For hotel building permit or $30 million

Pine Knob sues township

By Kathy Greenfield

Pine Knob Investments is asking for $30 million in damages if Independence Township does not issue a building permit for the resort's proposed skyscraper hotel.

A lawsuit against the township was filed Monday at Oakland County Circuit Court.

The lawsuit asks the court to order Independence Township to allow a 20-story, ski-run-roof hotel on the Pine Knob property.

"We're alleging (Independence Township has) denied Pine Knob the use that they have had since they've owned the property," said Thomas Raguso, attorney for Pine Knob Investments partners Joseph Locricchio and Gary Francell.

"(Pine Knob) has continued to develop that property as a ski resort and wishes to continue doing so and the township has denied the right to do so," Raguso said.

A show-cause hearing has been scheduled for March 19 at 8:30 a.m. before Circuit Court Judge Francis X. O'Brien.

The 600-room resort, convention hotel had been under consideration by various township bodies since last March, with the final township action Nov. 28 when the zoning board of appeals upheld building department Director Timothy Palulian's denial to issue a building permit.

In October, township voters denied the hotel use, rescinding the township board's earlier approval, by a 71 percent majority.

Amusement park gets go-ahead

By Kathy Greenfield

An amusement park at Pine Knob has been approved in concept by the Independence Township Planning Commission.

The vote was 6-2 at the meeting Feb. 14.

The conceptual plan included 12 rides with a 1920s theme on approximately five acres located between the music theater and the ski hill.

Heights ranging from 88 feet to 225 feet were mentioned for two possible rides--a giant ferris wheel and a parachute drop.

In addition, a year-round aerial tram going to and from the Hamburger Mansion was included in plans. Otherwise, the rides would be in operation only during the music theater season, according to Gary Francell, Pine Knob co-owner with Joseph Locricchio.

Planning commission members voting to approve the concept of an amusement park for Pine Knob based their decision on an opinion by township attorney Richard Campbell.

In a letter, Campbell said "...the judicial attitude would probably be one favoring the amusement park..."

Concerns voiced by planning commission members included possible expansion of the amusement park, objections by Borg-Warner Equities Corp. of Chicago that owns some 200 acres of the about 500-acre Pine Knob complex, and height of rides, hours of operation and possible noise.

The final site plan would have to include a legal description, requiring the developers to return for permission to expand, and the concept approval would only apply to Pine Knob, township planner Tod Kilroy said.

"I think this is important, that we're not determining the fact that any amusement facility can go in any recreation area," said commission member John Gray.

"I would like the planning commission to set boundaries for 'The Wonderful World of Pine Knob'," added commission member James Gardiner. "Hours is another area. It is pretty well established that 1 a.m. would be the limit. This is something I feel comfortable with if it goes no later than that."

Twenty-four $200,000 condominiums have been constructed on the Pine Knob property and a total of 650 dwellings are planned by Borg-Warner.

Objections to the amusement park were raised by Borg-Warner attorney Timothy Mast.

"I urge that you conclude as I have that the use is incompatible with the zoning and the development of the adjacent district, and it's not compatible with the community," Mast said.

Noise and possible heights on rides were also mentioned by the attorney.

"Whether or not it (the giant ferris wheel) will be visible, we're not certain at this point," he said. "We feel quite certain we'll be affected by it."

The ski hill and golf course provide a buffer between the proposed amusement park and the condominiums, Francell said, and snow-making equipment that runs all night makes more noise than the rides would.

When the final site plan is presented to the commission, "some pretty severe limitations" would be placed on height, hours and noise, said planning commission Chairman James Smith.

Although Smith said he shared concerns about compatibility with residential areas, the plans were made for the portion of Pine Knob devoted to recreation.

"You can't go to Pine Knob without agreeing it is an amusement area," he said.

Income from the amusement park would offset expenses when skiing conditions are poor, said Anthony Locricchio, Pine Knob attorney.

"Last year it was too cold to ski," he said. "This year we had no snow until very recently, so what we are looking for is a balance in the summer."

Voting to approve the concept were James Brennan, Gardiner, Gray, Rudy Lozano, Smith and Mel Vaara.

Voting against conceptual approval were Jean Benzing and Jean Saile.

"I personally don't like the amusement park idea, but it would appear it's legally compatible," said Brennan, who lives on Sashabaw Road. "While I can understand the feelings presented by Borg-Warner, at least they're lucky. I'm on the north side of the hill."

Fire department on its own in getting millage on ballot

If the Independence Township residents wish to place a request for up to 10 mills for fire protection on the ballot, they're going to have to do it themselves.

"No action is better than any action," said Supervisor Whitey Tower at last night's township board meeting when board members declined to act on a ballot proposal by Fire Chief Frank Ronk.

"If they (fire department members) are going to go off with the petitions, why set the whole thing off with a resounding negative vote from the board?" Tower asked.

Ronk submitted a request to the township board to either place the millage on the ballot or decide not to, so petitions could be signed by township residents that would require putting the question to a vote.

Designating the entire township as a special assessment district, the ballot request would ask for "up to 10 mills for operations, maintenance, equipment, building, land--whatever you need to operate a fire department," said Treasurer Frederick Ritter.

"I don't think it's something we should get into," said Clerk Christopher Rose. "I don't think we should ask for 10 mills carte blanche.

Although Ronk is an "aggressive" department director, Ritter said other township departments need money.

"I think we understand where (Ronk's) coming from, because he's committed to give the best service," Ritter said, but money is especially needed for the township library and the police budget.

"I think it will fail--an exercise in futility," said Trustee William Vandermark. "Public fear would be that you would levy the full 10 mills ultimately."

"I think it's a lousy proposal," said Trustee Jerry Powell. "The problem is if (Ronk) goes out and does it himself, we have no choice but to place it on the ballot."

"I can't see having a special election just to see if the people want to levy 10 mills on themselves forever," he said.

Independence reserve unit folds

The Independence Township reserve police unit will be permanently off-duty beginning Feb. 29.

The township board voted 6-0 at last night's meeting to dissolve the local reserve unit, locate the animal control services in the building department office and vacate the former police services building for use by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

The decision came as a result of township attorney Richard Campbell's opinion that reserve officers could not issue tickets under state statutes unless there was one full-time police officer on the staff.

Campbell also recommended that the township reserves should not attempt patrol or traffic control at the Pine Knob Music Theatre.

"I see no reason why we should stay active for just a few games and a few parades," reserve Sgt. Charles Smalley said.

Options discussed include designating the township supervisor's daughter Beth Tower, a certified police officer now serving as dispatcher for animal control, as a full-time officer.

Reserve officer Michael Darby of Reese Road also volunteered to fill the full-time position for $1 a year.

But township board members said the decision had been made to eliminate a local police department with the dissolution of township police services on Feb. 3.

"I was on the minority side when the vote was taken, 4-3, to disband the police services," said Trustee Jerry Powell. "I think it's time we realized that motion passed. If that means we have to disband the reserves, then dammit, we'd better disband the reserves. It's unfortunately very clear."

'Sale no sure thing'

Even if the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission decides to make an offer to purchase some 300 acres of the Pine Knob complex, the sale isn't a sure thing, says Pine Knob attorney Anthony Locricchio.

The topic was briefly discussed last week at the Independence Township Planning Commission meeting where the concept of an amusement park at Pine Knob was approved.

"The county has not made a definite offer in any way—they're studying a proposal," Locricchio said. "Pine Knob has not given the county a definite price."

"The situation with the county is not a concrete plan by any means at this time," he added.

The county parks commission is expected to make a decision on whether to purchase the ski resort, golf course and music theater by the end of this month.

Pine Knob has less than year to pay $1.3-million mortgage

Pine Knob Music Theatre owners have less than one year to repay a $1.3-million mortgage on the facility, according to Timothy Mast, attorney for Borg-Warner Equities Corp. of Chicago.

Borg-Warner filed a mortgage foreclosure suit in federal court in Detroit on Dec. 19 after interest on the music theater mortgage was not paid for three months, Mast said.

Pine Knob owners Joseph and Lillian Locricchio of Bloomfield Hills and Gary Francell of St. Clair Shores failed to respond to the suit in the allotted time and "the entire principal and interest has become due," Mast said.

Six months after the filing date, the judge can order the sale of the music theater to repay the mortgage, Mast said, and an additional six months would then be allowed for repayment of the $1.3 million and the accrued interest before an actual sale.

The music theater operations, under lease to Joseph Nederlander of the Fisher Theatre, Detroit, will not be affected by the suit, Mast said.

Of the 500-acre Pine Knob complex, Borg-Warner owns about 200 acres that include 24 $200,000 condominiums and plans for a total of 65 multiple and single-family dwellings.

At the Independence Township Planning Commission meeting last week, attorney Anthony Locricchio said a $15-million law suit against Borg-Warner had been filed "for various violations, one of which just occurred here tonight. Borg-Warner signed an agreement not to interfere with the development of Pine Knob in anyway."

At the meeting, Mast had raised objections to Pine Knob's proposed amusement park, calling the plan incompatible with development of the Borg-Warner property.

Kids, counselors shown door at senior citizen center

The Independence Township Senior Citizen Center welcome mat has been removed for Clarkston Youth Assistance and Pontiac General Hospital Mental Health counselors.

"We just would not like to have them there," Independent Senior Chairman Earl Shively of Joy Street, Independence Township, told the township board at last night's meeting.

The board denied extensions of the 90-day period granted in December for office space for the counseling services in the second story of the senior center located on Clarkston-Orion Road.

Because the second floor must be barrier-free for use by the public, the offices were provided on a temporary basis.

Both counseling services were formerly housed in the defunct Independence Center.

Representatives for Pontiac General were not at the meeting, but Youth Assistance was represented by the Rev. Alex Stewart of Clarkston-Orion Road, Independence Township, Virginia Walter of Washington Street, Clarkston, and counselor Garry Pullins.

Oakland County pays the salary of the Youth Assistance counselor, but office space is not provided, Stewart said.

"Garry's clients are the youth of this township who need help," Stewart said.

"You are one of our major (financial) supporters for Youth Assistance," Walter told the township board. "It is your duty to provide the space."

"There is nothing more important to the youth of our township than preventing juvenile delinquency," she added.

Because most of the money for the senior center was provided through federal Community Development funds earmarked for senior citizens, future grants could be in jeopardy if unrelated services are housed in the building, said Timothy Doyle, parks and recreation director.

"We worked for two-and-one-half years to get this building," said Luther Schultz of Fowler Road, Independence Township. "It was the understanding of all the senior citizens that it was just for senior citizens."

"For years and years and years, we donated to the schools and everything else," he said. "Why can't we have a little privacy, a little something of our own?"

The board voted 5-1 to allow Youth Assistance to retain counseling services at the senior citizen until April 1 when office space in the basement of Township Hall would be available.

In a 5-0 vote, the two Pontiac General counselors were given until Feb. 28 to move out of the senior center and find office space of their own.

M-15 business development 'could threaten village'

By Kathy Greenfield

Commercial development along M-15 south of Clarkston is a threat to the village, says Independence Township Planning Commission member James Brennan.

Brennan suggested joint planning sessions with the village planning commission to his fellow township planning commission members at last week's meeting.

His remarks were made during discussion about rezoning

14.7 acres in the area from residential to commercial.

The planning commission unanimously approved recommending township board approval for rezoning the property located behind True Value Hardware and Richardson's Farm Dairy.

The resulting 10 office lots to be developed by Thomas Rademacher would provide a buffer between the commercial strip and the residential area, planning commission members said.

Access to the property would be provided by a public road off M-15.

Service demands would be minimal, the tax base positive, and impact on surrounding areas would be negligible, township planner Tod Kilroy told the commission.

"The office zone will provide a low-density use in this transitional area," Kilroy said.

"I kind of agree," Brennan said. "The only concern I have in the long run is we haven't had any joint planning sessions with the Village of Clarkston and I think that is due."

"I think that development threatens the village as it is," Brennan said, referring to the M-15 commercial area. "It should be subject to some density planning before it is too late. This type of planning should concern (the village)."

"I think the bare minimum should be the removal of parking along Main Street," he added. "And some future planning should be made to provide off-street parking in the village."

Kilroy was directed by the council to arrange a meeting date between the two planning commissions.

School officials too uptight

The Feb. 11 Clarkston School Board meeting had the quality of an old, second-rate rerun.

It was essentially like most others at which parents have tried to make a case for change, this time about discipline policy and procedures at the high school.

We have parents pleading and/or stating arguments in behalf of their children.

We have a school board listening politely with one of its collective eyes on the clock and the other on its established rules of order for such appearances before its august self.

We have the board making its traditional resolution to refer the entire matter to district administrators for a recommendation, on which there may be some action in a month or two.

School Board Trustee Eric Reickel said it was "refreshing" to see so many parents at a school board meeting. Most board sessions attract only school administrators and members of the press.

It would have been really refreshing if the board/administrators had responded to parents' pleas with anything other than uptight defensiveness.

It would have been even more refreshing if the parents had encountered some radical individual who did not consider them to be antagonists.

"It almost seems like there's a power play between the school board and the parents," said one observer who called our office. "It seems to be an honesty issue of who believes whom."

It seems incredible that one couple found it necessary to prepare a six-page presentation in order to talk to their elected representatives on this grassroots level of government.

Why couldn't someone in school district officialdom have said, "We appreciate your concern"?

If such a person existed, perhaps he or she could give the board/administrators some insight about their lack of luck in getting building-bond messages across to voters.

Communication is not a door which can be opened only periodically for one-way traffic.

Here's Herb

By Herb Rose

Once, when I was trying to acclimate myself to the frozen wastelands called Michigan after living in the lush semi-tropics of south Louisiana, one of my associates backed me against a wall and, with his hands alongside my ears, said: "If you ever again start another sentence with 'In the civilized part of the world...' I'm going to kill you."

I no longer see this gentleman routinely, so I will risk an early demise and note that "in the civilized part of the world" people spend Feb. 19 celebrating Mardi Gras.

"Mardi Gras" roughly translates as "Fat Tuesday" and is a chance for one last fling before the 40 quiet days of Lent.

On Mardi Gras, you can be anything you want.

If you would like to be the Queen of Sheba, get a costume and be the Queen of Sheba. If you don't want people to recognize you, wear a mask.

The Mardi Gras season actually starts soon after Epiphany with the first of innumerable street parades and builds to a crescendo on The Carnival Day.

The parade floats created by groups known as Krewe carry the costumed, masked Krewe members who throw strings of beads, trinkets and commemorative coins to the crowds.

The cry from the street is: "Hey, mister, throw me something!"

The thrown items cannot be worth more than a few cents apiece but, as the frenzy grows, staid philosophical citizens will kill to get a near-worthless bit of plastic.

A model Boy scout will backhand a sweet, old grandmother in the dentures in order to grab a flying string of beads for which he has no use except to add to his already huge collection.

Parades follow parades and a kid in an eye-catching costume advantageously perched on a lamp-post may have grocery bags full of loot.

Drinking on the streets is an illegal in New Orleans as it is in most metropolises, but on Mardi Gras the law is not too rigidly enforced.

As the crowd mills by, Bourbon Street bars dispense portables through the windows so there need be no interruption of the promenade.

If a car doesn't have a window facing the street, a plank across the door will serve admirably.

By mid-afternoon, the street is ankle deep in beer cans, and on Ash Wednesday the amount of trash that must be removed is staggering.

When it is over, a zealously celebrated Mardi Gras may well mean that Lent starts in a thoughtful, pensive self-deprecating mood.

Letters to the editor

Need impartial board

To the editor:

In your article about the CHS Attendance policy, I was quoted slightly out of context.

What I said was that an Appeal Board composed of a Principal and six of his Staff Members BY VIRTUE OF THE EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE, RELATIONSHIP would not lend itself to a fair decision.

After all, how many employees would dare to disagree too many times with their boss?

I do feel an appeal board drawn equally from the schools and from the community would give people far greater assurance of impartial and unbiased decisions.

What I did say was unfair AND STILL BELIEVE IS UNFAIR is the present CHS policy of counting EXCUSED ABSENCES against a student if he or she makes up the work, thereby resulting in the denial of credit.

Not only is this unfair to the student who must complete the course work twice for the same credit, but also to the taxpayer whose tax dollars pay for the unnecessary repeat course.

I urge everyone to let the School Board know how they feel.

Sincerely,
Barbara Johnston

Religious freedom

To the Editor:

People are very cautious when it comes to spiritual organizations that they are unfamiliar with, and rightfully so.

There have been religious groups which have misrepresented truth and have disrupted families by using unethical practices to get members, so it is good advice to be careful.

I would like to make very clear, however, that there is nothing to fear concerning ECKANKAR, a way of life.

Never have we attempted to convert anyone...and around the world it is the same.

The ECKist respects the freedom of every individual to make his own choices.

The teachings available through ECKANKAR do not threaten anyone, for they help each person to know himself as soul, as the true self, and to relate to all of life from that perspective. The ECKist allows every person freedom of choice, never attempting to convert anyone nor trying to discredit another faith.

We would appreciate that same consideration.

Respectfully yours,
Judy (and David) Bill

Don's luck turns

We have never favored gambling as a way to finance government. The state lottery is no exception.

That's why we're going to relate this story of a loser instead of a winner, if there really are any, as the State Lottery moguls would like.

Don Braunagel won 300 lottery tickets. They were presented him by an official of the State Lottery Commission.

Millions of dollars danced in his brain. Retirement loomed. "Easy Street" became his theme song. No more snow.

Came the day for scraping the coverings off the numbers. It was only minutes now until his Rolls Royce could be delivered. The banks were alerted to stay open.

Excitement pitched at the Braunagel home.

When the last bit of silver was removed from the last ticket Don Braunagel had earned minimum wage for his scraping.

The 300 tickets produced $10. He's out of the snow, however. He took a job with the San Diego Tribune.

I'm a newspaper filler and "chuckle" reader. Saw this one recently. "Faith and hope will never die as long as full color seed catalogs are printed."

When columnist Jim Fitzgerald's sister, Mary Lou, saw the picture we published of her brother she said, "He's got more chins than a Chinese phone book."

I'm having a difficult time coming to grips with the realization that our daughter may be drafted into the Army before next fall.

There's one way to get the people of Oakland county to support a subway in Deetroit. Get a championship pro ball team. If the Tigers or Red Wings were atop their leagues the supporters outside Wayne county would flock to the city.

And, conversely, if the Pistons or Lions...well the Lions anyway, were champions, the subway would be scooted through the county commissioners to extend the underground route to Pontiac.

Who wants to pay for a subway to the art institute, Ren-cen or Manogian Mansion?

'If it Fitz. . .'

Terrible Jean was there

by Jim Fitzgerald

As I boarded the bus to work, a woman I'd never met asked me: "Where was Terrible Jean last weekend?" Immediately, I knew I was in trouble.

The woman had just read that morning's column in which I described the weekend my wife and I had spent in New Orleans with my sisters and their husbands. The woman, in an accusing voice, said I'd mentioned three sisters—Mary Lou, Nancy and Linda—but hadn't written one word about Terrible Jean who has been my sister much, much longer than the other three. Wasn't Terrible Jean invited on the New Orleans trip? Was I mad at her?

Later that day, there were several phone calls asking the same question. Terrible Jean's fans insisted upon knowing why she wasn't included on the New Orleans trip. I told them she is too old to travel.

But that's not true, although she doesn't travel well. Terrible Jean went to New Orleans, sitting next to me on the plane, and I was surprised to learn that she's afraid to fly. During takeoffs and landings, she turned stiff and glassy-eyed and asked me to hold her hand. For me, this was similar to being asked to protect Muhammed Ali.

When we were kids, Terrible Jean could terrorize entire neighborhoods simply by standing up straight. When she felt like it, she wore me for a scarf. Even in these, her declining, years, she continues to dive fearlessly off tugboats and break her limbs laughingly while ice skating. So I was unaccustomed to the warm, brotherly feeling that swept over me when I realized my much bigger sister finally needed to lean on my strength. My voice was rather choked when I assured her that she could hold her own dumb hand.

ORIGINALLY, Terrible Jean was listed among the tourists in that New Orleans column. I wrote a paragraph saying: "The youngest sister, Linda, has been a Texan for about two years now. She arrived from San Antonio wearing a sombrero and speaking a strange language. When she said a blue norther had gone through her neighborhood, her much older sister Terrible Jean thought Linda was talking about a bus."

That paragraph didn't appear in the published column because of an editing error made by me. Extensive editing was necessary because the original column was too long for its allotted space. I was too long because of advanced technology. For almost 30 years, I wrote columns on an ordinary typewriter, and I knew I had typed enough when I had filled X number of pages. But now I write on a VDT and there are no pages to count.

VDT means video display terminal. The words I type appear on a 12-inch screen and, by pressing a key, send them to an editor or to God-knows where. If I want a paper copy, I press another key and a computer printout chugs out of a machine on the other side of the room. I don't understand any of it, and I'm still learning how to translate VDT words into X number of pages. When I missed the mark on the New Orleans column, Terrible Jean was subsequently wiped out. It was an accidental realization of a childhood fantasy.

I DON'T UNDERSTAND why so many readers who never met her are so fond of Terrible Jean. I have always portrayed her honestly as the brother-beating tryant she has always been, but I am constantly meeting people who say nice things about her. I am sick of taking her into saloons where people stand on my face to ask for her autograph. It is as though there is in all of you some evil strain that approves of innocent little brothers being abused.

New Orleans provided a typical experience. In Pat O'Brien's famous sing-along club, there were several people celebrating the 29th wedding anniversary of a Detroit couple, Art and Rita Mullin. When they somehow learned from the sign on my back there was a writer from the Detroit Free Press in the room, there was considerable excitement. I was flattered to be appreciated so far from home. The Mullin group had only one question: Was Terrible Jean in New Orleans with me?

She was, she was, she was. It would have been a terrible party without Terrible Jean. Actually, I held her dumb hand.

Business group considered

Downtown Clarkston businesspeople are being asked to get together in an association again.

A meeting to consider the possibility of reorganizing the defunct Village Business Association has been scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 28. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Clarkston Village hall, 375

Depot.

Spearheading the move for reorganization is Carol Eberhardt, owner of One More Time Resale Shop on East Washington Street.

"An active and organized association has the potential of being a great asset to each of us as business people," she said in a letter to other businesses last week.

"Working together, we could reorganize and put some enthusiasm in the special events that seem to be falling by the wayside because there is now no existing association."

She urged those planning to attend the meeting to call her at 625-1166.

Where to find OC maps

Maps of Oakland county are available at three sources.

Road Commission maps can be picked up at Commission offices on Pontiac Lake Road or Lasher and 13 Mile Road. Planning Commission maps can be purchased at their offices, 1200 N. Telegraph.

Previously, Road Commissioner maps could be purchased at this newspaper office and numerous other places.

This newspaper would buy a few hundred at 50 cents each and sell them for 75 cents. Other outlets would charge as high as $1.50.

Commission spokesman Jim Briney says this has to stop. One reason is they were running out of maps before new ones were printed.

Another is that the Commission wasn't making money on the deal and was not in the business to be a wholesaler, while others capitalized on it.

The Commission will give one map to a customer. They will sell the next four for 50 cents each.

The limit is five. Various governmental units can buy copies for 40 cents for their needs.

The Planning Commission maps do not have road listings and are not in color. They cost $1.50 each.

This newspaper is looking into other ways of having county maps available for public use without forcing residents to drive to Pontiac.

Wint reelected

Clarkston resident Louis E. Wint, a member of the Oakland Parks and Recreation Commission since 1974 has been reelected to his post of commission chairman for the third time.

Wint was recently reappointed to the commission by the Oakland County Board of Commissioners prior to his election as chairman. Wint has also served as parks and recreation commission vice chairman and secretary during his tenure.

Pastor attends National Prayer Breakfast

The Rev. Clancy J. Thompson came away from the 28th annual National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, D.C. with a strong sense of brotherhood for religious leaders around the world.

By Kathy Greenfield

The Rev. Clancy J. Thompson had breakfast with President and Mrs. Jimmy Carter this month.

He was among about 3,000 people at the 28th annual National Prayer Breakfast held at the International Ballroom of the Washington D.C. Hilton hotel Feb. 7.

Also invited to the affair were all congress members and their spouses, the United States Supreme Court justices, governors of all the states, the diplomatic corps and a scattering of guests from around the world, Thompson said.

It was an experience he calls "super."

"From my point of view as a pastor, I was interested as to the men of our government-how they related to God," he said. "And I came away with good, positive feelings about that."

"I felt these men recognized their dependence on God to give direction to our country and the rest of the world."

"I was also very impressed with President Carter's dependency on prayer for God's direction," Thompson said, adding that a 15-minute speech during the breakfast "served as an illustration of (the President's) faith."

When the engraved invitation arrived for the breakfast, "I was extremely surprised. It was totally unanticipated," said the pastor of Drayton Heights Free Methodist Church, Winell Road, Independence Township.

Later Thompson learned he had been invited because of Berhanou Dinke, a personal friend, who served as U.S. ambassador from Ethiopia during the Kennedy administration.

Dinke, who has spoken at Thompson's church twice, acted as the minister's host at the breakfast.

Although the former ambassador no longer serves in a diplomatic role, he resides in Washington, Thompson said.

During his two-day stay at the nation's capitol, Thompson also attended a seminar sponsored by the Fellowship House of Washington D.C.

Religious in nature, the seminar was attended by "political figures from around the world who were related to God in dynamic ways," Thompson said.

"There was a strong sense of brotherhood between all peoples of all kinds of faiths," he said. "I sensed the feeling of love."

Thompson, who paid his own travel expenses, said he left with an important message to bring back to his congregation.

"We have men in government who are attempting to follow God by being honest and living in Godly or Christian ways in government," he said.

"We read about the corruption going on--a small group of men are attempting to live according to Biblical principles while serving in government."

The Clarkston Wolf mascot, played by CHS student Don Mack, was there to make the Wolfpack feel at home in the Silverdome.

Wolfpack makes tracks in Silverdome

Providing the crowd with entertainment during a time out are the Clarkston High School cheerleaders.

Dave Smith, "The Voice of the Wolfpack," was at his usual post behind the microphone. As usual, the Wolfpack kept him busy announcing successful field goals.

Wolfpack clinches league title

By Al Zawacky

The Milford Redskins performed their own version of "Stayin' Alive" in the Clarkston High gymnasium Friday night.

And while Milford did indeed manage to stay alive in its second confrontation of the season with undefeated and No. 1-ranked Clarkston, it could do little else as the Wolfpack cagers romped to an 81-35 victory.

Unbeknown to coach Gary Nustad and his players until later, the win clinched Clarkston's third straight Greater Oakland Activities League Championship, as second place Rochester mathematically eliminated themselves from contention by bowing to Andover the same evening.

"We played very well, both offensively and defensively," Nustad said afterwards in a classic understatement.

Tim McCormick, Clarkston's ubiquitous 6-foot 10 center, topped both teams with 25 points and 12 rebounds while teammate Ed Haddad enjoyed his best game of the season with 22 points, four steals and four assists.

"Ed scores 22 points and all of a sudden everybody notices him," Nustad noted. "People don't always see the job he does for us game in and game out on defense, and the tremendous leadership he gives the team."

"Haddad's been outstanding all year long--not just tonight."

Also scoring for the Wolfpack were John Sheldon with 12 points, Scott McKoin and Nick Lekas with six points each, Chuck Nicolai with four points and John Pappas, Greg Lane and Jerry Tatu with two points each.

The win upped the Wolfpack's league record to 8-0 and overall mark to 17-0 with their third straight league championship already assured, only an undefeated regular season campaign remains unattained before Nustad's cagers head into tournament competition in March.

Contests against Rochester, Milford Lakeland and Andover remain on the schedule. Clarkston will be idle this Tuesday and won't see action again until Friday night in Rochester.

Nustad isn't overly concerned with the resulting one-week layoff. "Earlier in the season I might be, but not at this point," the coach said. "We'll be staying busy in practice and probably arrange a scrimmage with somebody during the week."

Clarkston's Nick Lekas [54] plots his way around and over the defensive tactics of Milford's Jeff Canfield.

The point after

by Al Zawacky

These eyes witnessed a rare event Wednesday: a successful, exciting and first-class basketball team performing in the Silverdome.

Not the Pistons, of course. Poor Richie Adubato had to sit and agonize as his pitiful quintet blew another one, 107-102 to the Cleveland Cavaliers. I'd like to suggest that the Pistons management replace their absurdly inappropriate team song (Young, strong and comin' on) with a lone trumpeter playing taps.

And what kind of organization is it that still hasn't updated the game programs two months after a coaching change?

Right there on page six is "head coach" Dick Vitale's smiling mug, complete with a story from which I will quote: "...the day may not be that far away when he (Vitale) becomes the 'Rocky' of the pro basketball set and takes his team out of the Pontiac Silverdome and into their inner circle of the NBA."

I almost choked on my popcorn reading that one.

But how many Clarkston people came out to see the Pistons, anyway? They paid their money to see a "successful, exciting and first class basketball team" perform--the Wolfpack.

Ah, the Wolfpack. What a pleasure to view the basketball wizardry of McCormick, Haddad, Sheldon, Lane, McKoin et al on the same court that the likes of Magic Johnson and Larry Bird have dazzled us on. It was well worth the long drive and the $5 cost of the ticket.

Not that there weren't desirable elements missing from the Silverdome, as compared to the home games played in cozy Clarkston High School. The traditional rhythmic applause that the 'Pack and their fans open the game with was about as audible as a well-running watch.

Coach Gary Nustad had already observed that the same crowd that could blow the roof off the CHS gym would barely cause a ripple in cavernous Pontiac Stadium.

"Fifteen hundred people in our building and it's a happening," Nustad said a few weeks ago. "Fifteen hundred people in the Silverdome, and it's as if nobody's there."

Indeed, things were pretty quiet. But when the occasion arose, the Clarkston faithful made as much noise as was physically possible for their numbers to make. The Wolfpack provided plenty of occasions, most prominent being a 75-58 victory, their 16th in a row and second of the season over Davison.

"It was a good experience," Tim McCormick, Clarkston's star center, said afterwards outside the Wolfpack locker room. "The court here is really nice and open--playing here is something all the guys are going to remember."

***

Like most everything in life, playing and watching a contest in the Silverdome has both its good and bad points. I've itemized them both:

The good...

- Comfortable, individual seats. Not once did "The Voice of the Wolfpack" Dave Smith request that spectators move in towards the center of the bleachers to make more room for a couple hundred more fans.

- Kielbasa at the concession stands. (Smaczne).

- No problems finding a parking space.

- Free food for members of the working press prior to the Pistons game.

- The availability of certain types of liquid refreshment, not on sale at the high school.

The bad...

- No junior varsity game.

- Claustrophobia locker rooms. (Have you ever tried to unlace and take off your shoes in a standing position?)

- Two dollars a glass for some of the aforementioned liquid refreshment. (Ouch.)

- The opposition. (Rochester Adams, Pontiac Central or even Waterford Township would have been a major event. Five win, eleven loss Davison didn't make the grade.)

- The dome is the dome, but there's no place like home.

Spikers upset by Milford

By Al Zawacky

Besides death and taxes, the hitherto undefeated Clarkston High volleyball team thought it had found another sure thing Monday night: a victory over winless Milford.

A win would have clinched sole possession of the league title for the CHS spikers, who were flawless 8-0 in league competition going into the contest.

But when the match was over, Milford had pulled off the upset of the season in downing the Wolves 4-15, 15-4, 15-12.

"We just stopped playing volleyball," said a disappointed coach Linda Denstaedt later. "We were playing very well in the first game, but seemed to get the idea that we didn't have to work to win the rest of the way."

Denstaedt lauded the serving of Beth Walker, who served six straight points in game three and aces 50 percent of her serves overall. Walker's serving was one of the match's few bright spots, according to the coach.

"There just didn't seem to be much of an effort in those last two games," Denstaedt said.

Over the weekend, the CHS squad hosted the Clarkston Invitation Volleyball Tournament and placed fifth among the 10 teams participating.

The Wolves were eliminated in a close match with Ferndale High School 13-15, 19-17, 10-15 in the finals. Lansing Waverly High School finished first in the tourney.

"Beth Haddad gave us some excellent hitting in the tournament," Denstaedt said. "In one match she killed 100 percent of her hits for points."

Also drawing praise from the coach was the attacking and hustle of Dawn Reis, the passing of Peggy Vermilye and the serving of Linda Baines.

Clarkston's overall record now stands at 10-5.

The CHS junior varsity volleyball team upped its league record to 8-1 by defeating Milford 15-5, 15-10 Monday night.

Lanette Whitehead's hitting was the highlight of the Wolves' 12th win of the season overall, against only three defeats.

The Clarkston News

Athlete of the week

Ed Haddad, senior guard and one of three co-captains on the 1979-80 Wolfpack, has a knack for making the difficult look routine.

All season long, the 6-foot-2 star has drawn the "toughest defensive assignments," according to coach Gary Nustad, and all season long he's been performing those duties with a brilliance that's come to be expected.

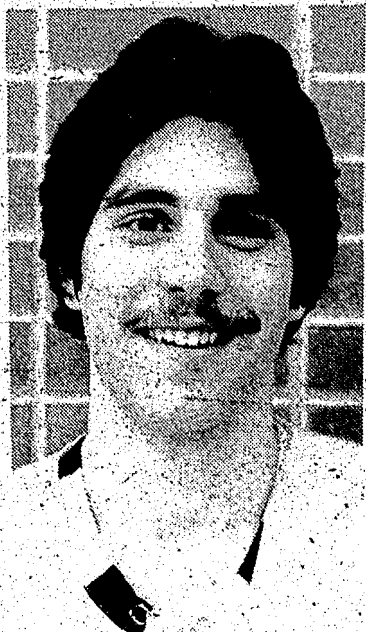

But besides his strong defensive play, Haddad is also a big threat offensively.

He proved as much last week, scoring 15 points in the Silverdome Wednesday against Davison, and then netting a personal high 22 points at home against Milford two nights later.

For his performance, Haddad is this week's Clarkston News Athlete of the Week.

"Ed does so many little things out there that not many people notice," Nustad said. "And not only is he a tremendous talent, but he's an outstanding individual as well."

Independence Township is now the home of a national boxing champion: eleven year old Mike Grable.

Mike traveled with his father this past weekend to Davenport, Iowa to participate in the national boxing championship, achieving his champ status by defeating three boys in his 65 pound weight class.

Mike decisioned Kevin Berten of Cincinnati, Ohio; Tim Fraser of Ashland, Kentucky; and John Roth of Springfield, Illinois in the finals.

Jim Turk, also 11 years old and a resident of Independence, took third place in the 90 pound weight class. Jim fought well against the eventual champion in the semifinals, Marv Richardson of Akron, Ohio. It was only the tenth career fight for Jim, compared with 74 total matches for his opponent.

Local gymnasts Cindy Salter and Kelly Karem are having a busy and successful 1980.

Cindy competed in a class three B open in Freeland, Michigan on Jan. 6 and placed sixth overall. Her score of 9.15 in the floor competition was the best on her team.

On Feb. 2, Cindy competed in another class three B meet, placing fifth on vault, fourth on beam, sixth on bars, ninth on floor and second overall with a combined score of 33.9.

Kelly qualified for state competition by placing fifth overall in a qualifying meet held on Jan. 13.

Her score of 16.5 on beam was good for first place.

The Parks Installation band hockey team, representing Lakeland Hockey Association of Waterford in the District Four Playdowns held at Port Huron Jan. 29 through Feb. 3, became the first Lakeland house team to win the district championship and thus earn the right to represent district four in the state playoffs early in March.

District four includes teams from Lakeland, Bloomfield, Fraser, Sterling Heights, Port Huron, Mt. Clemens, Romeo and Avon.

Goalie Eric Schnabel of Independence Township posted his ninth shutout of the season in Parks' first victory, a 4-0 whitewashing of Fraser. Parks followed the victory with a 2-1 win over Port Huron in triple overtime, and the championship clinching 4-1 decision over Bloomfield.

The team is coached by Davisburg resident Barry Blunk.

JVs face title showdown

Play 7-2 Rochester Friday night

By Al Zawacky

It's been 10 weeks and 17 games since the season opened for coach Larry Mahrle and his Clarkston High School JV basketball squad, but their league title hopes all boil down to a single contest in Rochester Friday night.

"Both teams will know that Friday's game is for the championship," Mahrle said. "We've been in this situation before--hopefully, the boys will be able to share in the excitement of winning a league title."

Three JV teams--Clarkston, Rochester and Kettering--have lost only twice in Greater Oakland Activities League competition this season. A victory over Rochester would all but assure the junior Wolfpack of at least a tie for the league title, with their last remaining league game being at home against the winless Andover Barons on Feb. 29.

In recent action, the JVs suffered their second defeat in a row in losing a non-league home contest to Davison by a 51-41 score, but got back on the winning trail Friday to post a 60-33 win over Milford.

"We just had a horrible game," Mahrle said of the Davison contest. "We didn't shoot well, and without a varsity game (the varsity squads met the following day in the Silverdome) soem of the atmosphere was missing."

Craig Schnabel led the junior Wolfpack with 11 points, as the Clarkston Jvs bowed for the second time this season to their Davison counterparts.

Last Friday was a different story, as Brad Beattie scored 19 points to lead Clarkston to their one-sided win over Milford. Also scoring in double figures for the JVs were Ric Schebor with 14 points and Kevin Coppersmith with 10. Schnabel had five assists.

Although a week had gone by since Mahrle's team squandered a 15 point lead against GOAL rival West Bloomfield in a costly 56-55 loss, the sting of that defeat was still on the coach's mind.

"The boys know that they threw one away that they can't have back," Mahrle said. "As a result, we've got to win in Rochester, on a strange court, with different officials and different backboards and rims."

"It's not going to be easy--but we'll be ready."

Wolfpack tracks

FALCON FOLLIES: The Wolfpack-Falcon contest coming up this Friday night in Rochester has definitely lost some of its lustre, now that the GOAL title is no longer on the line. But Clarkston coach Gary Nustad was predicting a "very good ball game" last week.

"There's a natural rivalry between us and Rochester," Nustad said. "It's especially strong since the two schools shared the league title last year."

When the two teams last met in Clarkston on Jan. 18, a 32 minute yawn resulted as Falcon coach John Bailey played the stall. Nustad doesn't think they'll try it again, however.

"I wouldn't think so, not on their home court," Nustad observed. "John (Bailey) believes as I do--that on the road you try and control the tempo and take the crowd out of the game, but at home you try and create the play and generate some excitement."

"I'd also imagine they'll try and take it to Tim (McCormick), get him in some foul trouble and get him out of there. But Tim knows how to handle himself in that kind of situation."

Just ask Kettering, Andover, West Bloomfield, Milford, Davison, Mott, Flint Carmen, Pontiac Central, Waterford Township...

AND THE STREAK GOES ON: According to tradition, a three time title winner can officially be labeled a "dynasty."

The Wolfpack's record over the past three GOAL championship seasons seem to qualify them for the honor.

•Twenty-five regular season victories in a row.

•Clarkston has won 50 of their last 57 regular season games.

•This season their average margin of victory in league competition is 28 points.

•And against non-league teams? Twenty-five points.

THEY CAME TO PLAY: Give the Milford Redskins credit. Coach Don Palmer and his crew came to play basketball Friday night, not four quarters of keep-away.

REMEMBER FEB. 29: Wolfpack followers are reminded that the Feb. 29 home game against Andover, rescheduled from last month, isn't on the printed schedules around town.

The junior varsity contest will begin at 6:30 followed by the varsity game at 8 p.m.

Frosh spikers squaring off

Cross town rival volleyball teams from Sashabaw and Clarkston junior highs were to meet in a game Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the CJH gymnasium.

Here's how the two teams fared in last week's action:

The Clarkston Junior High volleyball team upped its season record to 7-5 last week by posting victories over Bloomfield East Hills and Rochester Van Hoosen.

The Wolverine spikers defeated East Hills 2-15, 15-8, 15-4 and downed Van Hoosen in two straight games 16-14, 15-10.

"For some reason, we've been having trouble in our first game," coach Mary Colwell said in reference to the East Hills match. "We did have quite a turn around afterwards, though."

Colwell added that the serving of Barb Ogurek and Michele Barks combined with an "all-out team effort" were the reasons behind the comeback.

Colwell praised the work of Traci Sherman, Nancy Hubbard and Crista Pilditch in the Van Hoosen contest.

"We're not making the mistakes we were making earlier in the season," Colwell said. "I'm really happy with the improvement we've shown."

Sashabaw Junior High's volleyball team won and lost a match the same way last week--in two straight games.

The Cougars opened the week with a victory over Rochester Reuther 15-9, 15-3 before bowing 4-15, 10-15 to Grand Blanc.

Excellent serving by Becky Buhl, Peggy Gadberry and Marina Hamlett; strong setting by Dawn Willett and outstanding hitting by Jamie Howenstein and Jeanine Ditch highlighted the SJH effort, according to coach Sue Kosloski.

"Grand Blanc had won the Clarkston Invitational Tournament last month, so we knew what we were in for," Kosloski said of her team's fourth loss of the season. "We seemed a little bit intimidated by their record and the fantastic facilities they have in their gym--the kids just weren't ready to play volleyball."

"Prior to that game, we really hadn't had a really bad defeat," Kosloski continued. "I think we learned some valuable lessons from it."

The Cougar spikers record now stands at 8-4.

Planning a trip to Italy? Be careful with the currency. There are two kinds of 5,000 lira notes which look very similar. Both are the same size, light blue on one side and green on the other, but one is no longer legal tender. Though both notes carry a picture of Columbus, the legal note also shows three ships. The illegal tender carries only one. When first exchanging currency, check your bills carefully. Otherwise we suggest a visit to the Bank of Italy (Banco d'Italian) to get the legal lira.

Wrestlers place six in regionals

By Al Zawacky

Six members of the league champion Clarkston High School wrestling team will travel to Rochester Adams this Saturday to compete in the regional tournaments.

Qualifying for regional competition in the districts held last weekend were Mike Conway (98 pounds), Craig Gavette (105 pounds), Jeff Miracle (132 pounds), Mike Ogans (145 pounds), Claude Gourand (155 pounds) and Mark Karrick (198 pounds).

Overall, the Clarkston squad placed third in district competition 51½ points behind Rochester Adams (72 points) and Pontiac Northern (58 points).

"I was really pleased with the way the kids wrestled," said Clarkston coach Rick Detkowski. "We had a lot of kids hurting from injuries and illness, but they just wouldn't quit."

Detkowski singled out for special praise the work of his six regional qualifiers.

"Those guys have been doing it for us all year," Detkowski said. "And Mark Karrick has really come on for us lately."

The regionals will begin at 11 a.m. and run until evening at Rochester Adams High School on Feb. 23. The top four wrestlers in each weight class will qualify for state competition.

Stage 2nd half comeback

Wolverines clip Cougars

By Al Zawacky

The Clarkston Junior High and Sashabaw Junior High basketball squads seemed determined to give their fans their money's worth Thursday night.

Following an early SJH lead that swelled to as much as 10 points in the opening minutes of the third quarter, the game quickly turned into a see-saw battle with the final result in doubt until the closing seconds when CJH took charge to post a 50-47 victory.

The first half definitely had me worried," CJH coach Larry Sherrill said later, noting that his Wolverines were having trouble executing in the first two quarters.

"We were making a lot of mental mistakes--we'd do something right one time, but then we wouldn't be able to do it again," Sherrill said.

With the crowd roaring each time the ball changed hands, the two teams exchanged field goals back and forth throughout the fourth quarter, with neither team able to open up more than a two point lead until Richie Schrader sank two free throws to put the Wolverines up by three.

Statistically, three players finished the game scoring in double figures: Sashabaw's Tom Williams with 14 points and Rick Williams with 10; and Clarkston's Scott Temple with 12 points.

Rounding out the scoring for the Wolverines were Mike McCormick and Ray Kubani with nine points; Craig Nicolai with six points; Richie Schrader, Pat Rausch and Bill Weeks with four points; and Jim Townson, two points.

For the Cougars: Brian Davies and Mike Dearborn with six points; Bob Boyt and Greg Gilbert with three points; Kevin Brown and Shawn Mosele with two points; and Mike Clem, one point.

The victory upped CJH's record to 13-4, while SJH dipped to 5-10.

Pom-pon girls dance, entertain

By Al Zawacky

Carole Hicks, a teacher at Clarkston High School who co-sponsors the school's pom-pon squad, would like to make one thing perfectly clear: pom-pon girls are not cheerleaders.

In fact, she says, the girls aren't even connected with the high school athletic department.

"Each girl has to buy her own uniform and provide her own transportation," Hicks says. "It costs about $100 per girl, but we've been able to hold different fund raisers to help with the expenses. Things like car washes and the sale of Christmas candles and booster pins.

"But we don't get any money from the high school athletic department at all."

Now in its fourth year of existence, the squad provided halftime and pre-game entertainment at various athletic events during the school year. Like the cheerleaders, they are required to maintain certain academic standards and must tryout for a position on the squad.

Current members of the pom-pon team are Carol Olney, Dee Milner, Michelle St. Charles, Kellie Franks, Leslie Raguso, Lisa Morgan, Sonya Smallwood, Cheryl Maxum, Tracy Swift, Amber VanHouten, Sandy Weisel, Janice Maynard and Patty Moore.

"Our function is entirely different from that of our cheerleaders," Hicks says. "The cheerleaders are primarily there to lead the cheers while we're involved strictly in entertainment."

The girls work on their dance routines a minimum of twice a week, under the supervision of Hicks and their other co-sponsor, Jo Fetsko. Usually, even more time is required and when the game nights are figured in, it requires a lot of time and dedication on the part of all the girls, Hicks notes.

Recently the pom-pon squad performed at the Pontiac Silverdome during the halftime of the Clarkston-Davison basketball game. The girls have also accepted an invitation to perform during halftime at a Wayne State University basketball game.

Hicks said that a decision concerning the future of the pom-pon squad is due shortly. Consideration is being given to making the squad the direct responsibility of the school and providing it with funding, or discontinuing the program all together.

"We have our tryouts in May, so I'd imagine that a decision will be coming down soon," Hicks says.

A decision either way would eliminate incidents like the one that occurred before the Silverdome performance. Several members of the squad and their parents were upset when informed that they would have to pay their own way into the game, while the cheerleaders and team members would receive complementary passes.

"It was a bad situation, because some people got the idea that this whole thing was the athletic department's fault," Hicks says. "They (the athletic department) were just informed by the Pistons that they wouldn't be provided with anymore than 30 complementary passes, and didn't leave any room for the pom-pon squad."

"When somebody higher up in the Piston organization heard about it, they called to tell us that the extra passes wouldn't be any problem."

Hicks, who is in her first year as a sponsor for the group, has enjoyed her work.

"They're a really good group," she says. "They work hard, and they're a good bunch of gals to work with."

LAST YEAR, THE JONES FAMILY FOUND LIFE AT 65 VERY REWARDING.

This winter, the Jones family has found that from a comfort point of view, life at 65° isn't much different than life at 70°. But it is a whole lot more rewarding.

By dialing down from 70° to 65°, the Joneses saved 15 percent of their space heating fuel consumption. They did even better by dialing down further at night and when they weren't home.

Overall, the Joneses saved enough money to buy themselves some things they wouldn't have been able to afford otherwise.

You can do the same. By dialing down wisely, you could reduce your space heating fuel consumption by 3% for each degree. You might not even notice the difference, especially if you're busy enjoying the things you bought with the money you saved.

41 miles of safety paths envisioned

Picture 41 miles of safety paths along major roads throughout Independence Township.

That's exactly what the township Safety Path Committee said in its report to the planning commission last week.

The next step is to fund the project, said committee chairperson Joseph Figa.

A total of $75,000-$55,000 in Community Development funds and $20,000 in federal revenue sharing funds have been approved by the township board for safety paths.

Cost of the paths averages between $40,000 and $60,000 for each mile, Figa said.

The committee recommended that developers with site plans be required by ordinance to construct eight-foot-wide asphalt safety paths a minimum of one foot outside property lines along the final approved route.

The planning commission approved proceeding with plans to hold a public hearing regarding the ordinance amendment.

The vote was unanimous despite commission member James Brennan's objections to requiring developers to pay for the paths.

Because the people of the township would use the paths, Brennan said a millage or money from the township general fund should cover expenses.

The paths would be unnecessary expense for developers and would not enhance the property of homes facing the paths, he said.

Commission member James Gardiner did not agree.

"This is an advantage to have the safety paths," he said. "It would entice the people to live there."

in the township to schools, recreation and shopping would be the first goal of the safety paths and the committee suggested beginning with 19 miles along Sashabaw, Clintonville, Maybee, Waldon and Clarkston-Orion roads and Dixie Highway and M-15.

The committee is investigating how much millage to ask township voters to approve and the availability of state funds from the department of transportation, Figa said.

The project would probably begin along Sashabaw Road near Maybee Road, he said, because the Community Development money is required to be spent in the township's lowest average income area as determined by the 1970 United States census.

The commission voted unanimously to recommend that the township board provide money for an engineer to work on proposed routes and that a millage request be placed on the township ballot before the end of 1980.

The safety path committee expects to make its final report this spring, including financial plans, to the planning commission and township board, Figa said.

Interior Expressions provides personal service

An avid do-it-yourselfer, Randy Schuck put his experience and knowledge to use and opened Interior Expressions Decorating Center last fall.

"I've always been extremely fussy about materials, and it's hard to find a retail place where you can talk to someone and get pointers or detailed instruction on how to redo a cedar chest or whatever," he says.

"We take time with the people and we help them solve their own problems. Our kick is helping people help themselves, because our trade is do-it-yourselfers."

The store located in the Waterfall Plaza, 5649 Dixie Highway, Waterford Township, has also enabled Schuck to put to work what he calls an old, but proven set of rules.

"The whole thing is built on the philosophy of personal service, quality products and repeat business," he says.

Items for sale at Interior Expressions cover four areas of home decorating.

A complete line of Fuller O'Brien interior and exterior paints and stains make up one section. Factory-direct shipments make his prices competitive with larger stores, Schuck says.

Paint chips illustrate the over 1,000 colors that can be custom mixed, and if a color is not represented, it can still be made, he says.

In addition, customers can bring in wooden items and have

Doing business

custom stains matched to make repairs or use on companion pieces.

Wall coverings make up the second department.

"We deal in medium and better grades and a good selection of designer series hand prints," he says. "I don't sell the junk stuff--the $3.99 a role variety."

Customers can leave samples of fabrics or colors for matching and return later.

"We conduct searches for them according to their wants," Schuck says. "When they come back in, we'll show them what we've found. We can save people a lot of time."

A bathroom line is the third department.

Wall hardware, accent accessory pieces, shower curtains and toilet seats are included.

If an unusual color is needed, every effort is made to find a match and Schuck has even painted wicker items himself to please customers.

The fourth department is wall accessories.

Electric switch plates are on hand to coordinate with almost every decor including matches for bathroom hardware, he says.

Consideration for shoppers is also evident in the store's hours.

Interior Expressions is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

"This allows people who work to shop," he says. "We're open for their convenience and I'm here during these hours."

Shoppers with children are also given consideration with entertainment Schuck dubs a "relief area" stocked with children's books and as trunkful of colorful building blocks.

Before opening his own business, Schuck worked in advertising and marketing research.

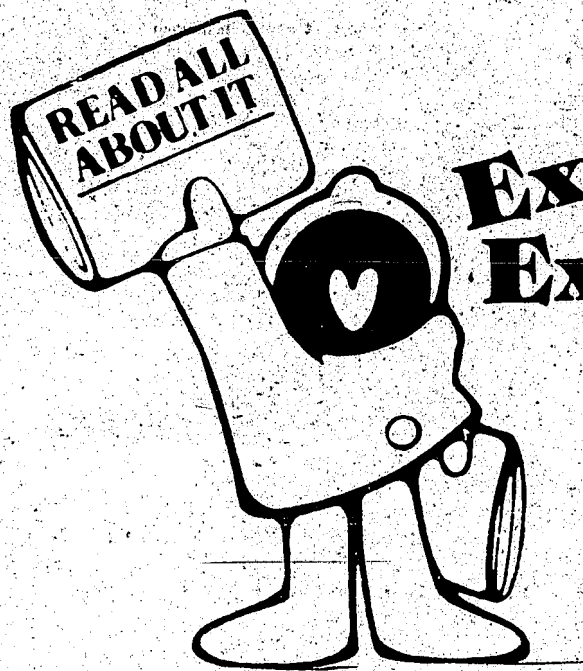

He has a master's degree in business and taught part-time at the University of Baltimore, Md., and the Lawrence Institute of Technology, Southfield.

"If I'm going to work hard, I'm going to work for myself," he says. "If you work well, you can congratulate yourself."

He and his wife Renee, who is an accountant for Perry Drug Stores in addition to working at Interior Expressions evenings and on weekends, live in Orion Township.

Owner Randy Schuck sorts through some paint chip samples at Interior Expressions Decorating Center.

Unforgettable chili

When Sherrill Raguso found a whole bunch of leftover chili the morning after a post basketball-game party thrown by her daughter Leslie, she was suspicious.

So she tasted it and discovered some unusual seasonings had been added.

Further investigation revealed that during the party, some fun-lovers had decided to change the flavor to see how others would react.

So that party-goers, mostly Clarkston High School seniors, remember the evening of fun at the home of the Tom Ragusos on Boyne Highland Trail, Independence Township, Sherrill submitted the following:

(And lest Leslie's friends think they can then forget the chili, "They're going to get it as chip dip at Leslie's graduation," Sherrill said, adding that it really tastes okay served that way.)

From the party of the month, the recipe of the month.

It's new! Called "Clarkston Senior Chili--Class of 1980!"

Discovered Friday, Feb. 8 at Leslie's house.

Start with: 2 lbs. hamburger, 1 c. chopped green pepper, 1 c. chopped onion. Brown together and remove excess fat.

Add: 1 large can kidney beans, drained, and 5 cans stewed tomatoes.

*Now this is the special part-- Dump in 1 whole small can chili powder, 1 whole pepper shaker of pepper, 1 whole salt shaker of salt and 1 whole 2 oz.

jar instant coffee.

Taste! Then watch your friend's faces light up.

Then watch your friend's mother's face in the morning when she tries this. Holy Cow! (A 1950s expression.)

However, I fooled you. I divided this chili base into four parts and froze three parts (you get it next time).

I took one part and added four more cans tomatoes. Delicious! I have enough chili for months.

It's also good straight as a Mexican chip dip.

Thanks, seniors, and special credit goes to Mike--you know who you are.

Luv,
Mrs. Ragu

Is your dog gone?

By Joe Armstrong
Independence Township Animal Control Officer

The garbage dog in Independence Township is a real problem.

But one of the biggest problems isn't with the dogs, it's with the owners of the garbage.

They're afraid to complain about their neighbor's dog because of the hard feelings it would create.

I want to change that attitude and let the people know they can complain without any repercussions.

They can call the station and give a report as just a citizen--they don't have to leave their names.

And they don't have to be afraid of what their neighbor thinks, because if a neighbor is so inconsiderate as to let their dog loose, then the courteous thing to do would be to follow the animal around and pick up the garbage.

If you don't have enough nerve to take any action, then you'll have to live with your garbage spread all over.

When animal control receives a call, in most cases a warning is issued on the first offense.

If the problem persists, then a written violation will be issued requiring a fine payment or appearance in court.

***

This morning as I was driving out of the driveway, the neighbor's dog was spreading my garbage all over.

I chased the dog home and I didn't do anything about it, because I didn't want to create hard feelings with the neighbors.

Dogs picked up Feb. 18--None because of township holiday (George Washington's birthday).

Extra patrol--Thendara Park subdivision.

We put close to 300 dogs through the animal clinic Feb. 16.

If your pet is missing or you find a dog or cat, call Independence Township Animal Control at 625-8600 or the Michigan Humane Society at 391-0800.

For emergency calls after regular business hours and on weekends call 858-1022.

As they plan move to north

Armstrongs have warm memories

28 Wed., Feb. 20, 1980 The Clarkston (Mich.) News

Country Living

By Kathy Greenfield

Leo and Hazel Armstrong's story is one of working together and of love.

They have raised eight children, established their own business (now sold), been through the trauma of Leo's open-heart surgery and are getting ready to move north together.

As the couple talked about living in Independence and Springfield townships over the past 30 years, their mutual affection was evident.

It wasn't the giddy, mush kind of love reserved mainly for the very young, but just a well-established kind of caring.

He called her "hon," she came and stood by his side while he was talking.

She worked on a batch of peanut butter cookies in the kitchen; he called to her for confirmation or details about incidents he related.

And they both added complimentary details about each other to the conversation.

The Armstrongs moved to Independence Township in 1950.

"We bought 20 acres out on Allen Road--would you believe for $5,000--and we started our business in what was actually a chicken house," Leo said, talking about the beginnings of Armstrong Screw Products.

Business improved steadily and the Armstrong children who were old enough were able to earn $3 an hour working in the converted chicken house.

"They would come home from school, work two hours in the shop, do their homework and go to bed," Leo remembered. "They could never understand how kids had enough time to get into trouble."

The Armstrongs also raised much of their own food including beef cattle and Leo spent 17 years coaching little league baseball, 27 years playing softball and three years coaching golden gloves boxing.

"What's great to me, I'll go downtown and somebody will come up to me who is 40 years old and shake my hand and say, 'Mr. Armstrong, how are you?'," he said. "And it will be somebody I had in little league."

"I really feel more grateful about what we've done with young people than the success with business."

During those years, Hazel said she was busy raising children.

"I've always been home," she said. "That was one of my things, to be home when the kids came home."

"I wouldn't give up those years for all the money in the world," she added. "Everything was a family project. We played together, and then we worked together."

Leo hastened to add that Hazel did more than just sit in the house waiting for their children to come home from school.

"She cleaned the barn, did the chores, milked the cows," he said.

After expanding the business to a three-car garage, the Armstrongs made another move in 1965 to their present location on Dixie Highway in Springfield Township.

Their business sits on the highway and their home, built in 1968, has a view of Susin Lake.

"I had the intention of getting big and I started hiring people," Leo said. "I was handling a lot more money, but it was going to the government and on the payroll."

He cutback to a family operation once again and made more profit on parts for such varied projects as missiles for the moon, chemical toilets and automobiles.

"We used to be up at 3 a.m. depending on how badly the customer wanted the parts," Hazel said.

"I wasn't really successful because of my intellect," said Leo. "I was successful because of my fear."

"It was because of hard work," Hazel said.

And Leo admitted he worked many 20-hour days.

The impetus to sell the business and move to 230 acres the couple owns in Winn located between Alma and Mt. Pleasant came when Leo had a heart attack followed by triple bypass surgery.

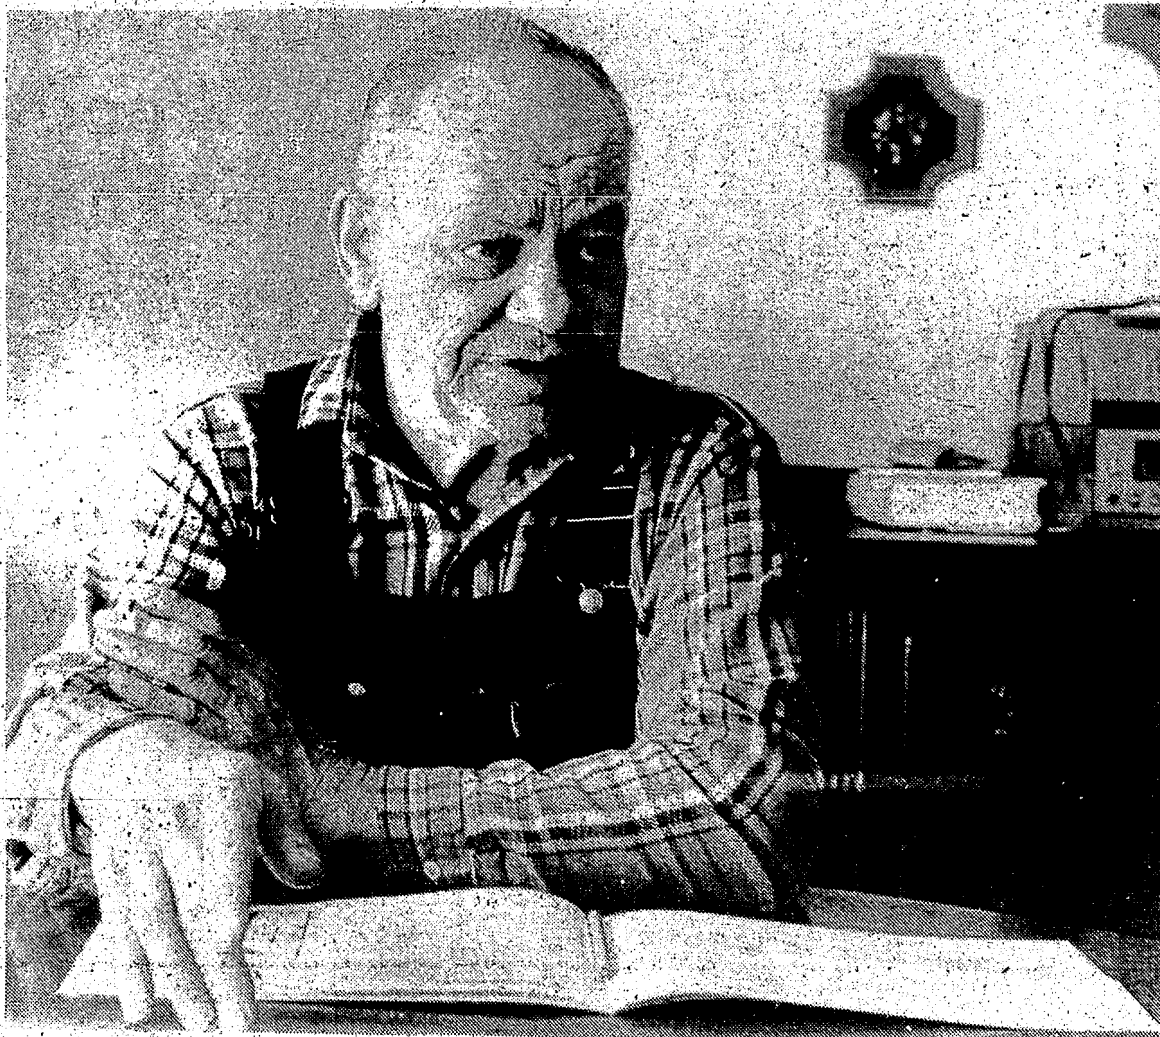

They worry some about the move and about changes they've seen over the past 30 years.

"Many small business started out from scratch, but now regulations keep them from doing that," Leo said. "I think everybody's finding out today our regulations are getting a little bit crazy."

And perhaps what bothers him most is that now no one would be allowed to begin a business the way he did.

Having raised eight children while establishing a successful business during the 30 years they have lived in Independence and Springfield townships, Leo and Hazel Armstrong are now planning their retirement years together.

Leo scans a brochure about trees and the materials they provide, and pauses to share some of the information with Hazel.

An increase in the numbers of businesses and homes have also had their affect on the Armstrongs.

"I sort of feel boxed in here right now," Leo said. "When I get to the other side of 8 Mile Road, I have claustrophobia."

"Basically across the lake there was nothing over there," he said, pointing out his window.

Tax tips

By George Bennett

First determine your filing status

(Editor's note: George Bennett, of Independence Township, a senior accountant at Price Waterhouse and Co. of Detroit, will share some income-tax advice with Clarkston News readers up until the April 15 filing deadline. Bennett, a 1970 graduate of Clarkston High School, holds a bachelor's and master's of business administration degrees from the University of Michigan.)

Filing status plays an important role in the computation of tax liabilities for individuals.

Filing status determines which of the four tax rate tables to use and, therefore, the tax rates at which income is taxed.

To enable you to determine whether you can qualify for a preferable filing status for 1979 or subsequent years, the requirements for each status is outlined below. Note that the tax meaning of "married" is not necessarily the same as its common meaning.

Married (filing jointly or separately). If two individuals are considered married under state law on December 31, 1979, they are considered married for federal tax purposes unless they are legally separated. However, even though a couple is considered married under state law and are not legally separated, they can qualify for a filing status as head of household or single taxpayer, as explained below.

Certain surviving spouses. Essentially, "certain surviving spouses" refers to a widow (er) whose spouse died in 1977 or 1978 and who maintains a household in which a child who is a deductible dependent lives throughout 1979.

Head of Household. Very generally, a head of household is an unmarried taxpayer who maintains a home the entire year for (i) a child or (ii) a relative who is a deductible dependent. A dependent parent may live in a separate household provided it is maintained by the taxpayer; for this purpose, a rest-home or a home for the aged qualifies as a household.

If married taxpayers live apart the entire year, either (or both) can qualify for this status by maintaining the required household with at least one dependent.

Single taxpayer. In essence, one who is neither "married" nor a "head of household" (under their tax meanings) is single.

However, if married taxpayers live apart the entire year, each one can qualify as a single taxpayer by maintaining a home in which a child for whom a dependency deduction is allowable resides for more than six months.

to a row of new houses. "Now you see what's happening."

"Can you imagine how much fun it is to go out there and fish when there are 10 guys water skiing?" he asked. "They tell me this is progress. I guess it is."

Their children are all married, they have 25 grandchildren and the two sons who stayed with the business have been hired by the new owner.

So, even though Hazel said she'll miss her family, they are moving north at the end of the month or early in March.

"It's a real nice area and it's right close to the Pine River where we're going to live," Leo said. "It's quite peaceful. Lots of deer."

"He's promised me anytime I want to come back and see the kids, we could," Hazel said.

And they plan on keeping busy, returning to the things they've enjoyed all their lives.

They've furnished their new home and have plans for raising fruit, vegetables and some chickens and cattle as well.

"We're getting this togetherness," Hazel said with a smile. "I don't know what we're going to do—we got a smaller car, a smaller house and a small couch for our living room."

"I've got 40 years' worth of things to do up there, so we've got to hurry up and get there," Leo added.

They will leave behind plenty of good feelings.

"If I didn't have a nickel, I would feel good, because the kids have given us no problems," Leo said.

"We have a good family," Hazel added. "Looking back on it, if I had to do it over again, I'd do it the same way."

And then she adds some special words of love about their new life.

"I'm going to just take care of him," she said. "That's going to be a full-time job. I think it's his turn after raising eight kids—I'll be right with him wherever he's at."

Coping with kids

Resistant child can stretch patience to limit

The child who is resistant is one of the most irritating and provoking of all of our children.

It may be worse in adolescence, but it seems to start in early childhood. No matter the age of the child, it is a symptom that drives parents "up a wall."

The resistant or passive-aggressive youngster is the one who says, "Just a minute" or, "I'll do it later." Only, later never comes and the minute stretches into hours or days.

Leaving him in his room to clean it is an invitation to him to play or daydream perhaps for several hours. And the room is still not straightened up.

Threats don't seem to help and rewards may have only temporary effectiveness.

Although irritating ("maddening" might be more appropriate to some parents), such a child often is showing not only anger and indirectly expressed hostility but also feelings of inadequacy.

By failing to take responsibility, he shows that he thinks of himself as being weak and small. It's as if he is saying, "how could you expect someone as young and inadequate as I to do such a monumental task?"

Clearly, then, the child is caught in an emotional bind between becoming independent and staying infantile, small, helpless and dependent.

The child may also appear not to care. He seems to invite threats and hostility from his parents (and other siblings in the family) and it may actually seem like success for him is failure.

There are several ways of approaching this that are almost sure to fail.

The obvious reason for parental ineptitude in dealing with such a problem relates to the experienced resistant child's great ability to outlast even the most patient parent.

Parents will probably not succeed with this child if they come on like authoritarian bullies or if they are too passive. ("It's up to you if you do your homework or not.")

If there is too much nagging and reminding or if too many threats are used, the child is more likely to harden his resistance.

It seems best to cut down on most orders and directives, but be prepared to follow through on the ones that are important.

Following through means spending the time (perhaps in the beginning hours at a time) to see to it that a job is done and that opportunities for getting out of it are not available.

A parent who is angry should withdraw from the effort and let another parent (if one is not available then leave and get control before returning to the "battle") take over.

These children often have underlying hostile feelings and parents should be prepared to listen and not disagree or defend themselves.

Furthermore, there should be discussion of the resistance and the child's feelings which are likely to be causing it.

Sometimes the parents can talk about their own flaws and uncertainties so that the child comes to view his parents as less demanding and reasonable.

The child, even if psychotherapy is required, must come to eventually realize that his passive-resistance only hurts himself.

Saying this directly might help, but a child must be in a receptive mood to hear this. If he is too angry, because of a battle of wills over what he is going to do, he will not get the full impact of the message.

Talking to a resistant child must occur at a time when there is a relatively warm feeling between parent and child.

Bow and arrow in place, Mike Bruns of Sashabaw road prepares to shoot. The boys were assisted in the training sessions by five Oakland County Sportsmen's Club volunteers at the indoor shooting range located on Waterford Road, Independence Township.

After each shooting session, the bows are rehung and not taken down until more arrows are issued. Getting ready for more practice shots are Mike Galligan [left] of Faye Street, Independence Township, and Steve Luchenbach of Dvorak Street, Independence Township.
