A scene to be oft-repeated this Labor Day weekend in parks and backyards across the country is the traditional picnic. Getting acquainted at such an event Monday evening were the Tom Lamm family of Robertson Court, Clarkston, and the Vic Jonescue family of Transparent Drive, Independence Township. Lamm [left] and Jonescue discovered they both teach industrial arts, Lamm at Clarkston High School and Jonescue at Waterford's Crary Junior High. So the kids at the T-ball picnic weren't the only ones talking about returning to school.

Villagers can vote on mill for police

By Mimi Mayer
Staff Writer

Clarkston residents will be able to vote with other Independence Township residents on funding their police services.

The Clarkston Village Council voted unanimously Monday night to add the question to the November ballot asking whether 1-mill increase in taxes should go to support police services.

One mill is $1 per $1,000 of the assessed value of property.

Currently, the village contracts with the township for police services.

Under the terms of the agreement, the village reimburses the township for 5.2 percent or the equivalent of 1 mill of the township and village's combined assessed value.

The combined assessed value is approximately $7.5 million, making the village payment $7,500, Village President Keith Hallman said.

But the village paid approximately $11,000 for township police services this year, Hallman said.

"The council felt even if we were paying a little more, we were receiving more in service than 1 mill," Hallman said.

Hallman said that this service has lapsed to the point where the village pays more for less service.

He attributed the drop in service to a contract the Independence Township Police have with the Pine Knob Music Theatre.

"This is not the township's fault. This is not the police chief's fault," Hallman stressed.

Independence Township Clerk Christopher Rose told the council that if township and village voters pass the proposed 1 mill tax levy, the agreement would be altered.

Village tightens up on park control

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

Policing the Clarkston Village Park will be easier for law enforcement officers in the future.

The Clarkston Village Council authorized Booth, Patterson and Karlstrom, the village attorneys, to draft an ordinance which states that the park may be used between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m. unless a special permit extending the hours is issued by the village council.

The park has been a hangout for young adults who disturbed nearby residents with their late-night parties.

Police were unable to ask the revelers to leave, however. There were no local statutes limiting park use.

In a letter to the council, Independence Township Director of Police Services Charles Kimbel suggested that the village "adopt park rules as ordinances."

The council opposed such a move. Village President Keith Hallman said he did not want to "clutter up" the village ordinances with the complete park rules.

Councilman James Weber suggested adopting an ordinance that regulates park hours, rather than adopting the entire set of rules in an ordinance.

"If we do adopt an ordinance, I'd like to see a time limit in it,"

Weber said. "If there's a group in there and you know they won't vacate until 11 o'clock, then we can clear them out."

Hallman said that regulating park hours would solve enforcement problems. "It gives (police) something to work with that they haven't had before," he added.

Several council members said they had noticed that parties were no longer being held in the park. Councilwoman Ruth Basinger told the council that a Holcomb Street resident had reported that the revelers hadn't appeared in the park for several days.

Morgan's burglarized

Morgan Service, 28 S. Main, was broken into sometime between 10 p.m. Aug. 23 and 7 a.m. Aug. 24, according to Independence Township police services.

"The large garage door was kicked—a hole was put in the bottom of the door. They crawled in through the hole," said Dirk Feneley, the investigating officer.

About $60 was taken out of the cash register, Feneley said.

Although there are no suspects, investigation is continuing, he said.

There is one clue—some hair found where entry was gained to the building, he added.

Township seeks guidelines

Private road construction up

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Private road construction is on the upswing again in Independence Township.

The township zoning board of appeals has approved five private roads in the last year, and requests for at least two more are facing the board in the next two weeks, according to Timothy Palulian, director of the building department.

In 1968, a plat act was passed by the state legislature that allowed the split of property no more than four times if parcels were less than 10 acres in any 10-year period.

At that time, an influx of private roads was felt by the township. Because the 10-year period was up this year, requests for more property splits—and more private roads—have increased.

For the last several years, requests for private roads have usually been denied.

But with the increased number of requests and approvals, the zoning board of appeals has asked for guidelines and standards for private road construction, and a committee was named last week to explore the problems.

"I think our problem stems from the philosophical change," said Richard Campbell, township attorney. "The township's philosophy three years ago was, 'No private roads, period.' The philosophy now is to permit private roads."

Private roads now make up between 30 and 40 percent of the roads in the township and most of the remainder are county roads.

County roads are maintained by the Oakland County Road Commission. Private roads are maintained by the people who live on them.

With 65 percent of the township's land undeveloped, and the property values increasing as Independence Township becomes more and more popular, requests for private roads will probably increase.

As the zoning board of appeals requires private road construction to meet county Class C standards, some of the private road problems may be eased.

But until 10 or 15 years have passed, "it's kind of a guess thing," Palulian said.

"I still have mixed emotions about it," he said.

"Because of the amount of people living (in large developments), there would be more concern over maintenance of the roads," he explained.

Short private roads with only a few homes may present more problems.

"If they all have 4-wheel drives, they may not be too concerned with maintaining those roads," Palulian explained.

Although the committee established to set guidelines has not set a date to meet, its decisions could have impact on the future of the township.

George Anderson, director of the water and sewer department, said, "I'm against private roads totally. It's just a nightmare you're going to create for somebody else maybe 10 to 15 years down the road."

Members of the committee are Floyd (Whitey) Tower, township supervisor; James Smith, chairman of the planning commission; Mel Vaara, zoning board of appeals chairman; Palulian, chairman of the lot split committee; a representative from Johnson and Anderson, the engineering firm retained by the township; and Campbell.

Thendara residents learned hard way

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Private road.

The words may conjure images of seclusion and luxury.

But surprises are in store for some Independence Township home buyers when they find out what happens to private roads when nature strikes with snow storms, spring thaws and road washouts, not to mention regular wear and tear causing ruts and holes.

"I was not aware of what a private road meant," said Leonard Nowak, a three-year resident of Thendara Park. "I felt we had more control over it as far as allowing what could happen on the roads."

"But that's not what it means at all," he continued. "A private road means you are responsible for maintaining it."

Nowak is presently the chairman of the road committee for the subdivision located in the northeast section of the township.

Thendara Park has had a road committee for about five years. Residents pay a fee—set at $105 this year—to grade the main roads four or five times a year and other subdivision roads twice a year.

The roads are also oiled at least once a year and gravel is brought in to strengthen hilly roads where heavy rainfall causes damage.

In the subdivision, which was built about 10 years ago, between five and six miles of private roads are maintained by the residents. There are about 125 homes now, with about 10 more under construction.

"The big thing is the snow removal program that costs us $4,500 a season," Nowak said.

Bids are taken and the group tries to hire someone with two rigs and a back-up rig, he said.

Although the builder informs buyers that the private roads are to be taken care of by them, they are sometimes surprised when they are asked to pay and participate in the road committee, Nowak said.

Residents who work to keep the roads in good shape face a time-consuming task.

"I have probably spent, since January, 50 to 60 hours of my personal time organizing," Nowak said.

And not everyone participates in the program, he said.

"They moved out here for that reason, they claim—they want the rough roads," he said.

Road captains assigned to collect money on their streets are supposed to encourage involvement of all their neighbors and collect the money.

Nowak said the roads and residents' attitudes are getting better as they see road conditions improve.

But there's still the element of surprise for new residents who moved to the rural area from the city.

"Especially the people who have had pavement all their lives and a good snow removal and repair through their taxes," he explained.

Another viewpoint was expressed by a five-year Thendara Park resident who has served as road captain for a total of two years and for one year as chairman of the road committee.

"We're lucky in Thendara Park in that, as far as I know, we're the only sub that has an active road maintenance program," Jeff Jeffery said.

"I personally would not like the creation of any more private roads in the township," he added.

The planned mid-August opening date for the Independence Township senior citizen center has come and gone and Timothy Doyle, parks and recreation director, is reluctant to name another date.

"I'd sure like to get in before the snow flies—there's no doubt about that," Doyle said. "And I'm sure the seniors are anxious, too."

Awaiting completion are a parking lot, outdoor lighting and a deck with a ramp.

Federal funds earmarked for the parking lot and outdoor lighting still have to be confirmed by the Oakland County's Community Development Act (CDA) office, and bids for the deck area have to be taken again, he said.

The interior of the building is complete except for a basement ceiling.

Township police off duty at night

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

There have been complaints about officers from Independence Township police services working at Pine Knob in the evening when local residents need help.

What some residents don't realize is that the local department has three police officers—one director and two patrolmen.

Their hours are from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Any time an officer is working past those hours, he is either working without pay or is on reserve duty.

The Pine Knob traffic control detail is done under contract. Pine Knob will pay the department $32,000 this year for the job the reserve unit was specifically hired to do.

The township police department coordinates the reserve unit now consisting of about 13 officers.

These police officers cover contracted services that pay for themselves like school functions (sports events), parades and Pine Knob.

Tax bills for township property owners now include one mill for police protection.

If a home is assessed at $30,000, (half its market value), one mill is $30 a year, or $1 for each $1,000 of assessed valuation.

One mill is projected to produce an income of $145,000 for the police department this year.

The budget for police protection is set at $270,570.

In order to augment the millage, money from the general fund ($11,000) and federal revenue sharing funds ($49,000) will be used.

Other income to the department comes from sources like fines and small business taxes earmarked for the police department.

The $32,000 Pine Knob contract includes one police car yearly for the township. The contract also saves the township money, according to Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower.

Before township police services took over the contract, expenses for assisting with traffic problems totaled about $14,000, Tower said.

The police budget also covers contracted services of four Oakland County sheriff's deputies for $138,000.

The deputies patrol the township for 24 hours, seven day a week.

Two officers patrol the 36 square miles of the township in the afternoon and one officer is on duty at all other times.

The sheriff's contract includes all expenses for the deputies including vehicles, maintenance and circle cars that enter the township to assist the officers on duty.

Radio dispatchers handle calls at the sheriff's department in Pontiac and a substation is located at Colombiere Center on Big Lake Road.

An officer in charge of the substation is included in the contract, but his salary is not added to the contract figure.

Township police services expenses include the building and vehicle maintenance costs, equipment and salaries for one office staff member and the director of the department.

Not included in the budget are expenses paid by the comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) that presently cover up to $14,000 in salaries and benefits for each CETA employee.

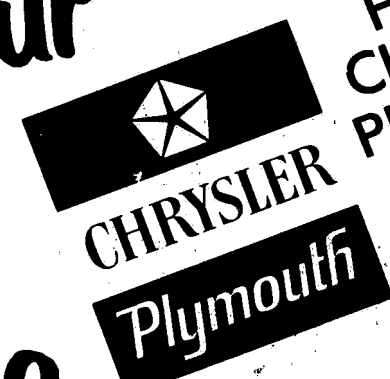

CETA-paid employees in the police department are one Oakland County sheriff's deputy, two patrol officers at township police services, three township radio dispatchers and one animal control officer.

Lesson in locking

by Pat Braunagel

I'm an inveterate car-locker. I have on occasion pulled up to a grocery store, removed the key from the ignition and locked the car while I ran in for a gallon of milk, leaving my husband in insured safety in the waiting auto.

Far from showing appreciation for being included in this protective routine, my husband has at these times refused to unlock the door for me, preferring to sit and watch me scrounge through my purse for my keys.

My caution in these cases, now close to being a reflex action, probably can be attributed to my years of carrying cameras in my car (now impossible with my current hatchback).

Still, it's a good habit.

There are times I forget to lock my car and have a moment of fright when I realize I've left something of value unprotected on the seat.

Hasn't this happened to us all? And haven't we been relieved that Clarkston is so trustworthy a community to permit an occasional slip-up like this?

But when this does happen, I vow once again not to tempt fate—or whoever.

By this stage of my life, I know that fate cannot be tempted too many times without succumbing.

Little people do not yet know this.

They have to be taught.

And they have to learn that Clarkston is not as trustworthy a community, alas, as we would like it to be.

Just as we lock our cars, they must learn to lock their bikes.

It's not nice—but it's true.

There's been a rash of bicycle thefts lately in downtown Clarkston, and police have reason to believe it will spread to the schools now that they are open.

After kids started riding their bikes to school last spring, 19 were stolen from school grounds before the summer vacation began.

It won't do to just put a lock across the wheel of a bike. It's got to be chained to something secure, then locked.

Tell 'em that—so the police won't have to after-the-fact.

Jim's jottings

How casual we've become. As a people and individually.

Take the weather, for instance. That's like Henny Youngman would say, "Take my wife . . . please."

High winds swept through Michigan in the early Saturday morning hours. WJR's weatherman at the Detroit station said; oh, hum. There was some gusts of wind that caused some damage, but a high pressure system moving in will make for a great weekend.

The majority of us were happy with that.

I switched the dial to FM. WLDM said; oh, hum. Two tornados were reported in Lapeer and Shiawassee counties early this morning. The heaviest damage was said to be in Perry. But, a high pressure . . . etc."

Perry? My dad lives in Perry! I reasoned that certainly no harm had come to him since I would have heard by now (10:30 a.m.)

Well, I was going to see Dad on Tuesday, but maybe Saturday would be a good day. We left about 1:30. I switched on Flint's WGMZ-FM.

The identical weather report was given. "Heaviest damage said to be in Perry."

We saw absolutely no damage as we passed through the east half of Shiawassee. We saw none at Perry's northern outskirts.

As we neared Dad's trailer home park some debris lay along the road. At the entrance stood one of Shiawassee county's finest, in uniform. A couple Red Cross rescue workers were with him.

"Could we see some identification? There's been some damage here and we're trying to hold traffic down in the park," said the man in brown.

Some damage? We could see a half dozen huge trees toppled. Later we would see seven, 12x60 mobile homes destroyed and an equal number damaged.

When I say destroyed, imagine the worst. Only the cement blocks for a foundation were on the lot. Two homes were eliminated. At 5:30 a.m. a tornado hit the corner of the park without warning.

So, while the big Detroit radio station was saying there was some "gusts of wind", at least 4 people were hospitalized from a tornado.

And we hear it just as casually. No reason to do otherwise. Can't get upset about everything.

It's just that when it hits close to home, even a weather report given casually, can be shocking.

No! My father wasn't involved. He watched all the lightning and heard the noises, but saw no destruction until we drove him by

Letters to the editor

Charges against librarian look like ill-advised politics

To the Editor:

I attended the Friends of the Independence Township Library for the first time at its last meeting. I heard that the Friends were meeting to discuss a boycott of the library, to boycott the very institution they were chartered to strengthen and support.

Others had read about the contemplated boycott in the Oakland Press, and presumably this "influx of new members" was there to disapprove of such a pressure tactic.

Mrs. Rauth maintains that these new members were there to block the proposal to reorganize the library.

I never heard about this proposal until I read it at this meeting where it was contained in a handout distributed to each present, addressed to the Friends, and from Irene Rauth.

The document was clearly intended for the now defunct library advisory board, even though addressed to the Friends.

This handout clearly implied that the librarian lacks "managerial skills," is fiscally irresponsible, and has not been spending the funds appropriated for the library, and is therefore swelling the township surplus to its present $321,000.

This handout asserts that the township is receiving state aid to the library to which it has no legal right because "local spending is below .3 mill."

I checked this out with the librarian, who asserted that the township is appropriating the .3 mill, and it is being spent, and we have been receiving state aid legitimately.

The township has been receiving it ever since it has had a public library, and more funds are expected from state aid in the near future.

This handout also proposes that the Friends support the election of a "new Township Board willing to support the Advisory Board's recommendation for a new librarian."

Although this handout is confusing to one new to the Friends group, it seems to be saying that the aims of the now defunct advisory board be reincarnated in one resulting from the reorganization of the library.

And this can only be done if a new township board is elected, and the voters agree by vote to institute an administrative body over the affairs of the library. The Friends refused to endorse this program.

I see this handout as political campaign literature that has no place in a non-political group. Even more seriously, it makes the library and the position of a librarian a political football.

Rumors can cause distress to those who are targeted by them, and to their families. This is also true of facts that are distorted to fit the intentions of those who broadcast them.

And the nit-picking complaints of certain residents of Clarkston have caused our librarian much distress, especially now since these complaints are now elevated to accusations of his incompetence, distributed to the press and to non-political groups like the Friends.

This is what the Friends, or those "influx of new members" tried to accomplish to detoxify what has and is happening to the library and to the person who has been put on probation because of their activity.

It may be true that Mrs. Rauth and her friends are not lobbying for the librarian's position. It would not take too much to verify the rumor that her resume is on file with township officials. I did check it out.

Harry T. Williams
Clarkston resident

(Editor's note: A two-page, undated resume from Irene Rauth is on file at the Independence Township Hall, according to Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower. "At one time she put in a resume," Tower said. "That was quite some time ago.")

What about secretaries?

To the editor:

As a parent of children in the Clarkston School District, I am concerned about what's happening in the schools.

I understand the Clarkston secretaries have worked without a contract since June 30. I have been told that their negotiations are moving slowly.

Is it a possibility that there may be a work stoppage like the bus drivers had last year because of this?

Lahiri's been undermined, subverted

To the editor:

I have followed and know the facts in Mr. Lahiri's case, but there are things which go beyond fact. They have to do with a very unpopular subject these days: moral right—or perhaps I should say a moral wrong.

I have seen a man undermined and subverted and stripped of his dignity (or rather, attempts made to do this—he is not someone whose dignity can be taken away), and finally his job, and without sufficient cause.

I have seen his family suffer for it. His wife, who has done no harm to anyone, is distressed and bewildered by actions all too familiar to me because I have been touched by them and am a native American.

I have been given a kindness, hospitality and civility in their home I have not found anywhere else since I have lived here—since 1972. I have seen their honesty for myself.

And I have seen the effects of the slander against them by two women: Irene Rauth and Chris Shull. One of these has for some time been after his job, and not fairly or justly, but by using the Friends of the Library and Chris Shull as well as Rev. Stewart to get it.

She has actually submitted her application for Mr. Lahiri's job before the job was open. She has made accusations and complaints which are irrelevant and, in some cases, simply untrue.

The other woman has supported her, and at one time in public called Mr. Lahiri a name that would have given him reason to sue for defamation of character—a vulgar, crude sort of name-calling that should have shown at least those present that she is unfit for any office, especially one in which such vulgarity is so out of place. Both have used distortions and intimidations and made irrelevant accusations only to get him out of office.

And lies and distortions coming from a body called Friends of the Library is to me a patent revelation that they have made the situation political.

That Irene Rauth has used this organization for her own purposes is clear. And yet this is a public service job, in a public service, and should have never been open to such manipulation. She and her friends have caused distress and clamor in the community. They have caused a family to suffer. With Friends like this, I would choose my enemies.

The damage has already been done, and it is too late to undo. Should Mr. Lahiri leave, and Irene Rauth get his job, the loss will be to the community, and it will deserve what it gets.

Even if Irene Rauth does not get his job, I have seen a very sleazy, shabby thing happen here. I am a friend of the library, but not a friend of the Friends of the Library.

Bird watching, close up

by Jim Fitzgerald

This column is for Bird watchers. It's usually not my style to gossip about celebrities, but Mark Fidrych had to get up and give me his seat.

Having spent three hours close to the most famous baseball player in the world, I would be remiss in my duties as a conscientious journalist if I didn't brag about it.

So turn green, Shirley Eder. I'm here today to tell the world that The Bird has a gorgeous girlfriend and they touched each other lovingly—usually on the arm or knee or back of the head—about six times an inning during a nine-inning game in which the hitters prevailed and the pitchers were changed five times.

And the Bird's bodyguard was changed in the middle of the sixth inning.

Don't you just adore it?

It was because of my son-in-law, Mike the Jock, that I got close to The Bird. Mike was a college football player and a high school coach. He is now a school administrator in northern Michigan, still playing muscle games and generally intimidating his father-in-law, who never played anything rougher than marbles.

So when Mike sent word that he'd be visiting in Detroit and would like to see a baseball game, I was determined to impress him with my stature in the sports world. With a lot of help from a friend, I got the best seats in Tiger Stadium for a game with Cleveland.

When the usher showed us to our box, just a few feet from home plate, he had to shoo out a young couple who had inadvertently sat in our seats. Half of the young couple was The Bird, who, as you know if you don't live on Mars, is sitting out the balance of this baseball season because of a lame arm.

"It is frequently necessary for ushers to move aside more obscure people to make room for me when I attend sports events," I explained to Mike, who even looks athletic when his mouth is hanging open.

Fidrych and friend sat directly ahead of us the rest of the game. Of course, you want to know what they were wearing.

The Bird wore an almost-white

T-shirt that didn't reach the top of his blue corduroy trousers, and green tennis shoes. It's a casual look which Mark could probably achieve even if he didn't make $90,000 a year. My son Nerd achieves it every day and he is unemployed.

The Bird's companion wore a checkered blouse and blue jeans with "Chic" lettered on the hip pocket. There is no way she could ever fit her hand into her hip pocket.

She has a deep tan and her sun-streaked blond hair hangs long and loose. As she watched the game, she frequently tilted her head backward and slightly shivered her torso, causing her golden tresses to fall away from her high cheekbones and rest lightly in the soft curves made where her neck meets her bared shoulders.

A couple of times, I drank my bag of peanuts and stuck my hand in my glass of beer.

A man who looked like Omar Sharif sat directly across the aisle from The Bird, wearing a three-piece suit. He sat side-saddled, with a leg over the arm of his seat, so he faced Fidrych instead of the ball field. He carried a walkie-talkie into which he occasionally muttered.

It was Omar's job to keep autograph-seekers away from The Bird. He would block the aisle, explaining politely that Fidrych wanted to enjoy the game, so please don't bother him. But the security wasn't 100 percent.

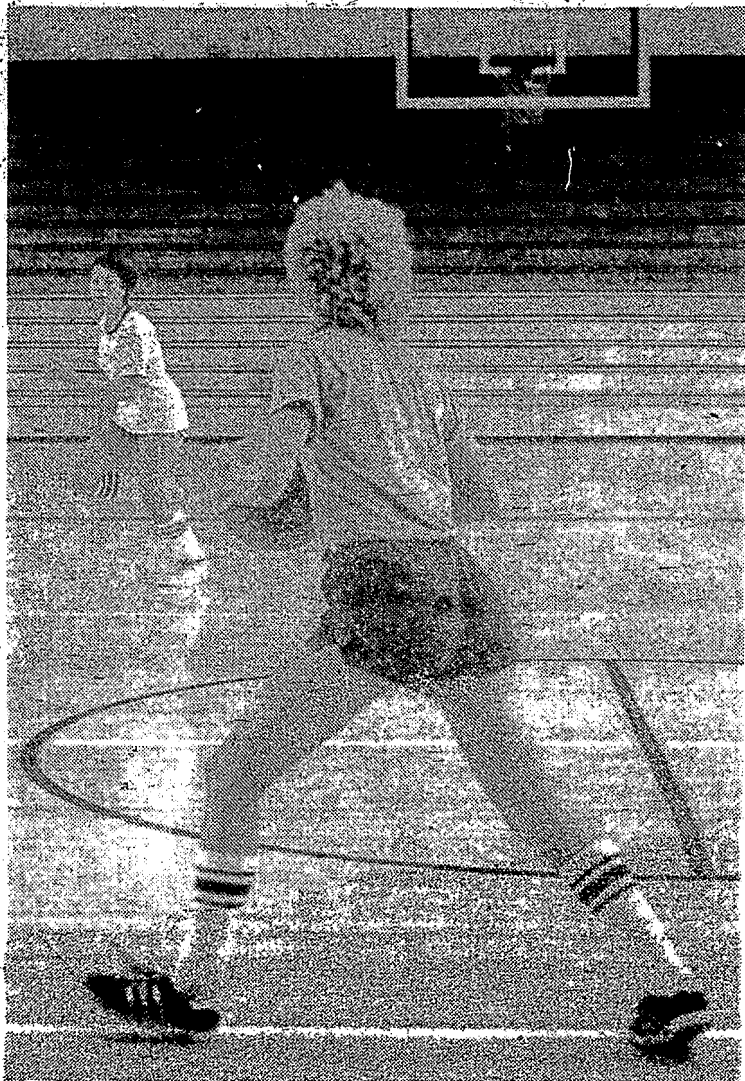

Many fans approached The Bird from his blind side, sometimes stepping on my feet. He always signed their score books graciously. And Omar was also a softie. He sometimes accepted score books from little kids and quietly got The Bird to sign them.

The second bodyguard was stationed several rows back, at the ramp entrance. His job was to give Omar someone to talk to on the walkie-talkie, and to bat for him in the sixth inning when Omar had to go to the john.

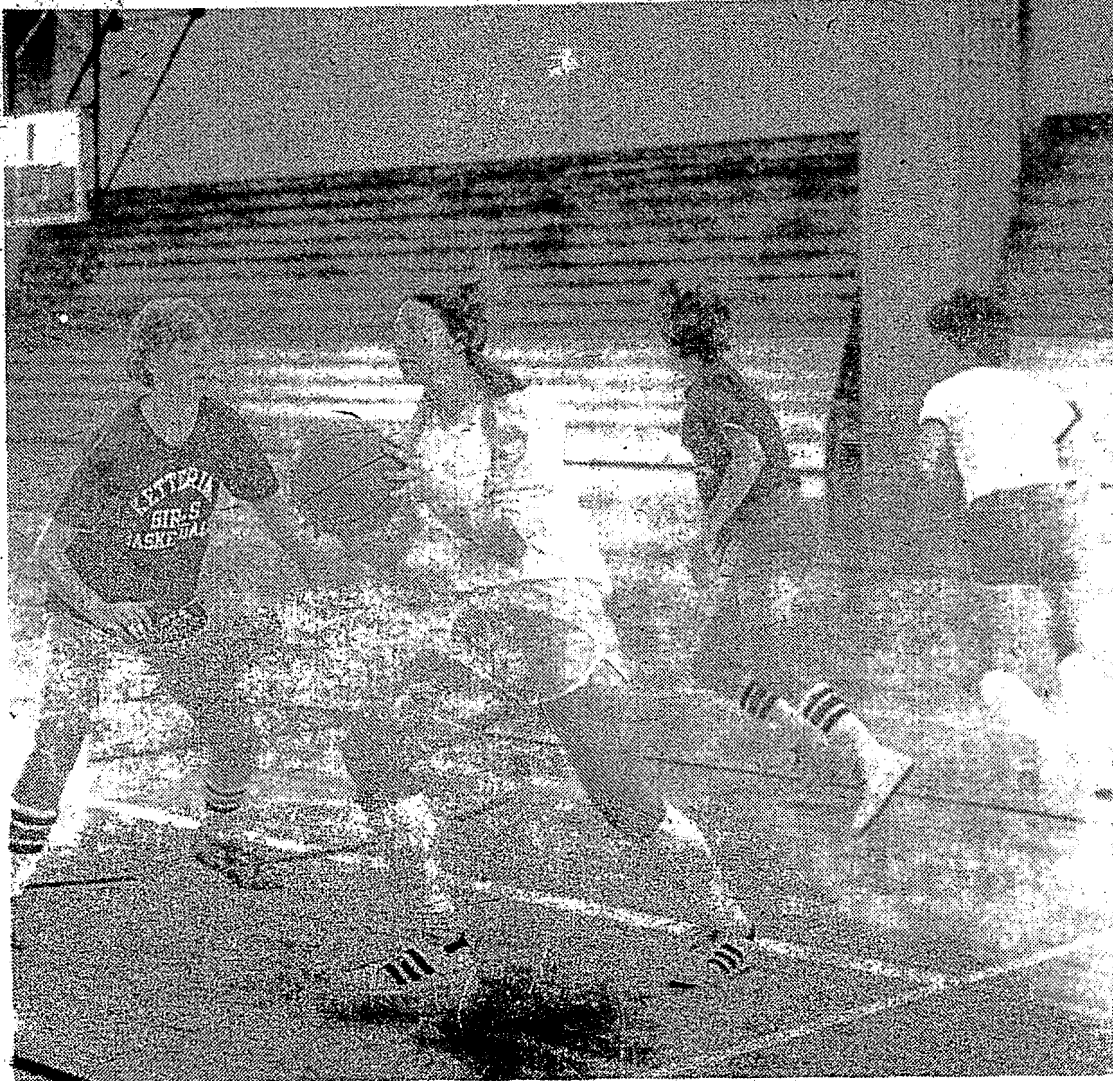

The Bird and his friend left at the top of the ninth inning, but we stayed until the end. Mike the Jock knows the game is never over until the last out is made, and I had more peanuts to drink.

Detroit won, 9 to 5. Shirley Eder never would have told you that.

Racing down the court, Terry Collier applies some of the techniques she picked up during Solak's lecture.

Pam Blower grabs a rebound as teammate Kay Pearson takes off to cover the far end of the court. Members of the Clarkston High School girls' basketball team faced off against players from Waterford-Kettering (in dark shirts) in a drill following Solak's lecture.

Gloria Solak, head coach for the University of Michigan's women's basketball, delivering tips on the fast break. During her guest lecture Aug. 22, Solak said, "You girls have got to thunder down the court."

'M' coach rallies CHS girls

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

"What are you, a pussy cat or a tiger? Let's hear you growl when you get that ball!"

This was only one command Gloria Soluk, head coach for the University of Michigan's women's basketball team, gave to members of the Clarkston and Waterford Kettering high schools girls' basketball teams last week.

Soluk coached the girls at the request of Clarkston coach Jan Modesitt and Kettering's Ron Zeeman. Though basketball fundamentals were incidentally discussed, Soluk concentrated her time on teaching the girls one-on-one defensive moves and fast breaks.

Throughout the exercises, Soluk pushed for better rebounds, careful throws and hustle, hustle, hustle.

"Come on, you want to beat each other down the court," she shouted. "You have to be much quicker than that. My grandmother could do better—and she's dead."

Soluk divided the CHS basketball court into five zones and selected two, three, four and then five girls to demonstrate how the zones can be used to cover the court effectively and quickly.

Each member of the five-girl fast-break team has its own offensive role, either in passing the ball or simply helping to line up for a shot.

After the Soluk method was thoroughly demonstrated, the visiting coach pitted two five-girl teams against each other.

The girls collapsed on the gymnasium floor after the workout.

Soluk, who joined the U of M sports staff last year, has been coaching girls' basketball for 13 years. During a basketball camp held in Ann Arbor this summer, she was asked to give the special coaching session by the two high school coaches.

The first game of the girls' basketball season will be held at 6 p.m. Sept. 12 at Lake Orion High School.

Young racers rev up

Midget racing groups from Indiana, Ohio and Michigan will be competing for novice, junior and senior trophies.

A bake sale, sponsored by the parents of the young drivers, will also be held with the proceeds going to muscular dystrophy research.

A lot number is used in urban centers where there had been a concentrated development of land. A property is transformed from farm or vacant land into a subdivision laid out in numbered lots. The plan, if approved, is accepted by the municipality and recorded. The property would then be identified as "Being all of Lot #162 in the Bower Hill Plan of Lots (for example); as recorded and laid out in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of Dauphin County in Plan Book Volume 18 Page 113, being designated as B block 14, Lot 44 in the Records of the Dauphin County Deed Registry Office."

Fire engines are fascinating....

And Clarkston is a fascinating village in which to live!

And, Clarkston being our home, we visited our fire department. That's Irene McCabe, left, and Carol Essary, of Max Brook Realtors, with Independence Township Fire Department Assistant Fire Chief Jack Beach and Captain Dale Bailey. Our fire department needs help (see Fire Chief Frank Ronk's comments below) and, as concerned citizens of the Village, we gave a donation toward the purchase of a resuscitator (Carol with Assistant Chief Beach, at right).

"Independence Township Fire Department had its beginning in the 1930's, with buckets and ladders and a 1925 Model T pumper. We still have the Model T in addition to 13 pieces of equipment, 9 full-time people and about 40 volunteers. We're judged close in efficiency with any other fire department but we need the support of our citizens in our continued growing pains. We're on a 5-year replacement program for engines and pumpers—and in the next 3 years we will need another pumper. Our medical emergency runs have doubled in the last two years—now better than 200 runs a year—and we need a couple of resuscitators ($600 each) and extraction equipment (like the Hurst Jaws of Life, $5,000 each). All are important. We've saved several lives already. Also, we need breathing apparatus for firemen ($600 each). Someday—soon, we will need an aerial truck. It's an ongoing, updating thing... a continuing program."

Police millage on Clarkston ballot

The village pays approximately 1.5 mills for police service. Rose suggested that the council add the millage questions to the November ballot for two reasons.

"It will decrease the (village) payment. I think it will happen," Rose said.

Secondly, the payments will be standardized, Rose said.

"If we put it on (the ballot) for the township and they don't put it on in the village, it will just increase the cost to the village anyway," Rose said.

Rose said the funds gathered from the millage won't change police service dramatically if it does pass.

If the millage does not pass, Independence Township police services will be reduced to one police chief and no full time patrolman, Rose said.

Most of the police protection for the village and the township would come from the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, Rose said.

In the past, Hallman has castigated the sheriff's department for giving poor service to village residents. He said Monday he hopes the millage passes so village residents can continue to receive good police coverage.

The millage would take effect in December, 1979 and cover a 10-year span.

Hallman said adding the police millage to the ballot will give village voters an opportunity to voice their opinions on payments for police services.

"By going this way, we are able to accept or deny it," he added. Voters in the village and in the township will consider the same question on the November ballot. Votes from the two units will be counted together, not tallied separately. Therefore, there is no chance the proposition could pass in one unit and be defeated in the other, Rose said.

If the proposal does pass, the village will continue to be billed for the difference in level of support, and this amount ought to be lower than it is now, although there will be an overall increase in the amount of support from both units, Rose said.

The Clarkston Village Planning Commission will hold its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, September 5, 1978 at 7:30 p.m. in the Clarkston Village Hall, 375 Depot Road, Clarkston, Michigan 48016.

New Dixie restaurant planned

The Tally-Ho and Blue Max are coming down, and a new Greek/Italian restaurant is going up in their place on Dixie Highway.

Chris Nicholas of Clarkston, the original owner of the Tally-Ho, said he hopes to start construction in September on the new Alexander's Restaurant.

The four-lot site on the east side of Dixie just south of M-15 has 153 feet of frontage on the highway.

The new 5,760-square-foot building, which will have seating for 150 in the bar and two dining areas, will be constructed 150 feet back from the highway and will be surrounded by a paved, lighted parking lot for 64 cars, Nicholas told the Independence Township Planning Commission Aug. 24.

Site plan approval was granted Nicholas, contingent on the State Highway Department's approving the two driveways in the plan. Nicholas said he wanted to retain the two drives to allow for one-way traffic around the building.

"Whatever we do, it's got to be an improvement," planning commission member Jerry Powell commented. "The Tally-Ho has stood vacant for a long time. Frankly, it's an eyesore to that section of Dixie Highway."

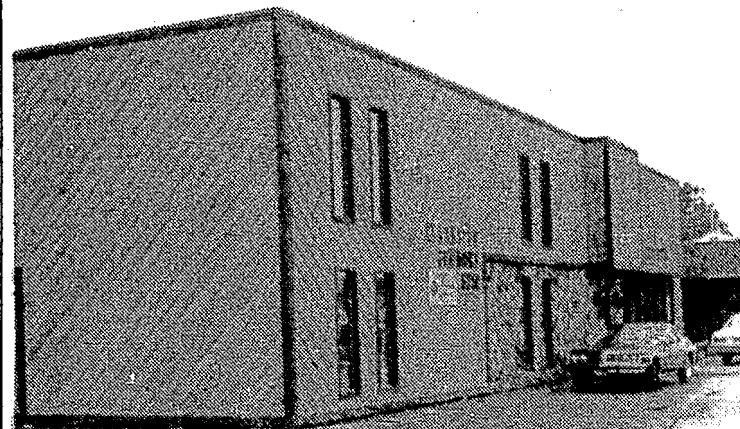

Nicholas sold the two businesses but not the property in 1975.

He said his plans for the new restaurant include a Greek/Italian menu like that of the Highland House on M-59 in Highland Township, owned by Nicholas' brother Tom.

Kimbel says he's not trying to drop sheriff's contract

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Charles Kimbel, acting director of Independence Township police services, said he is not advocating dropping the Oakland County sheriff's contract as indicated in an area daily newspaper story last week.

When he read the story his reaction was: "Oh my God, what has this guy done to me?" Kimbel said.

The reporter asked him when the best time would be to end a contract, Kimbel said.

He responded by saying "it would be better to end a contract at the end of a period rather than in the middle."

His answer referred to sound business practice and not to ending the sheriff's department contract when it expires at the end of May, Kimbel said.

"I had no intentions of implying that. That was definitely not my intent," he said emphatically.

Unless voters approve an additional mill for police protection on the November ballot, the police department will be cut, he said. And with the growth of the township, it needs more police protection.

"The intent is to eliminate haggling over where the police department is going to be funded," Kimbel said. "(The township board) wants the money to come from the millage."

"I was not advocating that they drop the sheriff's department," he said. "If we get the money, maybe they could hire a couple more deputies or officers in my department."

Between the months spent working on budget approval by the township board and dealing with reactions to reports in newspapers, he's getting frustrated, Kimbel said.

"Everybody seems to have lost what I'm here for—the protection of the citizens of the township," he said.

Kimbel emphasized that he does not determine which department police officers come from or how many should be hired.

"I don't have that power and I'm not trying to have that kind of power," he said.

"To me it should be left up to the citizens as a total what they want to pay for," he said.

And the township board makes the final decision whether to increase or decrease police protection, he said.

Public input comes from citizens voting on taxes and expressing opinions at meetings, he added.

One item in the newspaper story he confirmed is his plan to apply for director of police services when the township board takes applications.

He has been serving as acting director since Jack McCall resigned May 31.

"I'm totally adaptable to what the citizens want," Kimbel said.

"I'm here to serve them. That's what I'm trying to do."

Probing questions determine the chain of events in a crime. Spalo is efficient and quick to note conflicting accounts as he investigates why a stolen three-wheeled motorbike was abandoned in a field by the suspects.

While cruising an Independence Township neighborhood, Oakland County Sheriff's Deputy Gary Spalo stops to check a house under construction. "You have to look at a neighborhood like a crook does," he said.

One deputy, many roles

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

Cops. The fuzz. The police. The law.

These terms, with all their positive or negative connotations, are used by the public when they talk about law enforcement officers.

Often, the term a person uses indicates his attitudes about the public servants hired to maintain order.

Deputy Gary Spalo of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department is very much aware of this.

"I have to be a different person to the pig farmer and the village residents," he said. "This job makes you a hypocrite."

Spalo is one of the deputies who cover the Independence Township/Springfield Township/Clarkston beat. He's straightforward when he wants to be and sly if the situation warrants it.

Spalo's career in law enforcement stretches over 10 years. He's been a private detective and a Michigan State Police trooper, and has worked for the Sheriff's Department in Brandon Township as well as the Clarkston area.

All along the way, Spalo has learned to be careful when he deals with people.

When Spalo is out cruising a neighborhood looking for suspicious activity, he makes a point of waving to all residents he sees on the streets, especially the children.

"That's where the attitudes start, right here at this age," Spalo said. Almost to illustrate this point, Spalo was courteous and businesslike when he questioned two boys who were toting a BB gun.

"You have to learn to assess people quickly in this job," he said.

A call came over the radio. A Springfield Township resident thought he had spotted a neighbor boy riding a motor bike powered by an engine stolen from the resident.

Spalo responded quickly to the call and began to question the resident. The family had returned from their vacation to find their house ransacked and a motorcycle, a three-wheeled minibike, keys to a truck stored in the garage and a heavy link chain stolen from their garage. They had not reported the crime to police.

Throughout the interview,

Spalo was attentive and concerned. He invited the crime victim to hop into the police car and lead him to the suspect.

The boy was a 15-year-old who had caused trouble before, the resident said. Though he had suspected that the youth and another from the neighborhood had stolen other articles from his house, the complainant had no hard evidence.

Nevertheless, the man had talked with the boy's parents, who didn't believe his charges.

Spalo listened to this account and prepared to talk with the youth and his parents. Before he left the car, Spalo grabbed his night stick. He was tapping it on his thigh when the boy's mother answered the door.

Approximately 20 minutes later, Spalo returned to tell the complainant the boy had confessed to breaking into his garage and stealing the three-wheeler with the help of another boy.

The youth denied that he'd vandalized the house. The boy also said he hadn't stolen the other missing items, Spalo said.

Spalo returned to the house to get the stolen engine, already attached to the boy's motorbike.

He then went to find the other boy who had been implicated in the theft.

The second boy led Spalo right to the stolen three-wheeler, hidden in a clump of weeds behind a neighbor's barn, the motorbike was stripped down to the frame.

Spalo adopted a fatherly attitude as he listened to the boy's account of the incident. The other boy had threatened to beat him, he said, unless he helped him conceal the three-wheeler.

Later, Spalo said he'd deliberately acted in a paternalistic manner with the second youth. He'd wanted to gain the boy's trust, Spalo explained.

When Spalo was explaining the situation to the second youth's mother, he was careful to point out that her son had no legal culpability in the crime but that he would probably have to appear in court as a material witness.

Once more, Spalo spoke with the first youth. There was no evidence suggesting that the boy had broken into the house though Spalo had caught him making several conflicting statements during questioning.

In his report on the incident, Spalo suggested that the boy be given a lie detector test, a move he had warned him might take place.

How did Spalo tell the parents their son had been accused of stealing? "I tell them straight from the shoulder so they overcome the initial shock," Spalo said.

"Their personal pride is hurt. They think they've raised a good boy," he continued.

Spalo said he did doubt the boy's account of the incident.

"People who have that personality will tell you what you want to believe," he said.

"It is my code. If you can, be as honest as you can with people. But don't expect them to be honest with you," he said.

At no time was Spalo ready to condemn the boy. "I can say I've never run anyone up on a bum charge," Spalo said. "If you can't prove a case, then you should disprove it."

Spalo termed the boy an "average juvenile offender. He sees something he desires, he sees an opportunity to get it, so he does.

"If you say the kid is bad,

Davisburg suits the Burns family

Country Living

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

"It's kind of a New England feeling. When you're coming down Andersonville Road and turn a corner, you can see the trees and the steeple of the old church."

So Kara Lynne Burns describes Davisburg, a small collection of buildings nestled in the hills of Springfield Township.

Don and Kara Lynne Burns have lived in Davisburg for 14 years and have found it's a good place to raise their three children, Shannon, 12; Ellen, 11; and Phillip, 9.

Though they originally lived in the heart of the community in a house they refurbished over a 12-year occupancy, the family moved two years ago into a house that they've transformed from an old hunting lodge into a home.

"I love this house. It's us, really," Don said.

Kara Lynne said the family has changed every room in the house. "Before we moved in, we repainted and papered the whole house with the help of a lot of friends. Shannon had a birthday dinner off the wallpaper table," she said.

"We're always doing something like that," Kara Lynne added.

Don is presently working on replacing the porch windows that line the front of the house with cedar planks and dry wall.

He will change a portion of the porch into a master bedroom.

"We had a lot of friends help us," Kara Lynne said. "That way, it wasn't work but fun. Somebody would get some beer or bring in some coffee. We'd work hard and get giddy and laugh."

Throughout the house are sentimental reminders of these good times. The lamp hanging over the kitchen table was moved by Don from the porch.

After the wallpaper was hung, a friend volunteered to decorate the fixture with pineapples, a pattern found on the wallcovering.

"We knew some of the people who worked on the house before we got it," Kara Lynne said. One of their doorknobs was fashioned by a Davisburg blacksmith, she explained.

Redecorating the home has been so much a part of the Burns' lives that they took their first family vacation away from home only three years ago, Don said. In other years, the family spruced up their home.

But even when the family leaves home, the continual project of redecorating and renovating stays with them.

"We usually try to pick up a souvenir from our vacation, something we have not purchased," Don said. These treasures are almost always incorporated into the house.

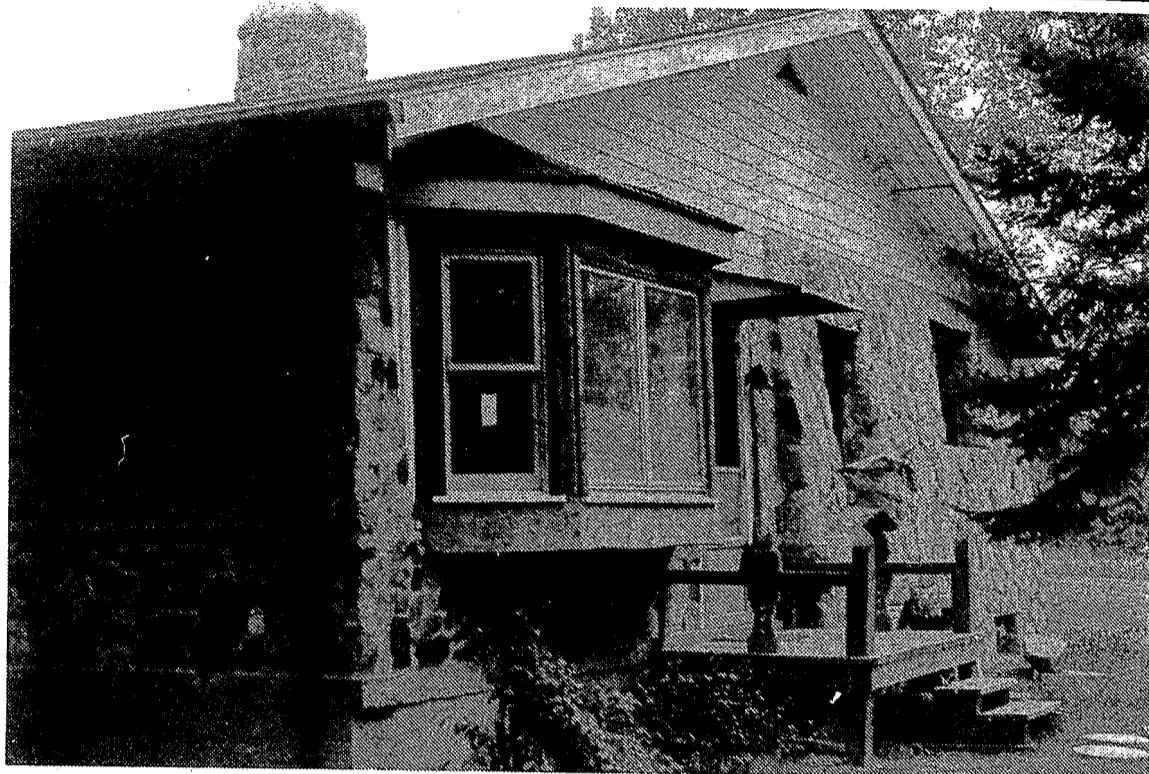

A rock Kara Lynne found during a vacation up north was included in a stone wall Don constructed in their former house. This year, the family discovered a piece of driftwood which they've placed in their front yard.

From the front windows, a view of the Davisburg trout pond can be enjoyed. The back portion of their lot covers a full 12 acres.

At first, the children were reluctant to leave their neighborhood friends behind and move farther into the country, Kara Lynne said. "But now they can ride the snowmobile and trail bike over 12 acres, they like it more," she said.

One advantage of the new locale was the pony Tom which came with the land. The former owner was moving to a subdivision in Clarkston and said she would give the horse to the family.

Though all the children have enjoyed the pony, Shannon said it was one of the things she liked best about the new house.

Even complex structural renovations have been successfully completed by Don Burns. Don constructed this bay window and porch on the west side of the house.

Ellen likes all the open land, "because you have room to do stuff." And Phillip pointed out, "If you wanted to get away, there is a bunch of trees in the back of our property. It's a place to be alone."

Teaching the children to be responsible has been important to Don and Kara Lynne.

"I think our kids will know a little about a lot of things from what we've done," she said.

Among their chores are complete care of the pony, Groucho the cat and the family dog, Smokie.

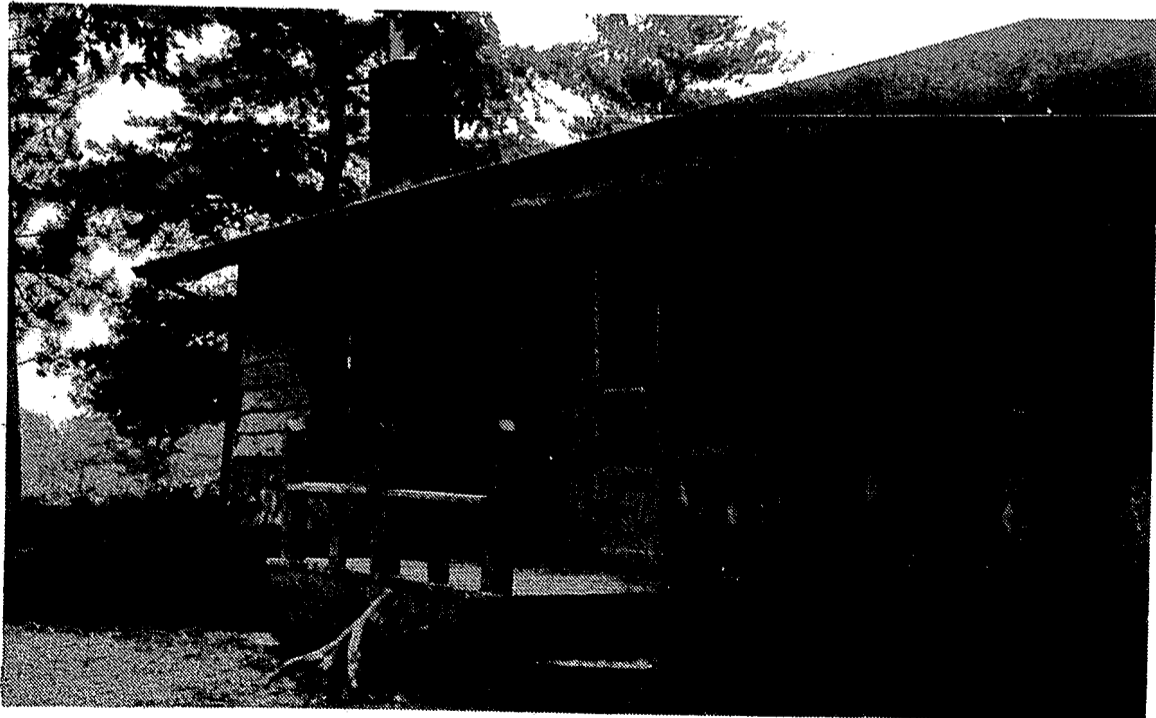

"Ellen and Phillip helped me put in the garden this summer," Kara Lynne said. "Ellen's real good with gardens. She checks to see if the tomatoes are ripe and picks the beans."

"When our kids grow up, they'll know where their food comes from," she added.

Don and Kara Lynne especially like the view of the Davisburg trout pond and the hills beyond that they can glimpse from their front porch.

A glassed porch once ran across the front of Don and Kara Lynne Burns' Springfield Township home. Don retained the house's rustic flavor by replacing windows with cedar planks.

Feeding an exotic mixture of grains to the Burns' pony Tom. Shannon said, "This is his Hershey bar."

While the Burns children are encouraged to speak their minds, Ellen and Phillip listen to a bit of Don's advice.

Country Living

Shannon often gives a hand in the kitchen, too, Kara Lynne said.

"And they've been exposed to the construction business with all our projects," Don said. Phillip knows his tools."

The children's acceptance of daily tasks has made it easier for Kara Lynne to be a mother and work as a real estate broker.

"They all take care of themselves," she said. "When I leave in the morning, I leave a list of jobs. When I get home, they're usually done."

The children cooperate "as well as normal brothers and sisters," Kara Lynne continued. "I wouldn't be able to work if they didn't get along."

With all the land at the family's disposal, it isn't surprising that Don has hopes of developing it—as a berry farm. The family dreams of starting "Burns' Berry Bush," as Shannon termed it.

The family was planting pine seedlings last June when Ellen discovered wild strawberries.

"They were fabulous," Don said. "We've got a lot of wild raspberries on this place. We plan to have domesticated raspberries."

Like the rest of the Burnses, Don is a Davisburg booster. "It's just a more relaxed atmosphere out here. It's a very nice community," he said.

He swept his arm in a panoramic gesture that included his home, his land and the Springfield Township hills in the background. "It's nice to have a place to get away from the rat race for awhile."

Lunch menu expands

Clarkston junior high and elementary schools are going to try to capture a bigger chunk of the lunch trade this year by offering pupils a choice of main dishes.

The pupils also will be allowed to select two of three side dishes.

The idea of providing alternatives on the menus was introduced at the junior highs last February and then tried at the elementary schools in May.

This type of menu has been offered at the senior high for several years.

"The results so far have shown that more students participate in the lunch program and less food is being wasted by being thrown out," said William Dennis, administrative assistant in the school district. "Both factors are very significant considering the increased cost of food."

The type A lunch for elementary pupils consists of a main dish, three-quarters of a cup of vegetables and fruit, bread or an equivalent and a half pint of milk. These standard quantities are not to be altered.

Pine Knob Elementary School has been chosen to participate in a federal study to determine the positive effects of offering varying quantities of both main and side dishes, Dennis said.

"Although the choice menu will result in more preparation and increased cost, it is hoped that the increased participation will offset this, allowing the lunches to remain at 55 cents for elementary and 60 cents for secondary," Dennis said.

Elementary pupils will be able to purchase weekly lunch tickets on the first day of each school week only. If no ticket is purchased, the students buying lunches will pay for them when they receive them.

"This change is an attempt to increase instruction time by cutting down on tasks such as collecting daily lunch monies," Dennis said.

"It is felt that all of these changes will allow food services to continue to produce highly nutritional meals for the lowest possible cost," he said.

Dear Neighbors,

Please take a moment to read these few words. They're meant to be more than just an advertisement for smoke detectors.

Fires probably destroy as many homes as any form of disaster, natural or otherwise. Statistics prove that more fires occur during the summer months than any other time of the year... including the winter season.

If you were to build a new home today, building code regulations would require the installation of at least one smoke detector.

Yet with all this information at hand, we'll bet the vast majority of older homes in our community are still without this type of protection. Now at least... cost shouldn't be a factor.

We have recently purchased over 100 HONEYWELL IONIZATION SMOKE DETECTORS and are offering them to our community at slightly above our cost. When you deduct the $5.00 factory rebate, your cost is $10.35 (including battery).

Please! Won't you stop to consider what you're missing by not having this type of protection; more importantly... what you could be missing.

Sincerely,
Ravine Lighting

At the sixth session, all of the speakers will appear on a panel with Dr. Irving D. Kernis, Clarkston pediatrician, to answer questions from the audience. The programs are scheduled for 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Enrollment is limited to 50 persons, and a $5 fee will be charged for the series.

Registrations can be made by calling Youth Assistance worker Garry Pullins at his office in Independence Center, 673-1219.

Bicycle racing is a big international sport, but you wouldn't know it from the number of bicycle racers in the United States. The automobile diverted attention from the bicycle in this country and by the sixties, Americans had faded from the international bicycle scene. People who are interested in bicycle racing claim that America has the talent to compete on the international level, but doesn't have the facilities to train racers and have them compete in quality competition on the way up. Maybe current interest in physical fitness, and bicycle riding as a means to do that end, will change the outlook in the next several years.

On job with Deputy Spalo

you're probably wrong. If you say the kid was a thief this one time, you're probably right," Spalo continued.

Spalo considers himself a realist when it comes to people. Still there are times when the job really gets to him, he said.

"The normal people, the people who live honestly and are law-abiding citizens, I never get to see those people," Spalo said.

"There are times when I have a rough day and I'm just gripping the steering wheel like this," Spalo said. When these days occur, Spalo runs, "shoots the hell out of a target," with his handgun or may go out for a drink with his buddies.

"Sometimes, I cry," he said.

Married for four years, Spalo said he tries to avoid worrying his wife with accounts of the day's activities.

"I don't take my job home with me," he said. His wife was aware that his job involves some danger when they married, Spalo said.

Yet, with all the pressure that being a sheriff's deputy brings, Spalo said he loves his job. "I like people. They're what life is all about," he said.

"I enjoy handling firearms, I like the ability to respond quickly to a situation, I like to drive, I like the authority that goes with the job—the prestige, the respect that goes with the job," he continued.

Above all, Spalo sees his work as a serious commitment. "You inherit a lot when you put on a badge and a uniform," he said. "You have not only a responsibility to your brother officers, but you have a responsibility to the people."

Spalo stores a stolen motorbike engine in a locker at the Oakland County Sheriff's Department complex in Pontiac. The engine will be held until used as evidence in a trial.

Music makers plan fundraiser

Rowena and the Minstrel Mongers, familiar to Clarkston area residents who saw their performance during the Michigan Artrain's stint in Clarkston, will be only one of many performing groups appearing at a Project Drongo benefit in the Clarkston Park off Depot Road Oct. 7.

Sponsored by Project REACT, an Independence Township/Lake Orion-based CB group, the benefit is a fundraiser for Drongo, the Minstrel Monger's traveling showmobile.

Activities will begin at noon and will run until 10 p.m. and will include an auction and musical talent of various kinds.

Although the auction will last most of the day, professional auctioneer Gale Winter will be on hand at the park between 2 and 4 p.m. Among the articles he'll be hawking are macrame items, a hair cut, 50 pounds of wild bird seed, a jar of strawberry-rhubarb jam, hand-crafted wrought iron, art supplies, a dinner at Gus' Steak House in Lake Orion, hand-made wood-carvings and drawings by local artists.

As well as the Minstrel Mongers, other entertainers will provide American and Irish folk music plus contemporary acoustical music.

Local musicians who want to add their talents to the show can contact Rowena Reik at 628-2456 to volunteer.

Carol Cleveland, one of the benefit's organizers, said monies raised by the auction and drawings will go to refurbish Drongo, the flatbed truck used by the Minstrel Mongers in the free shows they put on for community groups. As a non-profit organization, Project REACT gives the day-long affair official tax-exempt status.

The Clarkston Village Council granted permission for the fundraiser to be held in the Clarkston park at an Aug. 14 meeting.

A course that covers many aspects of real estate sales for the future real estate salesperson and the homeowner alike will be offered at St. Mary's College, Orchard Lake, starting Sept. 7.

"Real Estate Operation," a three-credit-hour course, will cover a variety of real estate topics and will meet on Thursday nights from 7-10 p.m. Room 102 of St. Mary's College Building at the Orchard Lake campus.

Upon completion of the course, students will have fulfilled 45 clock hours of the state's educational requirements for broker applicants. The Birmingham-Bloomfield Board of Realtors has accredited the course and will award each realtor-associate of the board 30 class hours toward state time requirements.

The course is an approved statutory course by the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulation.

Class registration takes place on Friday, Sept. 1 from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. For more information, write to Randall Berd, St. Mary's College, Orchard Lake, Mi. 48033 or call 682-1885.

Rough sawn pine will cover holes between boards, but the beams Matt Ritter, Tom's nephew, loves to climb up will remain the same.

On view from Dixie Highway, Ritter's Apple and Cider Barn will look almost the same as it did 130 years ago. Differences will be a red and white awning around the northwest corner and a roll-up door with antique wood laminated on the front.

Old barn revitalized

Ritter creating new cider stop for antique buffs this fall

Seekers of fresh cider and hot donuts won't have far to drive this fall.

After years of planning and a spring and summer spent traveling all over Michigan gathering ideas and goodies, Tom Ritter plans to open Ritter's Apple and Cider Barn Sept. 17.

The barn sits behind Ritter's Farm Market, 6684 Dixie Highway just south of M-15.

His plan is "to retain the image of the barn as it appeared 130 years ago," Ritter said. "It is of the old hand-hewn, wooden peg variety inner structure and probably more sound than modern-day structures."

As many antique materials as possible will be used to restore the barn, he said.

A collection of antiques will decorate the barn's walls. The 100- to 200-year-old farm tools including cross-cut saws, bottle corkers, hay forks and scythes from all over Michigan were collected by Ritter's father who bought the farm market in 1947.

A smaller barn was torn down and the wood will be used to finish walls and build shelves and platforms to hold a complete line of apples and cider in quarts, half gallons and gallons.

Cider by the glass will be drawn from old wooden kegs through wooden faucets and served by apron-clad employees.

Using Ritter's recipe, a farm will custom blend the cider using four varieties of apples and no preservatives, he said. The cider will be delivered twice a day on weekends.

Donuts will be made in the shop.

Other taste-tempters for sale in the barn will include jams, jellies and preserves packed under Ritter's label, six varieties of honey, two types of maple syrup, and pickles and corn relish also made especially for the market.

Next year, the barn will have its own cider preparation area. Water from a creek that runs through the property will be used to power a water wheel and then will run back into the stream.

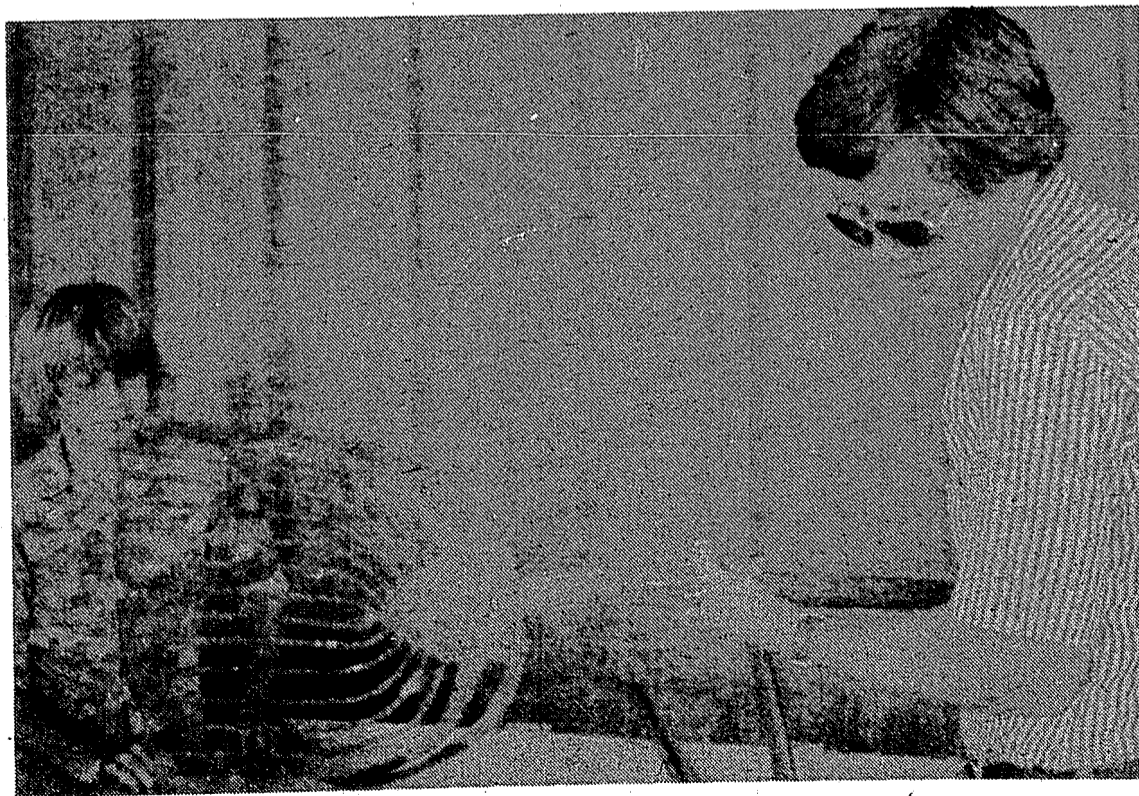

"We have commissioned a company to find us an antique water wheel rather than have one manufactured," Ritter said.

This year, the cider barn will be open only in the fall, but plans for expansion are already in the works.

A circular stairway built into a silo will lead to a loft where farm-made non-food products will be sold. The items will be from Michigan and won't be found in regular stores, Ritter said.

Eventually the 130-year-old farm house that also sits on the two acres that front Dixie Highway will also be restored and will house retail specialty shops, he said.

Though Ritter wouldn't confirm rumors about plans for an antique village on the back section of the 26 acres, he had a smile on his face.
