roads, were surveyed by Gene Komarynski, sales manager for the builder-developers.

"The typical couple buying homes in our area have smaller families, and both the husband and wife are working," Komarynski said. "These young couples are more wealthy than the typical young buyers a decade ago ... they aren't having as many children, and the wife has a career outside the home."

According to the study, 43 percent of the first 60 buyers were between 26 and 30 years old. The combined income of the husband and wife was over $30,000 a year.

Almost 100 percent of the couples have two incomes, Komarynski said.

"And if the wife wasn't working when the couple moved to Lake Oakland Woods, she started soon after," he said. "The fact that the wife is working and not having as large a family really contributes to a healthy income."

Komarynski said the houses, which were priced between $42,900 and $51,520, are the second homes purchased by most of the couples.

The study also indicated that 37 percent of the couples are moving from the Pontiac, Waterford and Royal Oak areas. Others moved from Detroit, Rochester, Oak Park and Clawson.

"The same forces that are driving people out of Detroit are driving them out of Pontiac," Komarynski said. "Such factors as minority groups and school districts are making people move out of the cities to our area. The homes out this way are economically segregated."

Another 10 percent of the buyers are moving from one point in Clarkston to this Independence Township subdivision. Why move from one neighborhood to another?

"These buyers are young couples from Clarkston who want to live near their families, who live in the Village of Clarkston," Komarynski said.

Is the Pine Knob entertainment complex a positive or negative factor with the nearby Lake Oakland Woods home buyers?

"Surprisingly, we've found that people who have come out to see various shows at Pine Knob have looked around and been attracted to this area," he said. "There's a lot of charm around here."

Food cooperative block members helped divide up food for distribution to other communities.

People work together to save on food prices in Holly Harvesters, one of the largest food cooperatives in Michigan.

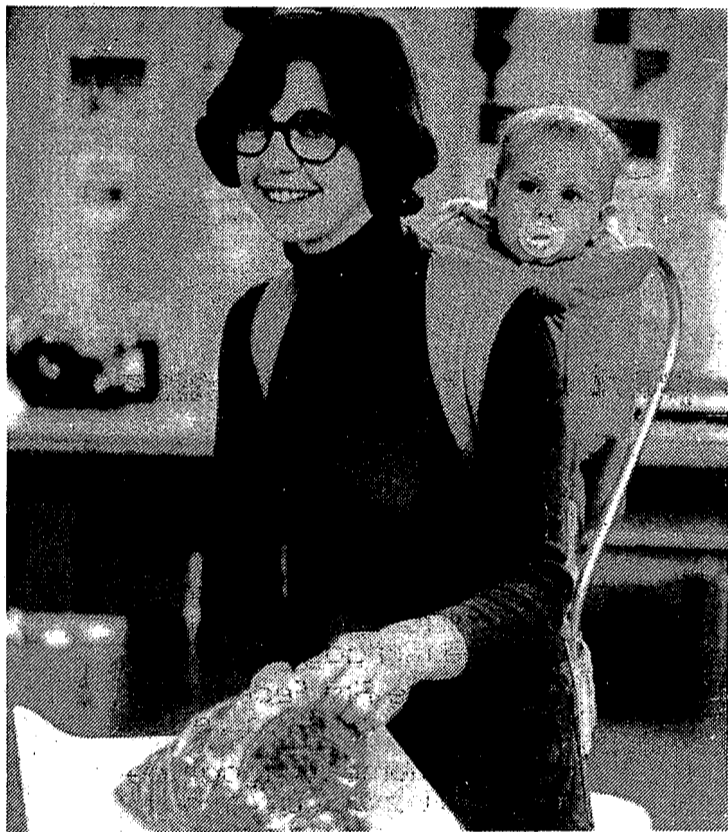

Based in Davisburg, the cooperative serves residents from White Lake, Grand Blanc, Linden, Fenton, Holly and Clarkston. The 118 members order over $2,000 worth of food each month.

"We get together, decide what we want to order and have it delivered from the People's Wherehouse in Ann Arbor," said Martha Burton, coordinator for the cooperative. "The day it arrives block members from all communities meet to weigh the food and take it back to their communities.

"It's a nice experience. People can get food staples along with produce, grains and dairy products. We cooperate with each other to put wholesome, natural food on our tables," she added.

Property value up in Springfield

People are finding Springfield Township a desirable place to live and, as a result, the township's real estate market value has gone up.

A 14 percent increase over last year's assessed property value of $45,900,000 has escalated the total to $53,900,000, according to township assessor Dave Gensley.

"Approximately $6.2 million were in adjustments, and the balance was in new construction," said Gensley. He added that assessments have increased at a more rapid rate on small parcels of land than large parcels.

Notices of the property value reassessments were mailed out to Springfield residents the last week in February. Those who wanted to discuss or protest the reassessments appeared at the Board of Review held in March.

"Obviously, people were upset about the reassessments," said Gensley. "It will cost them more money a year to live. Taxes are becoming excessive."

Gensley was available during the week the board of review met.

"There were some hardship cases, differences in opinion between myself and the board of review and some mistakes in arithmetic to be taken care of," he said.

"The ballpark estimate percentages for 1978 don't apply to all residents of Springfield Township," said Collin Walls, township supervisor who also served as secretary to the board of review.

"We looked at individual property this year. If a home's property value was assessed at $25,000 in 1977 and stayed the same in 1978, the property owner's taxes would remain the same unless there was an increase in school millage."

by David McNeven, Coach

Horse racing has long been one of the favorite spectator sports in this country. For many years, corruption was part of the horse racing scene. People almost expected some sort of fix some of the time. But then horse racing cleaned itself up. Lately, though, there have been tales of use of drugs, or substituting horses under phony names, that are beginning to give racing a bad name again. Let's hope sportspeople can keep racing clean.

We hope you'll come to us at COACH'S CORNER, 31 S. Main, 625-8457 when ready to buy your sporting equipment. Baseball, track and tennis supplies are handled and we always make sure you are properly fitted to equipment. Racquet ball shoes, gloves, racquets, balls and bags are available. If you have won a school letter wear it proudly on a jacket or sweater with your school colors. We handle all sizes and styles. Hours: 9:30am-6pm daily, until 5pm Sat.

Another load of Romney sheep arrives at the shearing site, the Hillside Farm in Springfield Township. Donald Bradford was on hand to welcome them and steer them into the barn

Not baa-d for a close shave

News photos by Pat Braunagel

Comes the shearing, sheep is center stage with Gerald Marsh of Quincy.

Wool from each sheep was baled and weighed.

Gloria Bellairs, owner of Hillside Farm, admires the extra-long wool from one of her rams. The same ram produced 21¼ pounds of wool, most of any sheep in the area for a one-year growth.

Sheared of their winter wool growths, rams are ready for spring.
