Taking a 4-H break

Exhausted parents of a 4-Her, Kathy and Tom Middleton of Brandon Township stretch out on a makeshift couch of hay bales at the Oakland County 4-H Fair in Davisburg last week. Their daughter Amy had entries in the dairy cow competition. Son Ted, atop the hay, remained unconcerned about the day's excitement. The annual fair, held from July 31 to Aug. 5, showcased the accomplishments of 4-H members in more than 6,300 separate exhibits in 128 areas of pursuit.

Applegate, Ritter face off

In a heavy turnout for a primary election, Independence Township voters chose treasurer candidates Michael Applegate on the Republican ticket and Frederick Ritter on the Democratic side.

Applegate, 6340 Middle Lake, received 545 votes.

There were two other candidates on the Republican ticket. Norma J. Lussier received 468 votes and George Trapp received 225.

"I'll do the best I can and I appreciate all the support that the people gave me—I love it and I appreciate it," Applegate said.

Ritter, 6674 Dixie Highway, who presently serves on the township board as a trustee, received 555 votes.

His opponent on the Democratic ballot, Ivaleen (Ivy) Cosma, received 381 votes.

"I'm delighted with the margin of my victory," Ritter said. "I'm looking forward to success in November and the opportunity to continue to serve on the board."

Votes cast for primary candidates without opposition within their parties were as follows:

For supervisor, incumbent Floyd (Whitey) Tower, a Democrat, received 750 votes and Carolyn Place, a Republican, received 900 votes.

For clerk, incumbent Christopher Rose, a Democrat, received 682 votes and George Anderson, a Republican, received 836 votes.

There are 10,500 registered voters in the township. Of that number, 2,732 voted in the election.

"I'm pleased that we had a heavier turn-out in the primary election than we've ever had before," said Rose, "but it's disappointing that only 25 percent of the voters did choose the candidates for the November election."

Library board quits in protest

By Pat Braunagel
Associate Editor

The seven citizens on the Independence Township Library Advisory Board called it quits last week.

They tendered a joint resignation Aug. 3, eight days after the township board had extended the probation of librarian Sushil Lahiri until next spring.

"The way in which the whole thing was handled was more of a slap in the face to us than a reprimand to him," said Jean Bray, one of the advisory board members who gathered for a press conference. "I personally think the township board and librarian will be relieved at our resignation."

Township Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower had given Lahiri a 90-day notice of termination April 4, after the township board had considered complaints made against the librarian by the library advisory board earlier this year.

In a 3-2 vote July 26, the township board extended the moratorium on Lahiri's termination until April 1, 1979. No citizen members of the advisory board attended the 9 a.m. special session of the township board. They said last week none of them was notified of the meeting.

Township Treasurer Betty Hallman, who has been on the advisory panel, was joined by Trustee Frederick Ritter in voting against the extension.

Clerk Christopher Rose, who had been listed by the library advisory board as one of its members, but denied that he held that status officially, voted for the extension, with Tower and Trustee Jerry Powell.

Advisory board members indicated last week that they felt they had been betrayed, both by Rose and by Tower.

"Whitey told me he would meet with us before a decision was made," said Alex Stewart, chairman of the library advisory board.

"We thought Chris was pretty much in line with us," Mrs. Bray said.

Advisory board member Jette Kunse commented, "We're the ones that seem to be reprimanded."

"We could have lived with any decision if they had just consulted with us," said Marty Johnston, another member of the advisory board.

Complaints by the advisory board about the librarian span more than one township administration, the citizens noted in their prepared statement.

"For years, the township board has failed to act upon the recommendations made to improve library service (i.e. discuss the situation with the librarian and warn him of problems) and the librarian has failed to act," the statement reads.

"Suggestions for improvements and programs for expansion and enhancement of library service have long been ignored by the librarian because the advisory board had no power of enforcement."

Advisory board member Mary Jane Chaustowich said specific complaints by the group date back a year and a half.

"We assumed a year ago last April that he had been warned," she said. "Instead, he (Lahiri) got a raise."

She and her fellow board members cited instances in which "we have been doing his work for him."

At least three of the citizens were on the advisory board when Lahiri was hired seven years ago. They had interviewed Lahiri and recommended his employment, Stewart noted.

"I think lot of us feel very ambivalent about this action,"

Mrs. Chaustowich said. "We'd like to stay and fight but they have destroyed our credibility."

Other advisory board members who signed the joint resignation were Mary Ellen Hanson and Ralph Thayer.

The statement which the seven had prepared following a meeting a week earlier said, "Since the advisory board has no stated policy or powers and because it is obvious we are advisory in name but not in actuality, it is reasonable to assume we are superfluous."

"It is on the basis of not being able to fulfill any useful function, we have placed our resignation before the township board."

Stewart said he had hand-delivered the resignation to Rose at the township hall that morning.

"I said, 'You're probably expecting it,'" Stewart reported. "Chris just kind of nodded."

'Won't use generator,' Alan says

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

The owner of the Clarkston Mills has said he will not run a generator in the shopping center on millstream water power.

Marc Alan, owner and developer of the Clarkston Mills, made the statement Monday after learning that the village council and village residents oppose his using the generator.

The issue was made public when a petition signed by 41 Clarkston taxpayers was discussed at a July 31 village council meeting.

At that meeting, James Arnold, 6640 Laurelton, Independence Township, told the council that a Clarkston Mills workman had said Alan planned to generate electricity for parking lot lights with a dynamo Henry Ford had installed in Clarkston Mills shortly after the turn of the century.

Water drawn off the Mill Pond would have powered the generator.

The council opposed the use of the generator because sluicing could destroy streams flowing from the Mill Pond.

A reserve of Mill Pond water is needed to spill over a second dam, located on the east side of the Mill Pond.

This reserve fills a stream flowing between the pond and Parke Lake. Another stream, coursing between Parke and Cemetery Lakes, is fed by Parke Lake and the reserve waters from the Mill Pond.

Alan said he wants to assure

Clarkston residents that Clarkston Mills won't operate the generator.

"We are not generating any electricity for the parking lot," he said. "The generator is there only as a visual artifact, nothing else.

"We are buying all our electricity from Detroit Edison," Alan continued. "The equipment is so obsolete that it would cost a fortune to generate power."

Water levels in the Mill Pond have been rising since Sunday.

Earlier this weekend, however, water was diverted from the Mill Pond into a stream which flows southward under the Clarkston Mills toward Depot Road.

An unidentified person or persons opened the gates on a spillway at the pond's south end to divert the water. Spokesmen for Clarkston Mills deny that anyone connected with the shopping center was involved.

The open gates were discovered Sunday around noon when Clarkston Village Councilman James Weber was inspecting the spillway with Carl Hobday, 169 N. Holcomb.

The two men had been checking the water levels in the stream flowing from beneath Clarkston Mills.

Weber said he noticed the stream was flowing well. When Hobday and he inspected the spillway, they heard the sound of running water and saw that someone had opened the spillway gates.

Vandals had picked a lock on the valve which sets the spillway gates at a closed position, Weber said.

The gates had been opened, freeing water to flow from the Mill Pond through the Clarkston Mills spillway and into the Independence trustee race narrows

Independence Township trustee candidates, seeking three open offices in November, are Republicans Rudy Lozano, Michael Thayer and William Vandermark and Democrats Jean Benzing, Ron Herron and Robert Rowland.

The top three vote-getters in each party in Tuesday's primary, will appear on the November ballot.

Two trustee positions will be added to the board as decided at the annual township meeting in April, increasing the number of trustees to four.

Jerry Powell, a Republican, will hold one of the trustee positions, because his term does not expire this year.

On the Democratic ticket, Herron of 6315 Maybee won the most votes with 472.

Also appearing on the November ballot will be Rowland of 5301 Heath, who received 432 votes, and Benzing, 5429 Williamson, with 424 votes.

Defeated on the Democratic ticket was Joseph Fabrizio, who received 366 votes.

The Republican contenders faced a much closer race with only 14 votes determining the third-place winner.

The highest number of votes, 623, were cast for Vandermark of 6594 Cherrylawn.

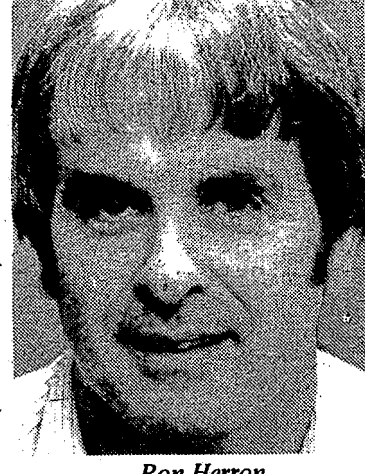

Lozano, 5419 Tamarack Park Lane, received 523 votes.

The third position was won by Thayer, 46 Orion Rd., with 387 votes.

Defeated in the primary were Carol Balzarini with 372 votes; Dale Stuart, 331; Michael Luchenbach, 281; Bruce Walker, 274; Robert Brown, 205; Harry Yoh, 143; and Elyse Yakimowich, 138.

For the first time in a years-long association with The Clarkston News, Lucky Fletcher stopped short of our doorstep with a complaint last Friday.

Instead, he chose to set up a one-man picket line in front of our building. Which does not mean our columns, ears or coffee-pot spigot have been closed to him.

We hope to hear more from him, but we're not going to try to have him arrested as he asked us to.

Our apologies have been offered to Springfield Township Supervisor Collin W. Walls, a Republican who we mistakenly identified as belonging to the other party last week.

In our post-discovery-of-the-error telephone conversation with him, Walls was gracious. The candidate for re-election had no challengers in either party.

Question: Does an employee who was asked to come to work an hour early by his/her boss qualify for an hour of overtime pay if he/she goes home sick at noon?

Answer: That's a good question. After spending over 36 hours making the decision, the Independence Township Board paid the overtime that totaled $7.60. The final vote was 3-2 with Tower, Powell and Ritter voting yes and Rose and Hallman voting no.

"If our time is worth anything, we've spent well over $300," commented Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower.

Caught in a real-life "Catch 22," Independence Township has lost about 12 positions paid with Comprehensive Employee Training Act (CETA) funds.

A freeze on rehiring when a CETA-paid employee quit forced the township to leave the positions unfilled.

"We haven't filled them because we have not hired and because we have not hired, they're taking the positions away," said Clerk Christopher Rose.

"The 12 employees that we haven't replaced runs upwards of $140,000," said Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower.

Did you lose your timepiece in the village parking lot? Someone's watch—still ticking—was found Saturday in the parking lot and is now awaiting its owner at The Clarkston News.

If it's yours, stop by or call us at 625-3370.

A matinee alert has been issued for four days by Pine Knob community relations director George White.

He suggested that local motorists might want to avoid Sashabaw Road this afternoon, when a Neil Diamond matinee was scheduled, and Saturday and Sunday, when the Beach Boys are to perform matinees. Another afternoon show is set for Aug. 22 by Linda Ronstadt.

Springfield won't expand township board

A majority of Springfield Township voters in Tuesday's election do not want the township board expanded from five to seven members.

They defeated the local proposition 357-291.

Voter turnout was light in a local primary election in which there were just two contests.

A 2-1 margin of township voters favored the construction of a road similar to the defunct plans for M-275. Of 659 advisory ballots cast, 443 supported the construction of a north-south limited access road built with federal and state monies approximately along the planned alignment of M-275, while 216 opposed the idea.

Marjorie Kirk, with 139 votes, edged past Mary Jean Cox, 134, by a five-vote margin to win the Democratic nomination for Springfield Township treasurer.

Kirk will oppose incumbent Treasurer Patricia L. Kramer, a Republican who received 270 votes.

Two Democrats vied for a township trustee nomination. Incumbent Glen Vermilye won with 169 votes to Mark R. Krajniak's 87.

Running unopposed were incumbent Township Supervisor Collin W. Walls, Republican, 291 votes; incumbent Clerk J. Calvin Walters, Republican, 260 votes, and incumbent Constable Charles A. Ball, Republican, 241 votes.

In the Springfield park commission race unopposed for a two-year term was Charles W. Mallet, Republican, 199 votes, and two bidders for two six-year terms, incumbent Stephen D. Dice, Republican, 205 votes and Charles M. Oaks, Republican, 213 votes.

County commissioner primary results

Incumbent District 1 Oakland County Commissioner Richard Wilcox kept a 300-vote margin between himself and his nearest opponent to once again win the Republican nomination for the office.

Wilcox will face Democrat Lynn Charles Nelson in the November general election.

In District 2, Democrat David B. Youngquist will challenge incumbent Robert H. Gorsline, who was unopposed for the Republican nomination.

In District 3, the candidates are Democrat Paul A. Bailey and Republican Mathew J. Dunakiss, who are seeking the office vacated by Niles Olson.

Unofficial vote totals in the races are:

DISTRICT 1

Democrats: Robert J. Colfer Jr., 394, and Lynn Charles Nelson, 891.

Republicans: Jerry Edward Powell, 988; Lawrence N. VanRyn Jr., 430; Richard R. Wilcox, 1,295.

DISTRICT 2

Democrats: Carl R. Marsh, 775, David B. Youngquist, 1,156.

Republicans: Robert H. Gorsline, 2,380.

Democrats: Paul A. Bailey, 660; John L. Blake, 498; and Karl W. Randall, 433.

Republicans: Mathew J. Dunakiss, 552; Elaine Pantak, 539; Paul M. Scott, 234; and Jeffrey L. Spires, 285.

Bordine set back in tax break bid

BY Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

A Springfield Township businessman's bid for a 50 percent tax break was reluctantly turned down by the township board Aug. 2.

Bruce Bordine, general manager and co-owner of Bordine's Better Blooms in Rochester and Springfield Township, applied for the tax break made available under a recently passed state law.

The Commercial Redevelopment Act gives business owners an incentive to upgrade their property by renovating existing obsolete buildings or developing cleared or vacant land zoned commercial for at least three years prior to the passage of the law.

The law provides that a municipality establish a commercial redevelopment district of one or more pieces of property.

Once such a district is established, the property owner applies to local governmental officials for a commercial redevelopment exemption certificate, which the officials can either grant or deny.

If granted, a merchant receives a 50 percent property tax cut for a period up to 12 years but limited by municipal officials.

Springfield Township Supervisor Collin W. Walls explained why Bordine's application was refused.

"The facility was used for the same type of business but it was not zoned commercial," Walls said. "The law is very specific that it must be commercially zoned for three years prior to the effective date of the law."

Though the property at 8580

Dixie Highway had been a commercial greenhouse complex for years before Bordine bought it in November, 1977, it was zoned commercial and was a nonconforming land parcel.

Boucard Brothers Greenhouse, the former owner of the property, put the complex up for sale "probably sometime in 1976," Walls said.

When the land wasn't sold within six months, it reverted to residential zoning in compliance with township ordinances.

The property continued to have a residential zoning until the fall of 1977, when Bordine had the property rezoned commercial, Walls said.

Bordine said he still hopes to renovate the parcel. He plans to construct a 10,000-square-foot gardening supply store similar to the Bordine's Rochester facility.

Later, Bordine plans to build more greenhouses, a potting shed and expand his parking lot.

"We've followed the intent of the law and have hit a snag," Bordine said. "I'm not sure how to resolve it."

Walls said there are two alternative ways Bordine may still get the 50 percent tax break the Commercial Redevelopment Act can provide.

In the first, a governmental body, such as the Springfield Township Board, may ask the Michigan State attorney general for reinterpretation of the law as it applies to Bordine's specific case.

Secondly, Bordine can sue Springfield Township for refusing his application in hopes of getting a circuit court ruling saying the application must be approved.

"I don't know whether or not (Bordine) will take this action,"

Walls said.

"I would assume that his argument would be that his operation falls within the intent of the law, even though it doesn't qualify according to the specific wording of the law," Walls said.

Bordine said he doesn't know what he will do to get his application approved.

"We still hope to go ahead with the project," Bordine said. "I think the township's intention is to cooperate."

Bordine also said he will consult his attorney.

For lack of guidelines . . .

by Pat Braunagel

That the entire Independence Township Library Advisory Board found it necessary to resign en masse is regrettable in the extreme.

This drastic action—a collective throwing up of hands in despair—does more than just mark the end of a long series of frustrations. It signals a breakdown in a governmental function which relies heavily on citizen participation.

In various phases of community life in townships like Independence, which pride themselves on grass-roots government, citizens are called upon to assume some quasi-official roles.

When elected governmental bodies ask for this kind of citizen participation, they must know what it is they are seeking and be specific in how much authority they are granting.

To the best of anyone's knowledge, no such guidelines have ever existed for the library advisory board.

The board simply grew out of the Clarkston Women's Club, out of which the library had also grown.

Should the library advisory board have felt frustrated to the point of mass resignation when its recommendation to dismiss librarian Sushil Lahiri was not heeded? Had its authority been usurped?

Or had the board gone too far out on a limb in seeking the dismissal?

Advisory board members last week repeatedly referred to their liaison function.

"Liaison between what and what?" we asked.

"Between the township board and the librarian," was the reply, with the correction, "and the community."

Township board members have not been even this clear on the function of the library advisory board.

Library Board Chairman Alex Stewart said he had been promised by Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower that the citizens panel would be consulted again before further action was taken on Lahiri.

The advisory board, along with the rest of the public, had been kept out of hearings on Lahiri, a right due the librarian as a township employee. Members of the advisory board felt betrayed that they were not notified before a public vote was taken by the township board.

To say that this is a breakdown in communications is to dismiss it too lightly.

Now there is, quite literally, no library advisory board. The service of those who quit—three or four of whom had been members for the better part of a decade—is lost.

A library board will not spring up spontaneously again.

The township board, three of whose members have opted to decide on Lahiri's competence at their leisure, ought now to decide what is to be required of a library board.

Long-needed bylaws ought to be drafted before the board seeks help from any more citizen-advisors.

Sugar Loafing

By Jim Sherman

Michigan Press Association probably will not hold another summer convention at Sugar Loaf Mountain Resort.

Waiting an hour and forty five minutes for a meal, only to learn the kitchen is out of what you ordered was a little much. So was $15 for a piece of indoor-cooked, outdoor-served chicken.

But, if the golfers made the decision, we might go back. The course is in great shape. A little in spots (No. 3 and 6), a little long (No. 8 and 12), but well kept.

It was really nice for us. Gene and Jean Sura (she was editor of The Clarkston News for a while) live off No. 14 in their retirement home. He greeted me with a dozen Titlist golf balls he's gleaned from the nearby woods.

I've never forgiven Suras for retiring before they were 60.

Nearby is the fishing village of Leland. Being our first trip to the Leelanau peninsula we had to go visit the artist colony of sorts. It's more a collection of gift shops, but very picturesque.

But, it sure is a long trip to that area. We can drive to our place in Engadine in an hour less time. Of course, it didn't help driving time to go through downtown Traverse City during Cherry Festival week. It was busy.

Hardly a day goes by but what a recall isn't in the news. Ford has been getting it for rear end design of gas tanks and gas spouts. GM's Vegas are being examined. Firestone's steel belted radials (they no longer make this one) are said to be faulty.

It's popular to knock products from the "safety" angle. The charges leave images of failures in engineering.

Maybe that's what prompted Attorney General Frank Kelley to tell a story about engineers at the Press convention at Sugar Loaf.

He remarked that when he was in law school the popular discussion was whether engineers should be allowed to vote.

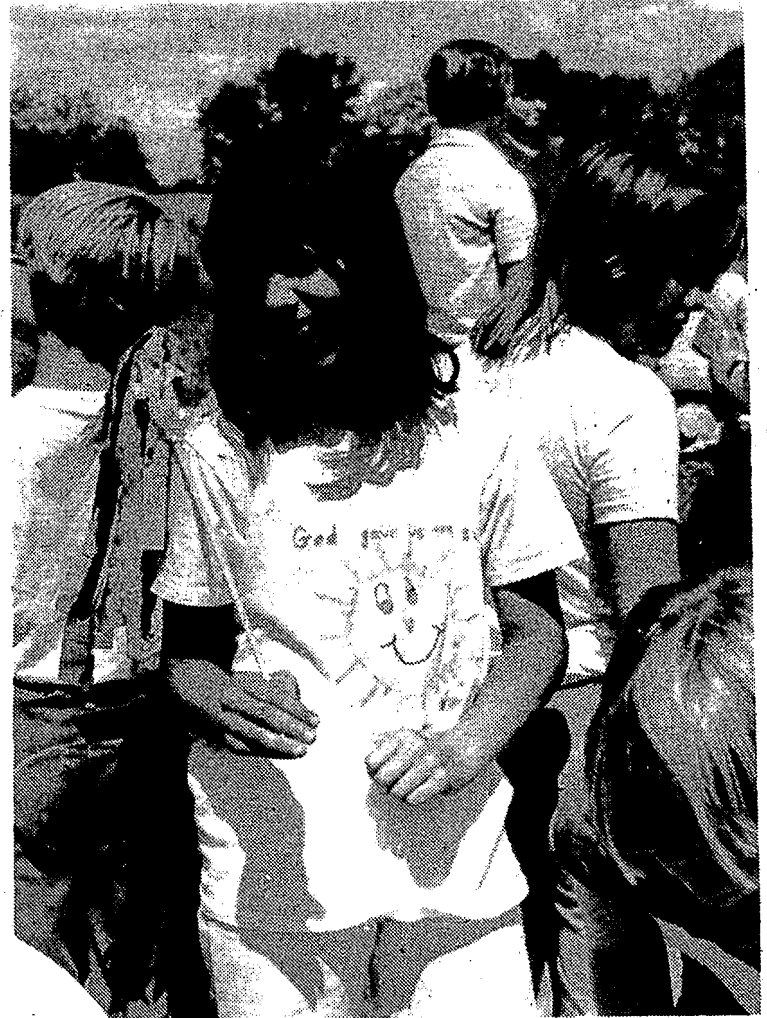

The conclusion, Kelly said, was "Yes, engineers should be allowed to vote—if they take their slide rules into the voting booth."

I'll close with a note from Farmer's Almanac: "Don't worry about avoiding temptation—as you grow older, it starts avoiding you."

All God's children

Dawn Baalhorn displays the poster she made during Bible classes held last week at St. Daniel Catholic Church. The children ended their week of studying festivals of praise and thanksgiving from the Old and New Testament by taking part in a "Praise Parade."

The children made many craft items including praise banners, crosses of colorful seeds and T-shirts like the one designed and worn by Ida Ciaramitaro.

Racking points in marital game

by Jim Fitzgerald

My wife just received an extra-large load of points. The load was so big, it wouldn't fit into the elevator leading to our high rise apartment. The points had to be brought up on top of the elevator.

Part of the marriage game is collecting points. When a husband does something his wife doesn't like, he loses points to her. Or vice versa.

The number of points awarded depends upon how dumb a deed was committed by the offending spouse. It is common for the involved spouses to disagree on the depth of a particular dumbness and the number of points it is worth. Negotiations are often prolonged, and the aid of outside arbitrators is sometimes required.

Points are like cash. They can be spent as soon as they are received, or they can be banked until needed. However, points don't accrue interest while they are being saved by the owner. On the contrary, points lose value if they aren't spent within a reasonable time after they are awarded. This isn't because of inflation. It's because time dims dumbness, and most spouses balk at paying for points lost a long time ago.

"You told the Crandalls that we'd play bridge with them tonight. That was a really dumb thing to do," the husband says. "You know I hate to play bridge."

"I hate football but you took me to the football game," the wife says. "That was a really dumb football game."

"That football game was five years ago," the husband says.

And so on. The couple must decide if he should play bridge because she went to the football game. Are the two things worth an equal number of points? Did she save the football points too long? Should he get extra points because Mrs. Crandall has a nervous giggle?

My wife lost several points a few years ago when she went wicker wacky. She put wicker chairs in every room in our house, including the bathroom, and I was marked for life. This was a dumb thing for Pat to do, but I didn't spend my wicker points at that time. I figured I'd save them until some day when I wanted to do something dumb involving furniture.

That day has arrived, but Pat says I'm woefully short on points. I can't argue with her. I wish she'd bought a wicker bathtub.

My problem is that 10 years ago I made my wildest dream come true. I bought a full-size pool table and installed it in my basement. This was sort of a dumb thing to do, because the table cost more than I could afford, but Pat didn't charge me too many points. After all, we had a big basement and she couldn't deny that the pool table brought us closer together. Before I got it, she had to phone me at the neighborhood tavern. Now all she had to do was holler down the clothes chute.

The real trouble with the pool table didn't come until last month when we sold our big house and had to move all our furniture into a big-city apartment. There was no room for the pool table, of course.

But wait.

"We could move into a four-bedroom apartment and knock out the wall between two of the bedrooms. We could have a double door cut. That would be my poolroom," I said. "When the grandchildren visit, they can sleep under the pool table."

Pat didn't say anything, but her lips were moving. She was counting points to herself.

The movers couldn't squeeze the table into the freight elevator. Mr. Westinghouse, who built the elevator, had to be summoned to supervise on-top elevation. To get the table put back together on the level, with new felt, I had to find a poolroom proprietor who made house calls. So far, it's cost twice what it's worth to keep my precious table by my side, 26 floors above ground.

But, by God, I must own the highest full-size pool table in the city.

And my wife owns the highest pile of unspent points in the history of marriage. When will she spend them? I'm shooting pool on the lip of a volcano.

Sewer debt, center favored for surplus

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Children's needs, better police protection, a community center and what to do about garbage all have something in common.

Each of these topics was presented at a public hearing Aug. 1 as a possible use for some of Independence Township's surplus funds that total approximately $322,000.

Although lowering sewer taxes was the major request for use of the funds, the community center request resulted in board action when a motion was approved to appoint a five-member steering committee at the next board meeting.

The proposal for a committee to explore cost, design, location and operation of a community center was presented to the board by Don Place of Chickadee Lane, who represented the Clarkston Area Human Resource Committee.

"Planning for such a center should no longer be delayed," Place said. "I'm asking you: let's begin now."

Place presented board members with a list of recommendations for planning the center.

The recommendations were signed by Place as well as Timothy Doyle, parks and recreation director; Darlene Bringard, senior citizen coordinator; Floyd Kopitz of the Clarkston Community Arts Council; Michael Luchenbach; Jim Randall, president of Clarkston Jaycees; Carolyn Place, chairperson of Bottles for Building; Dallas McSwain, president of North Oakland Civitan;

Lois Schnabel, chairperson of the board of directors for Independence Center; Al Bartlett of the Clarkston Education Association; and Jan Easton of the Clarkston Area Jaycees.

Irene Rauth of Scenic Ridge asked for money to improve the library's book collection.

Rauth said that the library department spent $7,700 less than required for state aid and that the library could lose funding.

"According to law, you have to spend three-tenths of a mill to get that money," she explained.

"This money should go to fix up that book collection which is pitiful," Rauth said.

Community members are using other township libraries, she said.

"I feel you ought to reassess your library funding," she said, "but you should also make sure your librarian knows what he's doing."

Yvonne Lampela of Colgate asked the board to use some of the surplus for bettering the police department.

"I would question (using) your surplus on bike paths when it's not safe to walk the roads in the township," she said. "If I was on the board, I would ... take care of the people in the township first."

Peg Wiederhold of Meyers Road said she sympathized with residents who wanted sewer tax relief.

But she lived in an area that had a community center when she was a child, she said. "It's so ingrained in me, the importance of a community center."

Her 11-year-old son has never played in a school gym and when he read the newspaper reports on bicycle paths, he commented that the whole family and young and old people could enjoy them, she said.

"Maybe this isn't the time, maybe this isn't the money," she said. "But these are not frivolous things. They raise the quality of a community."

Carolyn Place of Chickadee Lane, Republican candidate for supervisor, proposed several uses for the surplus funds, including reducing the sewer tax and setting aside $5,000 to study the solid waste problem.

"When our landfill is filled here in Independence, what are we going to do?" she asked.

"We may not want to face it, but we have it," she added. "We've got to take time to look at that problem."

Place also said she represented two groups with uses for some of the surplus.

"I think there is a group that was not represented here tonight," she said. "The children, the lifeblood of the township."

A community center would offer recreation that would benefit young people "not only physically, but mentally," she said.

She also represented the Bottles for Building group that has supported a community center since 1970.

Bottles taken to the collection center on M-15 near Dixie Highway have been sold to a recycling center since that time.

"We now have about $22,000 in trust for the township that is for a community activities center," Place said.

A. B. Chenrault, Community Relations Manager, Pontiac, offers you this telephone tip:

Teach your children how to use the phone in an emergency!

Anyone can have an emergency at home that calls for fast, intelligent use of the phone ... a sudden illness, accident, fire. Hopefully, you already have a list in your phone book or elsewhere near the phone, giving the numbers of your doctor, hospital, poison control, police, fire department and your home address. But, if you have children at home, would they know how to use the phone in an emergency? Make sure they do.

Show them where you keep the emergency numbers and how to call the operator, if necessary. Your babysitter should be told who to call, too. Know if 911 can be dialed for fire, medical and police help in your area. Nobody likes to think about emergencies at home. But, it's better to give it a little thought now, than be sorry you didn't later. Why not check out the family on your emergency phone call procedure right now?

Also, he was recently appointed Music Director of the Minnesota Symphony Orchestra.

Featured pianists are Peter Serkin on Thursday evening and Claudio Arrau on Saturday. Pavilion seats, ranging from $7 to $9, and lawn tickets at $4 each, are available for both concerts.

The eighth week of the summer season ends on Sunday, August 13, with a Detroit Symphony Pops Concert conducted by the ever-popular Arthur Fiedler. He will be joined by distinguished baritone, Robert Merrill, well-known for his starring roles with the Metropolitan Opera.

The Pavilion is completely sold out; lawn tickets are available at $3.50 each.

All performances are scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m., except the Sunday Pops Concert which begins at 7:30 p.m.

The Museum of Cartoon Art Exhibit, featuring the works of over 1,000 different cartoonists, will be on display at Meadow Brook Village Mall, Adams Road and Walton Boulevard in Rochester, Aug. 13-19.

Along with original artwork, the exhibit features informative displays on the history of cartoons, how cartoons are made, and the different ways cartoons are used.

Final inning for coach

He's seen it all in baseball

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Summers are going to be different for Jack Hess.

After spending 16 years as a volunteer coach for the Independence Township Parks and Recreation little league baseball teams, he has decided to retire.

Hess started coaching because a child of a friend of his didn't have a coach.

When his son Tod, now 13, was old enough to play ball, Hess coached his teams.

In all, Hess has coached every team from T-ball to Pony League.

And he has plenty to be proud of—his teams have made the play-offs 15 times.

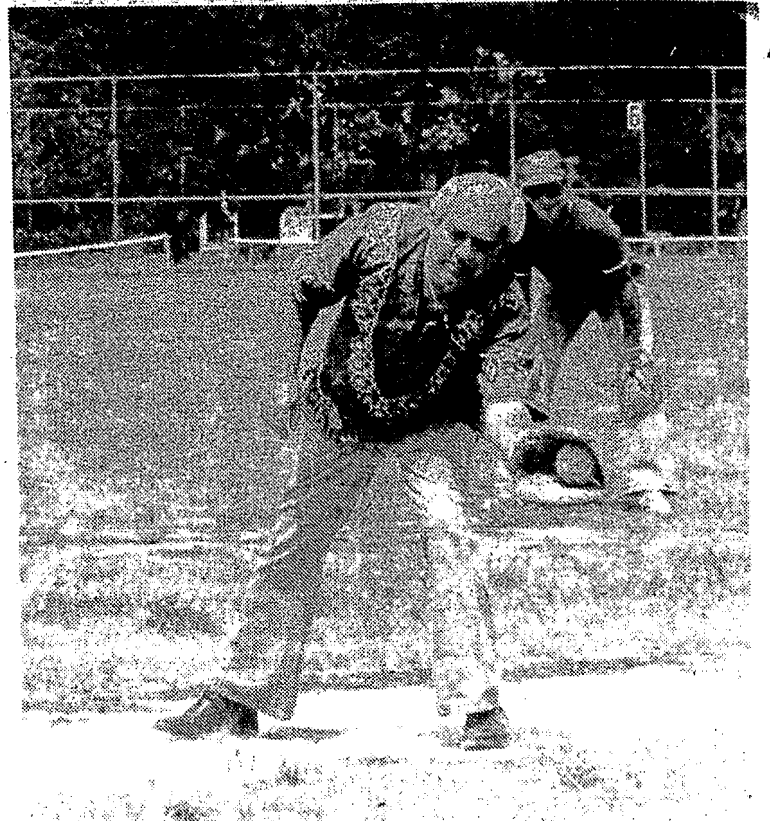

"It's been great fun, a lot of good parents," Hess said.

Dr. Al Hamilton of the Clarkston Village Clinic has sponsored the teams all 16 years.

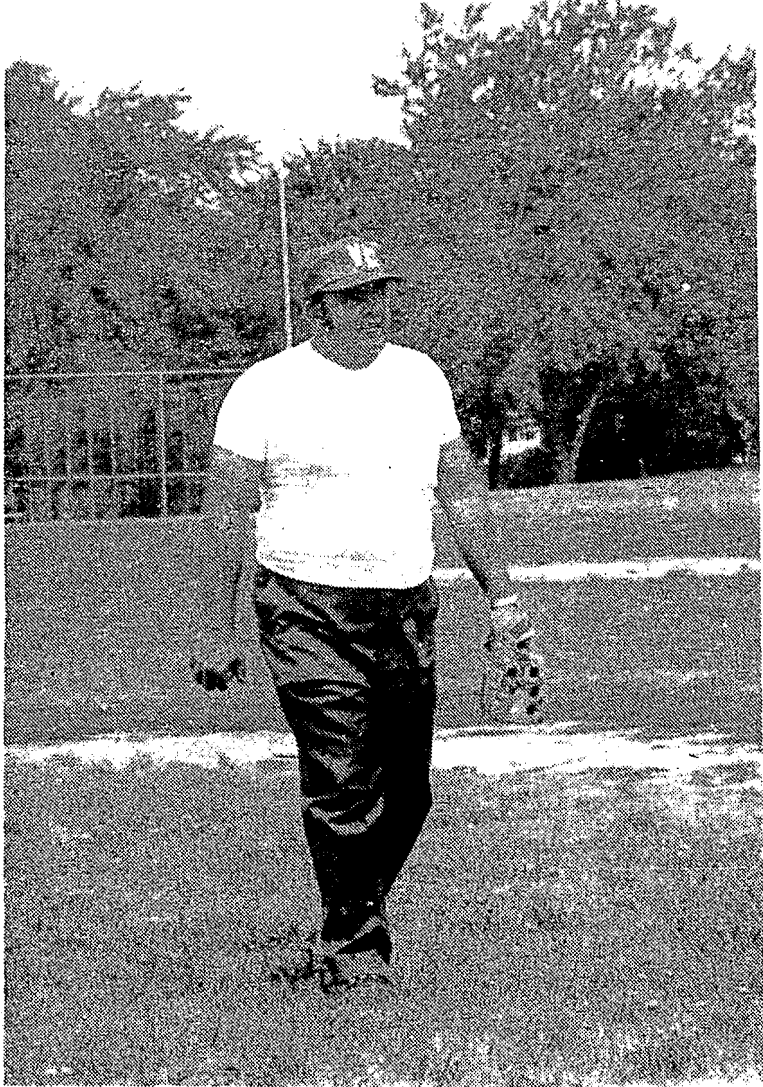

For the past 14 years, he has thrown a party for the teams and their families that included a cook-out and swimming in his backyard after a father-son baseball game.

"If it wasn't for him, it wouldn't have happened," Hess said, adding that Hamilton started sponsoring the team "when he still had black hair" that is now silver-colored.

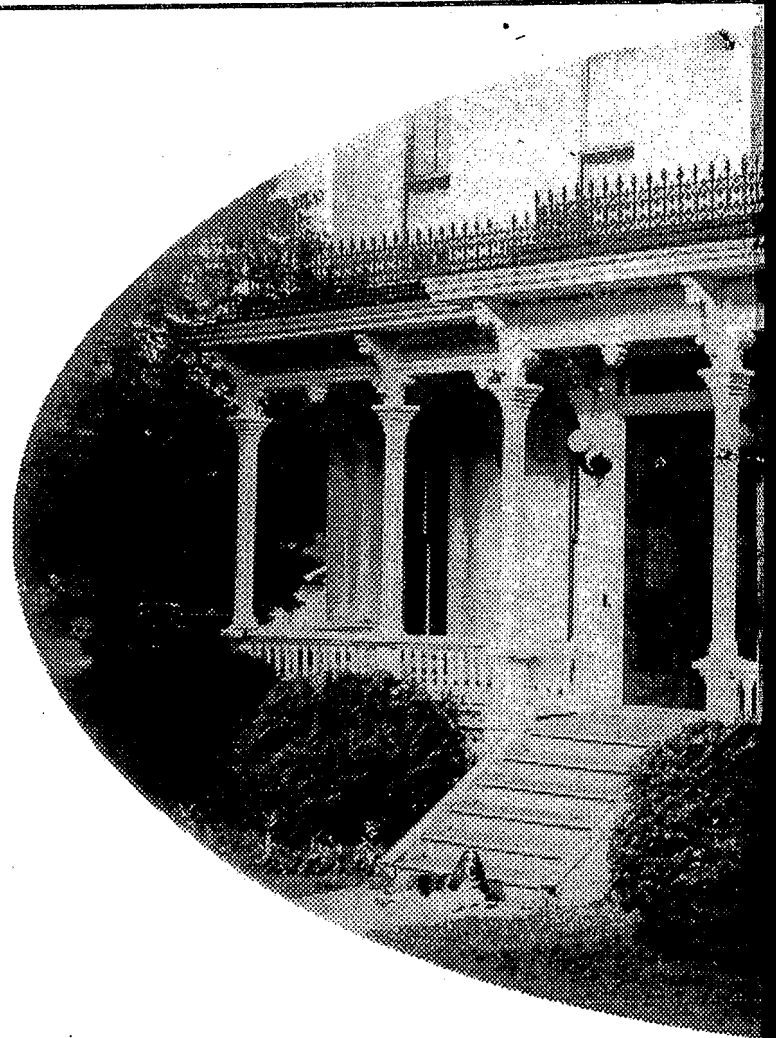

Mrs. Hess said she has plans to keep her husband busy next summer. She's preparing a list of chores that were put aside during the years when baseball came first.

Unruly fans spoil play-offs

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

The play-offs have been a disappointment for Gary Warner, director of Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department's afternoon baseball programs, and Dick Lamphere, manager of Statewide Construction, a first-place Pony team.

It's not that there was bad ball-playing on the part of team members. Nor do the men have any complaint with the umpires.

Warner and Lamphere are upset with the spectators.

The Pony and Midget championships are under Warner's auspices. He's been at almost every game, making sure that the games are fairly played and policing crowds that sometimes get too rowdy.

"I think the spectators have detracted from the play-offs a lot," Warner said.

"It seems to me pretty bad that people can't sit on a hill and watch a game and enjoy it without threatening other people and the umpire."

Warner cited catcalls coming from the crowd as one way spectators upset the kids on the diamond. He said he heard one spectator yelling "Rag arm!" "The kids are young and you don't know how it affects them," Warner said.

"Even when the spectators are cheering at every pitch whenever the pitch is a ball, that in itself puts a lot of pressure on the pitcher," he continued.

Warner said that even though he is "supposed to control the crowd," he rarely tells a spectator to leave the game.

"For me to criticize them would be doing the same thing they're doing," he said.

"The thing I have tried to do is cut them off quick so I don't have to get nasty and throw them out."

Warner also said that the longer the play-offs continued, the more vehement the spectators got.

He partially blamed parents who forget good sportsmanship in their quest for a son's athletic honors.

Warner wonders whether parents "want the program to be good for their kids or whether they're out for blood so they can watch their child get a trophy."

Lamphere agrees with Warner.

"I think the parents are so ready to be protective of their kids," he said.

"The first bad call or dispute, the parents aren't arguing over the dispute, they're protecting their kids," he continued.

Lamphere was on hand to watch the Midget Division playoffs at Clarkston High School Saturday.

"This is not the first game I've seen," Lamphere said. "The game was between the parents. I quit watching the game to watch the parents," he added.

Lamphere said part of the problem stems from the emphasis the Independence Parks and Recreation Department places on softball while evaluating hardball programs.

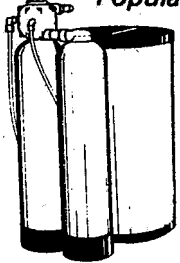

"There's not enough time spent on baseball," he said. "What do these 14-and 15-year-old kids get but the right to play on Clarkston (High School) fields?"

Warner believes that if more parents were umpiring the games, the problem of heckling and pressuring the boys could be helped.

"I don't think the parents realize that they can become umpires just as easily as the kids can," Warner said.

Cider and Crafts festival moves to park

The fourth annual Cider and Crafts Festival, organized by the Clarkston Historical Society, will be held along the banks of the millstream this year.

The Clarkston Village Council granted festival coordinator Carol Balzarini's request that the festival be located in the village park on Depot Road from Sept. 22-24.

In the past, the festival was held in Rudy's parking lot on the corner of West Washington and Main streets.

After Mrs. Balzarini pointed out that the parking lot location led to traffic congestion in downtown Clarkston, Council President Keith Hallman supported holding the festival in the park.

"It's really what the park is for," Hallman said.

Mrs. Balzarini said that she and her co-coordinator, Fran Hertler, plan to have approximately 50 craft booths in this year's festival. As in the past, craftspeople can participate in the juried show.

Artisans will be showing leaded glass, weavings, macrame, hand-made jewelry, decoupage, wood crafts, fabric arts from quilts to placemats, photographs and dry flower creations.

A historical society booth will sell donuts, hot or cold cider and apples.

The primary fund-raiser for the historical society, the Cider and Crafts Festival gets a little bigger and a little better every year, Mrs. Balzarini said.

"This year will be our best," she continued. "Things that are obviously commercial are discouraged."

Mrs. Balzarini also asked the council if the historical society could string a banner announcing the festival across M-15. The council told her permission is needed from the State Highway Department before the banner can be hoisted.

Gentle reprimand

Will the Clarkston Jaycees kindly remove their sign?

That was the message of a polite letter the Clarkston Village Council sent to the Jaycees.

The Jaycees' event sign, located on the northwest corner of West Washington and Main streets in downtown Clarkston, has been a cause of mild concern among council members.

Though the Jaycees have leaked word that an anonymous donor has offered to give the village a new events sign, the council considers the present sign an eyesore and wants it removed.

But any raps on the knuckles the Jaycees received were mild ones.

As Council President Keith Hallman said, "When we have civic organizations like this, I still like to give them every break."

The friendly letter from the council offering the Jaycees village assistance in removing the sign has been sent.

Davisburg refund

A total of $30 will be refunded to Davisburg Jaycees by the Springfield Township Board.

The board is reimbursing six Jaycees $5 each for gasoline they used when they cleared Springfield Township of litter during the Springfield Township Spring Cleaning May 20.

Diversion of water halted

southbound stream, Weber said.

Weber called Frank Walker, Clarkston Mills' project manager who is responsible for monitoring the opening and closing of the spillway gates.

After Walker inspected the spillway on Monday, he said, "I check it almost daily. Apparently, it was either Saturday afternoon or Sunday when (the lock) was jimmied."

Jennifer Radcliff, 33 N. Main, and Rita Chisholm, 33 Miller, said Monday evening that they had noticed water levels in the Mill Pond rising after the gates were closed Sunday.

Mrs. Radcliff had been watching water levels at a spillway on the pond's east end.

Using a watermark on the spillway for reference, Mrs. Radcliff said the water "was down about seven inches."

It had risen three inches since Sunday, Mrs. Radcliff said, though it was still "about four inches from the top" of the spillway on Monday evening.

Mrs. Chisholm said that between Sunday and Monday evening, the water "had come 14 inches closer to the shore" of the Mill Pond at her property.

When petitioners at the July 31 council meeting suggested that Clarkston Mills had been diverting water from the Mill Pond by opening the spillway gates, Keith Hallman, council president and marketing consultant for Clarkston Mills, said he had been told by Walker that the gates were opened once every three weeks for 12 hours.

Walker told The Clarkston News the gates had been opened even less frequently.

"We don't even open the gates that often. In the last two months, I think I've had them open for about six hours," he said.

Walker explained that the gates were opened to divert water from the Mill Pond to clean stagnating water out of the stream running southward from beneath Clarkston Mills.

During the July 31 council meeting, the council suggested that the local water table may be low.

Possible causes may be dry weather and loss of water that was formerly returned to the water table through increased irrigation, dredging of streams which feed the Mill Pond, and a recently installed sewer system.

Council members said they would speak to local water authorities about these matters.

A letter was also sent Aug. 3 from the council to Alan explaining that residents are concerned about dropping water levels in the Mill Pond water system.

The council suggested that Alan keep a log detailing when the spillway gates are opened and closed and opposing his use of water power to run the generator in Clarkston Mills.

On Monday afternoon, Alan said he had not received the letter.

A petition circulator, Leslie Hyde of 63 Waldon, said this week he had been contacted by Parke Lake residents who were concerned that the dropping water levels will affect the ecology of that lake.

At the July 31 council meeting, Hyde said a statement Alan had made to the Clarkston News "evades the issue."

Alan was quoted as saying, "We wouldn't have spent the time and money on the front of the building to look at a dried up pond."

"The Mill Pond level could be kept up to a point one inch below the top of the spillway dam on the stream leading to Parke Lake, and we would have a ditch instead of a stream," he said. "A proper level for the controls would be one which permitted water to flow over that dam into the Parke Lake stream and thus on through Parke Lake and down the Clinton riverbed into Middle (Cemetery) Lake."

Motorboats stay on Deer Lake

Motorboats will still be part of the Deer Lake scene, but regulations for Round Lake boating will be forthcoming.

A letter from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) dated July 27 "suggested no new regulations on Deer Lake, but they will hold more hearings on Round Lake," according to Independence Township Clerk Christopher Rose.

The letter indicated that "a special watercraft control for Round Lake will be proposed," Rose said.

Round Lake is located in the northeast section of the township.

The DNR correspondence was a result of a public hearing held July 11 at the Independence Township Hall to discuss concerns the lake residents had on motorboating.

Another public hearing will be scheduled this fall for Round Lake residents, Rose said. Watercraft controls probably will be in effect next summer.

Springfield to get fire hall site grant

A $6,000 grant to pay leasing fees for a proposed fire hall site has been tentatively approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Springfield Township officials hope to lease approximately one acre of land at the Oakland County Road Commission's garage complex, Rattalee Lake Road and Dixie Highway.

Township Supervisor Collin W. Walls said the final approval of the grant will be received 10 days after HUD gets the lease signed by township and road commission officials.

Walls and Township Clerk J.

Calvin Walters signed the lease at a township board meeting Aug. 2.

The lease now will be sent to road commission officials for their signatures.

"I don't expect to hear from the road commission for at least a week, maybe two," Walls said. "But I don't anticipate any problems."

A great moment in little league is when the winning team floods the field after that final run clinches a championship.

Finale to season is thrill-filled

Around little league diamond, emotions run high during play-offs

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

There are three different ways to watch a little league baseball championship.

For the kids, it's a final bid for glory, a chance to return to school with a reputation as a good athlete firmly entrenched among their peers.

The coaches have an opportunity to see whether all that practice has really paid off and produced a cohesive team.

Parents on the sidelines grin as their son makes that tremendous catch or scowl when Junior strikes out at low pitches.

But from any perspective, last Saturday's Independence Parks and Recreation Department Midget play-off between Carpenter Realty and Temple Plumbing was an exciting game well worth watching. Temple upset Carpenter Realty 7-6 in an overtime inning.

Natty in their bright uniforms, the 12-year-old boys lined up for battle at a Clarkston High School baseball diamond.

When the game opened, the odds favored Carpenter Realty. Undefeated for 21 straight games, the team is known for its strong hitting and tight outfielding.

Temple Plumbing, on the other hand, was third in its division of the Midget League and stood 9-4.

But both teams were primed to play some serious baseball.

The Carpenters established their lead during the third, fifth and sixth innings. Five runs were scored despite good pitching and outfielding by Temple.

But during the sixth inning, the Temple team rallied, bringing three runners into home and making the score 5-3 in Carpenter's favor.

A Carpenter retaliation at the top of the seventh inning hopped the score to 6-3.

It was then that Temple coach Bill Weeks told his boys, "Hey, you guys. Listen, this is it. We need three to tie and four to win.

"Six to three, that's no problem," Weeks continued. "I'll tell you though, we can't swing at garbage.

"This is our last up. Let's get it."

Coaches and players on the Carpenter bench became more and more quiet as Temple brought not one, not two, but three runners into home. The game was tied and had to go into an overtime inning.

As the cliché says, the crowd went wild.

Carpenter manager Ray Davis was shaking his head and wondering how Temple managed to sweep up so many runs.

"Anything can happen now," Davis said. "The first team to

The excitement of taking the game's first run forces Carpenter Ron Davis to his feet. At Ron's right is team mate Billie Hahn, no picture of composure himself.

Mary, holding Ryan, stands in the foyer of their home that Jim recently finished with ceramic tile. Mary called the complex job "an Excedrin headache."

Family activities are important to the Morrisseys. Mary calls John "a terrific father."

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Deer Lake's clean, clear water brought Jim and Mary Morrissey to a home on the lake's western shore two years ago.

"That's what attracted me here, all the water—the lakes, the Mill Pond, all the streams running around," said Jim, whose job with State Farm Insurance Co. took him all over Oakland County.

"You can create all the subdivisions you want, but you can't manufacture lakes and streams," he said. "You can't manufacture the environment."

Their search for a healthy lake in Oakland County included experience gained from fighting the pollution of lakes on which they had a home and cottage.

"Deer Lake is nice right now. It's perfect," Jim said, adding that it has all the qualities to stay that way.

The lake's depth limits weed growth, the bacteria count is low and the aqua-colored water is clear, he explained.

Jim also said that it's not unusual for muddy-looking water to have little bacteria or for clear water to have a high bacteria level.

"This is the end. If Deer Lake goes to weeds or bacteria, there won't be another (unpolluted) lake in the county," he said.

Mary said they would "definitely fight" if they see signs of lake pollution.

"I've lived on two lakes that developers and industry have destroyed," Jim said.

So they're keeping an eye on the building that is going on around the lake.

"We feel that we're very ecology-minded as far as the lake environment goes," Mary said.

"Deer Lake is going to ride on what goes on from here north," Jim said, explaining that sewer and road building can alter streams that flow into the lake and cause damage.

"I think that we owe people that come after us something. We should give them clean water. We owe them a clean environment," Mary said.

"I think we have to be more responsible," she added. "A man from the DNR (Department of Natural Resources) told me that if a lake is gone, it takes a minimum of 100 years to come back, if ever."

A cottage near South Lyon that his family built when he was a child started Jim's love of lakes.

The "best of two worlds"—the advantages of living on a lake year-round — eventually brought Jim and Mary and Debra, 12, Mike, 10, and Ryan, 3, to their home on Deer Lake.

Their transition to lake living started when trips to the cottage weren't always relaxing.

"It got to be a rat race on the weekends," Jim said. "You go out there and depend on the weather."

If it was too cold to swim or boat, they found they had bored, restless children on their hands.

"This is ridiculous. I'm going to buy a house on the lake," Jim decided. "If it's nice, I can enjoy it. If it's not nice, I can do things around the house."

Indeed, decorating their Cape Cod-style house has kept them busy.

"We're real do-it-yourselfers," Mary said. "We're not sitters by any means at all."

Brown and blue are the dominant colors they've chosen. Their use of wallpaper accents the arches and coves that are part of the style of their house that was built around 1950.

The beauty of the lake is part of the visual picture with large windows giving most rooms a view of the water.

Part of the redecorating included painting the outside of their home white. It took 30 gallons of paint.

Another reason the Morrisseys enjoy living in Clarkston is that "a lot of the people are very family oriented," Mary said.

She was an executive secretary.

tary at American Motors before they were married, but finds taking care of her family and helping at school enjoyable.

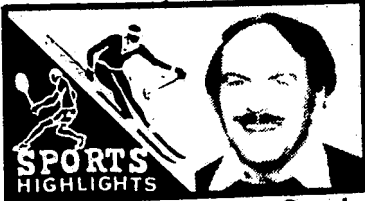

With one child in nursery school, one in elementary school and one in junior high, she's planning on a busy year.

Although he no longer takes part in sports because of injuries from playing college basketball, Jim said that he enjoys being a spectator and taking the children along.

"I feel he's really a terrific father," Mary said. "He really takes a big interest in the kids and does a lot with them."

"Your children are only with you for a short span in your life," she said. "If you don't want to be with them, you shouldn't have children."

by David McNeven, Coach

There used to be many theories about the best way to teach a child to swim. The uninformed used to advocate throwing them into the pool and they will swim. Today, most authorities advocate use of Red Cross approved methods taught by Red Cross certified Water Safety Instructors. This is a graduated method of teaching proper breathing, floatation, basic strokes, and finally graduating to swimming as we know it. There are also questions about what age is best to teach a child to swim. There are classes held for infants, and these aquatic children learn to swim often before they learn to walk. Others object that this is too dangerous, but everyone is being cautious and thinking safety.

The plant doctor By Greg Patchan

Fighting Garden Pests

Every backyard vegetable gardener quickly learns that there is an army of insect pests ready and waiting to feast on prized produce.

Sometimes they are very obvious, but often they're not detected until serious damage has been done. A few are so destructive and insidious that we must use preventative measures while others can be controlled after they are detected.

When we are armed with the knowledge of common insect problems and the right weapons, we should be the winners. Hopefully, the information that follows will allow you to defeat these pests and harvest top quality produce, but remember that insecticides can be hazardous. Be sure to read the label and follow the directions as if they were a doctor's prescription. Let's meet the enemy.

Aphids

These insects are soft bodied and small, about 1/16 of an inch. They vary in color from green, black, red and gray and are frequently found clustered in great numbers on tender stems and undersides of the leaves. Aphids feed by sucking sap from the plant, and infested plants may develop a sticky appearance. While aphids seldom kill plants, they reduce the vigor and may make the crop non-edible. Aphids can be easily controlled by spraying with malathion, rotenone or a vegetable garden insecticide labeled for aphids. Be sure to spray the undersides of the leaves before the population is very high.

Beetles

A number of hard shelled beetles can be serious garden pests if you don't watch your plants closely. These insects feed by eating the foliage of the plant, and usually they will only cause minor damage if controlled before large numbers develop. Flea beetles are the earliest to appear and they produce a characteristic 'shot-hole' appearance on young transplants. Later on in the season you may see potato beetles, bean beetles and cucumber beetles, which transmit a wilt disease. If only a few insects are present, they can be destroyed by picking them off the plant and then dropping them in alcohol or fuel oil. If they are numerous or you have a large garden, spray with Sevin or malathion.

Borers

Fortunately only two vegetable crops, corn and squash, are commonly injured by boring insects. The squash borer is a worm like larva that tunnels in the runners causing sections of the plant to wilt and die.

Slicing open a wilted runner should confirm the presence of the insect. Control can be obtained by spraying the plants with Sevin as the runners form but before the plants flower. After the damage is discovered it is too late to obtain control. The corn borer is not usually a serious problem unless you live near a farm where field corn is grown. The cream colored larva tunnel in the stalks and the ears and can easily destroy your crop. Sevin sprays are effective, and once the damage is discovered, it's too late for control.

Pine Knob liquor request expanded

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

After a heated debate, the Independence Township Board approved five additional provisions in a Class C liquor license for Pine Knob's Mansion Inc.

The approval was requested at the Aug. 1 board meeting by Norman Farhat, an attorney from Lansing representing Mansion Inc. and by Alex Bardy, owner of the food service for the Pine Knob Country Club and a "halfway house" located on the ninth fairway of the golf course. In a 3-2 vote, the board approved the request, with dissenting votes cast by Clerk Christopher Rose and Trustee Frederick Ritter.

At the June 6 board meeting Mansion Inc. was recommended to the Michigan Liquor Control Commission for the township's last Class C license until the 1980 census is conducted.

The license, which allows the sale of alcoholic beverages for consumption on premise, will be one of 11 in the township.

Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower said he had called the Michigan Liquor Control Commission and had been told approval for the five conditions was not required.

"I could not ask the board to act on it tonight," Tower said. "I think the information may be confused by the girl up in Lansing," Farhat responded. "The request to serve off premises does go to the township board, because the board does have the right to say no."

"I'm trying to get this matter over," he added. "It may be superfluous, but (board approval) would make my job a lot easier."

Personal property taxes owed to the township by Pine Knob were mentioned first by Rose.

"We got (confirmation) today that they are $93,000 in arrears in their personal property taxes," Rose said. "I would make a motion that we not approve the liquor license until taxes are paid."

After discussion, the board majority defeated Rose's motion in a 3-2 vote with Rose and Ritter voting to hold approval for property tax payment.

Farhat said that whether the board approved serving off premises or not, Mansion Inc. would get the Class C license.

Tower agreed. "I would like one point of order here," he said. "We previously approved a Class C license."

"My motion was that we not recommend the five additional conditions," Rose replied. "They would still have the Class C liquor license."

"I have a feeling we are here to do a cross-fire between certain members of the township board and Pine Knob," Farhat said, adding that it was unfair to "punish" the owner of Mansion Inc.

Farhat said that there were other methods to obtain payment of personal property taxes owed to the township.

"Let's talk about the liquor license, but then if we want to go after Pine Knob, let's go after them," Trustee Jerry Powell said. "Let's not get them tied together."

Ritter said that the board should ask for payment of the personal property taxes before approval.

"I think there's a definite connection in that Pine Knob is the lease holder," he said.

James Brennan of Sashabaw Road, who is budget manager for Oakland County, supported Mansion Inc.

"Pine Knob is not going away. You're going to get your money," he said. "I'm happy with it and I think a country club of that nature is not hurting anybody."

Bardy said that he was the sole property owner of the food service that he leases from Joseph Locricchio and Gary Francell, owners of Pine Knob Investment.

"You'll all be invited to go up to see the facility. It's a beautiful place." We've got beautiful grounds," Bardy said. "To have a Class C liquor license and to take away the opportunity to have a drink in one of the rose gardens or patios, you're taking my arm away."

Tower said the board consensus was that the last Class C license was for Pine Knob.

"I still don't have any exceptions to the limits on it," he said.

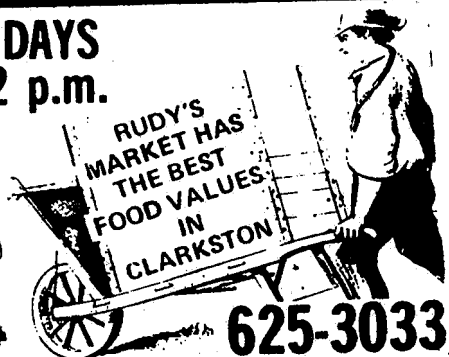

"If this gentleman (Bardy) has no connections with Mr. Locricchio, he should not be penalized," Treasurer Elizabeth Hallman said.

The majority of the board then approved the additions to the Class C license.

The conditions are: 1) Application for off premises to open before the regular hour. 2) For permission to serve off premises and adjacent to the main clubhouse, for the court yard, the halfway house and the patio off the halfway house and the pool area. 3) Request to maintain a direct connection at the main clubhouse to the golf course pro shop, the locker rooms, the barber shop, all of which will be operated by the Pine Knob Country Club. To maintain a direct connection at the halfway house between the nursery and the licensed premises. 5) An additional bar permit for the license to be maintained at the halfway house.

Springfield appointees

Appointees are being shuffled in Springfield Township.

The appointment of Nancy Stanley, 10551 Davisburg, to Oakland County's Advisory Committee on Historical Preservation and Historical Projects caused her to vacate her position on the Oakland County Cultural Committee.

On Aug. 2, the Springfield Township Board appointed Sandy Webster, 7630 Dilley, in Mrs. Stanley's place.

Also appointed to an advisory post was Sharon Szalma, 8481 Eaton Road, Davisburg. Mrs. Szalma was appointed to the Holly Area Youth Assistance Committee, an organization that strives to prevent juvenile delinquency by working with young people.

Mrs. Szalma can serve on the committee only until December, however. Holly Area Youth Assistance is already seeking someone to take her place.

Interested citizens can call J. Frank Dennis, the program's director at 634-3271 during regular business hours.

Low income not enough

Tough to get home grants

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

"Marginally adequate" is an apt description of the past use of Community Development Act (CDA) funds for home improvement grants and loans for low income families in Independence Township.

According to the August newsletter from Oakland County's Community Development office, over $1.8 million has been earmarked for the county to use for the low income Housing Assistance Plan.

The CDA funds are distributed by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

According to the newsletter, HUD "was encouraged by county efforts toward more effective implementation," but HUD also called past performance "marginally adequate."

"We have sent in around 10 applications and in the past two years, we've had three acted on," said Independence Township Clerk Christopher Rose. "Some of those applications have been there 12 to 15 months, and they're just starting to work on them."

One particularly frustrating application was one that CDA did act on, but not until Rose guaranteed a new well would not be deeper than 150 feet, he said.

"She (the homeowner) fit every criteria they named," Rose said. "This poor lady needed some water, and they didn't know what they were doing down there basically."

The woman had resorted to hauling lake water, he said. She went over two months without water and then Rose guaranteed the well-depth.

The actual well was over 150 feet deep, he said, but CDA paid for the job.

"I've got another little old lady who has trouble walking," he said. "She has a big hole in her roof and she says that when it rains it's Niagara Falls."

"She's been very nice about it," he said. "She calls once a week and we chat."

"They all know about it down there, but they're understaffed," he added.

One applicant was turned down "because he was too poor," Rose said.

There was a fire in his home and he had no insurance and no job, so he was borrowing lumber to make repairs, Rose said.

"The CDA office has told me on several occasions I should get people to apply for more grants," Rose said. "But I don't see any sense in it until they start processing some grants."

Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower is on the community development act advisory board.

Although the group has changed guidelines for applicants to include a maximum income of $14,500, based on the number of children in a family, and allow homeowners with unpaid taxes for a year to apply for grants and loans up to $7,500, applicants have dwindled, he said.

"We just can't get into using it and get people into applying for it," Tower said. "I think, like anything else, if one person in the neighborhood gets it done, others will see the results and know it's a viable program."

"The ones who really seem to need it don't seem to get it," he added. "We just haven't had too much luck on our applications down there."

Tower said he'd like to see some of the funds in the township, because CDA funds are designated for use by people with low incomes.

"That's the ultimate of what we're after, to get some of our blighted neighborhoods cleaned up," Tower said.

Tower also said he plans to work on using a township employee to process grant and loan applications to speed up the process.

He plans to approach CDA for funds to cover a portion of the salary of the ordinance enforcement officer "to work two days on the low income grants and loans," he said.

The building department hired an ordinance enforcement officer last month.

Building Department Director Timothy Palulian called the CDA applications a "medium priority."

"We would hope down the road that we might include that in our building department," he said. "In the winter time when things slack up, that may be a good time for it."

Diamond in rough

Pine Knobbing

Neil Diamond's concert at Pine Knob Monday night was as dynamic and powerful as everyone expected. Judging by the fact that the crowd was on its feet clapping and singing along during most of the concert, it was also a highly successful one.

But Monday night's Neil Diamond was very different from previous shows.

Gone were the often-gesturing hands, the precision timing between songs and the seemingly choreographed Diamond "moves." Gone was the lengthy conversation with the audience.

Diamond was quieter, his hands in his pants' pockets most of the time, and he seemed looser—repeating the chorus to "Desire" four times and the chorus of "Dancin' in the Streets" five times—all to the cheers of the audience.

Throughout the performance of old hits like "Cherry, Cherry," "Solitary Man" and "Kentucky Woman," the crowd was treated to the history of different songs and parts of Diamond's life. And everyone's sing-along, clap-along favorite, "Song Sung Blue," was precipitated by Diamond's statement that "music has the power to make you forget where you've been and think only of where you're going."

Diamond sang four songs made popular by other singers. "I'm A Believer," although written by Diamond, was recorded in 1966 by the Monkees. "Rocketman," an Elton John song about the rigors of road tours, was sung by Diamond with great deliberation. Martha and the Vandellas' "Dancin' in the Streets," and a great jazz arrangement of the 1950's hit "Teach Me Tonight" are both on Diamond's next album. His arrangements of each of these songs have the quality of being distinctively Neil Diamond without detracting from the song's individual personality.

Monday night's Neil Diamond seemed to be a very vulnerable man. But his courage to be that way in front of 10,000 people, and to offer that up in his songs is what makes him so special. —Maralee Cook

Springfield paving

Approach paving will be laid at the intersection of Tindall and Davisburg roads in Springfield Township, the Oakland County Road Commission announced.

Road commission officials estimate the cost of the project at $9,103.

The township, the road commission and the Oakland County Board of Commissioners have agreed to equally share the cost of the road improvements.

Depending on circumstances of contractor bidding, the project could be underway in time for completion by winter or undertaken this spring, road commission officials said.

Teaching truth

By Jim and Ellen Windell

When Robert hit his sister, his mother thought it important to extract a confession before administering a punishment.

Robert, however, steadfastly maintained that he didn't touch her. His mother felt very frustrated because she often caught Robert in such "lies."

There are many parents like Robert's mother who believe that forcing a confession of every misdeed is important. Sometimes, however, this seems to interfere with action that will dissuade either the bad behavior or lying from occurring again.

The third degree or threats ("If you tell me the truth, I won't punish you") does not guarantee a truthful answer or future honesty. In fact, such interrogation on the part of parents may help insure that lying continues.

Angela's mother seemed to value honesty and truth above all else yet she was dismayed when she caught four-year-old Angela in a blatant lie ("I didn't break the top of the cookie jar.")

Because she wanted to

"break" Angela of this nasty habit, she followed the lying with severe punishment by confining Angela to her room for two weeks. It was not long after the isolation was concluded that Angela told another lie.

One way of encouraging lying is to make a "federal case" out of a minor lie or untruth. Severe punishment in many instances seems to have little effect upon the veracity of the child and indeed appears to be reinforcing so that as the punishment continues so does the lying.

At age three, four and even five, children are not always aware of the differences between reality and fantasy. To rigidly maintain that a child is a "liar" at these ages and to insist that the truth must always be told is to raise expectations that are unreasonable and unnecessary.

Children gain attention from lying when they are actually old enough to know when they are deliberately telling an untruth, and to make an important issue out of a minor lie only serves to set up such a situation where the child can learn the power of a lie in attracting the attention he or she may not achieve in other ways.

A youngster who is labeled a liar may become one because he may learn to believe that lying is expected of him.

Parents can best handle lying by initially treating the lie or exaggeration with silence. Refraining from comment may help to make little of it so that the child gains no rewards from the fantasy. If this does not over a reasonable period of time (which may be months) lead to the truth being told more often, then the parent can do two things.

A mother or father can first look at their own behavior to examine whether or not they are contributing to the lying. They may be involved in promoting the behavior by not always telling the truth themselves ("Tell grandma I'm not here now; I don't feel like talking to her.") or by calling the child a liar for every little prevarication or by administering too severe punishment.

The second thing to do is to be sure that you always give the child a chance to explain his actions. You can then react to the lie with surprise and indignation ("Robert, I'm so shocked and surprised that you would lie to me!")

Then, you might say that many children lie to impress other people and you are sure that they want others to like them but that they will be better liked if they are honest.

VILLAGE OF CLARKSTON MINUTES OF REGULAR MEETING JULY 31, 1978 Village Hall, 375 Depot, Clarkston

Meeting called to order by President Hallman at 7:30 p.m. followed by the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Roll: Present, Basinger, Byers, Schultz, Thayer, Weber. Absent, ApMadoc.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as amended.

Trustee Weber will check with Acting Police Chief Kimball about noise complaints in the park and trucks parking on E. Washington to unload.

Trustee Basinger will work with the school on the plans for the house that a class will be building on Waldon Rd.

Moved by Thayer, seconded by Weber to authorize President Hallman to sign the contract for sign upgrading in the village. Motion carried unanimously.

A Public Hearing was held on the requests to rezone portions of the Radcliff property on N. Main so that he can erect a screen house there. His attorney, Mr. Fisher, reviewed the requests with the council—rezoning the piece that his house sits on to commercial, or rezoning the piece to the south of it behind the antique shop to residential. They preferred the latter. Planning Commission Chairman Ted Thomson stated that they felt that rezoning the small piece residential would be the best planning for that area, and would reduce the amount of commercial zoning. Trustee Basinger and Jack Hagen of N. Holcomb agreed with this. Herb Rose of N. Holcomb asked Trustee Schultz if he would be in conflict of interest in voting on this, since he owns the adjoining property. He replied that he will vote for what the majority wants to do there. The Public Hearing was then adjourned by President Hallman.

Moved by Weber, seconded by Basinger to accept the recommendation of the planning commission and rezone the north 33 feet of parcel no. 08-20-328-019 on Lot No. 16 of Supervisor's Replat of Northwestern Addition from B-1 Local Business to R-2 Single Family. Roll: Ayes, Basinger, Byers, Schultz, Thayer, Weber. Nays, none. Motion carried.

The council received a petition signed by 41 persons, requesting writing to Clarkston Mills about the need to provide an increase in the amount of water flowing over the Mill Pond into Parke and Middle Lake. Mr. Hyde, whose property is adjacent to one of the streams, said that the water level is the lowest that he's seen, and feels that Clarkston Mills is diverting part of this water under their building. The council and members of the audience, some of whom had signed the petition, discussed the low water levels and the possible reasons for them, including dry weather, lawn watering, and the dredging out of a stream for Olde Sturbridge, a new subdivision north of the village. Representative Trim suggested that he would be glad to help out in any way he could on this. Trustee Basinger wants Mr. Alan, owner of Clarkston Mills, to keep a log of the times that they have the gate open to allow the water to flow under the building.

President Hallman suggested, and the council agreed, to write a letter to Clarkston Mills, explaining that they should maintain the level of the Mill Pond enough that water can flow over the spillway into Parke Lake and on into Middle Lake, and asking for a written response to this. Trustee Byers said that we should also express our concern over their using water power to run their parking lot lights, except for an occasional demonstration. A letter will also be written to Oakland County Drain Commissioner George Kuhn, asking him if he can supply us with any information on the possible reasons for the low water levels.

Moved by Basinger, seconded by Schultz to grant permission to the Clarkston Historical Society to use the park on Sept. 22-24 for their crafts & Cider festival. Motion carried unanimously.

Gordon Lang requested permission to open a convenience store in the former Total gas station on Orion Rd. at M-15. He was told that the building was presently a non-conforming use since this property is zoned residential, and thus the non-conforming use can't be expanded.

A letter will be written to the Clarkston Jaycees, saying that we will remove the signboard at M-15 and Washington, since no progress has been made in renovating it.

A letter will be written to the Detroit Free Press, asking them to remove the newsstand that they placed on M-15 without permission.

Moved by Basinger, seconded by Thayer to transfer $13,000 from the General Fund to the Local Road Fund. Motion carried unanimously.

Correspondence from the Oakland County Sheriff's Dept. and the Mich. Liquor Control Commission was read, concerning the denial of a request from the Clarkston Cafe to have outdoor service of alcoholic beverages in front of their business.

Moved by Byers, seconded by Weber to adjourn at 9:50 p.m. Motion carried unanimously.

Eight windows highlighting biblical events will shine with colored glass pieces in the Calvary Lutheran Church addition.

Four windows have Old Testament themes—creation, covenant, exodus and prophecy—and the remainder have New Testament themes—baptism, resurrection, pentecost and the Lord's Supper.

Two small designs, one of Martin Luther's seal and the other of the three crosses of Calvary, a special symbol for the congregation will also be used in the designs.

get a break gets the game." It was during the eighth inning that the two Tanner brothers, Chris and Craig, faced each other as pitcher and batter and the upset happened.

Andy Balzarini was on third base when Chris Tanner slugged a single that finished the game.

As soon as Bazarini hit home plate, other Temple players rushed onto the field, eager to be the first to slap Balzarini five. The Carpenters straggled back to the bench where they sat shaken and silent.

Even though the Carpenters received a trophy for best team in the Monday/Wednesday Mid-get Division, the kids and coaches alike were blue. They had lost the championship and broken a 21-game winning streak in one fatal game.

Katherine Davis, the Carpenters' scorekeeper tried to cheer up the dejected boys by saying, "They didn't have the season you boys had and that's what you have to remember."

As for Temple, coach Weeks was overjoyed. "Tanner against Tanner with a winning run— was that fate or was that fate?"

In the grand tradition of little league, the boys retired to the Dairy Queen.

"What strategy should we employ next?" could be the question Temple manager Tom McCormick is asking coach Bill Weeks.

This sports fan has more at stake than an average spectator. He's cheering the Temple Plumbing Midget team on to victory.

Sampling Stoppard

by Phillip Purser

Curtain time

"The Real Inspector Hound"
by Tom Stoppard, Hilberry
Repertory Theatre

"Travesties" by Tom Stoppard,
Michigan Repertory, Ann Arbor

Tom Stoppard is one of my favorite current English playwrights. His verbal pyrotechnics and his flair for witty and well-constructed plays is always delightful. Consequently, I saw on consecutive nights last week "The Real Inspector Hound" and "Travesties."

The "Real Inspector Hound" is a spoof on the levels of reality. In a short, basically one-act play, Stoppard constructs in a superb way a wonderfully funny satire on Agatha Christie-type murder mysteries and theatre critics.

In this play, nothing much makes sense and in that respect it resembles an absurdist drama, but it is a delicious parody that pokes fun at self-righteous theatre critics and at a certain kind of play.

Two theatre critics wander in and take seats just off stage (I've seen this produced with the critics actually sitting in the audience) and begin a discussion that turns into bickering. One of the critics is a bit of a hack who is more interested in promoting the careers and his romantic interest in attractive actresses while the other is an over-analytical second-string critic who loathes the critic whose job he covets.

The play they have come to review begins on stage and is a satire on both "Ten Little Indians" and "The Mousetrap" with every bit of murder mystery business thrown in and exaggerated. There is a dead body on stage which everyone overlooks and is finally discovered by Inspector Hound. The critics get sucked into the play and actually become part of the plot and both are shot, the intellectual critic getting it from the third-string critic on his newspaper.

This was the best production I have seen on this play, the major parts appealingly acted. My favorites were George C. Kappaz as the tweedy critic Moon and Eric Devine as the other critic Birdboot. Jane Mellon is a wide-eyed and attractive Felicity who goes around swinging a tennis racket, and David Montee, with a chance to step out of his well-played and frequent role of a servant, is an effective bumbler of a detective.

The second Stoppard play was "Travesties," which is a much longer and complicated full evening in the theatre. It too deals with the levels of reality as a minor British consulate official in Zurich in the years following World War I reminisces about his "friendship" with the greats who really did reside there at the time.

Henry Carr did exist but had apparently no actual association with Tristan Tzara, a dadaist artist, Lenin, then writing about capitalism and imperialism, and James Joyce, working at that time on "Ulysses." It was an historical accident that all three revolutionists, in art, politics and literature, should be in Zurich in 1917 and Stoppard exploits the situation by having Carr fantasize a close acquaintanceship with all of them.

Carr, played excellently by David Manis, did star as Algie in a local production of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Ernest" and this, too, is used to good effect as that play's plot is weaved into the memory of Carrand, his interaction with Joyce, Lenin and Tzara.

The dialogue is dazzling at times and the wit and cleverness of Stoppard is impressive as he makes use of song, poetry, limericks, speeches, puns and sight jokes to good effect.

A music hall bit in the second act comprising one complete scene between two females, one is played by Janice Reid who has been exceptional in every role she has played at the Michigan repertory this summer, was one of the funniest and most cunning bits of stage magic I have seen in a long time.

"Travesties" only ran until Aug. 6, while "The Real Inspector Hound" will be at the Hilberry at Wayne State University until Aug. 12.

HAPPENINGS

by Bob & Marvel White

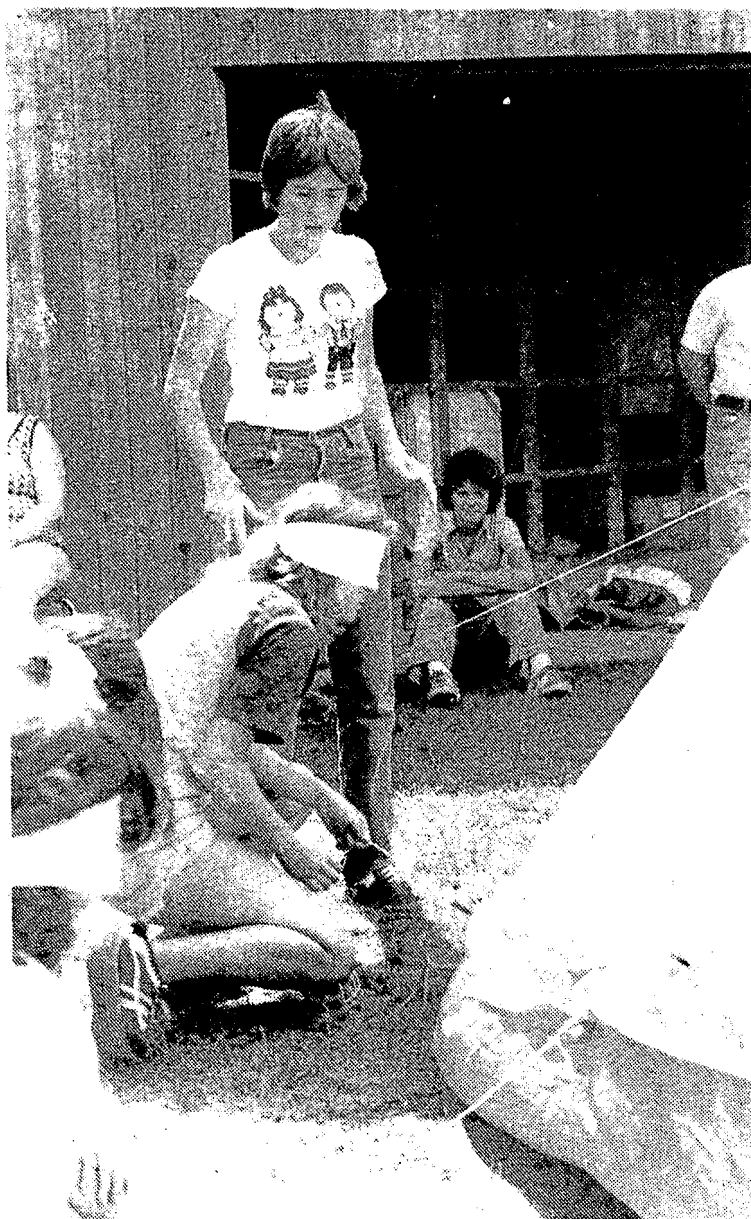

If you are planning to build your own home, one thing you might consider is the use of solar energy. Though there is still much to learn about the use of solar energy, home heating systems have been developed that can be fitted to almost any new house, as long as there is some exposure to the sun. Hot water heating systems are also available using solar energy. And while you are building is the best time to consider such an energy system, as it is much less expensive and will be more efficient if the energy systems and the house are designed at the same time. Energy is the problem of the future and solar energy may be one of the solutions. Indeed, we at BOB WHITE REAL ESTATE, 5856 S. Main St., right next to the new Clarkston Post Office, 625-5821 have the knowledge and experience to guide you in avoiding the many costly errors inherent in home buying. In this 4-H challenge program contest, five Clarkston area girls participate in exercises designed to promote cooperation. Here guide Amber Shanahan directs blindfolded Johanna Parmeter on pulling a tether for a tent the girls are setting up.

John Cestar of Clarkston is smiling because his sheep Chico won a blue ribbon in last Thursday's competition.

The fair isn't fun for 4-H members only. Joey and Kevin Dissmore of Waterford were delighted to feed the baby goats they discovered in the stables.

Michele Miller (from left), Donna Hillman and Kathy Hundzinski of the Blazing Saddles 4-H Club of Independence Township were on hand for riding competition.
