Without Pine Knob

'Reserve cops' future glum

By Kathy Greenfield

The future looks glum for Independence Township's reserve police unit, according to Supervisor Whitey Tower.

Township attorney, Richard Campbell, told reserve members last week they should not cover Pine Knob Music Theatre's traffic control, because they cannot write tickets or enforce state laws, Tower said.

"There's no possibility to go with Pine Knob," Tower said. "The one technicality of the law just doesn't make it functional for Pine Knob," Tower said. There's no way to handle it."

State law requires a full-time police officer to be in charge of the police reserves in order for arrests to be made and tickets to be written, according to the township attorney's interpretation of the law.

"A full-time patrolman gets it back to a paid staff," Tower said, and the township board voted to dissolve the local police department effective Feb. 2.

Formerly, the police protection was handled by the township police department during the daytime and by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department during evening and early morning hours.

The OCSD contract was increased last month from four to six deputies to provide around-the-clock police coverage in the township.

The township board voted to maintain the local police reserve unit to cover the Pine Knob traffic control, parades and school functions.

Now that it looks like Pine Knob traffic control is out of the picture, covering school functions and parades in the Village of Clarkston may be enough reason to maintain the reserves, Tower said.

Although no reserve officers have resigned, the reserve unit is pretty much in limbo for now," Tower said, until the reserve officers and patrolman decide whether or not to stay together and the township board decides if the reserves should be maintained.

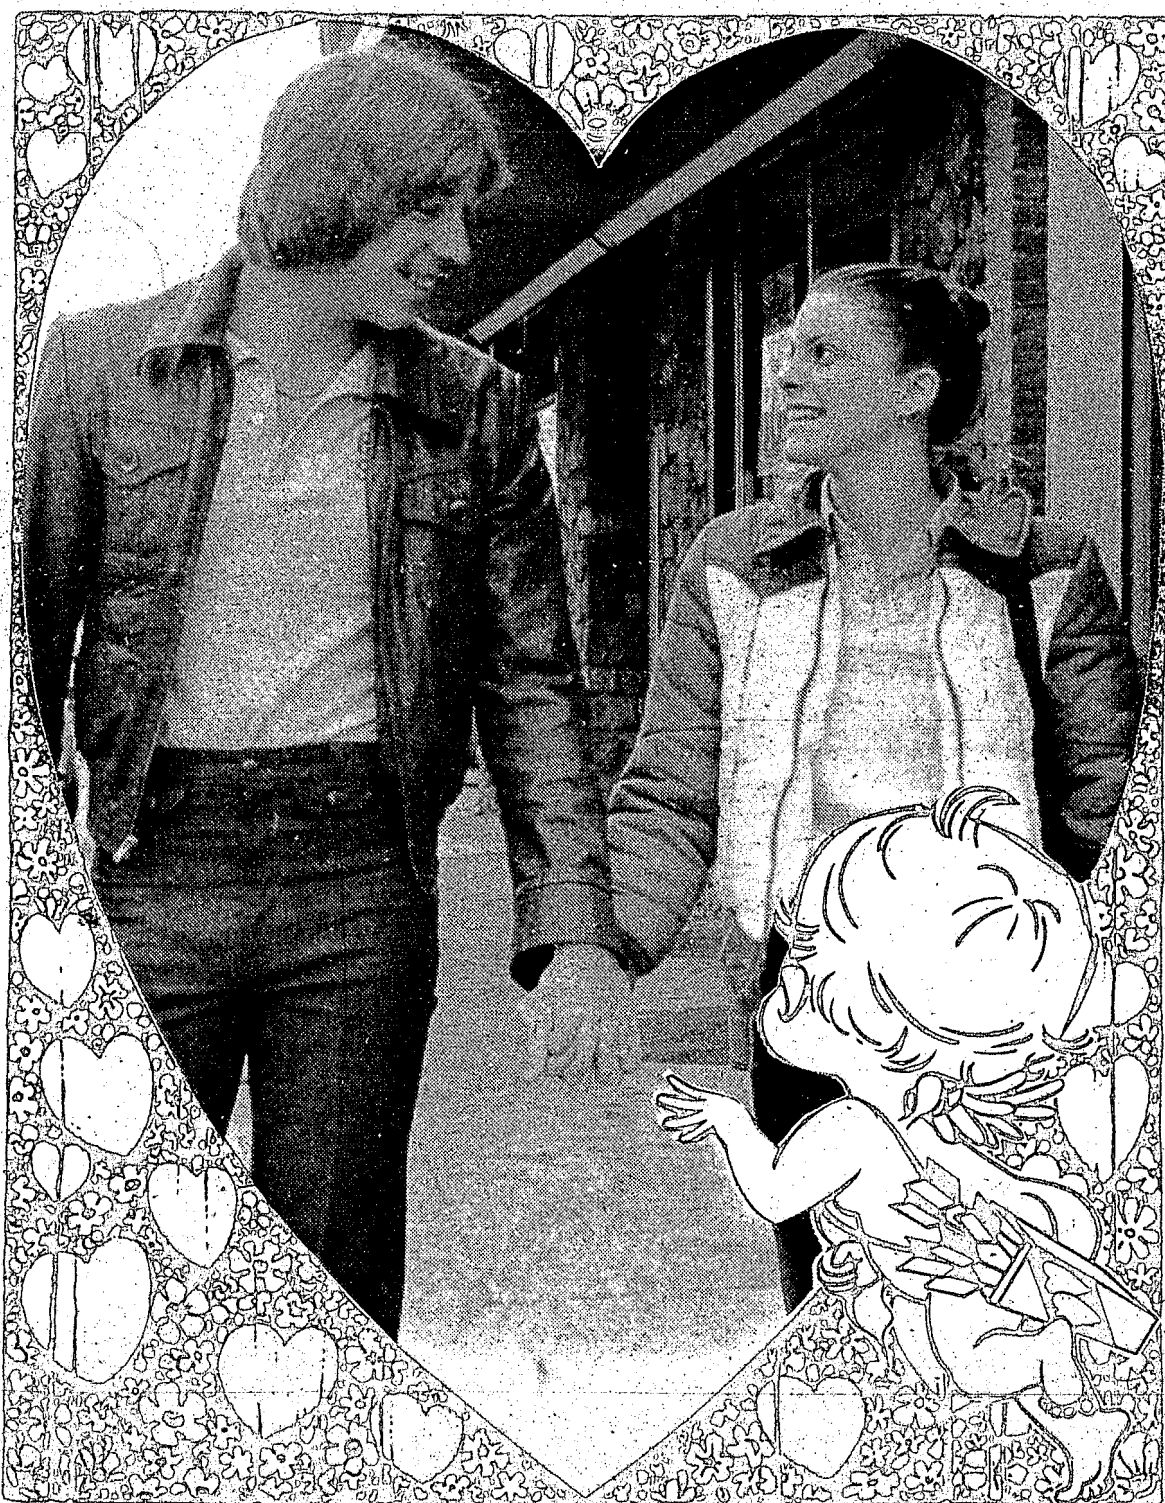

"The only option we've got at this point is the school functions and the parades," Tower said. "If they still had Pine Knob, I'm sure we'd keep an organized force."

But the general feelings of the reserve officers themselves are "if it's nil for writing tickets for Pine Knob, it's just too limited," Tower said.

In the past, reserve officers in the township totaled about 18 with seven additional Oxford Police Department members hired to assist with the Pine Knob traffic control contract.

Plans are underway to sell at least three of the four police cars now owned by the township, Tower said.

The fourth car will probably be used by Tower as his township vehicle, he said,

Love is, after all, what Valentine's Day is all about. It's a hand-holding, happy-to-be-with-you kind of day as illustrated by Gary Mason of Wealthy Street, Independence Township, and Kim Cowan of Rattalee Lake Road, Independence Township. They are engaged to be married.

Flashing signs for school area

Flashing speed limit signs on both sides of Waldon Road at the Clarkston school complex are to be installed before the end of the school year.

"It will be a couple months maximum by the time they (the Oakland County Road Commission) get them in," said Supervisor Whitey Tower.

The $3,054 cost is to be divided equally among Independence Township, Clarkston Community Schools and the road commission. Township board members present at last week's meeting voted unanimously to take part in the cost-sharing. Trustee Rudy Lozano was absent.

"I think it's a worthwhile project," said Trustee Jerry Powell. "We've banded it about for a number of months. I'd like to see the township participate."

Mill Pond study funded

A two-year study of the level and quality of the Clarkston Mill Pond water is to be completed this year.

The Independence Township Board gave approval last week for spending $745 of second year expenses for the program conducted by the United States Geological Survey (USGS) department.

Total costs for the year is $2,980 with the USGS to pay half and the Village of Clarkston to pay the remaining $745.

Readings taken in the north and south Mill Ponds and in Parke Lake are gathered for computer analysis, said Ruth Basinger who represented the Hydrology Committee.

"The results are in for the first year, but analysis is holding until the second year is finished," Basinger said.

Although Basinger said the study was precipitated by a dispute over control of the Mill Pond water level, with valves located in the Clarkston Mills shopping mall, the motivation had changed.

"We essentially are trying to settle a dispute on what is the best level of these waters for ecological purposes," summarized Trustee William Vandermark.

because it would be less expensive than leasing a car.

Then if it is decided to maintain the reserve unit, the car could also be used by the reserve officers when covering school functions and parades, Tower said.

Despite the possible demise of the reserve unit, Tower said the officers and patrolmen did a good job for the community in the past.

"The biggest accomplishment I'll credit the reserves with is that we had less complaints after they took over Pine Knob," he said. "With the local people handling the program, it worked a lot better."

Former director of township police services Charles Kimbel's last day on the job was Feb. 2 and the two former police officers Dirk Feneley and Thomas Cavalier are on a six-month training program with the OCSO after which they will be tested and must place in the top five percent of deputy applicants to be hired on a permanent basis.

Two former police service employees are covering the animal control duties that the township board decided to keep, but move under the township's department of public works.

Animal Control Officer Joseph Armstrong has retained his position and former administrative secretary for police services, Beth Tower, the supervisor's daughter, is now animal control dispatcher.

Linda Richardson, who formerly worked as a dispatcher, has been on vacation and is to be transferred to the recreation department this week, Tower said.

Parents protest discipline policy

Parents in disagreement with Clarkston High School's method disciplining students for absences by withholding grades took their complaints to the board of education Monday night. After an hour and a half of listening to the faults the parents see in the policy and the ways in which it is administered, the board decided to ask administrators for a report on the matter, expected back at the board's March meeting.

Don't use students' academic grades as a tool for punishing them for absences and tardiness, some of the parents said.

Don't count excused absences for illness and emergencies when calculating these for which a student should be punished, some said.

Others complained that the policy is not uniformly administered.

It was suggested that the school's appeals committee have student and/or parent representation and not just school district employees.

"The language of (the) current attendance policy is subject to widely differing interpretations," Robert and Nancy Dangel of Deer Hill said in a written report they prepared for the school board meeting.

They commented they believe no clear, concise interpretation is possible.

Among other observations they made were:

- There is no uniform understanding of the attendance policy.

- There is no uniform administration of the attendance policy.

- The appeal process does not allow time for student preparation because of same-day notification.

- The appeal process does not involve all parties with inputs to the decision.

- Alerts to absences and tardies are inconsistent.

Aaron E. Lefler of Sashabaw Road had contacted Assistant Attorney General Paul J. Zimmer for a clarification of the opinion he had rendered on absences affecting grades.

Zimmer's opinion was cited by the appeals committee as the authority for withholding grades because of absences, Lefler said.

Absences can affect grades, Zimmer had said. However, in a letter to Lefler, he elaborated.

"Specifically, the opinion is not authority for the withholding a credit in a course for non-attendance when, based on academic performance, the students has received a passing grade in the course," Zimmer wrote.

Barbara Johnston of Andersonville Road objected to academically penalizing students who had excused absences for illness, injuries or a death in the family.

She also commented that she does not believe teachers and school administrators can make fair judgements on appeals.

Others complained about not being notified their children were in trouble until an appeal had been made.

One parent said her daughter refused to attend her grandfather's funeral, which would have required a six-day absence, because of the uncertainty of the appeals process.

School Board Trustee Eric Reickel, who made the motion to refer the matter to administrators, commented that there has been "some improvement" in the policy during the last four years.

"Now it's a matter of honing it down," he said.

Snow looks super now

At Long last snow! It looked like it might be turnaround time for the weather earlier this week with some flurries of snow. So kids like 4-year-old Amy Wilmot, daughter of Paul and Marie Wilmot of Clarkston-Orion Road, Independence Township got a chance to sample the sugary-looking stuff.

Residents back Mill Pond clean-up

By Al Zawacky

Clarkston residents owning property adjacent to the Mill Pond are being asked to contribute $75 toward a chemical treatment of the pond this spring, aimed at cleaning up excessive weed and algae growth.

"I would think that everyone could be willing to pay the amount, in view of the benefits," said Judi Lukens, treasurer of the Clarkston Mill Ponds Association, which is seeking the funds. "We'll be protecting our property value, eliminating a possible health hazard and increasing the aesthetic value of the Mill Pond as well."

The Mill Pond Association was recently formed among riparian property owners in response to growing weed and algae and pollution problems in the Mill Pond, and held its first public meeting on Feb. 6 to discuss some of the clean up alternatives.

Two guest speakers were present at the meeting: Dr. Clifford Humphrys from the Department of Resource Development at Michigan State University, and Richard Hinterman from the Aquatic Nuisance Plant Control, Inc.

Humphrys spoke with regard to the necessity for riparian owners to organize formally for study, promotion and defense of their common interests, while Hinterman presented his company's proposal for chemical treatment of the weeds and algae in the Mill Pond.

Hinterman said that his company, based in Midland, would apply the chemicals in the spring at a cost of approximately $3,060.

"The chemicals used are approved by the state DNR (Department of Natural Resources)," Hinterman said. "There's no environmental risk involved in their use."

Lukens noted, however, that while the association supports the use of chemical treatment, other long-run solutions are also being sought.

"The chemical treatment is only a short-term answer," Lukens said. "We're also looking for some long-range solutions to prevent the pollution of the pond from reoccurring."

Lukens said that many of the Mill Pond problems could be traced to deliberate pollution on the part of some of the residents. "About a month ago, we had what appeared to be soap bubbles on the Mill Pond tested in a laboratory in Pontiac, and they confirmed that the bubbles were soap."

"The implication is that somebody is dumping their wash water right into the pond."

Lukens also said that there is reason to believe that some residents may be polluting by connecting their septic with their sump pump, but added that this was only speculation on the association's part.

"We can't force our way into somebody's home, but people should know that this type of action is in violation of state law. We don't want to just put the chemicals in and forget about it-if nothing else is done, the problem will only arise again."

"But this last summer was probably the worst year ever--the weed and algae growth was unsightly and unhealthy as well."

The chemical treatment will at least give us some quick improvement."

Clarkston village councilmember Ruth Basinger, who attended the Feb. 6 meeting, reported to the village council Monday night that the association had decided to proceed with the chemical treatment. Basinger proposed that the council consider contributing village funds to the cost of the treatment, and inquired of village attorney Thomas Gruich if such funding would be possible.

"This is kind of a grey-area in the law," Gruich said. "The primary question is whether or not citizens of the village in general, and not just the riparian owners, will benefit from the treatment."

Council will await the writing of a formal opinion.

Those interested in joining the association were requested at the meeting to make their checks payable to the Clarkston Mill Pond Association no later than Feb. 18. Information may be obtained by calling Rita Chisholm at 625-4466 or Judi Lukens at 625-8066.

Independent view

An article in the Jan. 30 Clarkston News about new home mortgages available through the Michigan State Housing Development Authority (MSHDA) quoted representatives of two local companies building houses available for the low-interest loans.

These two firms are not the only ones engaged in MSHDA-qualifying building in the area and able to construct homes in Independence or Springfield townships. The state's list of some 2,000 MSHDA builders is not broken down by communities and therefore MSHDA could not supply the names of local builders.

Land trust funds give protection to wetlands

There is no guarantee Michigan Land Trust money earmarked to purchase some 200 acres of wetlands in Independence Township will be used, according to State Sen. Kerry Kammer (D-Pontiac).

But because the state is to approve funding for the property purchase, there will be some protection for the land that includes a portion of a 487-acre gravel mining operation proposed by the Edward C. Levy Co. of Detroit, Kammer said.

"I don't think a gravel mining operation would be an activity approved for that area by the (Michigan) Department of Natural Resources," Kammer told the gathering of about 35 people at the annual meeting of the Independence Land Conservancy last week.

The Land Trust Fund was approved by the State Senate and is to be approved by the House of Representatives this week.

Kammer said he could foresee "no problem with it" and that Governor Milliken will probably give his approval "within two weeks."

Once the approval for the fund is given, negotiations with the property owners are to begin, he said.

The first questions will be if options exist to purchase the property and when those options expire, Kammer said.

"The state is very interested in the property, but the state can't purchase it as long as there are options on it," he said. "As long as they (the Levy Co.) have options on the property, short of a declaration of condemnation, we're forced to recognize that legal contract."

If the 200 acres are purchased by the state, the land would be turned over to Oakland County and would become part of Independence Oaks county park, Kammer said.

The Michigan Land Trust Fund, sponsored by Kammer, was established using royalties paid for gas and oil development on state land.

Census needs workers

As the official April 1 date for the 1980 United States Census draws near, people are being hired to assist with the task.

The census bureau in Detroit estimates about 600 people will be needed for temporary employment in northern Oakland County.

A room in Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main, Clarkston, is used as a testing center on Thursday mornings at 9:30 now through mid-April.

Typical length of employment is to be four to six weeks for the job that pays between $3.50 and $4.50 an hour, according to Gerry Feder of the census information office in Detroit.

To qualify for employment, the test must be passed and those hired must "feel comfortable with the community and be able to deal with the public," Feder said.

To be scheduled for the test, call the Pontiac district census office at 338-3130.

Residents may be asked to curtail water use

Area residents will be asked to further curtail their water usage should efforts to repair a sewer interceptor in Macomb County fail.

The interceptor is deteriorating and arrangements have been made to divert the raw sewerage into the Clinton River if the sewer collapses.

"If something does happen that would require diverting the sewerage into the river, the only thing we would ask of Oakland County residents would be to minimize their water flow." That would be the only conservation process we could advise said Donald Ringler, manager of sewer, water and solid waste for the Oakland County Drain Commission.

Ringler suggested cutting down on the number of times toilets are used and flushed, and curtailing showers, baths, washing dishes and clothes whenever possible.

Ringler noted that as of Tuesday morning the interceptor, at 15 Mile and Maple Lane in Sterling Heights, was still holding up and efforts were being made to prevent its collapse.

"We're still not out of the woods by any means," he said. "But it appears they have made some progress over the weekend."

Ringler said two 24-inch casings have been placed in the deteriorated section. A third casing could not be installed, however, because of rubble in the pipe.

"They are also in the process of freezing the ground immediately over the most deteriorated section of the pipe. I understand they intend to use liquid nitrogen over part of the area and brine over the other. The work is going on now," Ringer said.

The interceptor serves some 300,000 homes and businesses in Oakland and Macomb counties including the communities of Lake Orion, Oxford and Clarkston.

Sacrifice needed

Cut back on water usage to help save the sewer lines, Clarkston and Independence Township residents are being urged.

A stand-by alert was issued last week by Oakland County Drain Commissioner George W. Kuhn.

"All citizens are urged to minimize their use of water and sewage facilities," he said in a bulletin to the North Oakland communities on the Clinton-Oakland sewer system.

The stand-by alert was issued as workmen attempted to ward off the total collapse of a severely damaged 12-foot, 9-inch line in Sterling Heights.

EXPERIENCE

*PACESETTER'S POSITIVE ATTITUDE

Here's Herb

By Herb Rose

Not seeing well creates bizarre hazards.

Every now and then I try to eat a sponge, a repeatedly unsuccessful attempt that does not reflect a strange metabolic imbalance or the manifestation of a severe cellulose deficiency but only that I have put a slice of bread down on the kitchen counter and inadvertently picked up the sponge.

In one instance, I thought the sponge was a durable slab of pumpnickle and tenaciously gnawed off a corner.

I can hardly wait for what will be a memorable occasion when I put a sponge in the toaster or worsen relations with a new generation by spreading a sponge with peanut butter and jelly and offering it to some kid.

I spilled coffee on the counter, something I can do with little or no effort, and was extremely agitated at not being able to find the sponge.

Perhaps I should have used a slice of bread.

As the puddle crept inexorably toward the floor, I picked up, with an ever-lasting tempo a variety of non-absorbent scouring pads and brushes.

When I called Anne, I was told that the sponge had been thrown out because "it was dirty."

My adrenalin pumps were starting into an overspeed mode when I realized that I should have foreseen the discarding of the sponge: it was beginning to taste funny.

I was commiserating with a friend with similar vision and she assured me that I didn't know what real frustration was until I tried to get a drink of water from a shiny, well-mounted ash tray.

In her case, not only did she not get a drink, but she had to explain to some non-plussed observers that she was not scrounging for usable cigaret butts.

In a clothing store the other day, I mistook a gentlemen standing quietly for part of the display and tried to take off his coat.

He was good natured about the error and I had the presence of mind to use the word "manikin," not "dummy." I was glad, however, that I had not made this mistake while looking at skirt material.

I could see myself being beaten into the ground like a fence post by some purse-wielding amazon as I tried to explain, "Look, lady, I was just trying to see something."

She would probably answer: "I know. You people are sick, sick, sick."

Once, after paying the tab in a restaurant, I stepped into the "john" and the first person I saw was Anne. We had a rather strained, desultory conversation. "Hi."

"How've you been?"

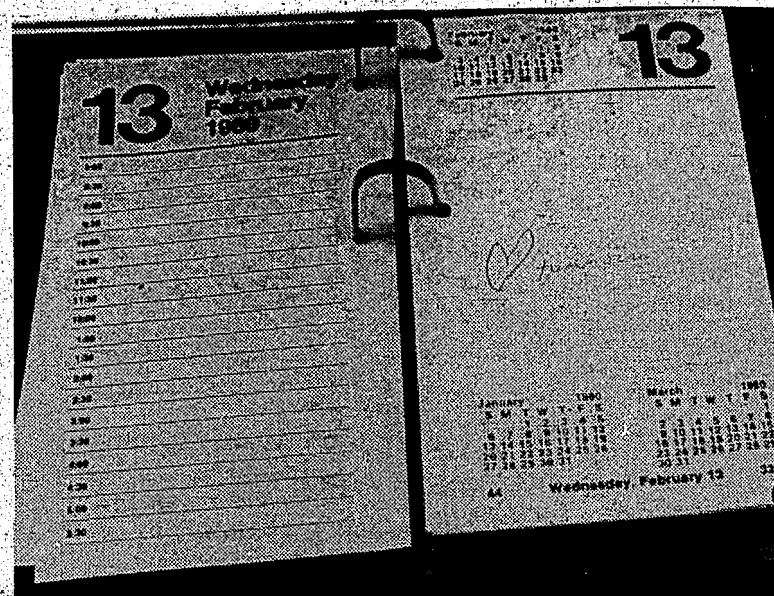

"Would you entertain the thought that one of us is in the wrong room?"

It's a good day when you only get run down by an omnibus.

Letters to the Editor

Parents, get involved

To All Parents of Clarkston High School Students:

Last night at the Clarkston School Board meeting, the board was publicly made aware of inequities in the present attendance policy at Clarkston High School.

The three areas causing the most trouble are the counting of excused absences against a student, discrepancy between teacher records and office records, and lack of notification to parents.

There are also problems in the appeal process itself.

The board has taken these problems "under advisement" with no date in sight as to whether or not they will take action to correct these problems.

In the meantime I suggest all students and parents take the following steps to ensure justice in their particular case should the need arise.

•Parents definitely should contact CHS when there is a legitimate reason for a student to miss school.

•When the student returns to school, he or she should carry a note from the parent or guardian indicating the date or dates of the absence and the reason for the absence. This note should be shown to the teacher and the teacher asked to sign the note. Just as important-TAKE THE NOTE HOME AND KEEP IT IN A SAFE PLACE!! It may make the difference between getting credit for a course or not getting credit for a course should a problem arise.

•Periodically check attendance records with your teachers. In many cases the parents were unaware there was a problem until after credit was denied and it was too late.

The above steps may not ensure that a student is awarded earned academic credits, but it does give the student and parent a basis on which to fight for the credit the student is entitled to.

To the Editor:

The Village Council will present the film "Main Street" by the National Trust for Historic Preservation this Friday, Feb. 15, at the Village Hall.

The film was prepared by the National Trust to demonstrate what has been done in three project communities through preservation techniques to encourage small towns to restore the economic, social and aesthetic integrity of their central business district.

The Village Council has initiated the restoration of our central business district by contracting with Preservation Planning to research and develop a design study for the conservation of historically and architecturally significant buildings and sites in the village center.

The film presentation will provide some insight into our village research and encourage your input and participation.

We cordially invite all interested parties to attend.

Jim's jottings

Fringe benefits

by Jim Sherman

One of the side benefits of becoming president of the Michigan Press Association is hearing from old friends.

How often I've thought of Ink White. Ink owned the Clinton County News in St. Johns when I started looking for a job. He hired me to go to the Gladwin County Record, in which he was also interested.

Later he brought me to St. Johns, then, 4 years later, when I wanted to buy the Oxford Leader, Ink gave me the advice of my young life.

Late one night he called me to his St. Johns' office. He said, "Jim, I've been thinking about what you're doing. You can't afford it. You haven't got enough working capital."

He borrowed on his life insurance and became part owner of the Leader. Together we had $10,000 in cash, no small amount for 1955 and a small business.

Within three months it was all gone. One machine, we felt was vital, cost $6,000. Yes, the machine was vital. It was our last move away from handset type.

The desire to be sole owner was strong, however, and after a year or two we agreed to terms. Ink took practically nothing for the use of his money and his advice. The latter we needed more than money.

Ink sold his paper, became president of the bank, and is now retired. How warming it was to hear from him.

A note from Duane DeLoach was most welcome. I read his Blissfield Advance for 22 years, right up until he sold it in 1977. Now at 73 he's teaching cross country skiing to 6 to 13 year olds in Marquette.

Duane had enough personal tragedies in life to cover a dozen families. He overcame them all with courage, reasoning, and patience. He, too, has been a source of learning in our earlier newspaper years. On his way home a call from Editor and Publisher, perhaps the best read newsmen's magazine in the country. Me, being interviewed?

The caller said, "With all the publicity you received in the Detroit papers, and Jim Fitzgerald, I wanted to talk to you."

I'm not sure I like being interviewed. I find myself reviewing my words long after the caller hangs up. Gosh, do the people we interview go through this mental anguish?

The mental anguish will soon be gone, but the messages of good luck and congratulations will long be remembered. That's a staid phrase, but I never have been original.

John shares the fun of discovering the beauty of rocks with a group of the youngsters.

And kids love it

Rock show stars retirees

By Kathy Greenfield

It was like magic when Sylvia Harken showed a group of youngsters a plain, ugly old rock, and then turned it around to reveal shining crystals.

Their appreciative "oohs and aaahs" filled the South Sashabaw Elementary School third grade classroom of Joette Kunse last week.

The geode with its crystal interior was one of a flock of rocks Sylvia and John Harken brought to show the children.

A retired couple, the Harkens have been putting on rock shows for kids since 1972.

When John retired, his children presented him with some lapidary tools because they knew he was interested in rocks, Sylvia said.

He then talked her into taking a lapidary class at Cranbrook in Bloomfield Hills.

"I was the only woman," she said. "You had to cut your own stones and trim them. I learned."

Sylvia's interest has grown so much she has begun silversmithing, designing jewelry and cutting her own stones for the hobby.

The Harkens, who are Waterford Township residents, have put on their rock show at two Clarkston schools--once for their grandson Denny's class at Clarkston Elementary and twice for South Sashabaw classes.

"It's quite interesting, especially with children that are interested," John said. "you get so many questions. Sometimes they stop you!"

The presentation includes quartz, dogtooth, agates, tiger eyes, jasper and petrified wood.

And when the Harkens have finished their mini-lecture, the youngsters are able to select two small tumble stones each.

As they gather around the plate holding the small gifts and make their choices, the bright, polished treasures are only outshone by the children's faces.

Sylvia Harken explains to the class where the rocks came from and how they were formed.

'If it Fitz. . .'

Zero in number world

by Jim Fitzgerald

I can never remember my phone numbers, home or office, my car license number or my zip code. I am completely awed by people who know their Social Security numbers by heart.

It is embarrassing. I went into a flower shop and bought some roses, charging the purchase to my Visa card. The clerk asked for my phone number. I don't know why. If she called me up to see if some rose nut had stolen my Visa card, I wouldn't be home. She could see that.

I STUTTERED. The only phone number I could bring to mind was 22651. That hasn't been my number since 1944 when I moved out of my parents' home at 1020 Pine Grove Ave. in Port Huron, Mich. We had that same phone number earlier when we lived at 928 Huron Ave. in the same city. I can remember all those 40-year-old numbers easily, but today's numbers keep slipping away.

Many people insist this is a sign of old age, but that's not true. Memory experts say birthdays are no excuse for forgetting. The ability to retain information in your mind doesn't necessarily recede as years go by. The problem is that when people get older, they often get more selfish with their concentration. They won't bother to memorize anything that isn't really important to them.

This explanation makes sense to me. I almost never call myself, so why should I memorize my phone numbers? I never write letters to myself, so why should I know my zip code? In the normal course of conversation, I'm hardly ever asked for the license number of my car. So...

On the rare occasions when I do need these numbers, I can always look them up in my wallet where they are recorded on various pieces of identification I always carry against the day when I forget who I am. But I can't look up my numbers if my reading glasses are at home and I'm not.

TO COMPOUND MY FLUSTER, it happened later on the same day I'd told the florist my phone number was 22651, the only five digit number in Detroit: Leaving a restaurant, I asked the parking valet to retrieve my Oldsmobile. He asked me for the license number.

I described the car by model, color and number of doors. The valet said they sold a million silver Oldsmobiles that year; didn't I know my own license number? Reluctantly, I admitted I didn't.

But I could look it up on the car registration in my wallet. Except I remembered I'd forgotten my glasses. My wife had read the menu to me. She wasn't there to read my license number because she was still back in the restaurant checking under our table to make sure I hadn't forgotten my feet.

I handed the registration to the parking valet and asked him to read the license number. He remarked that the registration wasn't for an Oldsmobile, it was for a Pacer. I told him I'd forgotten that my son had totaled that Pacer five years earlier, and I offered to walk home.

When my wife finally appeared with my feet, and the parking valet explained to her why I was crying, she said I had done dumber things. She told the valet about the time I couldn't remember my license number while registering at a Holiday Inn. I'd left my glasses in the car, but that really didn't matter, because I'd also left my wallet in the car. And I couldn't remember where I'd parked.

The parking valet was sympathetic, especially when he heard the climax of my wife's lousy little story: After a clerk at that Holiday Inn finally reunited me with my car, I drove across town for a dinner engagement. And then I returned to the motel and raised hell because my key wouldn't unlock my door. Another clerk informed me I was at the wrong Holiday Inn.

As for my Social Security number, it not only eludes me, it makes me yearn for the olden days when life was easier. I still have my original Social Security card, issued when I was 14 years old. When I pull it out of my wallet to get my number, I see my signature as I wrote it 39 years ago, in Spencerian penmanship. It is completely legible. If I signed my name that clearly today, it would be a lot easier for me to find out who I am.

Is your dog gone?

By Joe Armstrong,
Independence Township Animal Control Officer

Feb. 6, 1980, 9:22 a.m.

The phone rang at 9:22. "Independence Animal Control," the dispatcher answered.

The woman at the other end started her story . . . "I really hate to call, but it can't wait any longer. I must give him up. Please come before the kids get home from school."

(Dispatcher) "Radio to 420."

(Animal Control) "420, go ahead."

(Dispatcher) "You've got a give-up at ----"

(Animal Control) "10-4."

(dispatcher) "9:27."

I've gone on many give-up calls. They're the worst kind. The residents always place part of their lives in the back of the truck.

Why do I have to be there?

On one give-up call, the woman said, "I'll see you in court!"

What could I have done wrong? She called me!

I went over all the procedures in my mind twice before she told me that she works at the 51st District Court . . . so that's why I'll see her in court. Whew!

(Animal Control) "10-23."

(Dispatcher) "At 9:33."

Love 'em and Leave 'em...with Luwasa® Hydroculture

NEW from Jackson & Perkins®

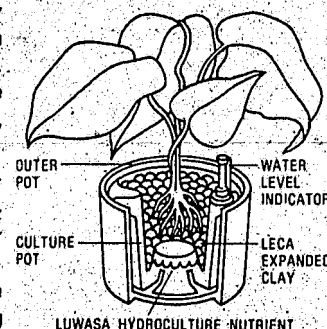

- Plants take care of themselves for weeks with no tending!
- No over or under watering! ■ Plants grow better than in soil!
- No soil borne diseases or bacteria! ■ No messy repotting!
- No dripping pots to damage carpets or furniture!
- Growing medium never wears out!

THE FINEST SYSTEM FOR GROWING PLANTS WITHOUT SOIL!

In the Luwasa Hydroculture system, the roots of the plant grow in a special clay pebble medium called Leca® Expanded Clay. The Leca is contained in a culture pot, which fits down into an outer pot holding a water/nutrient solution. By means of a capillary action, the Leca draws solution up to the roots. The plant uses as much air, water, and nutrient as it needs . . . grows steadily, beautifully, without any tending for weeks at a time! All you do is occasionally refill the system with water/nutrient solution, when a built-in Water Level Indicator tells you it's time. Luwasa eliminates the guessing, as well as the work and attention required by house plants in soil, and you get remarkable results!

COMPLETE INSTRUCTIONS WITH EVERY PLANTER — TELL YOU HOW TO MOVE YOUR SOIL GROWN PLANTS TO J&P's LUWASA® HYDRO-CULTURE SYSTEMS.

Introduce a friend to Luwasa. The planters make great gifts as-is . . . even nicer with plants growing in them.

Truck purchase gets OK

The bid procedure was waived and the purchase of a 1979 half-ton Chevrolet pick-up truck for $4,943 was approved by the Independence Township Board last week.

The truck is to be used by the building department inspectors, said supervisor Whitey Tower after the meeting.

Originally, three bids were to be taken for a 1980 truck, but "it came back to our attention that we could get an on-lot (1979) vehicle at a savings of $600," Tower said.

"The only time we've ever waived bid procedure was for a police car or for an on-lot vehicle like this one," he said.

The truck is to replace a station wagon that will "go into minimum bid sale come spring," Tower said. "I call it the junk sale."

The truck, equipped with heavy-duty springs and extra mirrors, is to be purchased from Rademacher Chevrolet, Independence Township.

The point after

by Al Zawacky

Coach Gary Nustad, ever the diplomat in his references to rival teams, called the Waterford Kettering Captains "physical" following his team's 71-45 win over the Caps two weeks ago.

Having never been much of a diplomat, I'd like to borrow an ice hockey term and simply label the Captains "a bunch of hacks." They deserve the title.

It's a safe bet that if the game had gotten underway without a basketball, the "Hack-tains" probably would have played three quarters before realizing it. Who needs a ball when your primary game plan revolves around the elbow, the knee and the cheap shot?

Late in the second half--when the "Hack-tains" trailed by 30 points, mind you--Tim McCormick went down in a heap and momentarily appeared to be injured.

His "Hack-tain" assailant responded by leaping to his feet, pointing his finger at the Clarkston center and "nanny-nannering" him in a manner worthy of any elementary school playground.

Real class, guy. A year from now when you're tightening bolts on Fords somewhere, this man will be playing college ball, most probably at a major university.

DON'T GET THE impression that the Wolfpack wasn't dishing it out, too. There was plenty of retaliation going on--which has to make you wonder about the quality of the officiating.

But Clarkston showed a lot of poise in refusing to lose their cool. They played their defense. They ran their offense. And when the contest was over, the scoreboard verified the Captains' second humiliation of the season: 71-45.

There was something terribly gratifying in just gazing up at the amber lights forming these two numerals. They seemed to verify that in basketball--unlike some other sports--talent, not cheap shot "intimidation" tactics, decide the outcome.

The Wolfpack just happened to have quite a bit more of the former and virtually none of the latter when compared with the Captains.

At first glance, this might look like an album cover for a new rock band called "Jerry and the Lakers." In actuality, it's Clarkston's Jerry Tatu [center rear] looking for a rebound along with West Bloomfield players [from left] Al Morris, Brad Silverstein and Dave Butler.

Wolfpack now 15-0

By Al Zawacky

West Bloomfield basketball coach John Cvengros took a page out of Rochester's playbook Friday night--and was just about as successful as the Falcons were in containing undefeated and no. 1 ranked Clarkston.

Using the same tactics that Rochester tried three weeks ago, Cvengros' team stalled and delayed--so much so that it took them until the 6:58 mark of the second quarter to score their first point.

In the meantime, the Wolfpack juggernaut scored nearly every time they had the ball, rolling up a 24-4 lead at the half before finally settling for a 60-43 victory, their 15th in a row.

"I thought we handled the stall very well--better than we did against Rochester," Wolfpack coach Gary Nustad said. "We kept changing defenses on them--we'd go with a half court press, then relax into a zone, then go to an aggressive man to man."

West Bloomfield's 26-point fourth quarter and the less than sterling performance by the Clarkston reserves left the Wolfpack coach visibly upset--but philosophical as well.

"It was pointless to keep the starters on the floor," Nustad said. "We certainly didn't feel we had to prove anything against this club, and I feel that all the kids should have the opportunity to play."

"The kids who played in that fourth quarter were disappointed in their own performance. They worked hard in practice, and are just as much a part of our no. 1 ranking as anybody. They'll come back and play better ball next time."

Statistically, the Wolfpack was paced in scoring and rebounding by 6-foot 10 star center Tim McCormick, who scored 18 points, pulled down eight rebounds and blocked six shots as well.

Scott McKoin also continued his outstanding play with 16 points, while Steve Swanson led the Laker attack with 14.

The Wolfpack's next contest will be Wednesday at the Pontiac Silverdome, as Clarkston and Davison square off for a non-league game at 5:20 p.m.

"Everybody is excited about playing there," Nustad said of his team's Silverdome appearance. "It's a great opportunity for all the kids, but once we get on the court we've got to eliminate all the hoopla and play like it's just another ball game."

Davison is a very good club--I'm sure they've improved since we last played them (A 51-39 Clarkston victory in the season opener on Dec. 7)--but then so have we.

Athlete of the week

Linda Foster doesn't believe in being a specialist.

Serving, hitting, passing--the senior spiker has been doing it all for Clarkston High.

School's first place volleyball team this season.

"Of all my girls, Linda's one of the most all-around," says her coach, Linda Denstaedt. "In serving she's averaged one to two aces a night, and has only made one service error all season--that's one mistake in about 80 serves."

Her passing and hitting have been equally impressive, Denstaedt says.

"Against Rochester, 47 percent of Linda's passes were perfect, while in our Andover game she aces 20 percent of her serves and killed 50 percent of her hits."

For those two performances, Linda Foster is this week's Clarkston News Athlete of the Week.

"She's just an extremely steady player," Denstaedt concludes. "We can always count on her consistency."

"She's always a standout in at least one area week after week."

Grapplers take league title

By Al Zawacky

For the first time since 1969, Clarkston High School is the home of a league champion wrestling team.

Coach Rick Detkowski's champs wrapped up their Greater Oakland Activities League title Saturday, outdistancing second place Milford by 36 points in the league tournament held at Milford High School.

Final team scores were Clarkston 172½, Milford 136½, Waterford Kettering 122, West Bloomfield 104, Rochester 95½ and Bloomfield Hills Andover 46.

"Everybody wrestled really well," Detkowski said later. "Lance Jewett and Todd Thompson both beat guys that they had lost to earlier in the season—that gives you an idea of the kind of effort we got from all our guys."

The Wolves placed eight of their thirteen wrestlers in the finals and came out with three first place winners: Mike Ogans at 145 pounds, Mike Conway at 98 pounds and Jeff Miracle at 132 pounds.

Second place honors went to Craig Gavette at 105 pounds, Claude Gourand at 155, Tom Hecker at 185, Mark Karrick at 198 and Paul Carr in the heavyweight class.

Also placing for the Wolves were Lance Jewett, Todd Thompson and Bruce Burwitz in third and Dale Fulcher in fourth.

The only weight class Clarkston didn't place in was at 138, where the wolves had lost the services of senior co-captain Scott Smith to a knee injury.

"Now we've got the districts coming up this Saturday at Rochester Adams," Detkowski said. "Clarkston's never won a district title in wrestling, but we're going to be going for it."

"I'd also like to thank the fans and the parents for all the support they given us this season. We had good attendance at our meets this year, and I know it made a difference in the way we wrestled."

Clarkston's Mike Ogans [top] took first place in his weight class at the league tournament held Saturday. Here he is in action at the Wolves final dual meet against West Bloomfield last week.

Waterford Kettering, 57, Bloomfield Hills Andover, 56: Kettering rallied from a six-point deficit at the start of the fourth quarter to nip Andover 57-56.

Kettering's defense managed to limit Andover's leading scorer Tim Meter to only 14 points, half his season average, while Jerry Wood led the Captain attack with 20.

Rochester, 76, Milford, 34: Kris Ribant and Steve Hohf led a balanced attack with 18 and 10 points respectively to lead Rochester to a 76-34 beating of winless Milford.

The victory tightened Rochester's grip on second place in the GOAL, upping its league mark to 6-2 and overall record to 9-5.

Wolfpack tracks

MIXED EMOTIONS: It was difficult to tell who won Friday night's Clarkston-West Bloomfield contest from the way the teams were reacting in their respective locker rooms afterwards.

The Lakers, defeated by 17 points, were smiling while the Wolfpack groused over a lackluster fourth quarter, during which West Bloomfield scored 26 points to make the final score sound semi-respectable.

The Lakers' reaction would seem to imply that a 17 point loss to Clarkston is tantamount to victory.

The Wolfpack won't ever receive a finer compliment.

HE DID IT ONCE-HE'D DO IT AGAIN: West Bloomfield coach John Cvengros staunchly defended his stalling strategy after Friday night's loss, even though it resulted in a disastrous 24-4 deficit at halftime.

"This was the first time I've tried it (the stall) in my career, and I'd do it again," Cvengros said. "I'm not overly disappointed with the way it worked--in the three previous games I coached against Clarkston, we were never in the ball game."

"Clarkston would always control the temp right from the start. So we figured why not sit on the basketball?"

Judging by the boos that bellowed out of the stands in response to the Lakers' tactics, it's clear that the Clarkston faithful feel that benches, not basketballs, are made to be sat on.

FORTUITOUS FIRST NAME: The CHS athletic department will be forever grateful that star center Tim McCormick was christened with such an ideal first name.

On sale at the concession stand Friday night were gold t-shirts emblazoned with the single word: "inTIMidation."

We won't even speculate what the t-shirts would say if the Wolfpack's outstanding pivot had a first name like "Ralph".

Alexander's for Greek, Italian, American fare

Greek, Italian and American foods all prepared fresh to order are the fare at Alexander's Dining and Cocktails, recently opened at 6722 Dixie, Independence Township.

"We feature family dining," says Chris Nicholas, who manages and co-owns the salad and the barbequed spare ribs, according to Nick Nicholas, who supervises the culinary aspects of the business. Other menu items include a sweet Grecian desert, Baklava, and freshly baked warm breadsticks.

"It's just traditional good food," Nick Nicholas says. "And everything is prepared fresh."

Having just obtained a liquor license, Alexander's also offers a full service bar including beer on tap, wine and mixed drinks.

The restaurant business is nothing new to the Nicholas brothers.

"It's been a family tradition for years," Chris Nicholas says. "I've been working in and managing restaurants all the way back during the depression."

Alexander's is also a family-run operation. Besides the two brothers, Chris Nicholas' son Paul runs the bar, brother-in-law Charles Alle handles the dining room, and numerous other family members partake in the business's day to day operation.

Construction of the building began last summer. There are many little innovations.

"We put the kitchen as close to the dining area as we could," Chris Nicholas says. "It'll give our customers better service."

"One thing you learn in this business: When people come in, they want to eat right then. Nobody likes to wait--and it's important that the waitress is friendly and treats them nice, too."

Another touch seldom seen in full service restaurants is a rear window through which carry-out pizzas can be picked up.

"We're not using it right now," Chris Nicholas says, explaining that the window's operation will have to be approved by the township.

"But the whole idea is to keep the extra traffic out of the dining area, which might disturb our customers."

Clarks thrive on self-sufficiency

Country Living

By Kathy Greenfield

Most people groan when utility bills arrive and decide to turn off extra lights and lower thermostats.

There are others like Michael and Lisa Clark who have found alternate ways to heat their homes and to cut electricity expenses.

The Clarks have managed to reduce costs for utilities to such an extent that they proudly tell how much their bills total--$17.25 in December and $8.68 in November.

Because they use a wood-burning furnace in their home that sits on 40 wooded acres on Clintonville Road, Independence Township, their only expense is the electricity bill.

And although some of their cost-saving methods are unusual, the comfort of their home is accented by the short-sleeved shirt Michael wears as he talks about their way of living.

"It's basically self-sufficiency without giving anything up," he said.

The couple and their one-year-old daughter Shannon, moved to Independence Township in September.

Their plan was to make it through the winter using fuel oil for home heating.

When Michael called the oil company, the representative said it would cost $450 to fill the two tanks and that he didn't know when delivery could be made, Michael said.

"The next day, I cut the line," Michael said, and he reconverted the old furnace back to its original wood-burning state.

Come Springtime, the Clarks plan to install solar heat, reducing their utility bills by the amount it takes to run the electric hot water heater.

A switch to turn off the hot water heater they now use is located in the kitchen and turned on once a day to provide enough hot water for their needs.

The water in the tank stays warm enough throughout the day for washing hands, they said, and if boiling water is needed, an electric tea kettle is used at a far lower cost than keeping a whole tank of water hot.

A small toaster-oven is used for baking.

It took some practice, Lisa said, but she can now cook meat, fish, potatoes and canned goods on a small grill in the fireplace.

Michael, Lisa and little Shannon Clark have found ways to save money and conserve on energy use in their home on Clintonville Road in Independence Township.

"They don't get black any more," she said about the pots and pans. "I've gotten past that."

"You have to have your fire right," she explained. "It can't be so hot that it chars the bottoms."

The advantage of fireplace cooking is that the flavor is better, she said.

"I like the idea of having to use fossil fuel to cook," Michael added.

A bonus is that if the electricity goes out, the Clarks have little to worry about.

"I can walk down to the end of the sidewalk and get water, I have heat and I can cook," Lisa said.

The wood-burning furnace is to be used as a back-up heat source after the Clarks install their solar heating unit.

It takes a considerable amount of wood to take care of their needs, but Michael said he enjoys the cutting and chopping tasks.

"I'd just as soon be outdoors chopping wood rather than playing racquetball or tennis," he said.

The 40 acres their home sits on lends itself to other environmental concerns like preserving the area for the mink, raccoon, possum, muskrat and beaver that live there. Hunting is not allowed.

Apple trees, grapevines and raspberries grow on the land, and the soil is excellent for gardening, Lisa said.

They've already lined up other couples to help with the large co-operative garden they plan.

The Clarks are no strangers to the area--Lisa grew up in Independence Township and Michael's grandfather, Robert Clark, owned the land where they now live.

Michael came from an Air Force family and moving was a way of life, but on many holidays and summers Michael remembers staying with his grandfather, who left him the property when he died in 1978.

A goal of Michael's is to donate much of the property as a nature preserve, because that was a wish of his grandfather, who built the home they live in in 1929 and taught Michael ways to live off the land and to be conservative with energy uses.

"I don't credit myself with coming up with these ideas," he said. "If it wasn't for him, I wouldn't have known about it."

Michael moved to Independence Township to live with his grandfather while attending the University of Detroit.

His major was architecture and Michael said his interest was solar heating.

He quit college 33 hours short of a master's degree and entered the solar energy field, representing manufacturers and doing consulting work in Florida.

He is working in the solar heating field in Michigan now, and plans to make their home a showcase to prove solar heating can work in a northern state.

"People have taken for granted so long that our resources will last forever," he said.

Although the solar heat installation is expensive, costs of oil, gas and electricity are going to continue to rise, he said, and there are now tax credits that, for instance, reduce the actual cost of installing solar water heaters from $2,300 to about $1,100.

The couple has found moving back to Michigan from Florida to their liking.

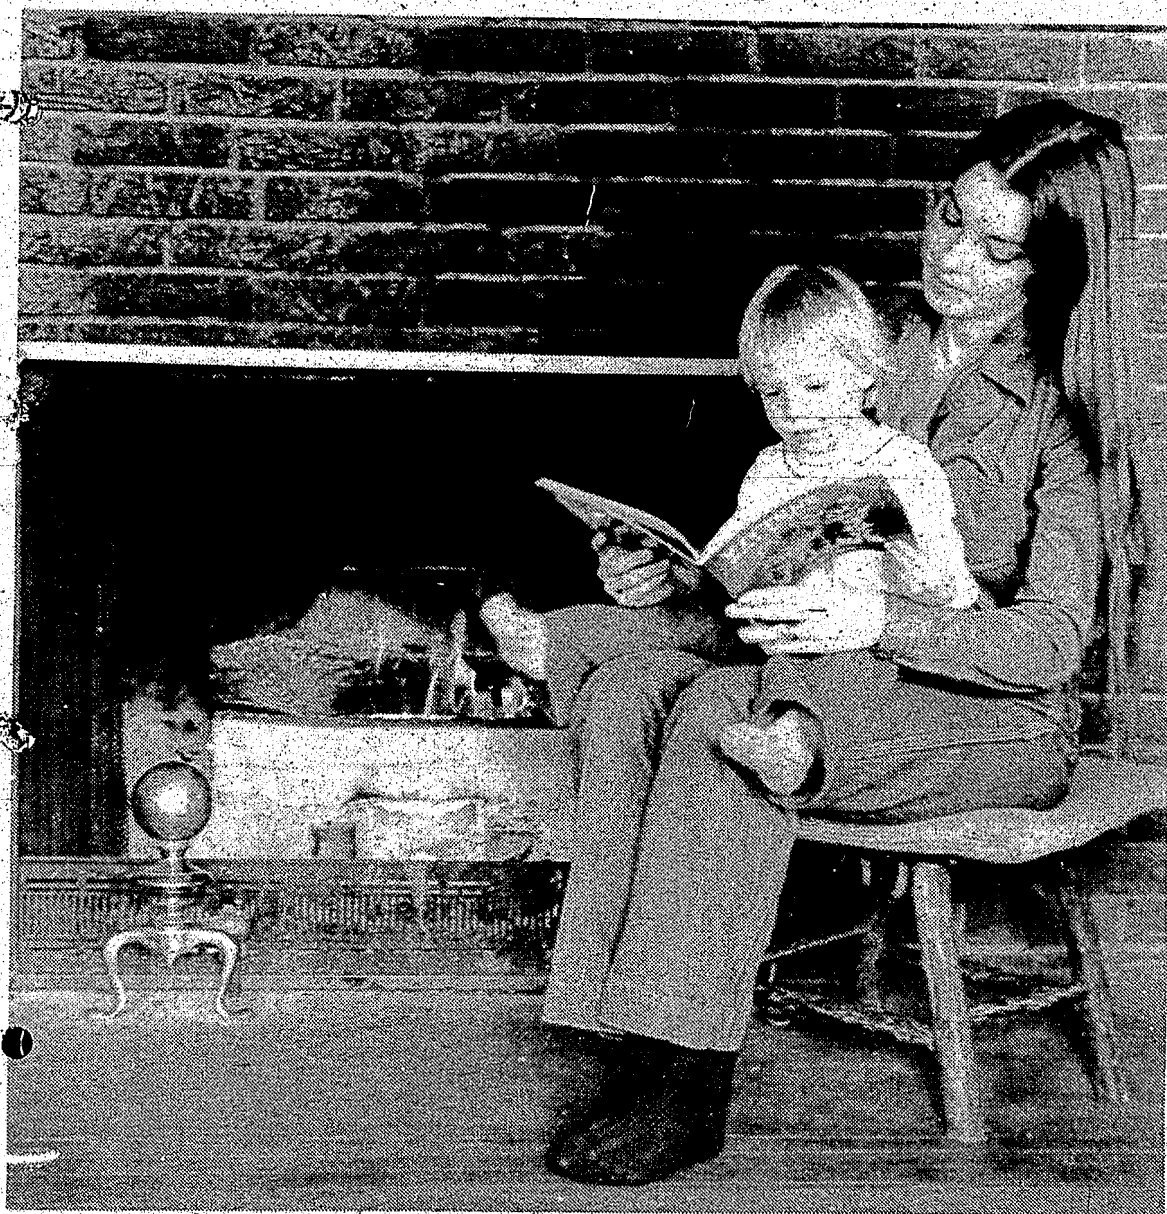

Although winters there were warmer, summers required air conditioning--their highest electricity bill was $256 during a summer month.

"Florida was the pits the more we think about it," Lisa said. "To have real trees, to have real wood smells, to get back to real dirt...."

"We really consider this place to be home," Michael said. "I lived longer in Japan than any other single place. This is to us coming home."

More Country Living

Though not needed for warmth, the Clarks keep a fire burning in their fireplace and use it for cooking food when the coals are ready.

in advance and the child who guesses the correct number will win the coins and a free lunch.

Whoever guesses the correct weight of the "gold-painted nugget" at each school to promote the Feb. 26 meal will also win a free lunch.

The idea is to get children to give hot lunches a try, Dillon said.

"Quite a few have never tried the hot lunch," she said. "They've just been in a pattern of bringing lunch from home."

Although many homemade lunches are nutritious, "some I've seen recently are rather skimpy," she said.

And many include junk food. "Even if a good, nutritious lunch is made, they eat the junk food first and a few bites of the sandwich," she said.

Some recent menu changes should encourage the youngsters to eat properly, though.

The menus now have more repetition of the children's favorite foods.

"We're going to serve them what they want," Dillon said.

In addition, the food served to the children is all homemade and convenience food is not used, she said.

Although the special menu days will feature basically the same type of food served daily, the names have been changed to create interest.

The Presidents' Day menu includes Spaghetti Mt. Vernon and Lincoln Log (roll and butter) or Monticello Hamburger served with Martha's Green Beans, White House Carrots, Patriotic Pineapple and Madison's milk.

The Gold Rush menu features Setters' Special (chili) and Miner Roll or Gold Mine Subs with Green Bean Spikes, Carrot Nuggets, Strike-it-rich Apple Pie and White Lightning (milk).

Recipe File

By Lorna Bickerstaff

Maralee Cook is sharing her wild rice casserole with The Clarkston News this week. Maralee, and her husband Ty reside in Waterford Township. Maralee said the casserole may be made ahead and then reheated.

Wild Rice Casserole

- 1 c. wild rice
- 3 c. boiling water
- 2 c. cream of chicken soup
- 2 c. sliced mushrooms
- 2 bouillon cubes dissolved in 2 c. water
- 1 c. boiling water
- 1½ t. salt
- ¼ t. celery salt, onion salt, garlic salt, paprika
- 1 crumbled bay leaf
- 6 T. or ½ c. chopped onion
- 4 T. butter or oil
- 1½ lbs. ground round steak
- pinch thyme
- chopped parsley
- ½ c. sliced almonds

Pour 3 cups boiling water over rice, let stand 15 minutes, drain. Add other ingredients. Brown onion in oil in another pan, add beef, brown. Add to remaining ingredients. Butter casserole.

Let stand overnight in refrigerator. Bake at 325 degrees in oven 1½ hours covered, plus ½ hour uncovered. (Lots of moisture to be absorbed. Serves 8-10 generously.)

If you can't find wild rice, use Uncle Ben's long grain and wild rice. Just eliminate his spice package. Pre-cooked rice gets too soggy in this casserole.

by Rustie Leaf

10 YEARS AGO February 12, 1979

A capacity crowd of 350 people met at the Clarkston High School to honor Elizabeth Ronk, Clarkston's Postmaster for the past 34 years, after her recent retirement.

Five Village Republicans will vie for places on the March ballot. The five GOP candidates are: Fred Davidson, Ronald Draper, Robert C. Jones, Nelson Kimball and David K. Westlund.

A very energetic couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ray D. Taylor. They belong to the "Dudes and Dolls" and were part of a large group that traveled to Sarnia, Canada for a weekend of square dancing.

Demolition crews appear to have swept into the Dixie Highway-M-15 intersection and totaled the Roy Brothers Standard station, however, from the pile of rubble emerged a new station that will be doing business shortly.

25 YEARS AGO February 10, 1955

The Chevrolet Agency in this area is now known as Haskins Chevrolet, Inc. with Roy Haskins of Detroit as president. Leo J. Torney, also of Detroit, is General Manager.

The big moment of the January meeting came for the Clarkston Pioneer Club when entertainment was introduced. He was the 84 year old magician, Augustus A. Rapp, from Colon, Michigan.

Tax tips

By George Bennett

Dependents and deductions for dependents

A dependent is, generally, a relative or individual who lives with the taxpayer and is a legal member of his (her) household who receives over half of his (her) support from the taxpayer.

Items of support include food, lodging, education, medical care, recreation and similar necessities.

In addition, a capital item (e.g., an automobile and furniture) must be included in the support computation, if it is in fact a support item.

A capital item which benefits other members of the household as well as the potential dependent is not considered a support item.

Examples:

A) Mary gives her son a $5,000 automobile for his exclusive use.

The cost is included in computing the son's total support and the proportion provided by Mary.

However, if the son purchased the car and expends another $1,000 for his support, Mary must provide the son with support items worth $6,001 in order to meet the over-half support test.

B) At Christmas, Fred gives his son a lawnmower to ease his lawn trimming chores. Since the lawnmower is acquired for general household purposes, rather than the son's personal benefit, it is not considered a support item.

A taxpayer is entitled to a $1,000 deduction for each dependent supported over half by the taxpayer and:

Whose gross taxable income is less than $1,000 or

Who is a child of the taxpayer and is either under 19 or a full-time student.

Questions most often asked about genuine top grain leather.

Q. Is genuine leather hard to care for or does it need special cleaners?

A. Definitely not! Of all upholstery materials, it's the longest lasting and needs the least care. Mild soap on a damp cloth is all you ever need for any normal stain.

Q. Imitation leather tears easily along stitching. Will genuine upholstery leather do this?

A. No, indeed. Impartial tests prove that genuine leather is 151% stronger along stitching than the next-best substitute.

Q. Will leather soften under hot sun, as imitations do?

A. No, it won't. Beneath the finish, the porous surface of genuine leather "breathes", keeping it cool and firm.

Q. Why should I pay more for leather?

A. Because genuine leather gives you so much more satisfaction—in terms of beauty, and long wear. You never need slip covers, and you never need to pay for dry-cleaning, so you save all the extra cost and then some in a very short time.

Q. Will leather crack with age?

A. Not at all. You may be thinking of the leather upholstery your grand-father had. The new upholstery leather has a wonderful miracle finish that stays soft, gleaming, and flexible.

Q. Are there different finishes for leather?

A. Yes. Genuine upholstery leather is available to you in a wide range of finishes and textures, from high-gloss to matt—from sleek to hand-crumpled—and many others.

Her decorations take the cake

By Kathy Greenfield

People have come back to see her before their second marriages.

Whatever movie characters are the latest rage soon become a large part of her life.

She received a kiss from Bobby Vinton, met Bert Bacharach, and was called and thanked by Liza Minelli.

None of these things would have happened if she wasn't a cake decorator, says Candy Margetson.

Candy, who lives with her daughter Heidi on Windward Court in Independence Township, has been practicing the art for some nine-and-one-half years at her parents' bakery, Pete's Oven in Waterford Township.

She began her career while working in the bakery alongside her father Pete Nelson, who does nearly all the baking, and her mother Jean.

The family owned a bakery in northern Michigan for about 15 years and then moved to the present location about 11 years ago.

For the first year, her father decorated all the cakes.

"I would watch him and he would work so many hours baking," Candy said. "By the time he got to the decorating, it was really bad. So I picked up a tube and helped him."

"I ended up with all the tubes," she laughed. "I guess it was the wrong move."

When she first started decorating the cakes, all were done with flowers and handwritten greetings.

Colors of buttercream frostings were applied with pastry tubes.

Then a customer changed all that.

"She had a napkin she wanted copied," so Candy agreed to try, she said.

Now there are about 1,000 choices on file for decorations, and Candy also copies people's faces from photographs, buildings, landscapes, and she still copies napkin designs.

The customer who started it all is still a bakery regular.

"I don't even know if she knows she was responsible," Candy said.

At first, all designs were done freehand, but Candy now uses "gadgets."

A machine that projects images on the cakes makes outlining with colored gel faster and a spraying tool allows food colors to go on quickly giving the designs their realistic, hand-painted look.

Candy's only training in art was a class she took while still in grade school.

"I love art," she said. "I've found you're much more creative if you get a little training and go off on your own."

Her favorite decorations are those for children--the Muppets are most popular now--portraits of graduates in their caps and gowns and landscapes.

"You just have to be kind of fussy," she said. "The more realistic they look, the more fun I have.

"It's just like giving a painting. The only problem is they eat them--all the hours of work and they're gone in a short time."

There are, however, some customers who have been so pleased with the results they froze the cakes and take them out from time to time to show others her creations, Candy said.

The decorations can be expensive--portraits cost about $15 not including the cake and some decorations are as much as $25 to $30.

And the work can be exhausting--special events like graduation can mean 20-hour work days.

Through all the summers she spent while growing up helping in the bakery, Candy said she never thought she'd end up decorating cakes for a living.

"We all helped out as a family will do, but I never expected to end up here," she said. "It's just something that I enjoy."

Most popular cakes for kids are those of the latest movie or television stars. Here, Candy sprays purple food coloring on Miss Piggy's gown to give the cake its finishing touch.

When it comes to writing greetings on her cakes, Candy uses a pastry tube and colored gel.

Coping with kids

Deal with homosexuality with honesty

Suppose you have an adolescent or young child and that young person comes to you and says with anxiety that they are gay. What do you do?

This is not so far fetched. And it may happen with increasing frequency as barriers and prejudices against homosexuals and the gay life style are lifted.

Most parents, it is assumed, want their children to grow up with healthy attitudes about sexuality and with the ability to relate to both men and women. In our society, however, most parents want their children to prefer people of the opposite sex for intimate, loving relationships.

If a mother or father is really caught off guard by the declaration of a gay lifestyle preference, they may not know what to say.

Most often, it seems, there will have been indications of inclinations long before it is announced.

Comments or friendships most often are accurate predictions of what is to come with our children. A parent who is taken by surprise may have little to say but the disappointment in their face or speech may be quite visible.

Some parents may say, "And why shouldn't I be disappointed and hurt?"

These parents may well see a child who appears to prefer a gay life as a direct insult or a blatant criticism of the parent's life and sexuality.

That might be too hard for some mothers and fathers (perhaps particularly fathers) to accept and the anger may be almost overwhelming.

If the tendency is to rant or rail at the young person, the battle ground for the future may be set up. It may be next to impossible for there ever to be understanding or for the young person to later change his or her mind.

One of the advantages of our present open and fairly tolerant society is that young people can try out roles and identities, sexual or otherwise.

Homosexuality has lost its designation as a psychiatric illness by official action of the American Psychiatric Association.

But, it can still be used as a refuge for a person who feels they do not belong in a group or in society in general.

Likewise, it can also be a way to rebel against parents who may have set themselves up for such rebellion.

For parents who are overly tolerant, it could even be a way for a young person to test limits and to try to elicit some reaction or boundary-setting by the parents.

There is probably no one right thing to say or do should your grown-up child approach you and confide that he or she is gay. Having some of the above possibilities in mind may help in the formulation of a response that combines honesty and understanding.

Kids tackle toothy task

Charles Alkire takes to the giant toothbrush and demonstrates how to brush on the giant teeth held by Christy Foes, a Clarkston High School junior enrolled in the dental assisting program at Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center. Christy and Lisa Blumenau, a student at Our Lady of the Lakes High School in Waterford Township, talked to the Pine Lake Elementary School pupils about dental health last week in honor of National Dental Health Week.

Wearing her birthday crown, Melissa Ferguson takes part in the presentation to promoting good dental health by brushing the teeth held by Christy.

After listening to Christy and Lisa talk about diet, and why and when to brush your teeth, Amanda King shows the proper way to brush teeth using circular strokes.
