Hallman quits village post

By Pat Braunagel
Associate editor

Keith Hallman has doffed one of his hats.

Responding to criticism of his dual roles in Clarkston's public life, Hallman resigned last week as village president.

"I hate to leave under these conditions," he told The Clarkston News. "I'm really not that sore, but apparently there are a sizable number of people uncomfortable about my wearing two hats."

Hallman, elected to his third two-year term as village president in March, has been serving as marketing consultant for the Clarkston Mills shopping mall for seven months.

His letter of resignation, dated Sept. 20, was not mentioned at Monday night's village council meeting, attended by just four members. Hallman and Village Clerk Bruce Rogers, who was on a camping trip with his class of sixth graders from Clarkston Elementary School, were among the missing.

Councilman James Weber and Michael Thayer also were absent.

Fonti ApMadoc, council president pro tem, said after the meeting that Hallman's letter was not among the council correspondence.

Hallman resigned his position, "effective immediately."

The council will have the task of electing his successor, he said.

The new president will serve until the next regular village election in March, Hallman said village legal consultants told him.

If a member of the council were named to the post, the council would have to appoint a new council member, Hallman said.

Hallman, who said he could not remember how many years he had served on the council before being elected president, expressed a personal preference that Councilman Jackson Byers be named his replacement.

"I think Jack Byers would do as good a job as any of them," Hallman said. "He seems to have the general support of all and seems to wear well with the different factions."

"I won't have anything to say about it," he noted. "It's up to them."

Hallman's letter to the council was dated two days later than one officers of the Village Business Association wrote complaining about the "questionable" opening of the Clarkston Mills before its on-site parking was completed.

The association's letter, Hallman said, "upset me tremendously."

He described it as a "slipshod way of handling" the situation.

"It's ironic that they're outwardly expressing antagonism and their big reason is that Clarkston Mills is bringing traffic into the business district."

Hallman saw the association's letter shortly after he was told by village planning commission chairman Ted Thompson that the latter had received several comments critical of Hallman's dual roles.

Hallman had told the council in March that he would resign if a large number of people objected to his arrangement.

He had said then he did not foresee a conflict of interest because the village council does not vote except in case of a tie among council members.

"I have mixed emotions about leaving," Hallman said this week. "There are some big issues coming up. I think the next two years are quite critical for the village."

"We're now undergoing our biggest residential growth, right outside the village."

"Parking is critical, despite the fact that (Clarkston Mills developer Marc) Alan's doubled the parking spaces in the village."

Hallman also mentioned traffic flow as another problem the village needs to confront.

"There are capable people who can work on these, if they will take the time," he said.

"It's probably for the best—I hope."

Mills irks other merchants

By Pat Braunagel
Associate editor

Opening of the Clarkston Mills shopping mall without its promised on-site parking made a group of downtown business persons "extremely concerned" and now has the village council asking questions.

Council members are seeking explanations about the "unfortunate beginning" and—while they're at it—requesting a report from Clarkston Mills developer Marc Alan on the log he was to keep on usage of the Mill Pond spillway he controls.

They have also summoned Timothy Palulian, the village's building inspector, to appear before them at their Oct. 9 meeting.

Palulian, director of Independence Township's building department, issued a temporary certificate of occupancy Sept. 15.

"I have certified that the building itself is safe to occupy," Palulian told. The Clarkston News. "If they (the council) wished to keep it closed, they would have to start court action."

Palulian said the temporary occupancy permit covered the four stores that are open and the area of the mall adjacent to them.

Allowing a business to open when its parking lot is still under construction "is not unusual," he said, so long as work is being done on the lot and "it's not (Continued on page 2.)

Village of Clarkston
375 Depot Road
Clarkston, MI 48016

Dear Council Members:

Since 1952 I have served the Village of Clarkston in one capacity or another. The small contributions that I have made, if any, will never make up for the pleasure that I have derived from living here and being a part of things.

The problems that face the Village in this rapidly growing area are immense. However, I feel that we have a Village Council along with capable people in this community who will work hard to preserve this small Village of which we are so proud.

It has been brought to my attention that a number of persons in the Village are uncomfortable with my serving as Village President while doing consulting work for The Clarkston Mills.

I went on record in the past as saying that if such a feeling Therefore, I hereby resign my position as Village President effective immediately.

President effective immediately.

Sincerely,

Keith W. Hallman

going to create that great a problem."

Delayed five days by rain, paving of the Mills' parking area was promised within a week, Palulian said, commenting that the promise was kept when a portion of the lot was paved the following Friday.

"If it hadn't been done, then I would have turned the matter over to the village and said, 'He's in there illegally,'" Palulian said.

Provision for 143 parking spaces north of Depot Road is on the site plan the village planning commission approved and sent to Palulian.

"I have nothing to do with the planning process in the village," the building department director said. The village planning commission determines what stipulations it will put on site plans.

The three top officers in the Village Business Association, who wrote a letter to the council Sept. 18, expressed their concern about the "questionable opening."

"It is vital to the businesses in the old buildings along Main Street that their established parking not be usurped by the new mall," the letter said.

"It certainly seems to us an unfortunate beginning to what must be a cooperative effort between existing and new businesses within the village," said the letter signed by business association chairperson Laurie Stern, cochairperson Joan Koptetz and secretary/treasurer Claudia Jakus.

They asked for a special council meeting, which was not called.

The letter writers also expressed concern that the Clarkston Mills' parking lot will not be used by the mall's shoppers because the elevator between it and the Washington Street-level of the mall remains inoperative. "Will not the Mills' patrons find this too inconvenient and place more stress on existing parking to avoid walking around the building?" they asked.

The four members of the council present at Monday's meeting agreed to ask Alan about the merchants' concerns.

Informed by Mills' neighbor Harry Radcliff that "there has been no water over the spillway since the day the Mills opened," the council also decided to ask Alan about the record of spillway usage he had agreed to keep.

Drivers' pact ratified

A two-year contract which provides three longevity steps has been ratified by Clarkston School District's bus drivers and the board of education.

The contract gives the bus drivers 7.2-percent raises the first year and 6.4-percent raises the second, taking longevity increments into account, Administrative Assistant Conrad Bruce said.

Bus drivers will receive five-cent-an-hour raises after each five years they work for the school district, up to 15, Bruce said.

The contract gives administrators greater flexibility in calling in substitute drivers, Bruce noted. Previously, only permanent substitutes could be called if a driver was absent. The alternatives were to double-up or cancel bus runs, Bruce said.

Insurance benefits are not changed under the new contract, he said.

Will survey Northwest Oakland County

Housing group formed to aid seniors

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

Senior citizens living on fixed incomes have an especially hard time coping with rising housing costs.

Now, seniors, local governmental officials and concerned residents can do something to help overcome the problem.

The Northwest Oakland County Senior Citizens Housing Advisory Committee was formed to allow residents from Independence, Springfield, Rose, Brandon, Groveland and Holly townships and the villages of Clarkston, Ortonville and Holly to study and recommend the types of housing and support services the elderly in their communities need.

"It's my feeling that there is enough interest to form senior citizen housing in Northwest Oakland County," Springfield Township Supervisor Collin W. Walls said. "Seniors are asking for support services. There's more and more of a need for this in this area."

A long-range plan to build subsidized housing for senior citizens at different sites throughout the area has been projected by the committee members, Walls said.

The purpose of the group is to recommend some kind of housing for seniors from each of the nine communities, he continued.

"I think we can tie it together. Each of us has something unique to offer. By combining, we may be able to solve something and allow people to remain in their communities," Walls said.

To accomplish these goals, the committee members will work in three broad steps.

Studies will be undertaken by the committee members to determine the needs of elderly residents in the nine communities.

Once the needs are recognized, the committee will choose the best method to fulfill these needs. Any programs which are developed from the committee's work will be designed to give maximum benefit to older adults living in all nine communities.

As a final step, the committee's proposals will be submitted to appropriate funding sources.

The committee was formed with the aid of United Community Services of Metropolitan Detroit, a nonprofit social service agency which helps communities identify needs and develop solutions for pressing problems.

A United Community Services master plan calls for the development of senior citizen housing throughout Oakland County. At the agency's suggestion, the nine-community block was devised.

Walls and William Daub, a liaison between UCS and the committee, said all nine communities can benefit by uniting to help their senior citizens.

Competition between communities for housing and social service funds may decrease.

The scattered housing projects could be linked by transportation systems, allowing residents to take advantage of each community's unique facilities.

Seniors would be able to remain in their home communities rather than moving to a larger, more isolated facility.

Red tape and bureaucratic procedure could be dealt with more quickly if communities work simultaneously rather than going through governmental systems on their own.

Programs in the rural or semi-rural communities can be tailored to meet special needs, like transportation, access to stores and meals-on-wheels service.

The committee has already begun preliminary work on research methods to determine senior citizen needs.

A survey will be taken of the general population in all nine communities.

Included in the survey material will be a background statement on the project's purpose and scope and specific questions on desired housing types and locations, transportation systems, social activities, health care and home maintenance.

According to United Community Service data, as many as 2,000 senior citizens will be eligible for the services developed by the committee," Daub said.

Bill Dennis' luck is improving.

A goat was staked out in the yard of his Eastlawn home after the Clarkston Village Players' goat-vote drawing was made Labor Day.

He took a lot of ribbing, but now he can have the last laugh. Bill won a $50 gift certificate in a drawing last Saturday at Covert's Saratoga Trunk. The menswear shop in the new Clarkston Mills held the drawing to celebrate its opening.

Other winners were Ann Terry of Goodrich, recipient of a $100 gift certificate; Mary Graybiel of Waterford, another $50 certificate winner; and James Hudson, Warren Yates and Geri Jones, all of Clarkston, who won $25 certificates.

A "Clarkston only" mailbox will soon be in service once again downtown in the village.

Clarkston Postmaster Donald Stoll said he has decided to replace the old intra-village mailbox, which had been taken down because it was not used enough.

The replacement should be up 21 S. Main, the former village post office, "in two or three weeks."

The box will allow local mail to be delivered without first going to Royal Oak. The envelopes will be postmarked from Clarkston. Stoll said.

Who says you can't fight city hall?

The Independence Township Board decided once again to waive the one percent collection fee on township taxpayers' bills in spite of the $10,000 income it could produce.

Although every other township she knows of collects the fee, the one year it was added to local tax bills, almost everyone complained, she said.

"The people objected wholeheartedly," Hallman said, "and I'm with them."

Parks and Recreation Director Timothy Doyle said that he may have office space to rent soon.

The once-busy recreation offices are vacating at an alarming rate with the resignations of this year three fulltime CETA-paid staff members.

And as soon as the senior citizens center opens next month, another employer will move her office to the building.

Doyle and his one remaining fulltime staff member will have lots of space in the downtown office suite at Township Hall.

"Ask Joan" is the advice frequently given to persons seeking information about community events in Clarkston—but sometimes even she doesn't know it all.

As the village's informal "information central," Joan Koptetz at Tierra Arts and Designs has some weird questions thrown at her.

The weirdest, she claims, was from the caller who asked her for the number of the public telephone booth behind Pine Knob Music Theatre.

The Oct. 3 Independence Township Board meeting will be held at the Township Library, 6495 Clarkston-Orion Rd., at 7:30 p.m.

Because federal revenue sharing funds totaling $125,665 are to be budgeted, the meeting must be held in a barrier-free location rather than the usual meeting place on the top floor of township hall.

Independence Township Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower is still seeking a dumping spot for residents' refuse too large for regular garbage pick-ups.

A letter from the Pontiac City Landfill on Collier Road indicated that, for a fee, township residents may be able to take bulky loads to the nearby landfill sometime in the future.

For now, old appliances and so forth can be transported to L. E. Marlowe and Sons' dump in Rose Township, also for a fee.

Smoothing sore spot

A portion of the cause of downtown business-persons' concern is paved Friday while the controversy about the opening of the Clarkston Mills shopping mall flares around it. The merchants want to know why the center was allowed to open before its parking lots were complete.

For Independent Seniors

Center nearly complete

Deck and ramp construction outside the Independence Township senior citizens center should be completed soon.

Timothy Doyle, parks and recreation director, presented his plan at last week's board meeting.

"I have four bids on material, and I know a few carpenters who would be willing to build on an hourly basis," Doyle said.

The township would save money using the time-and-materials method rather than hiring a contractor, he said.

"I would think that within the next couple of weeks we could have the ramp and the deck out there," he added.

"I'm in contracting myself," said Ronald Forbes of Pheasant Run Road. "I wouldn't give a man time and materials without a limit. That's like giving the man an open check book."

Doyle said there would be a limit on labor costs.

"If this goes out for time and material, what liability does the township have if the guy cuts off a finger?" asked Warren Newsted of Marvin Road. "Would it be union wages, non-union wages—what would be the wage?"

Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower explained that the board had problems getting bids for the project. The last attempt netted only one bid, and the board felt that was too high, he said.

"Our funding is there," Doyle said. "I just wanted the board to be aware of a change in direction."

Tower directed Doyle to proceed with the project.

The senior center is located on Clarkston-Orion Road adjacent to Clintonwood Park.

Senior coordinator Bringard quits

The resignation of senior citizen coordinator Darlene Bringard has been accepted with regret by the Independence Township Board.

In a letter, Bringard said her resignation, effective Sept. 29, is due to personal reasons.

"As you know, it's a CETA position and I can't hire anyone to replace her," Timothy Doyle, parks and recreation director, told the board, referring to the county-wide freeze on replacing employees hired under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

Last month, the department's fulltime secretary, also a CETA-paid employee, resigned.

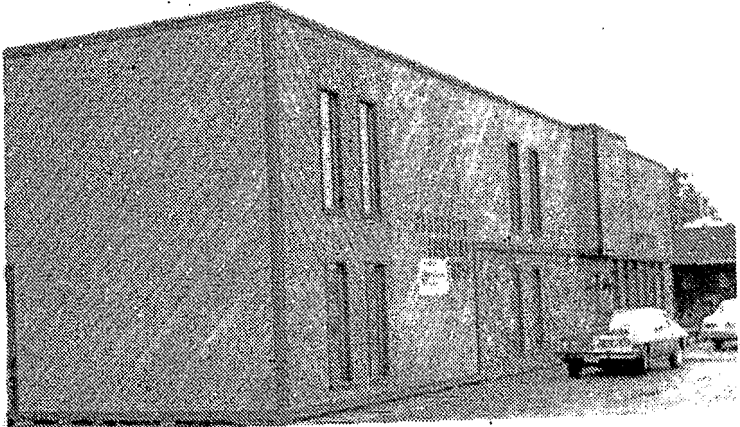

"The recreation department will find itself faced for the last six months of the fiscal year without a senior citizen coordinator and a fulltime secretary," Doyle said, adding that a part time secretary and the assistant senior citizen coordinator will cover as much as possible.

Equalize pay

From now on all parttime office employees hired by Independence Township will earn $2.75 an hour during the probation period.

After the 90 days, the wages will increase to $3.25 an hour.

Oh, Henry!

By Pat Braunagel

Of course, you'd be excited too if you got to meet former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in person—especially if he shook your hand and gave you his autograph.

And you'd be upset if someone took that autograph away.

So you can see how easily two Clarkston High School students and their faculty advisor won the sympathy of a whole string of persons who went to work Monday to retrieve the autographs.

Colette Fortin, president of the CHS student government, and Steve Lyons, secretary-treasurer, were among a raft of students from the area who were given free tickets to a Sept. 14 luncheon at which Kissinger was the speaker. Charles Screws, the faculty advisor for the organization, was allowed to accompany them.

Others paid $50 apiece to attend the luncheon at the Raleigh House in Southfield, which was a fund-raising event for Rep. William S. Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

The students were thrilled, Colette said. They met Kissinger, he shook their hands and autographed their tickets.

That was before the luncheon tickets were collected—over protests from the group.

Colette said they tried repeatedly to retrieve the tickets, even after they got back to Clarkston, but no one would return their calls.

Was that so? we asked Tom Toman, manager of Broomfield's Birmingham office.

No, no, he said—"We're hunting for them right now."

He was waiting for a return call from Mrs. Buck, who handles arrangements for Branko's Catering at the Raleigh House.

The tickets were needed as vouchers so the catering service could be paid, and Toman hoped that they hadn't subsequently been destroyed.

Had they been? we asked Joanne Buck at Branko's.

"Wait a minute," she said, putting us on hold.

While it's not normal procedure, she said, the 800-odd tickets from the Broomfield-Kissinger luncheon had been tossed into a box.

Mrs. Buck and maitre d' Ray Ybarra searched through them and, yes, found the tickets with autographs.

She promised to mail them immediately to Mr. Screws.

Thank you, we said. That's quite alright, she said—"I'll put the five tickets in an envelope and mail them out this afternoon."

We hung up, mission accomplished.

Five?

Evidence of craftsmanship was scattered throughout the village park during the festival, including this jacket worn by Jay Bisha as she compares notes on the progress of the festival with other Clarkston Community Historical members Sue Basinger [left] and Jennifer Radcliff. The jacket, appliqued by Chris Shull of Clarkston, was purchased at an earlier community function, Mrs. Bisha said.

Battle cries

We've been to public hearings in several communities. It's part of the job. When the hearing is over zoning, and the zonee thinks things are not going his way sooner or later you will hear... "I'll sell to a minority group and then we'll see what happens to your assessments."

There's another thing I've noticed. If there is someone in the audience with a Birmingham address, you'll know it before the meeting is half over.

At the most recent hearing I attended, a woman announced that she sold "real estate in Birmingham and my husband is a lawyer in Birmingham. The last part was said twice in a short time.

There were about 50 people in the audience and most of us looked around to see what a person from Birmingham looked like. Oggling the rich, we were. Or so they likely wanted us to believe.

Weather forecasters are predicting mild fall and winter. Winter will be cold, but lacking in severity.

They must have seen the same caterpillars I did. I've seen two that are all orange... a sign of mildness, and one with just a slight trace of black on one end.

I didn't wait to see it move, so I don't know if the cold spell is coming at the beginning or end of winter.

Speaking of caterpillars, did you hear about how two of them were crawling across the grass when a butterfly flew over them.

They looked up, and one nudged the other and said: "You couldn't get me up in one of those for a million dollars!"

If you tell a man there are 300 billion stars in the universe, he'll believe you. But if you tell him a bench has just been painted, he has to touch it to be sure.

I don't know what got me to thinking about boys and girls, maybe because I am one. But, did you ever notice that girls carry their schoolbooks in both arms in front of them.

Not boys. They hold the books in one arm and swung down to their sides.

One other comparison, before closing. Girls can ride boys bikes, but boys never, never ride girls bikes. At least not when I was a lad.

I suppose it's sissified for a boy to be seen on a girl's bike. But, a girl would be one of the guys on a boy's bike.

Oh, well. Let's leave it to an analyst to figure out the reasoning.

Clarkston great festival town

To the editor:

The Board of the Clarkston Community Historical Society would like to thank the people of our community for their support of the Fourth Annual Crafts and Cider Festival.

Many members of our organization, and others, worked very hard to create a successful festival. The weather was great, the park was beautiful and the craftsmen were outstanding. Most important, the community's browsers and shoppers were terrific. The board received many compliments from the exhibitors on the quality of the customers, and we concur.

We enjoyed meeting all of you over a glass of cider, and appreciate the fact that you helped keep the park so litter-free.

Thank you again! We'll see you next year!

Good return

Brushing up on basics, self-esteem

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Maria Muxlow dropped out of school after she finished seventh grade. She was 16.

Now, 11 years later, she is catching up on what she didn't learn by taking Adult Basic Education (ABE) classes.

Maria, now an Independence Township resident, discovered the program two years ago.

"I wanted to have a good job," she said. "It's hard not to know how to spell and read when you want to fill out an application."

Her parents and family were migrant farm workers. They worked in fields of cotton, pecans, cucumbers, potatoes, tomatoes, celery and sugar beets.

The year Maria spent in seventh grade at Imlay City was only the second time she remembers attending classes for a full school year.

The first time was in Texas when she was 7 or 8 years old and in the first grade.

She and her brother spoke Spanish. Although they sat next to each other in the classroom, they were not allowed to use their native tongue, even when talking to each other.

In the years between first and seventh grade, Maria would start school in September in Michigan, then move to Texas in October and back to Michigan in May.

Most of the farms they worked in Texas were isolated, and transportation to and from school was not available.

"Every year when we got back, they would pass us a year whether we knew, or learned or not," Maria said. "That's how I got into the seventh grade. I don't have a seventh grade education."

After she quit school, Maria worked for the next six years. She did farm work, helped care for her 13 brothers and sisters, packed carrots in a factory and worked in the Lapeer Metal Products plant.

After she was married, she kept her job in Lapeer for a year, but the drive was long and she quit.

Katie, now 4, was born and Maria stayed home to care for her husband and daughter.

For the past three years, she and her family have lived in Independence Township.

Discovering classes that teach basic skills resulted from Maria's decision to look for a job and the frustration caused by trying to fill out the applications.

"I found myself without a job ... it was time to do something," she said.

Her reaction to the ABE program was mostly one of relief.

"I felt real good," she said. "I had a chance to learn what I didn't learn."

"I was kind of nervous going into the room the first time," she said, but getting to know the students and finding helpful teachers made her discomfort quickly vanish.

"The teachers care," she said. "When you see yourself improving, you try harder."

Maria shared some of her writing from the ABE classes.

One sample was a work sheet for a thank-you letter she presented to Independence Township resident Carolyn Place, her teacher last year.

"You give us the strength and courage to improve our education," she wrote.

Her classmates became "just like a little family," Maria said. "You got close and you helped each other."

Her fellow students included two with high school diplomas, but they had not learned what they needed in school either.

"When you're young and going to school, you don't realize how good it is to learn until you have to deal with reading newspapers or trying to write a letter," she said.

Her husband's support has helped Maria.

"He's really proud of me," she said. "He knows it's important to me that I learn."

To work as a teacher's aide, help her husband with his bookkeeping and to earn a high school diploma are goals Maria has set.

But "for right now, I've got my goal: just going to school and learning," she said. "I would be happy just to read good and spell good—just to be able to put my thoughts down on paper without having to look in a dictionary or ask somebody how to spell."

Perhaps Maria's greatest accomplishment, however, is the change in her self-image.

Before she enrolled in ABE, "I really didn't feel that I knew enough to hold a conversation," she said.

Now "I can spell better; I can read better," she said. "I can also make conversation better ... I came out of my shell."

Sports builds character(s)

by Jim Fitzgerald

A few years ago, after exhaustive study, two psychologists reported that sports don't build character. William (no relation) Fitzgerald, Democratic candidate for governor of Michigan, doesn't agree with them.

Being a basketball star doesn't make Johnny a better person, the psychologist said. This was bad news for high school and college coaches everywhere. Several of them became so despondent they slit their jockstraps.

Coaches like to preach that corporate directorships are earned on the playing fields of Eton, and if Gerald Ford hadn't played center for the University of Michigan, Richard Nixon would be in jail today.

The fact that sports are supposed to build character gives jock coaches an edge with the school board. No one ever said algebra builds character. So when school funds run short and music teachers are fired a cappella, the principal's wife takes in washing to raise money to buy tear-away jerseys for the football team.

This is comforting to the coach, who feels needed on two levels and therefore deserving of more pay than an ordinary teacher. When a basketball coach teaches Johnny how to slam dunk, he is also teaching him courage and integrity. When an English instructor teaches Johnny how to spell his name, that's all there is. No bonus. Good spellers, unlike good dunkers, do not automatically grow up to become men of good character.

That's what coaches like to believe. They don't like to believe Dr. Bruce Ogilvie and Dr. Thomas Tutko, psychology professors at San Jose State College in California. If the two doctors are correct, it means a football coach is no more important than some slob biology teacher when it comes to building characters for pupils.

For eight years Ogilvie and Tutko tested 15,000 athletes, worked with 27 professional teams and with hundreds of high school and college teams. And they concluded there is nothing to support the traditional idea that sports build character.

In fact, the two doctors said: "There is evidence that athletic competition limits growth in some areas ... athletic competition has no more beneficial effects than intense endeavor in any other field."

For me, that's beautiful news, but 35 years too late. I am remembering a basketball coach who was also a history teacher. He couldn't understand how I could be six feet tall and not want to play basketball. Every time he graded my history assignment, he subtracted 10 percent because I was a sissy and 15 percent because his team was in last place and it was my fault.

This coach said I'd never have any character and, he added with disdain, I might as well be a Frenchman. This was part of his history class. He taught that France fell to Germany in World War II because French kids never learned how to dribble with both hands.

I never could understand how running around in public in my underwear would improve my character, so it was nice to get confirmation from a couple of psychology professors. But sports myths die hard, and there are still plenty of people who think success smells like a locker room.

Bill Fitz, now a state senator, used to be a high school basketball coach. A sports writer recently asked him if he thought athletics build character.

"Absolutely," he answered. "They build discipline. They build character and a sense of loyalty."

If Fitz is elected governor, it's safe to assume that his administration will seek the services of people of good character, all with varsity letters on their sweaters. And if ex-athletes can't reduce unemployment and balance the state budget, Gov. Fitzgerald could extend his jock logic one obvious step further.

Cheerleaders. If skimpy skirts and bouncing halters can encourage men of good character to excel on athletic fields, the same result could be achieved in government offices.

A dumb idea, you say? What do you know? You probably think it would be dumb to fight the Nazis with the two-handed dribble.

Will look at center idea

The appointment of the last member to the Independence Township Community Center steering committee means work can begin on plans for the facility.

Four township residents were named at the Aug. 15 board meeting: Barbara Steele by Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower, Elyse Yakimowich by Clerk Christopher Rose, Sue Bennett by Treasurer Elizabeth Hallman and Bruce Shull by Trustee Jerry Powell.

At the same meeting, Powell volunteered to serve on the committee, and Timothy Doyle, parks and recreation director, was also named to the group.

The fifth township resident, Paul Tungate, was appointed by Trustee Frederick Ritter at last week's board meeting.

Although formal guidelines were not set, the steering committee's function is to report to the township board on an advisory level, according to Tower.

Immunization clinic Oct. 5

Free immunizations against German and other measles, mumps, polio, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough will be available in Independence Township Oct. 5.

The shots will be given by Oakland County Health Division personnel from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at Independence Center, 5331 Maybee.

No appointment is necessary. Previous medical records are required, and children must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

No present danger seen

State testing water near landfill

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

Water samples from wells along Perry Lake and Northview roads, southwest of Powell's landfill, are being tested at the Michigan Department of Public Health Laboratories in Lansing.

Although more tests are being made on the well water, state and county officials say they feel there is no present danger to public health.

"There were some water samples taken ... that weren't contaminated too much, but were tainted somewhat," said Tom Work, assistant resource recovery division chief with the state Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

When samples were taken from the Chapelview Estates well southeast of the landfill, three wells that serve single families in the Perry Lake Road area were also tested.

The subdivision water tested at safe levels, but the presence of tiny particles in the water samples from private wells indicated an unnatural condition, according to Don Keech, chief of ground water in the quality control section of the Michigan Department of Public Health.

"Our concern is the people are using the water for drinking," Keech said. "If it is a public potential health problem, we want to know it and notify the people."

The tests being made are for "leachates out of dumps and so forth. You really don't know what to test for," Keech said. "Until we can determine there is a definite public problem or potential problem here, we are treading very lightly."

The water samples taken about three weeks ago from six or seven wells can take up to a month to check, especially this time of year when a heavy load of water samples come into the laboratories, Keech said.

"We are working in cooperation with the Oakland County Health Department on this," he said.

"As far as I know, the DNR lab is still working on (the water samples). They run them out with nine or 10 different analyses on them," said Oscar Boyea, administrative assistant for environmental health serv-

Estates well.

Subdivision wells are frequently checked—for bacteria monthly and thoroughly at least once every one or two years, he said, but private wells aren't regularly tested.

Boyea said he is not sure how deep the sampled wells were, because the people who live in the homes do not know.

When the final two feet of clay cover is placed on the landfill, the situation could improve.

The telegram sent to the landfill from the DNR on Sept. 7 stated, "grading and the final acceptable clay cover shall be installed by Sept. 30, 1978."

"The only thing I think that will help will be getting the clay cover on and getting the grading so the rain water and snow will run off, if that is a source of the contamination," Work said.

Monitoring wells on all landfills will be required by state laws "hopefully later this year or early next year," Work said.

"By Oct. 1, 1980, we hope to have all the existing landfills with monitoring wells," he said.

"The guidelines are becoming more stringent, because we've learned by our past mistakes," Work said. Future landfills will "require more in the way of geological evaluation, monitoring wells and engineering plans."

The lack of monitoring wells for the Powell landfill has not presented a problem and will probably not be required by new laws, Boyea said.

"We've got enough wells close by including Powell's own well," he said.

Tests can be made "as long as people let us in, and people with private wells have been very cooperative so far," he added.

ices of the Oakland County Health Division.

Part of the problem, Boyea said, is the landfill was an open dump before state landfill licensing was required in 1967.

Work mentioned some other possibilities.

"The Powells have indicated to me that there was an old dump to the west of them and a slaughter house in that vicinity," he said.

Until the direction of ground water flow is tied down, the source of the contamination cannot be determined, he said.

"The health department is going to make an assessment of how bad the situation is," Work said. "The situation is not bad enough so anybody's health is in jeopardy at this time, I don't believe."

"Everybody is of the opinion that the land slopes to the southwest," Boyea said, indicating that the homes in the Perry Lake Road area could have problems with landfill water runoff.

"The only things that might be in real jeopardy would be shallower wells that sit above the clay and aquaclude," he said.

Aquaclude is a blanket of clay at the bottom of a sand vein, above the water source. The natural underground line of clay protects water in most wells deeper than 25 feet, Boyea said.

Springfield firms could get tax break

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

A 50-percent property tax break may be available for commercial property owners in Springfield Township.

Sometime during the first two weeks in October, a public hearing will be held in the township hall at which the establishment of a community redevelopment district will be discussed.

At the Sept. 6 township board meeting, Township Supervisor Collin W. Walls said the districts may be established to encourage property owners to upgrade their holdings.

Commercial property located along the Dixie Highway corridor between Davisburg and Bridge Lake Roads, the downtown Davisburg area and other scattered sites throughout the township may be eligible for the community redevelopment district designation, Walls said.

Walls told the board that creating the redevelopment districts will benefit the township three ways: the township's tax base will improve, renovation will improve the appearance and value of existing properties and property upgrading will provide jobs for township residents.

Whether or not the districts are created depends on the community reaction to the plan as voiced during the public hearing, Walls said.

The districts can be established under the Commercial Redevelopment Act, passed recently by the state legislature to give business owners incentives to upgrade their property either by renovating existing buildings that are obsolete or by developing vacant land zoned commercial at least three years prior to the passage of the act.

In Springfield Township, the commercial redevelopment districts would be established by the township board. A commercial property owner would then apply to the board for a commercial redevelopment exemption certificate, which the board can either grant or deny.

If granted, the property owner receives a 50 percent property tax cut for up to 12 years at the board's discretion.

Walls said any improvement equal to 5 percent of the state equalized value of the building enables the property owner to receive the property tax cut.

The tax cut will be applied to any new construction which a commercial property owner begins. It will not affect current property tax or personal property taxes, Walls said.

Tax assessment is done by preparing a special tax roll listing all the commercial properties that have received the cut.

J. Calvin Walters, Springfield township clerk, will notify property owners as to when the public hearing on establishing commercial redevelopment districts will be held.

Girls' cage team balances record

The C.H.S. girls' varsity basketball team moved its record to 2-2 last week with two non-league contests. They won on the road against Walled Lake Western on Tuesday and lost at home on Thursday against Rochester Adams.

In Tuesday's game at Walled Lake Western, Clarkston led at the end of the first quarter, but trailed by seven points at the half with the score showing Clarkston 16 - Walled Lake Western 23. By the end of the third quarter, the Wolves had pulled to within three points of the Warriors.

The Wolves caught fire in the final stanza and opened up a seven-point lead by scoring 10 unanswered points as the scoreboard showed Wolves 41-Warriors 34. Walled Lake Western called three times-out in the quarter in an effort to slow the building momentum of the Wolves, but Clarkston was not to be denied.

The 20 points that Clarkston scored in that final quarter were made possible by applying defensive pressure to Western and to the aggressive offense showed by Pam Blower, Linda Foster, and Kay Pearson. Clarkston took the victory by the final score of 51-44.

Leading scorers for the Wolves were Pam Blower and Kay Pearson, with 18 points apiece. Linda Foster hit for 6 points (all in the fourth quarter); Lisa Steele added 5 points; and Jeannie Odell contributed 4 points.

Clarkston definitely out-rebounded Western, as they had four strong players hitting the boards.

Pam Blower and Kay Pearson hauled down 11 and 10 rebounds, respectively. Kelli Ketzler pulled in 9 critical rebounds, and Jeannie Odell collected 8 boards.

Thursday's game with Rochester Adams was close through the first half, due to the fine shooting demonstration put on by Kay Pearson.

The half-time score was Clarkston 23-Rochester Adams 25, with 17 of the Wolves' points belonging to Kay.

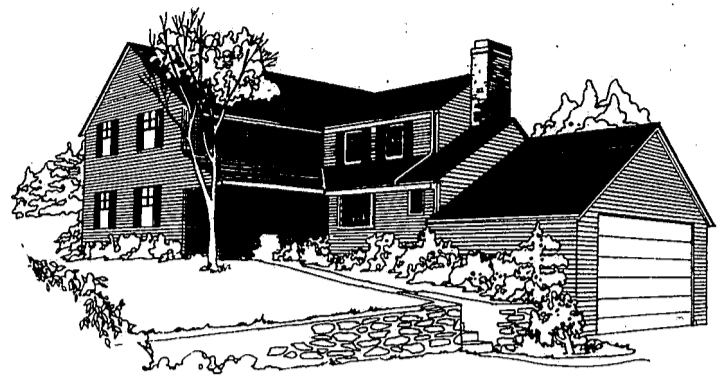

Defensive and offensive changes by Adams and poor execution on the part of the Wolves saw Clarkston slip to a 12-point deficit at the end of three quarters.

The Wolves were unable to make up any ground on Adams and lost the contest by the final score of 36-49.

Kay Pearson scored 18 points for the evening, followed by Kelli Ketzler and Pam Blower, who each tallied 6 points.

The Wolves are spending this entire week on the road. They played at Waterford Mott on Tuesday and will travel to Fenton tonight. Both of these games are non-league encounters. The Wolves will next appear at home on Thursday, October 5, when they open their Greater Oakland Athletic League schedule by hosting Rochester High School.

Still two plan commission vacancies

Jean Saile, owner of Main Street Public Relations, Clarkston, was almost named to the Independence Township Planning Commission.

When the township board, in a 3-2 vote, decided to retain a nine-member commission, Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower asked that Saile be considered to fill one of the two open positions.

"Well, two years ago, I was vehemently opposed to Mrs. Saile serving on the planning commission, mainly for political reasons," said Trustee Jerry Powell.

"On some issues I've mellowed, on others I haven't," he said. "I move to appoint Jean Saile to the planning commission."

Clerk Christopher Rose said, "She does represent three of the biggest building concerns in the township—Clarkston Mills, Pine Knob and Deerwood."

Tower suggested holding off on the appointment until Saile's business interests were considered.

"I frankly don't have any problem," Powell said. "Mr. (Mel) Vaara works on the planning commission and he works for one of the biggest developers in the township—the schools."

Powell then withdrew his motion.

After the meeting, Saile said she does represent Clarkston Mills.

"I have in the past worked for Pine Knob, but I have never done any work for Deerwood," she said.

Tower indicated that two planning commission members would be named at the next township board meeting.

Board members voting for a nine-member commission were Treasurer Elizabeth Hallman, Trustee Frederick Ritter and Powell.

Kimbel to speak

Charles Kimbel, acting director of police services for Independence Township, will speak on the parking problems in the village at the next meeting of the Village Business Association of Clarkston.

The meeting is scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Village Hall on Depot Road.

New dentist opens office

Michael Prudhomme, D.D.S., an April graduate of the University of Michigan Dental School, has opened his office at 5649 Sashabaw Rd. in the Pine Knob Professional Plaza. The family practice includes evening and Saturday office hours.

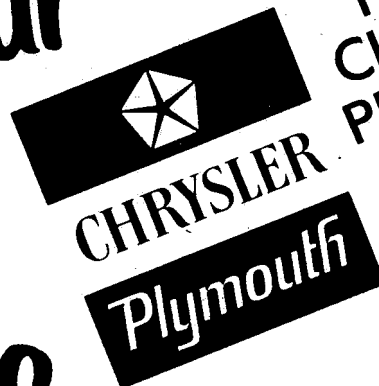

In five years, the attendance at North American Soccer League games has risen 8 fold. In 1972, only 400,000 people watched American Professional soccer, but, in 1977, 3.5 million people watched the games during the league's season. A great deal of the growth in popularity of the sport in the United States, has been attributed to Pele, probably the world's best known athlete and certainly the world's most popular soccer player, who was lured out of his Brazilian retirement to play for the New York Cosmos and help popularize soccer in the United States. Fans came to see Pele and stayed to watch the game.

For Maybee crossing

By Kathy Greenfield
Staff writer

The 150 school-aged children who live in Lake Oakland Woods could spend another winter walking to school on the shoulder of Maybee Road or crossing the busy street to an existing sidewalk.

"There hasn't been anything done. There is a legal question," Independence Township Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower told Ronald Forbes of Pheasant Run Road, who represented the subdivision at last week's board meeting.

Three weeks ago, subdivision residents requested a crossing guard near the subdivision or a sidewalk leading to South Sashabaw Elementary School.

After the meeting, Tower said,

"If we've got lawsuits going on in other townships, why should we get into it?"

Tower was referring to the conflict between Pontiac Township and the Pontiac School District over the responsibility for paying crossing guards.

When the Independence Township Board and the Clarkston School Board have "the questions answered, we'll have a meeting and then we'll have it on the school board agenda," Tower said.

Several areas of concern, including township planning, similar needs in other areas and the construction expenses for safety walks, were discussed at last week's board meeting.

"As I mentioned at the last meeting, it's ridiculous and dangerous to walk down the shoulder of the road," Forbes said.

He suggested that the township build a bicycle-safety path on the south side of Maybee Road covering the half-mile between the subdivision and the school.

Children who attend North Sashabaw Elementary and Sashabaw Junior High across the street could then cross with the school crossing guard.

"We're going to end up with 364 children in that subdivision," Forbes said.

The cost to build a sidewalk would be $5 a foot, and 2,500 feet would have to be built to get to the school, said Trustee Frederick Ritter.

"I'm around a lot and I notice a lot of other areas such as Rochester and West Bloomfield have bike paths," Forbes said.

"Where does the money go for the sewer taps that I had to get into my house—the $800?" he asked. "Our subdivision represents $322,000 in sewer taxes."

"Three hundred thousand dollars does not put much of a dent in the $2 million debt we have," responded George Anderson, water and sewer department director. "All the sewer money has to be used to reduce sewer bonds, so it can't be used for safety paths."

Tower noted that other schools in the district have similar problems, with only one sidewalk along parts of M-15 and Holcomb and Pine Knob roads without any sidewalks.

"When they're developing a subdivision and the approval is going through the board, isn't there anything taken into consideration for the safety of those children?" Forbes asked.

Builders are sometimes required to construct sidewalks within the development boundaries in order to get township approval, Tower said.

"I don't like the term black-mail, but it is a method at the time for getting the developer to do what we want to have done, be it in the way of trees or a sidewalk," Tower said.

Although some of this year's $125,665 in federal revenue sharing funds may be used for safety-walk construction, Tower said the Maybee Road area is not a top priority, because other areas have needed sidewalks longer.

"If you want to submit a letter to the township board formally requesting money for sidewalks, the (federal revenue sharing budget) is to be considered at the next meeting," said Ritter.

"That's no guarantee you're going to get the money," he added.

Paths under study

A committee has been named to study possible construction of bicycle-safety paths in Independence Township.

Serving on the committee will be: Joseph Figa of 7061 Snowapple; Margaret Wiederhold of 4101 Meyers, Drayton Plains; Stan Darling of 6094 Cramlane; Dick Schmatty of 5417 Stowe Trail; Robert Johnson of 6085 Middle Lake; George Osmond of 5627 Hummingbird; Leroy

Davis of 5326 Williamson; William Pfahlert of 5703 Warbler; and Blair Schweitzer of 8283 Ellis.

Planning commission member Jean Benzing will serve as liaison with commission Chairman James Smith as co-official.

The Independence Township Board approved the appointments at last week's board meeting.

'Fence not necessary'

A fence probably will not be built between Chapelview Estates and Powell's landfill.

Independence Township Trustee Jerry Powell, whose family owns the landfill, said at a board meeting last June that a fence would be installed between the landfill and the subdivision located west of Clarkston on Clarkston-Orion Road.

The closing of the landfill by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) early this month has changed his plans.

The decision was discussed at last week's township board meeting when Rafael Hernandez of Chapelview Drive asked the board what it had done to enforce the township landfill ordinance.

"The fence portion (of the ordinance) was to stop blowing papers and so forth," said Supervisor Floyd (Whitey) Tower. "With the closing, that won't be a problem."

Timothy Palulian, building department director, said that according to township law, the fence requirement is only enforced at the township's discretion.

"In my mind, putting up a fence at this point would not be necessary, because it's closed," Palulian said. "It would be an unnecessary burden to place on Powell."

The ordinance also states that upon closing, a landfill will be returned to its natural state within six months.

Because the landfill was in existence before the ordinance was written, a reclamation plan was not required by the township.

"In Powell's case, the landfill doesn't fall under that ordinance," Palulian said.

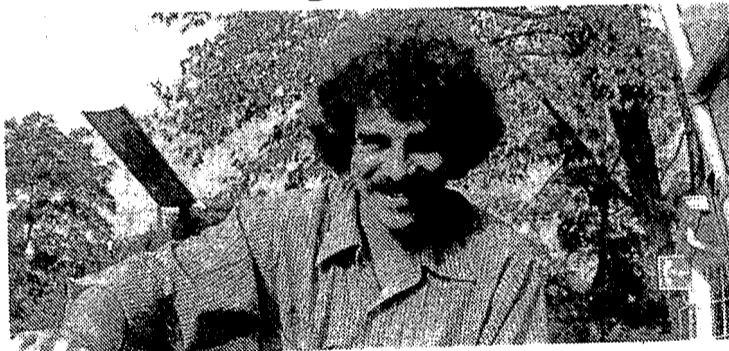

Powell said the final landfill cover of two feet of clay will be provided.

"I currently have 10,000 yards of clay waiting to truck in only if the DNR will come out and approve that clay," Powell said. "In their wisdom, when they have time to come out and approve that clay, I will fill it in."

A Space Age steeplejack approaches his work from a new angle, being boosted by a crane to set the cross in place atop the new sanctuary addition at Calvary Lutheran Church. Once the job is done [right], he can admire his work during a smooth ride down. Les Johnson, a member of the church, took these two photographs of an unidentified steeplejack at work recently. Calvary's steeple rises 34 feet 10 inches above the new sanctuary, which will be dedicated Sunday during a 4 p.m. service to which the public is invited. An open house will be held for an hour before and after the service. In the morning, there will be a single communion service at 11, following the 9:45 Sunday church school. Dr. Howard Christensen, president of the Michigan Synod of the Lutheran Church of America, will be present for the morning service.

Notice is hereby given that a Public Hearing will be held on October 17, 1978 to determine the necessity of installing sanitary sewers on Placid Court in the Cranberry Lake Estates #2 Subdivision. Underwoods avid do-it-yourselfers

Country Living

By Mimi Mayer
Staff writer

It's not surprising that Chuck and Carol Underwood have furnished their home with functional antiques.

A builder by trade, Chuck has long been fascinated with tools. Both he and Carol are avid do-it-yourselfers and are teaching their two boys, Ben, 6, and Matt, 4, basic handicraft skills and household responsibilities.

Springfield Township residents, the Underwoods live along a country road in a home Chuck and Carol designed and built themselves.

All of the wallpapering and painting was done by the couple, and much of the furniture was acquired for restoration by Chuck as he traveled throughout North Oakland County on building jobs.

Chuck said he learned his skills as a young man. His parents were real estate brokers who rented as many as 20 houses at once. When maintenance was needed, Chuck did the work.

"After you get to a certain point, you're really not afraid to jump into it," he explained. "I can take just about anything apart and put it back together.

"What I call myself is a great see-and-do person. When I see someone doing something, I can duplicate it," he continued.

Chuck said he almost always has a project of one sort or another going.

Among their possessions is a finished wooden bucket Chuck made. A replica of a pail the Underwoods spied while touring Greenfield Village, the antique was reproduced by Chuck using timber left over from other projects.

Carol, a former fourth grade teacher at the Pine Knob and Andersonville Elementary schools, has made Christmas ornaments, quilts and clothing on a 70-year-old White sewing machine powered by a foot treadle.

"I still miss teaching, especially when September comes," Carol said. "But the boys were growing up so fast I decided to put on the brakes." She plans to resume her career once Matt begins first grade.

"We're do-it-yourselfers here," she continued. "You can only do a smattering of projects if you're working."

Passing these values onto Matt and Ben is important to the Underwoods.

"I like to have the kids participate in all the things the family does," Carol said. "In the routine of a family there are certain jobs that nobody likes to do."

Teaching the children to accept responsibility at an early age will better prepare them for adult life, Carol added.

"I think anything they do as a kid, they'll be able to use when they grow up," Chuck said. "That's one thing I like about my work. I can take them out on the jobs and Carol comes with us. They pick up the scraps or carry one brick from one place to another," he said.

"I feel even if they won't wind up doing my type of work, they'll at least have something to fall back on," Chuck added.

A home in the country gave the Underwoods land enough to plant a large garden in their backyard. The tomatoes, beets, cucumbers, and apples from a neighbor's tree are canned or frozen for the winter.

"We probably do 100 quarts of different things," Carol said.

Chuck has already begun sawing wood for the stove which heats their home in the cold months.

"Wood is our primary heat source in the winter," Chuck said. "We burned 12 cords of wood last year."

"It's a good feeling to know that you're not wasting energy to keep the house warm," Carol said.

When the Underwood family really wants to take some time off, they'll camp or play tennis. Chuck plays basketball and softball in the Independence Township and Fenton Parks and Recreation Departments leagues.

Like their father, Ben and Matt enjoy watching sports on television. "They both like anything to do with balls," Chuck said.

"Whatever sports are on TV, they'll dress up like the players," Carol said. "If baseball is on, they'll put on baseball caps."

Another leisure occupation the Underwoods savor is Carol's piano playing. In fact, it was Carol's piano teacher who introduced Carol to Chuck.

"Chuck's aunt was my piano teacher. She gave me his address while he was in the service and said he needed someone to write to him," Carol said.

The couple corresponded for eight months while Chuck was serving in Vietnam. They met upon his return and were married 18 months later.

As happy as the Underwoods are with their life in Springfield Township, a move is definitely in their future. Chuck, who has always lived in the Clarkston-Holly area, wants to head west to the Rocky Mountain states. Carol and he plan to travel there soon.

Carol would prefer to remain somewhere in Michigan. "It's such a big move," she explained. "You like to be around families on holidays and any visit would be an expedition."

Even though the Underwoods have the skills, Carol said they won't shuck civilization to homestead land if they do move west.

With Chuck's building and Carol's teaching to subsidize all their projects, Carol said they've managed to make a modicum of self-sufficiency fun.

"We just do enough to keep it enjoyable," she said.

Chuck made this bucket as a replica of an antique pail the family noticed while visiting Greenfield Village. A family of do-it-yourselfers, the Underwoods of Springfield Township said they almost always have a project of one type or another in the works.

Three-year-old Matt clowns with a pair of rose-lensed 'sunglasses' his brother made during a busy school day.

Ben proudly smiles as he looks over a penmanship paper from school. At six, Ben is just learning how to write.

An afghan of single and double crochet occupies Carol when she watches television.

Show feelings

By Jim and Ellen Windell

Many adults seek therapy because they feel too passive, compliant and unassertive.

They often believe that they have spent much of their life allowing others to manipulate and use them, and frequently they express this by saying that others "walk all over me."

Usually such people do not want their children to grow up with the same kind of experiences.

In order for children to be able to stand up for themselves as adults, they must learn to be assertive as children. This, however, may be difficult for many parents to accept.

While most parents may no longer believe in the old adage that "children should be seen and not heard," a lot of mothers and fathers want respect and obedience from children. This may be interpreted in some families as complete and unquestioned compliance.

Some parents may allow assertiveness with outsiders but not with parents. Also, while certain forms of self expression may be considered acceptable, anger, for instance, may not be easily tolerated.

It is in families that children learn how to live with other people and how to express anger, aggression and cooperation. Parents often teach youngsters to suppress or deny their feelings with admonitions such as "Don't talk back to me," "Don't tell your sister you hate her," "You don't really hate him," "Show some respect when you talk," "Go to your room until you stop being mad," "Don't ever raise your voice to me" and "Don't ever say anything like that to your mother again."

It may be a tall order to try to teach your child to be assertive while also being polite, respectful, sensitive and responsible. Nevertheless, we think this can be accomplished.

It may be helpful for parents to start with ordering their priorities about the goals of family life. Peace, quiet, and order are not necessarily the goals of life in a family.

Parents can teach their children that self-assertion and anger are a natural part of living with others and children are not bad when they get bad or demand their rights. Feelings, no matter how unpleasant to others, need not necessarily be punished or hidden.

Mothers and fathers can also model appropriate behavior by showing a range of feelings without denying frustration, anger or needs. Both parents and children are entitled in a family to open expression of feelings when such expression does not interfere with the rights of others.

There will be a Public Hearing on a Proposed Street Lighting District in the Thendara Park Subdivision. The only lot involved is Shippey Park owned by the Thendara Park Homeowner's Association. The hearing will be held October 17, 1978, at 7:30 P.M. at the Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main Street, Clarkston, MI. All concerned citizens are urged to attend.

Designs own gown

Wearing a gown she designed and created for herself, Patricia Karen Saile became the bride of Charles Robert Sowder in ceremonies Sept. 9 at University Christian Church, East Lansing. Rev. Michael Grange, cousin of the bride, officiated at the service which was written and prepared by the couple.

Following a brief honeymoon in Toronto, the Sowders are living in University Village, East Lansing. The bride, who has a bachelor's degree from Michigan State University, is completing nursing school, and her husband is preparing for medical school at the University of Virginia.

Fall flowers and a fall color scheme were used for the afternoon rites and a brief church reception for 200. Another later reception for 150 took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Saile of Clarkston.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Sowder of Huntington, West Virginia.

Pat's gown featured a Chantilly lace bodice with chapel length train and illusion fingertip length veil. Her maid of honor, Darlene Chase of Ann Arbor, wore a lemon colored gown of softly draped Qiana.

Bridesmaids, in similarly styled gowns of apricot, were her cousin Debra Winkler of Traverse City, Janice Reynolds of Haslett, and her sisters, Lizbeth and Janet Saile, both of Clarkston.

Attending as best man was Richard Douglass of Evanston, Ill. Groomsmen were Jerry Workman of Kenova, W. Va., a brother Dan Sowder of Huntington, W. Va., and brothers of the bride, Michael and Douglas Saile of Clarkston. Tim Sowder and Peter Saile, brothers, served as ushers.

California wedding

Deborah K. Pfahlert and Russell F. Jewell were married in California recently. The afternoon ceremony was performed in the Wedding Chapel in Carmel by the Sea.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pfahlert of Warbler Road, Independence Township, is a 1976 graduate of Clarkston High School. She is employed by McDonald's of Sylvan Lake.

Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Jewell of San Jose, Calif., graduated from CHS in 1975 and is employed by Fisher Body, Pontiac.

For her Aug. 8 wedding, the bride wore a dress of rust, brown, blue and off-white print with a matching shawl. She carried a bouquet of yellow and rust-colored daisies, carnations and baby's breath.

She was given in marriage by her father.

Matron of honor was Margaret Pfahlert, mother of the bride.

Linda Jewell, sister of the groom, was flower girl. She wore a pink floral print dress and carried pink and white carnations and daisies.

The groom's brother, Michael Jewell, served as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Jewell returned from their wedding trip to California and are residing in Meiamora.

Claude Gourand, new CHS drum major, leads the band Sunday from a makeshift platform in a field at Camp Tamarack. The band members, who had been encamped all weekend, put on a mini-show for their visiting parents.

Striking up the band in their camping togs Sunday, marching instrumentalists from CHS give barely a hint of the pageantry in store at the Clarkston Invitational Marching Band Competition this Saturday.

Big band bash

Clarkston area residents will have a chance to see—and hear—a big-time band competition Saturday at Clarkston High School.

Marching bands from 12 Michigan schools will perform in the Clarkston Invitational Marching Band Competition, the first of what the Clarkston Band Boosters plan to stage as an annual event.

The contest will begin at 6:30 p.m. with the opening flag ceremonies featuring the American Legion Color Guard and the Clarkston High School Band.

The CHS band will perform in exhibition, because host units do not compete.

Members of the local band spent last weekend at Camp Tamarack in Brandon Township, shaping up their routines for the local event and for other competitions which will follow.

Several of the groups performing here will travel to Atwood Stadium in Flint Sunday to appear in the prestigious Governor's Cup Tournament, the Michigan Invitational, sponsored by the Flushing Band and Orchestra Boosters.

Scheduled to appear in Clarkston are the nationally-recognized Flushing Raiders, the Plymouth Centennial Park High School Band and the Reed City High School Band in open competition.

Bands participating in Class A competition will be from Durand, Flint Northern and Southfield high schools.

In the Class B contest, participants will be Bad Axe High School, Vassar High School, Saginaw - Carrolton, Ithaca High School, St. Charles High School and the Tecumseh Shawnee marchers.

The more than 1,000 band members will be presenting their fall season efforts for the first time in competition when they meet in Clarkston.

There will be trophies for first, second and third place in three classifications, along with special awards for percussion, winds, color guard, drum major and marching and maneuvering.

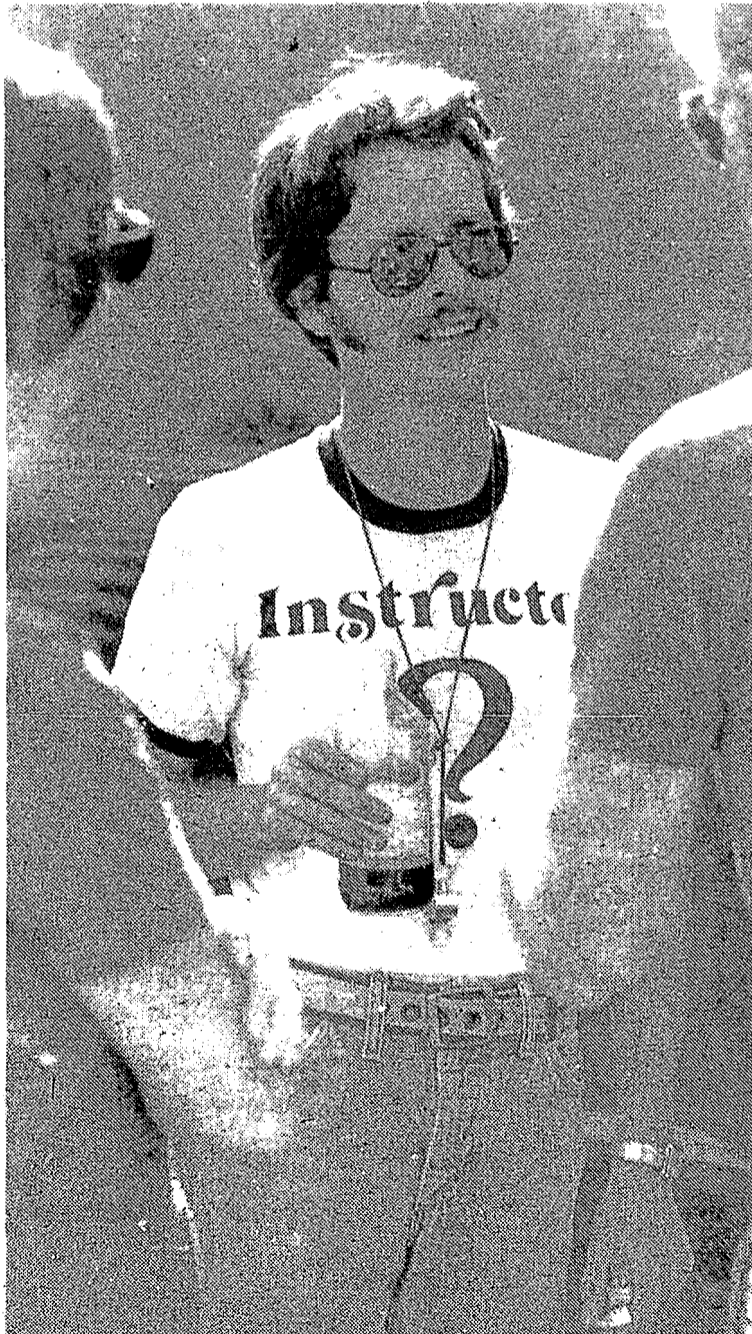

A panel of judges from across the state will evaluate each band in minute detail to determine the outcome, with the highest-scoring band, regardless of class, awarded the overall championship trophy.

The Clarkston Invitational is fully sanctioned by the Michigan Competitive Band Director's Association.

This organization establishes the rules and guidelines for competition and maintains a list of qualified adjudicators to serve the member bands. Clifford Chapman, CHS band director, currently is vice president of the organization.

Tickets for the Clarkston event are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students, with the proceeds to benefit the instrumental music programs of the Clarkston Community Schools.

Band Director Clifford Chapman took a pause for refreshment Sunday after a weekend of intensive drills at Camp Tamarack.
