Parview dead end sought

By Roger Hess

Independence Township residents along Parview Drive are seeking to stop through traffic between Andersonville Road and Dixie Highway.

Petitions containing 56 signatures that call for Parview to be dead ended have been presented to the Oakland County Road Commission. The petitions cite speeding, careless and reckless driving in addition to the failure of police patrols to remedy the situation as the basis for their request.

The speed limit on Parview is posted at 25 miles per hour although a study conducted by the commission revealed that motorists' average speed on the street was at 48 mph. The report also indicated that over 50 percent was through traffic.

Alarmed at what he terms a dangerous road, Scott Robeson started circulating a petition last summer in an effort to stop cars from roaring past his home, he said.

"There have been numerous accidents," said Robeson. "We had a truck turn end-over-end and land in my neighbor's front yard. Police estimate he was going over 70 mph."

Independence Township police have had the area on radar although according to Director of Police Services Charles Kimbell that cannot be done on a regular basis without neglecting the rest of the community.

"We don't want the road blocked," said Mary Bannasch, another resident along Parview Drive. "But nothing else will work."

The road commission plans to make a decision on the request after review of staff investigation and comments.

Springfield's Chaustowich named to school board

By Pat Braunagel
Associate editor

Clarkston School District voters Monday elected Springfield Township resident Mary

Mary Jane Chaustowich

Jane Chaustowich to the board of education.

Winning 348 votes, Chaustowich finished seven votes ahead of her nearest competitor, Floyd D. Smith of Independence Township, with the rest of the five-candidate field running far behind them.

Chaustowich, 11060 Clark, will be the sole Springfield Township resident on the seven-member school board.

She won the seat vacated by School Board President David K. Leak, 6195 Middle Lake, Independence Township.

The unofficial vote tally gave Smith, 6520 Amy, Independence Township, 341 votes; Rockwood W. Bullard III, 63 W. Washington, Clarkston, 193; Marc Cooper, 11300 Andersonville, Springfield Township, 115; and Michael Barron, 9935 Dixie, Springfield Township, 109.

Chaustowich carried five of the 12 precincts, those voting at the Independence Township Hall, Clarkston High School, Bailey Lake Elementary School, Clarkston United Methodist Church and Andersonville Elementary School.

Smith was the top vote-getter in six of the precincts, and Bullard was awarded the most votes in one, Precinct 5 at Pine Knob Elementary School.

The voter turnout was light, with less than 10 percent of the registered electors going to the polls, according to Schools Supt. Milford Mason.

There were 1,106 votes cast in Monday's election.

Chaustowich, a former teacher at Cass Technical High School in Detroit, is a member of the Clarkston Schools Citizens' Advisory Committee.

She also serves on the Independence Township Library Board, the Andersonville School PTA Board and the Clarkston Community Women's Club Board. She and her husband Frank have two children.

Supervisor's race cut

There will be only one candidate from each party on the Aug. 8 primary election ballot for supervisor in Independence Township.

Carolyn Place, a Republican, will run against incumbent Floyd (Whitey) Tower, a Democrat, in the Nov. 7 general election.

Jack McCall, the third candidate who was nominated to run for supervisor, officially withdrew last week.

Springfield rejects sirens again

By Carol Teegardin
Staff writer

Tornado sirens will not be a part of Springfield Township due to lack of interest by township residents and a decision by public officials that the county-wide system isn't practical.

Springfield Township's participation in the Oakland County tornado alert system was turned down by a 5-0 vote at last week's township board meeting.

"We voted against the system in 1977, but held a public hearing last month to discuss it again," said Springfield Township Supervisor Colin Walls.

Walls scheduled the public hearing after receiving a petition signed by 97 residents of Springfield who said they favored installation of the tornado sirens.

"Robert Gorsline, Oakland County commissioner, was present at the public hearing to discuss the tornado system and about 10 residents in the area showed up," said Walls. "There seemed to be little public interest."

"The tornado system is centrally activated by the National Weather Service at Detroit Metro Airport," said Walls. "If a tornado is sighted in West Bloomfield, for instance, and headed in this direction, an alert would go off in Springfield."

"The problem with the system is not all residents in the area would hear the sirens unless we had an 85 percent coverage—that means six to eight sirens at $2,000 each.

"Even then, it's possible some residents of Springfield wouldn't hear the sirens because of hilly terrain and trees surrounding them."

Township Trustee Glenn Underwood said he feels it isn't fair to ask Springfield taxpayers to participate in a system that may not serve the township adequately.

Marlan Hillman, fire chief for Springfield, suggested the township wait until a more sophisticated tornado alert system is available.

"The idea of the tornado alert system is good, but I don't think it's doing what it's supposed to do," said Calvin Walters, Township Clerk.

"I was in Independence Township last week when a siren went off. Instead of taking cover, people went outside in their yards to find out what was going on."

Dump debate heats meeting

BY Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

A discussion of Independence Township's Ordinance 75 and its impact on Powell Disposal Service's landfill erupted into a heated debate between Trustee Jerry Powell and a township resident at last week's board meeting.

Eleven home owners from Chapel View Estates located on Clarkston-Orion Road adjacent to the landfill petitioned the board to discuss the issue.

The discussion started quietly.

The board had consulted township attorney Richard Campbell whose opinion "basically called for enforcement of (Article 7) of the ordinance which would pertain to an existing landfill rather than a new landfill," said Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower.

The 12-acre landfill has been owned and operated by the Powell family about 25 years.

Article 7 requires that refuse be deposited in a prepared trench, compacted and covered with a layer of dirt not less than 6 inches deep at the end of each day, that there be no burning of rubbish at the site, that a temporary fence may be required to prevent scattering of rubbish and that no filling of rubbish or garbage shall occur within 500 feet of any existing dwelling unless written consent is secured.

Also required is final restoration when a dumping area is full, leaving it suitable for the growing of grass or other uses permitted in the district.

Building department director Tim Palulian said he made an on-site inspection of the landfill area that borders the subdivision.

Blowing debris has been a problem, he said.

"It is my opinion that he is terminating all filling at that area," he added. "A fence would probably eliminate most of that problem."

Ken Harrison, a Chapel View Estates resident, said state officials suggested "to get the township to enforce its ordinance.

"We don't want to close Mr. Powell down," he added. "We need his services in the township."

But the homeowners would like to see the fence installed and the ordinance enforced, he added.

Then Russ Buller of Rattalee Lake Road, Independence Township, said he wanted to comment on the subject although he was not a Chapel View Estates resident and had not signed the petition.

"I stopped by the county (last week) and on the 21st of April, 1971, the county told Powell they must put two feet of clay on the final cover," he said, referring to the final restoration required.

Without clay on top, "water could go down through the landfill," Buller said. "The county was concerned the landfill could pollute wells."

He listed several dates in the six-year period between 1971 and 1977 and said each report mentioned "not sufficient cover."

A kind of hush . . .

No live band music will be coming from the Clarkston Village Park this summer unless a new band director is found.

Former director Doug Doty has retired from his duties as Clarkston Village band director and no one has been selected to take his place.

Doty sent a letter to the Clarkston Village Council saying he is resigning because of lack of interest by the volunteer musicians in the band.

"Only two or three players showed up for the last few concerts we had in the park last summer," said Doty. "Few people showed up for rehearsals as well. It's frustrating to try to organize something when no one shows up for it."

"We'd have all brass instruments one week and woodwind ensembles the next."

Doty, who works as band director at Sashabaw Junior High School, said public interest in the village band was fairly good.

"A sizeable crowd always turned out to listen to us," he added.

The Clarkston Village Band was formed in 1975 and that was the "best year," according to Doty.

Concerts were held in the park every Wednesday night from June to August.

Doty said the village band musicians had a hard time getting together each week because of their commitments with the other bands in the area.

"Some of the school bands meet all during the summer," he added. "That was part of the problem."

Doty said he will support the band as a playing member if a new group is formed.

The village council contacted the Clarkston Band Boosters to ask if they will take over the Clarkston Village Band.

Homer Biondi, treasurer of the boosters, said they have not formally responded to the council on that request.

"We'll be disappointed if the village sees fit to drop the band program because of lack of participation by musicians," said Biondi.

Clarkston Village Council president Keith Hallman said the village is ready to turn the position of band director over to anyone who is willing and capable to conduct it.

Independent view

Because Independence Township will not have a spring clean-up day this year, the township board has authorized Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower to negotiate with the city of Pontiac for tickets that allow local residents to use Pontiac's dump.

In the past, Powell's landfill was open on two Saturdays so township residents could take loads of trash directly to the dump.

The tickets will cost about $5 for passenger vehicles, Tower said at last week's township board meeting, and may be sold at township hall.

The estimated price includes a 50-cent service charge by the township.

Although a request from Independence Township Fire Department Chief Frank (Tink) Ronk to promote Laurie Miller from clerk to secretary was denied last month, persistence paid off and Miller was made a secretary as of June 6 at last week's township board meeting.

The secretary position was posted for seven days after Clerk Christopher Rose recommended the procedure.

Miller was the only person who applied for the job.

Treasurer Elizabeth Hallman had voted against the original request because employees in her office had not been allowed to request secretarial classifications.

"There were discrepancies which have been cleared up," she said. "I have no objection at this time."

Voting was reported incorrectly in the Clarkston News last week on an Independence Township Board proposal recommending Pine Knob's Mansions, Inc. receive the last remaining Class C liquor license in the township.

The correction follows:

The proposal was passed 3 to 2. Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower, Trustee Jerry Powell and Trustee Frederick Ritter voted yes. Treasurer Elizabeth Hallman and Clerk Christopher Rose voted no.

Independence wants center site

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Clintonwood Park and the senior citizens' center, currently on a 40-acre parcel, may soon include land for a community center.

Timothy Doyle, park and recreation director, has been given permission by the township board to check into purchasing 10 to 15 acres at the north end of the park, located on Clarkston-Orion Road.

"In my mind, I can envision a boulevard going in there," Doyle said. The boulevard would lead to the two buildings and wind through the park.

Actual construction of the community center may be two to three years away, but revenue sharing funds totalling $20,000 have been earmarked for land since last fall, Doyle said.

"We do have the money set aside for community center acquisition," he said. "It's there; I think we have a legitimate site."

The park now is a "good outside sports' facility, geographically located in the center of town," Doyle said.

And if the land is purchased, it would be used immediately.

"We could sure make good use of it for a picnic area or whatever," he said.

The Oakland County Parks Commission is currently working to obtain grant money for extension of Independence Oaks and the purchase of over 300 acres that would include the acreage Doyle wants to purchase.

"We want to preserve that whole tract of land that is in the Clinton River Watershed area," he said, explaining that their goals are the same.

Doyle said he contacted the owners of the land about three months ago.

"They indicated at that time that they would be interested (in selling a small portion)," he said.

"I think if we do it now, it would be wise, because it may become more complicated at a later date," he said, if the township tries to purchase the land from Independence Oaks.

When Doyle presented the request at the township board meeting last week, he was given informal permission to pursue the land purchase.

"I don't think a motion needs to be made, we're interested," said Clerk Christopher Rose.

There are things you can do to control the cost of your phone bill.

We are constantly searching for ways to help you economize on your phone service, but here are just a few ideas on how you can help yourself:

Call when it's least expensive. For example, when you're calling long distance, dial direct and plan your calls for times when the rates are lowest.

Budget Service that's really low budget! Look into the availability of Budget Service if you don't make a lot of phone calls every month. It's the least expensive one-or-two party phone service we offer.

Plan to have all your service installed in one visit. For instance, if you move, plan carefully so the installer doesn't have to make extra trips, for which you may have to pay additional charges. And while you're planning for new service, make sure it's going to be the kind most suited to your needs.

Sometimes, little tips can save you a surprising amount over the long haul. We'll keep trying to help you save.

Peers back librarian

A request from Independence Township department heads that a six-month probation period be granted Sushil Lahiri, township librarian, has been taken under advisement by the township board.

The letter asked the board to review Lahiri's work after a six-month period. They also requested a definition of the library advisory board's function.

A 60-day moratorium was placed on the termination of Lahiri's job in a closed meeting before the board on May 17.

Department heads George Anderson, Tim Doyle, Charles Kimbel, Tim Palulian, Frank (Tink) Ronk and Dave Sherrill signed the letter presented at last week's regular township board meeting.

The people speak--don't they?

by Pat Braunagel

Mary Jane Chaustowich, who had just been tentatively declared winner of the Clarkston School Board election, had a tentative smile on her face.

She approached Schools Supt. Milford Mason with her question: what were the chances that her seven-vote win margin could be erased in an official tally?

Mason shook his head; there wasn't much chance the results would change. She could feel free to celebrate.

With the numbers being dealt with in a school election, seven votes constitute a pretty safe margin.

School board elections are easy targets for newspaper editors. We can tsk-tsk over the turnout, over the scant number of people exercising their franchise and keeping the democratic process alive and functioning.

We can point out that a mere eight of you who did not vote could have changed the outcome, or could have given Mrs. Chaustowich a stronger win margin.

Such as the tenor of school board elections—that the only clearcut message we get is one of voter apathy.

Mrs. Chaustowich comes to the school board with an excellent background, fresh from months of service on the Citizens' Advisory Committee of the school district.

These citizens were given the task of studying the school system in depth, so Mrs. Chaustowich is as well-prepared as any new trustee could be.

The citizens' committee was also charged with making a recommendation on needed improvements in the district, and will do so at a June 22 meeting with the school board.

A discussion not unrelated to this week's voting turnout was held at the committee's last meeting.

Were the committee members picked to represent a cross-section of the voters? If so, could a building program they agreed on be assumed to be one voters would accept?

They knew that in the process of serving on the committee they had become better educated about the needs of the system.

Did the school board want them to recommend the program they most wanted? Or the one they felt stood the best chance to be accepted at the polls?

It's the age-old dilemma of those elected or appointed to represent the people. Should they simply reflect public opinion or be leaders?

The committee decided to give the school board a list of programs with their priorities designated. The board can make the political decisions.

As one committee member commented, if the board wanted the committee to come up with a program voters would accept, the committee should have spent its time studying the voters rather than the schools.

Someone should do that — tentatively.

Artrain supporters receive praise

To the editor:

The Artrain has come and gone for a second time, and the most common question asked is, "Was Artrain a success?"

Yes, Artrain was a success. Though the attendance was lower than last time, the Artrain was a very successful project.

One of the most successful aspects of Artrain was the cooperation and the attitude of those people who participated. It would be difficult to thank all of those individuals and business who helped but you know we appreciate your help. I would like to give special thanks to Marc Alan and the Clarkston Mills for hosting that very special reception opening night.

I would like to relate to you one conversation I had with an Artrain staff member to explain why they thought their stay here a success. When the staff arrived they were not emotionally ready; this being the end of a long tour. After they met the guides, artists and local committee, whom they thought were just great, they hit their emotional high and wondered why they only got to stay in Clarkston for six days. Because of you, Artrain in Clarkston was a success.

One short word about money.

ciated. Thanks go to the following not listed in our program:

Conductors: Clarkston-Jaycettes Peek Builders, Mr. & Mrs. Frank Russell, Swanson and Associates, Fay Renchek,

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waters, American Legion Aux. #63, Country Greens, Oakland Adv. Inc., Earl Keim Realty, Fred Ritter, Ellen Duris and Clarkston Farm and Garden Club.

If any of you still wish to help out, we are about $200 from the break-even point and your donation will be well appreciated.

Joan M. Kopietz
Artrain General Chairperson

The Artrain Architecture Committee would like to express their appreciation to all those people who contributed to the success of our projects, especially all those who loaned their dollhouses for displays and the businesses that displayed them.

Mr. Larry Thibault's Clarkston High School students Chris Mills and Don Coppersmith provided us with wonderful blueprints of Greek Revival houses, and to them we owe a good deal.

Thanks also go to two other talented Clarkston students, Carla Ripley and Sue Ruelle, who drew beautiful pictures of old Clarkston for our walking tour booklet.

A very special thank you, personally, to Joan Kopietz, Jennifer Radcliff and Carol Balzarini who always "came to the rescue."

Sincerely,

Fitz's golf game swings

By Jim Sherman

The best thing about playing golf with Jim Fitzgerald is that he makes me look good.

His stance can be compared to an orangutan swinging on a vine. Just visualize this in a still picture, turned so the vine is headed down at an angle.

His swing is like the fellow said...I've seen better swings on a condemned playground.

The two of us were in a foursome including Vince Doyle and George Steinberger. Vince is best known to me for doing the statistics and color of WWJ radio's report of U of M football games.

George is a terribly successful insurance man. He lives off number 1 fairway at Wabeek Country Club in Bloomfield Hills.

George is also in charge of ticket sales for the J.P. McCarthy-Wabeek PAL invitation coming up June 20.

Wabeek itself is a real estate development of Chrysler Corp. It covers 800 acres and you get the idea that the golf course is being squeezed by condos and houses. It's a very rich area.

Condos go for $140,000 and up. Houses are higher.

Fitz and I asked each other several times, "Where do people get all the money?"

We were there Saturday with other media people as guests of the Police Athletic League (PAL). They want publicity—we wanted to play Wabeek.

The course was designed by Jack Nicklaus and Peter Dye. George told us Jack now wants his name removed as designer. Seems the membership removed too many sand traps and changed some terrain Jack didn't like.

It's a course of elevated greens, lush fairways, accurate yardage, and water. Number 17 is 520 narrow yards. The first 300 has a creek on the right, then it crosses the fairway and runs to the green on the left.

On the next hole (the last, thank goodness) the best way to get over the lake in front of the tee is by carrying your ball in your pocket. The shortest way is 150 yards of water.

Forty six pro golfers including Sandra Post, will be at Wabeek June 20. 23 teams tee off at 8:30, 23 at 1:15.

184 amateur golfers will pay $500 each to play 18 holes with a pro golfer. That sort of assures a lot of money for PAL. Add to that a gallery of 12 to 15,000 and you have around $110,000 for charity.

Not mentioned often, but worth seeing for some is the celebrity players. It's sort of down played except for President Ford and Joe Garagiola. However, many local pro athletes will be playing.

It all sounds like fun, and I'm sure this all sounds like a commercial.

She rides trail -- in Independence

By Carol Teegardin
Staff writer

When a cowboy rode his Appaloosa in the Old West, you can bet he never thought a woman would be blazing similar long-distance trails.

But Kathy Mayer of Independence Township will compete in trail competitions in seven states this summer. And, she said she plans to grab the bronze medallion, the highest award given by the National Appaloosa Association for riding 400 miles of trails successfully.

Memorial Day weekend Kathy entered NeeJee, her five-year-old registered Appaloosa, in a 31-mile trail competition in Kentucky and won a certificate of completion.

Kathy recently entered NeeJee in a 60-mile trail competition in East Sparta, Ohio.

Kathy completed and took sixth place in her weight division among 12 other horses in the competition.

Kathy, a 1972 graduate of Clarkston High School, has been showing horses and pleasure riding since the age of 10. She is a former member of the Oakland County 4-H Youth Program and is active with the Michigan Appaloosa Association.

"I spend most of my spare time readying horses for long distance trail competitions now," said Kathy. "Trail riding is one of the fastest growing equestrian sports in the country. I love it because you develop your skills in caring for a horse and you get to travel all over the country."

"Competitive trail riding is not a race," Kathy explained. "A horse is judged on how well they are conditioned and the rider is judged on how well he or she can handle their horse over a rough trail."

"Riding time is gauged by miles-per-hour. You get docked points if you come in too early, and you get docked points if you come in too late off a trail."

"I trained NeeJee for the trail competitions by running him 10 miles a day and 20 to 30 miles on the weekend. He looks thin, but he's really in peak condition," she added.

Kathy said when she bought NeeJee last March he could barely go forward. He wouldn't eat or drink anything. Now, she said, he is used to traveling for competitions and does well on the trail.

Kathy boards NeeJee and Shady, a seven-year-old Appaloosa, at a private stable in Independence Township. It costs her about $3,000 a year to keep the two horses.

"A lot of the money I spend is in traveling expenses," Kathy said. "It costs at least $30 to enter a long distance competition, and that doesn't include transporting the horse to and from the event."

Currently a receptionist at the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Department, Kathy jokingly said she works to support her horse riding habit.

"When I graduated from high school, I attended Oakland Community College. I wanted to become an executive secretary," said Kathy. "Now I've decided I'd like to work in training endurance horses, but it takes a lot of money and time."

"I'd really like to have my own horse training facility someday," she added. "That's my dream."

Kathy recently held a competitive trail riding clinic for 4-H Club members at the Cooperative Extension Service Office in the Oakland county Courthouse on Telegraph Road.

"The clinic bombed," said Kathy. "Only one person showed up, but I'm going to keep on with it. It will take time to get going."

Kathy said her goal in starting the clinic is to give area youths a background in learning how to care for and train a horse.

Kathy Mayer trains NeeJee, her seven year-old Appaloosa, for long-distance trail competitions.

Race of fit vs. unfit

by Jim Fitzgerald

Take a young woman who runs several miles every day. Race her against a young man who not only never runs, he walks sort of funny. Who will win, the Serbian Stallion or Physical Morality?

Peter Gavrilovich is the Serbian Stallion. The race was run on Belle Isle last Wednesday. I will tell you who won later. First, you should be told something about Physical Morality.

A few weeks ago, I wrote that it is dumb to run unless you are exiting a burning building. I questioned the marble count of those chic people in sweatsuits who run around in circles until they ache, and then tell everyone that running makes them feel good. The truth is they don't feel good until they stop running. I've felt good ever since I stopped hitting my nose with my fist.

Dr. Fred W. Stransky reacted strongly to my disparaging appraisal of people who run on purpose. He is director of the Exercise Physiology Laboratory at Oakland University. In a letter to the editor, Dr. Stransky wrote:

"After working a number of years in various preventive health programs at Oakland University, I have yet to meet someone like (Fitzgerald) who had such a blatant disregard for the importance of developing a 'physical morality.'"

I've always regarded morality as a cerebral concept. If I conformed to the rules of virtuous conduct and didn't mug my neighbor's wife, I was a moral person. This decision to be moral or immoral was a function of the brain, not the muscle, I thought.

But now Dr. Stransky says my shin bone can be as immoral as my mind. If my body doesn't run around the block six times every morning, it won't develop a physical morality. If my chin refuses to perform chin-ups, shame on my chin.

It was a coincidence that my body was stinging from Dr. Stransky's chastisement when Peter Gavrilovich decided to become the Serbian Stallion and engage Kathy Warbelow in a foot race. Ordinarily, for fear of boring my immoral knees, I ignore all talk about running. But the Gavrilovich-Warbelow match presented a fine opportunity to test the important question raised by Dr. Stransky.

That question is: Can a physically moral person get out of a burning building faster than a physically immoral person?

Both Warbelow and Gavrilovich are 29-year-old newspaper reporters. That ends the similarity.

Kathy runs many miles every week, without fail. She has won trophies for her endurance and huzzahs for her speed.

Peter hasn't run since he was a child. The most exercise he has gotten in recent years was conducting the Flake Off contest for his newspaper last winter. For several weeks he had to watch snow melt.

Although he's running, Gavrilovich agreed to the race for the classic reason-to prove the superiority of the male over the female, no matter what the circumstances. Despite his poor physical condition and his inexperience, he figured he could run 440 yards faster than any female, even such a physically moral runner as Kathy.

She disagreed strongly, and she had many supporters. By race time, most of the smart money was bet on Kathy. She was so confident she even refused to register an official protest when the Serbian Stallion's sneaky maner slipped him spiked shoes at the last minute.

It was a cinder track. Kathy was wearing ordinary running shoes and the spikes gave Peter better footing. But Kathy said he could wear whatever he wanted, and the race was begun.

It wasn't even close. The Serbian Stallion won easily, finishing almost 100 yards ahead of Physical Morality.

There was smug elation among the male spectators, but I didn't join in the celebrating. I don't care about the male-female competition. But I did take my physically immoral body home with renewed confidence.

In case of fire, there's a chance I could beat Dr. Stransky to the door. I'll wear my golf shoes.

Progress continues on senior center

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Four projects must be completed before the new senior citizens' center on Clarkston-Orion Road next to Clintonwood Park is ready to open.

Gravel and lighting for the parking lot and widening the existing road, moving the garage and splitting it for a storage and concession facility at Clintonwood Park, a new well and deck construction are the four areas of concern.

The Independence Township Board gave Timothy Doyle, park and recreation director, approval to take bids on projects as soon as specifications are ready.

An advertisement for deck construction bids was answered by one company, so the board rejected the bid and instructed Doyle to readvertise.

Community Development Act (CDA) federal funds will be used to pay for the deck. The federal funds may not be used if only one bid is received.

The deck bid was for $12,680, a figure Doyle said was too high.

The well at the center is less than 75 feet from the septic field, so it must be moved, Doyle said.

One estimate for drilling a new well was $1,700 based on a 50 foot well, he said, which is the depth of the adjacent park's well.

Moving the garage would cost about $2,200, he said, and a new structure would cost around $5,000.

The projected opening date of the senior center in mid-August still stands, Doyle said.

"Right now we have a nice facility there, but it's all walls and floors," he said. "We'll formulate our plan of attack to furnish it at a later date."

No competition for Walls in Springfield election

Fourteen nominating petitions were filed for 10 Springfield Township offices last week with competition only for positions of treasurer, park commissioner and library board.

Republican incumbent Collin Walls, 8055 Marquoit, will be on the ballot with no opposition for the office of supervisor.

Incumbent J. Calvin Walters, 7225 Ormond, is running again on the Republican ticket for township clerk.

The upcoming primary election in Springfield is Aug. 8.

Candidates vying for the treasurer's position are Democommissioner: Stephen D. Dice, 7274 Ormond, Davisburg and Charles M. Oaks, 332 Broadway.

Republican Charles W. Mallett has filed for the two-year unexpired park commission position. Two Democrats have filed for a six-year term on the library board: Susan L. Adams, 6580 Bridge Lake and Ralph O'Reilly, 9910 Davisburg.

Republican Mary L. Watson, 13450 Rattalee Lake, has filed for a two-year position on the library board.

The one candidate for constable position is Republican Charles A. Ball, 8974 Patrick. Two Republican candidates seek the six-year position of park

Springfield ballot has two queries

In addition to choosing candidates to run for office, Springfield Township voters who go to the polls for the Aug. 8 primary election will be faced with two questions.

On the ballot, voters will be asked whether they want to add two more trustees to the township board. If voters approve the proposition, two additional trustees will be elected in 1980 to increase the present five-member township board to seven. The board now consists of supervisor, clerk, treasurer and two trustees.

In an opinion-only poll, Springfield Township voters will also be asked whether interstate highway M-275 should be built along the original route designed to connect I-96 and I-75 by a north-south route running through Novi, Commerce, White Lake and Springfield townships.

M-275 was voted down by the State Highway Commission last January due to opposition by residents in some communities. Since then, alternative plans to M-275 have been considered.

In several communities, including Springfield township, officials feel the original alignment of M-275 is least environmentally disrupting to all areas and they have put the question of building M-275 as originally designed before the public on the primary ballot.

Bright light over favorite sport

By Roger Hess

There is good news for local softball enthusiasts - the lights are on at Independence Township's Clintonwood Park. And they stay on, sometimes well past midnight.

The lights, which flashed on for the first time on June 5, have helped ease the scheduling crust of a rapidly expanding softball program. According to Timothy

Doyle, park and recreation director, there are 46 teams playing in Independence Township's softball leagues this year as compared with 18 last season.

"On Tuesdays and Thursdays

we have softball starting at 4 p.m. and we don't finish until 12:15 to 12:30 the next morning," said Doyle. "On Mondays and Wednesdays we go 'till around 11."

The cost to illuminate the two diamonds totaled $54,000. Half was paid for by federal funds from a land and water conservation grant, matched by federal funds from other sources.

"We knew we had to come up with a grant from someplace," said Doyle. "There just wasn't enough monies available locally."

In addition to the two lighted fields, Doyle expects another diamond at Clintonwood Park will be ready for play by July 1.

by David McNeven, Coach

One of the most impressive of all sports records is Wilt Chamberlain's 100 points in one basketball game, scored on March 2, 1962 when Wilt's Philadelphia Warriors beat the New York Knicks 169 to 147. No one has even come close to scoring 100 points since. In fact, in the 32 year history of the game, there have been seven instances of seventy points or better performances and Wilt had six of them. Never has the point total of two players, in one game, when combined, ever totaled 100. In that great season, Wilt averaged 50.4 points per game. That, too, is a record that is likely to stand for a long time.

If you like to participate in sports be sure you have the right equipment by coming to us at COACH'S CORNER, 31 S. Main, 625-8457. Tennis, paddle ball and hand ball equipment are available. Landfill 'not bad' could go on," he said. "It's just a real sad case of—if you turn your back long enough, you can do anything you please."

Tests were made in April, 1978, on wells in the surrounding area, Powell said.

"They all came through with flying colors," he said.

Regarding the two feet of clay, "I had a state engineer come out from the DNR (Department of Natural Resources)," he said. "The state said they had made a mistake," and that the landfill was complying with the restoration process.

"I do intend on putting up a fence," Powell said. "I've been working with my neighbors."

Harrison agreed that problems had eased between his subdivision and Powell.

"He does plan on closing that section of the landfill down," he said. "If he'd do that in the very near future, we'd have no complaints."

Powell said he had a letter from the Environmental Health Services of Oakland County written to the state DNR.

"It's very rare that the Powell landfill gets good publicity," he said. "I'm getting tired of comments on how bad an operation we're doing."

"I've seen a copy of the letter and I've never seen so much hogwash in my life," Buller said.

Tower directed Clerk Christopher Rose to read the letter.

The letter concluded with, "this office finds that this operation, although not always conforming to the strict letter of the law, does operate in good faith and the operators have been cooperative with this office."

Commenting on the debate between Powell and Buller, "We did not bring this before the board as a personal vendetta," Harrison said.

"We do not appreciate it being used as such against Mr. Powell," added Elyse Yakimowich, also a Chapel View Estates resident.

Animal officers get raises

Hourly wages for Independence Township's three animal control officers have been increased.

Effective April 1, the beginning of the fiscal year, the senior animal control officer will earn $5.65 an hour and the two other officers will earn $5.40 an hour.

"I don't feel the raise is justified for this position," said clerk Christopher Rose.

Rose voted no, the other four board members voted yes and the raise was approved at last week's township board meeting.

Village may get intersection help

By Carol Teegardin
Staff writer

The Clarkston Village Council may be able to save village taxpayers some money this year by using part of a proposed $10,000 community development grant to pay for the road widening at White Lake Road-Holcomb Street-Depot Road intersection.

Clarkston received notification from the Oakland County Community Development Program of the available funds this May.

"Last year the village was told by the community development program that we wouldn't receive any CD funds for 1977," said Fontie ApMadoc, village councilwoman.

"Now, 1977 funds are available retroactive as of March 1, 1978."

At Monday night's village council meeting, ApMadoc suggested some of the proposed $10,000 be used to pay Kieft Engineering, the village engineering firm, for its preliminary design work involving the White Lake-Holcomb-Depot intersection.

The plan, already in progress, calls for widening White Lake and Holcomb, both county roads, from 21 feet to 26 feet for approximately 150 feet in each direction.

The grade of Depot Road will be raised as it approaches the intersection, resolving the blind intersection problem.

Construction plans for the road improvement have been approved by the Oakland County Road Commission. The widening project is part of the Reid, Cool and Mischalski plan to handle some of the extra traffic expected from the Clarkston Mills shopping center on Washington Street.

Estimated at a total of $33,000, cost for the road-widening project was to be divided evenly between Oakland County Road Commission, Marc Alan, developer of Clarkston Mills and the village.

If approved, the community development funds will be used to cover engineering and management costs for the village's part of that pledge. Any remaining monies will have to be used in a related area.

"We can't use CD funds to pay for work, or planning already done on roads in the village or for other than specified projects," said ApMadoc, who is in charge of legislative and planning for Clarkston Village.

"Receiving the CD money is an opportunity to have the federal government help fund something we are already paying for," said Keith Hallman, Clarkston Village president. "If we can save part of the $11,000 in our general fund money we originally pledged to use for the road widening, it would be foolish not to do it."

The Community Development Act, passed in 1974, is geared to benefit low and middle income areas in housing and related activities. Before any funds are granted, projects must be amended for approval by Oakland County and by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in Washington for eligibility.

ApMadoc said she will present Kieft Engineering's contract to the Oakland County Community Development office this week.

"Engineering work on the widening at Holcomb-White Lake and Depot will go on regardless of approval for CD funds or not," said Hallman.

Custodians, school board agree

The Clarkston Schools' custodians and the board of education have agreed to a wage and working conditions package arrived at in negotiations with a state mediator.

The raises in the two-year contract, retroactive to July 1, 1977, are 21 cents an hour for the first year and 42 cents an hour in 1978-79.

Members of the Clarkston Custodial Association had previously rejected three tentative agreements before affiliating with the Michigan Educational Associates Organization.

During mediation, the school board's last offer was sweetened with an agreement to pay time-and-a-half overtime pay for Saturdays worked and double time for Sundays.

New benefits in the contract, accepted by the board Monday night, include an increase in life insurance from $10,000 to $15,000, the addition of New Year's Eve day as a paid holiday and provision for additional vacation days.

Starting with the 16th year of employment, custodians will get an additional vacation day a year up to a maximum of 20.

'Pine Knobland' adventures

Pine Knob concert-goers stream past Tower.

The concert ends and Tower directs the stream of cars home.

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Curiouser and curiouser! That was me--the more I heard about Independence Township police reserve officers' adventures in Pine Knobland, the more I wanted to see for myself.

So one sunshiny afternoon, I asked Charles Kimbel, acting director of township police services and command officer for the Pine Knob detail, if I could spend an evening taking a peak at the operation from their eyes.

Affirmative. And the Tom Jones concert scheduled that evening promised to be relatively calm.

The day arrived. It drizzled and the temperature dropped.

"Gad," I thought, considered backing out and then went home from work, threw on warm clothes, wrapped the camera around my neck and was off.

The crew of seven were in uniform and checking equipment in the police cars at the station next to Independence Township Hall.

Kimbel told me I was riding with Beth Tower, patrol officer, and John Aiken, reserve patrolman.

I climbed into the back seat of the police car and the adventure started.

I started asking questions. Tower has worked for Independence Township police services four years and is now secretary in charge of most of the office personnel.

Her training as patrol officer included 280 hours of classes approved by the Michigan Law Enforcement Officers' Training Council.

Aiken works for Bloomfield Township.

His training for reserve work consisted of a 100-hour course approved by the Michigan Police Reserve Training Council.

We arrived at Pine Knob's main entrance. It was 6:45.

The police car was placed in a turning lane, lights flashing and blinking.

Tower and Aiken positioned themselves to direct traffic into the two lanes leading into the music theater.

Whistles in their mouths, they started the routine of precise hand and arm motions.

I took photos, contemplated litter along the side of the road, leaned against a telephone pole and observed auto passengers observing me.

Miraculously, the unending stream of cars stopped a little over an hour later.

We got back in the police car.

As we drove into Pine Knob and went up and down the rows of parked cars, I asked more questions.

"We have three cars patrolling the lot after the traffic clears," Tower said. "We really think it deters a lot."

Several cars had headlights left on. They checked a couple, but they were locked.

Aiken worked at Pine Knob last year, the first year township police services was contracted for traffic control.

Occasionally there's trouble with the crowd, but "normally they're pretty good," he said.

He talked about problems with gate crashers and asking them to leave.

"You try to be as nice as possible," he said, "but still try to keep law and order."

Her training recently completed, this is Tower's third night on the job.

Duplex in village her haven

Country Living

Pat is a teacher who works year-round at her job. During the school year she teaches special education at Sashabaw Junior High School. In the summers she is active with SCAMP, an outdoor, recreational camp for handicapped children.

Photos by Carol Teegardin

Recently divorced, Pat said she feels her life is just beginning as a single woman.

By Carol Teegardin
Staff writer

When Pat Loveless moved into her duplex apartment on Main Street in Clarkston, she said it was in "shambles." Now, with a little help from her friends, it's a single woman's haven, and she loves it.

"I decided to move to Clarkston last December because I wanted to be closer to work," said Pat, formerly of Waterford. She has been a teacher in the Clarkston School District for six years.

"I thought it would be nice living in the Village of Clarkston but didn't realize what I was letting myself in for when I rented out this duplex," she said. "When I opened the front door and looked at the shape this place was in, I immediately called in a few friends to lend a hand in redecorating."

It took some work, but Pat now has a carpeted study, brightly painted walls, new flooring in her kitchen and bountiful plants hanging from every available corner.

"I have a new roommate too," Pat added. "She moved in last week."

Though Pat, 27, likes to spend time in her new home antiquing and working in her garden, she doesn't have much of an opportunity to do it. Her work with handicapped and emotionally impaired children demands hours of planning even on her "off-school hours."

"A lot of people think teachers work nine months a year, but that isn't the case with me" said Pat. "Because I work with kids who don't adapt to a traditional classroom atmosphere, I have to spend a lot of time planning special projects that will stimulate each child's development."

"In the summers, Pat is active with SCAMP, an outdoor recreational program for handicapped children directed by Clarkston School District's Special Services Department.

Pat recently completed work on a slide presentation about handicapped children she will show to groups and organizations in the area.

"One of the biggest problems we find in special education is discovering those children who need individual care," she said. "People think handicapped means being in a wheelchair, but there are all kinds of problems."

In her work, Pat said she uses "love" as the main teaching method.

"I have a hugging class," she

Pat Loveless relaxes outside her duplex apartment on Main Street. She says living in town has its advantages and disadvantages. "I feel pretty visible living right on Main Street, yet I love being this close to downtown Clarkston."

said. Pat teaches the pre-school program at Sashabaw Junior High School and has junior high students help in some of the projects.

"I became interested in working with handicapped children because of my brother Matt who is a cerebral palsy victim," said Pat. "Matt, 14, needs total care. He's unable to dress and feed himself. He can't talk, but is able to communicate."

"Being successful at helping Matt adjust to his situation made me want to help other children," said Pat. "When I went to college I knew there was no other direction that I wanted to go." Pat majored in special education at Michigan State University.

Now divorced, Pat was married for five years after completing college.

Although she went through a "period of depression after the divorce," she said she now feels good about her decision to be single.

"I enjoy single life. I love the freedom to do what I want when I want. And I like having time to myself," said Pat. "I'm involved in my career and that helped when my husband and I separated."

"I was disappointed when the marriage fell apart," said Pat. "But rather than think of the divorce as an end to something, I considered it the beginning of a new lifestyle."

"My ex-husband and I are good friends - we still get along," she added.

Pat said she feels stronger now after her divorce. She said she believes she looks at the institution of marriage more realistically now than she did when she was younger.

"When I got married I thought it would last forever," said Pat. "It just didn't work out that way."

Pat isn't ready to commit herself to another marriage for awhile, but she is involved in a steady relationship with a man she considers a "super person."

"Though I don't want to be married, it's nice to have someone who cares and to care about. If there isn't someone to talk to at the end of the work day, life isn't worth living."

Pat said she is happy in Clarkston, but may move to another community or state when she is done with school.

"I'm working on a master's degree in special education at MSU," she said. "When I'm done I'd like to go to another community or state where there is no special ed. program and set one up...that's a long range dream."

In the meantime, Pat likes her role as a teacher in the Clarkston community.

Cancer is often curable.

The fear of cancer is often fatal.

If you're afraid of cancer...you're not alone. But some people are so afraid that they won't go to the doctor when they suspect something's wrong.

They're afraid the doctor might "find something." This kind of fear can prevent them from discovering cancer in the early stages when it is most often curable.

These people run the risk of letting cancer scare them to death.

Pine Knob reserve assignment

"The looks I get," she said. "I'm not used to it. I just think they're surprised to see a woman out there, especially directing traffic."

She could have fooled me. She had "pro" written all over her as she did her job.

The thick leather belts officers wear hold a radio, hand cuffs, a revolver and extra bullets and weigh about eight pounds.

The guns are loaded. "I'd hate to have to draw it," Aiken said. "It would have to be a life-or-death situation."

Kimbel had told me his reserve crew doesn't work just for money, but they enjoy the job.

All the reserves have fulltime jobs except for one who's a college student.

They also work at parades, at school events and during emergencies like the blizzard last winter.

For the Pine Knob contract, hourly wages are $10.25 for the command officer (Kimbel) $7.40 for patrol officers and $5.25 for reserve officers.

"I don't think any of it is the money," Tower said. "I want the experience."

"I can use the money, but I'd say 75 percent of it isn't for the money," Aiken said. "There's not much glory in this job."

"I enjoy people. I enjoy working with the other officers in the reserves," he continued. "It's a community service."

They will probably work a minimum of three nights a week up to five or six nights.

"At the end of the season, everybody gets pretty tired of it," Aiken said. "It gets to be a drag; you get exhausted, worn-out."

Tower said she hasn't been on the job long enough to have a favorite part.

Aiken said he enjoys the two hours between directing traffic.

"It's more police-related work--a little bit of excitement," he said. "You're dealing right with the person, whereas if you're out there, you're dealing with cars."

"Out there" is where we went after a short trip on foot to watch a bit of Tom Jones' concert and have some pop.

Tower and Aiken split up.

Her radio placed in the rack, Tower discusses the night's events.

Back at the police station, Aiken checks to see when he's scheduled for Pine Knob duty again.

Aiken joined two other officers at the main gate.

Tower was assigned to the back exit at Pine Knob and Clarkston-Orion roads. I went with her.

She parked the patrol car, lights and blinkers flashing, so only one exit lane was open.

A "right turn only" sign was placed against barrels with flashing lights.

Armed with glowing flash lights and her whistle, she stood in the middle of Clarkston-Orion Road.

She told me about people throwing beer cans at her and arguing about turning right, but I wasn't prepared for the benign stream that entered to have developed nasty symptoms.

About half of the first drivers out put up an argument.

After struggling for lead positions, they refused to be forced into turning right.

A few just said, "I'm turning left," and skimmed past.

Some turned right and made U-turns or turned around in the driveway about one-half mile down the road until it was blocked with barrels placed by Pine Knob rangers.

And as Tower turned occasionally to stop traffic on the main road to let cars out of Pine Knob, several came close to hitting her as they stubbornly turned left.

Some people insisted they lived two blocks away and had to turn left.

They were stumped when asked to produce the Pine Knob resident sticker the theater provides for locals, but one man offered to hold up traffic and produce his driver's license.

I found my spot leaning against the patrol car near the engine. The temperature had dropped to the lower 40s and it was warm there.

"Love your blue lights, honey," jeered one woman to me as she drove past.

Another argued with me that she couldn't get back home by turning right. I explained how.

Two I-75 signs with arrows pointed the way home, but that wasn't enough for some.

Tower said, "You have to turn right," a lot and told people I-75 was three miles away.

And most people were okay--a few even waved to her; one said, "Good night."

After the traffic cleared, I asked her why people had to turn right.

She explained the problems when people go through two heavy traffic areas--her exit and then past the main gate.

Back to the police car, we drove through the parking lot looking for people with problems.

The cars with headlights on all evening were gone. Their batteries must have been strong.

We picked up Aiken at the main gate and finally headed back to Clarkston.

One quick stop for a lost license plate someone had taped to a sign and we were at the station.

It was almost midnight.

An easy night, they said, no accidents (incredible) and light traffic, only about 2,500 cars.

They checked in, changed to street clothes and put their equipment away.

I stepped back through my looking glass and went home.

It's midnight. The assignment completed, Tower heads for home.

'A diesel mechanic? You're kidding!'

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Debra Freitag can't cook or sew, so she became a diesel mechanic.

Those aren't, of course, the only reasons, but they're the first two she mentions.

Debra, 20, is the oldest of seven children. She joined the Army last December.

She was home on leave last week, visiting her parents and family on Transparent Court in Independence Township, before leaving for her first assignment as a diesel mechanic at Fort Ord, Calif.

"I was very unsettled and I wanted to travel," she says about joining the Army.

When she took the aptitude tests, "everybody has to take" her two highest scores were in mechanics and electronics.

"So I thought I'd take the diesel mechanics job," she explains. "They said a lot of cars are going to come into diesel and it would be a good thing to learn."

The first 7 weeks of her Army career were spent in basic training in Alabama.

"I did everything the men did, she says, including qualifying with an M-16 rifle, throwing grenades and digging fox holes.

The next six weeks she spent at Fort Leonard Wood, MO training to be a diesel mechanic.

The course was self-paced with a limit of six weeks to complete.

"I finished it in three and one-half weeks; it's not that hard," she says.

And she graduated second highest out of the 40 men and six women in her class.

Handling wrenches ranging in size from two inches to six feet tall is part of the job.

Debra, who is 5 feet, 3 inches tall and weighs 130 pounds, says people are surprised when they discover her career.

"They probably expect a great big, husky person," she says.

"I've met a couple of truck drivers and they said, 'You're kidding. You're a diesel mechanic?"

The engines she works on are the size found in 18-wheeler trucks.

"They're huge and they're heavy," she says.

About her Army experience so far, "I think everybody should get into it," she says.

"It's changed my self-discipline, my ways of thinking," she says. "I'm just a different person now--more mature and more outspoken."

And the Army is making her wish to travel come true, although she's a little worried about moving so far from home.

"Fort Ord is a big place," she says. "I guess after I get moved around, I'll get used to it."

Private Debra Freitag in uniform.

Real Estate HAPPENINGS

by Bob & Marvel White

An investment in land is an investment in both today and tomorrow. It must fill your immediate needs, as well as be able to provide for future needs to your satisfaction. If you are buying land to build on, or buying land where there already is a house you will move into, make sure the area you buy in has what you want. Investigate schools if you have children, town or city politics or policies, zoning, recreational facilities, transportation facilities, growth potential, neighborhood trends, etc. The house you buy to live in involves more than just a building and the land—it involves your whole life, check it out.

Another good point to remember is that when the time comes to sell your home, the professionals at BOB WHITE REAL ESTATE, 5856 S. Main St., right next to the new Clarkston Post Office, 625-5821 are at your service. We offer extensive exposure to qualified potential buyers for a prompt sale. Hours: 9-9 Mon.-Thur.; 9-6 Fri., Sat.; 11-5 Sun.

HELPFUL HINT: Check references before hiring a contractor to build for you.

Private road gets conditional approval

Conditional approval for a proposed private road in Independence Township's northeast quarter has been granted by the township board.

Sheldon Fuller of Sheldon Real Estate, Independence Township, brought the request before the board at last week's meeting.

He represented Leonard Grossman, president of Leonard Mortgage Company, Royal Oak, and owner of the land. Grossman is a West Bloomfield resident.

The parcel, located on Shapie road between Hadley and Perry Lake roads, would be broken into four lots measuring 3.77 acres, 3.27 acres and two lots of 6.22 acres.

The road request was for a cul-de-sac.

The lot split committee had denied the request because of questions on procedure and policy, said Timothy Palulian, director of the township building and planning department.

He requested that the township board set guidelines on when to accept private road proposals.

"This is one of many requests coming in for additional roads," Palulian said. "It's getting to be a quandry for us as to when a road request should be accepted and when it shouldn't."

"Do we split the property to put the road there, or does the road have to be there in the beginning?" he asked.

Palulian said a decision overriding the denial by the lot split committee would essentially give conditional approval for the entire package if the request is granted by the zoning board of appeals.

Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower said the board's function is to pass the request to the appeal board if the board has no objection to the private road construction.

"But you are giving conditional approval," Palulian said, adding that if approval is given for the road, then the acreage split will also be granted.

"If everything is set so these roads are taken care of, then what objection does the township board have?" asked Fuller.

"Number one is the creation of another private road, and number two is the creation of nonconforming lots," said Trustee Frederick Ritter, who is also a member of the board of appeals.

He then mentioned concern with maintenance "25 years down the road" when the property may have been sold several times and the original agreement forgotten.

"The thing we have to do here tonight is grant or deny the request to go to the zoning board of appeals," Ritter said.

Conditional approval was granted on a 3-2 vote. Tower, Treasurer Elizabeth Hallman and Ritter voted yes. Clerk Christopher Rose and Trustee Jerry Powell voted no.

Coping with Kids

What's wrong with kids?

By Jim and Ellen Windell

Parents almost every day ask us if we know what has happened to today's kids. They wonder why they have become so disrespectful to others and to property. Kids of all ages, however, seem to have a similar complaint about their parents and many adults in general.

"They treat us like dogs," is the way one teenager put it, referring to the way she and her friends have been handled by grownups. Another adolescent girl related an incident which was offered in partial explanation of her deep angry feelings.

She and her parents were in a fast food restaurant when she decided to throw away the few remaining French fries she had left, which she considered to be overdone and inedible.

"I'm going to throw these out," she said, gathering up her scraps and those of her parents also. Her father snapped, "Sit down and eat them." Cindy reluctantly sat down but was grumbling something like, "God, but they really taste terrible."

With the use of the word God and the under-the-breath mumbling, her father reached over and slapped her with the result that Cindy stalked out of the restaurant in tears.

This incident points out what many teens complain about, "We never get a real choice; it always has to be their way."

Of course, adolescents are not always innocent victims of attacks on their self esteem. However, it might be a good rule of thumb that if you have a disrespectful teenager you should look at yourself to find out how you have been disrespectful, too.

Respect means an awareness of the young person as a distinct and unique individual capable of decision making and with worthwhile feelings and opinions.

Parents typically yell, nag, punish, remind, coax, coerce and berate teens, talking to them rather than with them. "Talking to" simply means that you believe him to be inferior. Showing respect involves taking his or her feelings into consideration and allowing him or her to take an active part in a decision.

When teens act in an angry way that may be interpreted as disrespect, no tolerance for anger or upset may be given, although we as parents expect that our kids excuse us as human when we have a "bad day" or react disrespectfully to them out of frustration.

It can be said based on our experience that when teens are shown respect they tend to be respectful and cooperative.

DOING BUSINESS

by Ellen Duris

Prologue To Summer Reading

Owner Helen Soldenski is a book lover herself.

It has been said, "He that loveth a book will never want a faithful friend, a wholesome counselor, a cheerful companion and an efficient comforter."

On June 1, Helen Soldenski from Warren opened her new business, the Creative Bookstore, located in the Harvard Plaza in Waterford Township.

By her efforts and love of literature, Helen, at 23, has enriched the community by opening her world of books.

"I love to read," said Helen "and this area really needed a bookstore." The Harvard Plaza is a prime location with its ample parking and ease of accessibility from Dixie highway to other stores.

Helen's enthusiasm is reflected in the interior decor of the bookstore, brightly painted in greens and yellows.

She has done most of the work herself, painting and carpeting, and commissioned a carpenter to design and build her bookshelves.

"The store will eventually have wall-to-wall, floor-to-ceiling bookshelves stocked with everything from A to Z," said Helen.

Currently, the Creative Bookstore has in stock a multitude of paperbacks, featuring the latest bestseller The Thorn Birds, by Colleen McCullough.

The bookstore is receiving new shipments daily of a wide variety of hardcovers, paperbacks and reference materials, etc.

"It will take me a little while before I have my stock and selection as complete as I would like it to be, but for the time being, there is quite a large selection to browse through."

Throughout the month of June, she has market 20% off on all books during the grand opening special.

For the magazine lover, the Creative Bookstore features the widest selection of magazines in the area, now 10% off during the June grand opening special.

For children, Helen has a wide variety of children's literature and craft books in stock right now and plans to expand it even more.

She plans to arrange a "kiddie corner," complete with little chairs and a table, surrounded by hand painted animal wall murals.

"Having a bookstore is very exciting," said Helen, "You're surrounded by a wealth of knowledge and variety--each day is a learning experience."

If there happens to be a particular book you want, Helen will special order it for you.

Another feature at the Creative Bookstore is the book club. Anyone is invited to join, membership is free and entitles you to a 10% discount on your purchases. Members will be on mailing list for announcements and book specials.

The poet Wallace Stephens once said, "Literature is the better part of life...provided life is the better part of literature."

Find it at the Creative Bookstore.

Essence of It, Elston's Hair Studio and The Village Gallery is the real estate firm of Durbin, Co., which has just opened an office at that address.

Everyone is invited to enjoy cake, and the talents of a mime group from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.
