Developer backs out on Depot Road

By Mimi Mayer

The Depot, Holcomb and White Lake road intersection improvement plan may be in jeopardy.

Village President Fontie ApMadoc said Clarkston Mills developer Marc Alan is presently unable to contribute the $15,000 he promised the village for the project.

"I told him that the village council would not go ahead on anything on Depot until we have the money," ApMadoc told the Clarkston Village Council at its April 9 meeting.

"He hemmed and he hawed and he finally said, 'Fontie, I don't know when I can get the money,' ApMadoc said. "We can't do a thing without his $15,000."

"And I don't think we should do anything," Trustee James Schultz commented, adding that the project was initiated by Alan.

Alan was unavailable for comment.

Originally proposed last spring, the improvement was estimated to cost $33,000 by Alan's planners, Reid, Cool and Mischalski. They had suggested the road project to handle additional traffic the Clarkston Mills was expected to bring to the intersection.

The village and the Oakland County Road Commission have set aside $11,000 each toward construction, with Alan contracted to contribute an additional $15,000.

In return for his money, Alan leased at minimal cost approximately 7,520-square-foot parcel of village right-of-way used in the Mills parking lot north of Depot Road.

Papers sealing the agreement were signed by ApMadoc at the Nov. 27 meeting.

However, contractors' bids for the project are far above the $33,000 cost initially estimated for the project. A low bid of $46,244.70 was submitted by Wolverine Asphalt Paving, Drayton Plains at the March 26 meeting.

Delton Lohff, of Kieft Engineering, 5258 S. Main, Independence Township, the village engineering firm, has investigated methods of paring costs.

Attorney Thomas Gruich said the council has a lever with which to obtain the money from Alan.

"We have the authority to revoke the license to use the village right-of-way," he said at the April 9 meeting.

Trustee Robert Adams suggested writing Alan "a polite letter" pointing out that the council controls the license.

"In other words, forcing him to give up the license," unless he contributed the $15,000 he promised to the village, ApMadoc said.

A decision on how the council will approach Alan will be made at the April 23 meeting. Council members are presently studying contracts and agreements Alan made with the village.

ApMadoc said Thursday she personally opposed revoking Alan's license for the right-of-way.

"I don't see how we gain anything by taking away his license. I don't think it's that important to him if he doesn't have the money," she noted.

"If we wanted to do it, I guess we could sue him. But that will all really come out in the next meeting."

Without Alan's contribution, ApMadoc said the council may have to abandon the intersection improvement plan.

"This is just me talking," she continued. "I think very definitely that there might be a chance that we have to drop it altogether because of the increase in cost."

"With the general fund (1979-80) budget, we have come to the conclusion that we cannot go more than $11,000. And the county told us they could not go for more than $11,000, so there you go."

"It's cut and dried, really," ApMadoc said.

Kieft Engineering is presently researching the bare-bones cost of improving the intersection alone and eliminating road construction on the eastern portion of Depot Road near the Clarkston Village Hall.

"I did call Del Lohff and asked him to come up with a figure on what just the corner change would cost," ApMadoc said.

"If it does cost no more than $22,000, I feel sure we'll go ahead. I know it's the council's feeling that we would like to change the corner."

ApMadoc estimated that the village has already spent close to $3,720 in engineering costs for plans and handling the bid process.

An additional $5,700 in 1977 Community Development Act funds was allocated for Kieft Engineering's supervision of construction, she said.

"If it isn't built, that money would be designated for some other project," ApMadoc commented.

Council asks to ok all state actions on M-15

The Clarkston Village Council let the Michigan transportation Commission know that they

Hire rec supervisor

Sheryl Stickney has been hired as a recreation supervisor by the Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department.

The township board approved a salary of $10,000 a year for the 40-hour-a-week position at its April 9 meeting.

should contact the village before widening M-15.

The message was conveyed in a resolution written by Trustee Ruth Basinger and unanimously supported by the village council at their April 9 meeting.

Basinger summed up the intent of the resolution, saying, "The village requires that no alteration be made on M-15 without consultations between the highway commission and the village."

"One has to establish policy in order to require consideration for environmental concerns," she continued. "Establishing policy by resolution is one of the best ways."

The resolution emphasized the council's responsibility to protect and preserve "the historic character of the village," as well.

Copies will be sent to the transportation commission, State Representative Claude A. Trim (D-Davisburg) and State Senator Kerry K. Kammer (D-Pontiac).

Name acting librarian

Lucy Embry has been appointed as acting Independence Township librarian.

She will be paid $260 a week, retroactive to March 15, until a new librarian is hired.

Former librarian Sushil Lahiri's resignation is effective May 31, but he has been given permission to use the time to search for another position.

Embry's appointment was approved by the Independence Township Board at its April 9 meeting.

Independence officials' raises stay at 16%

The 16 percent salary increases for the three full-time Independence Township elected officials remain intact. A motion to lower the raises was made by Clerk Christopher Rose at Tuesday night's board meeting.

"I firmly believe we should stay within the 7 percent (set by President Jimmy Carter's wage guidelines)," Rose said.

Supervisor Whitey Tower said he refused to allow the motion.

"The public sets the boards' salaries at the annual meeting," he said. "It's not allowable under state statute for board members to change that action. 'I will allow discussion,' he added.

Trustee Rudy Lozano made a second to the motion.

"I feel that the motion is proper," he said. "Following the President's guidelines is in order," and if anybody should be setting an example, the public officials should.

"To me it's just a hell of a gamble," Lozano added, explaining that federal funds could be jeopardized.

The 8.3 percent increase included the clause that it could be rescinded if federal funds were endangered, he said.

The township could be ineligible for new federally funded programs if the voluntary guidelines are not met, Rose said.

The township attorney's opinion that salaries could not be lowered differed with Rose's opinion, Tower said.

"So I guess we'd better get it in writing," he said.

And board members present voted 3-2 to maintain the raises with majority votes by Tower and trustees Jerry Powell and Michael Thayer.

Sewer tax cut

Independence Township residents upset over taxes for sewers they don't use will have less to grumble about in 1979.

One-fourth of the township's surplus funds, or $100,000, will be used to reduce the taxes for one year only from 1.46 mills to .6 mill.

That means a taxpayer with $25,000 assessed property valuation will pay $15 for the ad valorem sewer tax rather than $36.50.

Trustee Jerry Powell's proposal to reduce the tax was approved at Tuesday night's meeting.

"Let's give the $100,000 back to the people," Powell said.

And the reduction could just be the beginning.

"I've asked the auditor to be doubly careful, or triply careful, in auditing the sewer fund so that we may lower it even more if there's an unanticipated surplus," said Clerk Christopher Rose.

After the meeting, he added, "Based on investments our treasurer has been making, there should be a surplus."

Council to set budget

The budget for Clarkston's 1979-80 fiscal year will be presented at the Monday night village council meeting.

The budget was prepared by Village Treasurer Artemus Pappas, Village President Fontie ApMadoc and Trustees Michael Thayer and Gary Symons.

Thayer and Symons serve on the village finance committee.

Trustee Ruth Basinger also sat in on meetings when the preliminary budget was discussed.

ApMadoc said Tuesday the finalized budget may be subject to change following the implementation of tax cuts resulting from the Headlee Amendment, passed by Michigan voters in November.

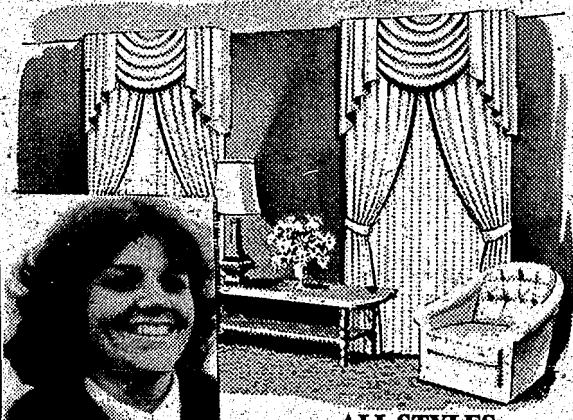

The meeting begins at 7:30pm and will be held at the Clarkston Village Hall, 375 Depot Road.

Department heads get 10% hike

By Kathy Greenfield

Salaries of six Independence Township department heads have been increased by $2,000 a year.

Following the precedent set when board members were voted a 16 percent increase by electors at the annual township meeting March 31, the majority of the board approved the 10 percent hike last week.

The vote was 4-3 in favor of the increase to $21,000 for directors of the police, fire, building, parks and recreation, sewer and water, and assessing department.

Supervisor Whitey Tower, Clerk Christopher Rose and Trustee Rudy Lozano voted against the raises.

Rose and Lozano said they based their votes on the 7 percent salary increase guideline set by President Jimmy Carter's voluntary wage and price standards.

"I felt it was important to stay as close as possible to the 7 percent guideline requested by the President," Rose said.

Lozano emphasized the "no" votes he cast on both the 16 percent increase for elected officials and the raises that exceeded 7 percent for township management employees.

"Carter has asked for a 7 percent ceiling on all wage increases, and I agree with him," Lozano said.

"I just don't think it was right," he added. "I voted no

(March 31) and I voted no again (last week) and even though Chris Rose can't be absolutely sure, there is a possibility we could jeopardize a federal grant down the road."

The 16 percent wage increase for elected officials did not enter into his decision, Tower said.

"I have to feel that the separation has to be there for the elected officials and the department heads, because the officials get their raises on votes from the public," Tower said. "If it had been zero, the department heads wouldn't have wanted zero."

His vote, instead, was based on the budgets for the fiscal year that started April 1.

"I voted no on the 10 percent," Tower explained. "I had no objections to the department heads getting raises."

"My only reason (for voting 'no') was we had put 7 percent in the budget as projected salary increases," he said. "I felt 8.5 percent was the highest I could go on the department head raises."

Treasurer Frederick Ritter made the proposal to increase department heads' salaries by 10 percent.

"You have to put a dollar value on somebody's services and I felt that what we came up with was appropriate," he said. "I think they're probably worth more than that, but I had to come up with something the majority would approve," Ritter added.

Other raises granted to township salaried employees included:

A 13 percent increase for the finance director to $17,500 a year, approved on a 4-3 vote with Tower, Lozano and Trustee Michael Thayer voting "no."

A 13 percent increase for the zoning officer's salary with Lozano voting "no."

An increase to $13,500 for the animal control officer with Lozano voting "no."

A 7 percent raise to $15,000 for the two Independence Township police officers until their jobs end Oct. 1.

A 20 percent increase to $12,000 for the recreation department program coordinator.

The salary increases were discussed in a closed meeting that opened to the public for voting.

The department heads requested a closed hearing and township attorney Richard Campbell's opinion was the open meetings act allows the public to be excluded for discussions on salary bargaining, Tower told the board.

"The open meetings act states you can close meetings under discharge or discipline for an employee and it does not include salary setting," Rose said.

"I just want to go on record," he said. "I don't think this is a valid reason to close a meeting."

The vote to discuss salaries behind closed doors was 6-1 with Rose casting the only "no" vote.

Bold bikers beware

By Mimi Mayer

Riding bicycles on Clarkston's sidewalks is illegal.

Under a village ordinance on the books since 1915, cyclists convicted of careening down a sidewalk are subject to a maximum penalty of $25 in fines and 10 days in jail.

However, the Clarkston Village Council is weighing methods of amending the ordinance, while controlling bicycle use in the village business district.

Under consideration is an amendment which would allow cyclists to ride bicycles on sidewalks. However, cyclists must walk their bikes on sidewalks within the business district.

Village President Fontie M. ApMadoc advocated banning bikes from the business district.

"I think there's something short of banning bikes. I personally think if you don't like bikes in the business district, they should walk them," said Jennifer Radcliff, 33 N. Main.

"I would be very unhappy if I was told that at 12pm on a Tuesday afternoon, I couldn't ride my bicycle through town on my way to the post office," she added.

Karen Sanderson, 75 S. Holcomb, asked if the village would install bike racks downtown if the ordinance amendment is passed.

"If there's money in the budget," ApMadoc responded. "I do think we should keep kids off the sidewalks."

A small fine could be levied against cyclists caught breaking the ordinance by Clarkston's parking officer, "Or I could nail them myself if I see them," ApMadoc stated.

Trustees Jackson Byers and James Schultz supported amending the ordinance.

Schultz pointed out that bikes parked outside Main Street stores could "topple like dominoes", conceivably injuring pedestrians.

Cyclists should equip their bikes with bells or horns to warn pedestrians, he added.

Attorney Thomas Gruich was authorized to investigate state laws governing bicycle use. He said he would report his findings at the April 23 council meeting.

PK hotel hearing

A public hearing on the proposed 22-story hotel at Pine Knob has been set for May 11.

Possible changes to the Independence Township recreation zoning ordinance to allow construction of the hotel and a presentation of the building plans are scheduled at the Planning Commission meeting at 7:30 p.m., Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main, Clarkston.

Independent view

Practice makes perfect, as the saying goes.

And as White Cane chairman for the Clarkston Lions D'Arcy Gonzales gathered support from local governing units for White Cane Week, April 19-30, his presentations became stronger.

At the April 3 Independence Township Board meeting, he told members who purchased the miniature white canes:

"If we see you on the street, we hope you have your white cane on, because if you don't, we're going to sell you another one."

At the April 9 Clarkston Village Council meeting, he told cane purchasers:

"We all encourage you to wear white canes during the week, because if you're not, we're going to get you."

***

A Clarkston Village Council neophyte may have had his first lesson in government procedure at the April 9 meeting.

An eight-inch-thick pile of folders containing vital information on the village was presented to new trustee Robert Adams by Clerk Bruce Rogers moments before the meeting was called to order.

As Adams warily eyed the mountain of paperwork, he was told by Rogers that such presentations are a traditional way the council greets new members.

That's just like getting homework on the first day of school.

An alphabetical misfortune gained Trustee Robert Adams Village President Fontie ApMadoc's sympathy.

Alluding to a parliamentary procedure in which roll-call votes are taken in an A-to-Z fashion, ApMadoc made one comment to Adams.

"Bob, I want you to know that you are in the position that I was in as a trustee: You have to make that first vote and I feel very sorry for you."

Clarkston schools take steps toward sex education

By Kathy Greenfield

The first step has been taken to start a sex education program for Clarkston Community Schools.

Approval for establishing a program and naming a citizens' advisory committee was granted by the Clarkston Board of Education at its meeting April 9. "We've only passed the first hurdle," said Mel Vaara, assistant superintendent of schools. "There are about 15 steps before we can establish our program."

Work on the final steps should begin in the spring of 1980 with a program started in the fall of 1980, he said.

A Michigan state law passed in 1977 set guidelines for starting sex education classes.

So far, only two districts out of 560 in the state have approved programs, Vaara said.

"It's a delicate subject and it has to be the right criteria," he said.

Plans now are to teach the subject for one marking period a semester at the junior and senior high schools.

"Our sex ed program is not going to be a full-blown program. It will be part of our health ed program," he said. "Ours is going to be more of an information, question type program, but there are a lot of things we can cover on family planning."

Before sex education classes begin, community opinions will be sought through a survey, meetings with parents and the advisory board's recommendations.

The advisory board will suggest course materials with final approval from the school board.

Right now, there are "a lot of volunteers" for the advisory board that will have less than 12 members, Vaara said.

He plans to devote much of his time to the topic starting in the fall, he said.

There is a need for such a program in Clarkston schools, Vaara said, noting that his opinion is supported by "all the physical education teachers."

For some students, teachers are the only source for discussing questions related to growing up, he said.

Once the sex education classes are ready to begin, parents will be able to review the program and materials.

Students can be excused from attending classes in which the subject of reproductive health, including family planning, is under discussion upon written request of the student or his/her guardian.

Under state guidelines, the classes can include family planning, reproductive health, and the recognition, prevention and treatment of venereal disease.

Village ponders loader purchase

While the Clarkston Village Council is studying a tentative budget for the upcoming fiscal year, Gar Wilson asked them to consider investing in a new loader.

"I don't want to do anything that will get the village in red pencil. You people know what we can afford and I'd like you to think about it," the Department of Public works director told the council April 9.

Wilson later said he'd received informal dealer bids for the machine ranging from "around $32,000 to $46,000."

Village President Fontie Ap-Madoc reported that the Pontiac State Bank offered to finance the purchase with a loan. Payments would be approximately $5,000 per year at seven-percent interest.

Money could also come in part by selling a village tractor for $7,000 quoted by a dealer. Additional funding includes the $7,500 budgeted in DPW equipment reserves per year, Wilson said.

"I'm asking for the loader because I need it. It's not another of Gar's toys," Wilson told the council.

It's uses would include asphalt work, tree trimming, snow removal, park maintenance and road repairs, he added.

The village could "sell it in three or four years and get what you paid for it," Wilson reported a dealer told him.

A decision on purchasing the loader will be made when the 1979-80 budget is finalized, council members said.

White Cane sale

Clarkston Lions Club members will be selling miniature white canes starting tomorrow (Thursday).

The canes symbolize support and recognition for the 16,000 sight-handicapped people in Michigan dependent upon a white cane or leader dog.

The week-long charity drive that ends April 30 is to benefit programs and individuals with sight problems.

Among groups the Clarkston Lions Club works to help are Leader Dog School for the Blind and Welcome Home for the Blind.

They also pay for eye examinations and eyeglasses for the needy.

Letters to the editor

Give locals Pine Knob spoils

To the editor:

I hope that before the Pine Knob's 600-room hotel-convention center becomes a reality, the local residents will be given some considerations.

It seems incredible to me that Clarkston residents are not given top priority in the purchase of tickets to Pine Knob's summer attractions.

We are expected to tolerate the ridiculous summer traffic, provide police services, etc., but I wonder how many of the local folk have been able to get nice front-row type of season tickets.

These should be available first to residents and at reduced rates. The local resident should be able to enjoy the "spoils" of having Pine Knob here if they have to put up with the bad!

Somehow, the fact of visitors frequenting our local businesses doesn't seem enough compensation.

Sincerely,
Eleanor Harned

Tower wins post-storm vote

To the editor:

We'd like to extend our compliments to Independence Township Supervisor Whitey Tower.

In the aftermath of the recent storm which left most of us 'round here stranded without electrical power, water and heat, the most obvious person on the scene working to spur a return to normalcy was Mr. Tower.

Certainly he appeared to be the one with at least some answers, the latter most definitely not forthcoming from the power company and et al.

If he hadn't made the wheel squeak, as it were, we're sure we all would have been in our predicament a much, much longer time.

Mr. Tower wins our vote as an elected official who is a man of action for his constituents.

News of home

by Pat Braunagel

During the particularly unwanted spate of bad weather we recently suffered after a few spring-like days, more and more conversations included mentions of friends wintering in the South.

The comments began with the usual envious cracks and then moved into musings about what various friends might be doing in sunnier climes.

Then, too, there were the good folks—like Jack and Char Frost of Clarkston—who packed up for permanent moves to year-round garden spots.

The Frosts moved to Santa Ana, Cal. Although there may be others who went northward, it seems that all who have relocated of late have bettered themselves weather-wise.

As our thoughts turn to friends faraway, we know also that they are thinking of us.

We at The Clarkston News are frequently reminded via subscription renewals and notes from afar that news of our community and the people in it is read with interest thousands of miles from what we normally consider our circulation area.

We've heard tales like the one about a woman in Naples, Fla. who had never been anywhere near Clarkston, Mich. yet borrowed her neighbor's Clarkston News when her own hometown paper did not arrive in the mail.

And so our hearts were warmed last week when Mrs. John Trampler of Nelsey Road brought in the following poem which she said reminded her of The Clarkston News.

We publish it here with thoughts of our distant friends.

Librarian conscientious

To the editor:

Having been a volunteer for the Springfield Township Library I want to comment on the work that Gail Fleming, our recent librarian, has accomplished.

Gail was selected in June, 1976 to work at the library. Until a few months ago, the library was housed at the Springfield Township Hall.

Working under crowded, unsatisfactory conditions she has sorted, classified and processed a great many books, most of which were donated.

Anyone familiar with library procedures will know that this work is time-consuming.

I found her to be a conscientious worker, sincerely interested in her profession. She was always polite and helpful to visitors of the library.

I believe that Gail Fleming has made a valuable contribution to the Springfield Township Library.

Hometown Paper

There's something about the most of us,
No matter where we go
We have within a longing;
At least I've found it so;
To keep in touch with loved ones
While wandering up and down,
And we love to see the paper
From the old home town.

It receives a hearty welcome
As it makes its regular round
Telling us of our old friends;
And where they may be found;
It just sort o' keeps together
Heartstrings once entwined;
It's the voice from our old home town,
Where town and paper seem combined.

Jim's jottings

Of beer, Bannister

by Jim Sherman

"It's been a time since my dad's name has come up here. Some people relate to him, having parents of similar age and railroad background.

February 4 dad turned 87. He is wonderfully hearty. Still takes "just a capful" of Gordon's gin with each bottle of beer.

"Eases the pain of arthritis and let's me sleep a lot better," he says. Maybe I should try that recipe for my sore hand, or ear, or toe, or whatever. Heredity should make it work.

I took dad for a ride last week. I've told you before his favorite retreat might well be a small bar in Bannister, up in Gratiot county.

Any bar in Bannister has to be small. There are two of them, a grocery store, and a service station. The biggest building in town is a polka dance hall, and the second biggest is three stores converted into a VFW Hall.

Bannister isn't quite as big as Oakley, and twice as big as Grant.

Dad's favorite tunes on the juke box used to be Franky Yankovich playing "Just Because" and Boots Randolph tooting his "Yakety Sax."

A couple times dad has mentioned the day he was in this Bannister bar (the one on the west side of the grocery store, not the east side), and having Franky Yankovich sitting on the stool next to him.

Worshiper met hero.

Things were not the same last week. The bar was vacant when we arrived about 3:30. None of dad's cronies came in. Not even the doctor from Elsie who has always shown up before.

"Doc" as everyone called him was usually in a hurry when we saw him a half dozen times in the last ten years.

Dad would tell how people in that area supported Doc, and how good he was about taking care of people. He'd go to Bannister to visit a convalescent home, and stop by the bar on the way out of town.

The bartender would set him up a shot of whiskey and a short beer. For you who don't know, a short beer is about two swallows.

Doc would follow the shot with a swallow of beer. He'd take another shot of whiskey with the last swallow of beer. Then he'd be on his way. Always like to see Doc.

I said things weren't the same. Dad studied the juke box. Instead of Franky Yankovich there was Eddy Rabbitt with "Every which way but loose."

Boots Randolph gave way to Alice Cooper with "Go to Hell."

Dad settled for "Take me home" by the Little River Band. When the record started, dad turned to me and asked, "Is that music?"

Next time we go to Bannister I think I'll forgo the music and say, "Give me what Doc would have."

His tactics cut village down to size

Rose stumps to remove deadwood

By Mimi Mayer

A problem which has continually stumped Herb Rose of Clarkston may soon be licked.

Rose was overjoyed to learn that the Clarkston Village Council voted last week to spend $500 to remove approximately 15 tree stumps within the village.

John Powe, who has trimmed and felled diseased trees for the village before, was given a four- to six-week deadline to complete the work.

So why was this piece of news so welcome by Rose?

For over a year now, Rose has been battling the village over stumps. Among his ammunition were letters to The Clarkston News, planting the North Holcomb Forest and posting a warning on his stump.

Sometime last spring, village workers cut two large maples which stood on the berm in front of Rose's home at 126 N. Holcomb Road.

Rose said he was not informed by the village that his trees would be felled. He was further aggravated when the workers left souvenirs of their work.

They were stumps. And not just any stumps. One was as tall as a woman and the other towered over Holcomb Road in 20-foot majesty.

Unfortunately, village workers appeared to remove the stumps the very day Rose's son was to marry. A reception honoring the nuptials was held at Rose's house.

"There they were with heavy machinery and stuff and damned if they weren't going to cut down the stumps. And we were expecting 50 people!" Rose said.

"I cannot take credit for my behavior. I was showing a lack of civilization that was shocking at the time. They left," he commented.

The village cut Rose's stumps to a five-inch height sometime in the fall. But Rose soon discovered he had yet another problem to contend with.

"My car kept getting hung up," he said on the stump which squats next to his driveway.

"This was starting to be a real hazard. I couldn't see the stump—the leaves were blowing around, and then the snow came and completely covered up the stump."

Rose came up with a novel way to deal with the dilemma: he posted a sign on the felled tree which simply announced "STUMP."

"I think I had it up one day and ran over it the next," Rose noted. Undeterred, he mounted a second sign.

"I didn't know what my next move would be," he admitted. "We have a history of statements made by village employees which are not entirely accurate."

"Like the stump will be removed by July 4 or the stump will be removed before snow. I agonized over what 'before snow' means. I should have looked it up.

"I think the village—if they are going to take care of the stumps—they are doing the job, I guess."

Rose stressed that he wasn't out to offend members of the village council.

"They do a pretty damned thankless job listening to nuts like me," he commented. And besides, the incident sparked the creation of the North Holcomb National Forest.

Just watch for a spindly, two-inch-thick tree next time you drive past 126 N. Holcomb.

Taking a cue from advertising, Herb Rose posted this sign on a stump which caused the North Holcomb Road resident many woes.

'If it Fitz. . .'

Sign up Newhouser

by Jim Fitzgerald

In 1945, I risked my life to watch the Detroit Tigers play baseball. I would have paid every cent I owned to be a member of the Tiger team.

In 1979, Rusty Staub won't risk a fallen soufflé for the Tigers. He is offered $2000,000 to spend six months hitting baseballs for Detroit, and he refuses.

These baseball thoughts were sparked by current efforts of the Detroit Free Press sports department to find qualified citizens to serve on Baseball Fans Panel. The panel will advise baseball writers on the most important issues facing the game today, such as: Should male reporters be allowed to interview the players' agents' wives between patios and jucuzzies, or only between games of Sunday doubleheaders?

Persons desiring membership on the baseball panel are asked to submit their qualifications, telling why they think they deserve to be selected. Presumably the panel seats will go to those Tiger fans who have done the most to prove their loyalty. Like me.

Early in the spring of 1945, my body was in Germany but my heart was in Tiger Stadium (then Briggs Stadium). The Tigers were winning. Most of the team was made up of ancient or 4-F unknowns named Hostetler and Outlaw. But there were two good pitchers—Newhouser and Trout. Hank Greenberg was soon to be discharged back to first base. A pennant and a world's championship were definite, glorious possibilities.

And there I was, the greatest fan the Tigers ever had, thousands of miles away. The scores were a week old when I got them, if I got them at all. I had to get home.

When Germany surrendered, the Army announced some diabolical gimmick call the Point System. If you had 75 points you could get discharged. I had about 35. Oh woe. Then there appeared a sign on the orderly room bulletin board. If I re-enlisted in the regular Army for a year, I would get a 30-day "recuperation leave" at home before being reassigned to another outfit. Oh glow.

"Sign me up," I told the sergeant. "I will recuperate in Briggs Stadium or in front of a radio listening to Harry Heilmann tell how great are my Tigers."

"You are insane," the sergeant said. "There is still a war in the South Pacific. After your 30 days you will be sent to Japan. If you stay in Germany you will be safe. If you re-enlist, you are liable to get your dumb head blown off on some lousy island."

"Greater love hath no man," I said. "Sign me up." Fortunately, I never had to bleed for my love. We sailed from Germany on Aug. 5 and landed in New York on Aug. 13, 1945. That, you may remember, was the day the Japanese surrendered. They heard I was coming.

The Tigers won the pennant and I saw a dozen of their victories. By World Series time I was in Oklahoma and had to listen on the radio. Chuck Hostetler fell down between third and home but the Tigers edged the Cubs for the championship, and I heard it all. Such bliss.

My re-enlistment cost me six extra months in the Army. Having been prepared to give my life for my Tigers, six months was a bargain. I never had any regrets.

But I'd never re-enlist for the Tigers today. I still love baseball, but today I go to games for the same reason I go to the theater—simply to be entertained. There is no wild elation when my side wins, and no agonizing despair when we lose.

The loyalty is gone from the game, on all sides. Players and management are loyal only to the dollar. If I were in their place, I'd probably be just as greedy. But, as a fan, I can't live or die with the fortunes of a Detroit pitcher who played for Chicago last season and will play for Cleveland next season. I couldn't plight my troth with a club owner who moves his team to wherever taxpayers build him a bigger stadium.

And I wouldn't offer my blood to the general manager who doesn't buy good players because his money is all tied up in Boy Scout principles.

Despite my superior qualifications, I'm not applying for membership on the Baseball Fans Panel. I don't care enough. I wish I did. Baseball was a lot more fun when I was willing to die for the Tigers.

Village considers water study

Steps have been taken to protect local lakes and streams.

The Clarkston Village Council allocated $435 on the first phase of a two-year United States Geological Survey (USGS) water quality study.

A contingency was made that the Independence township Board must provide an extra $430 for the project.

Michael Thayer, a trustee on both the council and the board, voted against the motion at the April 9 council meeting.

In the program, the USGS Water Resource Division will provide guages to measure water flow in several key locations, test water for pollutants, and correlate their data with information gathered from other monitors throughout the area.

Samples will be taken from the Clinton River where it feeds into the Mill Pond, the two spillways running from the pond, Parke Lake and the stream flowing from Parke to Cemetery Lake.

Residents' complaints about water levels in these waters prompted Trustee Ruth Basinger to investigate the USGS program.

"We need some facts on which to base a request for action and we'll never get that unless we do something," she told the council.

Basinger later commented that the USGS findings would help pinpoint sources of pollutants and the minimum amount of Mill Pond water flow necessary to maintain Parke Lake.

"That's fine to ask but we haven't got any power over it," Thayer said, adding that Clarkston Mills Developer Marc Alan controls Mill Pond water levels by opening the spillway gates.

"If Marc Alan wants to open the gates, he'll open the gates," Thayer said.

The USGS will match the $985 cost for the first phase of the water study.

Clerk Bruce Rogers and Rita Chisholm, a member of the Clarkston hydrology committee, have volunteered to monitor the guages, shaving $120 off the price and leaving the village contribution of $435 and the townships $430.

Estimated to cost $1,515, the second portion of the study could be paid for with 1980 Community Development funds tentatively allocated for the project, Basinger said.

She added she would take the matter before the township board May 1.

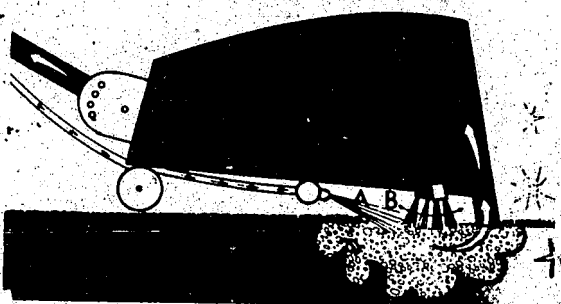

On the shores of Parke Lake, Mike [Kneeling] and Matt Prucher toss breakfast cereal to the hungry ducks. The boys, who live on Clarkston-Orion Road, said the birds are ready to be fed any time.

Spring's just ducky

His hand full of cereal, Mike [left] gets ready to toss more snacks into the water for the waiting ducks.

Michigan Week festivities

Know a community leader who deserves some recognition? A chance to honor the person is to be given during Michigan Week, May 19-24.

Plans for special events including a Community Awards Dinner are underway.

"It's just a time to be happy you're in Michigan--to celebrate," said Independence Township Clerk Christopher Rose, chairman of the week-long activities.

Awards for community leaders are to be given at the dinner on May 24 at Spring Lake Country Club, 6060 Maybee Rd., Independence Township.

Award-winners are to be chosen by a four-member committee based on written nominations for achievements in 1978.

The six categories will be: Outstanding government official, elected or appointed. Outstanding young citizen, age 18 or under. Distinguished service award for an individual, a group and a project. Outstanding Clarkston educator for a professional in the school district. Outstanding cultural award. Super person award for someone who has done something outstanding for the community.

Community members who wish to nominate a person for an award can contact Bruce Shull at 625-3250 for details.

In addition, local clubs, churches and organizations are to be asked to nominate their outstanding volunteer with all nominees to receive awards.

Tickets for the dinner are to be $10 with details on where to purchase them to be set at a later date.

Mel Larsen, state Republican party chairman, is to speak at the awards dinner and Clarkston resident Lew Wint is to be master of ceremonies.

Other activities planned for the week include a contest to design the Independence Township Week logo, a walk to benefit Independence Center, a 10,000 meter race, Clarkston Band Booster Day featuring music in the Depot Road park, and a used book sale by Friends of Independence Township Library at the Clarkston Mills shopping mall.

Rose is also seeking ideas for other activities and community groups willing to sponsor an event. He can be contacted at Independence Township Hall, 625-5111.

For Independent Seniors

New senior co-ordinator

Monday was Rina Chemin's first day on the job.

The new senior citizen coordinator for the Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department was met with a busy schedule.

She filled out forms, was introduced to the Independent Seniors at their board meeting, observed the lunch program for seniors, went bowling with the group and topped off her day with a tour of the new senior citizen center that should open next month.

"I think it will be super," she said about her new job. "The people are really nice. It's right up my alley."

Chemin graduated from Wayne State University with a recreation and park services degree in 1977. She specialized in senior citizens.

She left a job as program director for the Macomb YWCA to come to Independence Township.

Her plans are to expand present programs for local senior citizens and to introduce more crafts and perhaps an exercise class.

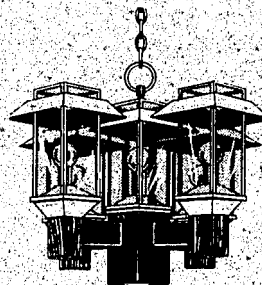

"And I want to work with the ideas the seniors already have," she said. "They seem to have a lot."

Chemin now lives in Clawson, but she said she will soon be looking for a home in the township.

'Stepping in both worlds'

By Dick Krause

Scientific discoveries don't do much good if nobody knows about them.

In sports, for example, it's been said the time lag between discovery and application is seven to ten years. That's where Richard Mach, Ph.D. comes in.

Mach hopes to cut through that time lag. He's going to do it through his new publication, "The Racer's Edge."

A former high school and college athlete, Mach sees himself as branching the fields of science and sports.

Mach notes the volumes of scientific publications relating breakthroughs in athletic training. Those breakthroughs, he notes, take years to filter down to the practical level.

An admitted reading addict, Mach plans to digest the scientific principals, put them in everyday language, and make the information available to coaches and athletes quickly.

"Someone stepping in both worlds can do it," Mach says.

Mach, indeed, steps in both worlds.

His interests in both science and sports go back to Lake Orion High School days when he ran track. As a sophomore at Western Michigan University Mach began writing in the area of science and sport.

Mach received his master's degree in experimental psychology in Los Angeles where he ran for the Los Angeles Track Club. He entered the U.S. Navy on a direct Presidential Commission as a Lieutenant after two years at the University of Colorado.

While in the navy Mach worked on research projects including studying the effects of long-term underwater inhabitation on human beings. After leaving the navy, Mach became a consultant for NASA. He was honored in a White House ceremony for his work.

As a civilian Mach has established The Institute for Science and Sport in Flint, and has had his own television show,

"Inside Sport" on a Flint station.

He's now devoting much of his time and energy to launching "The Racer's Edge." Mach sees the locally-published magazine as bridging the information gap between science and sport.

It will be geared to runners, and Mach intends to draw from both his sport and science backgrounds.

Referring to the seven-to-ten year information time lag, Mach comments, "That's ridiculous." He adds that iron curtain countries have been capturing gold medals at the Olympic games mainly because they have managed to direct scientific information to coaches and athletes much faster.

Features in the first issue, he said, will include a story on a new indoor track developed by Harvard Engineers. And an article on carbohydrate-loading for extra energy.

"Publishing the magazine is a real challenge," Mach said, "but I feel able to do it. I have been a serious athlete all my life, and I still run 60 miles a week."

To reach Mach, or for more information about his magazine, write: The Racer's Edge, Box 321, Lake Orion, MI. 48035.

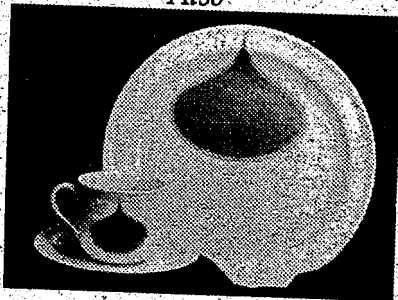

Practicing what he preaches, Richard Mach jogs along Coats Road with his brother, Fred.

Village alley stays two-way roadway

By Mimi Mayer

A Clarkston business district alley will not be made a one-way street.

Reversing an earlier decision, the Clarkston Village Council rescinded a traffic control order which would have limited alley traffic to one-way southbound.

The alley is located between West Washington Street and Depot Road, directly behind businesses on the west side of Main Street.

Approved at the Jan. 8 council meeting, signs designating the change were never posted and the order was not enforced.

A split vote rescinding the order was made at the April 9 meeting, with Trustees Jackson Byers and Gary Symons casting nay votes.

A letter from the Clarkston Planning Commission, which unanimously opposed the one-way order at their April 2 meeting, spurred the motion.

Charles Kimbel, D director of Independence Township Police Services, had suggested limiting traffic flow on the alley to one-way southbound in the late fall.

The change would have filtered traffic from downtown Clarkston toward the Depot-Holcomb-White Lake Roads intersection, easing congestion in the business district, Kimbel said.

Passed by a 3-4 vote, Kimbel's plan was adopted by the council at the Jan. 8 meeting.

However, those trustees opposed to the change pointed out the intersection would be torn up in construction slated to begin this spring.

"Many people have talked to me on the same deal," Village President Fontie ApMadoc said. "I would suggest that we do nothing until the decision on this Depot Road (intersection) is made."

"I guess rather than rescind it, I would rather put it on a holding pattern," Byers said.

Trustee Ruth Basinger commented that the planning commission had voted against the one-way traffic order and proposed the motion to rescind it. Kimbel said he still believes the alley should be made one-way southbound.

"I was not consulted on their rescinding the traffic control order," he said Thursday.

"If you've ever been down there, you see people coming in and out of that alley and see those trucks parked there, how the heck do you get through?" he asked.

"All I can say is it's their village and they can do what they like. If they don't want to take my recommendation, that's their business."

The council also discussed eliminating three parking spaces on the south side of West Washington between the alley and Main Street to better control traffic at the Washington-Main intersection.

Jennifer Radcliff, 33 N. Main, advocated the move and said it would create a "virtual, right-turn lane" on West Washington.

No action on the matter was taken by the council.

Baseball 'aggressive' at CHS

Roy Warner is psyching up his baseball team for a winning season. "We're going to play aggressively," declared the Clarkston High School coach. "We're going to try and force them to make mistakes and we're going to try not to make any."

Warner is pushing hard to pull together a team which includes returning seniors Frank Davis, Greg Robertson, Jeff Warden and Ed Eaglen. The boys helped take the Wolves to baseball district finals last year.

Recalling that the top five high school baseball teams in Michigan came from the Detroit metropolitan area, Warner is reluctant to forecast how the Wolves will fare this season.

"Our defense looks strong. It comes down to how our pitching is going to hold up and where our hitting is going to go," he said.

To fortify the Wolves' play this season a seven-man pitching staff was selected, including Tim Donnelly, Mike Mullane, Dino Rotondo, Scott Himes, Doug Hagyard, John Tisch and Chuck Nicholai.

"Defensively, we're going to keep the pressure on them when we can," Warner promised. His primary tactic will be establishing an early lead so the Wolves can dictate the game to their opponents.

In team practices against a pitching machine, the Wolves are "batting well," Warner said. But he cautioned that the situation changes when a hitter faces a pitcher.

Most important to Warner is creating a unified team.

"Anybody has the opportunity to win the game for us. I've always felt that every ballplayer is so important that I don't pick a captain," he said.

The Wolves' matches against Grand Blanc and Lake Orion were postponed because of foul weather and the CHS Easter break.

But the team is carrying out its original five-game schedule this week.

Last night was the season opener against Pontiac Northern.

Tonight, the Wolves meet Waterford Township and on Friday, they'll begin their league play in a game with Rochester High School. Both games will be played at Clarkston High School beginning at 4pm.

A weekend double-header in Midland will close the action for this week. And on Monday, the Wolves will play West Bloomfield on the Laker's home turf.

Fun with Parks and Rec

From weekly hatha yoga classes to weekend trips to New York City, Chicago and Toronto, the Independence Parks and Recreation Department has a slew of activities planned for the spring and summer months.

Tiger baseball tickets for Monday night at 7 are available at the parks and recreation offices in Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main, Clarkston.

It's an exhibition match at Tiger Stadium with the Cincinnati Reds. All proceeds from the game will be donated to junior baseball programs throughout Detroit. All seats are at regular prices.

Davisburg girls twirl their way to glory

Two Davisburg girls are members of baton twirling teams which took the Michigan State first-place titles in an April 7 Drum Majorettes of America competition.

Debby Ragatz, 15, of the Contenders and her cousin Wendy Ragatz, 13, of the Cadettes won the blue ribbons.

The teams are co-sponsored by the Pontiac Jaycees and Community Activities Inc., of Waterford. Baton twirling, poise, personality and physical condition were used to judge the girls.

The wins qualify the Contenders and the Cadettes for the Drum Majorettes of America national competition to be held in North Carolina this August.

Neighbors on Andersonville Road, Wendy is the daughter of David and Judy Ragatz and Debby's parents are Steve and Kay Ragatz.

PSB sprouts new Dixie branch

By Kathy Greenfield

Pontiac State Bank's third Independence Township branch is slated to open early this fall.

Final site plans for the drive-in bank at the northeast corner of Dixie Highway and Maybee Road were presented to the township Planning Commission last week by Wes Newmyer, architectural engineer from Newmyer Contracting, Pontiac.

Construction should begin in about two weeks, with completion in about four months, he said.

After discussion on the increase in traffic flow at the corner, six of the seven commission members present voted in favor of the project with Martha Wheeler, an employee of Pontiac State Bank, abstaining.

The bank's effect on traffic at the busy intersection was discussed by commission member John Gray.

The traffic situation will only get worse, Gray said, noting the pending construction of subdivisions along Maybee Road.

"The traffic right now is a problem," he said. "You can sit there four or five minutes just waiting to get through."

"It's not the purpose of the bank to back-up traffic," Newmyer responded. "That's why this bank is going in—because the Pine Knob branch is at capacity."

The bank's other two locations are the village of Clarkston on Main Street and the Pine Knob branch at the corner of Maybee and Sashabaw roads.

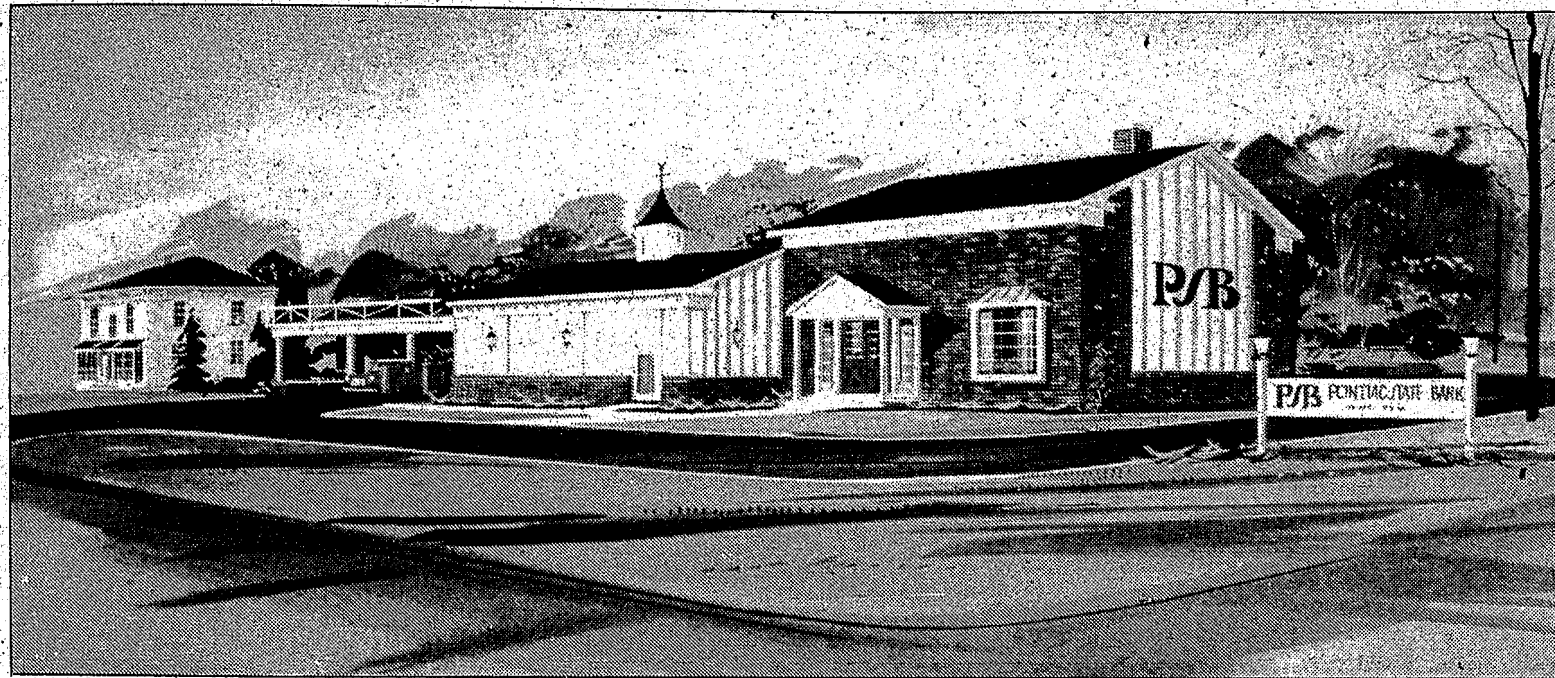

The new bank is to have four drive-in units and 35 parking spaces. Space for at least 20 cars waiting in line is to be provided.

Bank customers will be able to make a right turn only onto Dixie Highway, otherwise they will have to exit on Maybee Road.

Studies done by the state highway department and consultation with the Oakland County Road Commission netted no objections for the construction, Newmyer said.

And if commission member Mel Vaara's prediction comes true, traffic will not increase as expected.

"With the price of gas, ladies and gentlemen," he said, "in 1980, drive-in banks will be obsolete."

The Pontiac State Bank branch planned for the northeast corner of Maybee Road and Dixie Highway [next to Ritter's Farm Market] is to have four drive in units. Construction is to be completed by early fall.

Family-style restaurant planned for Mills

by Mimi Mayer

Have a meal in the Mills

A July opening date is planned for a restaurant to be located in the Clarkston Mills shopping mall, 20 West Washington.

The restaurant, in the lower level of the mall, will feature breakfasts, lunches and dinners priced moderately for family dining, said sole owner Anthony Ferlito. Liquor will not be served.

Tenatively named "Jeremiah's" after Jeremiah Clark, one of village founding fathers, the restaurant has been on the drawing boards for 2 1/2 years, Ferlito said.

Ferlito reported that Clarkston Mills developer Marc Alan approached him approximately three years ago as the prospective owner of the restaurant.

At that time Ferlito owned and operated Carmen's, a Grosse Pointe Woods restaurant which is part of the franchise behind the Ortonville eatery of the same name.

Ferlito said he recently sold Carmen's to devote his full-time efforts to Jeremiah's.

Originally slated to open in early fall, questions about the menu and ambiance raised by Alan and Ferlito halted construction of the restaurant.

"I've been working real close with Mr. Alan on this. He's been an advisor," Ferlito said.

"It was not a delay, it was a decision of what we would put in. We tossed around so many different types of restaurants.

"Anyone can put in four walls and a stove and we didn't want to do that at all. We wanted something that would fit Clarkston," he added.

Obtaining a liquor license was "too expensive," Ferlito continued. "This type of operation doesn't require a liquor license. People don't like to bring their kids where liquor is served."

However, Jeremiah's may eventually serve beer and wine, he added.

The focus of the restaurant's breakfast menu will be fancy pancakes, fluffy omelets and breakfast meats.

For lunch, Ferlito plans to offer salads, sandwiches, chicken pot pie, a daily chef's special and home-made soups.

The main item of the dinner menu will be a family-style chicken dinner Ferlito likened to those served in Frankenmuth.

Other choices will include steaks, scrod, pickerel and a daily chef's special.

Ferlito elected to limit the menu to six or seven items per meal "and just do it great."

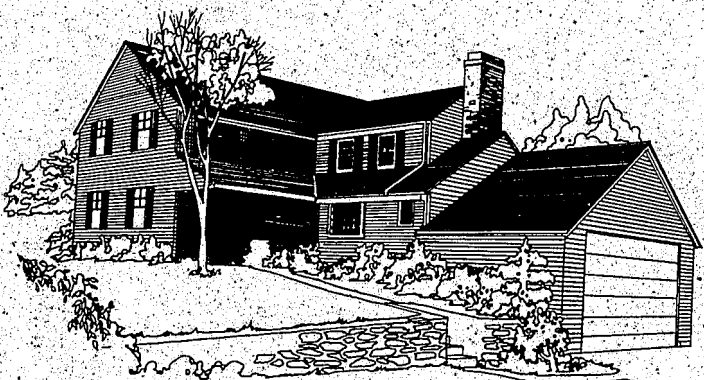

Decor will provide "that country atmosphere" and banquet facilities will be available.

Construction of the restaurant shall begin at the end of the month, Ferlito said.

Pupils pen prodigious poems

Clarkston Elementary kids get turned on to poetry

Poetry and kids usually don't mix.

They study the subject, write a poem or two and then move on to the next topic with a sign of relief.

Not so with a group of Clarkston Elementary sixth graders.

The pupils in Barbara Glover's reading class became so enthused with writing poems during a six-week study unit, they wrote a batch that made good reading.

"They did such a nice job, I said, 'Well, let's type it up,'" Mrs. Glover said.

In the 10 years she has taught in Clarkston, this is the first book of poems printed, although a previous class once had a Haiku poetry book on display at Wayne State University.

Mrs. Glover's technique is to gradually teach an appreciation of the topic.

"Kids are usually pretty turned off by poetry, so we start out with the fun things and go from there," she said.

The fun poems were two-liners and then "Little Willies," and from there the youngsters tackled more different styles including Haiku, a Japanese-style poem that requires capturing a moment in 17 syllables.

Their studies also included works by masters like Shakespeare.

And when she read "The Ancient Mariner," by Samuel Coleridge, to the class, they couldn't wait for reading time, Mrs. Glover said.

Some samples from "Poetry," by the Sixth Grade Reading Class, Clarkston Elementary School, 1979, follow:

In the Middle of the Night

By Eric McCarty

In the middle of the night
Where there is no light
Where there is no right

A car goes down the street

By two pairs of feet

A purse is thrown to the ground

The owner never to be found.

In the middle of the night
Where there is no light
Where there is no right

A car goes down the street

By two pairs of feet

A toy is thrown to the ground

The owner is never found.

In the middle of the night
Where there is light
Where there is right

Two cars go down the street

With sirens blaring in scattered beat

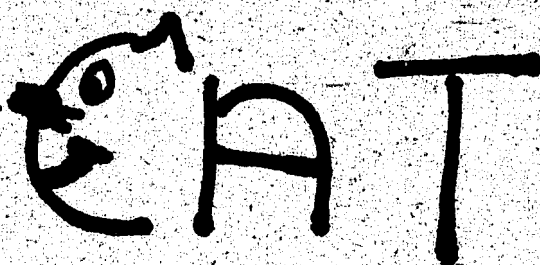

A man is thrown to the ground

In jail he's found.

The Eagle

By Megan Rausch

He like a picture against a painted sun
The groundhogs have seen him and they run
But he is an old one with wizened hand
And he just grazes at what once was his land
The houses came in and drove him away
And he was hunted almost every day
This vanishing species who soars through the sky
Who has what they call a good, sharp eye
Then all of a sudden blood pours from his head
Our eagle, our symbol, the proud one is dead.

Come with us on Florida vacation

By Jim Sherman, News Publisher

Perhaps you would like The Acacia? It's a 2 bedroom convertible den/bedroom/dining, two baths and a one car garage for $44,950.

Oh, yes! Plus the lot. Lots are $14,000 to $25,000.

We were in the Miles Grant golfing subdivision being developed by Westinghouse Corporation south of Port Salerno, Florida.

***

We started this mini series of articles on our 10-day vacation in Florida last week, just in case you think you came in at the middle of the story. We felt we were really seeing Florida for the first time.

Temperatures were in the high 70's there, and you received 4 inches of snow one day here in late March.

The sun shone everyday. We golfed, fished in the surf, ate at our leisure and otherwise did very little for excitement.

That about catches you up to our story.

We promised a look at real estate this week. Miles Grant, as we said, is south of Port Salerno, 30 miles north of Palm Beach.

The sub started out as a golf course surrounded with multiple dwellings. About 360 were built and sold. The market slowed, and the latter stages of Miles Grant are to be single family dwellings. They are going fast.

The prices mentioned above are exact. Another 3-bedroom home is $5,000 more. Pick the ones you want, then add in $753 a month for such things as light bulbs ($1.20 a year) and maintenance ($456 a year).

If you want to use the golf course it will cost you another $400 a year. It's a short course.

West of Stuart, where we stayed, is a wide open space of thousands of acres. Streets are paved. One house, a pink one stands. So, too, stands a clubhouse. It's new and gorgeous.

A portion of this acreage is developed into a golf course, and is open to the public. It's advertised as a "championship course," and called Mid-River Country Club.

Around it are 300 lots. Lowest price of one is $22,000.

To give you an idea of growth around Stuart... we asked in a sporting goods store where the new championship golf course was we heard advertised.

The response was, "Which one?"

***

Indian River Plantation looks like it has enough condos, yet earth is being turned in four bordering areas.

This retreat is on Hutchinson Island, which runs parallel to the mainland, separated by the Indian River. Golf at the Plantation is on an executive course. Free Press columnist Jim Fitzgerald described one of these layouts as one that "isn't mowed, it's rowed."

I can tell you any costs for Indian River property. It didn't look inviting enough to ask. Too country clubish.

But golfing on the 4,000 yard course was $7 for 18 holes and electric carts are $8.

Off-water and off-golf course condominiums, according to the ads, would start at $26,000 for a 1 bedroom.

In Stuart (Martin County)

there are very few high rises, thus we didn't check prices. Anything over 2 stories gives me the bends.

Trailer courts (excuse me, mobile home parks) abound. You get the idea driving through Jensen Beach that there is no other way to live.

And, the courts vary as much as housing. Some are placed at arm's length. Some on a half acre. Some are heavily landscaped. Some barren. Take your pick.

We didn't visit the exclusive Sand Piper subdivision on Indian River, but we did talk to a resident. Homes in this river-golf course sub start over $100,000. See why we didn't go there?

In the end, both couples (The Don Davidsons and us) decided we weren't ready for purchasing property in Florida. Condo leasing can be tricky. There is currently a law being proposed in Washington specifically for governing condo leases in Florida. A standard is being sought.

Also, there are other areas to explore. Arizona. Of course, we like our winter vacation for snowmobiling, too, so how much time do we really have for fun in the sun?

About the 10 days we got away this year. Not enough for an investment.

***

Because I don't know where else to put it in this series, I'd like to tell you about going to Jai Alai.

It was the final week of the seasons for this sport in Ft. Pierce. And, Wednesday noon was senior citizens day.

There is a lot of follow through after Jai Alai player throws the Pelota (hard ball) with his Cesta (wicker basket) tied to his hand.

We lied about our age. Said we were 55 or older (Don Davidson and I were 55, our wives were older), and got in free. Otherwise it's $1.25 for the bad seats. More for good ones.

Jai Alai is a game where a player ties a long, thin basket on one hand, puts on sneakers and a helmet and starts throwing a solid ball against a wall.

The opposing player can catch the ball in his basket in the air or after a bounce and throw it back against the same wall.

It's played with one man against another or in teams of two.

The players are agile guys, most have Spanish names. Most are short. All do not look wholly athletic.

It's a gambling sport. A player or team gets points when the opposition misses the ball.

When that player or team gets 7 points he wins. The second point getter is a "place" finisher and third is "show". Just like the ponies.

We thought we caught on after three matches, and placed some $2 bets. Hazel bet her favorite number "6" to win. She won $12.60.

She bet it again in the fifth race. She won $15.

She bet it again in the sixth race. She lost. We left. There were still 6 matches to go. It wasn't magnetic enough to hold us, and the sun was bright and warm.

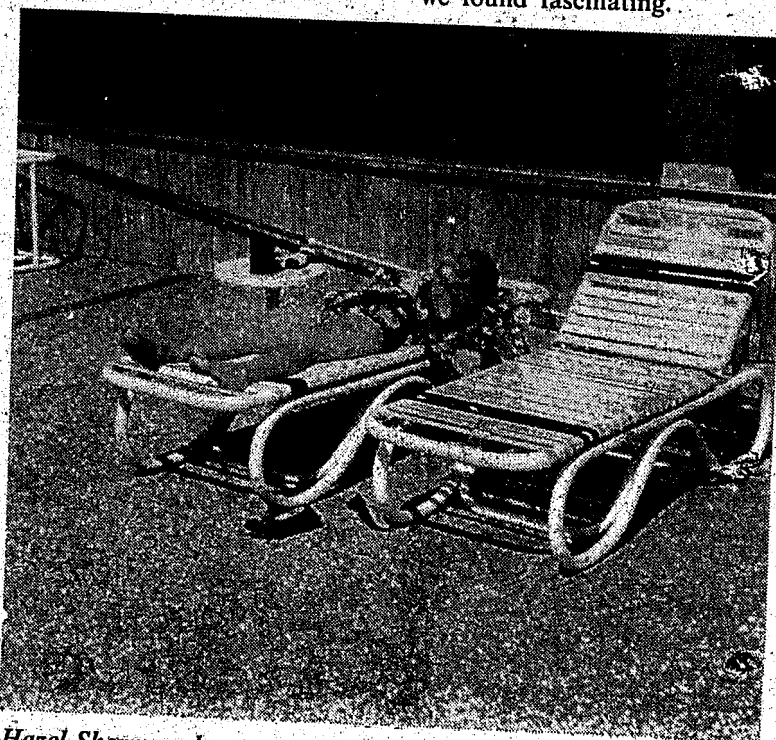

That was our magnet in the first place.

Next week we'll end this vacation roundup with probably the most interesting part of the mini series.

It'll be a collection of findings we found fascinating.

This very colorful display greets visitors at the Ft. Pierce arena.

Hazel Sherman demonstrates the reason we went to Florida in the first place. To relax in the warm sun. Mother nature cooperated beautifully.

Country Living

New life begins for Rio family

Restaurant purchase purchase spurs move, career change

Anticipation colors the lives of Andy and Carole Rio of Clarkston.

New to the area, Andy, Carole and their children Jason, 5, and Jennifer Kate or J.K., 1, moved from Grosse Pointe in October to supervise the construction of their restaurant.

Located at the Andersonville Road-Dixie Highway intersection, the restaurant will be part of the Ram's Horn chain.

After a long and satisfying career as a physical education teacher and football coach at Osborn High School on Detroit's East Side, Andy and Carole opted to change their lives.

Andy will continue to commute to the high school until the restaurant opens in June.

"I had a choice of leaving and this was made as an entirely new opportunity for me," Andy said. "I was lucky to be at the right place at the right time."

"I was introduced to the three influential people who are my partners. It now looks like my position is very, very advantageous."

"He doesn't know what it's going to be like slinging the hash," Carole said.

"But it's nice going out of a situation with good feelings. And it's my choice," Andy commented.

Andy's decision to change careers was a long time coming, Carole said.

"We'd been talking about doing something," she explained. "It's been kind of scary going into a brand-new field, plus the fact that we'd be moving from an area where we'd lived."

"Andy keeps telling me that the greater the risk, the greater the reward. I'm waiting," she added.

"Without seeming like Tazan, I don't think you succeed without taking some risks," Andy said.

Carole has no plans to work with Andy in the restaurant. A former English teacher, she fills her days playing with Jason and J.K., completing craft projects and reading.

"Ever since Andy and I have been married, we've kept our jobs and personal lives separate," she said.

"I'm the one who's a lot more serious and looking at the darker side. He just tells me to go along with it. 'I think that's why it's such a good thing that we're not working together on the restaurant.'"

"We're separate people and I don't think we could work together," Carole continued. "I think he has learned to put up with my personality. I'm excited for him that he's going to do it."

The mutual respect that Andy and Carole share is passed onto their children.

"I'd like them to have the confidence that we're always behind them because they're their own people," Andy said. "I certainly don't want my son to be an All-American football player if he doesn't want to be."

"I've never believed in playpens and that stuff. Not that we're permissive; I just don't want to stifle their need to experiment and play," Carole commented.

"I try to give Jason as much experience as possible. 'He is very excited about the restaurant because he's watched the building go up.'"

"Jason's job with me is to take a daily run up to the restaurant to make a progress report for Andy," she added.

"Since I spend half my life on I-75," Andy commented. "I used to read. Now I drive."

Eagerly awaiting the opening, Carole has confidence that Andy's new career will be a success.

"The time and energy that he puts into everything-if he can channel that into the restaurant..." she said.

"Don't worry kid, we'll be fourth down and out every day," Andy smiled.

Five-year-old Jason is one of Spiderman's greatest fans, as his bedspread indicates.

Newcomers to Clarkston, Carole and Andy Rio are savoring the opening of their restaurant. Andy's career change and their new home.

Lively Jennifer Kate of 'J.K.' is caught for a rare quiet moment sitting with one of Jason's books of fairy tales.

Birds of a feather boxed together

By Ken Grayzel

So, you thought of sending yourself through the mail?

But before you do it, you'd like to know what it's like to be mailed?

Well, you could ask a baby chick, or a baby alligator, or even a leech or a salamander.

Yes, all these animals have at one time or another been mailed. No, they're not hand-stamped.

"I told that travel agency I wanted tickets in the First Class Section. If you think I'm going all the way to Clarkston, Michigan in one of those cardboard boxes, you're full of chicken feathers!"

PROBATE NOTICE

STATE OF MICHIGAN
THE PROBATE COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF OAKLAND

No. 136,719

Estate of Harold Wayne Kitchen, Sr., Deceased

NOTICE OF HEARING

Take Notice: On the 15th day of May, 1979 at 8:30 am in the Probate Courtroom, Oakland County Courthouse, Pontiac, Michigan, before the Honorable John J. O'Brien Judge of Probate, a hearing will be held on the petition of Jerry Lee Kitchen for the appointment of Paul M. Mandel or some other suitable person as administrator and for a determination of heirs.

Creditors of the deceased are notified that all claims against the estate must be presented said Paul M. Mandel at 255 North Telegraph Rd., Suite 207, Pontiac, Michigan 48053 and proof thereof with copies of the claims filed with the Court on or before July 17, 1979.

Notice is further given that the estate will be thereafter assigned to the persons appearing of record entitled thereto.

Dated: April 12, 1979, Paul M. Mandel, Attorney for Petitioner. Attorney number, P17040 of 255 N. Telegraph Rd., Suite 207, Pontiac, Michigan 48053, Phone 682-4455.

Jerry Lee Kitchen, Petitioner of 3538 Maybee Rd., Pontiac, Michigan 48055.

And if you're really interested, this might be the best time to ask.

Although most of the Easter chicks, turkeys and ducks have been delivered, honey bees can now be found in post offices throughout the country, even here in Clarkston.

Every now and then, some of the small yellow chicks go unclaimed at the post office.

They are then required to sell the baby birds to the highest bidder and remit the fee to the company that mailed the chicks.

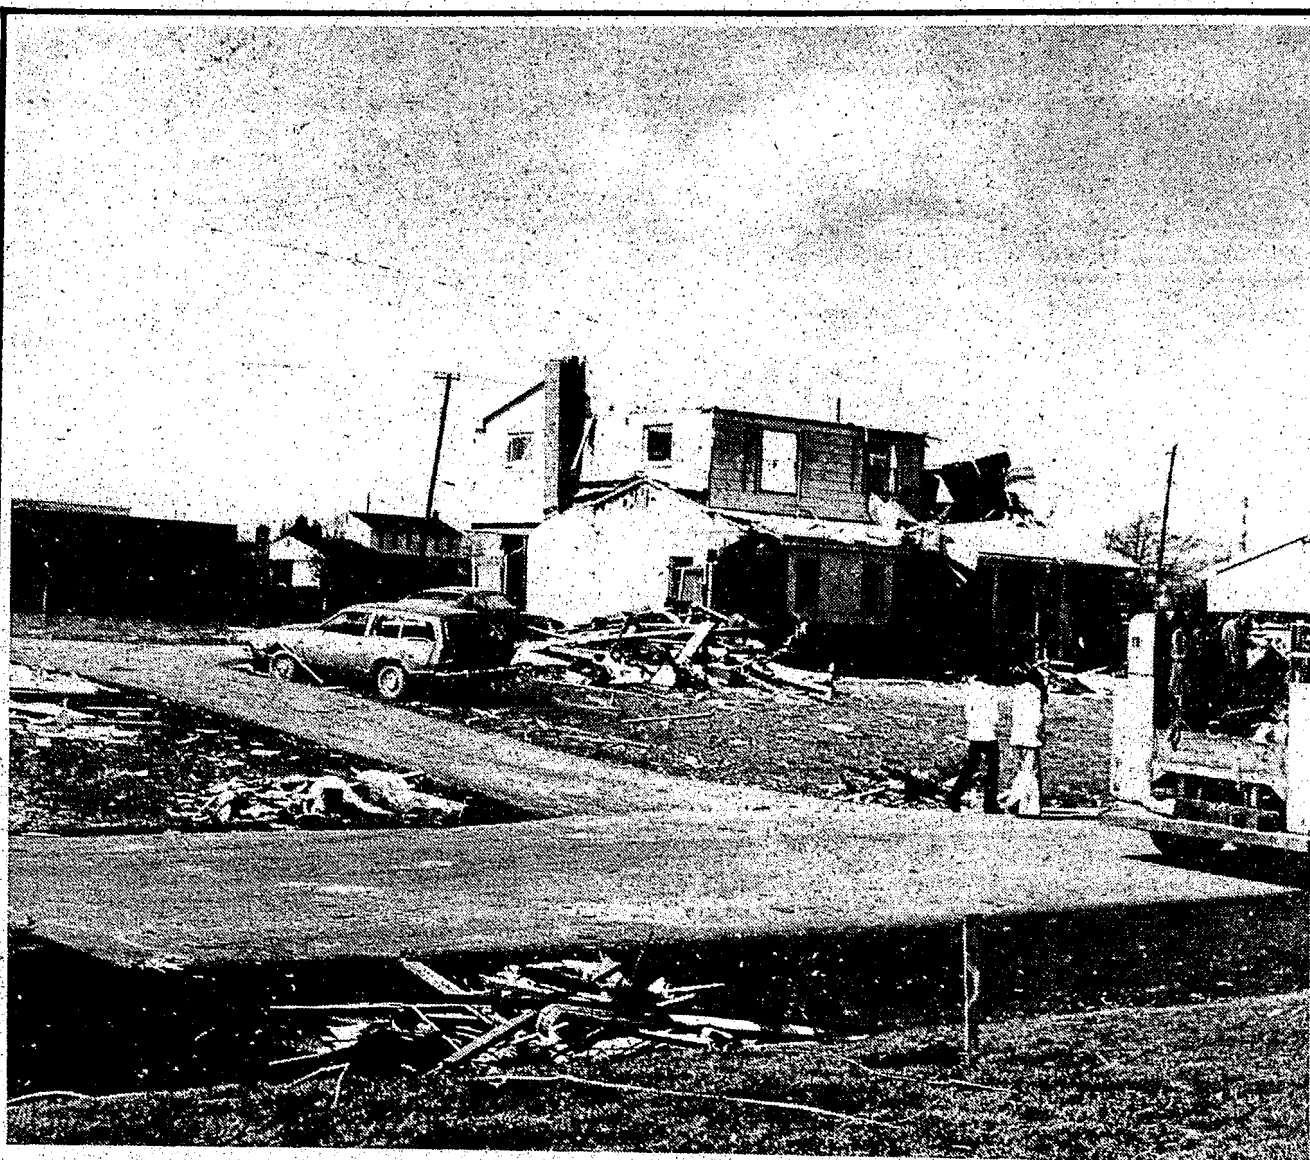

But the birds must be sold within 72 hours. If not sold by then, the post office will inform the sender that they were destroyed locally.

Chicks that are mailed must be postmarked no later than 24 hours after hatching and must be mailed in the box they were hatched in.

But now that Easter has come and gone and warm weather is setting in, bees are being mailed.

Many people send away for honey bees, queen bee and all. The queen bee must be mailed in a separate box.

The following animals are mailable: baby alligators, and caymans not exceeding 20 inches in length, bloodworms, earthworms, mealworms, chameleons, frogs, toads, goldfish, hellgrammites, newts, salamanders, leeches, lizards, snails, tadpoles and some turtles.

6336 Buxton Dr., Saturday, March 20, 1976

The family, formerly of 6336 Buxton Drive, will never forget Saturday, March 20, 1976. On that rainy damp evening their home was one of over ninety that were demolished, or partly destroyed, by a tornado that ripped through Oakland County.

Because of that tragedy, which resulted in forty-three injuries and one fatality, Oakland County has put into effect a new tornado alert system, the first of its kind in Michigan. The two-year program will eventually cover 95% of our population.

At a cost of less than $1.00 per person, we think it's a pretty good investment.

STEP 1

Judge Gerald E. McNally of Independence Township recently attended the Michigan White House Conference on Libraries and Information Service in Lansing.

"As stated by James Thomas Flexnor, "If all other institutions were destroyed except libraries, all could be recreated. But if the libraries were destroyed, all other institutions could not recreate them."

Time was . . .

In 1961, when he was 84 years old, Clarence Vilet recorded some of his family's anecdotes about the settling of Clarkston. These memoirs, now in the possession of the Clarkston Community Historical Society, are being run as a series in The Clarkston News.

***
By Clarence Vilet

My grandfather William V. Vilet was an early settler in Michigan in 1833 and food for a lusty family of seven children and a wife was a problem especially the first year.

The country was heavily wooded, the clearings made by the new settlers were small and widely separated.

It was true that the forests harbored wild game deer, bear, squirrels and rabbits which could be killed by a successful hunter knowing the ways and wiles of wild life.

The many lakes were stocked with palatable fish - pike, bass, and pan fish galore while ducks and geese swam in numbers on the surface.

But these were at a distance and required time and skill to catch or kill.

But the aid furnished a food source near at hand and unlimited in quantity in the person of the topic of this story, the wild pigeon.

No wild pigeons are alive today. Fine museum collections show rare stuffed and mounted birds.

From them we gleam that the wild passenger pigeon (Ectopistes migratorius) resembled our common barnyard bird today.

In numbers they darkened the sky in incredible flocks numbering billions.

They are migratory from south to north in the spring to their nesting place in northern Michigan, one of which was near Grand Traverse Bay wherein selected spots their crude nests of twigs literally covered the trees, with each nest containing two eggs or later young birds - muscular, fat and tender - called squabs which were delicious articles of food just before they were old enough to fly.

The parent birds flew miles away to sources of food and fed the young with regurgitated food from their crops.

They roosted near the nests in such numbers as to break down the trees and were knocked by hunters carrying torches after dark from the trees with poles in tremendous numbers, were packed in barrels and shipped to Chicago and other cities for food.

Since nestings did not take place in lower Michigan, the spring and fall flights were the source of food for my grandfather's family.

Pigeons in flight could be easily killed by firearms, but this required shot and powder, articles costly for poor settlers. Hence a plan was devised for catching numbers of pigeons at little expense as follows.

A small clear spot was selected near the edge of the woods on the home farm in which was constructed a blind around a tall limber tree generally an oak.

On this ground was spread grain for bait as an attraction for pigeons.

Over this was spread a net woven from fine strong flax fiber cord with two inch mesh with small weights fastened around the outer edge which was outlined by large stones to be used to hold down the net after the trap had been sprung over the grounded pigeons who were feasting on the bait.

To operate the trap, the limber sapling tree was bent down and the net was attached by its farther edge to the trees.

To get the wild pigeons to light on the baited ground, a stool pigeon was used.

This was a pigeon which had been caught and its eyelids had been sewn together. To its legs was attached a strong flax thread which was so light that it would not hinder the flight, but enabled the hunters in the bough house or blind to control its action.

The pigeon hunters would wait till a cloud of pigeons appeared in the south over Waterford Hill.

The stool pigeon was tossed into the air and fluttered upward and then was slowly pulled down by the leg cord.

The leaders of the flock, seeing cleared ground with a pigeon fluttering down, would swing around in a whirlpool of birds and drop to the ground seeking the spread bait.

At this instant, the trigger of the trap net would be pulled and the bent sapling would be released and the net thrown over the grounded birds which seeking to rise would thrust their heads through the meshes of the net and lift it from the ground.

The hunters would rush out of the bough house and roll the large stones over the edge of the net and thus hold down the imprisoned birds who were dispatched by breaking their necks using a thumb and forefinger.

A few of the pigeons were left alive and were taken up to the log barns where they were liberated until used for pigeon pie.

The slain birds were piled up and the feathers on the breast were removed and the thick muscular breast was cut off with a sharp knife and put out in the sun to dry.

The remainder of the bird was discarded.

After being dried, the breasts were stuck on thorn brush thrust between the crevices of the shake shingles in the log house attic and kept for winter use since glass cans were not invented and salt was too costly to serve as a preservative.

The flax cord nets were nearly indestructible and lasted many years.

My own father had one and as a boy after pigeons disappeared I remember it was draped over young cherry trees in the back yard of our home in Clarkston village to save the cherry crop from hungry robins each spring.

Coping with kids

One of our readers and a mother of a young child has taken issue with one of our recent columns.

She is not in agreement with our suggestion about how to tell children about an impending separation or divorce.

She counters our advice with, "I believe in a marriage that the best way of explaining the parents parting—either a separation or divorce—is not to say that the parents no longer love each other, but that they are no longer happy living together."

"They may still love each other, or one parent may still have loving feelings for the other."

"Explaining that they are no longer happy living together shows the children that unhappy relationships do not have to continue but can be dealt with."

As we emphasized in the previous article, children should be told ahead of time that the parents are separating.

It is essential that mothers and fathers recognize that children from infancy on are very much aware of the hot or cold atmosphere between a husband and wife.

If they are told nothing, they will fantasize and probably believe that they themselves are the cause of their parents' difficulties.

Children will be threatened by the break-up of the marriage and telling them of the separation can provide an opportunity to reassure them of the love and security at least one of the parents will continue to provide for them.

Perhaps the exact words that are used are not as important as the idea that the children are being told what will happen and that the parents have the children's interest and welfare in mind.

It may be important to say that when the child was born the parents loved (or thought they did) each other. After that what the mother and father say may depend on what is most comfortable for them.

They may say, "We are not happy living with each other any longer. It has nothing to do with you that we are not happy. And Daddy will not be living here any more."

Or, "Your father and I have decided not to be married any more. We loved each other and were good friends before, but now we are not such good friends so daddy will be living some place else. He will come to visit you as often as he can and he will send money so that you can have all of the nice things you always had."

There is undoubtedly no perfect way to tell children that their parents are separating or divorcing.

Children function best with information, but being open with them before a divorce may aid communication in the important months following a divorce.

Experience Proves . . . the consumer may expect satisfaction only through dealing with local well established and reputable firms.

Good old golden junior high days

Nostalgia buffs who attended Pontiac's Washington Junior High School have a treat in store.

Don't Be Shy

Don't be so shy!
We like to hear from you! We need your ideas for feature stories. We need news tips for other stories, too. Drop us a line or give us a call, 625-3370. Clarkston News, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, MI 48016

In honor of the school's 50th anniversary, a get-together for all past students and faculty is being planned.

Chairman of the event is Independence Township resident John McHugh who has taught science at the school for 27 years.

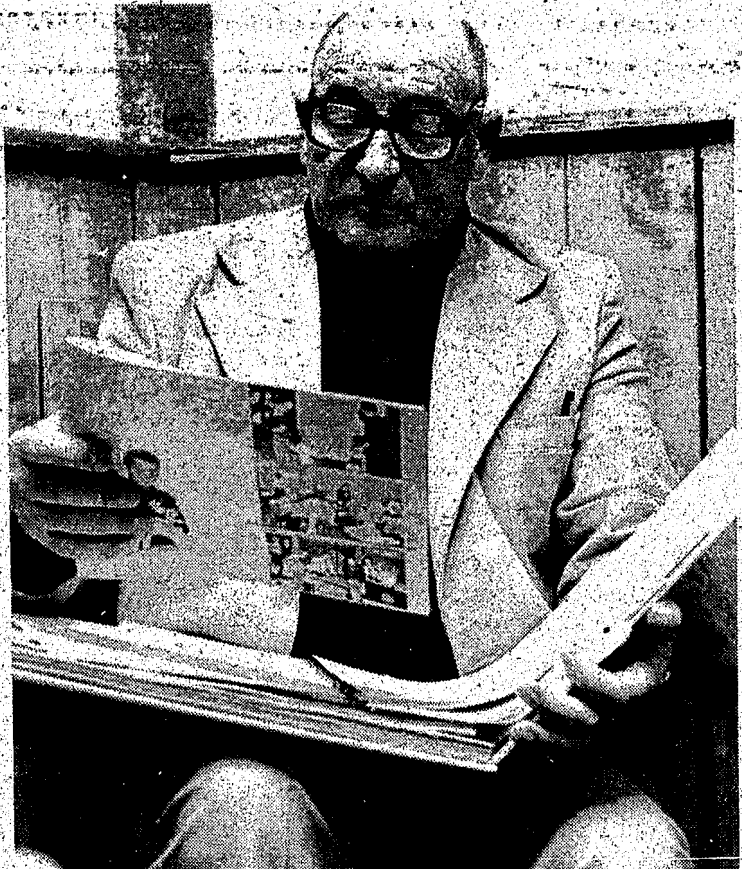

He's planning an open house, buffet and entertainment by the school band and chorus.

But McHugh has a tough job.

"Getting in touch with these people who are so scattered is a real problem," he said, so he thought an announcement in The Clarkston News might help.

He does know of two previous students who are well-known community members--attorney Stan Walker who has offices on Dixie Highway, and Timothy Palulian, director of the township building department.

Information on the celebration can be obtained by calling Washington Junior High at 857-8271 or 857-8272.

Rocky road to dinner

Three soldiers prepare stone soup in a dramatization of "Stone Soup," a Russian folk tale. From left, Monica Strobehn, Kristy Adams and Tracy Roek decide what should be added to the stone and water to make the soup tastier. The pupils of Andersonville Elementary teacher Sherril Bailey spent four weeks memorizing their lines, making scenery and planning costumes for the play they presented last week for parents and kindergartners at the school.

The play over, the three soldiers, still holding their soup bowls, get ready to take a bow before their audience.
