Big problem for little car

The driver of this subcompact car was hospitalized with a broken collarbone Tuesday morning after the auto collided with the dump truck in a not-quite-head-on crash at Depot and White Lake roads, Clarkston. Susan Sharon, 17, of 8700 Perry Lake, Independence Township, was taken to Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital along with the passenger in her car, 13-year-old Susan Eakin of the same address, who was treated for cuts and bruises. Michael McArdle of Pontiac, driver of the truck which was going north on White Lake Road while the car was headed southwest, was not injured in the collision, police said. They issued no summons.

Pine Knob Mansion

Public restaurant turns public away

By Kathy Greenfield

Last week, The Clarkston News called Pine Knob's Mansion for a dinner reservation.

"Hello, is your dining room open to the public?" the caller asked.

The answer was: "No, it's private."

One year ago, Pine Knob's Mansion Inc. was issued the last remaining public Class C liquor license in Independence Township.

Another license cannot be issued in the township until the 1980 census verifies an increase in population.

At the June 6, 1978 township board meeting, representatives of the resort said the mansion and half-way house dining facilities would be open to the public, although the country club's golf course would remain for members only.

But is the Pine Knob Mansion a place where members of the public are allowed to dine?

According to Matt Locricchio, general manager of the resort area, the answer is, "Yes."

"I let the public in every day, but they have to call in and make a reservation," Locricchio said Saturday. "We are definitely not closed to the public."

After Locricchio's statement,

The Clarkston News called again Monday for a Friday night dinner reservation.

The caller was told the dining room was not available to the public.

Prompted by several citizen complaints, Township Clerk Christopher Rose wrote a letter to the Michigan Liquor Control Commission May 25.

Rose asked that a check be made to see if the restaurant is closed to the public.

"People are saying they can't get in," Rose said, explaining his letter. "In fact, at the meeting, they're (Pine Knob representatives) quoted about 15 times saying the public could get in."

About five or six people have complained to him about being refused admission to the restaurant, a number Rose said is probably only a fraction of those who have been turned away.

"Most people buy it," Rose said. "They say, 'Well, I thought it was open,' and they turn around and leave. They feel foolish because they tried to get into a private club."

John Baucum, investigator for the liquor control commission who works out of the Oakland County office, said he completed

'Most people buy it. They say, "Well, I thought it was open," and they turn around and leave. They feel foolish because they tried to get into a private club.' —Independence Township Clerk Christopher Rose the investigation and sent the report to Lansing.

"We received the letter from the township clerk, so I drove up there," Baucum said. "The guard stopped me at the gate and said, 'Where are you going?'"

"I said, 'I'm going out to have a little lunch at the mansion. It is a public restaurant, isn't it?'"

"And he said, 'no, it's a private club.'"

Baucum said he pulled to the side of the entrance on Waldon Road and identified himself.

"They called ahead, and I went up to the mansion," he said.

Baucum said he talked to Matt Locricchio and "all I did was reiterate the policy that it's a public facility."

Baucum and Jack Yaker, district supervisor for the liquor control commission, said the clerk's complaint was the only one they know of received by the commission.

"The only thing they've (the mansion operators) got to lose is the license and they can lose it," Yaker said. "If they're operating as a private club under the guise of a public place, it is a matter that should be corrected."

Leroy Olson, department director of the enforcement division of the liquor control commission, said the practice of refusing non-members dining privileges may be legal.

Although the Lansing office had not received Baucum's report, he was willing to discuss the matter in general terms.

"It's not illegal to do that, providing there are no (membership) restrictions on race, religion, sex or age rather than under 18," he said. "You could consider it a cover charge or entry fee."

A precedent was set four or five years ago, he said.

"As my memory recalls, it was a Playboy Club that caused the interpretation," Olson said.

If enough complaints were received, however, the commission could issue a ruling on a specific establishment, he said.

To his knowledge, a club that charges over $25 to $50 for a membership fee has not been considered in the issue, he said.

Township board Trustee Rudy Lozano is a member of the Pine Knob Country Club.

Memberships, that cost $1,300 each year plus $120 a month, are limited to about 300, Lozano said.

"I don't know of any restrictions that they have," he said. "You do have to be approved, but it's an automatic deal. I don't know of any person who has been denied membership."

Lozano said he has not heard any complaints.

"I know of friends and they aren't members of the club," he said.

He could understand a policy of not taking reservations from non-members, but telling them they could come and wait for a table, he said.

"I don't see how they can stop you from getting in if you don't have a reservation," he said.

Residents get help with bad drain

By Kathy Greenfield

When it rains, a fountain of water spurts through broken drain tile in Frank Petrick's yard, he told the Independence Township Board Tuesday night.

The problem stems from an unrecorded drain under Clarkston-Orion Road that leads to Walters Lake, he said.

Three residents of Lakeview Boulevard told the Independence Township Board their woes concerning the 53-year-old drain:

"At the present time, (the drain) is completely out of control," said Petrick. "It's damaging my property beyond repair."

Of the 250 to 300 house sites that drain into the area, only about four houses are affected by the problem, said Ernie Severance.

Letters and telephone calls to the Oakland County Drain Commission, State Rep. Claude Trim (D-Davisburg), the county road commission, and the township have had no results in the four or five years the residents have sought help, he said.

"Speaking of losing confidence in your government, I've really lost it," he said. "We just get the run-around."

Karl Blass said the township should solve the problem.

"One or two persons in the township should not be responsible," he said.

Four men and equipment could replace the 60 feet of drainage tile and dredge the lake where the run-off has built up over the years, said George Anderson, township department of public works director.

He suggested setting a limit of $1,500 of township funds for the project.

"The county won't help them, the road commission won't help them, the state won't help them," he said.

"Even though we don't have the responsibility, I think we have a moral obligation," Anderson said.

Supervisor Whitey Tower recommended proceeding with caution.

"It's precedent setting," he said. "If we do it on one private property, where do we stop?"

"Let's not get into a precedent-setting ball game," he said. "We've had requests for mowing private property, cleaning out creeks..."

"The best thing to do would be to back them up with the county and only have the township fix it as a last resort."

said Treasurer Frederick Ritter. "Frankly, you're wasting your time. I think at the county," said Trustee William Vandermark.

He made the motion that the township department of public works proceed with the project and also contact the county to clarify its position.

All board members present voted to support the proposal. Trustee Rudy Lozano was absent.

Boost librarian salary

The search for an Independence Township librarian continues.

But the salary was upped from $17,500 to between $18,000 and $20,000 at last night's township board meeting.

Treasurer Frederick Ritter requested the increase, because of "what's happened in Canton and Madison Heights."

In those communities, presently advertising for a librarian, the salaries are $23,400 and $22,000, Ritter said.

"The two people that I feel would be best qualified could not be hired unless we have a competitive salary," he said.

Chris Shull, president of the Independence Township Friends of the Library, supported Ritter's request.

"The librarian is more than a glorified file clerk," she said. Certainly a librarian, and the impact on your children and the community, has a right to a higher salary."

Board members present voted unanimously to approve the higher salary offer.

PK matinee for Summer

A Saturday matinee has been added to Donna Summer's stint at Pine Knob Music Theatre.

Afternoon traffic can be expected to be heavy in the area of the facility for the 1 p.m. performance.

In the meantime, tickets are now on sale at the box office for Ms. Summer's performance, which was added to six sold-out concerts.

Have you ever wondered about the king of the herring family, the shadfish? The American shad is an introduced fish on the West Coast. It is native to the East and the West Coast fishing had its beginnings in 8 cans shipped by rail across the country in 1871. The fish were introduced in to the Sacramento River and have since spread to the rivers of southern California and north to the Gulf of Alaska. Now, more than 100 years later, a private firm under contract to the fish management agencies of Maryland, Pennsylvania and New York collects fertilized shad eggs in Oregon for use in bolstering runs of American shad in the Susquehanna River.

Three-acre lots upheld once more

By Kathy Greenfield

The Independence Township Planning Commission has again held the line on three-acre house sites.

The largest zoning in the township is three acres.

Commission member James Brennan made the latest request for a zoning reduction at last week's meeting.

In a 6-0 vote, the commission denied the request for rezoning from three-acre sites to one and one-half acres on the 40-acre parcel.

Brennan excused himself from the meeting and left the building during the presentation in his behalf by Delton Lohff of Kieft Engineering, Independence Township.

Lohff presented a "very, very preliminary" plan for 22 lots of about one and one-half acres for the 40-acre parcel.

"I know the price of land is expensive today, but I think this community wants some development at three-acre parcels," said commission member Mel Vaara.

"I think we've taken a pretty good stand," he said. "By golly, whatever we have as three acres is going to stay that way."

Commission Chairman James Smith also said the larger acreage parcels should remain.

"I just don't think it's what this township wants," Smith said, referring to the more dense zoning.

Because of the mostly flat, treeless land, most people would not be attracted to the property, Lohff said.

"This land is open. There are no trees," Lohff said. "There's no way it can be developed and sold in three-acre lots."

"I think three acres is ridiculous, I honestly do," he said.

"Mr. Brennan bought this property knowing the condition of the property," Vaara said.

Vaara also noted the property sits in the midst of several parcels zoned for three-acre minimum lots.

"If we approve this area for (one and one-half acre sites), we may as well open it all up to (one and one-half acre sites)," he said. "We'll open up a Pandora's Box."

"I just don't see any point in taking that one piece of property in the middle of everything and changing it," agreed commission member John Gray.

Although she cited the right of land owners to develop property, commission member Jean Saile also based her decision on the effect a zoning change would have on surrounding land.

"I agree that if this goes to one and one-half acres, so will the rest of it," she said.

Commission member John Gardiner made the motion to deny the rezoning request, Vaara supported the motion and the members present voted unanimously to leave the three-acre zoning intact.

Calling all SCAMPers

An Independence Township Fire Department truck brings adventures with sirens and a loud speaker to SCAMP kids. A cookout Monday night for the 215 children enrolled at the camp included a visit by volunteer firefighter Don Nolen in the big red truck. The five-week long summer camp for children with special needs is operated by Clarkston Community Schools and supported by the North Oakland SCAMP Funding Corp. SCAMP is in its fourth year of operation. For more photos, see page 20.

Police crack down on park partiers

By Mimi Mayer

Spurred by citizens' complaints, Oakland County Sheriff's deputies are taking steps to curb the youth parties which have taken place in Clarkston's Depot Road park throughout the summer.

Deputies who regularly patrol the park said they would begin issuing citations to minors caught possessing alcoholic beverages and ordinance violation tickets.

A complaint about a loud party drew four deputies, including Snover, to the park at approximately 10:25 p.m. Friday night.

After gathering an estimated 40 to 50 young people who had congregated near the park, deputies searched nearby cars, Deputy James Snover said.

Six citations to minors in possession of alcoholic beverages were issued, Snover reported.

"Most of those we wrote tickets for were from outside the Clarkston area," he added.

The youths were also warned that on the following evening, deputies would begin enforcing a village ordinance which closes the park at 10 p.m., Snover said. Deputies then disbursed the crowd.

"As a whole, they left the park when we asked them to -- no problems, no smart remarks, no nothing," Snover said. "They were just a nice bunch of kids."

Because Snover was not on duty, he was unable to verify whether tickets had been issued since Saturday evening.

Lee Noyes, 74 S. Holcomb, said most of the young people leave the park at closing time.

"There is a general exodus around 10," she said. "But to tell both sides of the story, you can hear them after 10, too."

Noyes added she has not been aware of a change in the pattern since Saturday evening.

Another Holcomb Street resident who, fearing retaliation from the young people, asked to remain anonymous, said young people are still meeting near the park.

"Last night we were out on the porch there," she said. "We did notice quite a few cars down there but I didn't notice any noise there."

Since June, the resident said, there had been "a terrific amount of noise down there around 12, 1 o'clock and it keeps us awake."

Snover noted that an average of four or five complaint calls per week have been made to sheriff's deputies and deputies have been keeping a close watch on the area, he said.

"On the whole, they're all a nice bunch of kids," Snover added. "They're looking for somewhere to go and something to do and be in their group and laugh and carry on like kids do."

No date yet from Alan

Clarkston Mills shopping mall developer Marc Alan is remaining tight-lipped as to when he'll deliver the $15,000 he promised to the village for the proposed Depot-Holcomb-White Lake roads intersection improvement project.

"I think I better give word to the community first," Alan said Monday. He refused to elaborate.

At its July 9 meeting, the Clarkston Village Council tabled action on the proposed road improvement project on the advice of Trustee M. James Schultz.

To cut costs, council members had received modified plans for the intersection improvement which limited work to the corner and approximately 400 feet of Depot Road.

They'd also received a bid of $23,086 for the work from Wolverine Asphalt Paving Co., Drayton Plains.

Schultz said council members should table action on the project until Alan's money was in hand.

Proposed by Alan's planners to alleviate the increased traffic the Clarkston Mills was expected to bring to the intersection, the project was to be financed by three parties.

The village and the Oakland County Road Commission had budgeted $11,000 for the intersection improvements.

In return for leasing for $1 per year a portion of Depot Road right-of-way owned by the village, Alan had contracted to contribute $11,000 to the project.

A donation of $4,000 which the council had earmarked for the road work was also promised by Alan.

Adams' request splits neighborhood

By Mimi Mayer

Their Clarkston neighborhood has been split by the plans of Robert and Kathleen Adams to create a third housing unit in their home, the old Methodist Church at 29 Buffalo.

Opponents say it's unwise to save the historic church at the risk of downgrading the single-family neighborhood.

Those who support the change say putting three rather than two apartments or condominiums in the building is not only the best possible use of the building, but the only economical way it can be used by its owners, Village Council Trustee Robert Adams

The Clarkston Zoning Board of Appeals is seeking a compromise that will satisfy the majority.

Each of the three apartments—two with nearly 1,800 square feet of floor space and the other with an estimated 2,600—would be larger than the minimum required in single-family residences in the Clarkston Zoning Ordinance.

Because the church is located in an area zoned for single-family residential use, the Adamses applied for and were granted a variance by the board of appeals in April 1978.

The board permitted the couple to build two apartments in the old church which contains approximately 6,500 square feet of floor space.

Between 25 and 30 Clarkston residents filled the village hall July 11 when the appeals board considered a new variance request and postponed action.

The board will meet again after it finds out whether it is legal for the Adamses to sell the three apartments as condominiums.

Board members will also try to learn how the village residents most affected by the proposed variance stand on the issue.

Petitions submitted by proponents and opponents to the proposed variance will be used by the board of appeals to determine neighborhood sentiment.

At the July 11 meeting, the petitions indicated 28 persons support the change and 25 are against it.

Howard Huttenlocher, board of appeals chairman, said he hoped the board could achieve a solution acceptable to both parties.

"If there's a compromise that we can work out with those people, I'd certainly like to help," he said. "We've got to look at those petitions and see where they come from and whether they're for or against."

Ted Thomson, who serves on the appeals board and chairs the Clarkston Planning Commission, said he hoped the board could work out a compromise.

"I believe Mr. Adams said he would go the condominium route to allay the fears of the neighborhood," Thomson said.

"What naturally we'd like to see...is some kind of resolution that satisfies the neighborhood. I think it's a shame that the neighborhood can't come together on some middle ground on this."

"I just wish we didn't have to decide pro or con, that we could come up with some kind of compromise," he said.

The seven Clarkston Planning

Commission members present at the commission's June 4 meeting voted unanimously to recommend that the appeals board permit the variance after listening to the Adamses' argument that two-family use of the church is not economically feasible.

However, on July 2, Village Council Trustee Ruth Basinger, 8 E. Washington, appeared at the planning commission meeting to argue vigorously against the proposed change.

Basinger said the variance is not in the best interests of the neighborhood, a third apartment might bring undesirable tenants into the neighborhood, additional off-street parking might be needed and the wall barrier required in the zoning ordinance might not effectively screen the parking area from neighbors.

A motion to rescind the commission's original recommendation was defeated 7-2.

Basinger's arguments, as well as the point that there is insufficient play area in the churchyard for tenants who might have children, were stated at the board of appeals meeting by residents opposed to the requested variance.

The board of appeals will meet at 7:30 p.m. July 25 at the village hall.

Parade complaint prompts promise for next time

By Mimi Mayer

John H. Priebe wants to avert a tragedy.

Priebe, 5930 Paramus, Independence Township, sent a letter to several local officials complaining about the vehicles parked on Main Street "particularly the block between Church Street and Washington Street" during the Clarkston Independence Day parade.

"I hope that before the Labor Day parade, 'NO PARKING' signs will be posted and that this law will be strictly enforced, even to the point of towing away violators before the parade begins," Priebe wrote.

Copies of the letters were sent to the Clarkston Village Council, Independence Township Police Services, the Independence Township Board and Supervisor Whitey Tower.

"I will be glad to contact the township about this," said Village President Fontie Ap-Madoc at the July 9 council meeting.

Charles Kimbel, director of Independence Township Police Services, said parking on the Main Street block between Church and Washington will be prohibited during future parades.

"We figured that since all the gasoline shortage, we were just trying to accommodate people," he said. "There has been some criticism."

"I also feel that the people watching it (the parade) were at fault," Kimbel said. "I literally had to tell them to get out," and off the street after the parade ended.

Kimbel added that a second safety measure will be enforced by police during Clarkston's parades.

"For all parades from here onward, there will be no throwing of anything from moving vehicles. It's too dangerous. The kids could get hurt. If one of those kids would fall under the wheel of one of those moving vehicles, it would be curtains," Kimbel said.

Priebe noted that parade spectators stood on either side of the parked vehicles "well into the street...creating a very hazardous situation" while narrowing the area for parade participants.

"Another obvious problem occurs when those parking started to leave while the parade watchers were still walking on Main Street when the parade ended," Priebe wrote. "Someone could easily have been hit."

"If some tragedy would have happened, then everyone would have been on the bandwagon screaming about it. And it would have been the cart before the horse," Priebe said later.

While he and other parade spectators watched, a youth jumped onto a parade bus for a brief ride. A second person tossed firecrackers into the path of parade horses, Priebe said.

"I kind of think if they (the crowds) were further back, it wouldn't happen," Priebe said. He suggested that spectators park in nearby public and private lots.

"It's not that far to walk twice a year, three times a year," he noted.

Council members and Priebe said that before the 1979 Memorial Day parade, parking on Main Street between Church and Washington was banned.

Hotel not leader of pack

Imagine you're a developer with big bucks under your control.

Imagine you want to construct a high-rise office building to make those dollars grow.

Look around Southeastern Michigan and then say you'd pick downtown Clarkston or a nearby residential area for your prime location.

No way can we believe that developers, real or imagined, would make such a choice, given the character of the community and the lack of potential for urban development.

The specter of developers waiting to follow a 22-story hotel at Pine Knob with clusters of skyscrapers throughout the township defies logic and growth patterns elsewhere.

Independence Township is committed to non-urban development.

It's people do not want another Southfield or Troy created here.

There are threats to the Independence Township countryside. The proposed hotel at Pine Knob, innovative and unique, is not one of them.

Encouraging expansion of a resort complex would seem to do more to keep Independence Township semi-rural than it would to encourage urban development.

The proposed zoning ordinance amendment due to be considered by the township board next month would allow the zoning board of appeals to grant variances to permit construction of 200-foot structures in recreational zones.

Besides Pine Knob, the properties zoned for recreation in Independence Township are Independence Oaks County Park, Clintonwood Township Park, the Clarkston Golf Course, Spring Lake Country Club and a portion of the Chief Pontiac American Legion Post site.

As for other zones, Independence Township may one day have to fight construction of skyscrapers in one of them. We don't see it happening in the near future and we don't see a ski-slope hotel serving as a lure.

Don't bother to RSVP

by Pat Braunagel

Loath as I am to run a free ad for anyone (particularly on our venerable editorial page), here it is:

Come one! Come all!

Pine Knob invites you to its mansion-cum-country club, the elegant and luxurious facility that reportedly is worth seeing.

Now that you've been invited, try to get in.

Many folks hereabouts, including yours truly, have tried and been told the mansion is a private club.

Our reservations were rejected again Monday, even after Matt Locricchio had specifically said the club's restaurant is open to the public.

"There's public up here all the time," he told Clarkston News reporter Kathy Greenfield. "We do have a reservation system. We are definitely not closed to the public."

Locricchio, who is general manager of Pine Knob's resort area, should pass the word along to his employees.

They've been rejecting potential customers right and left, according to the complaints we've received from various individuals who have either been turned away at the gate or turned down over the phone.

One of the persons who tried to get into the facility and was rebuffed was a State Liquor Control Commission investigator.

While Kathy was working on her story which appears elsewhere in today's edition, we decided to check out the rumors firsthand.

Why should we care? Why should we want to dine and/or drink somewhere where we're obviously not welcome?

Because a year ago Pine Knob's Mansions Inc. was awarded the last available Class C liquor license in Independence Township.

The township board recommended that the public license be granted after being told what an asset the club would be to the township and that the two restaurants connected with it would be public. The latter promise was made by the attorney representing Mansions Inc. It has not been kept.

In reference to the club's enriching the township, that remains to be seen.

Those of you who would like to see for yourselves have only to accept Locricchio's back-handed invitation.

Dinner is served from 4:30 to 8:30 p.m. The telephone number is 625-0700. We don't know the house specialty.

If you have better luck than we did, be sure to let us know.

Proposed high rise one of a kind

To the editor:

As the person who has collected more names on petitions than anyone else in the township (for those who don't remember the anti-high-density dwelling "wars" of 1970, this is a matter of record), I was interested in the petition drive against the high rise at Pine Knob.

As one of the drafters of the current zoning ordinance, I believe the high rise would be unique to Pine Knob.

It doesn't really set a precedent. Maybe legally it does. But did you know that if all the land zoned multiple were built upon, the township population would double?

The 36-family sub behind my house (Waldon and Almond Lane) was zoned for 134 apartments--no market, so homes were put in.

The apartments on the Dixie across from the theater stand vacant--a moot reminder that multiples do not sell here. Troy, Rochester, yes. Independence, no.

The need must be there. Let Pine Knob build. The bigger they get, the more they will have to control their noise and traffic.

Keith Humber, former trustee

P.S. Further proof? Look at Birmingham. They won't even permit senior citizen high rise -- KAH

Some sermon

by Jim Sherman

Following President Carter's speech Sunday night, the commentator on ABC said, "It was almost a sermon".

I agree, only I don't think Mr. Carter dwelled on our misplaced value long enough. (And, I'm as guilty as the next guy).

The president talked about the American people placing too much importance on material "things". In fact, he said "things" a couple times.

However, to go along with this sin, Mr. Carter should have talked more of the moral decay and need for a revolution (even "war", his word for attacking the energy problem) in "golden rule" thinking.

Perhaps our leader felt it would be too much like preaching if he spent more time on our over indulgences.

Or, perhaps he feels a recession will straighten us out.

It's almost a sure bet the divorce rate will go down when money tightens up. In the past there has been a direct, positive ratio between unemployment and divorce.

Less money in the pocket--more togetherness in the home.

So, while we agree with President Carter on this portion of his address to the nation, we disagree wholeheartedly with one of his inflation cures.

He said he could not stop inflation alone, nor could Washington.

Perhaps not. But, initiating another bureau in Washington certainly will not help. The department mentioned would "cut the red tape" between developers of energy (coal) and permits for same.

The "department" will automatically require more government spending.

The economists we've read believe most of the inflation is caused by too much spending by our government.

At no time did Mr. Carter mention cutting government spending. Instead, his program calls for printing more dollars, thus making our dollar worth less at home.

Mr. Carter may need the cooperation of the American people to fight inflation, but the American people need a balanced budget in Washington.

We need a decrease in this nation's future financial commitments (Social Security, pensions, loan guarantees) which now exceed $71,000 per taxpayer.

Mr. Carter will have to order a cutback in a broad range of programs. This will result in some unemployment, temporarily.

But, just as we have to bite the bullet on energy, Mr. Carter has to bite the bullet on government overspending.

End of my sermon.

Letters to the editor

Bands provide hours of service to community

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the Clarkston Bands and Band Boosters, I wish to respond to your editorial of July 11, 1979 regarding the absence of music in the July 4th parade.

1) The Clarkston Band Boosters have no role in the scheduling of performances or management of the instrumental music program. They are a group of dedicated, concerned parents who desire the best for their children in instrumental music, and provide countless hours of service.

The community resources and financial support they solicit is toward the extra-curricular, based upon recommendations of the instructors.

2) Educational experiences and exploitation of students has been a battle cry across the nation over issues such as this. The majority of band students in the community spend nine months of the year with the activity.

Last year we went through a very intense summer competition season enabling us to be prepared for the parade.

This year, considering fuel prices, cost to the district, and student conflicts, it was my decision that we not compete during the summer.

3) All four instrumental music teachers are teaching this summer, with the majority of the students being in 6th grade, plus a cross section of junior high children. It would be rather self-defeating to spend summer lesson time preparing these children to march as many are just becoming familiar with their instruments for the first time.

4) It is not a question of whether or not we want to support the community holiday celebration.

It is not a question of gratitude in return for community support.

If we cannot provide a quality experience for the students involved, then it is best not to undertake a project.

A very large proportion of our students are employed, on holidays, are on vacation, or were simply unavailable due to commitments and family plans of their own.

The school year has been over for more than a month, and for that reason alone one can understand how difficult it is to maintain and prepare a group into July.

The Band Boosters and Bands alike provide services, concerts, and music for parades throughout the year, in fact, more so than in most communities. It would be nice if the Clarkston News gave us this much publicity during the school year.

To the editor:

Thank you from Independence Township Fire Fighters to all those who participated in any way to make the Fourth of July Parade in Clarkston the success it was.

Diggs 'unjustly enriched'

by Jim Fitzgerald

My congressman, Charles C. Diggs Jr., deserves the same type of job security I had 28 years ago.

Diggs has admitted to a congressional investigating committee that, through a payroll-kickback manipulation, he made "errors in judgment" that "unjustly enriched" his wallet to the tune of $40,031. He has generously offered to pay the money back on the installment plan, with $500 a month being deducted from his congressional salary until all of the enrichment has been reimbursed to taxpayers.

It is classy to be a congressman. When a burglar cops a plea, he must admit being a thief, a plebeian occupation usually associated with furtive entrances through back windows after dark. Really tacky.

A burglar can't confess to unjust enrichment unless, he has previously been elected to public office and his lawyer's fee is raised at a $100-a-plate banquet at which a big-city mayor gives the keynote address.

Because the bookkeeping would be too awkward, it's not possible for a common burglar to reimburse his victims through the payroll deduction plan. When it comes to stealing, the most costly error in judgment a participant can make is using a crowbar instead of an accounting procedure.

The casual observer might claim this variance in justice is unfair to the burglar. But it should be remembered that government officials usually serve the public at great personal sacrifice. If they held positions of similar responsibility in the private sector, their opportunities for unjust enrichment would be much greater.

A burglar breaks into buildings because that's all he knows how to do. A congressman skilled at unjust enrichment can easily triple his income by resigning to practice law or operate a bank. But he continues to use the public's petty cash for his errors in judgment because he knows someone has to do it. It's not fair to penalize him for his patriotism.

There are several ways to compensate a public official who forsakes private industry to seek unjust enrichment in the service of his country. One way is for the law to afford him classier treatment than is given a burglar who has never even been a candidate for office, let alone elected. Another way is to assure the public official more job security than is enjoyed by a burglar who must always worry about falling off a roof.

An employe with real job security is the employe who is caught stealing from his boss. As long as the employe keeps working for him, the boss can get his money back by deducting it from the employe's salary. But if the employe is fired for stealing, the boss has been robbed successfully.

At the rate of $500 a month, it will take Rep. Diggs nearly seven years to pay back all of his unjust enrichment. He'll have to be re-elected three times. Certainly that is the type of job security deserved by any employe willing to dedicate all of his errors in judgment to the public welfare.

I gained this type of job security in 1951, on my first newspaper job. I was allowed to use a company car while selling advertising. I wrecked it at midnight on a Saturday, many miles outside the newspaper's circulation area, but very near a saloon where I had just made several errors in judgment.

There was no collision insurance. My boss wanted to fire me, but I owed him $1,200 for the demolished car. He set up a payroll deduction plan, and I didn't have to worry about getting fired for two years.

Taxpayers living in Diggs' district are faced with the same decision as my old boss. If they want their enrichment back, they'd be smart to keep Charlie on the payroll, even if his salary checks, minus deductions, must be mailed to a prison cell.

There is ironic justice in the fact that, 28 years after crashing my way to job security, I'm one of the taxpayers faced with the Diggs choice on election day. It's nice to know there's some justice somewhere.

Hearing promised on widening plan

By Mimi Mayer

As the Village of Clarkston requested, a public hearing on the proposed widening of M-15 will be held.

"When I am furnished with some direction from our traffic and safety department, I will schedule a public hearing and the township and village will receive notices," said Jack Morgan, manager of the public involvement section of the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Village officials contended that the highway department did not fulfill the public hearing requirement on its proposed widening from two to five lanes of M-15 between Dixie Highway and Paramus Drive.

In a letter sent to the department in late June, the Clarkston Village Council requested a public hearing and listed alternatives to the five-lane plan brought out by local residents during a June 12 informational meeting on the widening.

Morgan, who attended the meeting, said the department is already addressing some of these concerns.

"We have asked our traffic and safety division to document some of the advantages and disadvantages of the proposals, both the five lane with curb and guttering and a three lane with shoulders, which seemed to be what the persons who were at the meeting and I attended wanted," he said.

Among local plans under highway department examination are in "alternative intersection at Dixie and M-15" and eliminating the green arrow for right turns made by northbound

Dixie traffic at the intersection, he said.

Morgan added that the department has ordered a sign directing northbound Dixie Highway traffic to the I-75 entrance ramps located approximately one mile northeast of the Dixie-White Lake Road intersection.

Ken Robertson of the highway department geometrics coordinating unit said engineers are working on a report to present to those who attend the public hearing.

Linked to the road widening is a $350,000 drain project slated for M-15 Independence Township.

Although the Independence Township Board had planned to make a final decision on the drain project July 17, township Clerk Christopher Rose said the board was "very happy" to table the decision.

Village council members are also contacting the Oakland County Traffic Improvement Association to receive an evaluation of the five-lane plan.

Safety path unlikely federal project

Chances are slim that federal Community Development funds can be used for the benefit of bicyclists and walkers in the Village of Clarkston.

The Clarkston Village Council decided July 9 it would like to use $5,300 in newly-allocated Community Development funds to begin construction of a safety path along Clarkston Road from Main Street to the village limits and for bike racks downtown.

The safety path project would cost an estimated $5,000 and the bike racks about $300.

"It doesn't hurt to ask," said Village President Fontie Ap-Madoc, who had suggested the bike rack purchase.

The village had been notified it could receive upwards of $40,000 in contingency funds recently made available through the Oakland County Community Development Department.

The funds are to be used in housing rehabilitation projects, the department stipulated.

"They're suggesting that's what they want to use them for," said Council Trustee Robert Adams, CDA liaison for the village. "You can use them for other things."

Marcia Berkley, an Oakland County Community Development planner, said after the meeting it's unlikely Clarkston will receive the money.

"We're looking specifically for things that have to do with housing," she said. "We've got a number of good projects from other communities which relate to housing, so it may be tough for Clarkston to get those dollars."

If village officials can prove the safety paths will benefit a majority of low- and middle-income Clarkston residents or senior citizens, "the sidewalk project has a chance of getting by," Berkley said.

Another motion passed at the July 9 meeting switched CD funds appropriated for 1979.

Some $3,500 will be spent for general sidewalk repairs in the village and $1,500 will be used for trees for senior citizens. The figures were reversed in the original council CD fund request.

Chrysler tract eyed as county park

By Dick Krause
Review editor

The largest single tract of land in the county is being considered for a park.

Chrysler Realty's 2,500-acre tract in Orion Township are up for sale, and county and state parks authorities have expressed interest. The land forms an L-shaped tract east and north of Voorheis Lake. It includes all of Lake Sixteen.

Eric Reickel, Oakland County Parks and Recreation director, confirmed that the tract is being considered for a county park. The ultimate purchase, he said, would depend on availability of non-county funds.

"It can only be done if we can get outside funding," Reickel said. "The county doesn't have the money itself to buy it."

Reickel said outside funds could include state, federal and private grants and donations.

"We would try to parlay all those together to make this a reality," he said.

With all the county parks together now totalling approximately 2,700 acres, the Chrysler property would effectively double the land area of the system.

Reickel emphasized that contacts with Chrysler Realty have been investigative in nature.

"We're just trying to find out where the funding sources are," he said. "I'm working with the DNR, and Sen. Karry Kammer is very involved."

Chrysler Realty spokesman

Frank Kaminski confirmed that contact had been made with the DNR and Oakland County concerning possible purchase of the land for either a county or state park.

He added, however, that contact also had been made with as many as 50 other potential buyers.

"We went to every major land buyer including the Catholic Church, Huron Clinton Metropolitan Authority (Metro Parks), Oakland County and the state," Kaminski said. "A lot of people had an interest."

Kaminski, general manager of Orion Hills as the holding is named, said only Oakland County and the DNR were interested in the entire parcel. Chrysler Realty would prefer selling the holdings as one tract, he said.

"It is the largest single tract of land in the county," he said.

He also confirmed that neither the county nor the state had entered formal negotiations for the property.

"We don't have anything in writing. They (DNR and Oakland County) have asked us for additional information such as maps and topographical surveys so they can put them through their evaluations," he said.

As far as purchase price is concerned, neither Reickel nor Kaminski could set a definite figure. Reickel said he "had heard the figure $4.2 million being used."

"The price is hard to evaluate," Kaminski said. "We haven't had an appraisal." He added that Chrysler is now asking for bids on appraising the tract. Land in the area is going for $3,000 an acre, he noted.

While Kaminski said he would like to see the tract become a county or state park, he added that Chrysler will sell the land even if no agreement with the governmental agencies can be reached.

"If we don't do it this way, we will work with developers," Kaminski said. "Interest has been shown by some 50 different builders, organizations and so on."

Village gives up on some taxes

Following Village Treasurer Artemus Pappas' advice, the Clarkston Village Council is writing off $51.63 in unpaid personal property taxes from 1977 through 1979.

Pappas presented a list of businesses no longer located in Clarkston which owe taxes in amounts ranging from "25 cents to $23.35."

Noting that the taxes "might as well be called uncollectable,"

Pappas said the council should not pursue collecting the funds.

The council voted unanimously to do so at the July 9 meeting. Pappas later said the unpaid tax bills were low because, "this is personal property. It is not real property. It's not based on land or a house. It's based on an inventory in a store."

DETROIT EDISON OFFERS EIGHT IMPORTANT TIPS TO HELP YOU GET THE MOST OUT OF YOUR AIR CONDITIONER THIS SUMMER.

Fortunately, Detroit Edison customers have plenty of electric power available. Now and in the future. It's the result of planning, development and investment and the fact that over 84 percent of Detroit Edison's power is generated from coal, the nation's most abundant fuel. The balance is generated from other fossil fuels. Even so, none of us should waste energy. So follow these tips and stay cool and comfortable all summer long.

1 Keep your air conditioner on a moderate setting. When leaving home, set the temperature higher.

2 Pull down shades and close draperies to keep out the hot sun.

3 Be careful not to block the flow of cool air.

4 Shade windows from outside with ventilated awnings, solar screens, trees or shrubs.

5 Keep air filter, coils, registers and return ducts clean.

6 Flush out hot attic air with a powered ventilator.

7 Use heat and humidity-producing appliances — such as your oven, washer and dryer — early in the morning or in the evening.

Bike hike boys' blast

By Kathy Greenfield

They talked about taking a 300-mile bike trip last summer. But this year, Ron Thompson's father added some incentive.

"Ron's dad told us if we rode our bikes, we could stay for a week," said Matt Sanders.

"He didn't really expect us to do it," Ron added. "He had his ideas that we weren't going to make it--that we'd run into problems and have to call or something."

Dennis Hughes, Mike Ulasich, Matt and Ron, all Clarkston High School seniors, made their trip in June.

Their favorite thing about the trip was a sense of freedom.

"We were just off on our own," Dennis said.

"It's just fun to get away from it all--do something on your own," Ron said. "It's kind of fun just to accomplish something like that. It feels good."

"We got away from our parents," Matt added. "The best part was taking care of ourselves; eating when we wanted to eat."

Their diet resulted from what they found easiest to carry on bicycles--peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

Indeed, they ate peanut butter and jelly consistently during their eight-day trip including the four days they spent at the cottage, they said.

The exception was a bacon and eggs breakfast one morning.

The four boys met at school.

They are all members of the CHS track team, a fact they attribute to being able to take a long bike ride, because they were in good condition.

"We'd like to have a bike racing team at school," Matt said, "because we like that better than some other sports."

But even with the track conditioning, there were a few surprises from riding bikes so far.

"We couldn't sit down for a while," Ron said.

"We'd take 10-mile rests," Dennis added. "We dreaded sitting back up on those bikes."

The trip has made them even more eager to take another marathon bike hike, they said.

Just riding back and forth to each other's houses means an average of 10 miles a day on bikes and they think they could manage.

Their homes are spread over Independence Township--Dennis live on Amy Drive, Matt on Clarkston-Orion Road, Ron on Overpine Drive and Mike on Reese Road.

They're talking about another trip before the summer ends--this time to Mike's cottage in Charlevoix, but it may have to wait.

Football practice starts at the end of July and three are members of the team.

They said to include in the story that the football coach should start practice later in the year.

Cyclists (from left) Dennis Hughes, Ron Thompson and Matt Sanders say they average about 10 miles a day on their bikes riding back and forth between friends' houses.

Sports & Recreation

Junior football sign-up

Sign-up for Clarkston Chiefs' little league football will be Monday night.

Potential grid stars 8 through 13 years old can join the league.

Registrations will be taken from 6 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Campbell-Richmond American Legion Post No. 63, 8047 M-15, Independence Township.

No-hit Pony game

Mike Stafanski, 14, pitched a no-hit game for Dean S. Carpenter in a Thursday night Independence Parks and Recreation Department Pony League contest.

Carpenter Coach Ray Davis said Stafanski struck out 11 Helvey's Orchard batters in the contest, which closed with a 10-1 score in Carpenter's favor.

Helvey's single run occurred during the sixth inning when Stafanski walked two batters with base-on balls. The boy on second base stole to third and, on a wild pitch made it to home plate, Davis said.

The game was a full seven-inning contest.

Uncle Sam's their coach

Reuben Hutchons and Scott Brumback, both lettermen in Clarkston High School varsity sports, have enlisted in the United States Army.

Hutchons was a center for the CHS basketball team and a running back for the football squad. Brumback won his letter as a tightend. Due to a football injury, he did not play basketball during the 1979 season.

Reuben is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hutchons, 11191 Andersonville, Springfield Township. Scott's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brumback, 5970 Lakewood, Independence Township.

No, it's not modern dance. Working up a picnic appetite by playing paddleball off the wall of a Clintonwood Park maintenance building is Jim Tulley, Drayton Plains in the foreground. Behind him are Waterford residents "Fast Eddie" Matusko (left) and John Sawgle. The men were holding a Saturday cook-out for their Diehards of Paddleball Club.

Mischief in county park? Neigh

Neighbors George Barnier (left) and Delton Hillman, who live in Hadley Road in Independence Township, patrol Independence-Oaks on horseback. They are members of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department's reserve Mounted Division.

A domestic animal, the horse, has been added to the attractions at Independence Oaks county park on Sunday afternoons.

Horseback volunteers from the Oakland County Sheriff's Department (OCSD) are patrolling the 830-acre park from 2 to 8 p.m.

The main reason for added patrols is the anticipated increase in part attendance, according to Eric Reickel, manager of the county park system.

The horseback patrols have joined the county building and park security force, which patrols the parks in marked cars.

Independence-Oaks was the logical choice for horseback patrols, because there are no service roads on one side of the park's lake, making it inaccessible by car, Reickel said.

Members of the OCSD Mounted Division have patrolled the park for three Sundays so far.

The 28-member reserve unit works in groups of two with a total of four horseback officers on duty during peak hours.

The OCSD furnished uniforms for the volunteers, but otherwise they receive no pay and they provide their own horses, said Lt. Gerald Reeves, who is in charge of community services for the sheriff's department.

The county park system's board of commissioners approved the horseback patrols with the understanding that the patrols might be extended to other parks if they prove successful.

"This will make our security patrols more visible," said commission Chairman Lewis Wint, adding that the horse patrols are in keeping with the philosophy that park security should be preventive, not reactionary.

Other likely candidates for horseback patrols are Addison-Oaks, north of Rochester, and Groveland Oaks on Dixie Highway between Ortonville and Holly.

The horseback patrols also work with the OCSD on searches for lost children in secluded areas, field searches, and public relations activities like parades, Reeves said.

Giant park slide still super for kids

Jana Tyler, age 1, glides down one of the smaller slides at Clintonwood Park into the arms of her mother, Sharon, of Peach Drive, Independence Township. The playground equipment was purchased by the parks and recreation department last year for $14,000 using a grant from the Land and Water Conservation Fund matched with revenue sharing money.

Wendy Tyler pauses and considers sliding down a pole used regularly as an exit by older children. She decided on another way down the "giant slide"--the name township residents commonly use to describe the equipment.

A line-up with an Independence Township fire truck's hose was part of the entertainment at the SCAMP cookout Monday. The Sound System, a local barbershop quartet, and a stunt plane flying overhead were also part of the fun at Independence-Oaks county park.

Aid for alcoholics at Colombiere

By Mimi Mayer

'We're not asking a person to wear their alcoholism on their shirt sleeve, so to speak, but to become more comfortable with it and to plug into resources that can help them.'

Owen McKenzie

Therapist James Stone stands at the front of the classroom, gesturing dramatically, orating with the zeal of an evangelist, utterly intent upon bringing home his point: "You do not have to go through the rest of your life using alcohol."

The men and women listening to him are alternately bored or engrossed. Stone's message is one they've heard before. And surely, they'll hear it again during their 28-day stay at "Insight" at Colombiere.

Largely serving blue-collar workers referred by the auto companies, Insight provides in-patient care for detoxified alcoholics at Colombiere Center, 9075 Big Lake, Springfield Township.

Since August 1978, an estimated 300 alcoholics have participated in Insight's extensive therapeutic and educational programs, said Owen McKenzie, program director.

Because Insight is still relatively new, McKenzie is leary of boasting about the program's success.

Nevertheless, he said that six months later 90 percent of the alcoholics treated at Insight are staying sober while working in other alcoholism rehabilitation groups.

"When a person leaves here, he is not cured," McKenzie explained. "It (alcoholism) never goes away. It's either arrested or active."

SECTION TWO

The Clarkston (Mich.) News

Wed., July 18, 1979 21

"We're not asking a person to wear their alcoholism on their shirt sleeve, so to speak, but to become comfortable with it and to plug into some resources that can help them."

Among these resources are Insight's own 30-member staff of social workers and counselors and nurses, the other alcoholics participating in the program and affiliations with groups like Alcoholics Anonymous and Alanon, a support group for people living with alcoholics.

Daily therapy sessions, either in large or small groups or one-on-one formats are mandatory. As McKenzie noted, sobriety without serenity is not Insight's aim.

The point, said Judy DeShetler, administrative assistant, is to get to the roots of a person's alcohol addiction.

"It's much more of a teaching facility rather than a medical facility," she said. "People can stop drinking. They don't bother to find out what caused them to do it in the first place. Let's get to the problems that are causing them to drink."

Frequently, Insight enlists its clients' families for this task. Kith and kin are invited to attend the group therapy sessions and are told about Alanon, just as the alcoholics are referred to Alcoholics Anonymous chapter.

"It's our firm conviction that when a person leaves here, they've only just begun," McKenzie said. "For the most part, unless a person is on some kind of recovery program, the likelihood is that they'll relapse into drinking."

Convincing Insight clients that they are victims of alcohol addiction is a focus of the program, McKenzie said.

"It's kind of like the first step in AA -- admitting, 'I am powerless against alcohol,'" he explained. "The only control a person addicted to alcohol has is saying 'OK, I'm not going to have that first drink.'"

A batch of anonymous evaluation sheets turned in by Insight clients at the end of the 28-day stay tells the story best.

"My stay at Colombiere was good -- Everyone was here for the same thing. (It) helps me with my disappointment and frustration."

Others were far more enthusiastic.

"I feel like a new person. I've learned about myself, about my feelings and how to deal with them constructively. I've learned about my alcoholism and how to recover."

"It made me realize that I'm an alcoholic...I've had a chance to really work at it. And drinking and drugs have been controlling my life for a long time. I know now to replace that stuff with people."

There were criticisms, too:

"I didn't care for it. It was something different than what I expected it would be..."

The same client added he or she didn't like "the bull sessions and the filthy words used in class to make a point and the pressure put on you if you don't agree."

One client said the leisure activities placed too much emphasis on sports and fretted about "group anxiety...the hostility and mistrust placed in the therapist by the clients."

A woman noted she wanted more time spent in small group therapy with other women.

At $95 per day, the cost of Insight is high. McKenzie said health insurance pays for the majority of the clients. Those who pay independently are asked for a $900 deposit upon admission and the balance at check-out time.

But clients seem to agree the money is very well-spent. On all 18 of the evaluation sheets examined by the Clarkston News, the clients said they would recommend Insight to other alcoholics.

As one wrote, "When I leave, I'm going to inform a lot of people about themselves and let them know what a good place Colombiere is to help with alcoholism."

"Alcoholics Anonymous" is the title of the book before Owen McKenzie, program director for Insight at Colombiere, a in-patient treatment center for people who are addicted to alcohol.

Gas crisis or no, drivers' ed rolls on

By Michelle Marzahl
For The Clarkston News

The only effect the gas shortage has had on Clarkston High School's driver education program has been a direct one--a low supply of gas.

In other districts, the fuel crisis has had far-reaching impact on the number of students that could be enrolled, the number of hours they could drive and the number of cars available for the course.

The problem here is simpler,

"We don't have enough of our own gas. We're buying out of commercial pumps," said Jan Gabier, director of driver education at CHS.

Having to purchase additional gas will not result in a loss of money to the school district.

"It's more paper work than cost," said Gabier. "It will not be an additional cost. We can apply to the state for reimbursement."

All of the students eligible to take driver education have been given the opportunity. No one has been cut out of the program due to gas shortages.

Only the normal cuts were made, including those by students who chose not to attend for personal reasons.

The increase in gas prices and the subsequent downturn in new car sales has made car dealers in some school districts reluctant to lend their autos to driver education programs.

Neighboring districts have been forced to purchase their own cars in order to continue normal operation.

Obtaining cars has been no problem for CHS, and the program has one more car in operation over last year.

Most of the automobiles are supplied by Rademacher Chevrolet, although some come from Haupt Pontiac.

"Rademacher Chevrolet has been just super and cooperative," said Gabier.

Clarkston is running its driver education program in two flights this summer. Nine instructors teach the new drivers in three areas--class, range and road. There are about 25 students to each instructor.

If the gas shortage continues, Gabier isn't sure what position driver education programs will be in.

"Any changes we make have to follow the state's mandate. If gas is not there, it's hard to run a car," she said.

As for the future, "We'll have to play it by ear."

Pine Knobbing

Doobie Brothers worth wait; they play late

Sunday, in intense restlessness and humidity, The Doobie Brothers finally took to the stage at Pine Knob.

Their expert showmanship on opening night made up for any torment that the audience was put through beforehand.

At 7:30, with the sun still glaring, the British rock group "Night" opened the show. This band consisted of six males and one female, all of whom dressed in bright colors. Their bizarre costumes greatly resembled punk rock attire.

On stage for about one hour, their music was hard and unfamiliar rock. However, towards the end they paid tribute to Bob Seger by doing a modified version of his "The Fire Down Below."

After a lengthy wait, when the crowd was long-overdue for what they came to see, Pat Simmons came on stage at 9:20. Simmons is a lead vocalist and guitarist for the Doobie Brothers.

He announced, "Ladies and gentlemen, we seem to have lost a rock star but we have recently located him. Once he gets here, the show will begin, so hold on for 20 minutes."

It seems that Michael McDonald, vocalist and keyboardist, had overslept.

Around 10, the California-based, seven-member band situated themselves on stage.

Unannounced, they moved right into "I'm Here To Love You" and "Rock Me A Little While".

The most notable member is John McFee, who recently replaced Jeff Baxter as a guitarist and violinist and whose bizarre wardrobe is in contrast to the rest of the Doobies who traditionally wear jeans and T-shirts.

The crowd was completely captivated when they sang the title cut from their most recent album "Minute by Minute."

The band led directly to a string of songs, namely "Open Your Eyes," "Jesus Is Just Alright With Me," "Nickels and Dimes" and "Long Train Runnin'."

Pat Simmons was the true showman as he ran to different ends of the stage with his guitar.

His long brown hair changed colors with the lights as he leaped off the stage and into an aisle of the pavillion. The crowd went wild as he ran back down while heavily guarded by Pine Knob rangers.

Not quite as expected, Simmons dashed down a different aisle with the speed of lightning during "It Keeps You Runnin'."

The band didn't miss any of their hits. During the Doobie classic "Black Water," they changed its words to suit the setting with "Michigan moon won't you keep shining your light on me".

Simmons once again took over the microphone to announce that the next song would be in tribute to his cousin Gene Simmons and Paul Stanley of Kiss.

They, by the way, were in the audience somewhere without their famous makeup and costumes.

Standing up and clapping, the crowd excitedly responded to "Takin' It To The Streets" and "China Grove."

During the latter, smoke crept from behind the band to cover them completely in a cloud. At the concert's climax, the mirror ball on the ceiling was spinning furiously as it swept spots of light around the crowd. Four loud fireworks exploded near the ceiling at the stage's sides as the band left.

There were two encores and standing ovations as they sang out "What a Fool Believes" and their usual finale "Listen to the Music" with the crowd's help.

"We play a lot of different places around the country but this here is one of the best. The reason is because the audiences are so great."

In my opinion, I think that Simmons' statement above is reciprocal because a band is what makes the audience.

The Doobie Brothers once again put on an excellent show, which appeals to many ranges of ages.

Playing until 11:30, they put on the latest show at Pine Knob in a long time.

What can I say about a band who will soon be entering their second decade of performing at the top? Well, The Doobie Brothers "are just alright with me!"

Dr. Aenlle settles in office of his own

By Kathy Greenfield

Finding an office in Independence Township for his internal medicine practice was difficult.

So Dr. Anthony Aenlle started

about a month ago by sharing space with Dr. Nevit Ergin on M-15 just north of Dixie Highway.

Assistance by Dr. James O'Neill in calling "all the local physicians" resulted in sharing space with Ergin, Aenlle said.

Then two weeks ago, he moved to an office in O'Neill's building, also on M-15, and Aenlle is now settled.

Having received his M.D. degree from Michigan State University, Aenlle completed his three-year residency in internal medicine at Providence Hospital, Southfield, in December.

Seeking a more rural location, he turned down an established practice from a retiring doctor in Southfield, he said.

"It made me really nervous, but I'm happy I did it," he said.

After checking as St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Pontiac for locations, he was told Clarkston was one area with shortages of doctors, he said.

"We've always driven around the area and we've always like it," Aenlle said, so he and his wife Beverly decided to make the move.

"It turned out just right," Aenlle said. "The local community is really friendly--everybody receives you with open arms, which is really nice.

"The patients I've had are just great," he added.

Aenlle worked in hospital emergency rooms during his residency and will continue until his practice becomes more established, he said.

His specialty involves treating patients with lung, heart, endocrine and diabetic conditions, but he also gives check-ups, treats illnesses like colds and the flu and performs minor surgery.

"I've been working in emergency rooms for two years, so I do more than a normal internist would do," he said.

The only areas of medicine he does not cover are major surgery and deliveries of babies.

Although the Aenlle family including Lisa, age 2, and Jeffrey, 3, now live in Sterling Heights, they plan to move to Independence Township soon.

"We still haven't decided exactly what spot," he said. "I hope I'll be in by the end of summer, because it's a long drive."

Country Living

Delaskos call 830-acre park home

Shortly after Ray and Joyce Delasko's younger son Shawn, now 2, was born, a relative came to visit and they left the house for a quiet walk in Independence-Oaks county park.

"I just kind of stood there and watched him move picnic tables and pick up litter," Joyce said.

Such is the life of a park supervisor and his family.

"He's even got the kids picking up litter," Joyce laughed. "We go to the picnic area and on walks and their eyes are on the ground."

That's not to say, however, that living in the park is not a close to ideal situation for the Delaskos, whose older son Ryan is 5.

They are enthusiastic nature lovers--camping and taking walks along nature trails are favorite family activities--and Ray is pleased with his career.

"I've worked in a factory--I worked at Pontiac Motors before--and you can't even compare the two," Ray said. "There are not many people who can say, 'I really like my job.'"

Even though his job requires long hours, especially during the summer months, Ray still looks forward to each day.

His favorite time at the park is early morning.

"You go out there by yourself and you can sing a song and nobody really cares," he said.

"It's a demanding job. It's not really an eight-hour job--some days I put in 16 hours," he said. "But 16 hours working in a park is not like eight hours in a factory."

After high school, Ray spent a year working at Pontiac Motor Division. He then joined the Army for two years and returned to work at the factory.

"I decided then this wasn't the type of job I wanted," he said.

He found the parks and recreation department at Michigan State University while browsing through a catalog one day.

He knew he wanted to major in the field.

"This is what I always wanted to get in to," he said. "I used to belong to the Smokey Bear Club--I grew up in a small farming community in Pennsylvania. I always liked being in the woods."

"We tried going on vacation in the city," he said. "We lasted one day in Washington D.C. We just couldn't stand it--all the noise and confusion."

So, as a result, they travel to different parks around the state and country on vacations.

Joyce grew up in the city, but she has found living in a park an easy adjustment.

Her favorite times are in the evenings when she can leave the house and sit by the lake and relax, she said.

"I married Ray and we started living in parks," she said. "I'd never go back to the city."

"I love walking, so this suits me perfectly," she said.

The Delaskos moved to the park in 1975, a year before it opened to the public. Their home was the first building built on the property.

Their house sits close to Sashabaw Road.

"I like it. It's really a contrast," Joyce said. "The front of our house, you look out at traffic and cars flashing past."

"But you look out in the back of our house and sit on the patio and you see the park."

Joyce, who is a registered nurse, quite working when Ryan was born.

At that time she was head nurse on the gynecology floor at St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Pontiac.

"Everytime somebody gets sick and I go to a hospital, I look around and I want to be back there," she said. "I really miss it."

But for now, raising their two young sons occupies most of her time. With Ryan just starting kindergarten, she plans to start working part time again soon.

"I know they are going to be little like this for only a short time," she said, "so this is why I want to be with them."

Living in a park is the only life that Ryan and Shawn have known.

She and Ray sometimes wonder: "Do they realize they live in a special place?" Joyce said.

"They're learning a lot about nature, just little things about insects and their relationships with other things," Ray said.

Their house is frequently a visiting spot for things like frogs and lightning bugs that Ray brings home for the boys to see.

They even had a "pet" raccoon once that came to the door for food and took over the dog's house.

But one day when Joyce found it inside trying to get into the kitchen cupboard, Ray transported the young animal to the other side of the park.

As they consider the value of living close to nature and Ray thinks back to the days when he chose the parks and recreation field over business administration, he sums up their life with:

"We'll never get rich, but we're really happy."

The Delasko family is right at home taking tranquil walks on the wooded trails of Independence-Oaks. Joyce and Ray walk behind their sons Ryan (left) and Shawn.

Ryan pauses during his search for crayfish in Crooked Lake. Although he didn't find any of the creatures under the rocks, he did discover a shiny clam shell.

Blood drive successful

First-time blood donors and old pros were among those who visited the Red Cross bloodmobile at Calvary Lutheran Church Thursday.

Forty pints were donated to the Southeastern Michigan blood bank, according to Rev. Robert Walters.

Because of the Red Cross program designed to obtain needed blood supplies from volunteers, anyone in Southeastern Michigan gets blood on need, Walters said.

Three donors have donated over 20 pints--Brother John Petrus of Colombiere Center has given 31 pints; Joe Rehfus, 22 pints; and Walters, 21 pints.

The bloodmobile has been sponsored by the Independence Township Pastors' Association in July for the past four or five years, Walters said.

The bloodmobile also visits the township in October, sponsored by the Clarkston Women's Club.

Recipe File

By Lorna Bickerstaff

Mrs. William (Joette) Kunse is sharing the Now and Later Casserole recipe with the Clarkston News that her mother sent her from California. Joette said the casserole is nice because you have one to serve now and one to serve later.

Now and Later Casserole

- 2 lb. zucchini, sliced
- 1 lb. lean ground beef
- 1 t. salt
- 1/4 t. pepper
- 1/4 t. garlic powder
- 1 c. finely chopped onions
- 3 c. cooked rice
- 1/4 oz. can of chopped green chilies
- 2 eggs, beaten

- 1 1/2 c. cottage cheese
- 2 T. grated parmesan cheese
- 2 c. grated cheddar cheese.

Cook zucchini in salt water for about five minutes. Drain thoroughly and set aside. Saute meat, seasonings and onions until meat is no longer pink and onions are tender but crisp.

Add rice, green chilies and zucchini.

Blend eggs, cottage cheese and parmesan cheese. Stir into meat mixture.

Put in two greased shallow two-quart casseroles. Top each casserole with one cup cheddar cheese. Bake one at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Wrap and freeze other for future use. Serves six.

Partying . . .

. . . with Rose family for half-birthday

Chris and June Rose decided it was time to celebrate a number of things this month. So they hosted a party at their home on Snowapple Drive July 6 to recognize their daughter Abigail's half-birthday, to say good-bye to friends before Skylab fell and to celebrate the completion of a family room. Only half a gift for Abigail would be accepted, and the Roses also instructed friends to lavish praise on their room-refinishing handiwork. The Roses' 60 guests rose to the occasions.

Some wore hard hats outside for Skylab debris protection. Compliments for the family room were accepted graciously by the host and hostess. And Abigail's half-year mark was honored with half a birthday cake, half birthday cards and an array of half gifts. Jerry Bennett gave the youngest Rose a Raggedy Ann doll—half the set. Dale and Debbie Stuart's gift was a half-dozen blocks. A garnet—half a birthstone ring—was presented by Bill and Sue Basinger. A left bootie was the gift of Bob and Nancy Davis with the matching right bootie given by Bob and Flo Pilarcik. Ron Forbes gave Abigail one Snoopy tennis sneaker. One Snoopy tennis sneaker was also the gift of Elena Forbes. A diaper and bib adorned the half-dressed baby doll from Al and Chris Moore.

Half thank-you notes from Abigail were mailed to show appreciation for these half gifts and others too numerous to list. Meanwhile, the celebration was so successful, that rumor has it more half-birthday parties around town for all ages are being contemplated.

. . . with the Hauca family amid packing boxes

Neighbors of the Hauca family of Langle Drive gathered Saturday among moving boxes to bid their friends farewell. Gene, Judy, Jennifer, Julie, Jenese, Gallagher (the dog), Spunkie (the cat) and a tank full of fish are moving to Grand Ledge this week. A job transfer for Gene with the Michigan Retail Hardware Association prompted the move. The "Packing Box Party" featured snacks served on paper plates and plenty of seating space on the about 130 boxes scattered throughout their home of two and one-half years, Judy said. Despite the less-than-elegant atmosphere, it was a fun way to gather friends together and say good-bye, she said. "It has been so nice. This has been a lovely community," Judy said. "We enjoyed it so much."

Coping with kids

by Jim & Ellen Windell

Things are different for second child

Bobby was only three years old when Mrs. Shell called for an appointment.

She talked during that first appointment about a wide range of concerns about Bobby's behavior. He seemed so different from his 7-year-old brother.

Bobby, she related, was a cute and quiet child who at 3 years still talked in a very babyish way without stringing words together into sentences.

Her older son had begun talking at 12 or 13 months and by age 2 had seemed articulate.

Bobby remained passive and only occasionally expressed frustration, particularly when he was tired, by screaming or crying loudly. His brother, on the other hand, always seemed to be able to express what it was he was feeling, and he never seemed passive.

The biggest concern related to Bobby's recently being placed in a summer Bible school.

When left on his own by the teacher, he ran around, threw objects and frequently cried. He was much better when the teacher was showing him how to do something or standing near him.

Mrs. Shell wondered if Bobby was hyperactive because he couldn't sit still in Bible school and he seemed to have a short attention span.

Should Bobby be tested or have psychiatric help so he wouldn't have problems when he started public school?

Like all concerned parents these days, Mr. and Mrs. Shell were anxious about their children and nervous about such things as "hyperactivity" and "normality."

They didn't have these same concerns with their first boy because he developed quickly and they had no other children to compare him to.

But it was different with Bobby. They could compare him to his brother.

Actually, Bobby appears to be a typical second child in a family with doting grandparents, aunts and uncles and a bright, talkative, domineering older child.

Bobby is probably capable of much more than he reveals so far.

However, he has perhaps been allowed very little independence or individuality.

He has not been forced to develop speech quicker because others have anticipated his needs and he has not received the parental "hot house" attention which leads to early development. Mrs. Shell, in fact, went to work after Bobby was born.

Even at this young age, it has been to Bobby's advantage to accept the role as baby in the family. When he has not had the attention he would like, he has learned to attract it by being immature and helpless.

His brother was simply expected to grow up rapidly.

His parents and relatives will have to allow Bobby to grow and develop as an individual apart from an older, adult-like and secure brother.

He will need to be encouraged to take independent steps. Group situations can be encouraged so that he can learn to function as a person in his own right apart from the influence of his brother.

In a group, he will be expected to speak at his age level and be assertive while at home remaining a "baby" might be more easily tolerated.

Is Bobby normal?

Normality is a very individual thing. One could say there is no normal person because people differ so much in the expression of development at various ages and stages. Or one could say there are only normal persons because every person is unique and therefore normal in his or her own way.

He takes care with cemetery

By Kathy Greenfield

There are some jobs untouched by fears of lay-offs when economic slowdowns are predicted.

Jack (Bud) Parker has such a job.

He has been superintendent of Independence Township's Lakeview Cemetery for 20 of the 22 years he has worked there.

"I'd worked in the shops for 10 years and I didn't really care for that. I like to work outside," Parker said. "It's a living. It's been real good and steady."

The father of five children, he and his wife Sally live on Holcomb Street in Clarkston.

Parker's job is more than just maintaining the cemetery and preparing grave sites.

"You try to please the public, and you can't please them all," he said. "I think there's a lot of public relations work in the cemetery."

"We're not pleasing the departed. We're trying to please the survivors."

At times, the task is difficult with 30 acres of gravesite and a staff of three during the summer and one the rest of the year.

Parker's favorite time is Memorial Day when the cemetery is prepared for ceremonies.

"Everybody is really out there working hard," he said. "You can look back and feel you've done a good job."

Over the years, there have been some changes in the cemetery.

The biggest difference is the time it takes to dig graves.

Before a tractor and backhoe were purchased in the early '60s, it took three men about four hours to prepare a grave.

Now the job is completed in about a half an hour.

About once a year, though, a grave still has to be dug with shovels.

"Sometimes the monuments are too large to move or there is a difficult spot," Parker said, but hand-digging is avoided as much as possible.

Finding litter in the cemetery left from nighttime visitors has also improved recently.

Parker attributes it to the deposit charged on cans.

"When I was a kid, I'd never think about going into a cemetery at 2 a.m. with a girl," he said. "Now it's a common thing."

"We don't find the beer cans anymore, but we used to get quite a few of them."

Vandalism, however, is only a minor problem. There are times when metal urns are stolen and there have been overturned grave stones, in the past, but strict laws help, he said.

Talking to possible violators also makes a difference, he said.

"We try to be real cordial around here," he said. "I try to tell all the boys who work here to be polite."

One improvement for after-dark came about after the 130-year-old cemetery building was torn down.

"When we had the old cemetery building, it seemed to be spooky," he said. "Of course, I had just started here."

"You hear a lot of strange noises at night," he added. "I usually come here and guard it for Halloween."

Parker plans to stay on the job until he retires, with one qualification.

"If I hit the lottery big, I probably won't be here," he said.

Confusion over names given different cuts of meat will soon change. The National Livestock and Meat Board now recommends labels which tell the kind of meat, where on the animal it comes from, and the name of the retail cut you the consumer buy. Until your supermarket adopts these labels, you'll still have to ask your butcher.
